ſtarued for hunger: for this Ceremony is not ended vntill night, and they are enforced to continue without eating or ſucking, becauſe they muſt receiue the Communion. It is certainely knowne, that theſe little ones are not able to reade, and the great ones alſo can reade but little.

Infancy and illiterature admitted. Manner of making Clerkes.

And they make them after this ſort. The Abuna ſitting in a Chaire, which is in a Tent placed in a Church, cauſed theſe Clerkes to paſſe along before, and hauing read a while in a Booke, he pulleth from each of their Temples a tuft of haire: then hee readeth a Booke, and cauſeth them to paſſe by a ſecond time, and to touch the Keies wherewith they open the gate of the Tent, and they put a Cloath vpon their heads, and at euery one of theſe actions they muſt once paſſe by: and likewiſe another they put a blacke Earthen Diſh in their hands, in ſtead of the Ampulle, becauſe they haue no Ampullas to ſerue at the Maſſe, and at each of theſe Ceremonies they read a little while, which being ended, the Abuna ſaith Maſſe. And it is a fearefull thing to behold the danger which theſe little Infants ſuffer, which perforce they make to ſwallow downe the Communion, by powring water downe into their throats, as well becauſe the Hoſt is made of courſe Dough, as alſo by reaſon of their tender age, and the continuall mourning which they make.

How they make very Babes to receiue the Communion.

In the end, the Abuna prayed me to goe and dine with him at his Tent, and heere hee deſired me to tell him, what I thought of this Ceremony, whereat I was preſent all the while, and had ſeene euery thing particularly, and ſaid that the Prete had ſent him word to talke with mee concerning this Ceremony: I ſaid, that his Ceremony liked me very well, But to admit Infants new borne vnto Orders, and great Lubbers without learning, me thought it vnſeemely to thruſt Aſſes into the houſe of God. He anſwered mee, That God had ſent him hither to tell the truth, and that he did nothing, but as He was commaunded, and that the Prete had willed him to make all the Children Clerkes, and that they would learne in time to come, becauſe he was now very old, and they wiſt not when they ſhould haue another Abuna, ſeeing this Countrey heretofore had beene three and twentie yeares without an Abuna, and that not long ſince, they had ſent two thouſand ounces of Gold to Cairo, to haue an Abuna, and by reaſon of the Warres betweene the Soldan and the Turke, they had ſent none, and yet they had detained the Gold, and that now God had cauſed me to come thither to tell them the truth, that this Countrey might ſpeedily be prouided of an Abuna, becauſe hee was not of any long life. After this, I went many times to ſee theſe Ceremonies, of giuing Orders to theſe Prieſts and Clerkes, becauſe euery day in a manner they receiued Orders, in great multitudes, which came thither daily, and they obſerued not the Ember-weekes, nor the Lent. And if at any time there were any intermiſſion of giuing theſe Orders, ſtraight-way ſome would come vnto me, and take acquaintance of me, although I knew them not, beſeeching mee for Gods ſake, to pray the Abuna to giue them Orders, becauſe they dyed for hunger while they waited there: and I beſought him in the Euening, and ſtraight-way he commaunded the Tent to bee ſet vp, to giue Orders the next day following. And certainly, I neuer requeſted him, but immediatly he did the ſame, for he bare me exceeding good will, and tooke me as if I had beene his owne Brother.

Abaſſia without an Abuna three and twentie yeares.

Ciriacus affected to Rome.

98. The cauſe why this Countrey continued three and twentie yeares without an Abuna, they ſay was this; That in the time of the great Grand-father of this preſent King, whoſe name was Ciriacus, the Father of Alexander, which was the Father of Nahu, the Father of this preſent Prete Ianni, the Abuna dyed: and the ſaid Ciriacus ſtayed ten yeares, and would ſend for none, ſaying; That he would take none from Alexandria, and that if none came from Rome, he would haue none at all, and that he would rather haue all the ſoules of his people to periſh, then to receiue an Abuna from the Countrey of Hereticks: and at the end of ten yeares he dyed, without hauing of any Abuna; and his Sonne Alexander ſtood ſtifly in the ſame purpoſe, for the ſpace of thirteene yeares. At length the people complained vnto him, ſaying, That now there were ſcarce any Prieſts or Clerkes remaining to ſerue the Churches, and that if they were decayed, the Churches alſo would grow to decay; and conſequently, the Chriſtian Faith. And the ſaid Alexander ſent for an Abuna to Cairo, where at that time the Patriarke of Alexandria remained, which ſent him two, that the one might ſucceede the other, and both of them were liuing while wee were there. And during our aboad there, Abuna Iacob dyed, which was to ſucceed this man who now liueth: who told me, that he came into this Country fiftie fiue yeares paſt, and that he was as white and hoary-headed, as he was at that inſtant, and when he departed out of Cairo he was about fiftie, or fiue and fiftie yeares old, ſo that he thinketh he is about one hundred and ten yeares of age. And truly, he that beholdeth and conſidereth him well, would take him to be no leſſe.

Age of the Abuna.

Fewer Iewiſh Ceremonies.

And farther he told me, that the Prete which ſent for him, was a moſt Chriſtian Prince, and that the Saturdaies were not kept holy as long as he liued, nor any of theſe Iewiſh Ceremonies were obſerued, and that they did eate Hogges fleſh, and fleſh although the throat were not cut: for all theſe things belong vnto the old Law: and that it was not long, ſince two Frankes came vnto this Court, to wit: one Venetian, called Nicholas Brancaleon; and one Portugall, called Peter de Couillan, which when they came into the Countrey, before they came into the Court, began to faſt and keepe the cuſtomes of the Countrey, (for as yet in many places, the Saturday was kept holy) and did not eate meates that were forbidden. The Prieſts and Friers ſeeing this, which tooke vpon them to know the things continued in the Bible, much better then of any other Bookes, came to complaine to the Prete, ſaying; What thing is this, that theſe Frankes which now come from the Kingdomes of France, being both of them of ſeuerall Countries, do obſerue the ancient cuſtomes of the Abyſſines: how then commaundeth this Abuna, which is come from Alexandria, that we ſhould obſerue thoſe things which are not in our Bookes, and hereupon the Prete Ianni forth-with commanded, that they ſhould againe obſerue the ancient cuſtomes of the Abyſſines. Abuna reported all theſe things vnto me; giuing many thankes to God for our arriuall. This Abuna liued in his Tent after this manner, (for I neuer ſaw him in an houſe but once.) He ſitteth continually vpon a Couch, couered with a faire Cloath, as the great Lords of this Countrey vſe to doe. He hath his Curtaines about the ſaid Couch, and likewiſe ouer the ſame. His apparell is White, that is to ſay, Made of moſt pure and fine Cotton Cloath which commeth out of India, where they call it Cacha: and it is made like a Cardinals Cloake or Pauiell, which is ioyned and buttoned together on the breaſt. He hath alſo a Scapotall, * which is likewiſe cloſed before, made of Blew Silke Chamblet, and on his head a great broad Miter made likewiſe of Blew Silke. Hee is, as I haue ſaid, a very old man, of ſmall ſtature, and bald: his Beard is very white, but ſmall, and long in the midſt; for in this Countrey the Church-men ſhaue not their Beards: he is very gracious in his ſpeech and geſtures, as any man may be: he neuer ſpeaketh, but he giueth God thankes. When he goeth forth to the Tent of the Prete, or to giue holy Orders, he rideth vpon a goodly Mule, being very well accompanied, as well with men riding vpon Mules, as others following him on foote; he carrieth a little Croſſe of Siluer in his hand, and they carrie three Croſſes vpon ſtaues on each ſide of him, which reach vp higher then he is on his Mule. He carrieth with him whitherſoeuer he goe, two high Canopies which are to be ſet on foote, as great as thoſe of the Prete, but not ſo rich. Moreouer, foure men goe before him with Whips, which make the people giue way on both ſides: the ground is couered whereſoeuer hee trauaileth with Children, Young men, Friers, and Prieſts, which all runne crying after him. I enquired what they ſaid, and I was anſwered; that they ſaid, May it pleaſe your Lordſhip to make vs Clerkes, and God Grant you a long life.

Peter de Couillan.

Heere are omitted prophecies of the Frankes, &c.

The habite of Abuna Marke.

* Scaporall.

His pompe.

99. The twelfth of Ianuary, 1521. was a very great aſſembly of Clerkes and Prieſts in the ſaid Church, and they continued all that night with Singing and Muſicke, and ſaid, That they did conſecrate the ſame, wherein as yet no Maſſe had beene ſaid, but they ſaid it in another little Church which was neere adioyning, wherein the Father of this Prete was buried, and that they would remooue and carrie him into this great Church, which he begunne in his life time, and his Sonne had finiſhed, and that they were thirteene yeares ſince he deceaſed, and on a Sunday in the morning, they ſaid Maſſe there. This Church hath now at the firſt foundation thereof, about foure hundred Canons, with great reuenues, but when the number ſhall increaſe, as it is fallen out in other Churches, they ſhall not haue ſufficient to ſuſtaine themſelues. The fifteenth of the ſaid moneth, wee were called for, and they cauſed vs to goe to the ſaid Church, where there were gathered together aboue two thouſand Prieſts, and as many Clerkes, which were aſſembled before the principall Porch of the great Church, and in the circuit which is like a Cloyſter, and the Prete ſtood compaſſed in his Curtaines within a Clozet, which vſeth to bee placed vpon the ſteppes of the principall gate, and all the Clergie ſtood before him, which ſaid a long Seruice, with ſinging, muſicke, dancing, and leaping. Which being ended, he cauſed all the people, and the Clergie, and vs, to goe forth of the Church, and they placed vs toward the North, willing vs not to ſtirre from that place: and all the Clergie and people went to the little Church, where the Kings Father was buried, which alſo was towards the North, and therein entred as many as could ſtand. And as we ſtood heere, an exceeding great Proceſſion in very good order, beganne to paſſe betweene vs and the Church, and they carried the bones of the dead King to the great Church, and the Patriarke Abuna Marke went in this Proceſſion, being very feeble, and two men held him vp vnder the armes, by reaſon of his old age. Then followed the Queenes, to wit, Queene Helena, the Prete his Mother, and the Queene his Wife, each of them vnder a blacke Pauilion, in mourning wiſe, (for before they vſed white Pauilions) and likewiſe all the people were clad in blacke cloath, weeping and howling with mightie cryes, ſaying; Abeto, Abeto, that is to ſay, Our Lord, Our Lord. And they pronounced the ſame with ſo abrupt and pitifull a voyce, and with ſo great abundance of teares, that they made all the multitude to weepe. The Coffin wherein the bones lay, was carried vnder a Pauilion of Embroydered cloath of Gold, compaſſed about with Curtaines of Damaske, and ſo they entred into the Church by the ſide-gate, where we ſtood, and as many people as the place would hold; and we went to this Ceremony at the Sunne riſing, and returned to our lodging at night, by Torch-light.

Conſecration of the Church Machan Celacem

Foure hundred Canons.

Two thouſand Prieſts, and as many Clerkes.

Tranſlation of the Kings body

The Patr. and Queenes.

100. Straight-way we were led into a Tent which was newly ſet vp, and was placed on the backe ſide of the great Church in that circuit, and it was very long and flat, and all the Roofe was couered with Croſſes, made of Silke, like thoſe of the Tent which was placed ouer the Lake, where they were baptized, and within it was dreſſed with exceeding faire Tapiſtries, ſo that it ſeemed to be a Hall very well furniſhed: and here he ſent vs word to recreate our ſelues a little for his ſake, refreſhing our ſelues, and diſcourſing of our priuate matters. And while we thus diſcourſed a good while, we ſaw comming in very good order, many Iarres of Wine, and a great basket of fine Bread, and great ſtore of meate borne in great Platters, made of black earth, very faire, and excellently wrought, which ſeemed to be of blacke Amber. The meate was made of diuers ſorts of Fleſh, dreſſed after ſundry faſhions, ſomewhat after our manner, among which, were Hennes all whole, great, and fat, ſome ſodden, and ſome roaſted: and in other Platters came other Hens, which ſeemed to be Hens indeed, but were onely the skins, in ſuch ſort, that they had taken out the fleſh and all the bones, with wonderfull diligence, ſo that the skinne was not broken in any part, but was perfectly whole, and then mincing the fleſh verie ſmall, and mingling it with certaine delicate Spices, they filled the ſame againe with it, which, as I haue ſaid, was perfectly whole, and wanted nothing but the necke and the feete, from the neather ioynt downe-ward, neither could we at any time diſcerne how they could get out the bones, or how they might flay them, and yet could perceiue no rupture at all. We fed very well of theſe Hens, to our contentment, becauſe they were ſo good and delicate. Then brought they in groſſe and fat meate, ſo handſomly dreſt, that wee knew not whether it were ſodden or roaſted. Afterward certaine White-meates were brought in, in other Platters, and meats of other colours, made partly of fleſh ſtamped, with the ſinewes taken out, and part of Birds, and diuers Fruits of the Countrey, and in ſome of them was ſtore of Butter, in others Hennes ſuet: of euery one of them we taſted, which ſeemed vnto vs very good and delicate: and we wondred how it was poſſible, that they ſhould haue ſo good Cookes in that Countrey. Among the Iarres of the Wine of Raiſins, which were all of that Earth like blacke Amber, there was one of Cryſtall Glaſſe, with a great Bowle of Cryſtall, all gilded ouer, and another great Bowle of Siluer, Enamuled all ouer with foure exceeding fine ſtones, which ſeemed to be Saphires ſet in the ſame, ſtanding in a ſquare caſe, beſet with many Rubies, and this Bowle was very faire and rich. When we had eaten as much as we thought good, the Prete ſent vnto vs, requeſting vs to ſing and dance, and to recreate our ſelues after our owne manner.

A royall feaſt.

Cunning Cookery.

Iarres of blacke earth and Cryſtall.

Church ſinging and dancing.

101. The eight and twentieth of Ianuary, he willed vs to come vnto the great Church, and cauſed vs to be placed before his Curtaines, which were aboue the place of the ſteps, which are neere vnto the principall gate. Here was an infinite multitude of Clerkes, which, as they did at the moouing of his Fathers bones, did nought elſe but ſing, dance, and leape, and in their leaping, did alwaies touch their feete with their hands, firſt one foote, and then another: and when we had ſtayed there a good while, he ſent to aske vs, whether they ſung after this manner in our Countrey? We anſwered him, no: becauſe our ſinging was more quiet and plaine, as well in voyces as in body: for we neither danced nor ſtirred a whit. He replyed: Seeing that our cuſtome was ſuch, whether we thought that his was ill done? We ſent him word, that the things belonging vnto God, after what manner ſoeuer they be done, ſeemed alwaies to be wel done. This ceremonie being ended, they began to goe about the Church with fiue and twentie Croſſes, and fiue and twentie Cenſers, carrying their Croſſes in their left hands, as it were Standards, and the Cenſers in their right hands, caſting Incenſe vpon them without any ſpare. And vpon the ſteppes where we ſtood, were two great Latton Baſons, gilded and wrought about, full of a kind of Incenſe, ſweeter then that which is brought into theſe parts: and as often as they paſſed by, they caſt great quantity thereof into the Cenſers, and they which went about in Proceſſion, were clad in very rich Copes, and Hoods, made after their faſhion, and ſo were they which danced and ſung.

102. The nine and twentieth of Ianuary, the Ambaſſador and all the Frankes (whereof ſome were come to this Court before vs) with all his Company, went to viſite the Abuna Marke, becauſe he had not as yet ſpoken with him. We found him as before, ſitting vpon a Couch. The Ambaſſadour would haue kiſſed his hand, but he would not ſuffer him, but gaue him the Croſſe to kiſſe, which he alwaies carried in his hand, and ſo he did to all the reſt. As ſoone as we were ſet, the Ambaſſadour ſaid, that hee was come to viſite him in the name of the Grand Captaine, and prayed him to pardon him, that hee came no ſooner to him, becauſe they would not ſuffer him to viſite any body. The Abuna anſwered him, that he ought not to maruaile thereat, for it was the cuſtome of that Court, not to ſuffer any ſtranger to goe vnto any mans houſe, and that this was not by the conſent of the Prete, which was a good and godly man, but of the Courtiers which are malicious. The Ambaſſadour told him, that the King of Portugall was informed of his bounty and holineſſe, by his Brother Matthew, and alſo by others, and that therefore he beſought him to keepe the Prete Ianni conſtant and immutable in this enterprize, of chaſing and deſtroying of the Moores. The Abuna anſwered, That he was no Saint, but a poore Sinner, and that Matthew was none of his Brother, but was a Merchant, and his friend, and although hee came with lies, yet was it manifeſt, that his comming was ordained by God, ſeeing it turned to ſo good ſeruice and profite, &c.

Matthew was a Merchant.

§. XV.

A Diſcourſe of PETER COVILLAN: Of the PRETES gifts and preſents, and the Portugals quarrels, and their licence to depart out of the Countrey.

103. WHereas I haue ſpoken often in this Booke of Peter de Couillan Portughez, being an honourable perſon, and of great credite with Prete Ianni, and all the Court, it is conuenient that I ſhould declare how he came into this Countrey, and the cauſe thereof, as he hath oftentimes told me himſelfe. But firſt I will ſay, that he is my ſpirituall ſonne, and that I haue oftentimes confeſſed him, becauſe in three and thirtie yeeres while he liued in this Countrey, he told me that he neuer was confeſſed, becauſe the cuſtome here is not to keepe that ſecret which is vttered in confeſſion, and that therefore he went into the Church, when he confeſſed his ſinnes vnto God. His beginning was thus: he was borne in the Towne of Couillan in the Kingdome of Portugall, and being a boy, he went into Caſtile, and gat into the ſeruice of Don Alfonſo, Duke of Simile; and when the warre began betweene Portugall and Caſtile, hee returned home with Don Iohn de Guſman, brother to the ſaid Duke, which placed him in the houſe of Alfonſo King of Portugall, who for his valour preſently made him a man at Armes, and hee was continually in that warre, and ſerued alſo abroad in France. After the death of King Alfonſo, he was one of the Guard of the King Don Iohn his ſonne, vntill the time of the treaſons, when he ſent him into Caſtile, becauſe hee ſpake the Caſtilian Tongue very well, to ſpie out who were thoſe Gentlemen of his Subiects, which practiſed there againſt him. And returning out of Caſtile, he was ſent into Barbarie, where he ſtayed a time, and learned the Arabian Tongue, and was afterward ſent to conclude a Peace with the King of Tremizen: and being returned, he was ſent againe to the King Amoli bela gegi, which reſtored the bones of the Infant Don Fernando. At his returne he found, that the King Don Iohn deſiring by all meanes that his ſhips ſhould find out the Spiceries, had determined to ſend by land certaine men to diſcouer as much as they might. And Alfonſo de Paiua was choſen for this enterpriſe, a Citizen of Caſtle Blanco, a very ſkilfull man, and very expert in the Arabian Tongue.

The Storie of Peter Couillan.

Confeſſion not vſed here.

His life in his youth.

Alfonſo de Paiua

When Peter de Couillan was returned, King Iohn called him vnto him, and told him ſecretly, That hauing alwayes knowne him loyall and his faithfull ſeruant, and readie to doe his Maieſtie good ſeruice, ſeeing he vnderſtood the Arabian tongue, he purpoſed to ſend him, with another companion, to diſcouer and learne where Prete Ianni dwelt, and whether his Territories reached vnto the Sea, and where the Pepper and Cinamon grew, and other ſorts of Spicerie, which were brought vnto the Citie of Venice from the Countries of the Moores; ſeeing hee had ſent for this purpoſe one of the Houſe of Monterio, and one Frier Anthony of Liſbon Prior of Porta de Ferro, which could not paſſe the Citie of Ieruſalem, ſaying, That it was impoſſible to trauell this way without vnderſtanding the Arabian tongue, and therefore ſeeing he vnderſtood the ſame well, hee prayed him to vnder-take this enterprize, to doe him this ſo principall ſeruice, promiſing to reward him in ſuch ſort, that he ſhould be great in his Kingdome, and all his Poſteritie ſhould alwayes liue contented. Peter anſwered him, That he kiſſed his Maieſties hands for the great fauour which he had done him, but that he was ſorry, that his wiſedome and ſufficiencie was not anſwerable to the great deſire he had to ſerue his Highneſſe, and yet neuertheleſſe, as his faithfull ſeruant he accepted this meſſage with all his heart.

P. Cou. ſent to diſcouer the Spices and Prete Ianni his Countrey.

And ſo in the yeere 1487. the ſeuenth of May, they were both diſpatched in Saint Arren, the King Don Emanuel alwayes there preſent, which at that time was but Duke, and they gaue them a Sea-Card, taken out of a generall Map of the World, at the making whereof was the Licentiate Calzadilla, Biſhop of Viſeo; and the Doctor Maſter Roderigo, inhabitant of Pietre Nere; and the Doctor Maſter Moyſes, which at that time was a Iew: and all this worke was done very ſecretly in the houſe of Peter de Alcazoua, and all the forenamed perſons ſhewed the vttermoſt of their knowledge, as though they ſhould haue beene Commanders in the Diſcouerie, of finding out the Countries from whence the Spices come, and as though one of them ſhould haue gone into Ethiopia to diſcouer the Countrey of Prete Ianni, and as though in thoſe Seas there had beene ſome knowledge of a paſſage into our Weſterne Seas; becauſe the ſaid Doctors ſaid, they had found ſome memoriall of that matter. And for the charges of them both, the King appointed foure hundred Cruzadoes, which were giuen them out of the Treaſurie of the Garden of Almarin: and (as I haue ſaid) the King Emanuel was alwayes preſent, who at that time was Duke. Beſides this, the King gaue them a Letter of credit in all parts of the Leuant, that if they fell into any neceſſitie or perill, they might be ſuccoured and aided thereby. One halfe of theſe foure hundred Cruzadoes, they deſired to haue in readie money, and the other halfe they gaue to Bartholmew Marchioni a Florentine, to be payed them in Naples.

His iourney.

A conſultation for the ſeeking out of the South-caſt paſſage.

The ſmall beginning of the Portugal greatneſſe in the Eaſt.

And hauing receiued the Kings bleſſing, they departed from Liſbon, and came vnto Barçelona

Cairo.

on Corpus Chriſti day, and thence vnto Naples on Saint Iohns day; when their Bills of Exchange were payed them, by the Sonne of Coſmo de Medices. From Naples they went vnto the Ile of Rhodes, and here they found two Portugall Knights, the one called Frier Gonſaluo, and the other Frier Fernando, in whoſe houſe they lodged; and after certaine dayes, they tooke their voyage for Alexandria, in a ſhip of Bartholmew de Paredez; hauing firſt bought many Iarres of Honey to ſhew that they were Merchants. When they were come to Alexandria, they both fell grieuouſly ſicke of an ague; and the Cadi tooke all their Honey from them, ſuppoſing they would haue dyed. But being recouered, they were payed as they would themſelues, and hauing bought ſundrie ſorts of merchandize, they went to Cairo, where they ſtayed till they found companie of certaine Moores, called Magabrini, of the Kingdome of Fez and Tremizen, which went to Aden, and in their companie they went by Land to Tor; where taking ſhip, they ſailed to Suachen, vpon the Coaſt of the Abyſſins, and from thence vnto Aden. And becauſe it was the time of the Monſons or Motions, when thoſe Seas cannot be ſailed, they diuided themſelues the one from the other, and Alfonſo paſſed into Ethiopia, and Peter made his choice to goe into India, as the time ſerued him for to doe. And they agreed together, to meete at a certayne time in the Citie of Cairo, that they might be able to aduertize the King of their diſcouerie.

Calicut.

Zeila.

The chiefe end of Couillan his voyage, was to diſcouer the Seas, on the back ſide of Ethiopia.

Madagaſcar, or the Ile of the Moone.

Aden and Tor.

Paiua dead.

Peter de Couillan, when time ſerued, tooke ſhipping, and ſailed directly to Cananor, and paſſed thence to Calecut, and ſaw the great quantitie of Ginger and Pepper which grow there, and vnderſtood, that the Cloues and Cinamon were brought thither from farre Countries. Then he went toward Goa, and paſſed thence to the Ile of Ormuz, and hauing informed himſelfe of certayne other things, he came in a ſhip toward the Red Sea. Hee landed at Zeila, and with certayne Merchants, which were Moores, he trauelled thoſe Seas of Ethiopia, which were ſhewed him at Lisbon in a Sea Chart, to the intent hee ſhould vſe all his induſtrie to diſcouer them. And he went ſo farre, that he came vnto the Towne of Ceſala, where he learned of the Mariners and certayne Arabians, that the ſaid Coaſt might be ſailed all along toward the Weſt, and that they knew no end thereof, and that there was a great Ile very rich, which was aboue nine hundred miles in length, which they call, The Ile of the Moone. And hauing vnderſtood theſe things, being very glad thereof, he determined to returne vnto Cairo, and ſo he came backe to Zeila, and from thence paſſed to Aden, and then to Tor, and laſtly to Cairo, where he ſtayed a great time, wayting for Alfonſo de Paiua, and at length, had newes that he was dead.

* Calzolato.

Whereupon he determined to returne into Portugall: but it pleaſed God, that two Iewes, which went to ſeeke him, by good lucke found him, and deliuered him Letters from the King of Portugall. One of theſe Iewes was called, Rabbi Abraham, borne in Beggian. The others name was Ioſeph de Lamego, and was a * Shoo-maker. Theſe hauing beene before in Perſia and in Bagadet, told the King many great matters, which they had learned concerning the Spiceries, and the riches which were found in the Ile of Ormuz, wherof the King conceiued great pleaſure, and commanded them to returne thither againe to ſee the ſame themſelues; but firſt, that they ſhould ſeeke out Peter de Couillan, and Alfonſo de Paiua, which hee knew were determined to meet together at a time appointed in Cairo. The contents of the Kings Letters were, that if all the things giuen them in commiſſion, were ſearched out by them, then they ſhould returne, becauſe hee would reward them; but if they were not all diſcouered, that they ſhould ſend him particular information of thoſe things that they had ſeene, and then ſhould doe their beſt endeauour to ſearch out the reſt, and aboue all things, to diſcouer the Countrey of Prete Ianni, and to cauſe Rabbi Abraham to ſee the Ile of Ormuz. For which cauſe, Peter de Couillan, purpoſed to aduertiſe the King of all which hee had ſeene along the Coaſt of Calicut, touching the Spiceries, and of Ormuz, and of the Coaſt of Ethiopia, and of Ceſala, and of the great Iland of the Moone, concluding, that his ſhips which traded into Guinea, ſayling along the Coaſt, and ſeeking the Coaſt of that Iland, and of Ceſala, might eaſily enter into theſe Eaſterne Seas, and fall vpon this Coaſt of Calicut, for all along there was Sea: he had vnderſtood, and that he would returne with Rabbi Abraham to Ormuz, and after his returne he would ſeeke out Prete Ianni, whoſe Countrey ſtretched vnto the red Sea.

His comming to Prete Alexander.

Nahu ſucceedeth.

Dauid, the preſent Prete.

And with theſe Letters, he diſpatched Ioſeph de Lamego the Iew. And he and the other Iew going againe to Ormuz, and returning to Aden, hee willed him to goe and carrie newes to the King that hee had ſeene the Ile of Ormuz with his owne eyes. And himſelfe paſſing into Ethiopia, came into the Court of Prete Ianni, which at that time was not farre from Zeila. And hauing preſented his Letters vnto him, who at that time was called Alexander, hee was very courteouſly entertained, and had great honour done vnto him, and was promiſed that he ſhould ſpeedily be diſpatched. But in the meane while, he departed this life, and Nahu his brother ſucceeded in his ſtead, which ſaw him, and made very much of him, but would neuer giue him leaue to depart. Afterward Nahu died alſo, and his ſonne Dauid ſucceeded him, which raigneth at this preſent, which would not ſuffer him to depart, ſaying, that hee came not thither in his time, and that if his Predeceſſors had giuen him ſo great Lands and Reuenues, he ought to enioy them, and to loſe none of them: and therefore, ſeeing they had not giuen him licence, neither might he giue him leaue to depart; and ſo he remained ſtill in the Countrey: and they gaue him a wife, with very great riches and poſſeſſions, by whom he had children, whom we alſo ſaw. And in our time, when he ſaw that we would depart, he was exceeding deſirous to returne into his Countrey, and went to craue leaue of the Prete, and we with him, and were very inſtant on his behalfe, and beſought him very earneſtly, yet for all that wee could not obtaine leaue. Hee is a man of great ſpirit and wit, and of his qualitie hee hath not the like in all the Court, and can ſpeake all the Languages, as well of the Chriſtians as of the Moores, Gentiles, and Abaſſins: and of all things which hee hath knowne and ſeene, hee can yeeld as particular account, as if they were preſent. And therefore he is very gracious with the Prete, and all the Court.

104. Returning to our Voyage, or rather to our Hiſtorie; The dayes following, the Secretaries ceaſed not to write the Letters, which wee were to carrie with vs to the King and to the grand Captaine, and they beſtowed much time and labour in making them: for their manner is not to write one to another, but their demands, anſwers, and meſſages, are all done by word of mouth. And while we were there, they beganne by little and little to learne to write; and when they wrote, they alwaies held before them the Epiſtles of Saint Paul, of Saint Peter, and of Saint Iames; and thoſe which ſtudied in them, were taken for the moſt learned and wiſe among them. They wrote the Letters to the King in three Languages, The Abaſſin, the Arabian, and the Portugall; and after the ſame manner were the Letters made vnto the Grand Captaine. The Grand Betudete comming vnto vs, which is the Lord that ſtandeth on his left hand, brought mee a Croſſe of Siluer, and a paſſing faire Staffe wrought with inlayd worke, ſaying, that the Prete ſent me theſe things in token of the gouernment which he had giuen mee in the Iles of the red Sea; I gaue his Highneſſe thankes in the beſt manner that I could. There came another meſſage from the Prete, that he had giuen order that thirtie Mules ſhould be giuen vnto vs to carrie our goods. And moreouer, that he had ſent thirtie ounces of Gold to the Ambaſſadour, and fiftie for his companie; and that George, and thoſe which were with him, had receiued their part; and withall, that he had ſent one hundred loads of Meale, and as many hornes of Wine of Honey, to ſerue vs in our Voyage, and willed that we ſhould not trouble the poore Husbandmen by the way, becauſe he was enformed, that in our comming to the Court we had waſted the Countrey through which we trauelled, and that certaine Captaines were appointed for vs, which ſhould conduct vs from place to place, euen to the Sea ſide, to wit, that euery one ſhould furniſh vs through their Countreyes with all things neceſſarie: and forthwith they appointed vs to a ſonne of the Cabeata, becauſe we were to trauell a great way through his fathers Territories, which are thoſe where the great Church ſtandeth, wherein the bones of the Prete his father were layd: which Church (as I haue ſaid) hath foure hundred Canons, and ouer the ſaid Canons there is a ſonne of the ſaid Cabeata, which is a Licanate, that is to ſay, The head ouer all the reſt of the heads.

The vſe of writing was not in Ethiopia in theſe dayes.

Gifts.

The Preſent which Prete Ianni ſent the Ambaſſadour for his part.

105. This day at euening, were thirtie ounces of Gold brought to our Tent for the Ambaſſadour, and fiftie for vs, and a great Crowne of Gold and Siluer which was the Crowne of Prete Ianni: and it was not ſo faire for the worth thereof as for the bigneſſe, and it was in a round Chiſt lined with Cloth, and without with Leather, and it was preſented by Abdenago, the Captaine of the Pages, which ſaid vnto the Ambaſſadour, that the Prete ſent that Crowne to the King of Portugall, and that he ſhould ſay vnto him, that a Crowne is not wont to be taken from the Fathers head, but onely for the Sonne: and that he was his Sonne, and that he had taken the ſame from his owne head to ſend it to the King of Portugall, which was his Father, and that he ſent him the ſame as the moſt precious thing that he had at that inſtant, offering him all the fauours, ayde, and ſuccours, as well of Men as of Gold, and Victuals, which he ſhould ſtand in need of for his Fortreſſes and Fleets, and for the Warres which he would make againſt the Moores in theſe parts of the red Sea, euen vnto Ieruſalem.

The preſent which Prete Ianni ſent to the King of Portugall with exceeding great offers.

The firſt day of Lent, wee beganne our Voyage, and the ſonne of the Cabeata went with vs, through whoſe Countreyes we were to paſſe, and Abdenago Captaine of the Pages; for, afterward we were to paſſe through his Territories. And we trauelled the next day, farre diſtant one companie from the other, vntill we came to Manadeli, a Towne in the Kingdome of Tigremahon.

There was a quarrell twixt Bren and the Ambaſſadour, and Fernandes had wounded the Factor.

Manadeli.

106. Being come to this Towne of Manadel, which is wholly inhabited by Moores, who are peaceable Tributaries to the Prete: and one Stephen Pagliarte, as it ſeemeth, fell out with a Moore, which ſtrooke out two of his teeth, and certaine of our people comming running thither at the noiſe of this garboile, they brake one of our mens heads with a ſtone. Abdenago ran downe, and cauſed certaine of theſe Moores to bee apprehended, which had done the harme: but becauſe it was night, there was nothing elſe done. The next day he ſent vs word to come vnto the place where he held theſe two Moores priſoners, and cauſed vs to ſit downe on the graſſe: and hee ſate downe likewiſe, leaning with his ſhoulders againſt his Chaire. And there cauſing the priſoners to be brought, he began after their manner to demand Gold of them. Then he cauſed them to be ſtripped and cruelly beaten, demanding how much they would giue vs: they began to promiſe one ounce of Gold, two, and three; but ſtill beating of them, they asked how much they would giue; at length they came to ſeuen ounces, and herewithall they ceaſed to beat them, and the Gold was giuen to thoſe that were hurt, and the parties which were beaten were ſent bound to Prete Ianni. Wee went on ſtill on our Voyage vnto Barua, where wee lodged, when we came into this Countrey. While wee ſtayed here a long while, there came a Meſſenger of the Prete, and one of the Moores which were beaten with him, with the head of the other, ſaying vnto vs, that the Prete would needs vnderſtand and examine the whole matter concerning thoſe Moores, for the hurt which they had done vnto the Portugals, and that he had cauſed his head to be cut off which he found to haue done the wrong, the which he had ſent vs, that we might be aſſured of the trueth, and might know whether that were it or no: and the other which hee had not found in fault, hee had alſo ſent vs; and that wee might doe with him what we thought good, either kill him, or free him, or make him a Slaue.

Manner of iuſtice.

Barua.

One of the Moores beheaded.

A Court cuſtome.

The particulars of the Ambaſſadours wilfulneſſe againſt Bren an Ethiopian, are omitted.

107. Two Great men were ſent to vs from the Court, which ſeeing the enmitie and rancour that was betwixt the Ambaſſadour and Bren, which came from words to blowes, they wiſt not what courſe to take concerning our matter, ſeeing it is a cuſtome in that Conutrey, that no great perſonage may goe from the Court without licence, nor come to the Court vnleſſe he be called for: therefore the ſaid Lord ſtood in doubt, what they ſhould doe concerning vs; becauſe, on the one ſide, they durſt not leaue vs; and on the other ſide, to bring vs to the Court in ſuch great rancour, being not ſent for, they feared they might incurre ſome great puniſhment; yet at length, they choſe rather to returne to the Court, although they ſhould ſuffer ſome great puniſhment.

A skirmiſh.

108. Theſe Noblemen hauing conſidered that the Monſon was paſt, wherein the grand Captaine was to come for vs, and that they could not pacifie vs, determined to carrie vs backe to the Court: and we ſet forward altogether with the Franks, and as we came to the Towne of Bacinete, before mentioned, whither the fame of our falling out was come, all the Countrey-people put themſelues in Armes, and would not ſuffer vs to paſſe, and ſuch numbers of Friers came downe an hill, with Bowes, Arrowes, and Staues, that they ſeemed to be flocks of Sheepe; and here we had a great skirmiſh, and many of both ſides were wounded, howbeit wee beat them backe, and made them runne away. The aforeſaid Noblemen, while we were lodged here, put the place to the ſacke, as if they had beene Moores, and tooke away their Barley, Hens, Capons, Sheepe, and whatſoeuer they found in the houſes. And departing from hence, we trauelled in two companies; to wit, George de Bren, and all thoſe that were with him; and the Frier, and we with the Ambaſſadour, and the Lords, Andrugaz and Garueta, and wee came to Manadeli, where they wounded our men, and here we found the Moore which fled from the Ambaſſadour, who was nothing at all afraid: and hauing paſt two miles beyond this place, we met with Barnagaſſo, which came from the Court, and brought order from the Prete, what the ſaid Lords ſhould doe with vs. Which while we ſought to know, we aſſembled all together in a Corne-field vnder a great Tree, where the ſaid Lords were highly rebuked of Barnagaſſo, becauſe of our returniug without licence, ſaying, that they ſhould goe to the Court, and receiue their puniſhment there. Then he began to crie out vpon the Ambaſſadour, and George de Bren, commanding the Ambaſſadour to giue him the Crowne and the Letters, which he carried vnto the King and the Grand Captaine. The Ambaſſadour and George de Bren vttered very vnciuill and diſhoneſt ſpeeches one againſt another: for which cauſe the Barnagaſſo committed vs to certaine Captaines, to conduct vs ſeuerally one from the other, in ſuch ſort as wee came to that place, and ſo we returned with him toward his Territories. By this time the Winter was begun, which was exceeding terrible and cruell with huge raine.

Here the Authour ceaſeth to ſpeake any more of his Voyage.

---

§. XVI.

Of the time and day when their Lent beginneth in the Countrey of PRETE IANNI: and ſtrange abſtinences, and other bodily exerciſes, with other their holies. Of the Troglodites, and Goraiſes.

Ethiopian Lent, long and ſtrict.

109. IN the Countrey of Prete Ianni, they beginne their Lent in the Munday after Sexageſima, which is ten dayes before our Shrouetide; and after the day of the Purification is paſt, the Prieſts, Friers, and Secular men generally obſerue a great Faſt for three dayes, and they ſay, they doe faſt the penance of the Citie of Niniue. And many Friers eate not aboue once in theſe three dayes, and then they eate but Herbs without Bread: and they ſay, that there are many women, which then will not giue ſucke to their children paſt once a day. The generall Faſt of the Lent is Bread and Water; for although ſome would eate Fiſh, yet they could not haue it, becauſe they haue not the Sea neere them. In the Riuers there is great abundance of Fiſh, which are very good, but they know not how to take them. They eate no Milke nor Butter, neither drinke Wine of Grapes, nor of Honey; but their common drinke is of Zauna, which is made of Barley, or of Millet, or of Aguza: for of each of theſe Graines they make a ſeuerall Wine, which in taſte is like vnto Ale.

Zauna.

There are alſo many Friers, which for deuotions ſake eate no bread all the Lent, and others all the yeare, and all their life time.

As I went on a time with the Ambaſſadour toward the Court, in a place called Iannamora, a Frier fell into our companie: and becauſe I would pleaſure him, I cauſed him to ride vpon a Mule, and lodged him in my Tent. The firſt day, I inuited him to eate with me, becauſe it was Euentide and ſupper time, and he excuſed himſelfe, that he had no luſt to eate. In the meane ſpace, the Nouices (ſixe or ſeuen of which went with him to receiue orders) came with Agriones, which are Herbs of that Countrey, and gaue him an handfull without Salt, or Oyle, or any other mixture, and thoſe he eate alone without Bread or any thing elſe. Whereof when I had asked the ſaid Nouices, they told me that they neuer vſed to eate any bread. When I doubted of this, I cauſed him diligently to be watched night and day; for, on the day he went on foot by my Mules ſide like vnto a Lackey, and on the night he ſlept by my ſide, and lay on the ground in his apparell, and I alwaies ſaw him eate Herbs called Agriones and Rabaſas, and when they could find none, ſometimes he tooke Mallowes and Nettles, and when they paſſed by any Monaſterie, he ſent the Nouices to gather ſome Garden-herb, and if they found none, the Nouices brought him Lentiles, ſo long ſteeped in a gourd of water, that they began to grow, and he fed of them: which I would needs taſte of, and found them to be the worſt meat in the world. This man trauelled thirtie dayes with vs vnto the Court, and afterward ſtayed three weekes with vs in our Tent, and neuer eate any thing elſe but the things aforeſaid. Afterward I ſaw him in the Towne of Caxumo, where the Prete cauſed vs to ſtay eight moneths, and when hee vnderſtood that I was there, he came to viſite me, and brought me certaine Limons. Hee wore an habite of Leather without ſleeues, and his armes were naked; whereas I embraced him, by chance I thruſt one of my hands vnder his arme, and found that hee had about him a girdle of Iron of foure fingers broad, and I led him by the hand into our chamber, and ſhewed him to Peter Lopez my couſin, and wee ſaw the ſaid girdle, which was ioyned the one end with the other, with certaine points, as if they had beene to peg in a piece of wood*: and this girdle was faſtned vpon his fleſh: and the ſaid Frier tooke it in very ill part, and ſeemed as though hee had receiued great wrong, and ſuddenly departed, ſo that wee neuer could ſee him after.

Iannamora.

The faſting and abſtinence which ſome vſe in the Lent.

Who hath required theſe things at your hands?

* Comeſaria da ficcare vn legno.

After this, we ſaw many other Friers which wore the like girdles of Iron in the Lent; And we heard ſay, that there were others alſo, which during all the time of Lent, did neuer ſit, but alwaies ſtood vpright. When we heard that there was one of theſe in a Caue ſixe miles off, we rode thither, and found him in a frame made of wood, of that bigneſſe, that he only might ſtand within it. And it looked like an old Chiſt without a couer, and his hips were beſmeared with Chalke and Oxe-dung, and where his buttocks ſtood, he had an open place three fingers broad: he had likewiſe another open place where his knees touched, and before him hee had a little Deſke of wood, whereon lay a Booke. His habite was an Haire-cloth, made of the haire of an Oxe tayle, and vnderneath the ſame, vpon his fleſh he wore an Iron girdle like to that aboueſaid, and he ſhewed vs the ſame willingly. In another Caue adioyning, dwelt two young little Nouices, which prouided him victuals, which was nothing but Herbs, and for this our viſitation, he became our great friend. Theſe Caues ſeemed to haue beene made in old time to doe the like penance; for there were Graues in them.

Very ſtrange kind of penance.

A frame to ſtand in without ſitting.

In the Towne of Barua, in another Lent, I ſaw two Friers in the Church of the ſaid Towne, that is to ſay, without the Church gate, which were in the like Tabernacles, one on the one ſide of the Church, and another on the other ſide, which did eate the ſaid Herbes, and ſteeped Lentiles, and I went to ſee them often times, wherewith they ſeemed highly to be pleaſed; and if I went not to them, they ſent to viſite me, and they wore vpon their fleſh a Sack-cloth, and a girdle of Iron. And it was told mee, that one of them was a kinſman of the Prete, and they continued in this penance vntill Eaſter day, and when Maſſe was ſung, they went out of the ſame.

Supererogation, if not ſuper-arrogation. Obedience better then ſacrifice.

Hauing heard report, that in the aforeſaid Towne of Caxumo, euery Wedneſday and Friday in the Lent, many Friers, Prieſts, and Nuns ſtood all night in the water vp to the necke, when we could not be perſwaded to beleeue the ſame, Iohn Scolaro, my couſin Peter Lopez, and I, went thither on a Wedneſday at night, and were aſtonied, beholding ſo great a multitude of them, which were in the water vp to the necke, and it was told vs, that they were Canons, and the wiues alſo of Canons, with Friers and Nuns, and there were ſeats of ſtone made by the waters ſide, and where the water was ſhallow, there was one ſtone, whereupon they ſate vntill the water reached vp to their necke, and if the water were more deepe, they layed another ſtone there, and ſo all the ſaid Lake was full of people, which came from all the Countrey round about; and in this time of Lent, there are great froſts and cold in the night. And hauing talked with Peter de Couillan, concerning this matter, he aſſured me, that they vſed to obſerue this cuſtome in all the Dominions of the Prete, and alſo, that there bee many which doe not onely eate no bread all that time, but alſo went into mighty Forreſts, and into certaine mon-

Standing in water, like Ioſephus his Phariſie.

Froſt and cold.

Going into Forreſts and Valleyes for Penance.

ſtrous deepe Valleyes, lying betweene exceeding high Mountaines, where they may finde water, whereas no other people come, and there they doe their Penance all the time of Lent, and for proofe hereof.

Heremites.

I was on a time with the Prete, in a Towne called Dara, which is neere thoſe great and deep Trenches (whereof I haue ſpoken before) into the which, a great Riuer falleth downe headlong from an high Mountaine into a Bottome, and the water of this Riuer, breaking in the Ayre, became as white as Snow. As we ſtood aloft, Peter de Couillan ſhewed mee a Caue in this Bottome, which we could hardly diſcerne, and ſaid, that in the ſame there was a Monke which they held for a Saint, and vnder this Caue, there ſeemed to bee a Garden: On the ſide of this Bottome, and not farre off, hee ſhewed mee ſuch another Caue, wherein a white Man was dead, which was knowne to haue beene twenty yeeres in that Deſart, and that the time of his death was not knowne. Onely when they ſaw him no more in this Mountaine, they went to ſee his lodging or Caue, and they found it cloſed vp on the inſide with a good Wall, ſo that none might goe in or out thereat: and the Prete being aduertiſed hereof, commanded, that by no meanes it ſhould be opened or touched.

The generall faſt in lent of Friers and Nunnes.

Queene Helena eate but thrice in the weeke.

Cuſtomes of Tigrai.

Polygamie.

110. The generall faſt in Lent, which the moſt part of the Friers and Nunnes, and the Prieſts alſo doe obſerue, is to eate once, from two dayes to two dayes, and that alwayes in the night time. They faſt not on Sundayes: The like doe many old Women when they are going out of the world; and ſo they reported that Queene Helena did, as often as ſhee faſted at any time in the yeere, that ſhee did not eate aboue thrice in the weeke; to wit, on Tueſday, Thurſday, and Saturday. In the Kingdome of Tigrai, which is a Kingdome ſubiect to Barnagaſſo, and in the Kingdome of Tigremahon, euery body eateth fleſh in the Lent, on Saturday and Sunday, and they kill more Oxen on theſe two dayes, then in all the yeere beſide. And if they will marry their firſt or ſecond Wife, they marry them the Thurſday before our Shrouetide, for vpon their marriage they haue licence to eate Fleſh, Milke, and Butter, for two moneths ſpace, at what time ſoeuer they will. And therefore, that they may eate the ſame, they marry Wiues, and drinke Wine. In all the other Territories, Kingdomes, and Signiories, they faſt all the Lent, as well great as ſmall, Men as Women, Male-children as Female, without breaking the ſame in any point, and ſo they doe almoſt all the Aduent.

Palmeſunday.

Weeke before Eaſter.

Cuſtome of Saluting.

Silence.

On Palme-Sunday they ſay their Seruice after this manner: They beginne to ſay Mattins about Mid-night, and they continue their ſinging and dancing, carrying painted Images vncouered in their hands, vntill broad day, and at the houre of Prime, they all get boughes and hold them in their hands at the Gate, for the Women and Lay-men may not come into the Church, and the Prieſts ſtand ſinging in the Church, with boughs in their hands, and ſing very loud, making oftentimes the ſigne of the Croſſe, with the ſaid Boughs, and going about without the Church, they come vnto the principall Gate, into which, ſixe or ſeuen of them enter, as we are wont to doe, which they ſhut, and he ſtands without which is to ſay Maſſe, and they ſing both within and without the Church, as wee doe: and then hee which ſtood without, commeth in and ſayeth Maſſe, and giueth the Communion vnto all. On the holy Weeke, or Weeke before Eaſter, no Maſſe is ſaid, ſaue on Thurſday and Saturday. And their ordinary cuſtome, which all Noblemen and Gentlemen vſe at all times in the yeere, of ſaluting one another, is: When they meete together once a day, they kiſſe their ſhoulders, and embrace one another, and one kiſſeth the right ſhoulder, and the other the left. Theſe ſalutations are not vſed this weeke, but when they doe meete, they ſpeake not one to another, but paſſe by without lifting vp their eyes; and men of any quality, are apparelled all in Blacke or in Blew, and they doe no kind of worke, but all the whole day is ſpent in great deuotions, and ſinging in the Churches, and alwayes there is no Candle lighted.

Mandy-thurſday.

On Holy-thurſday at Euentide, they make the Maunday, that is to ſay, the Ceremonie of waſhing of Feet, and all the people aſſembleth together vnto the Church, and the chiefe Prieſt of the Church, ſitteth on a Chaire like vnto a Treuit, girded with a Towell, and a great Baſon full of water before him, and beginneth to waſh the Feet of the Prieſts; which being done, they beginne to ſing, and ſing all night, and the Prieſts, Friers, and Clerkes goe not out of the Church, neither eate, nor drinke, vntill Saturday after they haue ſaid Maſſe.

Good-Friday.

Of their great lamentation and beating one another, vpon Good-Friday at night.

On Good-Friday about noone, they trim vp the Churches according to their abilitie and riches, for there be ſome Churches which are hanged all with cloth of gold and crimſon, and chiefely, they decke vp the principal Gate, becauſe there is the ſtanding place of all the people, and they hang vp a Crucifixe vpon the Cloth, made of printed Paper, and ouer the ſame is a little Curtaine which couereth it, and they ſing all night and all day, and reade the Paſſion; which being done, they vncouer the Crucifixe, and ſtraightway all the people fall proſtrate on the ground, beating one another with Wandes, and Cuffes, and Fiſts, with great fury, jowling their heads one againſt another, and alſo againſt the Wall, and make ſo bitter mourning, that any heart of Flint would bee mooued to teares with pure deuotion. This lamentation and ſorrow continueth two houres at the leaſt. After this, two Prieſts goe to euery gate of the circuite, which are three; which goe into the Church-yard, and ſtand at all theſe gates, one on the one ſide, and another on the other ſide, with a little Whip in their hands, which hath fiue great thongs of Leather vpon it. And all they that were before the principall gate came out through one of theſe three gates ſtripped from the waſte vpward, and as they paſſe, they bow downe their bodies, and theſe Prieſts with the Whips doe nothing elſe but lay on them as hard as they can, as long as they ſtand ſtill: ſome paſſe by, and haue but few ſtripes, others ſtay and receiue many: but the old men and old women ſtand there halfe an houre, vntill the bloud trickle downe their bodies, and ſo they lye all night in the Cloyſter of the Church. And at mid-night they begin their Songs, which continue vntill the next day at Euening, and then they begin Maſſe, and all receiue the Communion.

Whippings.

Eaſter Eeue.
Eaſter day.

On Eaſter day at mid-night, they begin their Mattens, and before day they make a Proceſſion, and at breake of day they ſay Maſſe: And they obſerue this weeke vntill the Munday following, the Apoſtles Sunday, and ſo they keepe ſeuenteene dayes holy, that is to ſay, from the Saturday before Palme-ſunday, vntill the ſaid Munday.

III. Vpon a time we were in the Lent at the Court of Prete Ianni, which lay on the borders of a Countrey of Gentiles, called Gorages, a Nation (as they ſay) very malicious, and none of theſe will be made ſlaues, for they had rather die or kill themſelues, then ſerue the Chriſtians. The place where the Court lay was out of the Countrey of the ſaid people: which, as it was told vs, haue their Habitations vnder the ground, that is to ſay; they make Caues wherein they liue. But the Court was lodged by a goodly Riuer, the chanell whereof ran low in a deepe bottom, and on the banks on either ſide the Countrey all was a moſt goodly greene Champaigne, but the Earth within a foot deep was a ſandie Rock, like the Rocke Di glali de Charnache in Portugall. On all places on the ſides of this Riuer, were exceeding ſtore of Houſes digged in the Mountaine, one aboue another: and the biggeſt of them had their doore no larger then the mouth of an Hogſhead, whereby they might eaſily creepe in, and ouer the doore was an hole made where they faſtened a Cord, whereby with their hands they climbed vp. In which Houſes abundance of the poore people of the Court were lodged: and they ſaid, that theſe Houſes were able to receiue twentie or thirtie perſons with their ſtuffe.

Gorages.
Troglodytæ, Caue-dwellers.
People liuing in Caues vnder the ground.

There was alſo by this Riuer a very ſtrong Towne, which on the ſide toward the Riuer was hewen into the mightie Rocke, and toward the Land there was a Ditch caſt, fifteene fathomes deepe, and ſix fathomes broad, and both the ends thereof reached vnto the Riuer: and in this Trench all round about it were Houſes digged like to thoſe aforeſaid, but in the midſt of this circuit which was like a plaine field, there were little Houſes made with wals and roofes, wherein at this time Chriſtians dwell, and there is alſo a good Church. The entry into this Towne is digged vnder the ground, through this ſandie Rocke, all made like a Vault, where a man would not thinke, that any Mule or Oxe could enter in, and yet neuertheleſſe they paſſe well enough.

Towne in a Rocke.

Not farre from this Towne, going vp the Riuer is a great Rocke very ſteepe from the top to the bottome, and on the top thereof is a plaine field, and in the mid-way vp this Rocke, there is a Monaſterie dedicated to our Ladie, and here they ſay, was the Palace of the King of this Countrey of Gorages. This Mountaine or Rocke looketh toward the Eaſt, and they goe vp to this Monaſterie with a woodden Ladder, which may bee placed and remooued, for they take it away euery night for feare theſe people Gorages, when the Court is not there, Afterward they goe vp a paire of ſtaires of ſtone, and on the left hand is a Ladder, and fifteene Cels of Friers, which all haue windowes very high ouer the Riuer. Then there are their Butterie, their dining roome, and Chambers to lay vp their Corne; and turning on right hand, paſſing through a darke way, a man commeth vnto a great height, where the principall gate of their Church is, which is not made of the ſaid Rocke, but it ſeemeth in ancient time, that there hath bin a great Hall with wals about it, which is very lightſome and broad, for it hath many windowes ouer the Riuer; To this place come ſome ſmall number of Friers. Many people come hither from the Court to receiue the Communion, both for the deuotion of this place, and alſo by reaſon of the fame, which theſe Friers haue to be men of good life, and becauſe they ſuffer many miſeries, by reaſon of the wrongs which theſe bad Neighbours of theirs, the Gorages doe continually vnto them. And becauſe the Court doth alwayes lodge after one manner, that is to ſay, all the people of the Court, that part on the left hand which belonged to the great Betudete, lay ouer againſt theſe Gorages: and very few dayes paſſed, wherein we heard not this newes: This night, the Gorages haue ſlaine fifteen or twenty men of the great Betudete, and no man would ſuccour them, becauſe that being in the Lent by reaſon of the ſeuere Faſt, no man had any courage to fight for weakneſſe, and faintneſſe of body, neither would they breake the ſeaſon vpon any occaſion.

Monaſterie of our Ladie aſcended by a Ladder, and ſtone ſtaires.

I will haue Mercie and not Sacrifice.

On the holy weeke, and Eaſter day being hard at hand, the Prete ſent vs word to prepare our ſelues to ſay Maſſe before his Tent, becauſe he would heare the ſame. I ſent him word, that all ſhould be readie, but that we lacked a Tent, becauſe that which we had before was all broken and ſpoyled by the raine. He ſent vs word, that he would ſend vs a Tent, and cauſe the ſame to be ſet vp, and that as ſoone as he called for vs, we ſhould come preſently with all things neceſſary to ſay Maſſe. And it was not paſt mid-night, but hee ſent for vs, and ſtrait-way wee went thither, and were brought before the gate of the Prete, which wee found in this manner: A great part of the circuit of the hedge was broken and taken away, and from the Tent of the Prete to the Church of holy Croſſe, ſtood aboue ſixe thouſand Waxe Candles lighted, and all in a ranke, and the diſtance might bee as farre as a Peece of great Ordnance might ſhoote: and the breadth from the one ſide to the other of them that held theſe Candles, was as farre as one could ſtrike a Ball at twice, and all the way was plaine and equall. And there ſtood aboue fiftie thouſand perſons behind them, which held the Candles, ſo that they which held the Candles, made as it were, an hedge that could not be broken, holding Canes before them bound all along together, and the Candles faſtned vpon them round about the way. Before the Tent of the Prete, rode foure Gentlemen on horſe-backe, ſolacing themſelues, and they placed vs next vnto them.

Six thouſand Candles.

The Pretes habit.

Sometime carried on mens ſhoulders.

Crowned horſes.

In the meane while, came the Prete forth of his Tent, mounted vpon a Mule as blacke as a Crow, and as bigge as a great Horſe (whereof they ſay, he maketh great account: and alwayes when he trauelleth, will haue this Mule come after him, and if he ride not vpon the ſame, hee ſitteth on a Litter which is carryed on mens ſhoulders) and he came forth clad in an Embroydered Robe, which reached downe to the ground, and likewiſe his Mule was couered all ouer. The Prete wore his Crowne on his head, and held a Croſſe in his hand, and on both ſides of him went two other Horſes, and they went euen with the head of the Mule, but not hard by him, for they went afarre off, and were adorned and couered all ouer with Embroydered Cloth of Gold, and ſeemed to bee encloſed in Gold, by reaſon of the great glittering thereof. They had great Crownes vpon their heads, which came downe to their very bits, and in the tops thereof were great plumes of Feathers. As ſoone as the Prete was come forth, thoſe foure Noblemen which rode before, departed away, and were ſeene no more, and thoſe which came to call vs. As ſoone as the Prete was paſt, placed vs after him, ſo that no bodie elſe could come there, nor paſſe the raile of the Candles, ſauing onely twentie Gentlemen, which went a good ſpace before the Prete on foot: and in this order we came to the Church of holy Croſſe, where the Maſſe of the Reſurrection was to be ſaid: and here alighting and going into the Church, he entred into his Curtaines, and we ſtayed at the gate, out of which great numbers of Church-men immediately comming, were accompanied with a farre greater number then that which was without, and they began to make a great proceſſion, placing vs in the end of the ſame next vnto the firſt degrees and ſtates of honorable calling: and after the Proceſſion was done, as many went into the Church as could ſtand therein, and the reſt ſtayed in the fields, and they cauſed vs alſo to enter in, placing vs hard by the Curtaines of the Prete.

Proceſſion.

Black Tent.

As ſoone as Maſſe was done, and that they began to giue the Communion, the Prete ſent vs word, that we ſhould make our ſelues readie to goe and ſay Maſſe, becauſe the Tent was now ſet vp, and that he would come preſently. We went our way with thoſe which called vs, which brought vs where there was a blacke Tent ſet vp, hard by the Tent of the Prete, which when we ſaw to be blacke, we thought that they had done it to diſgrace vs: and ſuddenly the Ambaſſador ſaid vnto me; Father, yee ſhall do well not to ſay Maſſe: for this is done to try vs: anſwered; neither doe I meane to ſay Maſſe, let vs goe hence to our Tents; And this was done at the breake of the day.

After our refuſall and expoſtulations, the Prete ſent vs word to haue patience, becauſe hee would ſee condigne puniſhment executed on them which had done the ſame, and prayed vs to goe into that blacke Tent, becauſe that ſeeing it was not good to ſay Maſſe in, yet it was good enough to dine in; and ſo we went into it: And hither was ſent vnto vs a royall Dinner, with infinite and excellent viands of ſundrie ſorts of fleſh, and excellent Wine both white and red, which were very ſtrong, and of an excellent ſmell. Peter de Couillan was with vs, and was preſent at all which paſſed that night. And at Dinner, he told vs, that all this was done of purpoſe, to trie what eſtimation we had of Gods matters, and of the Church, and that from henceforth, they would take vs for very good and perfect Chriſtians. All this Lent, we were very well prouided of meat and drinke, and of good ſtore of Fiſh, and of ſtore of Grapes which were then ripe in that Countrey. As ſoone as we had dined, That old Father which baptized the people, came vnto vs, and told vs, that the Prete ſent vs word, that though wee had ſaid no Maſſe that day, yet at leaſt he would haue vs ſay Maſſe the next Sunday, and that he would take order, that we ſhould haue a good Tent prouided for vs, wherein we ſhould ſay Maſſe according to our manner for the ſoule of his Mother, which was deceaſed a full yeere paſt; and that they likewiſe did ſay the Taſcar, that is to ſay, The commemoration for the dead, and that we alſo ſhould ſay the ſame after our manner.

Maſſe for the Pretes Mother deceaſed.

§. XVII.

§. XVII.

Don LEWIS de MENESES Letters: King EMANVELS death; Their Rites of mourning; Fatigar and Xoa. MAFVDI his many miſchiefes and death in battell.

112. ON the Sunday, being the Octaue of Eaſter, we went thither, and found a great white and new Tent ſet vp, with Curtaines all of ſilke, below ouerthwart the midſt thereof, after their manner, and it was placed very neere the Tent of the Prete, and there the Frier, which now commeth Ambaſſadour with vs, and other Prieſts, ſang a Nocturne for the dead with vs, and we ſaid Maſſe, and before we had finiſhed the ſame, there came vnto vs two packets of Letters, which Don Lewis de Meneſes had ſent vs, which was come with a Fleet for vs to the Hauen of Maczua, and the Letters came by two wayes, and the Meſſengers arriued at one inſtant. There were alſo Letters directed to the Prete, wherein he requeſted him of all fauour, that he would diſpatch vs without delay, that we might be at Maczua the fifteenth of Aprill, becauſe he could ſtay for vs no longer, as well becauſe the moouing of the Sea, which is the fit time to depart out of the Red Sea, would paſſe away, as alſo becauſe there was great need of his preſence in India. And it ſo fell out, that the ſame day whereon the Letters were deliuered, the terme of the fifteenth of Aprill expired. It was alſo written in the ſaid Letters, that the King Don Emanuel was departed this life.

Letters from Maczua.

The death of Don Emanuel.

And becauſe it is the faſhion of this Countrey, when their friends die, to ſhaue their heads, and not their Beards, and to cloath themſelues in blacke apparell, wee beganne to ſhaue one anothers head, and while wee were doing this, in came they which brought vs our dinner: who when they ſaw this, they ſet downe the meate vpon the ground, and ranne to tell it vnto the Prete, which ſuddenly ſent two Friers vnto vs, to vnderſtand what was fallen out. The Ambaſſadour could not anſwere him for the great lamentation which he made, and I told them as well as I could, that the Sunne which gaue vs light was darkned, that is to ſay, that the King Don Emanuel was departed this life, and ſuddenly all of vs began to make our moane, and the Friers went their way. Immediately at that inſtant were cryes made, that all places where Bread, Wine, and other Merchandize were ſold, and all other Tents of Officers and Iudges ſhould be ſhut vp, and this continued for three dayes, in the end whereof his Highneſſe ſent for vs, and his firſt meſſage vnto vs was; who did inherit the Kingdomes of the King his Father? The Ambaſſadour ſaid, the Prince, Don Iohn his Sonne. As ſoone as he vnderſtood this meſſage, they ſay, that hee reioyced greatly, and ſent vs this word, Ateſia, Ateſia; that is to ſay, Be not afraid, be not afraid, for yee are among Chriſtians, the Father was good, the Sonne will alſo be good, and I will write vnto him. At length hee was content, that wee ſhould ſend Iohn Gonſalues our Factor to the Sea, with a Letter of his owne and ours alſo, and gaue him a very goodly Mule and rich apparell, and ten ounces of Gold, and with him went two of the Prete his Kinſmen.

Shauing and Blackes for mourning vſed.

Sale forbidden.

As for our ſelues which did ſolicit him with all importunitie, hee drew vs along for the ſpace of ſixe weekes, and in the end he gaue vs very rich Garments, and to foure of vs he gaue chaines of Gold, with Croſſes hanging at them, and euery man his Mule: I had one of thoſe Mules which went as though ſhe would flie in the Aire, and that without any hardneſſe in the World: and for the reſt of the company, fourescore ounces of Gold, and one hundred Loaues for our iourney which we were to make. Being departed from the Court, we had not trauelled very farre, but the Meſſengers returned which wee had ſent vnto the Sea, and ſignified vnto vs, that Don Lewis was departed a good while ſince, and though we knew that we could not ouer-take him, becauſe the motion of the Sea would not ſuffer him to ſtay for vs, yet neuertheleſſe wee went thither, and found that he had left vs great ſtore of Pepper, and certaine goods for our maintenance, and there were Letters of his directed to the Prete, and vnto vs.

Rich gifts.

Don Lewis departed.

It was determined by the greater part of vs, to ſend halfe of the Pepper to the Prete, and that the other halfe ſhould remayne for our vſe, and that the Factor and I ſhould goe on this meſſage. For all this, Don Roderigo would needs goe himſelfe, and would carrie all the Pepper, hoping that the Prete would giue him ſome great preſent, becauſe it is a thing moſt eſteemed, which may be brought into theſe Countries. And with theſe our Commodities we departed the firſt of September, and went faire and ſoftly with our Mules, and theſe carriages of our goods, and came to the Court about the end of Nouember, and found the Prete in the Kingdome of Fatigar, which is in the vttermoſt part of the Kingdome of Adel, vnder which Adel, is Barbara and Zeila. This King is greatly eſteemed among the Moores, and counted for a Saint, becauſe he maketh continuall warre againſt the Chriſtians, and is furniſhed by the Kings of Arabia, and the Lords of Mecca, and by other Kings which are Moores, with Armour, Horſes, and whatſoeuer he will haue, and he on the other ſide ſendeth them infinite numbers of Abiſſin ſlaues, which he taketh in warre. From the place or field where wee found the Court vnto the firſt Mart-towne of Adel, is a dayes iourney, and from that Mart-towne to Zeila, are eight dayes iourney.

Fatigar.

Barbara and Zeila.

The King of Adel a mortall enemy vnto Prete Ianni, & therefore eſteemed a Saint.

Fatigar deſcribed.

This Kingdome of Fatigar, for as much as we haue ſeene thereof in our going and comming, is for the moſt part Champaigne, that is to ſay, all low hils; wholly manured, and ſowed with Wheate, Barley, and other Seeds, and there are mightie Champaigne fields ſowed all ouer with Corne. There are alſo infinite Herds of Cattell of all ſorts, to wit, Goates, Sheepe, Oxen, Mares, and Mules. From this Champaigne we ſaw a far off, a Mountaine higher then all the reſt, not of ſtone, but couered all ouer with Trees, and alſo manured, wherein are many Monaſteries and Churches enuironed with manured fields; in the top of which Mountaine there is a Lake twelue miles in compaſſe, from whence were brought vnto the Court great ſtore of fiſh of ſundry ſorts, and thoſe very good, and I ſaw not ſuch ſtore in any other place. Here grow ſweet Oranges, Citrons, and Indian Figs, in ſuch abundance, as it is incredible. Peter de Couillan told me, that the ſaid Mountaine was ſo great, that he trauelled eight dayes iourney about the foot thereof, and that he tooke meaſure thereof, and that the Lake on the top of the Mountaine was twelue miles in circuit. When the Court departed, we trauelled two dayes and an halfe, before we came to the foot of this hill, and when we came neere it, it ſeemed very high, and in euery part fruitfull. Many Riuers fall downe from the ſame, wherein is taken great ſtore of fiſh.

A Lake of twelue miles compaſſe on top of a mountaine.

Xoa.

We trauelled a day and an halfe on the back-ſide at the foot of this Mountaine, and leauing the ſame, we went out of the Kingdome of Fatigar, and entred into the Kingdome of Xoa, and here we deliuered the Pepper to the Prete, and the Letters of Don Lewis, which we had tranſlated into the Abiſſin Tongue, and could not receiue any Anſwere at all. This Voyage which the Prete made into this Kingdome, grew vpon occaſion of making certaine partitions and diuiſions, betweene him and two which were his Siſters, by Father and Mother: for Nahu his Father had fiue Wiues. Theſe partitions were of the Lands and Goods, which remayned by the death of his Mother. Here we ſtayed foure daies, wherein they caſt Lots, what part ſhould fall to each one of them. And Peter de Couillan aſſured mee, that there were Countries in theſe portions, which could not bee trauelled about in ten daies iourney. When this diuiſion was made of the portion, which fell vnto the Prete, he cauſed the ſame to be diuided in two parts, which he gaue vnto two of his little Daughters. The hils were couered with Oxen, Goates, Horſes, and Sheepe. The Clothes of Silke and Gold, were likewiſe diuided, whereof there was great quantitie, and he gaue the greateſt part of the Clothes of Silke vnto the Monaſteries and Churches, which belonged to his Mother, in this Territorie. From hence we came to the Towne of Dara, where Peter de Couillan ſhewed the Woods vnto vs, wherein I ſaid, that the Friers led ſo ſtrait a life, and where that white man dyed, whoſe Caue was cloſed vp.

Partition by lot.

Dara.

A famous warriour.

113. This Storie was told me by many, and eſpecially by Peter de Couillan, of a Moore Captaine, called Maſudi, a man of ſuch courage and valour, that of his great Proweſſe after his death, many Songs were made, which are ſung euen to this day by many people in the Court. They ſay, that for the ſpace of twentie fiue yeares together in the Lent, euery yeare he made in-roads, and ſpoyled the Countrey of Prete Ianni, and becauſe in this time, the Faſt which is great, taketh away the ſtrength of the people, ſo that they are not able to fight, therefore hee made inroads without any danger through thoſe Countries, and ſometimes hee entred aboue threeſcore miles. And one yeare he came into the Kingdome of Amara, or into the Kingdome of Xoa, or into the Kingdome of Fatigar, and ſometimes in one part, and ſometimes in another: and he began to make theſe in-roads in the life of King Alexander, which was Vncle to the King, for the ſpace of twelue yeares together, who being dead without Sonnes, his Brother Nahu ſucceeded him, which was the Father of this preſent King, and he did the like in his daies. This preſent Prete Ianni, began to raigne when he was twelue yeares of age, & til he grew to be ſeuenteen yeares old, Maſudi ceaſed not to make theſe in-roads, and warres in the Lent: and they ſay, that they were ſo great, that in one of them he led away nineteene thouſand Abiſſins Captiues, whom hee ſent all to the houſe of Mecca, cauſing them to bee preſented to the Kings of the Moores, where being enforced to become Renegados, they grow to bee very couragious and valiant men, becauſe they get out of the ſtraitneſſe of faſting, and enter into the fatneſſe, and abundance of the vices of the Moores. Hee alſo carryed away a great multitude of all ſorts of Cattell.

Nineteene thouſand Captiues.

On the foure and twentieth yeare of his Inuaſions, when hee entred into the Kingdome of Fatigar, all the people fled vnto a Mountaine, and Maſudi enuironed them about, and tooke them, and burnt all the Churches and Monaſteries therein. I haue ſaid before, that through all the Countrey of Prete Ianni, there are certaine called Canas, which are men at Armes, becauſe the Husbandmen in theſe Countries goe not to warre. There were many of theſe Canas in theſe Kingdomes, which together with the Husbandmen were retyred into the ſaid Mountaine. Maſudi tooke them altogether, and put them by themſelues, and the poore Husbandmen he diſmiſſed, ſending them away that they might ſow the fields with Corne the next yeare, for him and his Horſes: and to the men of Armes, he ſaid; Yee Cowards, which eat the bread of your King, and ſo badly defend his Territories, paſſe by the ſword; and ſo fiue thouſand men at Armes were ſlaine, and he returned with great victorie, and without any impeachment at all.

Husbandmen no Souldiers.

The Prete being much moued with this Act, and eſpecially at the burning of the Churches and Monaſteries ſent Spies into the Kingdome of Adel, to know by what part Maſudi meant to enter: and vnderſtood, that he meant to come with great troupes into the Kingdome of Fatigar, in the time of Wheate and Barley Harueſt to deſtroy them. The Prete hauing learned, that he came not in the time of Lent, at which time they are forbidden * to fight, reſolued to wait for him by the way, and this he did againſt the minds of all his great Courtiers, he ſet forward with his people and Court onely, without ſending for any from farre Countries, becauſe he would not be diſcouered, and trauelled day and night: and on a morning at breake of day, hee ſet vp his Pauilions, in a Towne where the firſt Market of the Kingdome of Adel is held, which is a dayes iourney from the Citie of Adel, where we found him when we carryed him the Pepper. Here (they ſay) is a great paſſage, which the King of Adel had paſſed the day before, and was entred three miles into the Countrey of Prete Ianni, and was gone out of the way; when it began to be broad day, they ſaw one another.

* Cruelkie of Superſtition.

Maſudi, which was a man of great valour, and was neuer knowne to flee, as the Abiſſins vſe to ſing of him; as ſoone as he ſaw the Pauilion of the Prete, and the red Tents, which are neuer wont to be ſet vp, but at great Feaſts, and entertainments of Princes, ſaid vnto the King of Adel: Sir, the Negus of Ethiopia is here in perſon; and this is the day of our death, doe what you can to ſaue your ſelfe, for my part I meane here to die: and the ſaid King being fearefull, eſcaped with foure others on horſe-backe, among whom was the ſonne of a Betudete, which then remayned with the King of Adel, and is now with the Prete in his Court (for they make no great account to run away, and become Moores, and if they will returne againe, they are baptized anew, and are pardoned for their fault, and become Chriſtians as they were before) and hee told vs all theſe things particularly. As ſoone as the King of Adel was gotten to a ſafe place, which was with great ſpeed; the Prete Ianni ſignified to his Armie, after hee knew that the King was fled, that they ſhould receiue the Communion, and recommend themſelues vnto God, and after breake-faſt, ſhould ſet themſelues in order: and at nine of the clocke they began to arrange themſelues in battell array, and to march againſt the Moores, keeping alwayes their Tents and Pauilions armed.

King of Adel fleeth.

The Battell betwixt the Negus and Maſudi.

Maſudi, which was reſolued not to flee, and ſaw death before his eyes, deſired to end his dayes with ſome notorious and honourable action, and therefore ſpake vnto certayne Chriſtians, inquiring of them, whether there were any Knight ſo hardie among them, that hee durſt fight with him. Hereunto a Frier offered himſelfe, called Gabriel Andreas, which ſlue him in combat, and ſtrooke off his head, and for this his victorie, he is much honoured in the Court, and we our ſelues were acquainted with him. The reſt of the Armie gaue the onſet vpon the Moores, and diſcomfited them, which could no way eſcape, becauſe the Prete his Tents were placed in the principall paſſage; and another paſſage which was farre off, and whereby the King of Adel fled, was by this time alſo taken.

Maſudi ſlaine by Gabriel Andreas a Frier.

After this victorie, the Prete Ianni reſted in his Tents, and the day following made an inroad through the Kingdome of Adel, vntill he came to certayne Palaces of the ſaid King, which he found quite abandoned, the Gates whereof the Prete ſtrooke thrice with his Launce, and would ſuffer no man to enter in or come neere them, becauſe it ſhould not be ſaid, that hee came thither to rob; for if the King had beene there, or any body elſe, hee would haue beene the firſt that ſhould haue entred in, and made them faire warre: and when he found no body therein, he would ſuffer none to enter into them, and ſo returned backe. This battell was in the moneth of Iuly; and it is ſaid, that it was on the very ſame day, that Lopez Suarez deſtroyed and burnt the Citie of Zeila, at the ſack whereof I my ſelfe was, and the Moores which were taken told vs, that the Captaine of Zeila was gone with the King of Adel, to warre againſt the Negus of Ethiopia. And oftentimes the Prete ſent to ſhew vs foure or fiue bundles of Swords, with hilts of ſiluer, but groſſely made, and told vs, that he had won them in the Warre againſt the Soldan of Adel; and the Tent which he ſent vs of embroidered cloth and veluet of Mecca, he alſo wan in the ſaid Warre, and wiſhed vs to hallow it before we ſaid Maſſe therein, becauſe the Moores had committed many ſinnes in the ſame.

Fides pietaſque viris qui caſtra ſequ.

Lopez Suarez tooke Zeila in the yeere 1517

The head of this Maſudi was carried for three yeeres ſpace with the Court, euen vntill our comming thither, and on euery Saturday, Sunday, and other Holy-dayes, which the common people keepe; all the Boyes and Girles did nothing elſe but ſing Verſes, made after their manner, in the praiſe of this Victorie, and at this day their ſinging paſſeth throughout all the Court, and I thinke it will continue to the worlds end. Gabriel Andreas, as I haue ſaid, is a Frier, and a very honorable Perſon, and a Gentleman of very great reuenue; and beſides this worthy Act which he did, he hath done many other; and the report is, that he is very eloquent, and a friend to the Portugalls, and vnderſtandeth very well the holy Scriptures, and the things that concerne the Chriſtian Faith, and hath great delight to talke of them, although King Nahu cauſed the tip of his tongue to be cut off, for his ouer-much talking.

Gabriels tongue cut.

114. He ſent vs word, that he purpoſed to write to the Pope of Rome, whom they call, Rumea Negus Lique Papas, which ſignifieth, King of Rome, and head of the Pope, and that I ſhould make him the beginning of the Letter, becauſe they are not wont to write, and knew not how they ſhould write to the Pope. I ſent him word, that I would make the beginning for him, and that they ſhould adde the reſt which they meant to write, or requeſt at his hands. When wee came thither, we found all thoſe which they hold moſt learned and wiſe with many books, and they asked me where mine were. I anſwered, that I had no need of books, but onely to know his Highneſſe purpoſe, and that we were to bee gouerned according thereunto. Forthwith, by a chiefe man, as well in authoritie as in knowledge, which was there preſent, and by his office is called Abucher, which ſignifieth, A chiefe Chaplaine; the Prete his intention was deliuered to the Frier, and he told it me, and I ſet my ſelfe to write, and made a briefe Preface; which forthwith was carried to his Highneſſe in my hand-writing. Which hauing ſeene, hee ſent mee back againe, and forthwith we tranſlated it into his language, and returned it againe vnto him; Within a while there came a Page, which ſaid, That the King liked very well of that which I had written, and maruelled much, that it was not taken out of books; commanding, that it ſhould be written in a faire hand, and in two Papers, and that his learned Prieſts ſhould ſtudie their books, for the reſt which ſhould be added to theſe Letters. The Copie of the Letter which I made, is written in a Paper by it ſelfe, and beginneth in this manner: Right happy and holy Father, &c. Three dayes they beſtowed in making of the other Letter, and aboue fifteene in making a little Croſſe of gold, which weigheth one hundred Cruzadoes, which alſo I was to carrie to the Pope.

Learning all in bookes.

115. At this time the Prete Ianni determined to ſend an Ambaſſadour into Portugall, becauſe that hitherto he had ſent none, and he ſent for Don Roderigo and me, and told vs, that hee purpoſed to ſend a man of his with vs vnto the King of Portugall, to the end, that his deſires might ſooner take effect: and asked vs, whether we thought, that Zaga Zabo the Frier, who alwayes kept vs companie, were ſufficient for this Ambaſſage, ſeeing hee vnderſtood our language, and had beene before-time in our Countries. We anſwered him, That he was moſt ſufficient, and was a man which vnderſtood vs, and we him. He ſent vs word, that wee ſhould take him with vs in our companie. The next day he ſent vs againe very honorable apparell, and thirtie ounces of gold, and one hundred loaues of bread for our voyage, and yet wee ſtayed a good while after: The Prete ſent a Meſſenger vnto vs, appointing vs to returne vnto the Towne of Chaxumo, where (as I ſaid before) we had beene a long time: and here he furniſhed vs with fiue hundred loades of Graine, with one hundred Oxen, and one hundred Sheepe, with one hundred earthen Pots of Honey, and another hundred of Butter, and ſent for the Ambaſſadour which went with vs, twentie loades of Corne, twentie Oxen, twentie Sheepe, twentie pots of Honey, and as many of Butter.

Zaga Zabo Ambaſſadour.

116. While we aboade in the Towne of Chaxumo, the ſaid Zaga Zabo was aduertized, that a certayne little Lordſhip, which he had, was taken from him: whereupon he prayed me, that I would goe with him to the Court to demand iuſtice. When we came thither, we found, that his Aduerſarie was Abdenago, Captaine of all the Pages of Prete Ianni, for here is no office but hath an Head aboue all the reſt. And becauſe all Suites and Anſweres are made to the Prete by Pages, we had no meanes at all to make the Prete acquainted with our ſuite; howbeit, wee were aided by one Aiace, which is a great Lord: and though he were a great friend of Abdenago, yet made he the Prete acquainted with the cauſe of our comming. Our Iudges were appointed, Aiaz Daragote, and Aiaz Caite, to whom we imparted our requeſt; and they appointed vs a time the next day, when the Sunne ſhould be in ſuch a place, ſhewing vs the place in the skie: and the Proctor of Abdenago was there preſent, and Zaga Zabo the Ambaſſadour was there in perſon. When the day was come, both parties diſputed and alleaged greatly for themſelues, and they concluded in words, for in their Courts they write nothing at all; and the Iudges gaue ſentence by word of mouth, after this manner; That the Mannor and Lordſhip, which Zaga Zabo demanded, was a very ſmall thing, and in former times ſubiect to another great Lordſhip, whereof Abdenago was Lord, and that it was right, that as the great Winde paſſeth ouer all the Earth, ſo Abdenago, which was a great Lord, might not be hindred from entring vpon this, but that he ought to enter vpon this little Signiorie.

Hearing of the Cauſe.

Zaga Zabo loſt the day.

When we heard this ſentence, we were much amazed, and went to complaine vnto the Prete, which ſent vs word to goe to our lodging, and be of good cheere, for all ſhould be well, and that the next day we ſhould repaire to the chiefe Iuſtice, which ſhould ſee vs diſpatched, and herewithall we departed. The next day we waited vpon him at his Tent, who receiued vs with a cheerfull countenance, ſaying, That he had a commandement from the Prete to diſpatch vs, and that we ſhould ſtay for him at his Tent; howbeit, wee would needs goe with him vntill hee went to ſpeake vnto the Prete. Where, after he was gone in, and had ſtayed a while, hee came out with two Pages, which led him to the place where offenders are beaten, and there calling two which doe this office, they ſtripped him, and throwing him downe vpon the ground, they tyed his hands vnto two poſts, and his feet ſtraight, with a thong of Leather, which two men held faſt. Theſe miniſters of Iuſtice ſtood one at his head, and another at his feet, ſmiting him oftentimes, and for the moſt part on the backe; and when the Prete commanded them to touch him, the ſtripe pierced vnto the bones, and of theſe ſtripes he had onely three. I haue ſeene this chiefe Iuſtice beaten three times beſides, and within two dayes after, he returned to his office: becauſe they are not aſhamed hereof, but rather ſay, that the Prete meaneth them well, and is mindfull of them, and ſhortly after beſtoweth his fauour on them, and putteth them in office.

The Lord chiefe Iuſtice miſerably beaten.

When this chiefe Iuſtice was beaten, there were ſixtie Friers in new apparell preſent, which was yellow, after their cuſtome. And when the chiefe Iuſtice his puniſhment was ended, they tooke an old Frier which ſeemed to be a man of account, and was Head of the reſt, and beat him after the aforeſaid manner, but he was not touched to the quicke. After him they tooke another which was aboue fortie yeeres of age, who ſeemed to be a man of much honour, and they beate him as they did the reſt, and this laſt was twice touched to the quicke. While this was done, I inquired the cauſe, and what fault the Friers had committed: it was told me, that the laſt Frier which was beaten, had taken to wife a daughter of a Prete Ianni, that is to ſay, of Alexander the vnckle of this Dauid, and that he was ſeparated from her, and had taken another ſiſter of this preſent Prete, which being very diſhoneſt, and doing what ſhe liſted, her husband fearing to put her away, in regard of the Prete, and becauſe alſo in this Countrey the faults of women are not regarded, he forſooke this ſecond wife, and tooke againe the firſt: and the Prete hauing commanded him that he ſhould receiue his ſiſter againe, he would not obey it, but went and became a religious man: and the Prete hauing committed this cauſe to the chiefe Iuſtice, to conſider whether hee might become a Frier lawfully or no; the Iuſtice gaue ſentence, that hee might lawfully take vpon him the habite of a religious man, and for this cauſe, the Iuſtice was puniſhed. The father of the Friers was beaten, becauſe he had giuen him the habite; and this third man, becauſe he receiued the ſame: and immediatly he was enioyned to leaue the ſame, and to take againe the ſiſter of the Prete; and by this meanes wee could not haue audience for the ſpace of fifteene dayes.

Yellow Friers.

Womens faults neglected.

---

§. XVIII.

Death of Queene HELENA. Tributes of Goiame, and other Prouinces. Succours giuen to the Queene of Adea. Apprehenſion of the two Betudetes and TIGREMAHON: their ſentence, and the execution. Expedition of the Negus to Adea. Strange Oxen. The PRETES Tent-court, and manner thereof; Places, Courts, and courſes of Iuſtice, with other parts thereof deſcribed. His Treaſuries.

117. QVeene Helena had beene dead ſome eight or nine moneths, which gouerned the greateſt part of the Kingdome of Goiame, when as many as came newly to the Court, went to bewaile her in her Tent, which as yet ſtood vpright in the old place, and wee did the like, when wee came anew to the Court after her death. And the Prete hauing ſent vnto that Kingdome the grand Betudete to receiue the Gibre, which is the yeerely tribute of the King; at this time the ſaid Betudete came to the Court with the Gibre, which was three thouſand fiue hundred Mules, three hundred Horſes, and three thouſand Baſſuti, (which are a kind of clothes which great men weare vpon their Litters, and they are made of Cotton, ſhaggie on the one ſide, like vnto Carpets, but not ſo courſe; and great perſonages lay them vpon their Beds; and they are of ſo great price, that one of them is worth an ounce of Gold at the leaſt, and ſometimes three or foure ounces, yea and fiue ounces) and aboue three hundred Cotton clothes of ſmall value, whereof two are worth but a dramme of Gold, and ſometimes leſſe: and, as wee haue ſaid, an ounce is worth a Pardoa, which is three quarters of a golden Ducat of Portugall, and it was told me, that he brought thirtie thouſand drachmes of Gold.

Goiame, the gouernment of Queene Helena.

Gibre, or tribute of Goiame.

Baſſuti.

* One Copie hath 3000o. which ſeemeth better to agree with that which followeth.

I my ſelfe was at the preſenting of this tribute, and ſaw it all; and it was in this manner. The Betudete came on foot naked from the girdle vpward with a cord tyed about his head, like vnto a wreath of a Caſtilian Carrier, and comming within audience of the Tent of the Prete, he ſaid three times this word in ſhort ſpace, Abeto, Abeto, Abeto, which ſignifieth Lord: and anſwere was made him but twice in his Language, Who art thou? Who art thou? And he ſaid, I which call, am the leaſt of thy houſe, which ſaddles thy Mules, and tyeth vp thy Cattell, and doe other buſineſſe which thou haſt commanded mee, and I bring thee that which thou haſt inioyned mee: and theſe words were ſpoken three times; which being ended, a voice was heard, ſaying, Come, come forward. And he comming neere did reuerence before the Tent, and paſſed by. After him came the Horſes one after another, all led by the heads by ſeruants. The firſt thirtie were ſadled, and in very good order, the reſt which followed were deare of two drachmes of Gold, and many were not worth one dram a piece, and I ſaw them afterward ſold for leſſe, and there might be ſome three thouſand of them. After theſe Hackneys * came the Mules in like order, to wit, thirtie which were ſadled, faire, and in good order; the reſt were little young Mulets like thoſe Hackneys, and there were Mules and Mulets, of one, of two, and of three yeeres old, and not paſt, paſt, and none of them ſauing thoſe which were ſadled, were fit to bee ridden: and they paſſed by as the Betudete and the Horſes had done. After the Mules, came the Cloathes called Baſſuti, and one man could carrie but one of them, they were ſo weightie. After the Baſſuti paſſed, the cloathes made vp in Fardles, and one man carried ten of them; and there were about three thouſand men, that carried Baſſuti, and three thouſand men that carried thoſe other Cloathes; and all theſe were of the Kingdome of Goiame, which are bound to bring the ſaid Gibre. After theſe cloathes, came ten men, each of them bearing a Charger vpon his head, made like vnto thoſe wherein they doe eate, and were couered with Greene and Red Sindall. After theſe Chargers, came all the men of the Betudete, which paſſed by one after another, as hee himſelfe had paſſed. In theſe Platters was the Gold put, which was commanded to bee borne vnto his lodging, with the reſt of the tribute, which was done accordingly. In this Proceſſion were ſpent aboue ten houres, that is to ſay, From the morning vntill euening.

Strange ceremonies.

* Ronzini.

Queene of the Moores.

Her traine.

About fifteene daies before our comming to the Court, thither came a Queene of the Moores, Wife vnto the King of Adea, which was the Siſter of one, which was ſent to be the Wife of Prete Ianni, whom he refuſed, becauſe two of her fore-teeth were too great, and therefore ſhe was married vnto a great Lord, which was the Barnagaſſo, and is now a Betudete. This Queene came to craue ſuccour of the Prete, becauſe a Brother of her Husbands was riſen vp againſt her, and tooke her Kingdome from her. She was well accompanied like a Queene, and brought with her fiftie Moores, which were very Honourable perſons, and very well apparelled, riding vpon Mules, and one hundred men on foote, and ſixe Maids of Honor mounted vpon Mules, and they were people which were not very blacke. She was receiued with great honour, and was called for within three daies after her comming, and ſhe came before the Tent of the Prete, being her ſelfe encloſed in a blacke Litter. She changed her apparell twiſe that day, once in the morning, and againe at euening, and both times ſhe was clad in Embroydered Cloath of Veluet, and in Mooriſh ſmocks of India: and the Prete ſent her word, that ſhe ſhould take her eaſe, and put away all ſorrow, becauſe ſhe ſhould haue her whole deſire, and that ſhee ſhould ſtay for Barnagaſſo, and Tigremahon, at whoſe comming ſhe ſhould preſently depart.

Tributes of Barnagaſſo and Tigrai.

* An hyperbolicall ſpeech.

Their Armes.

Within eighteene daies after her comming hither, ſhe was againe apparelled after the former manner, and the next day, the foreſaid parties arriued at the Court, and each of them brought the Tribute which they are bound to pay vnto the King. And with them came the Cauas, that is, The men at Armes of their Kingdomes, with many other Noble-men. They being arriued, the Prete commanded, that the Betudete ſhould firſt ſhew his tribute of the Kingdome of Goiame. After him the Barnagaſſo began to giue his Tribute, which were one hundred and fiftie exceeding faire Horſes, and the firſt day they did nothing elſe but runne and prance, and the next day he preſented great ſtore of Cloath of Silke, and great ſtore of paſſing fine Cloathes of India. I was not at this preſentment, becauſe I felt not my ſelfe well. When this was done, the next day very early, Tigremahon began to preſent his Tribute, which were two hundred Horſes, fatter, fairer, and better then thoſe of Barnagaſſo, becauſe they came from a farther Countrey, yet both of their Horſes were of Egypt and Arabia, and all this day, they did nothing elſe but view Horſes. The next day they preſented more Cloathes of Silke, then euer I ſaw together in my life, and the whole day was beſtowed in preſenting, counting and receiuing of the ſame. The Munday following, about noone, came Balgada Robel, a great Nobleman, ſubiect to Tigremahon, to preſent his Tribute by himſelfe, which were thirtie Horſes, all of Egypt, great like * Elephants, very fat, and a Xumagali, that is, a Gentleman without Title vpon each of them; and eight of theſe Xumagali had good Curaſſes like vnto ours, part couered with Veluet, and part with Cordouan, and their ſtuds gilded. They had alſo Helmets like ours vpon their heads. Balgada Robel himſelfe was one of theſe eight: the other two and twenty had ſhirts of Maile, with long ſleeues, which were very well faſtned to their bodies: they had thirtie Iauelins, and Maces of Iron like vnto the workes, and all of them weare Blue wreathes about their heads, with long haire which waued in the wind.

Succours for Adea.

Apprehenſion of great men.

118. Of the Cauas, that is, The men of Armes which came with Barnagaſſo and Tigremahon, and with the Gentlemen of their Companies, the Prete Ianni appointed, that fifteene thouſand of them, with a Noble-man named Adrugaz, which is often ſpoken of in this Booke, ſhould goe immediatly into the Kingdome of Adea, and pacifie that Kingdome, and that the Queene ſhould follow ſoft and faire. And forth-with the Queene and Adrugaz departed, and it was reported, that they ſhould trauaile through the Countrey of the Prete, thirtie daies iourney, before they could come into the Kingdome of Adea. The next day after, the Queenes departure, the Prete commanded the Grand Betudete to be apprehended, which had brought him tribute from the Kingdome of Goiame. Likewiſe he cauſed the other Betudete to be taken, whoſe name is Canha, he cauſed alſo Tigremahon to be taken; which being apprehended on a morning before day, the Prete departed, and all the Court with him, and we after him.

And as the Ambaſſador of the Prete, and I ſtood by a Riuers ſide, watering our Mules, this Betudete that brought the Tribute paſſed by vs, and ſaid vnto mee, Abba Barqua, which ſignifieth, Father giue me your bleſſing: I anſwered him; Ihezeria Barqua, that is to ſay, God bleſſe you. He anſwered with teares, which trickled downe his cheekes: Father, pray to God for me, for at this time I ſhall end my daies. His priſon was a little Chaine, very thinne, of a fathome* long, like a Chaine to leade a Dogge in, with a little thin circle about his necke, and himſelfe carried his Chaine in his hand.

A Chaine-priſon.

* Vn Braccio.

On a Wedneſday, we came to the place where the Tents of the Prete were ſet vp, and that night it was ſaid, that the Prete commanded the Betudete to bee brought to his preſence, and ſo he was brought with two of his Sonnes. When they were come to the gate of the Tent, the Prete ſent forth two Pages, to cauſe him to be brought to the backe-ſide of the Tent, becauſe he would ſpeake with him in his owne perſon, commanding the Guard and his Sonnes to attend, and withdrew themſelues a little from the gate of the Tent. Here they ſtayed vntill the morning, when the Prete rid away, and all of vs with him, without any newes at all of the Betudete, whether he were dead or aliue, or what was become of him. His ſaid two Sonnes, and three others which ſtayed at home, being all great perſonages, and worthy Warriors, made pittifull moane, and all their Fathers Seruants, which kept an honourable houſe, like a great King. After this the Prete commanded, that they ſhould not vſe any Seruant of their Fathers, nor of their owne: and I haue ſeene them riding all alone without any Seruant, naked from the Girdle vpward, with a blacke ſhaggy Sheepe-skinne vpon their ſhoulders, and clad in blacke Cloath from the Girdle downeward, and all their Mules couered with blacke. Their owne Seruants and their Fathers, were diuided all, and walked mourning on foote, and droue their Mules ſadled before them.

On a Munday, when we entred into the Kingdome of Oiſa, there was a commandement, to obſerue the Feaſt of the Kings, or Twelfe-day, which they call, Tabuchete, on which day they obſerue their Baptiſme, as I haue ſaid before. This day very early in the morning, theſe Sons of the Betudete went from houſe to houſe, that is to ſay, To the Tents of the great perſons, as others were wont to come vnto them, enquiring newes of their Father, whether he were liuing or dead, whereof they could learne nothing at all, vntill fifteene daies after, when they were returned, which had conueyed him into the Kingdome of Fatigar, into a Mountaine, which is ſaid to be in the vttermoſt Border of the Kingdome of Adel, which is very high, hauing a deep Valley in the midſt thereof, and there is but one entrance thereinto: In this bottome or Valley, are all kind of Beaſts and Oxen, but the men which came into it, dye within foure or fiue daies of an Ague, and that there they had left him without any man to waite vpon him, ſauing certaine Moores which were to guard him vntill he were dead. This newes increaſed their griefe more then the firſt: and men beganne to ſpeake of this death in the Court, that the Prete had put him vnto the ſame, becauſe he had lien with the Queene his Mother, and the report went ſo while ſhee was aliue, and that hee had a Sonne by her, and that the Prete would not put him to death while his mother liued, becauſe hee would not diſcredite her. And while theſe rumours went about the Court, Proclamation came forth, that no man ſhould ſpeake of the Betudete, on paine of his life. Suddenly this rumour ceaſed; And three moneths after, while wee were neere the Sea ſide, in the Territories of Tigremahon, there came a new report, that the Betudete was not dead, and that his Sonnes, by the helpe of the King of Adel, had wrought his eſcape. Immediatly there came other newes, that the Prete had beheaded twentie Moores, which guarded him, and two of his Seruants, becauſe they came to ſpeake with him: and this we knew to be very true.

The kingdome of Oiſa.

Chance and Change, &c.

A ſtrange Valley vſed for a killing priſon.

The cauſe of the Betudete his apprehenſion.

119. Alſo on a night, the Prete commanded that Tigremahon ſhould be carried away, neither was there any man that could tell, to what place he was conueyed. The next day they ſent to lay hold vpon all that hee had in his Tents, and ceaſed not three daies together, to carrie, count, and deliuer out courſe Cloathes, and many Chamblets, and very fine Cloathes of India. We were then in the Court ſixe White men of vs, to wit; I, and one Portugall, and foure Genoneſes. To each of vs the Prete ſent ſixe cloathes, to wit, three pieces of Chamblet, and three cloathes of India, and it was reported within few daies, that the Prete had ſent Tigremahon into the Kingdome of Damute, into a wonderfull high Mountaine, which had but one way made by hand into it, and the top thereof was cleanſed, and very cold. Hither they ſend men, whom they would ſpeedily ride out of the way. And according as falſe newes came into the Countries of Tigremahon, that the Betudete was fled, ſo certaine newes came vnto vs, that Tigremahon was dead in that Mountaine for hunger and cold. At this time alſo, while wee were at the Court, the other Betudete which was apprehended, was depoſed from his Office, and Arraz Nobiata was made Betudete, which had beene Barnagaſſo, and Balgada Robel was made Tigremahon, who came with thirtie Horſes in ſuch good order. And there ranne a great brute through all the Court, lamenting the death of the Queene Helena: for they muttered, that ſince her death, Both great and ſmall went all to wracke, and that while ſhe liued all were preſerued aliue and cheriſhed, and that ſhe was the Father and Mother of all men; and that if the Prete went forward on this faſhion, all his Kingdome would ſpeedily come to nought.

Tigremahon dyed with hunger and cold.

Queene Helena lamented.

The Tabuchete or Baptiſme being ended, the Ambaſſadour Zago Zabo, and I, left off the proſecution of our ſuit, becauſe we durſt not proceede therein, by reaſon of the great and weightie affaires

Orgabra.

Magadaxo.

A mightie Lake.

White Oxen without horns, as bigge as Camels.

affaires, which we ſaw to be in hand. The Prete ſent for vs, and taking away a Lordſhip, which Abdenago our aduerſarie held, and the other which we demanded, he gaue them both vnto the Ambaſſadour, and ſo diſpatched vs fully contented. Before wee departed, newes came from Adrugaz, which went with the Queene of Adea to ſuccour her Husband, whereby the Prete was aduertized, how the people would not obey her, and that whether ſoeuer ſhe came, they fled away, and ranne into the Mountaines, and that his Highneſſe muſt ſend more men. The Prete determined to goe thither in perſon, and to bring the Queene his Wife vnto a Towne, wherein before we had beene with her, which is called Orgabra, being in the Frontiers of the Kingdome of Adea, and there to leaue his Wife, his Children, and all the Court; and ſo hee did. There went with him of the Portugals, George de Bren, Diego Fernandez, Alfonſo Mendez, and Aluarenga, and fiue or ſixe Genoueſes. Vpon their returne, they reported, that whereſoeuer the Prete trauelled through the Kingdome of Adea, all the people came to do him homage, as vnto their Lord, and that he would haue gone a great deale farther, euen vnto Magadaxo; and that the Countrey was very fruitfull and full of Woods, ſo that they could not trauell, vnleſſe they cut downe the Trees, and ſo made their way. And that there was infinite ſtore of victuals of all ſorts, and great herds of all Cattell, which are very bigge, and that in this Kingdome there is a Lake ſo great, that it ſeemeth to be a Sea, and that a man cannot ſee from the one ſide to the other, wherein there is an Iland, where in times paſt a Prete Ianni built a Monaſtery, and placed many Monkes in the ſame, although it were built in the Land of the Moores, which Friers for the moſt part dyed of the Feauer, ſauing a few that remained in a little Monaſterie out of the Ile, by the Lakes ſide, which were found aliue, and that the Prete forth-with commanded, that other Churches and Monaſteries ſhould bee built, and many Prieſts and Friers ſhould be left there, and lay-people to inhabite the ſaid Kingdome, which being pacified, he returned backe againe to the Towne where he had left the Court. This Kingdome payeth a great number of Oxen for tribute, and we haue ſeene of them in the Court, and they are as bigge as great Camels, and white as Snow, and without hornes, and haue very great and hanging eares.

How the Prete is lodged in his Tents.

The hedge with twelue gates.

Saint Mary of Sion.

120. The manner which the Prete obſerueth in diſpoſing of his Court, is, that alwaies hee lodgeth in the fields, for no other place were able to containe his traine; And if there be any high place, thereon they ſet vp the Tents of the Prete, the backe parts whereof ſtand alwaies to the Eaſt, and the Gates vnto the Weſt, and they are alwaies foure or fiue Tents, all faſtned together one to the other, and theſe are properly his habitations, enuironed about with certaine high Curtaines, which they call Mandekate, being wrought in Checker-wiſe, diuided into black and white, and if you will ſtay there any long time, they compaſſe them about with an hedge, which is a good mile about, wherein they make twelue Gates. The principall Gate looketh toward the Weſt, and behind the ſame a good diſtance off, are two other Gates, one on the one ſide, and another on the other, which ſerue for the Church of Saint Marie of Sion, which ſtandeth toward the North, and the other ſerueth for the Church of holy Croſſe, which is towards the South. Next vnto theſe gates, which ſerue for theſe Churches, as farre diſtant from theſe as the principall Gate is from the Gates aforeſaid, are two other Gates on each ſide. That towards the South, ſerueth to goe to the Tents of the Queene, the Wife of the Prete, and that toward the North, ſerueth to goe to the lodgings of the Pages; and at all theſe Gates, ſtand ſeuerall Guards. I could not ſee the reſt, for they will ſuffer no man to goe round about that hedge. This I wot well, that in all places whereſoeuer he lodgeth, they make twelue Gates: among which there is one, that ſerueth for the Pages of the Kitchin.

Meats hot with ſpices.

Behind theſe Tents, the diſtance of a Croſſe-bow ſhot and more, are the Kitchins placed, and the Tents of the Cookes diuided into two parts: To wit, the Cookes on the right hand, and the Cookes on the left hand. And when the meates are brought from theſe Kitchins, they vſe to carrie them after this ſort, (according as I ſaw in the Citie of Orgabra, in the Kingdome of Xoa, as I ſtood vpon an hill neere vnto the Kitchins; for in other parts the Tents are ſet in the Plaines, that no man may ſee them.) There paſſed a Canopie of Red and Blew Crimzon, as it ſeemed of ſixe whole long pieces ſewed together, and they carried this Canopie vpon certaine Canes, which in this Countrey are very good, ſtrong, and ſo long, that they make Lances with them. Vnder this Canopie came the Pages, which carried the meate in certaine great Platters of Wood, which they call Canete, being made like plaine Patens of Wood, wherein we cleanſe our Wheate, with a brim two fingers high, but they be greater, and in each of them were ſet many Diſhes of black earth, wherein the meates were put, as Hens, Turtles, and other ſmall Birds, and many fruits, and White-meates, which are for the moſt part made with Milke, and other things. There were alſo little Pipkins, as blacke as the diſhes, with other Viands, and Broth of diuers ſorts. Theſe meats which I ſpeake of, which were carried in theſe Platters, I ſay not that I ſaw them when they carried them, becauſe I was a farre off; but I ſaw them, when they ſent them to vs, that they came in the ſame Platters, as they were brought from the Kitchin, without any Canopie, and the Pipkins were couered with their heads cloſed vp with Paſte: and theſe Platters which they ſent vs, were full of theſe Pipkins, which were ſeething hot. In all meats wherein they may put Ginger and Pepper, they layed on ſo much, that we could not eate of them, becauſe they were ſo hot. Betweene the Kitchins and the Tents of the Cookes, almoſt behind the ſame, is a Church of Saint Andrew, which is called, The Church of the Cookes. No man may repaire vnto the place where the Kitchins are, nor yet behind them.

Reuerence to the Tents.

Court of Iuſtice.

121. Two Croſſe-bow ſhoots diſtant, before the gates of the Kings Tents, or of the hedge, if it be there, a long Tent is ſet vp, which they call Cacalla, and this is the houſe of Iuſtice or Audience. And betweene this Tent and the Tents of the Prete, no man paſſeth on Horſe-backe, in reuerence of the King, and of his Iuſtiee, but all doe light and goe on foot. Into this Tent of Cacalla, no man entreth: onely thirteene low Chaires of Iron are placed therein. The place where they ſit is couered with Leather; and one of the ſaid Chaires is very high, reaching as high as the breſt of a man, and the other twelue are as low as our ſtooles. None of the Iudges which heare the parties ſitteth in theſe Chaires, (they onely ſtand there for a Ceremonie) for they ſit on the ground vpon the graſſe, if there bee any, as many on the one ſide, as on the other, and there they heare the parties which contend, and euery one according to his iuriſdiction: becauſe (as I haue ſaid) as the Cookes were diuided into two parts, ſo are all others; to wit, on the left hand, and on the right, and Audience is giuen after this ſort.

Manner of Suit.

Cenſure.

The Plaintiffe deliuereth his Action by word of mouth, and no man ſpeaketh while he hath done. The Defendant ſpeaketh againſt him as long as hee will, without any mans diſturbance: when the Defendant hath done, the Plaintiffe replyeth if hee will, and the Defendant anſwereth him the ſecond time, if he thinke ſo good, without any diſturbance. When they haue done their Oppoſitions, and Anſweres by themſelues, or by their Proctors, there ſtandeth vp a man, which is, as it were, a Reporter; and hee repeateth ouer againe as much as the parties haue ſaid, and at length deliuereth his opinion, which of them both hath beſt right. Then one of thoſe Iudges which ſit downe, to wit, he that is the firſt, doth euen ſo as the Reporter had done, to wit, he repeateth all that the parties haue ſaid, and at length deliuereth, which of them he thinketh to haue beſt reaſon. And after this manner, doe all the reſt which ſit and deliuer their opinions: and they ſtand vp when they ſpeake, vntill they come to the Chiefe Iuſtice, which ſtandeth vp laſt, who hauing heard the opinion of all the reſt, giueth his ſentence, if there bee no need of proofe: but if they haue need of tryall, they giue them due and neceſſary reſpite. And all is done in words without writing.

Standing Audience.

Other matters which the Betudetes and the Aiaz heare, they heare ſtanding, becauſe they ſtand before the Tents of the Prete, and before this Caçalla, and as ſoone as they heare the parties, immediately they goe with that which they ſay vnto the Prete, and they enter not into his Tent, but onely within the Mandelate or great Curtaine, and there they ſpeake, and then returne to the parties with the reſolution of the Prete. And ſometimes they ſpend a whole day in paſſing thus too and fro, according to the weightineſſe of the cauſes.

Two Priſons.

Their manner of impriſonment.

122. A good diſtance before the Tent or Houſe of Iuſtice, on the right hand and on the left, are two Houſes or Tents, as it were Priſons, to keepe men in Chaines; and they are called Maigues Bete, where the Priſoners are kept on both ſide, to wit, on the right hand, and on the left. And they are kept after this manner, that according to their fault and cauſe, ſuch is their Priſon and their Guards. The Priſoner is bound to maintaine the Guards which keepe him, and payeth them as long as he is in Priſon. And if there be any that hath Fetters on his legges, when they bring him before the Tent of the Prete, where they haue Audience, theſe Warders carrie him in their armes, to wit, two reach their hands one to another, and cauſe the Priſoner to ſit vpon their armes, which layeth his hands vpon their heads, and the reſt of the Warders follow him with their weapons, and ſo they goe and come.

Bound to find him whom you attache.

There is another kind of Priſoners: for if you will haue a man attached, you are bound to find him, if you will accuſe him, and his Guard alſo to guard him. And this I know, becauſe our Portugals cauſed certaine to bee apprehended, for Mules which were ſtolne from them, and becauſe they ſent meate vnto the Priſoners, and to their Keepers, they made requeſt to haue them ſet at libertie. I knew another which was a Genoueſe, which had a Mule ſtollen from him, and the Thiefe confeſſed that he had ſtollen her, but that ſhe was not in his poſſeſſion, and that he had not wherewithall to pay for her. They condemned him to bee a ſlaue, and hee was ſold, and he was a very couragious fellow.

The Prete carrieth foure Lions about with him.

No Chriſtian will eat of that which a Moore killeth or dreſſeth.

123. Right ouer againſt the Tents of the Priſons, a good diſtance off, are the Tents of the two Chiefe Iuſtices placed, to wit, one on the one ſide, and another on the other, and betweene them is a Church, called, The Church of the Iuſtices. And ouer againſt this Church, a good way from the ſame are foure Lions in Chaines, which are alwayes led, whitherſoeuer the Prete Ianni goeth. And a good way from the Lions, is another Church, which is called, The Church of the Chriſtians Market, who ſell in the ſame: for the greateſt part bee Moores, eſpecially the principall Merchants of goods, and wares ſold by the great; and the Chriſtians ſell ſmall wares, as bread, wine, meale, and fleſh; becauſe the Moores are not ſuffered to ſell any kind of victuals; neither will any man eat of that which they doe dreſſe, nor of the fleſh that they doe kill. This Market muſt alwayes be right before the Tent of the Prete: the leaſt roome that the compaſſe of the Market taketh vp, is a mile and an halfe, and ſometimes three miles and more. Although the Court change as often as it will, yet this Order of placing their Tents is alwayes obſerued. And from the Tent of the King vnto this Market, the way is free and open, that is to ſay, there ſtandeth no Tent at all, ſaue onely the two Churches of the two Iuſtices, and thoſe of the Lions, and that of the Church of the Market. And theſe are a good way diſtant from all other Tents.

Veſtries.

124. On each ſide of both the Churches, ſtanding on either ſide of the Tent of the Prete, there is placed a very faire and goodly Tent, wherein they keep the Veſtments of the Churches and another, where they keepe the fire and the flower to make the Corban, that is, the Communion Bread. And al other Churches haue a Tent after this maner. Before theſe Churches are ſet vp other great, long, and wide Tents, like vnto Hals, & theſe they cal Balagamie, wherin they keep the Apparel, Robes, & Treaſures of the Prete, & as many of them ſtand on the one ſide as on the other; for they are double, as the reſt of the Tents of the Officers of the Court are. Theſe Tents haue their Captaines which are ouer thoſe that guard them; And the greater part of this people are ſlaues, which are Eunuches. Behind theſe Tents of the Wardrobe on the right hand, ſtand the Tents of the Queene the Wife of the Prete, and of all the women that wait vpon her, and the Tents of Queene Helena, which was wont to be ſerued in very great pompe: but none but women and Eunuches enter thereinto. On the left hand, are the Tents of the Pages: then the Aiazi haue their lodging, becauſe they take vp a great roome, for they haue many people vnder them, which are alwayes neere about them: after the Aiazi, lodgeth the Patriarke Abuna Marke, with a great number of Tents, becauſe an infinite number of people come to bee admitted into Orders, ſo that he occupieth as much roome as were ſufficient for a great Towne.

Double Tents and Captaines to each.

Abuna Marke.

The Cabeata married.

On the other ſide lodgeth the Cabeata, which in like manner hath a multitude of Tents, and his lodging was wont to be next vnto the Church of Saint Mary, becauſe this Office was wont alwayes to be giuen to a Frier; but this preſent Cabeata being a Prieſt, and hauing a Wife, they place him next the Abuna. Then follow all the Noblemen in their places, and next vnto them the people that are well apparelled, and then the common people, as the Tauerners, and Bakers, which ſell and make Wine, and vſe victualling. Then follow the Tents of the women hired to doe buſineſſe, which they call Amaritas; and theſe are many, and they haue many other Tents ſeparated from theirs, wherein the ſtrangers are lodged, which come to ſell, to buy, and to traffique with the Court of the Prete. And hereof there be many richly and well apparelled. Next vnto theſe are lodged all the Carpenters, on the one ſide, and on the other, and they take vp a very great roome. The two great Betudetes with their people, the one on the right hand, and the other on the left, doe laſtly occupie the ſpace of a Citie; ſo great a multitude doe they alwayes carrie with them, and are as it were, the Guard of this Court. And alwayes the Tents of the Prete are firſt ſet vp, and ſtrait-way euery one knoweth his place, where he ought to ſet vp his, whether on the right hand or on the left. And the Streets, Markets, and Churches are eaſie to bee ſeene. And this Campe or Lodging of the Prete Ianni, extendeth it ſeſe for the ſpace of ſixe good miles.

The Pretes abſolute Soueraignie.

Manner of great mens comming to the Court.

125. No great Lord, nor Gouernour of Territories, if hee bee in his Gouernment may come forth, nor dare to come vnto the Court in any wiſe, vnleſſe he be ſent for by the Prete: and being ſent for he may not deferre his comming for any occaſion: and when he remooueth hee leaueth there neither Wife, nor Children, nor any goods at all, for he alwayes feareth, that he ſhall not returne backe againe, becauſe (as I haue ſaid before) the Prete giueth and taketh Gouernments at his pleaſure: and if he taketh them from any, ſtrait-way that Nobleman which is placed in his roome, taketh from him whatſoeuer hee findeth, and therefore they carrie euery thing away, or ſend them into other Territories. And when they come neere the Court with great triumph, they ſtay at leaſt three miles diſtance from the Court, where they remayne oftentimes one or two moneths, without ſtirring from thence, ſo that they ſeeme to be forgotten, vntill it pleaſeth the Prete to thinke of them: yet ceaſe they not, in this meane time, while they ſtay as forgotten, to enter into the Court, and to talke with other Noblemen, but not with triumph, nor well apparelled, but with two or three men, and naked from the Girdle vpward, and with a ſheep-ſkinne on their ſhoulders, and ſo they goe, and returne to their Tents, vntill they haue licence to repaire vnto the Court; which being obtayned, they make their entrance with great triumph of Muſicke and Drummes, and retyre themſelues vnto their place, which in former time was appointed vnto them.

And when any of them is lodged, hee goeth not out of his houſe apparelled, as hee did at his comming to the Court, but goeth naked, as I haue ſaid, although he came at his entrance apparelled with great pompe. And at this time all men commonly ſay: Now ſuch an one is not in the Kings fauour, becauſe he goeth naked. And if hee hath any fauourable ſpeech from the Prete, incontinently he commeth forth apparelled, and then the people ſay; Such an one is in his Lords fauour, and the cauſe is ſpread abroad, for which he was ſent for. For the moſt part they returne vnto their gouernments, and ſometimes not: and if they returne, they are ſtrait-way diſpatched: if they be taken from them, they ſtay them fiue, ſixe, and ſeuen yeares, without departing from the Court, from whence they may not depart without licence. They are wonderfully obedient vnto their King. Before they were not ſo greatly accompanied, but now they are as greatly abandoned, and now they ride vpon a Mule with two or three men after them, for the reſt which were wont to waite vpon them, belonged to the gouernments which were taken from them, and thoſe are appointed to wait vpon the new Gouernour.

126. If any Gentleman be called forth for the warres (as oftentimes wee haue ſeene) his entry into Court is not forbidden, but preſently he entreth, and paſſeth along as he commeth, with many people. Theſe Gentlemen are not forbidden, that which I haue ſpoken of, not to paſſe betweene the Tent of Cacalla, and the Tent of the King, neither on horſe-backe, nor on Mule, becauſe when they come to goe to warre, they enter into that ſpace, euen to the Tents of the King, and neere vnto them they make their muſters, skirmiſhing, and ranging themſelues in battell array, as they thinke good, that the King may take pleaſure thereat. And this wee haue ſeene very oftentimes. Theſe Souldiers ſtay not in Court aboue two dayes, for ſo they bee accuſtomed, for in two dayes they will aſſemble one hundred thouſand perſons together, if they will haue ſo many, and as they come to Court they are ſpeedily diſpatched, for there they vſe not to giue any wages, but euery man bringeth his victuals with him, namely, Meale of Barley, and of Chiches, and of Millet parched, which is a good food to go to warre withall: for they find Oxen and Kine euery where as they go; and if it be in Wheate Harueſt, this is the principall victuall carryed by thoſe people vnto the warre.

Honourable reſpect of ſouldiers.

The caſe is now altered.

127. All the Pretes Robes of Silke are laid in ſquare Paniers made of wicker, which are foure ſpans long, layed two and two together, and are halfe ſo broad, couered with raw Oxe Hides with the haire on, and at euery corner there is a chaine, which commeth ouer the couer, and hath in the midſt a locke of Iron, wherein theſe Chaines are locked with a little Key. And as theſe are locked which carrie the Silke, ſo likewiſe are thoſe which carrie fine Clothes of India, and they are borne vpon mens heads, and are aboue fiue thouſand or ſixe thouſand, and betweene euery hundred goe certaine Souldiers. And becauſe euery yeare the Silkes and embroydered Clothes grow to ſuch quantities, as wel of thoſe which are payd for the Tributes of diuers Realmes, as of thoſe which the Prete ſometimes cauſeth to be bought, and ſo great numbers are not ſpent, and cannot be carryed with him in his trauell, therefore euery yeare they put them into certaine Caues, which are digged in Mountaines for this purpoſe: and one of theſe Caues we ſaw in our way, when wee came firſt to Court, which was neere to the gates, called before Badabaie, neere vnto certaine deepe Vallies before-mentioned. At this Caue many Warders are continually, and euery paſſenger payeth vnto them a certaine Toll, which is appointed for this Guard. After the ſame manner that the Robes and Clothes of Silke are carryed, ſo is the Treaſuror likewiſe carryed in Cheſts, but ſomewhat leſſer, which are couered with Leather, and locked, as thoſe which carryed the Robes: and ouer the couering, the Chaines, and the Locke, is another raw Oxe-hide put, which is faſtned with thongs of the ſaid Hide, and there it dryeth and becommeth very ſtrong. And theſe Cheſts of Treaſure are wonderfull many, and alwayes goe with a great Guard, and likewiſe yearely many of them are put into thoſe Caues, for they cannot carrie ſo many with them as doe increaſe, and multiply euery yeare.

The Pretes Carriages.

Caues for Treaſuries.

This Caue which we ſaw, was three miles from the houſe of Peter de Couillan, and hee told vs, * that the Gold in this Caue was ſufficient to buy the one halfe of the World: for euery yeare they put vnto the ſame exceeding great ſummes, and hee neuer ſaw them take any out. Touching the Silke and Cloth of Gold, Peter Couillan told vs, that oftentimes they tooke out thereof to giue vnto the Churches and Monaſteries, as was done three yeeres before our comming thither, when the Prete ſent exceeding great Offerings to Ieruſalem, of Cloth of Gold and Silke, which he had taken out of thoſe Caues, becauſe of the great ſtore that was therein. And the Offerings were ſo great, that they couered the wals of the Church of the holy Sepulchre. * He ſent thither alſo a quantitie of other Gold. There are many more of theſe kind of Caues made after the ſame manner that this is, being all of them in the ſides of Mountaines, becauſe they haue no walled Cities or Caſtles, wherein they may keepe ſuch kind of things. The Ambaſſadour which went vnto Ieruſalem, to carry the foreſaid Offerings, is called, Abba Azerata, who at this preſent is chiefe Guardian of the Siſters of Prete Ianni, and carryed with him aboue fifteene hundred men, with other Gentlemen with Drummes: and I haue heard of them which were with him, that they alwayes trauelled by the way playing vpon their Drummes, from the Citie of Cairo vnto Ieruſalem, and in their returne they came running away being halfe deſtroyed, becauſe the Great Turke came againſt the Soldan of Ægypt, and againſt the ſaid Citie of Cairo, whereby they were to paſſe.

* Sic perhibent qui de magnis maiora loquuntur?

* The Turkes then warring againſt the Soldan halfe of them were deſtroyed.

No walled Caſtles nor Cities in all Ethiopia.

§. XIX.

Pilgrimage to Ieruſalem. Of the Countries which border on PRETE IANNI: Moores, Gentiles, Amazones, Caſates, Damute, Goiame, Bagamidri, Nubia. Of SALOMONS Officers.

Pilgrimage to Ieruſalem.

128. WHile we were in the Towne of Barua, which is the head of the Kingdome of Barnagaſſo, there aſſembled a Carauan to goe to Ieruſalem, and they were three hundred thirtie ſix Friers and Prieſts, and fifteene Nuns. And this was in the Chriſtmas Holy-dayes: for they depart immediately after Twelfe-tide, and vſe to be at Ieruſalem the weeke before Eaſter, trauelling ſoft and faire as their manner is. They began their iourney from a Towne diſtant from Barua, a dayes iourney and an halfe, which is called Einacen, which is a Towne and a Territorie, abounding with all kind of victuals, and there are many Monaſteries, and here they began to cloſe vp their Carauan, and it is a place ſubiect vnto the gouernment of Daffila, which is vnder Barnagaſſo. When the ſaid Friers departed, they made a very ſmall iourney, and in the Euening tooke vp their Lodging, and preſently ſet vp the Tents of their Churches, whereof they had three, and began to ſay their Houres and Maſſes, and receiuing the Communion; the next day, about nine of the clocke, they began their Voyage, and they were all laden with victuals, and with Gourds, and Barrachios of water, and the Tents of their Churches, and the ſtones of their Altar were carryed vpon Camels: and they trauelled not aboue ſixe miles a day. And becauſe I would ſee their manner of trauelling: I went two dayes iourney with this Carauan.

The Pilgrims Pariſh.

This Carauan, after they had paſſed Suachen, was aſſaulted by Arabian Moores, which ouerthrew thoſe that were their guides, and tooke the Pilgrimes, and hauing ſlaine the old men, they ſold the young men for ſlaues: and of three hundred thirtie ſixe there eſcaped but fifteene, which went forward on their Voyage. And afterward I ſaw three of them, which declared vnto me all their miſ-hap, and they told me that this out-rage was done vnto them, becauſe they were the Portugals friends, and it is moſt certaine, that they are very odious vnto their Neighbours for our ſakes. Since the Maſſacre of theſe friends vntill this inſtant, no man hath paſſed in Carauan to Ieruſalem, but they goe thither ſecretly as Paſſengers, and theſe are accounted for holy men. And becauſe the Inhabitants of Ieruſalem are white people, when we came firſt into this Countrey, they called vs Chriſtians of Ieruſalem. There is alſo another way by Sea, which is gone in a leſſer time. They imbarke themſelues at the Hauen of Maczua, and ſayle to the Hauen of Tor, which is neere to Mount Sinai, and they paſſe in fiue and twentie dayes.

129. The Territorie, Kingdomes and Lordſhips confining vpon the Kingdomes of Prete Ianni, as farre as I can learne, are theſe. Firſt, beginning at Maczua toward the Red Sea and the Eaſt, on that Coaſt are Arabian Moores, which keepe the Cattle of great Lords that are vnder the Kingdome of Barnagaſſo. And theſe goe thirtie and fortie together with their wiues and children, and haue a Chriſtian for their Captaine, and are all Theeues, and rob by the high way, and are fauoured by the Lords whoſe Cattle they keepe. A little farther, you enter into the Kingdome of Dangali, which is a Kingdome of the Moores, and it hath one Hauen, called Della, and this Hauen is neere vnto the Streit of the Red Sea, entring into the Land toward the Abiſſins, and this Kingdome ſtretcheth vnto the borders of the Kingdome of Adel, which belongeth vnto the Lord of Zeila and Barbara: and theſe two Kingdomes meete in the in-land, vpon the Confines of Prete Ianni. And there is foure and twentie great Captain-ſhips or Lord-ſhips, which are called Dobas.

Dangali. Della.

Kingdome of Adel.

130. Adel is a very great Kingdome, and ſtretcheth to the Cape of Guardafui, and in that part, a ſubiect of his gouerneth; and this King of Adel is held for a Saint among the Moores, becauſe hee maketh continuall warre vpon the Chriſtians: and of the ſpoiles which hee winneth, hee alwayes ſendeth Preſents to the houſe of Mecca, to Cairo, and to other Kings: and they returne vnto him in recompence, Armour, Horſes, and other things for his ayde. Of which King I haue ſpoken in the one hundred and fourteenth Chapter. This Kingdome of Adel bordereth in ſome part with the Kingdome of Fatigar and Xoa, which Countreyes belong vnto Prete Ianni.

Adea.

131. In the midſt of the Kingdome of Adel, as you paſſe into the Countrey, beginneth the Kingdome of Adea, which is inhabited with Moores, who are ſubiect to Prete Ianni, and this Kingdome ſtretcheth vnto Magadaxa.

Lord-ſhips of Gentiles.

132. Amidſt the Kingdome of Adea, as you goe Weſtward, beginne the Lord-ſhips of the Gentiles, which are no Kingdomes, & border vpon the Dominions of the Prete. The firſt of theſe Lord-ſhips, or Captain-ſhips, is called Ganze, and is inhabited with Gentiles and Chriſtians. Next vnto this is a great Lord-ſhip, almoſt as bigge as a Kingdome, and they are Gentiles, the ſlaues of which Countrey are made no great account of. They haue no King, but many Lords in diuers parts of the Countrey, and this Lord-ſhip is called, Gamu. And as you paſſe farther toward the South-weſt, in the Kingdome, called Gorage. And with this Kingdome of Gorage, and Lord-ſhips of Ganze and Gamu, the Kingdomes of Oiſa and Xoa, which belong to Prete Ianni, doe confine together.

133. As yee trauell toward the Weſt, vpon the ſaid Frontiers of the Kingdomes of the Prete, eſpecially vpon the Kingdome of Xoa, there is a very great Citie and Kingdome, called Damute, the ſlaues of which Kingdome are highly eſteemed by the Moores, who will not depart with them for any money. And all Arabia, Perſia, and Egypt are full of the Slaues of this Countrey, which become perfect Moores, and great Warriours. The people of this Kingdome are Gentiles, although there be many Chriſtians among them. I ſay thus much, becauſe I haue ſeene many Prieſts, Friers, and Nuns conuerſant in the Court of the Prete; which aſſured mee that there are many Monaſteries, and Religious perſons in that Countrey. This King is called, The King of the Gentiles. And the moſt part of the Gold which runneth currant in the Dominions of the Prete, is brought out of this Countrey; for they know better how to digge and refine the ſame: and great ſtore of victuals is alſo brought from thence. And when we kept our Lent in the Countrey of Gorage, we had great ſtore of greene and freſh Ginger brought from thence, and great ſtore of Fiſh, and plentie of Grapes, which in Lent ſeaſon were ripe in thoſe parts. And after Eaſter we had many great Sheepe and Oxen.

Damute.

Gold of Damute.

Ginger.

And I was certified and aſſured, that on the Frontiers of theſe Kingdomes of Damute, and Gorage, as you trauell toward the South there is a Kingdome gouerned by women, which may be called Amazones, according as it is recorded and written in the Booke of Don Piedro, the Infant of Portugall. But theſe women (if it bee true) in generall haue their Husbands with them all the yeare, and liue with them: they haue no King but a Queene that hath no certaine Husband, but ſuffereth any man to lye with her, and to get her with child, and the eldeſt Daughter ſucceedeth in the Kingdome. They ſay, that they be very valiant women and great Warriours, and that vpon certaine beaſts which are very ſwift, and like vnto Oxen. They are great Archers, and in their youth they cauſe their left breſt to be dryed vp, that it hinder not their ſhooting. They gather great ſtore of Gold in this Kingdome, which is firſt carryed into the Kingdome of Damute, and from thence into many other parts. The Husbands of theſe women are no Warriours, becauſe they will not ſuffer them to manage Armes.

Amazones, the warlike wiues of thoſe parts.

In the Kingdome of Damute, they ſay, there ſpringeth a moſt mighty Riuer, which is contrarie to Nilus; for the one runneth one way, and the other another. Nilus runneth toward Egypt, but the Inhabitants know not particularly whither this other runeth, but it is ſuppoſed to run weſtward vnto the Kingdome of Congo. In the Kingdome of Damute, when the winter approacheth, and that they looke for raine, ſhowres, and lightning, although they be not enforced thereunto, they digge and delue the Earth very well, till the mould be fine, that the water which falleth may waſh the ſame, and the Gold may remayne cleane, and moſt commonly they ſeeke it in the night by Moone-light, for then they ſee it gliſter. Alſo I haue often ſeene the people ſeeking Gold in the aforeſaid manner, in the Towne of Caxumo, which is in the Kingdome of Tigrai, and they told me, that they found it for the moſt part by night.

A mightie huge Riuer likely to be Zaire, which is ſaid, ſprings out of the ſame Lakes with Nilus, of which Lakes perhaps one is in Damute.

The manner of gathering Gold in Damute.

134. Trauelling Weſtward, and as it were directly Weſt, through this Kingdome of Damute, there are certaine gouernments of people, called Caſates, a Nation very blacke, and of great ſtature; and it is reported that they were deſcended of the race of the Iewes, but they haue neither Bookes nor Synagogue. They are very ſubtile men, and of greater wits then any other people that are in theſe parts. They are Gentiles, and great Warriers, and alwaies are in warre with the Prete. They confine with part of Xoa, and Goiame. I was neuer there my ſelfe; but that which I ſay, I heard reported by our Portugals, which were there, when the great Betudete went againſt them with an Armie; and againe, when the Prete went in perſon: and they told mee, that theſe Caſates made great aſſaults vpon them, and chiefly by night, when they came to ſtay and rob them: on the day-time they retired to the Mountaines and Woods, and namely, into certaine wonderfull deepe Valleyes, which are among the Mountaines.

Caſates, a Nation ſuppoſed Iewiſh original.

135. But leauing the South, and taking the Weſt; another Kingdome lieth ſomwhat lower, belonging to the Prete, called Goiame, a great part whereof belonged to Queene Helena his mother. In this Kingdome ſpringeth the Riuer of Nilus, which in this Countrey is called Gion, and it iſſueth out of two Lakes, which are ſo great, that they ſeem to be Seas, wherein, as they report, are Tritons and Mermaids, and ſome haue aſſured me, that they haue ſeene them. Peter de Couillan told me, that he had beene in this Kingdome, by commandement of Queene Helena, to giue order for the making of an Altar, in a Church which ſhee had cauſed to bee builded in that Territorie, wherein ſhee her ſelfe was buried, and that this Altar was made of wood, which they filled full with maſſie Gold: and the Patriarch Abuna Marke told me, that he did conſecrate the Altar ſtone, which was great, and very heauie, that is to ſay, it was all of Gold. We were certaine times vpon the frontier of the ſaid Kingdome, where we were informed, that this Church had great Guards appointed vnto it, becauſe of the great quantitie of Gold which was in the ſame: and all the Gold of this Kingdome of Goiame is ſomewhat baſe. I could not vnderſtand, with what People this Kingdome confineth on the farther ſide, which lieth in the Weſt, only I heard heard ſay, that there were Deſarts full of Mountaines, and that beyond them were certaine Iewes. I affirme not this, but only deliuer that, which I heard ſpoken in generall by euery bodie.

Goiame.

The Riuer Nilus, otherwiſe called Gion, ſpringeth out of two great Lakes, in the Kingdome, Goiame.

Iewes to the weſt of Goiame.

Bagamidri a great Kingdome 600. miles long.

136. At the end of this Kingdome of Goiame beginneth another Kingdome, which is the greateſt in all the Dominions of Prete Ianni, and is called Bagamidri. This runneth along by the bankes of Nilus, and therefore is very great, for it beginneth at the Kingdome of Goiame, and paſſeth along by the Kingdomes of Amara, of Angote, of Tigrai, of Tigremahon, and Barnagaſſo; and paſſeth aboue ſixe hundred miles in length. Betweene the Kingdomes of Angote and Tigrai, at the end of them, are certaine Lordſhips, Weſtward toward Nilus, the people whereof are called, Agaos, which are partly Gentiles, and partly Chriſtians. On the other ſide, I know not vpon whom they doe confine, but I thinke they muſt border vpon this Kingdome of Bagamidri, in which Kingdome, I was certified by many, that were there themſelues, that there is a Mountaine contayning Siluer in great abundance, which they knew not how to get out of the ſame, but in this manner, that where they ſaw any Caue, they filled it with wood, and ſet fire on it, as they vſe to doe in a Lime-kill, and this fire maketh the Siluer to melt, which runneth all into barres, which is a thing almoſt incredible: neuertheleſſe, Peter Couillan told me, that I needed not to doubt, but that this was moſt true. I ſay, that which I haue heard, and know, that this Siluer is in exceeding great reputation, and deſired of all men.

Agaos.

Mountaine of Siluer.

Nubia.

137. At the end of this Kingdome of Bagamidri, toward Egypt, dwell certaine Moores, called Belloos, which are Tributaries vnto Prete Ianni, and pay great numbers of Horſes. Toward the North, theſe Belloos border vpon the People called Nuby, who by report were ſometimes Chriſtians, and ſubiect vnto the Church of Rome. I haue oftentimes heard reported by a Syrian, borne in Tripoli of Syria, whoſe name was Iohn, and conuerſed with vs three yeeres in this Countrey of Prete Ianni, and afterward went with vs into Portugall, that he had beene in Nubia, and ſaw there one hundred and fiftie Churches, which to this day haue all of them the Images of the Crucifixe, and of our Ladie, and other Images painted vpon walls, and that all this is old and ancient worke. The Inhabitants are neither Chriſtians, Moores, nor Iewes, but liue with a deſire to become Chriſtians. All theſe Churches were builded in certaine old and ancient Fortreſſes, which are in the Countrey: and looke how many Fortreſſes there be, ſo many Churches there are in them.

Their religion.

Famine of the Word, and miſerable niggardiſe: whereas, how many of vs are wearie of Manna, and fall a luſting? The Nubians, for want of a Biſhop and Prieſts are fallen from the faith of Chriſt.

While wee abode in this Countrey of Prete Ianni, there came from Nubia, ſixe men in forme of Ambaſſadors, to craue of him Prieſts and Friers to inſtruct them in the Faith; but he would ſend them none, ſaying vnto them, that he had ſent for his Abuna, that is, his Patriarch, from the Citie of Alexandria, which is ſubiect to the Moores, and that therefore he thought it not conuenient to giue Prieſts and Friers vnto them, ſeeing he had obtained them with ſo great trauell by the meanes of others: and ſo they returned backe againe. Theſe Nubians ſaid, that in old time they had their Biſhop from Rome, which being dead many yeeres agoe; and being not able, by reaſon of the Warres of the Mahumetans to haue another, they were without Prieſts and Religious men, and by this meanes the Chriſtian Faith began to be forgotten. Theſe Nubians border vpon Egypt, and this Countrey lieth ouer againſt Suachen, which is toward the Eaſt vpon the red Sea: and the Dominions of theſe Nubians are on both ſides of the Riuer Nilus: and as many Fortreſſes as there be, ſo many Captainſhips be there alſo.

This Suachen is that Towne, which ſtandeth on the frontriers of the dominions of Prete Ianni, and in the beginning of Egypt, and on the frontiers of theſe Lordſhips of the Nubians: and hath betweene it and them the Moores, called Bellois. As you come from this Suachen, and goe along the Sea-coaſt toward the Ile of Maczua, it is ſaid, that the Countrey is ſo full of Woods, that a man is not able to trauell through them. This is as much as I could learne and know, concerning the Kingdomes and Dominions of Prete Ianni, on euery ſide of the ſame, the greateſt part whereof, I haue heard by others, and the leſſer part was ſeene by my ſelfe.

Salomons Officers.

138. Salomon is ſaid to haue appointed Officers to his ſonne Meilech, when hee ſent him from Ieruſalem to Ethiopia, to the Saba, his mother. And truth it is, that vnto this day the ſaid Offices continue in the race of them which then were ſent hither, hauing ſucceeded from the father vnto the ſonne. Which Officers * hee gaue him out of the twelue Tribes, to wit, out of each Tribe one Office, as Chamberlaines, Porters, Surueyers, Vſhers, Trumpetters, Captaines of his Guard, and other Officers neceſſarie for a King or Potentate in his Court: and theſe are much honoured, becauſe they be Gentlemen, and deſcended of the People of Iſrael: and there be many of euery Office, becauſe the ſonnes of the Chamberlaines, and all their off-ſpring carrie the name of that Office, and the like is to be ſaid of all the poſteritie of the reſt. And all of them are taken for ſuch, ſauing the Pages, which were wont to be the ſonnes of great Noblemen, and Lords; but now they are not: becauſe (as I haue ſaid before) when the Prete ſends for any great Nobleman, he ſendeth him not word wherefore he ſends for him: and when he was ſerued by Pages, which were the ſonnes of great Noblemen, they diſcouered his ſecrets; and therefore he put them from that Office, and vſed Pages within his chambers, which were Slaues, and the ſonnes of Kings of the Moores, or of the Gentiles, which are daily taken by inroads which the Prete his people make: and if he ſee that they be towardly, hee cauſeth them to be inſtructed, before they be admitted into his preſence: and if they proue diſcreet and good, he taketh them in, and vſeth them for Pages. Indeed hee vſeth the ſonnes of great Lords for Pages abroad or without doores; as, for Pages for his Bridle, when he rideth, and Pages of the Kitchin; but they come not into his Chambers, as is reported, and as we our ſelues haue ſeene. Moreouer, all the Canons, which they call Debeteres, deſcend of the race of thoſe which came from Ieruſalem with the ſonne of Salomon: and therefore they are more honourable then all the reſt of the Clergie.

* The Prophecies of the Iewiſh reiection (not to mention their conuerſion propheċied) by that deluge of deſtruction verified, contrarieth this conceit of a Iewiſh Monke poſſeſſing ſo long ſo large a Soueraigntie, as all others tales of the Queene of Sabas ſonne and his followers; hatched (it ſeemes) by ſome Politician, which to confirme a Soueraigntie (perhaps wonne by the ſword) would deuiſe dreames of ſo honourable deſcent. And if Salomon had this ſonne, how is Chriſt deſcended of a legall ſonne of Salomon by the line of Nathan, whenas Salomon his owne line (if he had any) ought to inherit? Neither doe the Iewiſh, or Gentile, or Chriſtian Storie; or common reaſon, or probabilitie ſubſcribe to this Meilech-tale. And contrarie to Iacobs Prophecie, both before and euer ſince Shilos comming, Iuda hath a Scepter and a Law giuer in Ethiopia: yea, the partition wall was pulled downe, and had extended it ſelfe to Cham before Iapheth was perſwaded to dwell in the Tents of Shem: and yet, the Kings of Sheba and Saba are reſerued by name to the ſecond Salomon, to whom prayer ſhould be made, and who ſhould euery day be praiſed, whom all Nations ſhould ſerue, and whoſe name ſhould be continued as long as the Sunne, Pſ.72. Neither would Chriſt himſelfe vouchſafe any Nationall calling, till after his reſurrection, to any but the Iewes. But it is abſurd to be earneſt in refuting ſo abſurd a ieſt. Once, if this tale were true, they were neither good Iſraelites which neglected the Temple and legall Rites; nor are good Chriſtians to admit ſo many of them. Yet is it likely, that ſome Iew, or Iewiſh Chriſtians haue corrupted their Chriſtianitie by continuance of Circumciſion, which the Ethiopians and Arabians haue ſo many Ages before and ſince Chriſt vſed: And alſo many Ethnicke parts of Africa ſtill doe and made way to ſome Statiſt to brew this headie liquor of Meilech, to arrogate Propheticall authoritie and Royall Nobilitie, though with iniurie to Chriſt himſelfe the heire of Salomon, and to the myſteries of Chriſtianitie. See my Pilg. l.7.c.2. and 6. §.4.

§. XX.

The Frier-Ambaſſadours Signiories. Their departure and arriuall at Ormuz, and after at Goa: at Lisbon. Briefe Notes of Ethiopia, and Letters to the King of Portugall, and the Grand Captaine.

139. THe ſame day that the Prete departed toward the Kingdome of Adea, the Frier his Ambaſſadour, and I, departed toward the Lordſhip, which the Prete had giuen him. One of theſe Lordſhips contayneth eightie houſes and two Churches, and belonged vnto a little Monaſterie, which the ſaid Frier had before. The Lordſhip which was newly giuen vnto him, was Arras of the Canas, that is, Captaine of the men of Armes, in the Countrey of Abugana, and they may be ſome eight hundred and more. About mid-Lent, wee came to the place where our people aboad, and wee thought long vntill Eaſter, when the Portugals were to come for vs. When Eaſter was paſt (about which time is the motion of the Sea) and we ſaw no body come for vs, we remayned very ſad, as we had been before. The moneth of Iuly being come, when the Prete vnderſtood, that the Portugals were not arriued, he gaue order to his Ambaſſadour, and to a Nobleman of Abugana, whoſe name was Abuue Arraz, that they ſhould goe with vs vnto theſe Lordſhips, to furniſh vs with victualls: and becauſe the Harueſt was alreadie ended, hee commanded that wee ſhould haue fiue hundred loades of Corne, one hundred Oxen, and one hundred Sheepe: and that Zaga Zabo his Ambaſſadour ſhould giue vs Honey to make vs Wine. And hauing receiued thoſe victuals, we returned to Barua, by the midſt of Ianuarie.

140. On Eaſter Tueſday at mid-night, there came Letters from Don Hector de Siluiera, Grand Captayne of India, that he was come for vs, and was at Maczua: which Letters being read, we conceiued all of vs vnſpeakable ioy. Don Roderigo the Ambaſſadour, would haue had vs depart without delay the next morning, but I would not, ſaying, That if we did ſo, they would take vs for no Chriſtians, and that we ought to ſtay till the Octaues of Eaſter; and immediately we diſpatched one of our Portugals with a man of the Countrey, with our Letters, vnto the ſaid Don Hector, and ſent another Letter to Zaga Zabo the Ambaſſadour of the Prete, who ſtayed behinde, that he ſhould come with as great haſte as was poſſible, and trauell day and night toward the Sea-ſide, to the Towne of Ercoco, becauſe the Fleet was come thither to fetch vs away.

141. On Munday, being the Octaue after Eaſter, we departed from Barua, the Barnagaſſo, and all we Portugals, toward Ercoco. The Barnagaſſo, what with his owne and his Gentlemens traine, had one thouſand men riding vpon Mules, and aboue ſixe hundred men on foot: and wee lodged ſixe miles from Barua, in a Towne called Dinguil, ſtanding in the midſt of a great champaigne field, where euery Munday at night great ſtore of people meet together, to goe to the Faire of Ercoco, and they goe as it were in Carauan, for feare of the Arabians, and of the wilde Beaſts of the Countrey. Here two thouſand men ioyned themſelues with vs, which went to the ſaid Faire. And they ſaid, they were but few, becauſe the reſt would not goe thither, for feare they ſhould not finde water to drinke; howbeit, the people that went with Barnagaſſo, and we our ſelues, were all prouided: and from the Towne of Barua to Ercoco, might bee ſome fiue and fortie miles, and we ſpent a whole weeke in this voyage. And on Saturday morning, we lodged neere the Towne of Ercoco, and came not vnto our Ships. On Dinguil.

From Barua to Ercoco fiue and fortie miles.

On Tueſday morning, the Barnagaſſo with all his Captaines and people, deliuered vs to Don Hector de Siluiera, with exceeding ioy and gladneſſe, and ſent vs for a preſent fiftie Oxen, many Sheepe, Hens, Capons, and Fiſh, which hee had cauſed to bee taken, to diuide the ſame among our Ships. On Wedneſday morning, came Zaga Zabo, the Ambaſſadour of Prete Ianni, whom we went to meet with vnto Ercoco, to accompanie him; and ſo Barnagaſſo came and deliuered him to the Captaine of the Armie, and ſo we ſtayed attending for the motion of the * Sea, that is to ſay, the time for our departing, which alwayes commeth betweene the foure and twentie or ſixe and twentie of April, and the third or fourth of May: and if wee depart not at this motion, and in this ſeaſon, there commeth none other till the end of Auguſt.

* The Monſon.

The Portugall Fleet of fiue ſailes.
Camaran.
Aden.

142. On the eight and twentieth of April, 1526. the whole Fleet departed, which conſiſted of fiue Sailes, that is to ſay, of three great Galeons, and two Carauels, and wee arriued on the Ile of Camaran. The tenth of May, when wee were ouer againſt the Citie of Aden. And when we began to launch into the mayne Sea, from whence the Winter of India began to come againſt vs full in our faces, and we ſailed againſt the ſame, there began ſo great a Tempeſt, that the ſecond night wherein we entred into the ſame, with extreme darkneſſe and rage of weather, we loſt companie, not knowing what courſe any of our Conſorts held. We ſailed in this ſtorme vntill we came to the Streight of Ormuz: and the eight and twentieth of May, we came to the Hauen of Mazcare, which belongeth to the Kingdome of Ormuz. Departing from this Hauen, we arriued in the Citie of Ormuz, where the King our Maſter hath a Fortreſſe. Here Lopez Vaz of Saint Paul, being Grand Captaine and Gouernour of the Indies, came forth to receiue vs on the Sea-ſhoare, who embraced vs all; and the next day, after we had heard Maſſe, we went to ſpeake with the ſaid Grand Captaine, and preſented vnto him the Letter of Prete Ianni, which we brought for Diego Lopez de Sequeira, which brought vs into the Countrey of Prete Ianni; which Letter the ſaid Lopez Vaz did reade, becauſe he was Succeſſor to Diego Lopez de Sequeira. Then we preſented him a Veſture of ſilke, hauing fiue plates of gold before, and fiue more behinde, and one vpon each ſhoulder, which make twelue in all, euery one of them as bigge as the palme of a mans hand, which the Prete ſent to Diego Lopez: and the ſaid Lopez Vaz gaue vnto Don Roderigo de Lima the Ambaſſadour two hundred Pardaos, that is to ſay, two hundred Ducats, and vnto the Ambaſſadour of the Prete other two hundred, and to me one hundred. Don Hector de Siluiera ſtayed but a while in Ormuz, and would needs returne with his Fleet, to wait for the ſhips which depart from Zidem to come vnto Diu, and ſet forth at the time of the motion of the Sea, wherein we came forth; but they winter in Aden, and ſo goe forward in their voyage: but we ſtayed here in Ormuz, vntill wee were ſure that the Winter was ended.

The Hauen of Mazcare.

A Copie of the Letter which Prete Ianni writ to Don Diego Lopez de Sequiera, which was deliuered to Lopez Vaz of Saint Paul, his Succeſſour in the gouernment of the Indies.

IN the Name of God the Father, which hath beene alwayes, who hath no beginning; In the Name of his onely begotten Sonne, which is like vnto him, before the light of the Starres was ſeene, and before the foundation of the Ocean Sea was laid, who was conceiued at another time in the Virgins wombe, without the Seede of Man, and without Marriages, for after this ſort was the vnderſtanding of his Office: in the Name of the Holy Ghoſt the Comforter, which knoweth all ſecrets, whatſoeuer they bee, that is to ſay, of all the heighths of the Heauen, which is ſuſtayned without any pillars or props, and hath amplifieth the Earth, which before was neither created nor knowne, from the Eaſt vnto the Weſt, and from the North vnto the South. And of theſe three Perſons, none is afore or after another, but is a Trinitie, contayned in one eternall Creator of all things, by one ſole Counſell, and one onely Word eternally. Amen.

Theſe Letters and Ambaſſages are ſent from mee Atani Tingil, that is by interpretation, The Incenſe of the Virgin (for ſo was I named at the day of my Chriſtning) but now am called Dauid, the Head of my Kingdomes of the higher and larger Ethiopia, the beloued of God, the Pillar of the Faith, deſcended of the Stocke of Iuda, the Sonne of Dauid, the Sonne of Salomon, the Sonne of the pillar of Sion, the Sonne of the Seede of Iacob, the Sonne of the Hand of Mary, the Sonne of Nahu, according to the fleſh; To Diego Lopez de Sequeira, Grand Captaine of the Indies. I haue vnderſtood, that albeit you are ſubiect vnto a King, yet neuertheleſſe, that you are a Conquerour in all enterprizes, which are committed to you, and are not afraid of the innumerable forces of the Moores, hauing ſubdued Fortune, with the Armes of the holy Faith, and that you cannot be vanquiſhed of any ſecret things, being armed with the Truth of the Goſpell, and reſting your ſelfe vpon the Speare, which carrieth the Banner of the Croſſe, for which cauſe the Lord be alwayes bleſſed, which hath fulfilled our ioy for the loue of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Vpon your comming into theſe parts, you certified vs of the ambaſſage of the King your Lord, Don Emanuel, and of the Preſents which you haue preſerued with ſo great trauell in your ſhips, hauing indured great Windes and Stormes, as well by Sea as by Land, wherein you haue come from ſo farre Countreyes,

Countreyes to ſubdue the Moores and Pagans, conducting and gouerning your Ships whitherſoeuer you thinke good, which is wonderfull to conſider : and aboue all things, that you haue beene two whole yeeres in Warre vpon the Seas, enduring ſo great trauell, taking reſt neither day nor night ; conſidering, that the actions of Man, according to the vſuall cuſtome, are done in the day-time, as to buy, to ſell, to trauell by the way, and the night is made to ſleepe, and to take reſt, as the Scripture ſaith ; The day is made for Men to doe their buſineſſe, from the morning vnto the euening, and the Lions roaring after their prey, doe ſeeke their meate at God ; and when the Sunne ariſeth, they get them away together, and lay them downe in their Dens : and ſo both Men and Beaſts are wont to take their reſts : yet neither ſleepe hath ouercome you, nor the night, nor the day, when the Sunne ariſeth, for the loue which you beare vnto our holy Faith, as Saint Paul ſaith ; Who ſhall ſeparate vs from the loue of Chriſt ? Shall tribulation, or anguiſh, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſſe, or perill, or ſword. And the Apoſtle Saint Iames ſaith : Bleſſed is the man that endureth temptation ; for when he is tried he ſhall receiue the Crowne of Life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that loue him. God fulfill your deſires, and giue you proſperitie, and bring you ſafe and ſound vnto King Don Emanuel, your Lord, and remooue the Moores out of your ſight, which you haue vanquiſhed, becauſe they beleeue not in the Faith of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt : and bleſſed be your men of Warre alſo ; for ſurely, they be Martyrs for our Lord Ieſus Chriſts ſake, for they die for hunger, for cold, and for heate, for his holy Names ſake. Honorable Sir, when I vnderſtood of your comming into our Countries, I greatly reioyced thereat, and afterward vnderſtanding of your ſudden departure, I was not a little grieued. I reioyced alſo, when I was informed, that you had ſent an Ambaſſadour vnto mee, and praiſed the Name of God the Father, and of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, eſpecially for the good report of you, which reſoundeth on all ſides, and becauſe you were deſirous to enter into friendſhip with vs. And becauſe (as I conceiue) your good will is ſuch, I wiſh that you would vouchſafe to fulfill the ſame, in ſending vs Artificers which can worke in gold and ſiluer, and can make Swords, and Armour of Iron, and Head-peeces ; and alſo Maſons to build Houſes, and men that are skilfull to plant and trim Vines after your manner, and to dreſſe Gardens, and are skilfull in all other Artes, which are beſt and moſt neceſſarie for the life of man, and alſo Worke-men to caſt ſheets of Lead for the couering of Churches, and Tile-makers for our houſes, for we couer them with Graſſe, and of theſe we ſtand in very great need, and for want of them we are alwaies in diſquiet. I haue built a great Church, which is named the Trinitie, wherein the body of my Father is buried, for his ſoule is in the hand of God, and the walls thereof (as your Ambaſſadour can declare vnto you) are good, and I would couer the ſame as ſoone as I could poſſibly, and would take away the Graſſe which at this preſent is vpon it. For Gods ſake, ſend mee of theſe Artificers, twelue at the leaſt in euery Art : and yet for this you ſhall neuer want Crafts-men. And if they will ſtay with vs, they ſhall ſtay, and if they will depart, they ſhall depart, and I will pay them very bountifull for their paines, &c. This Towne of Zeila is the Hauen, whither all the Victuals doe come, which are tranſported into Aden, and ſo through all Arabia, and other Kingdomes and Countries, which cannot be furniſhed, but onely with ſuch Victuals as come from Zeila and Maczua, which are brought thither from our Kingdomes, and the Kingdomes of the Moores. And if you doe this, which I perſwade you, you ſhall bring vnder your ſubiection the whole Kingdome of Aden, and all Arabia, and other Kingdomes adioyning, without warre, or the death of any of your people, for taking victuals from them, they will remaine beſieged, and hunger-ſtarued. And when you will wage warre againſt the Moores, acquaint mee with whatſoeuer you want ; for I will ſend you great troopes of Horſe-men and Archers, Victuals and Gold, and will come my ſelfe in perſon, and I and you will defeat the Moores and Pagans, for the aduancement of the holy Chriſtian Faith.

Pſal.104.v.20.21.22.

Rom.8.35.
Iames 1.12.

Father Don Franciſco is worthy of double reward, becauſe hee is an holy man, and of an vpright conſcience, and exceeding honeſt for the loue of God. Being fully acquainted with his good diſpoſition, I haue giuen him a Iuriſdiction, a Croſſe, and a Staffe in his hand, which is a ſigne of authoritie, and haue made him an Abbot in our Dominions, and I would wiſh you to increaſe his honour, and to make him Biſhop of Maczua, and of Zeila, and of all the Ilands of the Red Sea, and head of our Countries, becauſe he is ſufficient, and deſerueth the like, or a greater office, &c.

143. Wee departed from Ormuz in the fleet of Lopez Vaz of Saint Paul, the Grand Captaine, becauſe Don Hector de Siluiera was gone toward the Red Sea, to encounter the Ships of Mecca, which wintered in the Citie of Aden, as I ſaid before : and being come out of the ſtreit of Ormuz, we found that the Winter of India was paſt, and that wee might ſayle without any Tempeſt, and we ſailed to a Fortreſſe of the King our Lord, in the Countrey of Chaul, which is very pleaſant, and aboundeth with Corne, which commeth from Cambaia, and of Oxen, Sheepe, Hennes, and infinite ſtore of Fiſh, and many fruits of India, and Herbs of Gardens, made by our Portugals. Within few daies after, Don Hector de Siluiera returned, and brought with him three Ships of Mecca, which he had taken, with great riches of Gold, becauſe as yet they had not brought their merchandize, and came to buy them in India, and all the Moores which were young and luſtie, that were taken in the ſaid ſhips, they thruſt into the Kings Gallies, ſelling them at ten Duckets a man, which is the Kings ordinary price. The reſt which were old and weake, were likewiſe ſold for ten duckets a piece. Departing from thence, wee came vnto the Citie of Goa, the fiue and twentieth of Nouember, on Saint Katherines Euen.

Ormuz.

Chaul.

Three rich ſhips of Mecca taken.

Goa.

Cananor.

Antonie Galuano Captaine of a Carracke.

We departed from thence, and came to Cananor, where we ſtayed ſixe daies, then wee went to Cochin, where wee found Antonie Galuano, the Sonne of Edward Galuano, the Ambaſſadour, whoſe bones I brought with me from Camaran, to whom I declared the whole matter, and hee exceedingly reioyced thereat, and would needs come and fetch them from the ſhip, with all the Prieſts and Friers of the Citie, and with an infinite number of Waxe-Candles, and ſo hee was carried to the Monaſterie of Saint Antonie. And becauſe the Mariners will not carrie dead Corpſes in their ſhips, therefore the ſaid Antonie cauſed a Graue to bee made behind the high Altar, and made as though he had put the Coffin therein, but ſecretly cauſed the ſame to bee carried to his ſhip, whereof he was Captaine.

Great heate.

145. Being come to an Anker in the Riuer of Liſbon, ouer againſt the Kings houſe, incontinently came Boats vnto vs to receiue our ſtuffe, and carried them to Saint Arrem, where we reſted ſixe daies, and bought vs Mules and apparell, after the manner of Portugall. From hence we departed in a greater heate, then euer I felt in the Countrey of Prete Ianni, or in the Indies. The Ambaſſadour of Prete Ianni with-drew himſelfe out of the way to the Towne of Azinaga, being himſelfe and all his Company almoſt ſmothered with heate. The Kings Commiſſary conducted me to Ponte de Anonda, where I thought verily that I ſhould haue ended my daies for extreame heate, and if I had not beene ſuccoured with coole Water, I had preſently beene ſtifled. While we ſtayed in this place, Don Roderigo came thither, riding as faſt as he could, and crying, Helpe, helpe for the loue of God, for the Moores , the Kings Pilots, and my Slaues, are dead for heate. Straight-way foure Mulettiers ranne with foure Mules, and brought them thither, whereof one dyed immediatly, and another within two daies after : and ſo we indured a great extremitie of heate. And vpon the death of theſe two Moores, there was ſome ſuſpicion of the plague, but the Kings Commiſſarie gaue ſufficient Teſtimony of the truth, that is to ſay, That they dyed with extreame heate ; becauſe that albeit they came out of hot Countries, yet were they not wont to goe clad and ſhod, but onely with a cloath from the girdle downeward : and now in this extreame heat which happened, being cloathed in apparell, they were vtterly ſtifled. And truly, all the time that I was in the Indies , and in Ethiopia, I neuer felt ſo great a heat ; and it was told me for a certaintie, that the ſelfe-ſame day, there were very many that dyed of heate. The next day we trauailed by night, and came to Zarnache, where we receiued order from the King, to ſtay there till he ſent for vs.

Two Moores dyed in Portugall for heat.

146. Hauing ſtayed thirtie daies at Zarnache, with as much pleaſure as might be, Diego Lopez de Sequeira, Surueyer of the Nauie, came vnto vs, who was the man that brought vs with his Fleet into the Country of Prete Ianni, to fetch vs vnto the Citie of Coimbra, where the King lay. After two daies came many Biſhops, the Deane of the Chappell , and ſundry Chaplaines, to fetch the Ambaſſadour of Prete Ianni , and all of vs which were with him from his lodging, and they brought vs to the Kings Palace, where the ſaid Ambaſſadour preſented to his Highneſſe a Crowne of Gold and Siluer, which was ſquare in foure pieces, and euery one was two ſpannes high, and very rich, which the Prete Ianni ſent, and two Letters made in quaternians of Parchment, ſaid ; King Dauid my Lord, ſent this Crowne, and theſe Letters to the King your Father, which is in glorie, and ſent him word, that neuer Crowne was ſent by the Sonne vnto the Father, but that they were wont to come from the Father to the Sonne : and that by the ſigne of this Crowne King Dauid himſelfe was knowne, loued, feared, and obeyed in all his Kingdomes and Signiories, and hee being his Sonne, ſent vnto the King his Father the ſaid Crowne, to aſſure him, that all his Kingdomes, Signiories, and people, were readie to doe whatſoeuer his Highneſſe ſhould command. And afterward, hauing beene enformed of the death of King Don Emanuel, hee ſaid ; Let the Crowne and Letters, which I ſent vnto the King Don Emanuel, my Father, be ſent vnto the King Don Iohn , my Brother, with other Letters which I will write vnto him.

This being done, the ſaid Ambaſſadour and I preſented two bagges of Embroydered Cloath, with two Letters, and a little Croſſe of Gold, which the Prete Ianni had ſent to the Popes Holineſſe, which things he requeſted to bee preſented vnto him by me, Francis Aluarez. His Maieſtie receiuing the Croſſe, kiſſed the ſame, and afterward gaue it to Antonie Carniero , together with the Letters, and ſaid, that he thanked the Diuine Maieſtie , for that hee had guided in an happy way, the things which were begunne by the King his Lord and Father , and that hee would finiſh them accordingly, to the honour and glory of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

In the yeare 1529. a good Benefice being fallen void in the Arch-biſhopricke of Braga, his Maieſtie beſtowed the ſame of me, and commanded me to goe and preſent my ſelfe to my Lord Arch-biſhop, Don Diego de Souſa, that hee might confirme me in the ſame : which when I had done, his Lordſhip asked me many things concerning the Countrey of Prete Ianni, which hee wiſhed me to put downe in writing.

When the Prete trauelleth with all his Court, the Altar of the conſecrated ſtone, whereupon Maſſe is ſaid, is carried by Prieſts vpon their ſhoulders, and the ſaid ſtones are laid vpon a little beare of Wood, and the Prieſts are alwaies eight, that is to ſay, Foure and foure to carrie them by turnes, and before them goeth a Clerke with a cenſer, and a Bell which he ringeth, and euery man remoueth out of the way, and they which are on horſe-backe do light, and doe their reuerence.

In all this Countrey there is no Towne, that hath in it aboue ſixteene hundred houſes, and there are but few that are ſo bigge. Neither is there any walled Towne or Caſtle. Their Villages are without number, and they haue an infinite multitude of people. Their Houſes are made in a round forme, all of Earth couered with Flagges, or with a certaine kind of Straw, which laſteth a mans life, with yards about them. There are no ſtone Bridges vpon their Riuers, but Bridges of Wood. They lye commonly vpon Oxe-hides, or in beds made of the thongs of the ſaid Hides. They haue no kind of Table to eate vpon, but feed vpon certaine flat Platters of wood, which are very broad, without Towels or Napkins. They haue certaine great Platters like Baſons of blacke Earth, as bright as blacke Amber, and Veſſels like Cups to drinke water, and the Wine of the ſaid Countrey. Many eate raw fleſh, others broyle it vpon the coles or burning embers: alſo there are Countries ſo deſtitute of wood, that they broyle their meate vpon fire made with Oxe-dung.

Their manner of feeding.

The cauſe why Nilus ouerfloweth Egypt, is this, that whereas the generall Winter beginneth in Æthiopia, in the midſt of Iune, and laſteth vntill the midſt of September, by reaſon of the exceeding great raines, which continue there all that ſeaſon; Nilus groweth great and ouerfloweth Egypt.

The cauſe of the increaſe of Nilus.

Prete, and all his receits and expenſes are onely put in writing. The Prete Ianni hath two names of honour, that is to ſay, Aregue, which ſignifieth an Emperour, and Neguz, a King.

Wine of Grapes is made openly but in two places, that is to ſay, in the houſe of Prete Ianni, and of Abuna Marke, and if they make it elſe-where, they doe it ſecretly. The Wine which they vſe at the Communion, is made in this manner. In the Monaſteries and Churches they keepe Grapes as it were halfe dryed in their Veſtries, and ſteepe them ten dayes in water, when they be ſwolne, they dry them, and then they preſſe them in a Wine-preſſe, and with that Wine they ſay Maſſe.

Small ſtore of Wine made in this Countrey.

There is infinite plentie of Sugar-canes, but they know not how to boyle and refine the ſame, onely they eate them raw.

Sugar-canes.

There is no Mountaine in the Countrey whereon Snow is ſeene, neither doth it ſnow, although there be verie great Froſts, and ſpecially in the plaine Countries.

No ſnow is ſeene in Æthiopia.

There is exceeding great quantitie of Honey in all this Countrey, and the Bee-hiues are placed after our manner, without the principall houſe, but they ſet them in the Chambers where the Husbandmen remayne, and ſet them againſt the wall, wherein they make a little hole, whereby they goe out into the fields. They alſo flie about the Chambers, and yet the people will ſtay within, for they vſe to goe in and out. They bring vp great ſtore of theſe Bees, eſpecially in the Monaſteries, becauſe they are a great foundation of their ſuſtenance. There are alſo Bees in the Woods and Mountaines, by whom they ſet wholſome barkes of Trees, and when they be full of Honey, they carrie them home. They gather great ſtore of Waxe, and make Candles thereof, becauſe they vſe no Tallow-candles.

Abundance of Honey.

Waxe.

They haue no Oyle of Oliues, but of a certaine kind, which they call Hena, and the Herbe whereof they make it is like vnto little Vine-leaues: this Oyle hath no ſmell at all, but is as faire and yellow as Gold. There groweth Flaxe alſo, but they know not how to dreſſe it to make Cloth thereof. There is great ſtore of Cotton-wooll, whereof they make Cloth of diuers colours. There is alſo a certaine Countrey that is ſo cold, that they are forced to goe apparelled in courſe Cloth like a darke tawnie.

Flaxe.

Cotton-wooll.

In no Towne where I haue beene, haue I ſeene any ſhambles of fleſh, ſauing in the Court: and in other places no man may kill an Oxe, although it be his owne, without asking licence of the Lord of the Towne.

Touching their ordinarie Iuſtice, it is not their manner to put any man to death, but they beat him, according to the qualitie of his fault, and alſo they put out his eyes, and cut off his hands and feete, howbeit, I ſaw one man burnt, becauſe hee was found to haue robbed a Church.

Their ordinary manner of Iuſtice.

The common people ſeldome ſpeake the truth, although an Oath bee miniſtred vnto them, vnleſſe they be bound to ſweare by the head of the King. They greatly ſtand in feare of Excommunication, and if they be commanded to doe any thing which is greatly to their preiudice, they doe it for feare of Excommunication. An Oath is miniſtred after this manner. They goe to the Church gate with two Prieſts, which carrie Incenſe and Fire with them: And hee which is to ſweare, layeth his hand vpon the Church gate, and the Prieſts will him to tell the truth, ſaying, If thou ſweare falſly, as the Lion deuoureth the ſheepe in the Forreſt, ſo let the Deuill deuoure thy ſoule; and as the Corne is grinded vnder the Mil-ſtone, ſo let the Deuill grind thy bones; and as the fire burneth the wood, ſo let thy ſoule be burnt in Hell fire. And hee which ſweareth, anſwereth Amen, to each of theſe Sentences. But if thou ſhalt tell the truth, let thy life be prolonged with honour, and thy ſoule goe to Paradiſe with the Bleſſed: and hee ſaith, Amen. Which Ceremonie being done, they cauſe him to giue like teſtimonie.

Their manner of miniſtring an Oath.

Whereas I haue ſaid, that they ſit not in their Churches, therefore I tell you, that without the gates of the ſame, there are alwayes placed a great number of woodden Crouches, like thoſe wherewith lame men doe helpe themſelues, and euery man taketh his owne, and leaneth vpon it vntill Seruice be done. All their Bookes, which are many, are written in Parchment, for they haue no Paper, and the writing is in the Language of Tigia, which is the Abaſſine Tongue, that is the Language of that Countrey wherein they became firſt Chriſtians.

Of the Churches.

All the Churches haue two Curtanies, one by the high Altar with Bels, and within this Curtaine none doe enter but the Prieſts: then there is another Curtaine in the midſt of the Church: and none doe enter into the Church, but ſuch as haue receiued holy Orders, and many Gentlemen and Honourable perſons doe receiue Orders, that they may be admitted into the Church.

The greateſt part of the Monaſteries are ſeated vpon high Mountaines, or in ſome deepe Valley. They haue great Reuenues and Iuriſdictions, and in many of them, they eate no fleſh all the yeare long. They eate alſo very little fiſh, becauſe they know not how to take them.

No painted Crucifixes.

Vpon all the wals of the Churches are Pictures of Chriſt and of our Ladie, and of the Apoſtles, the Prophets, and Angels, and in euery one of them is the Picture of Saint George. They haue no grauen nor carued Images; neither will they ſuffer Chriſt crucified to bee painted in the wals, becauſe, they ſay, they be not worthy to ſee him in that Paſſion. All their Friers, Prieſts, and Noblemen, continually carrie a Croſſe in their hand; the people weare Croſſes about their neckes. Euery Prieſt alwayes carryeth with him a Cornet of Braſſe, full of holy water, and whereſoeuer they goe, the people alwayes pray them to beſtow holy water, and their bleſſing vpon them, which they giue vnto them, And before they eate; they caſt a little holy water vpon their meat, and likewiſe into the Cup where they drinke.

Their principall Feaſts.

The moueable Feaſts, as Eaſter, the Aſcenſion and Whitſuntide, are kept on the very ſame dayes and ſeaſons, wherein wee obſerue them. Touching Chriſtmas, the Circumciſion, and Twelfe-tide, and other Feaſts of Saints they likewiſe agree with vs; in other Feaſts they doe not.

When their yeare beginneth.

Their yeare and their firſt moneth beginneth the ſixe and twentieth of Auguſt, which is the beheading of Saint Iohn. And their yeare conſiſteth of twelue moneths, and their moneth of thirtie dayes; and when the yeare is ended they adde fiue dayes, which they call Pagomen, that is to ſay, the ending of the yeare. And in the Leape yeere they adde ſixe dayes, and ſo they agree with vs.

Their Muſicall Inſtruments.

They haue Cymbals like ours, and certaine great Baſons wherewith they ring. Flutes they haue, and certaine ſquare Inſtruments with ſtrings like Harpes, which they call Dauid Moſanquo, that is to ſay, Dauids Harpe, and they play vpon theſe before the Prete Ianni, but ſomewhat rudely.

The naturall Horſes of the Countrey are infinite, but are not very good, but are like vnto Hackneies, but thoſe which come from Arabia and Egypt, are very excellent and faire, and the great Lords haue Races of theſe Horſes, and as ſoone as they bee foled, they ſuffer them not to ſucke their Dams aboue three dayes, whom they will preſently trauell on, and taking the Colts from their Dams, they put them to be ſuckled of Kine, and they become exceeding faire.

The Letters of Dauid, the Mightie Emperour of Æthiopia, vnto Emanuel King, of Portugall, &c. Written in the yeere 1521. as alſo to King Iohn and Pope Clement.

Theſe Letters following were tranſlated into Latine, by Paulus Iouius, and reuiewed after alſo and publiſhed by Damianus à Goes, and in Italian by Ramuſio. That which is omitted, is the ſame with that in the former Letter.

* Breu.

* Madagaſcar.

IN the name of God the Father, who was from Euerlaſting, and hath no beginning, &c.

Theſe Letters are ſent from me Athani Tingil, &c. Emperour of the great and high Æthiopia, and of mightie Kingdomes, Dominions, and Territories, King of Xoa, of Caſfate, of Fatigar, of Angote, of * Baru, of Baaliganze, of Aden, of Vangue, of Goiame, (where Nilus ſpringeth) of Amara, of Baguemedri, of Ambeaa, of Vagne, of Tigremahon, of Sabaym, from whence came the Queene of Saba, of Bernagaes, and Lord euen to the Countrey of Nubia, bordering vpon Egypt. Theſe Letters are directed vnto the moſt mightie, moſt excellent, and victorious King, Don Emanuel, who dwelleth in the loue of God, and remayneth ſtedfaſt in the Catholike Faith, the Sonne of the Apoſtles Peter and Paul, the King of Portugall and Algarbi, a louer of Chriſtians, an Enemie, Iudge, Emperour, and Vanquiſher of the Moores and Gentiles of Africa and Guinea, of the Cape of Buona Speranza, and of the Ile * of the Moone, alſo of the Red Sea of Arabia, Perſia, and Ormuz, of the greater India, and of all places, Ilands, and Countries adiacent, the deſtroyer of the Moores, and ſtout Pagans, the Lord of Fortreſſes, high Caſtles and Walls, the Inlarger of the Faith of Ieſus Chriſt. Peace be vnto thee, King Emanuel, who relying vpon the aſſiſtance of God, deſtroyeſt the Moores, and with thy ſhips, thy Souldiers and Captaines, expelleſt them in all places like faithleſſe Dogs. Peace be with the Queene thy Wife, beloued of Ieſu Chriſt, Seruant of the Virgine Marie, the Mother of the Sauiour of all people. Peace be to thy Sonnes, being now, as it were, in a freſh Garden, amidſt the flouriſhing Lillies, a Table furniſhed with all Dainties. Peace bee vnto your Daughters, which are adorned with Princely Robes, as Palaces are with Hangings of Tapiſtrie. Peace vnto your Kinsfolkes, the Off-ſpring of of Saints, of whom ſaith the Scripture, Bleſſed are the Sonnes of Saints, and mightie abroad and at home. Peace be to thy Counſellers, thy Officials, thy Magiſtrates and Iudges. Peace be to the Captaines of thy Caſtles and Borders, and of all thy defenſible places. Peace be vnto all Nations, People and Cities, and to all Inhabitants, except Moores and Iewes. Peace bee to all Pariſhes, and to all that are faithfull to Chriſt, and to thy ſelfe. Amen.

I was aduertiſed (moſt worthy King, and my Father) that ſo ſoone as the renowne of my Name was brought vnto you by Matthew, mine Ambaſſadour, you preſently cauſed a great number of Arch-biſhops, Biſhops, and other Prelats to be aſſembled, to giue thankes vnto our Sauiour Chriſt, for the ſame Ambaſſage, and that the ſaid Matthew was entertained with great honour and ſolemnitie, &c. But let vs omit theſe matters, and conſult betweene our ſelues, how wee may inuade and conquer other Lands of Infidels. I verily will beſtow 100000000. drachmes of Gold, and ſo many thouſands of Souldiers. Yea, I will beſtow Wood alſo, and Iron, and Copper, for the building and furniſhing of a Nauy, and great plentie of victuals. Oh King, and my Father, Emanuel, that one God protect and ſaue you, which is the God of Heauen, and alwaies of one ſubſtance, being ſubiect neither to youth nor old age. He which brought your meſſage, was called Roderigo de Lima, and was the principall of all his good company, and with him came Francis Aluarez, whom for his honeſt demeanour, his ſingular Religion, and vpright dealing, I could not but moſt entirely loue, eſpecially, when as being demaunded as touching the Faith, he anſwered moſt truly and aptly. You ought therefore to exalt him, to call him Maſter, and to grant him authoritie to conuert the people of Maczua, of Delaqua, of Zeila, and of all the Ilands of the Red Sea, becauſe they are vpon the Borders of my Kingdomes, and I haue giuen vnto him a Croſſe and a Staffe, in token of authoritie, and ſo likewiſe commend you the ſame things to be graunted vnto him, and let him be created Biſhop of the ſaid Countries and Ilands, for he deſerueth ſo to be, and is meete for the adminiſtring of this Function: and God will ſo mightily bleſſe you, that you ſhall euer haue the vpper hand of your enemies, and ſhall conſtraine them to fall downe before your feete. The ſame God prolong your daies, and make you partaker of the Kingdome of Heauen in a moſt Honourable place, euen as I would wiſh for mine owne ſelfe. I haue heard with mine eares, many good reports of thee, and with mine eyes I ſee thoſe things that I neuer expected to haue ſeene: God proſper all your affaires from good to better, and grant you a place vpon the wood of life, where the Saints themſelues are placed, Amen.

Here is much omitted for breuitie, which in the former Authors may be ſeene: as that Matthew was not ſent by him, but by Queen Heleua, &c.

I, like an obedient Sonne, haue done thoſe things which you commanded, and will hereafter doe, whenſoeuer your Ambaſſadours ſhall come, to the end we may mutually aſſiſt one another. And vnto euery of your Ambaſſadours which ſhall come, as the former did vnto Maczua, or Delaca, or to other Hauens within the ſtreits of the Red Sea, I will giue, and cauſe to bee giuen thoſe things which you ſhall requeſt, according to my earneſt deſire; that wee may proſperouſly bee conioyned, both in Counſels and Actions. For when your Forces ſhall reſort vnto thoſe Coaſts, I will there be preſent with my Armies alſo. And becauſe that vpon my Borders there are no Chriſtians, nor Chriſtian Churches, I will freely giue vnto your ſubiects thoſe Lands to inhabite, which are next vnto the Dominions of the Moores: for it is requiſite, that you bring your good beginnings to a happy end. In the meane while, ſend mee learned men, and Caruers of Siluer and Golden Images, and ſuch as can worke in Copper, Iron, Tinne, and Lead: as alſo Artificers, which may Print Bookes in the Letters of our language for the Church, and likewiſe ſuch as can beate Gold into thinne Plates, and therewith can gild other Metals. All theſe ſhall be moſt honeſtly intreated in my Court, and whenſoeuer they will depart, I will giue them liberall wages for their paines. And I ſweare by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, the Sonne of God, that I will freely diſmiſſe them, when they ſhall thinke good. And this I doe moſt confidently demaund, becauſe I am not ignorant of your vertue, and know right well the goodneſſe of your diſpoſition, being alſo aſſured of your exceeding loue toward me: and this I know the more certainly, becauſe you ſo honourably intertained, and diſmiſſed Matthew for my ſake. And this is the cauſe that maketh mee ſo earneſtly to requeſt. Neither let this cauſe you to bee aſhamed, for I will pay for all things to the vttermoſt. That which a Sonne asketh of his Father, ought not to be denyed: you are my Father, and I am your Sonne: let vs therefore be ioyned together, as one ſtone in a wall is ioyned to another, ſo being two, we doe agree in one heart, and in the loue of Ieſus Chriſt, who is the head of the world, and they that are with him, are likened vnto ſtones vnited in a wall. Amen.

IN the Name of God the Father, Almightie Creator of Heauen and Earth, of all things viſible and inuiſible. In the Name of God the Sonne, Chriſt, who is the Sonne, and Counſell, and Prophet of his Father. In the Name of God the holy Spirit, the Comforter, the liuing God, equall to the Father and the Son, who ſpake by the mouth of the Prophets, inſpiring the Apoſtles, that they might giue thankes and glorifie the Trinitie, perfect alwaies in heauen, and in earth, in the ſea, and in the deepe. Amen.

His Letters to Iohn the third King of Portugall.

Theſe Letters and this Meſſenger are ſent from me, the Incenſe of the Virgine, &c. Now I ſend my meſſage by Frier Chriſtopher Licanati, being named at his Baptiſme, Zaga Zabo, that is to ſay, The Grace of the Father, who ſhall ſollicite my requeſt vnto you. Moreouer, vnto the Pope of Rome, I ſend Francis Aluarez, to performe obedience in my Name, as it is meete. Renowned King and my Brother, indeuour thy ſelfe to confirme that friendſhip betweene vs, whereof they Father was the Authour, and ſend often vnto me thy Meſſengers and Letters, which I greatly deſire to ſee, as comming from my deare Brother: for it is very conuenient, ſithens we are both Chriſtians, and ſith the wicked Moores are alwaies at concord in their ſect. And now I doe proteſt, that I will not hereafter admit the Ambaſſages of the King of Egypt, nor of other Kings, which haue often ſent Meſſengers vnto me, but onely the Ambaſſadours of your Highneſſe, whoſe comming I earneſtly deſire; for the Mooriſh Kings eſteeme not me to be their friend, in regard of our diſſention in Religion: but they faine a kind of friendſhip, to the end they may more ſafely and freely exerciſe Traffique in our Kingdomes, whereby they reape great Commoditie. For they conuey mightie ſummes of Gold, whereof they are moſt greedy, out of my Dominions, whereas they are my Enemies, neither doe their Commodities pleaſe me any whit. Howbeit, this was to be tolerated, becauſe it hath beene an ancient cuſtome of my Predeceſſours, I doe not indeed wage warre againſt them, nor vtterly deſtroy them, but ſpare them onely in this reſpect, leaſt they on the contrary ſhould violate and caſt downe the holy Temple at Ieruſalem, wherein ſtands the Sepulchre of Ieſus Chriſt, which God hath left in the power of the abhominable Moores, and leaſt they ſhould make hauocke of all other Chriſtian Churches in Egypt and Syria; and this is the cauſe why I doe not inuade and conquer them, and it is a great griefe vnto me. And I am the more perſwaded hereunto, ſeeing I haue no Chriſtian King neere vnto me to ayde me, and to comfort my heart. I my ſelfe (Oh King) can finde no cauſe of reioycing in the Chriſtian Kings of Europe, when as I heare that they are at diſcord and warre among themſelues. Be ye all vnited in one concord; For you ought all to bee conioyned together in a certaine league of amitie. And verily, if I had any Chriſtian King bordering vpon me, I would not depart for the ſpace of one houre from him: but I know not in the world what to ſay or doe, as touching this matter, when as it ſeemeth ſo to be appointed by God. My Lord, ſend (I pray you) Meſſengers often vnto me: For in ſeeing your Letters, I doe certes behold your countenance, becauſe greater friendſhip groweth betweene men farre diſtant aſunder, then betweene thoſe that are neere together, in regard of the mutuall deſire which they haue. For he that hath hidden Treaſures, not ſeeing them with his eyes, he loueth them alwaies, and that moſt vehemently with his heart, as our Lord Ieſus Chriſt in his Goſpell ſaith, Where thy Treaſure is, there is thy heart; Euen ſo my heart is with thee, ſeeing thou thy ſelfe art my Treaſure, and thou likewiſe oughteſt to make me thy Treaſure, and ſincerely to ioyne thy heart with mine. Oh Noble Brother, keepe this word: for thou art moſt wiſe, and (as I heare) like vnto thy Father in wiſedome, which when I know, I preſently gaue thankes vnto God, and abandoning ſorrow, I exceedingly reioyced, and ſaid; Bleſſed bee the wiſe Sonne of ſo great a Father, the Sonne of King Emanuel, which ſitteth in the Throne of his Kingdomes. My Lord, ſee that you be not diſcouraged, becauſe you are ſtrong as your Father was: neither ſend you any feeble forces againſt the Moores and Gentiles. For by Gods helpe and the indeuour of your vertue you ſhall eaſily vanquiſh and deſtroy them. And ſay not that your Father left you but meane forces: for they be very great, and God will euer aſſiſt you. I haue men, Gold and Victuals, like the ſands of the Sea, and the Starres of Heauen. Wee two ioyned together, will deſtroy all the ſauage and barbarous Moores. Neither doe I requeſt ought elſe of you then men of skill, which may teach my Souldiers feats of warre. And thou (Oh King) art a man of a perfect age. King Salomon at twelue yeares old, vndertooke the managing of his Kingdome, and had mightie Forces, and was wiſer then his Father. My ſelfe alſo, when Nahu my Father deceaſed, was a child but of eleuen yeares old, and being inueſted into his Throne, I haue by the goodneſſe of God, attained to greater wealth and ſtrength then he. For in my hand are the Borderers and Nations of my Kingdome: Wherefore both of vs ought to thanke God for ſo great a benefit receiued. Giue eare vnto me, my Brother and Lord: for heere in one word I requeſt you, that learned men and Artificers may be ſent mee, which can Print Bookes, and make Images, Swords, and all kind of Militarie Weapons: as alſo cunning Builders, Carpenters, and Phyſicians, which can both miniſter Potions, and heale Wounds. I would gladly alſo haue ſuch, as can beate Gold into thinne Plates, and can artificially carue, both Gold and Siluer, and alſo can digge Gold and Siluer out of the Mines, and ſuch as haue skill in Mining of all other Metals. Moreouer, they ſhall bee welcome vnto me, that can make ſheets of Lead, and ſuch as can frame Brickes and Tiles of Clay. To be ſhort, all Artificers ſhall be ſeruiceable vnto me, & eſpecially Gun-founders. Aſſiſt me (I beſeech you) in theſe things, as one Brother ſhould aſſiſt another, &c.

His Letter to Pope Clement the ſeuenth.

HAppy and Fortunate Holy Father, who of God art made a Conſeruer of Nations, and holdeſt the Seat of S. Peter; to thee are giuen the Keyes of the Kingdome of heauen, and whatſoeuer thou ſhalt binde and looſe, ſhall be bound and looſed in heauen, as Chriſt hath ſaid, and Matthew hath ſo written in his Goſpell. I, the King, whoſe Name the Lions honor, and by the Grace of God, Atani Tingil, &c. Emperor of great and high Ethiopia, of great Realmes, Iuriſdictions, and Lands, King of Xoa, of Caſſate, of Fatigar, of Angote, of Baru, and of Baaliganze, of Adea, of Vangue, and of Goiame, (where Nilus ſpringeth) of Amara, of Bagua Medri, of Ambea, of Vaguc, of Tigremahon, of Sabaim, (whence was the Queene of Saba) of Barnagaes, and Lord as farre as Nubia, which is on the Confines of Egypt. All theſe Prouinces are in my power, and many other great and ſmall, which I reckon not. Nor haue I expreſſed the ſaid Kingdomes and Prouinces by name, induced by pride or any vaine-glorie, but that the great God might be praiſed therefore, who of his ſingular bountie, hath giuen to the Kings my Predeceſſors, the Empire of ſo large Kingdomes of Chriſtian Religion, and hath after exalted me with ſpeciall Grace amongſt other Kings, that I ſhould continually be at the ſeruice of his Religion, and for this hath made me Lord of Adel, and enemie of the Moores and idolatrous Gentiles. I ſend to kiſſe the feet of your Holineſſe, as other Chriſtian Kings my Brethren are wont to doe, to whom, neither in Power nor in Religion I am inferiour. I in my Kingdomes, am the Pillar of Faith, nor haue I neede of other ayde, but place all my confidence and help in God, who hath alway ſuſtained and gouerned me, from that time that the Angell of God ſpake to Philip, when he taught the right Faith to the Eunuch of Candace, a puiſſant Queene of Ethiopia, which went from Ieruſalem to Gaza. Then Philip baptized the Eunuch, of whom afterwards the Queene was baptized, with great part of her Family, and her people which neuer ſince ceaſed to be Chriſtians, and all of them from that time till now, haue beene ſtrong in the Faith. My Predeceſſours helped of none but God, haue enlarged the Chriſtian Faith in theſe great Kingdomes, which I enforce my ſelfe alſo to doe. I abide in my Confines, as a Lion encompaſſed with a thicke Wood, ſtrong againſt the Moores, and other Nations, enemies of the Chriſtian Faith, which will not heare the word of God, nor my faithfull exhortations, I girt with my Sword, purſue them, and by little and little, chaſe them out of their neſt, by the helpe of God which neuer failed mee, which hath otherwiſe happened to other Chriſtians. For if they will extend the Confines of their Kingdomes, they doe it not againſt Infidels, which they eaſily may; becauſe one of them may helpe and ſuccour another, being alſo marueilouſly furthered by the benediction of your Holineſſe, whereof I alſo am partaker, hauing found in my Bookes the Letters of Pope Eugenius, which in times paſt he ſent with his bleſſing to the King, the Seede of Iacob, of which bleſſing, hauing receiued it from hand to hand, I am glad and reioyce. Moreouer, I hold in great veneration the Temple of Ieruſalem, whither I often ſend due offerings by our Pilgrims: and much better and richer would I ſend, if the waies were not infeſted with Moores and Infidels, which not onely take away the Preſents and Treaſures from my Meſſengers, but hinder them alſo from free paſſage. And if the way were open, I would come into familiaritie, and commerce with the Church of Rome, as doe other Kings Chriſtian, to whom I am not inferiour: and as they beleeue, I alſo confeſſe one right Faith and Catholike Church, and beleeue ſincerely in the holy Trinitie, and in one God; the virginitie of our Ladie, the Virgin Marie, and I hold and obſerue the Articles of the Faith, as the Apoſtles haue written. At this preſent, our Lord God, by the hand of the moſt mighty and Chriſtian King Emanuel, hath opened the way that we may know each other by Embaſſie, and Chriſtians ioyned with Chriſtians to ſerue God. But his Ambaſſadours being in our Court, newes came of his death, and that his Sonne Iohn (who is my Brother) hath receiued the Scepter in his Fathers Kingdome. Whence, as by his Fathers death I was much grieued, ſo was I marueilouſly cheered by the happy ſucceſſion of his Sonne in the Kingdome: inſomuch as I hope, that hauing ioyned our Armies and Forces, we ſhall be able both by Sea and Land to open a way through the Prouinces of the wicked Moores, and ſet upon them with ſuch furie, that we ſhall chaſe them out of their Seates and Kingdomes, and ſo Chriſtians may more commodiouſly goe to the Temple of Ieruſalem, and returne at their pleaſure. And I, as I earneſtly deſire to be made partaker of the Diuine loue in the Temple of the Apoſtles, Peter and Paul, ſo I deſire to haue the holy bleſſing of the Vicar of Chriſt; and without doubt, I hold that your Holineſſe is the Vicar of Chriſt; and alſo that of the Pilgrims, which come from our Regions to Ieruſalem, and to Rome, and not without great miracle returne, I heare many things ſpoken of your Holineſſe, which cauſe me incredible pleaſure and ioy. Yet ſhould I haue much more pleaſure, if my Ambaſſadours could vſe a ſhorter way, and at all times relate the newes vnto mee, as I hope they ſhall once bring me before I dye, by the Grace of Almightie God, who keepe you in health and happineſſe. Amen. I kiſſe your holy feete, and humbly intreat your Holineſſe to ſend me your bleſſing. Your Holineſſe ſhall receiue theſe by meanes of our Brother Iohn, King of Portugall, of our Ambaſſador, Francis Aluarez.

Another Letter of his was deliuered by the ſame Aluarez, to the ſame Pope: deſiring him to ſend him Artificers in Glaſſe, and Muſicall Inſtruments, &c. Alſo to accord the Chriſtian Kings, that they might take Armes againſt the Mahumetans, which aſſiſt one another, &c. But we haue beene already tedious, and therefore omit it: And the Letter of his mother Helena, ſent 1509. by Matthew aforeſaid, which in Goes aforeſaid is to be ſeene.

Dam. à Goes de Ethiop. morib.

Aluarez was receiued by the Pope, Clement the ſeuenth, at Bolonia, Ianuary 29. 1533. in the preſence of Charles the fifth Emperour, and Martin the Nephew, Counſellour and Ambaſſadour of King Iohn of Portugall, and entertained as Ambaſſadour of the ſaid King Dauid, in his Name, preſenting obedience to the Pope, as more at large in Ramuſio appeareth.

CHAP. VI.

A Rutter of Don IOHN of Caſtro, of the Voyage which the Portugals made from India to Zoez. Dedicated to the moſt Illuſtrious Prince, the Infant Don LUYS, and here abbreuiated: ſhewing the ſtate of Socatora, and the parts on both ſides the red Sea, as they were aboue eightie yeeres ſince, with the Harbours, Ilands, Depths, Shelues, and other things pertayning to the Hiſtorie of the Sea, Land, and People. The originall of which is reported to haue beene bought by Sir WALTER RALEIGH, at ſixtie pounds, and by him cauſed to be done into Engliſh, out of the Portugall.

§. I.

The ſayling from Goa to Socatora, and into the red Sea, as farre as Mazua.

The one and thirtieth of December, 1540. * at Sunne riſing, we ſet ſaile from the Barre of Goa, the way of the Straights, the wind was off the Land to the Eaſtward. Wee coaſted along the Coaſt, bearing but little ſaile: about ten of the clocke, we came to an anchor at a Riuer, which is called Chaporaa.

The thirteenth of Ianuarie, 1541. in the morning we ſaw great quantitie of Oze, that growes vpon the Rockes of the Sea, and within a little while wee ſaw a Snake; the Sunne being vp, wee ſaw Land of the Iland of Socatora, in ſearch of the which we went, and the Land bare with vs flat South.

Now, after we were at anchor in this part, I asked of the moſt principall Pilots of the Fleet, how farre they made themſelues off the Land the day that they ſaw it, and I found, the chiefe Pilot was ninetie leagues ſhort, when wee ſaw it; the Pilot of the Galleon Buſora, one hundred and odde; and others, eightie: thoſe which made themſelues the leaſt, were ſeuentie leagues ſhort. In ſuch ſort, that my Pilot, which made it ſixtie fiue, was the neereſt to the Land. And I found among them all, a great wondring and a murmuring, how the errour could be ſo great; and either becauſe it was ſo, or becauſe the Pilotes would make their reaſon good, they all cried out, affirming, that this deceit proceeded, of the way being ſhorter then the Cards make it. Likewiſe, the Moriſh Pilots made good their complaint, affirming, that from Goa to Socatora, there were no more then three hundred leagues.

The Iland of Socatora hath in length, twentie leagues, and nine in breadth; it ſtands in twelue degrees and two third parts, on the North ſide; the front of the Iland that is oppoſite to the Septentrionall part, runneth Eaſt and Weſt, and ſomewhat to the North-weſt and South-eaſt: the Coaſt of the Sea is all very cleere without any Rocke, or Shoald, or any other impediment that may hinder the Nauigators: the ground in the Road is ſand, and in ſome places ſtonie, but in ſuch qualitie, that it will not cut the Cables. On this ſide the treuerſe wind, or the North wind is ſo forcible, and bloweth with ſuch a rage, that it raiſeth great heapes of ſand ouer the Hills, and doth driue them beyond their high and craggie tops. In all the circuit of the Iland, there is not any other place or harbour, where any ſhip may ſafely winter. The Coaſt of the Sea is very high in euery place, and begirt with very great and high Mountaines, with many Pikes, Piramides, and diuers other very faire ſhewes. In theſe Coaſts of this Iland the tides are contrarie to them of India: for, when the Moone riſeth, and appeareth in the Horizon, it is high floud, which the Mariners call, full Sea; and the Moone beginning to aſcend in our Hemiſphere, the tide begins to ebbe, till it commeth to the Meridian of this Iland, and being in it, it is dead low water; but the Moone deſcending from the Meridian, it begins to flow, by the ſame order and degrees that it was ſet in the great circle of our Horizon, and being ſet, it is here full Sea. I made this obſeruation many dayes by the Sea ſhoare, and found alwaies the ſame operation. This Iland of Socatora, (if I be not deceiued) was called in old time, Dioſcoridis. There was in it a Citie, called alſo Dioſcorides, as it appeareth in Ptolomie, the ſixth Table of Aſia: but, by the manner that he had in caſting it, and the place where he ſeated it, it appeares

* This Voyage being occaſioned, by ſending the Patriarch Bermudez to Ethiopia, and relating how that State decayed, inuaded by the Moores, and embroyled with ciuill diſcontents: contayning alſo a more full intelligence of the red Sea, then any other Rutter which I haue ſeene, I haue here added; and next to it, Bermudez owne report, tranſlated, it ſeemeth, by the ſame hand (not the moſt refined in his Engliſh phraſe, which yet durſt not be too buſie with, wanting the Originall) and reduced to our method; here and there amending the Engliſh, which yet in part was done, as I thinke, and many marginall notes added by Sir Walter Raleigh himſelfe.

For prolixitie we haue omitted the way hitherto. A Snake. Socatora Iland. From Goa to Socatora is 300. leagues, as the Moores account. The Iland of Socatora is in length 20. leagues and nine in breadth. The tides here contrarie to them of India, being alwaies full Sea, when the Moone appeareth here in the Horizon. Dioſcoridis Inſula, in which in times paſt was an ancient Citie, called Dioſcorides.

that he had euill information of the Trauellers. The Socatorians doe keepe the Law of the Goſpell; and they were enlightned, and brought to the Faith by the bleſſed Apoſtle Saint Thomas, as they themſelues beare record. In all the circuit of the Iland are many Churches, in which there is no Oracle, but the Croſſe whereon our Sauiour ſuffered. They pray in the Chaldean Tongue, as I was enformed, they want inſtruction, but they are very deſirous of it, and demand with great efficacie the doctrine and cuſtomes of the Romiſh Church, and all of them doe confeſſe this alone to be good, and is to be kept; they call themſelues by our names, as Iohn, Peter, Andrew, &c. and the women generally Maries. To conſider the manner how this People liueth, certainly is worth the noting; for, among them they haue no King, Gouernour, Prelate, or perſon to obey, or who may gouerne them; but they liue in a manner like the wild beaſts, without any order of Iuſtice, or politique life. In all the Iland there is no Citie or great Town, but the greateſt part of the People dwelleth in Caues, and ſome haue little Cottages-thatcht, ſeparated the one from the other, liuing a life more then ſauage and paſtorall. Their food is Fleſh and wild Dates, they drinke Milke, and taſte the water very ſeldome. All of them are very deuoted to the Croſſe, and for a wonder ſhall you find one perſon that doth not weare it about his necke: this People is of the beſt diſpoſition in all theſe parts, they haue their bodies tall and ſtraight, their faces well proportioned, their colour is ſwarthie, the women are ſomewhat whiter, and honeſtly faire. In all the Countrey there is no manner of weapons, offenſiue and defenſiue, except certaine Swords of dead Iron, very ſhort; the men goe naked, and they couer onely their ſecret parts with certaine Cloth, which they call Cambolus, of the which they make great quantitie in the Iland. The Countrey is naturally poore, and no other merchandiſe are found then * Verdigreaſe, and Sanguis Draconis. But the Verdigreaſe is in great abundance, and eſteemed aboue all. All this Iland is mountainous, and breedeth all ſort of Cattell that is in our parts, of the which there is great abundance. The Countrey neither produceth Wheat nor Rice, nor any maintenance of this kind. I beleeue, this is not the fault of the ground, but want of Induſtrie and Arte in the Inhabitants; for the Iland within the land is very freſh, and hath many Valleys and Plaines, very conuenient for to receiue all benefit that they will beſtow on it. This People hath no manner of Nauigation, neither induſtrie for to catch the Fiſh, which by the Coaſts of this Iland is infinite; they haue very few Fruit-trees, among the which the Palmttees are eſteemed, and nouriſhed, as the principall part of their food to maintaine life: the Countrey yeeldeth all manner of Garden-herbs, and medicinable Herbs, the Mountaines are couered with the Herbe Baſill, and other ſmelling Herbs.

The Socatorians conuerted to the Faith of Chriſt by Saint Thomas the Apoſtle.

Since this was written, the Moores of Arabia rule here as in many Engliſh Iournals of later times you may read. See Finch and others in the 3. and 4. Bookes.

Cloth called, Camboles.

* I thinke he meaneth Aloe Socatrina, Verdigreaſe, and Sanguis Draconis, merchandiſes in this Iland.

Baſill, ſweet herbs in the Mountaines.

The ſeuen and twentieth of Ianuarie, 1541. in the morning, we were very little beyond the Citie of Aden, in ſuch ſort, that it was to the North-weſt of vs, the diſtance might be about ſixe leagues, the wind was at Eaſt, and faire, wee ſailed Weſt South-weſt, and wee knew that the Land that wee ſaw yeſterday in the afternoone, and ſeemed to vs an Iland, was the Mountaine of Aden: this Mountaine is very high and faire, on euery ſide craggie and rough; vpon it there ariſe ſome very high pikes and ſharpe, in all ſhewes it is very like, and of the making of the Hill of Sintra, which more then any other thing doth make it noble and famous. This Hill deſcendeth to the Sea, and with great violence, thruſteth within her waues, a very great and long point, and preſently withdrawing it ſelfe a great ſpace inward to the land, there remaine, made two nookes, as faire as compaſſed, wherein that which lieth on the Eaſt ſide, ſtands ſituated the ſtrong Citie of Aden. This Hill in times paſt, was called Cabubarra, and was made famous by the Nauigators, and the Citie of Aden was knowne for Madoca. This Citie of Aden, within this three yeeres, is come to the power of the Turkes, by Treaſon which Soliman Baſſa, Gouernour of Cairo, did to the King of it, which paſt in this manner. The Great Turke making a great Armie, at the requeſt of the King of Cambaya, and of all the Inhabitants of the Straights of Mecca, for India. Hee ſent the Gouernour of Cairo, called Soliman Baſſa Eunuch, with a great Armie of Ships and Galleys for India. This Captaine being come to the Port of Aden, the King and Citizens, fearing the little trueth of the Turkes, denied them the entring into the Citie, but they prouided them with all neceſſaries of victuals and prouiſions: Soliman, and alſo the Souldiers, not ſhewing any griefe at this hoſpitalitie, the King aſſured himſelfe, and with many meſſages and viſitations of great friendſhip, which paſt betweene them both, they came to conclude, to meete in the Admirall Galley, that they might intreat together about the Conqueſt, which newly he went to make in India. The day of the agreement, the King comming to conſult with Soliman Baſſa, was taken priſoner, and the Turkes, which for this act were prepared, aſſaulted the gates of the Citie, and being entred, eaſily poſſeſſed themſelues thereof; and the day following, the King was hanged before the gates. The Citie being taking by this Treaſon, Soliman leauing a great Garriſon within it, made his iourney in all haſte toward Dio.

The like Aluarez relateth of Ethiopia.

The Mountaine of Aden.

The ſituation of Aden.

Cabubarra.

Madocha Citie.

Aden brought in ſubiection of the Turke by Treaſon Baſha.

See hereof Dam. à Goes Bell. in a ſpeciall Treatiſe called Dienſis oppugnatio.

On the ſide of Africa, beginning at the Cape of Guardafui, in other times, called Aromata: and on the other ſide of Aſia, from the Promontorie Siagros, or Cape of Fartaque, which is the ſame; all the Sea that is contayned vnto the ancient Citie of the Heroes, which now is called Soez, is called the Arabick Gulfe, knowne vulgarly for the Red Sea. The ſpace of Sea that lyeth betweene theſe two Promontories, and diuideth in this place Aſia from Africa, may be the Cape of Guardafui.

Aromata Promontorie.

Syagros Promontorie, or Cape Fartaque Gulfe.

Arabique ſigne or Gulfe, or Red Sea.
Aden.
Zeila, in Abexij or Ethiopia.
Poſsidium Promontorie.
Albabo.
The Streight, ſixe leagues broad.
Pego.

ſumme of fiftie eight leagues. And from hence, viz. from theſe Promontories, the Coaſt of euery ſide turning to the ſetting of the Sunne, doe runne almoſt in the ſame diſtance, till they come to two Cities, that is, Aden in Arabia, and Zeila in Ethiopia, or Abexi; and from thence the Coaſts begin to ſtreighten very much, and euery time more running with deſart Coaſts and little winding, till they meete in the place of the Mouth, with two Promontories, that is, Poſſidium on the Arabian ſide; and another which lyeth on the contrarie ſide, that is, of Ethiopia or Abexi, whoſe name, as well Ancient as Moderne, is not come to my notice; where as farre as theſe Promontories is the narroweſt and ſtreighteſt paſſage of the Streight. This ſtreightneſſe, of the neighbouring people, and of thoſe which inhabit the Coaſts of the Indian Ocean, is called Albabo, which in the Arabian tongue, do ſignifie Gates or Mouthes; and in this place and mouth, the Land doth neighbor ſo much, and the ſhewes which they make of willingnes to ioyne themſelues, are ſo knowne, that it ſeemeth without any doubt, the Sea, much againſt their wills and perforce, to enterpoſe it ſelfe in ſeparating theſe two parts of the World. For the ſpace which in this place diuideth the Land of the Arabians, from the Coaſt of the Abexi, is about ſixe leagues diſtance. In this ſpace there lye ſo many Ilands, little Ilets, and Rocks, that they cauſe a double, conſidering this ſtreightneſſe without, that ſome time it was ſtopped, and ſo by theſe ſtreight Sluces and Channels, which are made betweene the one Iland and the other, there entreth ſuch a quantitie of Sea, and maketh within ſo many and ſo great Nookes, ſo many Bayes, ſo many names of great Gulfes, ſo many diuerſities of Seas, ſo many Ports, ſo many Ilands, that it ſeemeth not that we ſaile in a Sea betweene two Lands, but in the deepeſt and moſt tempeſtuous Lake of the great Ocean. Now returning to the Mouthes of the Streight, which is the intent of our Deſcription, Wee are to note, that in this place the Land of Arabia ſtretcheth into the Sea, with a very great and long point, and ſo for this cauſe, as becauſe it remayneth out of the Mouth, and a great Nooke from this Point, it ſeemeth comming from the Sea, that the Land of this Point is ſome Iland, very diſtant from the firme Land. This Point is the Promontorie, which Ptolomie calleth Poſſidium.

See Sir Henrie Middleton, Cap. Downton, Cap. Saris, and other English Iournalls, of their voyages to Moha.
Eleuen fathoms in all the Channell.
Eaſtern winds raine in this place.

Againſt this Point or Promontorie Poſſidium, little more then a ſtones caſt ſtandeth a little Ilet, called the Ilet of the Robones. For Roboan, in the Arabian tongue, is as much as Pilot, the which dwelling here did bring in the Ships that came from the Sea, and from thence directed them to the places of their Countrie that they went vnto. This Iland is round and very flat, the circuit may comprehend the ſixt part of a league, from it to the firme Land yee may paſſe, the Water being low, but the Tyde beginning once to flow from one quarter flood, it cannot be waded. To the Sea off this little Iland, oppoſite to the Coaſt, about one league, ſtandeth an Iland, which hath in length about a league and a halfe, the which on that ſide that fronteth the Abexi, hath a very great Hauen and ſure from all Windes, where a great Nauie may well bee harboured of Galleyes, but the other front of the Iland which is oppoſite, and fronteth the Land of the Arabian, not onely wanteth a Harbour and Receptacle, but alſo wanteth a landing place. This Channell is ſailed well in the middeſt North-weſt and by Weſt, and South-eaſt and by Eaſt: through all the Channell is eleuen fathome deepe, we may paſſe either neere the Iland, or neere the firme Land, or through the middeſt it is very cleane in euery place without any Flats or Shoalds, or any other inconuenience that may diſturbe vs; the ground is a ſoft ſtone, which they call Corall ſtone, and ſcarcely ſhall yee finde a ſandie plot, though you ſeeke it with great diligence. Being farre within the Channell, and going to ſeeke the Roade and Hauen, which may harbour vs from the Eaſterne windes, which in this place are very ſtrong, the depth diminiſheth ſomewhat, but it is no leſſe then nine fathome. Beſides this Channell of the Arabian, there be many other whereby you may goe into the Streight ſafely, and being many, the mention is made of one onely of them, and they called it, the Channell of the Abexin; becauſe from the Iland of the Gates, vnto the Promontorie oppoſite to Poſſidium, which is in the Coaſts of Abexin, there may be of diſtance about fiue leagues, in this ſpace there lye ſixe Ilands very great and high, and ſeeing them from without the Mouth of the Streight, they put the Sailers in great feare and doubt, ſhewing that they forbid the paſſage that way, but the truth is, that betweene them, there goe very large Channels and of great depth, whereby without any danger wee may make our way, and alſo if we will, leauing them all on the right hand, wee may paſſe betweene them and the Mayne of Abexi.

The Mouth of the Streight of the Red Sea, twelue degrees one quarter.

The nine and twentieth of Ianuarie, 1541. at noone, I tooke the Sunne, and being in his greateſt heighth, it roſe ouer the Horizon two and ſixtie degrees and three quarters, the declination of this day was fifteene degrees, whence it remayneth that the Mouth of the Streight and Promontorie Poſſidium, ſtandeth in twelue degrees and one quarter towards the North. The Pilot tooke the ſame heighth, the which being taken vpon the Land, it cannot chooſe but be of very great certaintie.

That night, two houres after mid-night, wee ſet ſaile from the Mouth of the Streight. The thirtieth of Ianuarie, 1541. by day, we ſaw the Land of both the Coaſts, and wee were neerer the Land of Abexi, then to the Arabian; the Wind blew hard at Eaſt South-eaſt, till noone; we ſailed to the North-weſt and by Weſt, making the way by a Channell that goeth betweene the firſt Ilands, and the Coaſt of the Abexi, the which vntill this day was vnknowyne and ſtrange to the Portugals; the diſtance wee went from the Land by this Channell, might bee about foure leagues; an houre after Sunne riſe, we ſaw along the Coaſt a ranke of Ilands, the greateſt part of them were low, and as the ranke of Ilands, ſo the Coaſt ſtretched North-weſt, South-eaſt; the ranke of the Ilands might comprehend about ſixtie leagues iourney. Now, ſailing by this Channell with a proſperous winde, at whatſoeuer part we caſt our eyes, we ſaw many little Ilands, as well on the one ſide as on the other.

Many little Ilands.

By this Channell, which is called of the Abexi, we muſt not ſaile by night, and without the winde in the Poope, for if the winde change, we cannot come too and againe, nor come to an anchor in any place, till we are ſo farre forward as the firſt of the firſt Ilands, wee ſhall ſee to the Sea-ward nine little Ilands, and from thence forward the Sea remayneth free and open, and onely to the Land of vs there be a great quantitie of them, and ſome doe ſeparate themſelues from the Coaſt and the Mayne, about two leagues; but the greateſt part of theſe Ilands doe lye along the Coaſt; the length of this Channell, which incloſeth it ſelfe in the three firſt Ilands, and the Land of Abexi, may be about eight leagues: to make a ſafe voyage, it behoueth to goe neerer to the firme Land, then to the Ilands; but aboue all things, my opinion is, that none doe take it in hand without a Pilot of the Countrey.

Annotations, how we are to ſaile by this Channell.

The one and thirtieth by day, we came to a ſhoald, where were ſixe fathom water, and to the Sea of it againſt certaine Ilands, which are called the ſeuen Siſters, there is a Rocke of ſtone very dangerous, as the Mooriſh Pilots told me: ſo that the good Nauigation in this part is to goe very neere the firme Land, and in no caſe goe to the Sea of this ſhoald. At night wee came to an anchor within a Hauen, which is called Sarbo, in nine fathome and a halfe water, all this day very cloſe to the Coaſt we ſaw great quantitie of little Ilands.

Mooriſh Pilots.
The ſeuen ſiſters.
Little Ilands.

The firſt of Februarie, I went on Land in the Iland, and Port of Sarbo, carrying the Pilot with me and the Maſter, that we all might take the Sunne: and in his greateſt heighth it was riſen ouer the Horizon one and ſixtie degrees ſcarſe: the declination of this day, was thirteene degrees and ſixe and fiftie minutes; whence it remayneth manifeſt, this Iland and the Port of Sarbo, to be in fifteene degrees and ſeuen minutes, towards the North ſide.

About foure and twentie leagues ſhort of Maçua, and diſtant from the Coaſt of the Abexi foure leagues, in fifteene degrees of heighth, there is a great Archipellago of Ilands, ſome of which lye ſo low, that they riſe very little aboue the ſuperficies of the Sea, and others doe riſe ſo high, that they ſeeme to touch the Cloudes, and betweene the one and the other, there are ſo many Bayes, Ports, Harbours, as no winde can annoy vs: all of them want water, except one very high, which the Portugals call, The Iland of the Whale, becauſe it reſembleth one very much, and there is water, and plentie of Cattell, and here is a great Hauen where Ships may winter. Of all theſe, that which is moſt to the Sea, is one that in Arabique is called Sorbo, where at this preſent we lye at anchor. This Iland of Sarbo, is of length about a league, and almoſt halfe a league broade, the Land of it is very low, it hath many Trees but very low and barren, all the Plaine is full of graſſe, in euery place yee finde the footing of Men and Cattell, but there was onely one Camell ſeene, for the which occaſion, they called it, The Iland of the Camell; in all the circuit of the Iland, we found no water, though we ſought it very diligently, except one Well digged in a ſtone, which according to the appearance of it, was to receiue the raine waters. Betweene theſe Ilands doe enter many armes of the Sea, Reaches and Channels.

The deſcription of the Iland and Port of Sarbo.

A good Harbour for ſhips.

The fourth of Februarie, 1541. at Sunne riſe, we ſet ſaile from the Port of Sorbo, Februarie the ſeuenth, we ſailed along many Ilands, which are diſtant from the firme Land about three or foure leagues; the greateſt part of them are very low and flat with the Sea. Wee went to the Sea of them all about a league, and about euen-ſong time, we ſaw to Sea of vs a ranke of Ilands very long, which ſeemed to take ſome fiue leagues diſtance, there was from vs to them about ſome foure leagues, all of them lay North-weſt and South-eaſt, as farre as I could diſcerne. The Coaſt which all this day we ſaw, ſtretched North-weſt and by Weſt, and South-eaſt and by Eaſt. So that this Channell, wherein this day we ſailed, hath in breadth about fiue leagues, reckoning the ſpace that lyeth betweene the one Iland and the other: the greateſt part of this day I commanded to caſt the Lead, and I found alwayes fiue and twentie fathome water, and the ground Ozie.

The eight of Februarie, 1541. two houres after the Sunne roſe, wee ſet ſaile. Moſt of this time we ſailed to the North-weſt, at Sunne ſet we were almoſt entred into the Channell, that goeth betweene the Point of Dallaqua, which looketh to the firme Land, and an Iland, which is called Xamea, but hauing reſpect that night began to come on, and that many Galleons remayned farre off, and it would bee difficult to hit the Channell; and alſo conſidering, how at this time the winde was alreadie ſcarſe, we tooke in our ſailes, and with our fore-ſailes we went rummore, ſailing to the South-eaſt; and two houres within night we came to an anchor in fortie fathome water, the ground Oſie. All this day wee ſaw along the Coaſt many Ilands, ſo flat, that they and the Sea ſeemed to haue one ſuperficies. The Coaſt that ſhewed it ſelfe to vs, ſtretched North-weſt and South-eaſt, to a low Point, which is as farre forward as the Iland of Dallaqua.

The Point of Dallaqua.
Xamo: Inſula.

laqua. Doubling this Point, the Land maketh a great Nooke, that entreth ten or twelue leagues into it.

The deſcription of the Iland of Dallaqua.

This Iland is fiue and twentie leagues long, and twelue in breadth.

The Metropolitan Citie called Dallaqua.

Xamoa Inſula, in which are Springs or Wells of water.

Seuentie fathome water.

The King of Dallaqua, a Moore.

The Iland of Dallaqua is a very low Land, and almoſt flat with the Sea, without riſing in it, Mountayne, Pike, or any other heighth; it hath in length, according to the common opinion, fiue and twentie leagues, and twelue in breadth; the ſide of this Iland, which is oppoſite to the South, ſtretcheth Eaſt South-eaſt, and Weſt North-weſt, that is, all the Coaſt which I could comprehend with the ſight, and along the Coaſt lye great quantitie of little Ilands, all very low, and beare the ſame courſe of the Coaſt. I onely coaſted this ſide of the Iland ſeuen leagues, and two diſtant from the Land, and caſting many times the Lead, neuer found ground. The Metropolitan Citie, is ſituated almoſt in the Point of the Iland, which lyeth on the Weſt ſide a frontier to Abexi, it is called Dallaca, whence the Iland tooke the name, which is to ſay in the Arabique tongue, ten leques, and this, becauſe in times paſt, the Cuſtome-houſe thereof, yeelded ſo much euery yeere to the King. Euery Arabian leque is worth ten thouſand Seraphins, and euery Seraphin Arabique two Tangas larinas; in ſort that ten Arabian leques, are worth in our money fortie thouſand Cruzados. The Point of this Iland on the Weſt ſide, and oppoſite to the Abexi, is diſtant from the firme Land about ſixe or ſeuen Leagues, and in this ſpace of Sea, there lye fiue Ilands, very flat; the firſt is diſtant from this Point one league, it is called Xamoa, it hath in compaſſe two leagues, in it there be ſome Springs and Wells, and betweene this Iland of Xamoa, and the Weſterne Point of Dallaqua, is the principall Channell and moſt current for to goe to Maçua. In this Channell there are ſeuentie fathome water, the Land of this Iland is red; it produceth few Trees, and great abundance of Herbs. The King of it is a Moore, and all the People, he is reſident the moſt part of the yeere in Maçua, becauſe of the traffique he hath with the Abexins. This Iland at this preſent yeeldeth little; for after the riſing of Suaquen, Maçua, Aden, and Iudaa, it loſt the traffique, and with the traffique the reputation.

The deſcription of the Iland and Port of Maçua.

The Citie of Ptolomaida, ſometimes built here.

In Nadyuel Iland are many Ciſternes of water.

The twelfth, the Nauie of Galleons came into the Port of Maçua. Maçua is a ſmall Iland, very flat, and in it in old time was built the Citie Ptolomaida, of the wilde beaſts. This Iland hath in length about the fift part of a league, and of breadth a Caliuer ſhot, it lyeth in a great and crooked Nooke, very neere the Point of the Nooke that is on the North-weſt ſide. The ſpace of Sea that diuideth this Iland from the firme Land, is about a Faucon ſhot, and in ſome parts not ſo much; in this diſtance, to wit, betweene the Iland and the firme Land is the Hauen, in the which the Sea is not troubled with any weather, and the Current is very little, and all windes come ouer the Land, the depth is eight or nine fathome water, the ground is Ozie. The entrance of this Port lyeth on the North-eaſt ſide, by the middeſt of the Channell betweene the Land and the Iland, becauſe that from the Point which turneth to the Eaſt North-eaſt, there goeth out a Shoald toward the Land, and the Point of the Nooke caſteth another againſt the Point of the Iland, for the which they force the Ships to beware of the extremes of the Mouth of the Channell, and to ſeeke the middeſt of it. The Channell is very ſtreight, it runneth North-eaſt and South-weſt: very neere to this Iland of Maçua, toward the South and South-weſt, lye other two Ilands, the neereſt to the firme Land is ſomewhat the bigger of them, and that which is more to the Sea, and lyeth toward the South-weſt, is the leſſer, and very round. Theſe three Ilands ſtand in a triangle forme, they are all very flat and barren, there is no ſpringing water in any of them, onely in Maçua are many Ciſternes, whereof the Inhabitants doe drinke and liue. Betweene theſe Ilands are ſcattered many Shoalds, but through the middeſt of them goeth a Channell where Gallies and rowing Veſſels may paſſe at a full Sea. This Iland of Maçua was a little while ſince of the Signiorie of Preſte Iohn, with all the Coaſt, contayned from the Cape of Guardafui to the Citie of Suaquen; but within theſe few yeeres, the King of Dallaqua hath vſurped it, and is reſident in it the moſt part of the yeere, becauſe of the traffique he hath with the Abexines, of whom he hath great quantitie of Gold and Iuorie. The ayre is vnhealthfull in the moneths of May and Iune, and very vntemperate through great and intollerable calmes, in ſuch ſort that as well the King as the Inhabitants, doe auoid it, and leaue it emptie theſe two moneths, and goe to Dallaqua. The firme Land of the Nooke, wherein ſtandeth this Iland of Maçua, till yee come to a place of many Wells of water, called Arquito, by the Sea ſide, is very high and mountaynous, but from thence forward, the Sea coaſt is more open and cleere, and betweene the Hills and the Sea are great Fields and Plaines. There may bee from Arquito to Maçua a league. Arquito ſtandeth to the South from the Iland: through all theſe Mountaines and Wilde Beaſts.

Fields, are great number of wilde beaſts of diuers kinds, to wit, Elephants, Tygres, Woolues, wilde Boares, Stagges, Elkes, and many other formes of Beaſts, not knowne vnto vs; whence, with much reaſon, it is called Ptolomaida, of the wilde Beaſts. And that Maçua and Ptolomaida, be one and the ſelfe ſame thing, the eleuation of the Pole doth teſtifie in this behalfe.

§. II.

§. II.

Relations of Ethiopia ſub Ægypto, and PRESTER IOHN: of Nilus, and the Abaſſine Cuſtomes and Neighbours. The cauſe and meanes of the decay of that great Empire, neuer ſince recouered. Of Marate and Suaquen.

THe Preſte Iohn, which by another name, is called King of the Abexi, is Lord of all the Land of Æthiopia ſub Ægypto: which is one of the greateſt Prouinces we know in the World. This Eaſterne Empire beginneth at the Cape of Guardafui, called in old time, the Promontorie of Aromata, and from thence running along the Red Sea with Deſert coaſts, & not very crooked, it reacheth vnto the bounds of the rich City of Suaquen: on the Northſide it bordereth with the warlike people of the Nubijs or Nubians, which lyeth between the Land of the Abexij, and the ſuperiour part of Egypt, called, Thebayda, and from hence running great ſpaces within the Land, toward that part where the Kingdome and Land of Manicongo lyeth, after it hath taken too it ſelfe ſome part of Libya interior, all the other on the Weſtſide remayneth for his bounds, and preſently turning againe behind the Springs and Lakes of Nilus, going through the fierie aud vnknowne Countries, it finiſheth and endeth on the Southſide in the Barbarian Gulfe, which at this day is knowne of the Portugals, which doe nauigate the ſame on the Coaſt of Melinde and Magadaxo.

The Coſmographie of Æthiopia, ſub Egypto.

The Negus or Prieſt Iohn, King of the Abexins.

Promontorie of Aramata.

Where this Eaſterne Empire beginneth.

Nilus at this day is knowne by his ancient name; for of the Abexijs, Egyptians, Arabians, and Indians, it is called Nil, a thing certainly worth the knowing; the Springs and Lakes whence this Riuer proceedeth, are in the Confines that ſeparate the Land of the Abexins, or Æthiopians from the Safres, which inhabit the mayne of the Land, that goeth from Melinde toward Moſambique, as I vnderſtood, by ſome great Lords, and other perſons of Abexij. Which thing is held of them all for manifeſt, and well knowne, and hence appeareth, the little knowledge that the Ancients had of his originall. Now, enquiring of theſe perſons, if it were true, that this Riuer in many places did ſinke vnder the Earth, and came out againe many daies iournies thence, I knew there was no ſuch thing: But that through all the Land where it ranne, it ſhewed it ſelfe vpon the Superficies thereof, carrying a great depth and breath, without hiding it ſelfe or flying from the ſight of men, as yee reade in Plinie, Lib. 5. of the Naturall Hiſtorie: About the increaſings or ouer-flowings of the Riuer, I asked very often the cauſes, this beeing a thing ſo diſputed of all the ancient Philoſophers, and I came perfectly to know of them the Solution of this doubt, hitherto neuer determined; and ſo almoſt ieſtingly, with certaine ſimple Queſtions, I came to know that which ſo great and proud wits of Philoſophers knew not.

Ethiopia produceth many Mines of gold. Lakes of Nilus.

Theſe principall Lords of Abexij, told me, that in their Countrey the Winter beganne in the end of May, and laſted Iune, Iuly, and part of Auguſt, but that in Auguſt, the Ayre is more pleaſant, the weather milde and tractable, but that in the monethes of Iune and Iuly, for a great Wonder appeared, the Sunne; ſo many, and ſo continuall were the raines which continually fell from Heauen, with the which the fields and low grounds were ſo couered and ouer-flowne of the waters, that in theſe two monethes, they cannot goe nor paſſe from one place to another, and that this multitude of waters had no other iſſue or place where to gather themſelues, but only to the Channell of the Riuer Nilus: becauſe toward the Red Sea, there ranne along the Sea very great Mountaines, it was of neceſſitie, that the Riuer ſhould increaſe and go out of his owne courſe, not being able to containe ſo great abundance and weight of waters in it ſelfe, and the Riuer running with ſuch vehement and terrible rage, it is very apparant, that as well in the Egyptian, as in other Lands whereby it paſſeth, it would goe out of his naturall courſe, and cauſe, whereby it paſſeth, great ouer-flowings: and the Territories of Egypt being moſt plaine, [illegible] neceſſitie, the ouer-flowings in it would be more copious, and the Riuer would haue a larger ſcope to ſpread it ſelfe with his waters in euery place, the which could not ſo happen in the high and Mountainous Lands.

And ſo it doth in Suiana, the raines falling moſt violently in theſe moneths.

Now then, ſince it was manifeſt, that all the inundations of Nilus in Egypt, begin to increaſe when the Sunne was in the Solſtitium Eſtiual, which is in the moneth of Iune, the Sunne entring in the beginning of Cancer, but paſſing by the Signe of Leo, which is in Iuly, the Riuer increaſed in greater abundance, and when it was in the Signe of Virgo, which is in Auguſt, where in this moneth the raines begin to aſſwage in the Abexij, and Winter takes his leaue, the Riuer began to decreaſe by the degrees it had increaſed, till it come altogether into his Channell, the occaſion remayned manifeſt of the increaſing of this Riuer, to be the great and continuall raines, which in the moneths of Iune and Iuly, did fall in the Land of Abexij, or Æthiopia, which is all one; Seeing that when theſe raines ceaſed in Auguſt, the Riuer at that ſame time did beginne to withdraw himſelfe to his accuſtomed bounds. I was my ſelfe in Maçua, the moneth of Iune, and part of Iuly, where I ſaw great ſtormes, raines, thundering, and within the Mayne continually, we ſaw great blackneſſe and cloudineſſe, and tempeſts, and the Abexins ſaid, that we ſaw Aluarez hath deliuered the ſame reaſon of this ouerflowing.

but

Cape of Bona Eſperanza.

Meroe inſula, in which is a great and rich Citie.

but little to that which went within the Land. Likewiſe, wee haue experience, that the moneths of Iune and Iuly, is the Winter of Cape Bona Eſperanza, and all this Coaſt where the raines are very continuall. In this manner, hauing reſolued my doubt, of the flowings of Nilus, I asked them if the Riuer made any Ilands; they anſwered mee, that it made many, but one of them was very great, where was built a moſt rich and great Citie, which by due conſideration ought to be the Iland of Meroe, and they told mee, that aſwell in this Iland, as through all the Riuer there were great numbers of certaine fierce and peſtiferous beaſts, which, without doubt, muſt be the Crocodiles; and being deſirous to know if it were true, that in a certaine place the Riuer fell from ſuch a height, that with the great noiſe of the fall, thoſe that inhabited in the bordering Townes were borne deafe: I found no Hiſtorie of this, onely they told mee, that in a certaine place, which they named, the Riuer did fall of a great Rocke, downe with a great noiſe and rumour, but that there was no other thing.

As touching the cuſtomes and manners of the Abexines, the Lecture that of them might bee made, it would diſturbe the Hiſtorie of the Rutter, for which cauſe, I will touch in briefe ſomethings moſt worthy to bee knowne; eſpecially, of the ruine and loſſe of this Empire, in our vnhappie dayes.

Dauids tyranny, of which ſome Exãples of the two Betudetes, and Chiefe Iuſtice, and Trigremahon, and foure Barnagaſſoes, in ſixe yeares, &c. you may reade before in Aluarez. This humour, it ſeemeth, increaſed with his yeares, and perhaps he intended ſome alteration in Religion alſo, as appeareth by Aluarez and Bermudez his Legates to the Pope, which might more inſtigate his ſubiects againſt him.

Preſte Iohn, by name Atini Tingill, called after Dauid, raigning in the yeare 1530. in the Land of Æthiopia, he became ſo cruell to his Subiects, and did tyrannize ſo much ouer the people, that he fel into an vniuerſall hatred of the Abexines; in this time Gradamet, King of Zeila, finding the time fit, began to attempt warre with Presbyter Iohn, to ſee what he could find in the minds of the Abexines, & this, not that he was able to take ſuch an Enterprize in hand, but either he encouraged himſelf in the great enmitie the Abexines had with their King, either this warre was ſecretly moued by ſome Lords of the Kingdom. Now, beginning to enter through the Land of the Presbyter, and to take ſome Townes, he diuided largely the ſpoiles among his Warriours, among the which he had three hundred Harquebuſſes, Turkes, which was the greateſt ſtrength of his Armie, and franchized all the Inhabitants of the Townes, where through he paſſed, and exempted them of the Taxes and Impoſitions impoſed by Presbyter Iohn, with which liberalities hee got the minds of the Abexines, and not onely of the vulgar ſort, but alſo of the moſt principall Lords of the Kingdome.

Gradamet ouerthrew in battaile Preſte Iohn, by means of Harquebuſſes.

The Presbyter Iohn, ſeeing the damage receiued of the King of Zeila, ſent againſt him his Captaines, which beginning ſome Skirmiſhes, as ſoone as the Turkes ſhot their Caleeuers among the Abexines, and did kill ſome of them, the feare they tooke of theſe ſhots was ſo great, that preſently they ſet themſelues in flight. The King of Zeila proud of this victorie, entred within the Land, confident alreadie in the fauour of Fortune, accompanied with great companies of Abexines, which followed his partie, and foraging the Land of Æthiopia, by that part which ſtandeth vpon Magadoxa, and Melinde, to the end that by this way hee might in ſhorter time might come to a Mountaine, where was the great Treaſure of all the Presbyters paſt, the Presbyter ſeeing that euery day his Abexines paſſed to the Campe of the Moores, determined to come to a battaile, before that ſo great Harpyes did make an end of deuouring the Land altogether, and the minds of his Subiects, and gathering his Armies, and going againſt the King of Zeila, hee gaue him battaile, in which the Presbyter Iohn was ouercome, becauſe that the Abexines could not abide the Harquebuſſes, and ſo fled from them, as from a cruell peſtilence. The Presbyter with-drawne after this conflict to the Mountaines with ſome of his, within a few dayes, hee left this life, in the yeare of our Lord 1539.

Dauids death.

The King of Zeila obtayning ſo great a victorie, trauelled by great iourneyes toward the Mountaine, where the Treaſure was of the Kings of Abexij, and comming to the foot, aſſaulting the paces with great furie, notwithſtanding, they were vnacceſſible, and were defended from the top, in the end they entred them, and gained the Mountaine, where was taken the greateſt Treaſure, that vnto this day we know together in the compaſſe of the whole Earth. Now, vpon the deceaſe of Presbyter Iohn, the Abexines, which continued in the faith and loue of their Countrey, elected his eldeſt Sonne for Presbyter, and King of Abexij, being a yong man of little age, which finding the Realme vſurped by Infidels, and almoſt irrecouerable (and becauſe there might remaine nothing wherein Fortune might not be contrarie to him, and fauourable to the Moores) it hapned that a Brother of his, dealt with ſome great men how to get the Kingdome, which was the vtter ouerthrow of the * Abexines. The matters of Æthiopia, beeing in theſe termes, and the infortunate youth contending with his Domeſticall and Natiue Countriemen, the King of Zeila came vpon him, but the new Presbyter not being able to reſiſt, with-drew himſelfe to the Mountaine of the Iewes.

* Since which to this day, they haue decreaſed, and are now almoſt vtterly ruined.

Mountaine of the Iewes.

We are to note, that in the inward part of Æthiopia, there ariſeth a great and moſt high Hill, which hath but one onely aſcending and very difficult, but on the higheſt top of it lyeth a very plaine Countrey, where there are great abundance of Springs, Fruits, Cattell, and Tillages, the Inhabitants of this Mountaine doe obſerue the Law of Moſes, not finding in all the Land of Abexij; any Iewes: the Hiſtorie and Antiquitie how they haue arriued here, and the cauſe of neuer deſcending downe, and conuerſing familiarly with the Abexines, is not come to my notice, though I laboured it much. The new Presbyter receiuing of theſe Iewes friendly entertainment, and reknowledged for their Lord, they defended him from the Moores, and King of Zeila, which deſpayring of the victorie, and entring the Mountaine, retyred backward. About this time we arriued at Maçua with all the Armie: which when it was knowne, it put the Moores in a great feare, and lifted vp the decayed hearts of the Abexines, in ſort that the Presbyter emboldned himſelfe to deſcend from the Mountaine, and ſeated himſelfe with his people in certaine Mountaines towards the Sea and Towne of Maçua, where we were arriued, writing many Letters more then pittifull and miſerable, and in all of them before the writing, came Our Lord Ieſus crucified, of the which, hauing louing Anſweres, and full of hope of ſuccour, wee made our iourney toward Soez, and being returned againe to Maçua, it was ordayned to ſend him fiue hundred men with a Captaine. This done, we ſet ſaile, and came directly the way to India, and to this preſent, I haue not knowne what more hapned, or is become of the Presbyter, and matters of Æthiopia.

What theſe Portugals performed in Ethiopia, you ſhal reade in the following Relations of Bermudez.

The Abexines are naturally ceremonious men, and full of points of honour. Among them there is no other kind of weapons then Darts, in which they here figured the Lance wherewith Chriſt was wounded, and the Croſſe whereon he ſuffered for Sinners. Some, though very few, weare halfe Swords. They are nimble on Horſe-backe, but badly apparelled, generally they are lying people and giuen to Rapine. Among them he is not counted rich, that poſſeſſeth many, but he that hath abundance of Cattell, and Camels, and notwithſtanding, this they eſteeme the Gold very much: In their owne Countrey they are weake and cowards, but in a ſtrange Countrey ſtrong and valiant, in ſort, that it is a Prouerbe in all India, to ſay, That the good Laſcarin, which wee call a Souldier, muſt be an Abexine; and they are ſo eſteemed in Ballagate, Cambaya, Bengala, and in other places, that they are alwayes Captaines, and principall perſons in the Armies. Their attyre is vile and poore: they weare Shirts of linnen cloth, and ſome great perſon weareth a Beden, the vulgar goeth naked, and couered with whatſoeuer cloth; they eate Bolliemus, and raw fleſh, and when they lay it to the fire, they hold it ſo little at it, that when they eate it, the bloud runneth out of it. In the Land there is no Cities, nor Townes, but they liue in the fields in Pauillions or Tents, like the Alarbes.

Cuſtomes of the Abexines.

They are eſteemed great Warriours out of their owne Countrey.

A kind of vpper garment.

They doe honour themſelues very much of the Queene of Saba, and they ſay, ſhe tooke ſhipping in the part of Maçua; and others affirme, that it was in Suaquen, and carrying great riches with her and Iewels of great value, ſhe came to Ieruſalem to ſee King Salomon, giuing him great gifts, and returne from thence with child by the King, to her Kingdome. It is an hiſtorie much talked of among the Abexines, that a Soldan of Babylon, moouing warre againſt Preſbyter Iohn many yeares agoe, the Presbyter gathered a great multitude of people, with the which he put in practice to turne the Riuer Nilus another way to the Sea, ſo that it ſhould not runne through Egypt. The Soldan amazed at ſo great an Enterprize, and ſeeing that the worke comming to perfection, it would be the vtter ouerthrow of Egypt, he ſent vnto him his Embaſſadors with great gifts, by the meanes of the which he obtayned his friendſhip and peace with the Presbyter Iohn, and gaue a priuiledge to the Abexines, that they might paſſe through all his Countrey, without paying any Tribute, and at this day they pay no Tribute when they goe to viſit the holy Sepulchre, and Saint Catherine of Mount Sinai; I asked within the ſtreights of ſome old learned Moores for this Antiquitie, and they told mee the ſame, not digreſſing one iot from the Abexines.

The nineteenth, at Sunne riſing, we ſet ſaile from the nooke which is beyond Maçua, halfe a league and an halfe of water, diſtant from the Land about halfe a league: This day the weather was very cloſe, and it rained, and numbring our Armie, I found ſixtie foure rowing Veſſels, that is, three Galliots, eight ſmall Gallies, and thirtie fiue Foyſts. By night the wind was North-weſt, it calmed, and blew a little at Weſt, in the ſecond watch it began to raine, and halfe the morning watch paſt, wee wayed our Anchors, and went rowing along the ſhoare till the morning, it rained very hard all this time.

The Portugall Armada.

The twentieth, at euening, we were as farre as the Point of the ranke of Ilands on the Northſide, at this time wee might bee from Maçua, about fourteene leagues, the Coaſt from Maçua hither, ſtretcheth North North-weſt, and South South-eaſt, there is in the diſtance fourteen legues, in the Ilands which we ſaw on the Sea-ſide, we knew that in ſome of them there was Cattel and water, with ſome few and poore dwellings, the diſtance between them and the firme Land, might be ſome foure leagues, the names of theſe Ilands where the Cattell and the Water is, are Harate, Dobull, Damanill, the Land of them is low, and round about it is full of Shoalds and Flats.

Harate, Dobull, Damanill.

By night all the firſt watch, the wind faire at Eaſt, we ſailed to the North North-weſt, at the beginning of the ſecond watch, wee fell on a ſudden in certaine very whitiſh ſpots, the which did raiſe and caſt from themſelues certaine flames like vnto Lightnings, wondring at the ſhew of this ſtrange euent, preſently we tooke in our Sailes, and beleeuing wee were vpon ſome Shoalds or Bankes, commanded to caſt the Lead: I found twentie ſixe fathome water, now this noueltie making no impreſſion in the Pilots of the Countrey, and ſeeing how we went by a great depth, wee ſet ſayles againe.

An Iland vnder water to be feared.

The one and twentieth when it was day, wee ſaw at Sea off vs, the low Iland, whereof the Mooriſh Pilots were afraid.

The two and twentieth when it was day, wee ſet ſayle: my Pilot tooke the Sunne at the higheſt, and found himſelfe in eighteene degrees and an halfe. At this time we were as farre as a Point of ſand very long, which the firme land thruſt out, doubling this Point, we found the Sea very faire, and we ſayled North-weſt and by Weſt. An houre after noone, we came to an Hauen, called Marate. All the Coaſt wee ſaw this day, ſtretcheth North North-weſt, and South South-eaſt, the Land by the Sea ſide is very low, and maketh neuer a Hillocke, but within the Land there ariſe ſo great Mountaines, that they ſeeme to reach the Clouds.

A Deſcription of the Port and Iland of Marate.

Marate is an Iland very low: the land thereof is very Deſart, and without water, it is beyond Maçua, about ſixtie ſixe leagues; the Iland hath in compaſſe a league and an halfe, the figure thereof is rather round then any other, it lieth from the firme land about three leagues, in the ſide of this Iland which is oppoſite to the South-weſt, and beholdeth the firme land, there is a very good Hauen, free from all winds, and eſpecially from the Eaſterne winds: for on this ſide, the Iland doth caſt out two very long points into the Sea, which ſtretch Eaſt and Weſt, and a quarter North-weſt and South-eaſt: betweene the which the land on both ſides doth ſtreighten very much, and makes a very great and hollow boſome, in the mouth and front of which lieth a long Iland, and very flat; and alſo ſome Heads of ſand, and Shoalds, by reaſon of which no Sea can come in there: this Hauen hath two entries, one of them goeth on the Eaſt ſide, and the other on the Weſt ſide, the one and the other very neere the points of the Iland, betweene the which the Hauen is made. The Entrie and Channell which goeth on the Eaſt ſide, ſtretcheth North and South, a quarter to the North-weſt and South-eaſt, the depth is three fathom in the ſhalloweſt place, and comming out of this, it encreaſeth preſently, and within the Hauen wee haue neere the Shoare foure and fiue fathome, the ground is mudde. By night, the wind blew at Eaſt, and leſſe then by day, we rode all night.

Foure or fiue fathom water.

The Ilands of Daratata and Dolcofallar.

Suaquen Channell full of Shoalds.

Xabaque Hauen in 19. degrees ſcarce.

The three and twentieth the Sunne being vp, we ſet ſaile from the Iland and Port of Marate, and found ſeuen fathome, and ſandie ground; at eleuen of the clocke, wee came in ſight of two little Ilands, which were farre to the Sea; one of them is called Daratata, and the other, Dolcofallar, from which to Suaquen is a dayes iourney: from noone forward, we ſayled North-weſt and by Weſt, till Euenſong time that we entred the Channell of Suaquen, and entring into it we ſayled North-weſt the ſpace of a league, and preſently there wee had ahead of vs certaine Shoalds, for which cauſe wee ſayled Weſt, and a quarter North-weſt, and ſometimes Weſt, to free our ſelues from them, and we ſayled this way about three leagues, till we ſaw a great Iland ahead of vs; as ſoone as we ſaw it, we went by a tacke toward the Land, and came to an anchor betweene certaine great Shoalds of ſtone, where there is a good Hauen, called Xabaque, which is to ſay in the Arabian Tongue, a Net. At this time it might bee an houre before Sunne ſet. This day my Pilot tooke the Sunne in his greateſt height, and he found himſelfe in nineteene degrees ſcarce.

A Deſcription of the Soalds of Suaquen.

A Shoald vnder water.

Infinite number of Ilands, Flats, and Heads of ſand and ſtone.

A precept how to auoid them.

Fiue leagues of Shoalds, eleuen leagues from Suaquen.

The Shoalds of Suaquen are ſo many, and ſo intermingled the one with the other, that no information or picture is ſufficient, I ſay not to paſſe them, but for to vnderſtand them, the Ilands, Shoalds, Bankes, Rockes, Channels that are among them are ſo many. Theſe Shoalds at the entring, when wee are readie to goe in, haue on the Sea ſide a Shoald vnder water, whereupon the Sea breaketh very much, and to the Landward a little Iland, which ſtretcheth with the Shoald North-eaſt, and South-weſt, a quarter of the Eaſt and Weſt, the diſtance is about three quarters of a league: as ſoone as we enter by theſe Shoalds, the Channell appeareth to vs large and ſpacious, and the farther wee goe forward, ſo much more to the Seaward there appeare to vs ſuch an infinite number of Ilands very flat, Flats, Heads of ſand or ſtone, that they haue no number, the which toward the Land are not ſo many, though in compariſon of any other Sea, it is the fouleſt and vnnauigable. The precept which moſt ought to be kept for to paſſe between theſe ſhoalds, is to take heed that we goe alwaies neerer to them that lie to the Sea, and keepe our ſelues the moſt we can, from the other that are to the Landward. The breadth of the Channell that goeth betweene the one and the other, in ſome places is about halfe a league, in others a quarter, and in others leſſe then a Caliuer ſhot. As touching the depth of water through all this Channell, wee are to note, that in the entrie of it we found ſixe fathoms, and from thence to the Port of Xabaque it abated nothing of this depth, nor exceeding twelue fathoms: from the beginning of theſe ſhoalds to this Hauen, there may be about fiue leagues, the length of them may be eight or nine leagues, where there goeth another Channell ſurer for ſhips and great veſſels, and wee may likewiſe paſſe theſe Shoalds, leauing them all to the Sea, going very cloſe with the firme land, and this is the righteſt way and moſt pleaſant.

The foure and twentieth, the Sunne being vp, wee ſet ſayle from the Port of Xabaque, and rowed by ſo narrow a Channell, that in the broadeſt place we could not goe abreaſt, but one after another, & whereſoeuer it widened it might be about a Croſ-bow ſhot, the moſt we went from the firme land, might be a Cannon ſhot, and the leaſt little more then a Croſ-bow ſhot. The Shoalds, Rockes and Bankes, we had on eueny ſide, and were all vnder water, vpon them wee ſaw manifeſt ſignes to auoyd them; For whereſoeuer they lay, the water ouer them did appeare to vs very red, or very greene, and where wee ſaw none of theſe colours, it was manifeſt to be the deepe, and cleereſt of the Channell, the water ſhewing it ſelfe darke. Now going by this Channell, compaſſed with ſo many controuerſies; at halfe an houre paſt eleuen, wee came to an anchor vnder the lee of a little low and round Iland, in nineteene degrees. In this height Ptolomie placeth the Mountaine of the Satyres, of the which I found no memorie in the Pilotes of the Countrey, but going into the Land about halfe a league, I found the foot of ſo many kinds of Beaſts, and flockes of Pianets, ſo great, that it was a wonder, and all the footings came till they ſet their feet in the Sea, and the tracke was ſo great, that it occupied the greateſt part of the field. I beleeue that Fable ſo ſpread abroad of the Satyres to come from hence, which they ſay, inhabite theſe Hills and Mountaines, and likewiſe it is to bee noted, that in theſe foure leagues of Channell that is from Xabaque to this Iland, the water is no lower then two fathoms and an halfe, nor higher then eleuen, and alſo that the tide in the Iland ariſeth not aboue halfe a yard. And it begins to flow as ſoone as the day beginneth to aſcend by the Horizon, according to the order of the tides of Socatora.

Redneſſe of the water.

Mountaine of the Satyrs.

The ſixe and twentieth by Sunne riſing, we departed from this Iland, rowing along a Shoald of ſtone, that ranne betweene vs and the Land almoſt equidiſtance from the Coaſt, and from it to the Land all the Sea was full of Shoalds and Bankes, to the Sea of vs there appeared neither Shoalds nor Flats, or any other impediment. At nine of the clocke, we came to an anchor in a little Iland, compaſſed with many Flats and Shoalds, where was a good Hauen: this Iland was diſtant from the other, whence wee parted in the morning, a league and an halfe, and ſhort of Suaquen fiue leagues.

The ſeuen and twentieth the Sunne vp, wee ſet ſaile from this ſecond Iland: two houres within night, we came to an anchor a league and an halfe from the ſecond Iland, in eight and twentie fathome water.

The eight and twentieth by day, we brideled the Oares, and ſet ſaile: at nine of the clocke, wee came to an anchor about two leagues from the Land, in three and twentie fathome water, the ground was a ſoft ſand like oze, or mudde. This morning, wee found ſome Shoalds vnder water at Sea, but vpon them it ſhewed it ſelfe very greene or red. Two houres after noone wee ſet ſaile againe, at night wee came to an anchor in ſeuen and thirtie fathome water, the ground was ſand, the place was ſhort of Suaquen, a league and an halfe, hard by an Iland, the Coaſt runneth North North-weſt, and South South-eaſt, and all along there runneth a Shoald that entreth into the Sea neere halfe a league, the Land vpon the Sea ſide differeth in nothing from that we left aſterne.

The firſt of March, 1541. by day, we departed this place, which is ſhort of Suaquen, a league and an halfe: hauing doubled a point which the Shoald maketh, being as farre as the place, wee approached the Land, and entring by the Channell inward, we came to an anchor within the Hauen of the Citie of Suaquen.

Suaquen was called in old time, the Port Aſpi, as wee may ſee in Ptolomie his third Table of Africa: at this day * it is one of the richeſt Cities of the Orient, it is ſituated within the Arabike Gulfe, in the Coaſt of Æthiopia ſub Ægypto, called now, the Land and Coaſt of the Abexij. Among all the famous places, this may be equall or ſuperior to them all in foure things. The firſt, in goodneſſe and ſecuritie of the Hauen. The ſecond, in the facilitie and good ſeruice for lading and vnlading of the Ships. The third, in the trafficke with very ſtrange and remote People and Lands, and of diuers behauiours. The fourth, in the ſtrength of the ſituation of the Citie. As touching the goodneſſe of the Port, and the ſecuritie of it, I will firſt ſpeake of: Nature made this Port in ſuch manner, that the ſtorme of the Sea cannot come into it by any place whatſoeuer. Within the Hauen it is ſo quiet, and it runneth ſo inſenſibly, that ſcarcely yee can perceiue to haue any tides; the ground is mudde, the Road hath in all places fiue and ſix fathom, and in ſome it hath ſeuen, in this compaſſe and harbour of the Hauen, may well two hundred ſhips lie, and rowing Veſſels without number. Yee may plainly ſee the ground, and where it appeareth not, it is ſo deepe, that at the leaſt it hath ten or twelue fathom water. The ſhips are laden round about the circumference of the Citie, caſting a planke into the Ware-houſes of the Merchandiſe, and the Galleys faſtning themſelues to the ſtones and doores of the houſes, ſet their Beak-heads ouer the ſtreets, and by them as by Bridges they are ſerued. Now, touching the Traffique and Nauigation that is in it, with People of many ſorts, and ſtrange and remote Countries: I know not what Citie can compare with it (except it be Liſbon,) for, this Citie tradeth in all India intra Gangem, & extra Gangem, that is, Cambaya, Tanaçarin, Pegu, Mallaqua, and within the Arabike ſine, in Iuda, Cairo, Alexandria, and from all Ethiopia, and the Land of the Abexi it gathereth great abundance and quantitie of Gold, and Iuorie. As touching the ſtrength of the ſituation of the Citie, there cannot ſo much bee ſaid that it is not much more, ſeeing that to come to it, the inconueniences, lets, dangers, and hinderances are ſo great, that it Deſcription of the Citie and Port of Suaquen.

The Port of Aſpi.

* Ann. 1541. Since the Turkiſh Conqueſt, Moba, and other places haue beene of greater trade.

The great trafficke of Suaquen with many Nations for Gold, Iuorie, and rich merchandiſes.

Suaquen, for ſome fifteene leagues, is enuironed about with Shoalds, Flats, Ilands, Rocks, Channels, Banks, &c.

ſeemeth almoſt impoſſible. Seeing that fifteene leagues about the Shoalds, Flats, Ilands, Channels, Rocks, Bankes, and Flats of Sand, and breakings of the Sea, are ſo many, that they put the Saylers in a great doubt, feare and diſpaire. The ſituation of the Citie is in this manner: in the very midſt of this Nooke ſtandeth a moſt plaine Iland, which is almoſt leuell and euen with the Sea, and it is ſo round, that it ſeemeth a circle. It hath in compaſſe a quarter of a league, vpon this Iland is the Citie of a Suaquen, built in ſuch manner, that in all the compaſſe of the Iland, there is not one foot of ground that is not repleniſhed with houſes, ſo that this Iland may rather be ſaid to be full of Houſes and Inhabitants, then built and inhabited of people, ſo that all the Iland is a Citie, and all the Citie an Iland. On two ſides this Citie and Iland, doe come within a Bow ſhot of the firme Land, that is, on the Eaſt South-eaſt, and on the South-weſt ſide, but all the reſt is further of the Land: The Road in this Hauen or Nooke, is round about the Citie, from the edge of it to a great Croſſe-bow ſhot of it. We may caſt Anchor where wee liſt, and all this diſtance hath ſixe and ſeuen fathome water, the ground is Mud. This Nooke where this Citie lyeth, as in his Centre, round about it along the ſhoare hath a great Shoald, ſo that the deepe is at the edge of the Citie, and a Bow ſhot round about it on euery ſide, and beyond this diſtance it is full of Shoalds. In this Nooke lye other three Ilands on the Land ſide, that lyeth to the North-weſt; the ſecond of them that lye further in, are little, but the other neereſt to the Channell, is about the bigneſſe of the Citie. Betweene this Iland and the firme Land of the Nooke, on the North ſide, there goeth a great Channell very long, in which is ſeuen fathome water: Along this Channell may a great Nauie lye at Anchor, without any danger of hurt from the Citie, or ſeeing more then their Maſts. When the morning appeareth in the Horizon, it is full Sea; and the morning comming on, it beginneth to ebbe till the day comes to our Meridian, when it is dead low water, and paſſing from hence to the ſetting in the Horizon, it beginneth to flow till day ſhutting in, and being ſhut in it is full Sea: from dead low water till full Sea againe, the water riſeth not in the Citie more then a quarter of a yard, and along the Coaſt, the moſt that it riſeth, is a yard and an halfe to be meaſured, and in ſome high places leſſe then three quarters of a yard. But when I made this obſeruation were new Tides.

The ninth of March, an houre before Sunne ſet, wee weighed Anchor from before the Citie, and lay at the mouth of the Channell. The tenth, we ſet ſaile from the mouth of the Channell of Suaquen; We lay all night at Anchor, and the Dew was ſo great, that it was wonderfull.

---

§. III.

Mountaines of Sand on the Coaſts of Dradate, Doroo, Fuxaa, Arequea, Farate, Quilſit and Igidid.

THE eleuenth, the Winde was at North, and it blew ſo hard that it was a ſtorme, it raiſed along the Sea Coaſts great Mountaines of Sand toward heauen, and after they were very high it brake them, and the ayre remained as though it were a great miſt or ſmoake; all this day we lay at an Anchor.

Many Rockes, Shoalds and Flats.

The twelfth, we went out of this Channell, two leagues beyond Suaquen, and being without we ſet ſaile, and being about a league and a halfe from the Coaſt, we met ſo many Rocks, Shoalds and Flats, whereon the Sea did breake very much, that wee were forced to take in our Sayles, and to row the ſpace of three houres, till we were free from theſe Shoalds, and preſently we ſet ſayle againe. At Euen, we came to an Anchor within the Banke, entring a very narrow Channell, this Channell is one league beyond the other whence we parted, & three from Suaquen, it is great and ſpacious within, the ground is very cleane, there can no Sea come in nor doe any hurt.

The thirteenth, we went an houre before day out of the Channell, and to the Sea of vs about a Canon ſhot, we ſaw a very long ranke of Shoalds breake, which ſeemed to beare the ſame courſe that the Coaſt. At eleuen of the clock, the wind ſcanted and blew from the North North-weſt, for the which not being able to make any way, we were forced to faſten our ſelues to the Rockes of the Shoalds, and being here about three houres, at two of the clocke afternoone we ſet ſayle, the wind was very much freſher, and about North North-eaſt, we ſayled North-weſt, and when we were with the banke of the Land, we tooke in the Sayle, and rowing, we entred a Channell, and well within the banke we harboured. This Channell and place is from Suaquen about ſeuen leagues, the Channell is very narrow, and windeth in many Crookes, the Coaſt from Suaquen hither, ſtretcheth North and South, and North & by Weſt, and South and by Eaſt.

A Channell ſeuen leagues from Suaquen. Obſeruation of the Tides.

Courſe of Tides.

The fifteenth, I went a ſhoare, and obſeruing the order of the flowing and ebbing of the Sea, I found that after the morning was ouer the Horizon, two houres it was full Sea, and thence it began to ebbe till two houres afternoone, at which time it was dead low water, and preſently it began to flow till the Moone was ſet, and two houres after: Now meaſuring the quantitie, the tide did ariſe, I found two and twentie cubits.

The ſixteenth, we went out of this Channell, that is ſeuen leagues from Suaquen, the winde was at North, halfe a league at Sea we caſt Anchor. The ſeuenteenth, wee entred into a very good harbour, called Dradate: the Coaſt from the Port of Suaquen vnto Dradate, lieth North and by Weſt, and South and by Eaſt: It is diſtant ten leagues, the Land ouer the Sea is all very low, and three leagues within the Maine, are great and high Mountaines.

The Port of Tradate, with great reaſon ought to bee placed among the great and famous Ports, it hath eleuation of the Pole, nineteene degrees fiue ſixth parts, and is beyond Suaquen ten leagues. The mouth and entry hath in bredth, about a ſmall Faulcon ſhot, and entring within, preſently it beginneth to narrow, and cloſe more and more, but in all his length, the depth of water is twentie fathome, the ground is mud. About a quarter of a league within the Land, there is a great watering place of Wels, where is the beſt and greateſt quantitie of water, that is knowne in all theſe Coaſts.

A great watering place.

The nineteenth, the Sunne being vp, we ſet ſayle: we iournyed this day about three leagues and a halfe at Sea off vs wee ſaw many Shoalds, the Coaſt ſtretched theſe three leagues and a halfe North and South. The twentieth, at Sunne riſing the wind blew at North, and troubled the Sea: wherefore we were forced to ſeeke harbour within the Shoald, entring by a very narrow and troubleſome Channell: after wee were within, the wind came North North-eaſt, we lay all day at an Anchor. The one and twentieth, we went out of the Shoald, the wind was Weſt North-weſt faire weather, we ſayled to the North, diſtant from the Land about halfe a league: an houre after Sunne riſing, we were with a very long and faire point, which Ptolomie calleth the Promontorie of Diogenes.

Doroo, is a very great and faire Bay, it is fifteene leagues beyond Suaquen, and a halfe: this Bay on the South ſide thruſteth a verie large and bare point into the Sea, where there is built a great and round Turret in manner of a Pillar, Ptolomie calleth this Point, the Promontorie of Diogenes. Through this Channell, preſently at the entrie, there is ſixe fathome Water, and from hence it goeth diminiſhing till it come to three, and thence doth not deſcend; the ground is a verie hard Clay, the Bay is ſo great, and maketh ſo many Creekes and Nookes, and within it lye ſo many Ilands, and the firme Land is cut with ſo many Creekes, which doe penetrate ſo farre into the Land, that in euery place there may be many Veſſels hidden, without any notice of them. A quarter of a league to the Sea of this Bay, there lyeth a Shoald that doth gird and compaſſe it in ſuch ſort at the mouth thereof, that no Sea can come into it, becauſe it is alwaies aboue water, without hauing any entrance, except the mouth which aboue I haue rehearſed. This entry or mouth ſtretcheth Eaſt and by North, and Weſt and by South. A Cannon ſhot from this Bay, is a Well, of great quantitie of water, but it is very brackiſh and ſalt. The two and twentieth, when it was day, wee departed, and made our way Rowing, the Sea ſeemed to be very full of Rockes, and getting free of ſome, we encountred with others; halfe an houre paſt ten of the clocke, we made vs faſt to the ſtones of them. About Euenſong time, we were with the Land, and hauing doubled a low point, we entred into a very great Bay, which is called Fuxaa, there is betweene Doroo and Fuxaa three leagues and a halfe, the Coaſt ſtretcheth North and South, and ſeemeth to take ſomething of North-Weſt and South-Eaſt. The Bay of Fuxaa, is made Noble or famous, by a verie high and ſharpe Pike, and in it the Pole of the North doth riſe twentie degrees and a quarter. In the entry and mouth of this Bay, there are two verie low points: they lye North and by Eaſt, and South and by Weſt, the diſtance is one league and a halfe. No great Sea doth enter heere, and for this cauſe heere is a good harbour, where there is ten and twelue fathome water, and the ground is mud, euery where elſe it diminiſheth, till it come to fiue fathome. Along the Land of the Bay that goeth on the South ſide, there lyeth nine little Ilands on a row, and in other places are ſome other ſcattered, all of them are ſmall, low, and compaſſed with Shoalds: In this Bay there is not any water, the Land is verie dry and barren.

A Deſcription of the Bay of Doroo.

Promontorie of Diogenes.

A Brackiſh ſalt Well.

The Deſcription of the Bay of Fuxaa.

Nine little Ilands.

The fiue and twentieth, wee iournyed along the Coaſt to the Sea off vs, about a league wee ſaw many Rockes: at ten of the clocke we entred into an harbour, verie great, which is called Arequea. There is betweene the Bay of Fuxaa and this Hauen foure leagues, the Coaſt runneth North and South, and taketh ſomething of the North-weſt and South-eaſt. Arequea is the ſtrongeſt and moſt defenceable Hauen that hitherto I haue ſeene, it is beyond Suaquen two and twentie leagues. In old time it was called Dioſcori, as wee may ſee in Ptolomie; in the midſt of the entry and mouth of this Port, lyeth a great Iland, which hath in length about a Croſſe-bow ſhot, and almoſt as much in breadth, and there runneth from it to the firme Land, on the South ſide a Shoald and a Banke, that ioyneth with the Land, in ſuch ſort, that not any thing can paſſe ouer it: but from the ſame Iland to the Land on the North ſide, which is about a Croſſe-bow ſhot diſtance, there goeth a Channell that hath fifteene fathome water, it runneth North-weſt and South-eaſt, and both neere the Land, and neere the Iland it is verie ſhallow and full of Rockes, ſo that the way lyeth in the very midſt; the Channell hath in length about a Caliuer ſhot, and preſently the Coaſts on euery ſide winding, doe make within Arequea Harbour twentie two leagues from Suaquen.

The Deſcription of the Port of Arequea.

Dioſcori Port.

a great and very faire Hauen, in which there is no feare of danger. This Port hath in length about one league, and halfe in breadth, it is deep in the midſt, and neere the Land full of Shoalds, there is no water in it. The token we haue to know when we are as farre as it, is, that the Pike abouesaid remaineth to the Weſt South-weſt. Here we agreed to ſend all the Armie to Maçua, and to goe forward onely with ſixteene ſmall Gallies.

Salaqua Hauen, foure leagues from Arequea.

The thirtieth at noone, we ſet ſayle from the Port of Arequea, we came to an Anchor in a Hauen, which is called Salaqua, beyond Arequea foure leagues, and from Suaquen ſixe and twentie: the Coaſt North and South, and taketh ſomewhat of the North-eaſt and South-weſt. The Land which is ouer the Sea, maketh many riſings and hillocks, and behind them there ariſe great Mountaines: and we are here to note, that the Land by the Sea from Arequea, beginneth to make this ſhew forward, for hitherto it is all very plaine and low, till it reacheth to the Mountaines that are within the Maine. The one and thirtieth, we ſet ſayle from the Port of Salaqua: an houre before Sunne ſet, we faſtned our ſelues to a Shoald, that is a league from the ſhoare, we might goe this day about ſeuenteene leagues, and were beyond Suaquen three and fortie.

The coaſting of theſe ſeuenteene leagues.

The Point of the Calmes.

Toro.

Magarçaon.

Elmantè.

From the Port of Salaqua forward, the Coaſts doe begin to winde very much, and from Raſeldoaer forward, the ſpace of a league, the Coaſt runneth very low to the North North-eaſt, and in the end it maketh a point of Sand, where there are thirteene little hillockes or knobs of ſtone, which as the Mooriſh Pilots ſaid, were Graues, and from this point of the Calmes about two leagues, the Coaſt runneth to the North North-weſt, and from thence as farre as this Shoald, which is three and fortie leagues from Suaquen. It is the moſt famous and named point of all this Coaſt; becauſe all that doe ſayle from Maçua, Suaquen, and other places, to Iuda, Alcocer, and to Toro, muſt of force fetch this point. As touching the Sea that lyeth within theſe ſeuenteene leagues, I beleeue there can be no rules or experience to be ſecurely ſayled, but that as well the skilfull as the vnskilfull, muſt paſſe at all aduentures, and ſaue themſelues by chance, for the Shoalds are ſo many, and ſo great, the Sea ſo ſowed euery where with Rockes, the Bankes are ſo continuall in euery place, that it ſeemeth certainly rather that we may goe it on foote, then ſayle it; yea, although it be in ſmall Boats, in theſe ſpaces which are contained; betweene Salaqua and Raſeldoaer, are three Ilands lying in tryangle, neerer to Raſeldoaer then to Salaqua. The greateſt of them is called Magarçaon, it hath in length about two leagues, the Land of it is verie high, and without water. This Iland beareth with Raſeldoaer North and South, the diſtance is three leagues. The ſecond Iland lyeth much to the Sea, and is called Elmante: the Land is likewiſe high, and without water; but the third Iland is very low, and all of Sand: it lyeth foure leagues from Salaqua, toward Raſeldoaer, the name whereof is not yet come to my notice.

Quilſit Hauen.

The Deſcription the Riuer of Ferate.

The ſecond of Aprill, 1541. an houre before day, we looſed from the Shoald, that is three and fortie leagues beyond Suaquen, and went Rowing along the Coaſt, wee entred into a Riuer which is called Farate: there might be from the Shoald whence wee departed to this Riuer, foure leagues, and ſetting ſayle a league from thence, wee entred into an Hauen very faire, which is called Quilſit. All this day we ſaw not to the Land of vs any Rocke, but to the Sea of vs we did ſee a Shoald. Farate is a Riuer very great and faire, the Channell thereof hath of eleuation of the Pole one and twentie degrees, and two third parts, that ſeparates two low Points; at the entrance are a ſmall Caliuer ſhot, and from each of them commeth a Shoald toward the mouth of the Riuer, ſo that the Channell or entry is in the very midſt; this Riuer runneth Eaſt and Weſt. The Land of euery ſide of the Riuer is very low, without Buſh or any Trees of any other kind; in the mouth of the Riuer is thirtie fathomes water, and from thence it diminiſheth till it remaineth in eighteene.

A Deſcription of the Port of Quilſit.

Quilſit, is an Hauen no leſſe faire and noble, then very ſure and profitable, becauſe being once within, we need to feare no winde or any misfortune. There are at the entrie of this Port two very low Points, which are coaſted North-weſt and South-eaſt, a quater North and South. The diſtance is almoſt a quarter of a league. All the Hauen round about, may comprehend more then three leagues, and wee may lye at Roade in any place of it, and bee ſafe. In all this Hauen is twelue fathome water, along the Shoare the Coaſt is rockie, betweene this part and the Riuer of Farate, which is a great leagues iourney, there croſſeth a ranke of Mountaynes, one higher then the reſt.

Raſilgid Hauen.

Moamaa Hauen.

The third, one houre before day, we came out of the Port of Quilſit, and went rowing along the Coaſt. An houre before Sunne ſet, we came to an anchor in an Hauen, which is called Raſilgid, which in the Arabian tongue is, The new Head. This day we went about nine leagues, to the Sea of vs, we ſaw ſome Shoalds, but fewer then we had ſeene before. Two leagues from Quilſit there is a very good Hauen, which is called Moamaa, and preſently from this Point of the Shrubs, vnto another Point of Sand very long, which is about two leagues, before the Port of Raſilgid, the Coaſt runneth North and South, and taketh ſomewhat of the North-weſt and South-eaſt, the diſtance is about three leagues and a halfe.

Igidid, is a ſmall Hauen, but a very pleaſant one, it is beyond Suaquen ſeuen and fiftie leagues; the proportion thereof is like a great Cauldron, and within is ſo round, that it ſeemes a part of a Circular: in the mouth and entrie of the Port are two Points; which ſtretch North and South. Within this Port, onely the Eaſterne winde can doe ſome hurt, all the ground is very cleane: at the Mouth there is eighteene fathome water, and within thirteene; and halfe a league from it into the Land there is a Well of water, though little abounding, the water of it is very bitteriſh; the Port hath in compaſſe a great halfe league. It is a thing to be noted, that as well in this Port, as in all the reſt, which I haue ſeene in this Coaſt, Riuers, or Harbours, none hath any Barre or Banke at the Entrie, but rather the greateſt depth is at the Mouthes, rather then within. In this Port I found certaine Trees, which in the Trunke or Stock reſembled the Corke Trees, for the Trunkes and Boughes of them were couered with a kind of Barke or Corke, and very different in all the reſt, for the leaues of them were very great and large, and wonderfully thicke and greene, hauing certaine bigge veines that did croſſe them, theſe Trees were with Flowre, and the Flowre in the Bud reſembled the Mallow flowre when it is in the Bud, but that this was very white; and after it openeth, the Bud it reſembleth the white Cockle. Cutting a little Bough or Leafe of theſe Trees, there runneth out a great ſtreame of Milke, as if it were the dugge of a Goat. In all this coaſt I ſaw no other Trees but theſe, except a Groue that is a little beyond Maçua, hard by the Sea in the mariſh ground; beſides theſe Trees, within the Land, there are ſome Valleyes where grow ſome Capers, the leaues of which the Moores doe eate. They ſay, that they be appropriated to the ioynts.

A deſcription of the Port of Igidid.

Igidid Port, in proportion like a great Cauldron.

A Well of water very bitteriſh.

Trees like Corke trees.

Trees of Capers.

The fourth, from Sunne riſing till eleuen of the clocke, the winde blew ſo much at North-weſt, that it was a great ſtorme; and from eleuen of the clocke, it began to thunder very hard, and it hayled with the biggeſt drops that euer I ſaw; with theſe thunders, the Winde ranne through all the Points of the Compaſſe, and at laſt it remayned North. This day I carried my inſtruments on Land, and found the variation one degree and a quarter to the North-eaſt, and the Port in two and twentie, by many obſeruations.

Thunder and very great Hayle.

Notwithſtanding, that theſe operations were made a ſhoare, and with ſo much heede in the ſetting of the Inſtrument, that after once placed I neuer ſtirre it, till the end of all the obſeruations, yet there cannot be but that ſome error may be in them and ſome difference, becauſe the great heate and ſcorchings of the Sunne, did cracke the plate of Iuorie in the middeſt, and there remayned a great Clift as thick as a Portegue of gold, betweene the one halfe and the other.

The exceeding heat of the Sunne.

The ſixth, an houre before day, we weighed from the Port of Igidid. All this dayes iourney might be three leagues and a halfe.

The ſeuenth, in the morning, the Winde blew freſh at North-weſt, we rowed to the ſhoare: and at eight of the clocke, in the morning, wee faſtned our ſelues to certayne ſtones of a Shoald and a Shelfe, that lyeth before a long Point, which hereafter I will call Starta; we went in this ſpace about three leagues; but about noone we departed, and ſet ſaile, being in no little doubt, becauſe on the one ſide and on the other of vs, we ſaw ſo many Shelues that it was a wonderfull thing: we were forced to take in our ſailes, and helpe our ſelues with the Oare. At Sunne ſet we came to an anchor in a good Hauen, which is called Comol.

Starta.

Comol, a good Hauen.

§. IIII.

A deſcription of the Coaſt, that is contayned from the Port of Igidid vnto Comol, Raſelnaxef, Xuarif, Gadenauhi, Xermeelquiman, Gualibo, Tuna, Alcocer, and Toro.

FRom a Point that lyeth two leagues beyond the Port of Igidid, to another, very long and flat, it may bee about foure leagues: theſe two Points ſtretch North-weſt and South-eaſt, in this ſpace there is a great and famous Nooke, and within it toward the long Point of the North-weſt, is a Hauen ſo cloſe on all ſides, that no Wind can doe it any harme, and it is very deepe. The Point remayneth an Iland, which by reaſon of the heighth and place where it ſtandeth, without doubt it ſeemeth to be an Iland, which Ptolomie calleth Starta. But from hence to a great Point, which the Land ouer the Port of Comol doth thruſt out, there may be fiue leagues, theſe two Points ſtretch North-weſt and by Weſt, South-eaſt and by Eaſt; betweene them both there is another great and faire Nooke. As touching the deſcription of the Land vpon the Sea coaſt, we are to note, that from as farre as Igidid, till halfe a league ſhort of the Port of Comol, along the Sea, the Land ſheweth all along in ſmall Hills and very cloſe, and behind them there ariſe within a league diſtance, very great and high Mountains, rayſing very high Pikes and ſharpe Points, with other very faire ſhewes, the which the neerer they come to the Port of Comol, ſo much the neerer they come toward the Sea, and being come to the edge of it, they runne very high, ouer-pearing the Coaſts, till they come within halfe a league ſhort of this Port of Comol.

Comol Hauen two and twentie degrees and an halfe.

Starta Inſula.

A deſcription of the Port of Comol.

Badois.

Promontorie of Prionoto.

Comol, is beyond Igidid eleuen leagues, and from Suaquen ſixtie eight; the Pole in it is eleuated two and twentie degrees and an halfe. This Port ſtandeth in the end of this ſecond Nooke, very neere the face of the Point, which the Land that lyeth on the North-weſt ſide, doth thruſt out, the which though it be not very great, yet it is very ſure and profitable: for toward the Sea ſide it hath certaine Shoalds ouer water, which defend it, that no Sea can come into it; the Land which is ſeene round about it, is very plaine and pleaſant, and greatly peopled with Badois. Now, the Point of the North-weſt, wherewith the Land ouer this Port and end of the Nooke, commeth out into the Sea, is very long and faire: the Land of it is all low and equall. This Point is the Promontorie Prionoto, if wee looke well to Ptolomie in the third Table of Africa; which, becauſe that as farre as it the great Mountaines doe end, which roame along all this Coaſt. Three houres after mid-night, we went out of the Port of Comol, and rowing a little while, wee all ſet ſaile and went along the Coaſt; but an houre before morning, ſome Foyſts ſtrooke vpon Rocks and Shoalds, for which cauſe we ſtrooke ſaile, and made our iourney, rowing vntill morning.

Xaabiliden, a great Shelfe.

Zemorgite Iland.

The Point of the Mountaines end.

Raſelnaxef Point, or the dry Cape.

Promontorie Pentadatilors.

Note an Iland where the land of both Coaſts is ſeene.

Agathon inſula.

The eight, at breake of day, we came into a great and faire Bay, of which toward the North and North-weſt ſide, we ſaw no end, or any Point where it might end. We ſailed in the broad and high Sea, the Shoalds on euery ſide were ſo many, that it was a wonder wee could make any profit of a large winde, for now going roamour, now by a tacke, ſometime out of the way, and ſometime in it, there was no way wee could take certayne and quiet. About Sunne ſet, wee found a very great Shelfe, and faſtning our ſelues to the ſtones of it, we tooke harbour. The ninth, being cleere, we ſet ſaile from the Shelfe. We tooke harbour within a very great Shelfe, which is called Xaabiliden: after we were at anchor, we ſaw to the Sea an Iland, which is called Zemorgete. This Port and Shelfe ſtretcheth North-eaſt and by Eaſt, South-weſt and by Weſt. From the point of the Cape of the Mountains, to another Point which is beyond it, where are certain great Furres or Whinnes, the Coaſt runneth North-weſt and by North, and South-eaſt and by South, buſhes of the diſtance may be about three leagues & an half, or foure, & preſently from this Point, the Coaſts of the great nooke, beginne to wind toward the Land inward, drawing toward the ſetting of the Sunne, and afterward they turne againe very winding and crooked, making with ſo many turnings a great and large circuite, and from hence they wind outward, carrying a great and long front, till they thruſt into the Sea a notable and great Point, called Raſelnaxef, which in Arabique, is to ſay, the dry Cape which Ptolomie doth call. The Promontorie Pentadatilors, as we may ſee in the third Table of Africa, the Iland of Zemorgete, is diſtant from this Point about eight leagues towards the Sunne riſing, and from it, as the Mooriſh Pilots told vs, is the firſt place from whence the Land is ſeene of both the Coaſts, but the Coaſt of Arabia is a great deale further from the Iland, this Iland is barren and very high, and hath another faſt by it very ſmall, the greater Zemorgete, Ptolomie doth call Agathon, and maketh no mention of the leſſer. Now, for a declaration of the ſhelfe Xaabeliden, wee are to note, that in the end of this great Boſome farre to the Sea, there lyeth a very faire ſhelfe aboue water, all of it, which maketh a figure like to two armes wide open with their hands, and becauſe of this ſhew that it repreſenteth, it was called, Xaabeliden; which in Arabian, is to ſay, The ſhelfe of the Hands, the Port of this ſhelfe is on the Land ſide, for on this ſide it windeth very much, and ſtretcheth ſuch armes that keepe and ſhut vp the Hauen from all the winds of the Sea, this Hauen ſtretcheth with Raſelnaxef, Eaſt South-eaſt, and Weſt North-weſt, the diſtance is about foure leagues.

Cornaqua an Iland.

A great Temple.

The tenth, the Sunne being vp, we ſet ſaile to the North North-eaſt, the wind began to blow freſher, and the Sea appeared to vs cleere and Nauigable, about halfe a league from the Point, we ſaw in the iudgement of all, a ſhip vnder ſaile, and making toward it, after wee were very neere it, we perceiued it was a white Rocke that was in the Sea, which, as wee had notice, deceiueth all the Nauigators, and preſently we ſailed to the North and by Eaſt. At nine of the clocke, wee were as farre as an Iland, which is called, Cornaqua, and wee paſſed betweene it and the firme Land: this Iland is ſmall and barren, it hath in compaſſe about halfe a league, the diſtance from it, and the firme Land is about a league and an halfe, the Land of the Iland maketh the figure and ſhew of a great and mightie Lizard, with his armes ſtretched out, which is the occaſion it is much noted and ſeene of the Nauigators, and therefore made famous, this Iland of Cornaqua beareth with the Iland Zermogete, North-weſt and by Weſt, and South-eaſt and by Eaſt, the diſtance is about ſixe ſmall leagues, but returning to our way, about halfe an houre paſt ten, wee were as farre as a very long Point of Sand, entring a great way into the Sea, which is called, Raſelenſe; which in Arabique, is to ſay, The Point or Cape of the Noſe. This Point hath not round about it any high Land, but a great or vaſt field doth begirt it, without ſeeing in all this ſpace any Tree or any greene thing, and in the very face of the Point, is a great Temple erected, without any other building, and on euery ſide of it is a very cleere ſandy Coaſt, in manner of a Bay. Raſelenſe is very famous; all the trouble of their Nauigations, is, till they come to this Point, and whenſoeuer they double or come to it, they hold themſelues at home and ſure. Now proſecuting our iourney running along the Coaſt, the wind was at South-eaſt. At noone my Pilot tooke the Sunne, and found himſelfe in twentie foure degrees of height, one ſixt part, at this time we might be beyond Raſelenſe three leagues, whence it remayneth manifeſt, this Point to ſtand in the height of twentie foure degrees; and of this it appeareth, that the Citie of Bereuice, was built in this Point of Raſelenſe, for Ptolomie doth place it vnder the Tropicke of Cancer, by the Sea-ſide in this Coaſt, and in his time they made the greateſt declination, almoſt twentie three degrees fiftie minutes: Likewiſe, Pinie, Lib.6. ſpeaking of Bereuice, ſaith, that in the Solſticium at high noone, the Gnomon maketh no ſhadow, which ſignifieth, this Citie to be vnder the Tropicke.

Note the Citie of Bereuice.

Halfe an houre before Sunne-ſet, we were as farre as an Iland, which is called Xuarit, but paſſing forward a quarter of a league, we met certaine ſhelues of ſand, and others of ſtone. Wee came to an Anchor betweene them in a good Harbour, which in the Arabique Tongue, is called Cial. In theſe ſhelues wee ſaw ſo great a quantitie of Foule, as hitherto in no part of this Sea wee haue ſeene: theſe ſhelues and Port of Cial, is beyond Suachen, one hundred and three leagues.

Xuarit Iland.

From Raſelnaxef, till ſo farre as the Iland Xuarit, there may be betweene ſixteene and ſeuenteene leagues. The Coaſt when we haue doubled Raſelnaxef, which by another name, I call the North-weſt point of the great Nooke, doth wind very much, and runneth into the Land, and turning outward againe, it thruſteth into the Sea: a verie long Point of Sand, called Raſelenſet: theſe two Points ſtretched North-eaſt and South-weſt, and take almoſt the whole quarter of North and South, there may be in the diſtance about ſixe leagues large, and preſently from Raſelenſet, forward the Coaſt windeth directly to the North-weſt, till we are as farre as the Iland of Xuarit, this diſtance is betweene ten and eleuen leagues: the Sea that lyeth in this diſtance is in onely three places foule and full of Shoalds, the firſt is, to the Sea of the Iland of Connaqua, where is ſeene a great and very faire Shoald, which going ouer water raiſeth a great ridge of very great ſtones, and runneth a great ſpace toward the Land. The ſecond place is in the Iland of Xuarit, for from this Iland, as well on the Eaſt as on the Weſt-ſide, there goe great Shoalds and Flats toward the firme Land, in ſuch manner that they ſeeme to ſhut vp all the Sea, that lyeth betweene the Iland and the Land, but the third remayneth manifeſt, to bee this part where at this preſent we lye at Anchor, called Cial; in the which the Sea is ſo full and thicke, with ſo many Shoalds and Flats, that they haue no number, neither can yee perceiue any part of it, that ſhewes it ſelfe free and void of them. The Iland of Xuarit is a Caleeuer-ſhot in length, and in breadth almoſt as much, the Land of it is very low, and in the midſt of it a great Buſh very greene, on the Eaſt-ſide there is oppoſite to it a great Rocke like an Iland, this Iland is diſtant from the firme Land little more then halfe a league.

The coaſting from Raſelnaxef to Xuarit

Raſelnaxef Point.

Xuarit Iland, a Caleeuer-ſhot in length, and in breadth almoſt as much.

From Suaquen to Raſelenſe, the Countries are inhabited of a people, called Badois, which worſhip Mahomet, the one and the other called of the Coſmographers Æthiopians. And from Raſelenſe vpward to Soez, and the end of this Sea, the Coaſts doe appertaine to the great Region of Egypt, therefore the Inhabitants which doe inhabit betweene them and the Riuer Nilus, Ptolomie will haue them called, Arabique Egyptians. Pomponius Mela, and other Authors doe onely giue them the name of Arabians, but in theſe diuiſions we muſt hold with, and follow Ptolomie, as Prince of the Coſmographers. Theſe Arabique Egytians, all thoſe that doe inhabit from the Mountaines toward the Sea, are commonly called Badois, of whoſe cuſtomes and life, wee will intreat in ſome other place.

Arabique Egyptians.

The eleuenth, we tooke in our ſayles, and Rowed along: at nine a clocke of the day we entred into a great Nooke, which is called Gadenauhi, there may be from the part of Ciall to this Nook, about foure leagues: the Coaſt ſtretcheth North-weſt and South-eaſt, and taketh of the North and South: the Land ouer the Sea, leauing the ſhape it had, to wit, of a Wall or Trench, it commeth very mountainous and doubled, making ſo many Mountaines, and ſo cloſe, that it is a very ſtrange thing. The Port of Gadenauhi, is beyond Suaquen, one hundred & ſeuen leagues, and in it the Pole is eleuated foure and twentie degrees, and two third parts; being low water, it was one houre after high noone, and flowing from that houre, comming to the Point of full Sea, it was one houre after the Moone roſe ouer the Horizon, & from that houre the Moone aſcending by the Hemiſphere, it beganne to ebbe, till the Moone paſſed the Meridian, about an houre of time, and preſently the Moone deſcending from hence, going to ſet vnder the Horizon, the Tyde began to flow till the Moone was ſet, and an houre after it was ſet, was full Sea. By night the wind was North-weſt, two or three houres after mid-night wee departed from Gadenauhi, and proſecuting our iourney, at the paſſing betweene the Shoald which commeth from the North-weſt Point of the Nooke, and the Iland of Babuto: we ſtrucke and were faſt vpon the Shoald, and all being troubled, wee were in the Net, (as they ſay) but in this there was neither danger nor hurt, inſomuch that we got out of this place, and hit vpon the Channell, and went along the ſhoare, rowing againſt the North-weſt winde till it was day.

Gadenauhi Nooke, foure leagues from Cial.

Variation to to North-eaſt halfe a degree.

Babuto.

The twelfth, we rowed along the ſhore, one houre after Sun riſe, we anchored in a hauen, which is called Xarmeelquiman, which in Arabique, is to ſay, a cleft or opening of the Mountaines: This Port lyeth beyond Gadenauhi a league and a halfe. Xarmeelquiman is a ſmall Port, and little pompous or proud in quantitie, but in qualitie great and Noble. This Port is from Suaquen, Xarmeelquiman Hauen.

A deſcription of the Port of Xarmeelquiman

A ſtrange chance of the winds.

Gales of winds that ſcorched likes flames of fire.

quen, one hundred and eight leagues, it is much like the Port of Igidid. The twelfth of Aprill, we ſet ſayle going along the ſhoare, the winde came freſher and larger, that is, at Eaſt South-eaſt, about noone it blew verie hard, and it came with ſo great Gales, that it raiſed the Sands of the Coaſt very high, raiſing them toward the heauens, in ſo great Whirle-winds, that they ſeemed like great ſmoakes. About Euen-ſong time the Armie comming together, the Winde calmed altogether to ſome ſhips; and ſome other that came hard by, or a little behind, or more to the Sea, or to the Land, had the wind ſo ſtrong, that they could beare no ſayle. The diſtance from thoſe that were in calme, and thoſe that were in the ſtorme, being no more then a ſtones caſt, and preſently within a little ſpace, it tooke the ſhippes that were in calme with their Sayles, vp to the top, ſo that they had the Winde very freſh; and the other that went verie ſwift, remained in calme, and ſo in ſhort time the one was reuenged of the other. This chanced going cloſe all together, in ſuch ſort, that it ſeemed a thing done for the nonce, and in mockage. In this chance, there came ſome Gales of Eaſt, and Eaſt North-eaſt winde very great, and ſo hot, that in their ſcorching they made no difference from flames of fire. The Duſts that were raiſed on the ſhoare, went ſometime to one place, and ſometimes to another, as they were driuen and caſt with the Winds: many times we ſaw them make three or foure waies before they were alayed, or did fall in the Sea, with the Counter-winds that tooke them from diuers parts. This Myſterie and Chance among hils and high grounds had not beene much, nor any new thing to haue happened; but ſo farre from the Coaſt with the Sea Winds, certainly it ought to be much regarded. When theſe Counter-winds beganne to take vs, we were as a Port, that is called Xaona, and going on in this ſort, now ſtriking Sayle, now Hoyſing, ſometimes taking paſtime at that which we ſaw, and other whiles dread and feare, we went almoſt till Sun ſet, when we entred into a Port, called Gualibo, which is to ſay in Arabique, The Port of Trouble; we went this day, and a piece of the night paſt, about thirteene leagues.

Xacara Port.

Xaona Port very great.

Many Trees very great and high.

From Gadenauhi, to a Port that is called, Xacara, (which a very red hill doth beguirt) the Coaſt runneth North-weſt, and by North and South-eaſt, and by South, the diſtance is about tenne leagues: and from this Red hill, to a Point that lyeth beyond this Port of Gualibo almoſt a league, the Coaſt runneth North North-weſt, and South South-eaſt, the diſtance is about ſixe leagues. In theſe ſixteene leagues the Coaſt is very cleere, and onely one league beyond the Red hill lyeth a Shoald, diſtant from the Land halfe a league large. In the length of theſe Coaſts contained in the ſixteene leagues, are many faire and famous Ports, the moſt that I haue ſeene or thought to ſee in ſo ſhort a ſpace of way: among which Ports, there is one that is called Xaona, very great, where the Moores and Inhabitants doe ſay, A famous Citie of Gentiles was built in times paſt, which looking well to Ptolomie in his third Table of Africa, was called Necheſia. Along the Sea runne great and infinite Mountaines, very double and cloſe together, and behind farre within the Land, there ariſe ouer them great and mightie hils. In all the length of the Coaſts where theſe Mountaines are placed, there are two great Mountaines, not onely more Noble then the other their neighbours: but all thoſe that are in this Coaſt, the one of is very blacke, and ſeemeth as though it were ſindged, and the other is yellow, betweene them them are certaine heapes of Sand: From the blacke Mountaine inward to the Land, there is an open field, where I ſaw many Trees very great and high, which tooke a great compaſſe with the tops. Thoſe Trees were the firſt I ſaw in this Coaſt, that ſeemed Domeſticall and proper, to the Land: for the other, that before I make mention of, which are a little beyond Maçua, are like, and of the kind of them that grow in the Mariſhes, by the Borders of the Sea, and of the Riuers, and likewiſe thoſe which ſtand in the Port of Xarmeelquiman, and the other that ſtand in the Port of Igidid are wilde, and ſad to the ſight, without boughes or fruit, but hauing leaues they ſeeme naked and dry. Theſe two Mountaines and Graue, ſtand about two leagues before the Port which is called, Xarmeelquiman.

Gualibo, is beyond Suaquen, one hundred and twentie two leagues. This Port is like in faſhion and entry, very much to the Port of Xarmeelquiman, in this onely they differ, that the other hath ouer it many Mountaines, that enuiron it, and all the Land round about this, is plaine and vaſte. The entry of this Port, is betweene certaine Rockes or Shoalds, whereon the ſea breaketh very much, the Channell is deepe and large.

The Port of Tuna.

The thirteenth of Aprill after Sunne riſe, we weighed, and went out of the Port of Gualibo, the wind was North-weſt very ſtrong, and made the Sea to riſe very much, we rowed along the ſhoare: at ten of the clocke in the morning, wee entred into a Port, which is called Tuna, which is a league and an halfe beyond Gualibo.

Tuna is a ſmall and foule Hauen, it is beyond Suaquen one hundred twentie three leagues and an halfe, the North Pole is eleuated in it twentie fiue deg. and an halfe, the entring of the Hauen is betweene certaine Rockes, and within, the greateſt part of it is occupied with a ſhoald and ſtones, in ſuch ſort, that within there is a ſmall and ſorrie Harbour, the turning which the point of the Land, that is on the North ſide of the Port doth make, there is a good Harbour and Road againſt the North-weſt wind, the Land round about it is a very barren ſand; on the land of this Port on the North-weſt ſide there are three ſharpe Mountaines of ſtone, made to my thinking, for a knowledge and token that there is an Hauen here.

One houre before Sunne ſet, we faſtned our ſelues to a Shoald, which ſtands beyond Tuna a league, the Coaſt from a Point, which is almoſt one league beyond Gualibo, runneth with another Point that is beyond this Shoald, a league and a halfe, North North-weſt, South South-eaſt, the diſtance is foure Leagues.

The fourteenth, we went along the ſhoare, the Sea roſe very bigge, and moleſted the Rowers very much, but reſiſting both Winde and Sea, after high noone wee entred into a very faire Nooke, and in the hidneſt corner of it, where it maketh a good Port, wee came to an anchor. This day and night we went about fiue leagues, and might be beyond Suaquen one hundred and twentie nine leagues, the Coaſt in theſe ſixe leagues ſtretcheth North-weſt and South-eaſt, the Land ouer the Sea coaſt, ſome of it is low and plaine, and ſome mountainous.

A very faire Nooke, one hundred twentie nine legues from Suaquen.

Alcocer Port and Towne.

The fifteenth by day, wee were a league ſhort of Alcocer, and making to it, an houre and a halfe after Sunne riſe we came to the place, an caſt anchor in the Hauen; we might goe the night paſt, and this little of the day about ſeuen leagues, the Coaſt in this ſpace runneth North North-weſt, and South South-eaſt.

The height of Alcocer.

The place of Alcocer, noting well Plinie in the ſixt Booke of his Naturall Hiſtorie, and likewiſe Ptolemie in the third Table of Africa, was called Philoteras, and all the Land that is contayned from it vnto the Citie Arſinoe, and the end of this Sea was knowne by the name of Eneo; this place is ſo neighbouring to the Riuer Nilus, that the diſtance of both may bee betweene fifteene and ſixteene dayes iourney, ſetting your face toward that place where the Sunne ſetteth. This is the onely Port in all this Coaſt, where all the prouiſions, which the Land of Egypt yeeldeth at this day, doe arriue, which Land is now called Riffa, and from hence all the Townes, ſituated within the Coaſts of the Streight, doe carrie them and prouide themſelues. The Towne of Alcocer was built in old time two leagues further vpon the Sea coaſts, but becauſe of the euill diſcommoditie, and ioyntly becauſe the Port was not ſufficient for ſo great a reſort, they paſt it hither; and yet at this day are the old buildings of the ancient Towne ſeene, and are ſtanding, and is called the old Alcocer, by the which I meane Philoteras. But returning to the deſcription of the new Alcocer, as twiſe I haue verified, it hath of eleuation of the Pole, ſix and twentie degrees and one quarter, toward the North ſide, it is beyond Suaquen one hundred thirtie ſixe Leagues; the Port is a great Bay, and very open to the Eaſterne windes, which in this Coaſt are of great force and trauerſe, right againſt the place lye ſome ſhoalds though ſmall, whereon the Sea breaketh, betweene the which and the ſhoare the Frigats and Ships harbour, which come to ſeeke lading: the Towne is very ſmall, and more then any other of the World, barren and miſerable. The buildings differ very little from yards to put Cattell in; howſoeuer, the walls of the houſes are of ſtone and clay, and others of ſods, the tops of which haue no couering at all, except a few Mats or ſuch baſe things, which defend the Inhabitants from the Sunne, and from the Raines, if peraduenture the Heauens doe ſend them now and then, as it is truth, that in this place they fall but ſeldome, and by a great chance. In all the circuit of the Place, Coaſt, Fields, Mountaines or Hills, there groweth no manner of Herbe, Graſſe, Buſh, Tree, or any other thing appeare, except certaine blacke ſcorched Mountaines, which make a great number of bare Hillockes, the which carrying this euill ſhew and melancholike ſight, doe enuiron the place from Sea to Sea, and betweene them and the inhabiting, whereſoeuer any waſte place chanceth to be, it is a drie and more then barren ſand to the ſight, mingled with infinite grauell. The Port is the worſt of all that I ſaw in this Coaſt, in it for his excellencie is not any kinde of Fiſh to bee found, hauing through all the Coaſts and Strands very great abundance. Neere the Towne are three Wells of water whereof the people drinke, whoſe water with great difficultie yee can diſcerne from that of the Sea. Here is no kinde of Cattell.

A deſcription of Alcocer.

Alcocer ſometimes Philoteras.

Riffa, a fruitfull part of Egypt.

New Alcocer, twentie ſix degrees and a quarter.

Alcocer, the moſt barren and miſerable place in the world, the manner of the buildings and houſes.

It raines ſeldome in Alcocer.

Three Wells of wa[illegible]eere the T[illegible]

The moſt expert Moores told me, that the name of Egypt was not knowne neere them, but that all the Land from Alcocer, and a great way behind, vnto Alexandria, was called Riffa. In which, more then any other Countrey of the World, there was great abundance of victuals and prouiſions, Cattell, Camels, Horſes, without hauing one foote of vnprofitable ground in all that Prouince. I asked them what language or cuſtomes they had: they anſwered mee, that they followed the Arabians in all things. I asked them alſo for the qualitie of the Land: they told, that it was altogether very plaine, and that it neuer rained in it, and that if at any time it chanced to raine, it was held for a Wonder, the which God hath prouided for, with ordayning that the Riuer Nilus ſhould twice a yeere exceed his bounds and naturall courſe, and water the fields. I asked them alſo if from as farre as Alcocer, one might ſayle by the Riuer to Alexandria: they told me they might, and from farre behind Alcocer toward the Abexi: but that there was along the Riuer many Ilands and Rockes, for the which good Pilots were needfull, or to ſayle by day. I asked them more, what the cauſe was, that the men of that Countrey inhabited ſo * great a ſituation as Alcocer: they anſwered mee, They being the neereſt Sea-hauen to Nilus, and Prouince of Riffa, of all the Coaſt, from whence the fruits and prouiſions of the Land were tranſported. I asked them for what reaſon the Inhabitants of this place did not couer their houſes, and made roofes vnto them: they anſwered me, that for the Sunne, the defence of Mats was ſufficient, and that with raines they were not moleſted, but that againſt the malignitie and wickedneſſe of men, they were forced to ſeeke ſtronger defences, and therefore ordained to make the wals of ſtone and clay, and others of ſods. I asked them what men theſe ſo fierce enemies of theirs were, againſt the which they armed themſelues with ſo ſtrong Bulwarkes. They told me that they were Badois, a peruerſe people, void of all goodneſſe, which many times with ſudden aſſaults and robbings, did moleſt the place, and did rob the Droues that came from Nilus with victuals and other prouiſions.

It neuer raines in Riffa.

* So barren a Seat as Alcocer.

The Badois, a peruerſe people, and void of all goodnes.

The eighteenth of Aprill, in the morning, we faſtned our ſelues to a Shoald, that is beyond Alcocer, about foure leagues, and preſently paſt noone we ſet ſaile.

The nineteenth, there tooke vs like a guſh of the North North-weſt wind, faire weather, halfe an houre paſt eight of the clock, that we tooke Port in an Iland, which is called Suffange-elbahar, we loſt of the way we had gone foure or fiue leagues.

The deſcription of the Iland Suffan-elbahar.

A good Hauen for all weathers.

Suffange-elbahar is to ſay in the Arabicke Tongue, a Sea Spunge, this Iland ſtands beyond Alcocer thirteene leagues, the eleuation of the Pole in it is ſeuen and twentie degrees, all the land is ſandie without any Trees or Water, the Iland hath in length about two leagues, and leſſe then a quarter in breadth, there is a good Hauen with all weathers, but in the firme Land are ſo many Nookes, Ports, and Harbours, that it is a wonder, the deepeſt Channell whereby the Sea that is betweene the Iland and the Mayne, is along the firme Land, becauſe on the Ilands ſide there bee ſome Shoalds, in the mouth and entring of this great Port, that is on the North-ſide, there are certaine Shoalds aboue water, of the which comming in by day, yee need not feare, and in the other that lyeth on the South-ſide, in the very midſt of the entry of it, there is a great ſtone.

The twentieth of Aprill, 1541. at Sunne-ſet, we might be about ſixe leagues beyond the Iland Suffange-elbahar, the Coaſt in theſe ſixe leagues runneth in this manner, from Suffange-elbahar, to a ſandie Point, that is, beyond the Iland a league and an halfe, North North-weſt, and South South-eaſt, and from this ſandie Point forward, the Coaſts doe wind inward to the Land, and doe make a great Nooke, within the which doe lye many Ilands, Ports, Creekes, Bayes, and many other notable Harbours.

The one and twentieth, by day, we were faſt by the Land of an Iland, which is called, Xeduam, the wind was calme, we rowed along the Iland on that ſide which is oppoſite to the Land of the Arabian, this is very high and craggie, all of an hard Rock, it hath in length three leagues, and two in breadth, it is beyond Alcocer, twentie leagues, there is no water in it, nor any kind of Trees. The Land of the Iland lyeth betweene both Coaſts, there is from it to the firme Land of euery ſide fiue leagues, beyond toward the North-weſt are other three ſmaller Ilands, the Land of them is low, and betweene the one and the other lye ſome Shoalds. An houre after Sun roſe, we were vpon the Cape or Point of the Iland that lyeth toward the North-ſide, and from thence we croſſe to the Coaſt of the Arabian, the wind at this time was calme, wee went rowing, but within a little while it began to blow from the South-eaſt faire, and preſently wee ſet ſaile, and ſayled to the North-weſt. At eleuen of the clocke in the morning, we were with the Land of the Stonie Arabia, and preſently wee ſailed along the ſhoare: two houres before Sunſet, we came to an Anchor at the Towne of Toro, there may bee from the Iland of Xeduam, to Toro twelue leagues, the Iland and Toro lye North and by Weſt, and South and by Eaſt.

Stonie Arabia.

A deſcription of the Towne of Toro.

Elana, a Towne now called Toro.

Making good conſideration, the Towne of Toro, was called in old time Elana, as we may ſee in the writing of Ptolomie, Strabo, and other Authors, notwithſtanding that in the Eleuation of the Pole, and ſituation, we find at this preſent a great change and diuerſitie in theſe places: becauſe thoſe that write of the Towne Elana, did ſhew it to bee ſeated in the inwardeſt part of a very great Gulfe, called Elaniticus of the name of this place, and in the height of twentie nine degrees and one quarter. And now we know that Toro, hath eight and twentie degrees, one ſixth part of Eleuation of the Pole, and is ſeated along a very ſtraite and long Coaſt. The cauſe of this deceit, if it be true, that theſe places be both one, might proceed of the euill information that thoſe perſons gaue which ſaw it. But that Elana, is the Towne which now is Toro, appeareth, becauſe that from it to Soez, aſwell by the one Coaſt as by the other, not onely wee find no memorie of any Towne; rather the barrenneſſe of the Countrey, want of waters, and rough and craggie Mountaines, did giue vs to vnderſtand, that in no time, there could bee any inhabiting, ſo that hauing reſpect to Ptolomie, his placing the Towne Elana, in the Coaſt of Arabia Petrea, in the place moſt neighbouring vnto Mount Sinai, and not to make any mention of a Towne betweene it and the Citie of the Heroes, which lyeth in the vttermoſt Coaſts, where this Sea endeth, and ſeeing how in this Coaſt of Arabia, there is not any Citie, Village, or inhabiting that commeth ſo neere the height of Elana as Toro, and iointly with this it is neighbouring to Mount Sinai, and how from Toro to Soez, there is not any inhabiting, it ſeemeth a iuſt thing we ſhould beleeue that Elana and Toro be one ſelfe-ſame place. This Towne of Toro alſo ſeemeth to be the Port which the holy Scripture calleth Ailan, where Salomon King of Iuda, commanded the ſhips to be made, which went to Tarſis, and to Ophir, to lade with Gold and Siluer for to make the Temple. For taking away the ſecond Letter from Ailan, the ancient names are almoſt one thing. Neither ſtands it with reaſon it ſhould bee in any other place for the Timber whereof this Armie was made, was brought from the Mount of Libanon, and Antilibanon,

You [illegible] reade a[illegible]pinis o[illegible] the gulfe Elamiticus, afterwards to be twentie leagues beyond Toro.

tilibanon, the which was a manifeſt thing, that becauſe of the great labour and expences, which of neceſſitie would be in the carriage, they would direct it to the neereſt and fitteſt Port for ſo great a buſineſſe, eſpecially the Iewes poſſeſſing the Region of Idumea, and that part of Arabia Petrea, which is contayned from Toro to Soez. Strabo a Capadocian, doth hold that Elana and Ailan, are one ſelfe-ſame thing, and treating of this Citie in another place, hee ſaith. From the Port of Gaza, there is one thouſand two hundred and ſixtie furlongs to the Citie of Ailan, which is ſeated in the Gulfe, or inwardeſt part of the Arabicke Gulfe, and theſe are two, the one is toward Arabia and Gaza, which they call Elanitticus, of the Citie that ſtands in it; the other toward the Egyptian ſide toward the Citie of the Heroes, and the way from Peluſia to this Gulfe is very little; This is that which I could take out of ancient Hiſtories. The Citie of Toro is ſeated vpon the Sea-ſide, alongſt a very faire and long ſtrand, and before wee came at it about a Canon ſhot, it hath twelue Palme-trees cloſe together very neere the Sea, and from them inward to the Land. There runneth a plaine field till it commeth to the foot of certaine high Hils, theſe Hils are thoſe which come from within the Streight of Ormuz, called in times paſt, The Perſian Gulfe, the which hitherto came running along the Coaſt, very high ouer the Sea, and as farre as Toro, they leaue the Sea-coaſt, and with a great and ſudden violence, they returne from hence to the Mayne toward the North-eaſt, as angry and wearied of ſo continual and long Neighbour-hood with the waters, by theſe Mountaines is diuided the Stonie Arabia, from Arabia Fœlix. And on the higheſt tops of them, doe ſome Chriſtians at this day leade a holy life, but a little beyond Toro, by the border of the Sea, there beginneth a Mountaine to ariſe by little and little, the which thruſting a bigge and high Point into it, it ſeemeth to them that are in the Towne or Port of it, that it endeth there, and goeth no further, and remayneth, making a ſhew of three great and mightie Mountaines ſeparate the one from the other. This Towne is ſmall and very pleaſant, and well ſeated, all the people are Chriſtians and ſpeake Arabicke, it hath a Monaſterie of Friers of the Order of Monſerrat, in the which the Oracle or Image is of the bleſſed Virgin Saint Katharine of Mount Sinai. The Nation of the Friers is Grecian, the Sea Port of Toro, is not very great but ſure from the winds that may doe it hurt. For it hath oppoſite on the Sea-ſide a very long ſtonie banke, which runneth along the Coaſt of the Towne, betweene the which and the Land is the Hauen, and here, that is, as farre as the Towne, both the Coaſts are ſo neighbouring, that the ſpace of Sea that ſeparateth them is about three leagues iourney, I being deſirous to know ſome particularities of the Countrey, tooke notice of the Friers and the information, they gaue me was this.

The Streight of Ormuz.

Chriſtians liue vpon the top of theſe Mountaines.

Touching Mount Sinai, they told me that it was thirteen ſmal iournies into the Land, in which there might be eighteene leagues; the which Mountaine is very high, the Countrey round about it plaine and open, and that in the borders of it there was a great Towne of Chriſtians, in the which no Moore came in, but onely one that gathered the Rents and Duties of the Turkes. And that on the top of this Mountaine, there was a Monaſterie of many Friers, where the bodie of the bleſſed Virgin Saint Katharine lay buried. This Virgin, as Anthonie Archbiſhop of Florence writeth, was carried away from the Citie of Alexandria by the Angels, and brought to this Mountaine, and buried by them; the Friers told me, that about foure monethes paſt, this bleſſed and moſt holy body was carried with great pompe in a triumphant Chariot, all gilt to the Citie of Cairo, where the Chriſtians of the Citie, which is a great part of the people, did come to receiue it with great Proceſſion and Solemnitie, and ſet it in a Monaſterie much honoured; they told me that the occaſion of this ſo great and ſtrange remoue, was the many diſcourteſies which the Alarabes did to the Monaſterie, and how far to excuſe others, they were inforced to redeeme them for money, of the which the Chriſtians of Cairo complayning to the Turke, obtayned of him that they might bring the bodie of this bleſſed Virgin to the Citie, which the Friers did withſtand, but it auailed them nothing. I am in doubt of this ſo great a chance: for it may bee the Friers did faine theſe newes, for feare leſt we ſhould goe and take this holy bodie from them, for they looked for vs with an Armie of ten thouſand men; notwithſtanding, they affirmed it very much, ſhewing great griefe and ſorrow for the ſame. The Friers told me alſo, how that in the Mountaines, right againſt the Towne, which I haue ſaid before, to diuide the Stonie Arabia, from Arabia Fœlix, there were ſome Heremites which leade a holy life, and that through this Arabia, there were many Townes of Chriſtians I: asked them where they had notice that the Iewes did paſſe this Red Sea; to the which they anſwered me, that they knew no certaine place, but that there was no doubt of being betweene Toro and Soez. And that they croſſed from the one Coaſt to the other, and that two or three leagues before yee come to Soez, in the Arabian Coaſt, there was that Fountaine which Moſes cauſed to breake in the Rocke, when he ſtrooke it with his Rod, the Iewes being in great diſpaire for thirſt. The which at this day the Arabian Moores doe call, The Fountaine of Moſes, and that the water thereof was more then any other pleaſant and ſingular; likewiſe, I asked them how many leagues there were from Toro to Cairo by Land, they told me that ſeuen dayes iourney going meanly, and that the right way was by Soez.

Mount Sinai about ſome eighteene leagues from Toro.

The Citie of Cairo.

The Alarabes.

The Fountain of Moſes.

Cairo ſeuen dayes iourney from Toro by Land.

But that after the Gallies of the Turkes beeing there, they changed the way about two leagues

Where the paſſage of the Iewes was. The Iewes fleeing from the Egyptians arriued right againſt Toro, and paſſed this ſea, being the red Sea, and came to the place where Toro now ſtandeth. But the Egyptians followed them and were all drowned to the number of 600000.

Cairo at this day called Mecara.

leagues higher, and that when they were as farre as Soez, they went toward the Sun ſet. Hauing had this information of the Friers, I talked with a very honeſt, learned, and curious Moore, the which I neuer found in any Moore, and I asked of him, through what place he thought the Iewes paſſed this Sea, he anſwered me, that that which was in memorie of the people, and likewiſe in ſome Scriptures; was, that the Iewes comming away, fleeing from the Egyptians, arriued againſt Toro, on the land of the other ſide and coaſt that commeth from the Abexi, where all the power of the Egyptian come vpon them for to deſtroy them, and being in ſo great danger, Moſes their Captaine made prayer vnto God, and preſently ſtrooke the Sea with a Rod twelue times, and there were preſently opened twelue pathes, whereby all the people of the Iewes entred and arriued to the Land of the other ſide, where now ſtands the Citie of Toro: And the Egyptians entring after them, the Sea cloſed vp, and all of them were ſlaine, whoſe number was about ſixe hundred thouſand men. And alſo that the Iewes comming to the place of Toro, Moſes their Captaine did leade them the way to Mount Sinai, where he many times ſpake with God. I approued this opinion very much; for if this paſſage had beene by Soez, as ſome will ſay, what need had the Egyptians to enter into the Sea, to the end of perſecuting the Iewes, being able to goe about the Nooke, and take the foreward of them, eſpecially being Horſe-men againſt Foot-men, which ſhall manifeſtly be ſeene in the Picture of Soez hereafter, and although in all theſe things there was a Miracle, we ſee alwaies, that in the like chances, there is a ſhew and manner of reaſon. Being ſatisfied with theſe Hiſtories of the Moore, I asked of him if it was true, that the Chriſtians that were in Cairo, did carrie away from Mount Sinai, the bodie of Saint Katherine, he anſwered me, that no ſuch thing was come to his notice, neither was it to be beleeued, and that it was but foure moneths paſt ſince he was in Cairo, which Citie they cal Mecara, where he heard no ſuch thing, and that it ſeemed an inpoſſible thing to him, that the Chriſtians round about Mount Sinai would permit ſuch a thing, becauſe all men held this woman for a Saint, and in great reuerence. Hee told mee alſo, that before wee came to Soez, by two or three leagues, there was a Fountaine, which God gaue to the Iewes, by the interceſſion of Moſes, which Prophet they call Muçaa, whoſe water ſurpaſſed greatly all the reſt. I asked him for the Towne of Soez, how it was. He anſwered me, that he was neuer in it, neither could any perſon enter, except thoſe that by the Gouernour of Cairo were ordained for the keeping of the Galleys, and that neerer then two leagues none might come to it vnder paine of death.

The two and twentieth of Aprill, a cleere morning, we departed from Toro. The foure and twentieth, we were in nine and twentie degrees ſeuenteene minutes.

§. V.

A Deſcription of the Nooke or Bay beyond Toro, and how by it is vnderſtood the Gulfe Elaniticus. Of Soez, and of their returne homewards. Of the Badois, and of their cuſtomes, and why this Sea is called Red.

This Nooke ſuppoſed to be the Gulfe Elaniticus.

TWentie leagues beyond Toro, and fiftie two from Alcocer, the Land of Egypt, or Coaſt that commeth from Abexij, commeth out into the Sea with a very lowe and long Point, from the Coaſts winding a great ſpace inward to the Land, running very winding and more then any other crooked, after hauing made a very great and very faire Nooke, it entreth into the Sea with a mightie and great Point very high, from the which to Soez is three ſmall leagues iourney, theſe two Points, betweene the which the Nooke is contayned, ſtretcheth North-weſt and by North, and South-eaſt and by South, the diſtance is fiue leagues, the Land by the Sea coaſt of this Nooke is moſt high and rough, and therewith it is barren and drie, within the Nooke it is ſo deepe, that if we come not very neere the ſhoare, with fiftie fathome we ſhall take no ground, which ground is a ſoft ſand like Oze. This Nooke vndoubtedly, I hold to be the Gulfe which the Coſmographers doe call Elaniticus. But Strabo a Capadocian, and Ptolomie were deceiued in the knowledge and ſituation of it: for they placed it in the Coaſt of ſtonie Arabia, little more or leſſe, where now ſtands the Towne of Toro; and that this is ſo, the words of Strabo, which I repeated a little before in the Deſcription of the Towne of Toro, where the Arabicke Gulfe endeth, doe plainely ſay, to end in two Gulfes, one of them which ſtandeth on the Arabian ſide, called Elaniticus, and the other on Egypt ſide where ſtandeth the Citie of the Heroes. Ptolomie doth ſhew vs plainely the Gulfe Elaniticus to be in the Coaſt of Arabia, where now ſtandeth the Towne of Toro, whereof I cannot but wonder euery time I doe remember how Ptolomie was borne in Alexandria, where he wrote his Hiſtorie, and dwelt in it all the dayes of his life, which Citie is very neighbouring to theſe places.

The ſixe and twentieth, weighing preſently our Grapples, wee ſet ſayle; at eleuen of the clocke of the day we were faſt by the ſhoare, where we found all the Armie, and ſtriking our ſayles, wee rowed a little along the ſhoare, and caſt anchor; but two houres before Sunne ſet we weighed againe, the wind was at North, wee rowed along the Coaſt, and before Sunne ſet we tooke Hauen behind a Point which the Land of Arabia thruſteth out, where there is good being and harbour againſt the North winds: this day we went directly one league and an halfe, the point is ſhort of Soez, three ſmall leagues, it beareth with the North-weſt point of the great Nooke, which I ſaid to be the Gulfe Elaniticus, Eaſt and Weſt: there may be in the diſtance one league: from hence about halfe a league within the Land, ſtandeth the Fountaine of Moſes, of which I haue ſpoken alreadie, when I ſpake of Toro. And now, as ſoone as we were at anchor, we went on ſhoare, and we ſaw the end of this Sea, which ſeemed to vs alreadie infinite, and likewiſe the Maſts of the Ships, and all things gaue vs great content, and ioyntly with it great care. By night the wind was at North very hard, we lay all night at anchor till it was day.

Moſes Fountaine.

The end of this Sea, called by vs he red Sea, and by the Moores, Mecca.

The ſeuen and twentieth in the morning, the wind blew hard at North North-weſt, at ten of the clocke we departed from this Point, and made ahead to Soez, and to the end of this Sea, going along rowing, and being about one league from it, I went before with two Catures to ſpie or view the ſituation of Soez, and the place of landing, and wee came thither at three of the clocke in the afternoone, where wee ſaw in the field many troopes of Horſe-men, and in the Towne two great bands of Souldiers, they ſhot at vs many ſhots out of a Blocke-houſe. The Armie of the Turke was as followeth; that is, one and fortie great Galleys, and nine great Ships, hauing ſeene all theſe things, we went toward the Land of the Nooke, which is on the Weſt ſide, and came to an anchor neere the ſhoare in fiue fathome water, the ground was a ſoft ſand, and very ſmall, a very good harbour for ſhips: this day at Sunne ſet we ſaw the Moone.

Soez kept by the Turke with Garriſons.

The Nauie of the Turkes.

It is to be held for certaine, Soez to be called in times paſt, The Citie of the Heroes, for it differeth nothing in heighth, ſituation and confrontings, as we may ſee in Ptolomie Tab. 3. Africa, eſpecially, Soez being ſeated in the vttermoſt Coaſts of the Nooke where this Sea of Mecca endeth, in the which the Citie of the Heroes was ſeated, as it is read in Strabo the ſeuenteenth Booke, ſaying theſe words. The Citie of the Heroes and Cleopatra, which ſome doe call Arſinoe, are in the vttermoſt bounds or end of the Arabicke Sine, which is toward Egypt. Plinie in the ſixth Booke of the Naturall Hiſtorie, ſeemeth to call the Port of Soez, Danao, by reaſon of the Trenches, which they opened from Nilus to this Sea; Soez hath of eleuation of the Pole, nine and twentie degrees three quarters, and it is the neereſt Port and Towne of all the Streight to the great Citie of Cairo, called anciently Babylonia of Egypt, and from it to the Leuant Sea, where is one of the ſeuen Mouths of Nilus, called Peluſium, may bee fortie leagues iourney, which place is called Iſthmus, which is to ſay, A ſtraight or narrow Land betweene two Seas. Touching this way, the words of Strabo in his ſeuenteenth Book, are theſe. The Iſthmus that lieth betweene Peluſium and the Extreme, where the Citie of the Heroes ſtandeth, is of nine hundred furlongs. This is the Port of the red Sea, whither Cleopatra Queene of Egypt commanded the ſhips to be carried by land from the Riuer Nilus, after the victorie gotten by Cæſar againſt Anthonie, for to flee in them to the Indians; And likewiſe Seſoſtris King of Egypt, and Darius King of Perſia, did take in hand to open a Trench vnto the Riuer Nilus, to make the Indian Ocean nauigable with the Sea Mediterraneum, and none of them finiſhing the worke, Ptolomie made a Trench of an hundred foot broad, and thirtie foot deepe, which hauing alreadie almoſt finiſhed, it is ſaid, he left vnfiniſhed the bringing of it to the Sea, for feare that the water of Nilus would become ſalt, the water of the Streight mingling it ſelfe with it. Others doe ſay, that taking a leuell, the Architects and Maſters of the worke, did find, that the Sea of the Streight was three cubits higher then the Land of Egypt, and feared that all the Land would bee drowned. The Authors, are Diodorus Siculus, Plinie, Pomponius Mela, Strabo of Capadocia, and many other Coſmographers. Although the Towne of Soez was in old time great in name, at this day it is ſmall enough, and I beleeue it had alreadie beene vtterly loſt, if the Turkiſh Armie had not lyne there. The ſituation of it is in this manner, in the front and face of the Land which is oppoſite to the South, where this Sea endeth, is opened a Mouth not very great, by the which a Creeke or Arme of the Sea entring a little ſpace into the land, it windeth preſently along the coaſt, toward the ſetting of the Sunne, till a little Mountaine doth oppoſe it ſelfe, which alone riſeth in theſe parts, from the which to the mouth and entring of the Creek, the Creek and firme Land remayning on the North ſide, and the nooke and end of this Sea on the South ſide, and the little Mountaine to the Weſt, all the ſpace that is contained is a very long and narrow Tongue or Point of ſand, where the Gallies and Nauie of the Turke lie aground; and the warlike and ancient Town of Soez is ſituated, in which appeareth at this day a little Caſtle, and without two high and ancient Towers, as ancient Reliques of the great Citie of the Heroes, which was there in times paſt. But on the Point of ſand where the Creeke entreth, there ſtandeth a great and mightie Bulwarke of moderne worke, which defendeth the entrie and mouth of the Riuer, and likewiſe ſcoureth the Coaſt by the ſterne of the Galleys, if yee would land in that place: and beſides, there runneth betweene the Galleys and the ſtrand, a Trench with a Ditch caſt vp, which maketh a ſhew like a Hill, in ſuch ſort that as well by mens worke, as by the ſituation and nature of the ground, the place is very ſtrong and defenſible. Now conſidering this landing of the place for to enter into it, it ſeemed to me not to be poſſible in any place, onely behind the little Mountaine and Weſt ſide, for here we ſhall be free from their Artillerie, and poſſeſſing the Mountaine, Soez in times paſt, called the Citie of the Heroes.

The Port of Danao.

The Citie of Heroes and Cleopatra, which ſome call Arſinoe in the end of the Arabike Sine Iſthmo.

Babylonia or Egypt, or Cairo the great City.

Peluſio, one of 7. Mouthes of Nilus.

Trenches which the Kings of Egypt made.

Iſthmo is the ſpace of 40. leagues betweene Soez and Peluſio.

The manner of the ſituation of Soez.

A mightie Bulwarke of moderne worke.

it will bee a great meanes to get the victorie: but wee are to note, that along this Strand is ſhoaly about a Bow ſhot, and the ground a ſoft Clay and ſticking Sand, which I perceiued, feeling the ground from within the Foyſt, which is very troubleſome and preiudiciall to them that are to Land; touching the Antiquities and things I could know of Soez, they were told mee by ſome men of the Streight, eſpecially by the Moore that informed mee of the particulars of Toro, and all of them are as followeth, that is, that three leagues from Soez towards Toro, was the Fountaine of Moſes, and the Moores and Inhabitants doe confeſſe, that God gaue it vnto the Iewes by a Miracle; and alſo they haue in their memorie, that in this place there was a great Citie in old time, of the which they ſay, ſome buildings are yet to bee ſeene, they could not tell mee the name of it. They told me alſo that afore-time, the Kings of Egypt would haue made a Trench from Nilus, where the Citie of Cairo ſtandeth vnto Soez, for to make theſe Seas Nauigable, and that they are ſeene at this day, although the length of time had defaced them and ſtopped them vp, and that thoſe which trauelled from Toro to Cairo of neceſſitie ſhould paſſe by them; ſome told mee that the occaſion of this opening was not to ioyne the Straight with the Riuer Nilus, but to bring the Water to the Citie that was there. I asked them what Countrey was there betweene Soez and Cairo, they told mee that a very plaine Field, full of Sand and barren without any Water, and that from the one to the other was three dayes iourney going at leiſure, which was about fifteene leagues, and that in Soez, and round about it, it rained ſeldome, and when it chanced, it held on much, and that all the yeare the North wind blew with great force.

Cairo about fifteen leagues from Soez.

A deſcription of the Sea and Land, that goeth from Toro to Soez.

From Toro to Soez is eight and twentie leagues Iourney, without any Iland, Banke, or Shoald, that may hinder or doe any harme to the Nauigators, theſe eight and twentie leagues, lye in this manner: departing from Toro, through the midſt of the Current, yee run about ſixteene leagues North-weſt and by North, and South-eaſt and by South, and hitherto the Coaſt commeth in an equall diſtance and ſeparation, hauing from the one to the other, the ſpace of three leagues, but in the end of theſe ſixteene or ſeuenteene leagues, the Lands begin to cloſe very much, and to ioyne in ſuch ſort, that from Coaſt to Coaſt there is but one league, and continueth this narrowneſſe two leagues, and preſently the Land that commeth from the Abexij withdraweth it ſelfe, making the great and faire Nooke aboue ſaid; treating of the ſituation and place of the Gulfe called Elaniticus, the Channell in the middle diſtance, from the end of the ſixteene or ſeuenteene leagues till as farre as the North-weſt Point which commeth out of this Nooke, lyeth North North-weſt South South-eaſt, the diſtance is eight leagues, in this place the Lands doe Neighbour very much againe, for the Land of the Arabian thruſting out a verie long and low Point outward, and the Land that commeth from the Abexij, comming forth with another bigge and high Point, at the end of the Nooke on the North-weſt ſide, there remayneth from Land to Land one leagues iourney or little more, and from theſe Points to Soez, and the end of this Red Sea, the Coaſt on each ſide doe wind, and make another Nooke, which hath in length little more then two leagues and a halfe, and in breadth one and an halfe, where this Sea ſo celebrated in the holy Scripture, and ſpoken of by Writers, doth finiſh and make an end; this Nooke is extended through the midſt North and South, and taketh ſomewhat of the North-weſt and South-eaſt, the diſtance is two leagues and an halfe: as touching the Land that commeth along the Coaſt from Toro to Soez; wee muſt note, that a Caleeuer-ſhot beyond Toro on the Arabian ſhoare, there ariſeth a Hill very neere the Sea-ſide, which is all beſpotted with certaine red ſtreakes, which goe from one ſide to the other of it; giuing it a great grace, this Hill runneth ſtill along the Coaſt about fifteene or ſixteene leagues, but it hath not theſe workes, and red ſtreakes; more then ſixe leagues ſpace beyond Toro, and in the end of theſe fifteene or ſixteene leagues, the Hill maketh a great knob and high, and from thence by little and little, the Hill doth forſake the Coaſt, and goeth into the Land till it come within a league ſhort of Soez, where it endeth, and there remayneth from this bigge and high knob vnto Soez, betweene the Hill and the Sea, a very plaine and low ground, which in places hath a league in breadth, and in others neerer to Soez, a league and an halfe: By this Hill towards Toro, I ſaw great heapes of Sand along to the top of the Hill, reaching the higheſt of it, hauing no ſandie places betweene the Hill and the Sea, and likewiſe, by the Clifts and Breaches many broken Sands were driuen; whence I gathered, how great the force and violence is heere of the croſſe winds, ſeeing they ſnatch and driue the Sand from out of the Sea, and lift it ſo high; theſe croſſe windes, as I noted, the Sands did lye and were driuen, are Weſts and Weſt North-weſts.

The end of the Red Sea, or Sea of Meca.

But as touching the deſcription of the Land, that goeth along the Sea, on the Coaſt of Abexij, from as farre as Toro, wee muſt note, that there runne certaine great and high Hils or Mountaines very high, and ouer-appearing the Coaſt of the Sea, the which about ſeuenteene leagues beyond Toro toward Soez, doe open in the midſt, and deſcend equall with the Field, and preſently they riſe againe very high and continually along the Sea, till they come a league ſhort of Soez, where they ſtay and paſſe no further.

I conſidering with great diligence, the fluxes and refluxes of the Sea that lyeth from Toro to Soez, found them to bee no greater nor ſmaller then the other of theſe Coaſts of the Streight, but after the ſame manner. Whence appeareth the falſhood of ſome Writers, which ſaid the pathes were not opened to the Iewes through this Sea, but that the Water ebbed ſo much in this place, that it remained all dry, the which the Iewes tarrying for, had the paſſage free to the other ſide.

The tides from Toro to Soez all equall with other Ports of the Sea.

Conſidering alſo, whereby Seſoſtre King of Egypt, and afterward Ptolomie could make the Trenches and Channels from Nilus to this Sea, for to make it nauigable with the Eaſterne Sea. I ſaw it was not poſſible except by two places, which ſtand from Toro to Soez. The firſt, by the Breach which the Hils doe make that runne along the Sea, by the Coaſt that commeth from Abbexi, which Breach is ſeuenteene leagues beyond Toro, and eleuen before yee come to Soez. The ſecond, by the end of this Sea and Nooke, where the Towne of Soez ſtandeth. For in this place the Hils on both ſides doe end, and remaine all on Land and Field very low, without Hillocks or high Hils, or any other impediment. And in this place it ſeemeth to me more certaine and conuenient for to take ſo great a worke in hand, then by the breach I ſpake of, becauſe in this place the Land is very low, and the way ſhorter, and hath an Hauen heere: and beſides theſe two places, any where elſe I thought it impoſſible, becauſe as well on the one Coaſt as on the other, the Mountaines are ſo great and ſo high, the which are all, or the greateſt part of a Rock and hard ſtone, that it is not in the iudgement of men they may be cut, and bring through them a Channell or Trench that might be Nauigable. Whence it muſt remaine manifeſt, Soez to be the Port where Cleopatra commanded the Ships to bee brought by Land from Nilus, croſſing the Iſthmus, howſoeuer that a thing of ſo much labour and importance, in the which the breuitie was the greateſt part of the Nauigation. It was manifeſt that they would ſeeke the ſhorteſt, neereſt, and eaſieſt way they could find of them all. And becauſe this is that which commeth from Nilus, and the Citie of Cayro to Soez. Wee muſt make no doubt that this Nauy of Cleopatra was brought hither; and likewiſe the Trenches from Nilus, whereby they would communicate theſe Seas, eſpecially conſidering, how from as farre as Toro, all the Coaſt of Egypt is waſte, and without any Port, except this of Soez, which ſtands in the vtmoſt end of this Sea.

Cleopatra commanded the ſhips to bee brought by Land to Zoez, from Nilus, croſſing the Iſthmus.

Conſidering alſo in the dayes we ſpent betweene Toro and Soez, I ſaw that the Heauen was very cloſe ouer-caſt with very thicke and blacke Clouds, which ſeemed contrary to the nature and condition of Egypt: for in it, as all men affirme, it raineth not, neither doe the Heauens or the Ayre permit any Clouds, nor Vapours, but it may be that the Sea of his owne nature doth raiſe here theſe Vapours, and into the Land the Heauen may be free, and void of them, as we ſee in Portugall, that in the Citie of Liſbon the daies being cleere and pleaſant, and in Sintra, which is foure leagues from thence, are great ouer-caſtings, miſts, and ſhewers. Now this Sea contained from Toro to Soez, is very tempeſtuous and ſuddaine, for whenſoeuer it beginneth to blow from the North, which is the Wind that raineth in this place, though his force be not very great, preſently the Sea is raiſed ſo high, and proud, that it is a wonder, the Waues being euery where ſo coupled and like to breake, that they are much to bee feared. And this happeneth not becauſe of the little depth heere, for all this Sea is very deepe, and onely along the Coaſt that commeth from the Abexi, cloſe with the ſhoare it is a little ſhoally. About this Sea, I ſaw certaine Sea-foames, which by another name are called, Euill Waters, the greateſt that I haue ſeene, for they were of no leſſe bigneſſe then a Target, their colour a whitiſh dun. Theſe Sea-foames doe not paſſe from Toro downe-ward, as not willing to trouble or occupie a ſtrange Kingdome, but contenting themſelues with their ancient habitation, which is from Toro to Soez. And preſently going out of this place or bounds, there are infinite ſmall ones, and like the other, and they are bred and goe about the Sea; in the daies that I was in this Sea, contained from Toro to Soez, I felt by night the greateſt colds I can remember to haue paſt, but when the Sunne came, the heate was vnſufferable.

The end of the voyage to Soez.

The eight and twentieth of April, in the morning we departed from before Soez, toward Maçua. At Sunne ſet, we were one league ſhort of a ſharpe and red Pike, which ſtands ouer the Sea. This day we went about twentie leagues. By night wee tooke in our Sailes, and ran along the ſhoare with our fore-ſailes onely, the Wind blew hard at North North-weſt: Two houres within night we came to an Anchor neere the ſhoare, in three fathome water, the Heauen was very darke, and couered with many thicke and blacke clouds. The nine and twentieth in the morning, we ſet Sayle. At nine of the clocke in the morning, we entred in Toro, and came to an Anchor, but within a little while we weighed againe, and went to an Hauen about a league from thence, which is called, The Watering of Suliman, where wee tooke in Water, digging pits in the Sand, a ſtones caſt from the Sea, in which pits we found much water, though brackiſh.

Sulyman watering.

The thirtieth, in the morning wee departed from the watering of Sulman: halfe an houre paſt ten, we tooke Hauen in the firſt of the three Ilands which ſtand two leagues to the North-weſt of the Iland of Xeduam, and preſently I went a ſhoare with the Pilot, and we tooke the

The height of an Iland that ſtands beneath the Toro.

the Sunne, and in his greateſt height it roſe ouer the Horizon eightit degrees, a little ſcant. The declination of this day was ſeuenteene degrees, ſixe and thirtie minuts, whence it followeth, this Iland to ſtand in twentie ſeuen degrees & two third parts. The firſt of May, the ſun being vp we ſet ſayle. About Euen-ſong time we were with a great Iland, which hath in length two leagues, & thruſteth out a Point very cloſe to the firme Land, where betweene the firme Land and the Iland, is a ſingular good Harbor for al weathers, for all the ſhips of the world. The ſecond of May, at Sun ſet, we came to an Anchor in the Port of Goelma, a Port onely for ſmall Veſſels, ſafe from the North, and North-weſt. Within the Land a little ſpace, is a dry Brook, whereby in Winter the water of the floods, which deſcend from the Mountaines doth auoid, where digging a little, ye finde freſh water, and heere is a Well, though not very plentifull of water. This Port was called Goelma, which in Arabique, is to ſay, The Port of water, it lyeth to the North-North-weſt of Alcocer, the diſtance is foure leagues.

Açallaibe Port, two leauges beyond Xacara.

The fourth of May, we rowed along the ſhoare: almoſt Sunne ſet, we came to an Anchor in a Port, which is called Açallaibe, which ſtandeth beyond Xacara toward the South-eaſt two leagues. By night the wind was at North North-weſt, we lay all night at Anchor.

A Deſcription of the Port of Acallaibe.

Acallaibe is a ſmall Port, but very good, betweene Xacara and the blacke Hillocke.

A Deſcription of the Port Boba'el Xame.

Bohalel Xame is a great Port, wherein may harbour many Shippes, it is very deepe within. This place was called Bohalel Xame, becauſe within the Land dwelt a Badoil, very rich, which was called Bohalel, the which came or ſent to ſell Cattell to the Ships, which did take or come into that Hauen, and Xame, is to ſay, Land. And heere wee found an honourable Toombe within a houſe like a Chappell, where was hanging a Guidon or Ancient of Silke, and many Arrowes or Darts round about the Graue, and about the Wals and Cords a great quantitie of Bulls did hang. At the head of the Graue there was a Table ſtanding vpright, with a great Epitaph, and about the houſe, many Waters and Fragrant ſmelling things.

The Tombe of an Arabian.

I enquiring of the Moores and Arabians of ſuch a thing, I learned that here lay buried a very honourable Arabian, of the Linage of Mahomet, which croſſing theſe Coaſts, fell very ſicke, and in this Port ended his daies: and they made him this Graue as a man of ſo high a Genealogie. Where the Xarifes Iuda and great Prelats gaue Indulgences, and granted pardons to euery one that ſhould viſite this houſe. But the offerings and reuerence, which the Portugals did vnto it, was to ſacke the houſe, and afterward for to burne it, that no ſigne was left where it had beene. In this Port wee found great footing of Tygres, and wilde Goats, and other Beaſts which came all to the Sea, as though they came to ſeeke water for to drinke.

A Deſcription of the Land of of Badois, and of their cuſtomes & life. What Badoile ſignifieth. Troglodithas, or Badois.

The many times that I bring to the field the name and memorie of the Badois, and likewiſe the trauelling by their Coaſts and Countries, doth binde me to ſpeake ſome thing of them. Badoil, in good Arabique, ſignifieth a man that liueth onely by Cattell: theſe men, called Badoies, is properly the people of the Troglodithas, Ophiotoſagis, of the which Ptolomie, Plinie, Pomponius Mela, and other Authors doe write: the which Troglodithas or Badoies, doe liue in the Mountaines, and coaſts of the Sea, which are contayned from the coaſt of Melinde and Magadoxa, to the Cape of Guardafui, and from thence going inward to the Streight, they doe begirt and occupie all her Coaſts, as well on the one ſide as on the other, and turning againe outward on the Arabian ſide, they runne along the Sea to the Streight of Ormuz, and all theſe Lands may rather be affirmed to be occupied by them then inhabited.

The Badois, which is the generall name for the Itbiofagis or Eioſagis are wilde or ſauage. They haue no King.

The Badoies are wilde men, amongſt whom is no ciuill ſocietie, no truth nor ciuilitie vſed: They worſhip Mahomet, and are very bad Moores, aboue all other People they are giuen to Stealths and Rapine; they eate raw fleſh, and drinke milke; their habite is vile and filthy, they are greatly endued with ſwiftneſſe and nimbleneſſe; they fight on foote and horſe-backe, their weapons are Darts, they neuer haue peace with their Neighbours, but continually haue warre, and fight with euery one.

Thoſe that dwell along the Red Sea, from as farre as Zeila vnto Suaquen, doe fight with the Abexijs; and thoſe from Suaquen to Alcocer, haue warre with the Nobijs; and thoſe which inhabite from Alcocer to Soez, and end of this Sea, doe moleſt continually the Ægyptians. But returning by the Arabian ſide, by all the Coaſt of the Sea, that lyeth from Soez to the Streight of Ormuz, doe contend with the Arabians. Among the Badois there is no King or great Lord, but liue in Troopes or Factions; they permit no Towne in their Fields, neither haue they any certaine Habitation, for their cuſtome is to be Vagabonds, from one place to another, with their Cattell. Not onely doe they abhor Lawes and Ordinances, but alſo the Sutes and Differences that ariſe amongſt them, they will not haue them iudged by any Cuſtome, and they are content that their Xeque doe determine them as he liſt; their dwelling is in Caues and Holes, and other ſuch like habitations, but the greateſt part doe helpe themſelues with Tents and Boothes; their colour is very blacke, their language the Arabian, the reſt of their Cuſtome and Life, I omit.

The tenth of May, by day, we weighed anchor from the Port of Igidid. An houre before Sun ſet we faſtned on a Shoald, which ſtood about foure leagues from Farate toward the South. In this Shoald is an excellent Hauen, and it is ſo great, that wee could not diſcerne with our ſight the end of it, it lyeth almoſt Eaſt South-eaſt, and Weſt North-weſt, but it is very crooked and winding. The two and twentieth of May, 1541. by breake of day, we were one league ſhort of the great Groue, that ſtandeth foure leagues from Maczua, the wind was of the Land. About nine of the clocke it began to blow from the North North-eaſt, a faire gale. We entred at noone into the Port of Maczua, where we were receiued with great ioy and feaſt of our Armie. From the day wee entred in Maczua, which was the two and twentieth of May, to the fifteenth of Iune, the winds blew alwaies at North, North North-eaſt, and North North-weſt: but from the fifteenth of Iune, to the ſeuenth of Iuly, they blew Eaſterly, that is; Eaſt, Eaſt South-eaſt, and South-eaſt, many times they brought great ſtormes. The laſt day of Iune at night, we had a ſtorme from the South-eaſt of ſo much winde, that it droue the Gallions and they paſſed great danger of ſtriking a ground. This ſtorme brought much Raine and fearefull Thunders, and there fell a Thunder-bolt from Heauen vpon a Gallion, and comming downe by the Maſt, it raced it all: and likewiſe the ſecond of Iuly, wee had another ſtorme from the Eaſt very great, which vnfaſtned many ſhips, and laſted the moſt part of the day. From thence to the ſeuenth of Iuly, although we had other ſtormes, they were but ſmall: From the ſeuenth of Iuly, to the ninth of the ſame, the Wind came to the Land and brought two ſtormes from the Weſt, but the wind was not ouer-much.

A great Groue foure leagues from Maczua.

They lay at Maczua thirtie two daies.

A thunderbolt.

The ninth of Iuly, 1541. one houre after Sunne roſe, wee ſet ſayle from Maczua. The eleuenth of Iuly, by breake of day, we were two or three leagues ſhort of the Point of Dallaqua, that lyeth on the North-ſide, and betweene certaine flat Ilands which haue ſome Woods, and doe lye ſcattered on this ſide of the Iland; wherefore wee ſet all Sayles and went aloofe all that wee could to goe betweene two of theſe Ilands, the wind was almoſt North-weſt verie faire, we ſayled North-eaſt and by North, hauing doubled a Shoald we came to an Anchor: and two houres after noone we ſet ſayle againe, the wind about North North-eaſt faire, wee ſayled along the ſhoare of the Iland of Dallaqua. An houre before Sunne ſet, we were with an of Iland Sand very flat, which is called Dorat Melcuna, from the which to all parts there came out great Shoalds: Sunne altogether ſet, wee were a league ſhort of the Iland of Xamoa, and from the Point of Dallaqua, which ſtands on the Weſt ſide, and oppoſite to the firme Land of the Abexi, betweene the which and the Iland of Xomoa, is the moſt frequented Channell of thoſe which ſayle to Maczua. All the Coaſt of Dallaqua which we ſaw this day, is coaſted North North-weſt, and South South-eaſt, and it is all wonderfully low. The eighteenth, by breake of day, we ſaw the mouth of the Streight, and we might be from it three leagues, and we ſaw all the Armie lye at Hull, and preſently we ſet ſayle altogether.

Dorat Melcuna, a flat Iland of Sand.

Before we departed from the Arabique Gulfe, or Streight of Mecca, which is all one, it will be iuſt to ſpeake ſomething of my opinion, and of that which I haue ſeene, touching the reaſon that mooued the ancient men to call all this Sea, the Red Sea: and likewiſe, whether her colour doth differ from the other of the great Ocean, or not. Plinie in the ſixt Booke of the Naturall Hiſtorie, Cap. 23. rehearſeth many opinions, whereby the people called this Streight the Red Sea. The firſt is, that it tooke this name of a King that reigned in it, called Eritbra, becauſe Erithros in the Greeke, is to ſay, Red. Another opinion was, that of the reflection of the Sunbeames, there grew in this Sea reddiſh colour. Some held, that of the Sand and Ground that runneth alongſt it. Others alſo beleeued, that this water was Red of his owne Nature, whereby all this Sea got this name. Of theſe opinions the Writers choſe them that they liked beſt, and ſeemed moſt certaine. Now the Portugals that haue Nauigated this way in times paſt, affirmed this Sea to be all ſpotted with certaine red ſtrakes: the cauſe they attributed vnto it, is this. They ſaid, the Coaſt of the Arabian was naturally verie red, and that as in this Countrey there aroſe many ſtormes, and did raiſe great duſts toward the skies, after they were verie high, driuen with the force of the Winds, they fell in the Sea, and this Duſt being red, it did Dye the water of it, whereby it was called the Red Sea. When I came to Socatora, till I paſt all the Coaſts of this Sea, and ſet my ſelfe before Soez, I neuer left by day nor night, to conſider of theſe Waters, and viewing the colour and manner of the Countrey that goeth along the ſhoare: and certainly, I was not ſo troubled for any thing, as for the beſtowing my labour in obtaining the truth of the things, and to ſearch out the occaſion of them, and that I got of mine owne Induſtrie, and moſt clearely haue I ſeene many times, is as followeth. Firſt, it is falſe to ſay, that the colour of this Sea is Red, for it hath no difference from the colour that all the other Water of the Sea doth ſhew vs, and to ſay that the duſts which the winds doe ſnatch from the Land and driue into the Sea, doe ſtaine the Water where they fall, till now wee ſaw no ſuch thing, ſeeing many ſtormes raiſe great duſts, and driue them into the Sea, but not to change the colour of the Waues thereof. And to ſay that the Land ouer the Sea Coaſt is Red, they obſerued not well the Coaſts and Strands: for generally on the one ſide, and on the other, the Land by the Sea is browne, and verie darke, and ſeemeth ſcortcht: and in ſome places it ſhewes blacke, and in others white, and the Sands hath their owne colour, but onely in three places there are certaine pieces of Mountaines which haue certaine veines of Red, where Portugals

Whether this Sea of the Streight be red or no, and the cauſes wherefore they called it the Red Sea.

Opinions of the Red Sea.

neuer came, except theſe which now are here-away, which places are all farre beyond Suaquen, that is, toward Soez, and the end of this Sea; but the three hils that ſhew this red colour, are of a verie hard Rocke, and then all the Land round about that we can ſee, is of the common and accuſtomed colour. But the truth of theſe things is, that the Water of this Sea taken ſubſtantially, hath no difference of his colour; but in many places of it, the waues thereof came by accident to ſeeme very red, which is cauſed in this manner. From the Citie of Suaquen vnto Alcocer, which is, one hundred thirtie ſixe leagues iourney, the Sea is all thicke with Shoalds and Shelues, whoſe ground is of a ſtone, called Corall-ſtone, which groweth in certaine Trees and Cluſters, ſpreading one way, and another way certaine braunches, properly as the Corall doth, and this ſtone is ſo like vnto it, that it deceiueth any perſon that is not very skilfull in the growth and nature. The colour of this ſtone is of two ſorts; the one wonderfully white, and the other very red. In ſome places this ſtone lies couered with very greene Ozies; and in other free from this Herbe, which Slime or Ozies in ſome places, is very Greene; and in others it maketh a colour very like Orange-tawny. Now we muſt preſuppoſe, that the water of this Sea is clearer, eſpecially from Suaquen vpward, then euer was any, in ſort, that in twentie fathome water ye may ſee the ground in many places. This preſuppoſed, we are to note, that whereſoeuer that theſe Shoalds and Shelues did appeare, the water ouer them was of three colours, that is, Red, Greene, or White, the which proceeded of the ground that was vnder, as many times I ſaw by experience; for if the ground of theſe Shoalds was Sand, it cauſed that the Sea ouer it appeared white; and the ground where the Corall-ſtone lay couered with Greene Ozies, the water that couered it did giue a colour greener then the Weeds: but whereſoeuer the Shoalds were of red Corall, or of Corall-ſtone couered with red Weeds, it made all the Sea that was ouer it ſeeme very red; and becauſe this red colour comprehended greater ſpaces in this Sea, then the Greene or the White, becauſe the ſtone of the Shoalds was the greateſt part of red Corall. I beleeue it was the reaſon whereby it receiued the name of Red Sea, and not of Greene nor White Sea: Notwithſtanding, this Sea doth repreſent theſe colours moſt perfectly. The meanes that I had to obtaine this ſecret, was to faſten many times vpon the Shoalds, where I ſaw the Sea looke red, and commanded diuers to bring me of the ſtones that lay in the bottome, and the moſt times it was ſo ſhallow, that the Foyſt did touch: and other-whiles, that the Mariners went on the Shoalds halfe a league with the water to the breaſt, where it happened that al or the greateſt part of the ſtones they pulled vp were of Red Corall, and others couered with weeds like Orange-tawny, and the practiſe I had whereſeouer the Sea ſeemed Greene, & found beneath White Corall, couered with Greene Weeds: and in the White Sea I found a verie white Sand without any thing elſe whereof it might proceede. For ſome Saylers giuing relation of the Red colour that they ſaw in this Sea, as of the greater and moſt compendious of all, being ignorant of the cauſe, or not being willing to offer it, for to increaſe admiration to their Nauigations and Trauels: and ſeeing that men do not only know this Sea by the name of Red Sea, but doe beleeue that the waters are naturally red. I haue talked many times with Mooriſh Pilots, and curious perſons of Antiquities, which dwelt in ſome places of this Streight, about the name of this Sea: euery one did ſay to me, they knew no other name then the Sea of Mecca, and they wondred very much at vs, to call it the Red Sea. I asked of the Pilots, if they found ſometimes the Sea ſtained red with the duſts that the winds brought of the Land, they told me, they ſaw no ſuch thing. With all this, I reproue not the opinion of the Portugals, but I affirme, that going through this Sea more times then they did, and ſeeing all the length thereof, and they onely one piece, I neuer ſaw in the whole, that which they ſay to haue ſeene in the part.

Red Corall ſtone.

The ninth of Auguſt, we entred in the Port of Angedina, and remained there till the one and twentieth of Auguſt, that we embarked in Foyſts, and going directly to Goa, wee entred ouer the Barre thereof vnder Sayle: and our Voyage was ended, and this Booke.

CHAP. VII.

A briefe Relation of the Embaſſage which the Patriarch Don IOHN BERMVDEZ brought from the Emperour of Ethiopia, vulgarly called PRESBYTER IOHN, to the moſt Chriſtan and zealous of the Faith of CHRIST, Don IOHN, the third of this Name, King of Portugall: Dedicated to the moſt High and Mightie King of Portugall, Don SEBASTIAN of moſt bleſſed hope, the firſt of this Name. In the which he reciteth alſo the death of Don CHRISTOPHER of Gama: and the ſucceſſes which happened to the Portugals that went in his Companie.

Printed in Lisbon, in the houſe of FRANCIS CORREA, Printer to the Cardinall the Infant, the yeere of 1565.

A Letter of the Patriarch Don IOHN BERMVDEZ, to the King our Lord.

MOſt High and Mightie King, your Highneſſe ſaid to me few daies agoe, that you would be glad to know the truth, of what happened to a Captaine and people, which the King your Grand-father which is in Glorie, gaue vnto me for the ſuccour of the Emperour of Ethiopia Onadinguel, called* Presbyter Iohn, for to auoid the errours which ſome perſons doe write of this; inſomuch that euen in the Name they erre, naming him Don Paul, he being Don Chriſtopher his Brother. And others doe write, and ſay ſome things which did not paſſe in truth, neither did they ſee them. Therefore I, that ſaw it all, will tell you in briefe in this ſmall writing all that paſſed. The Lord keepe your perſon, multiply your young age, and proſper your Royall eſtate, Amen.

*So he calleth Atani Tingil before mentioned.

---

§. I.

Don IOHN BERMVDEZ elected Patriarch of the Presbyter, and ſent to Rome: His returne into Ethiopia: Arriuall at Maczua; The death of the Negus, entertainment of him and CHRISTOPHER of Gama, with the Portugall Forces by the Queene Regent.

A Faithfull and good Chriſtian, called Onadinguell, being Emperour in the Kingdome of Ethiopia, (vulgarly called Preſbyter Iohn) and the Patriarch of that Countrey, by name Abuna Marcos, being at the point of death in the yeere of our Redemption, 1535. The ſaid Emperour ſaid to the Patriarch, that he requeſted him, that according to their cuſtome, he before his death would inſtitute me for his Succeſſour, and Patriarch of that Countrey. And the ſaid Patriarch did ſo, ordering me firſt with all the ſacred Orders. The which I accepted with ſuch condition, that it ſhould bee confirmed by the chiefe Biſhop of Rome, ſucceſſour of Saint Peter, to whom wee all were to giue obedience. The ſaid Emperour anſwered me, that he was well contented: and moreouer he deſired me, that for my ſelfe, and for him, and for all his Kingdomes I ſhould goe to Rome, to giue the obedience to the holy Father: and from thence ſhould come to Portugall, to conclude an Embaſſage, that he had ſent hither by a man of that Countrey, called Tegazano, in whoſe company came the Father Francis Aluarez. After many troubles paſſed in the Iourney, I came to Rome, the Pope Paul the third gouerning then in the Apoſtolike Sea: the which receiued me with great clemencie and fauour, and confirmed all things as I brought them, and at my requeſt he ratified it all againe, and commanded me to ſit in the Chaire of Alexandria, and that I ſhould entitle my ſelfe Patriarch and Biſhop of the Sea.

Zaga Zabo the Frier mentioned in Aluarez.

From Rome I departed towards Portugall, where I came, the King your Grand-father of glorious Memorie, being in the Citie of Euora, who reioyced particularly at my comming, to conclude as he deſired, the Embaſſage which the Tagazano had brought, for hee had beene here twelue yeares, without concluding any thing through meere negligence. For the which the Emperour Onadinguel commanded me, that I ſhould take away his charge of Embaſſadour, and ſhould apprehend him, and carrie him a Priſoner with me. And therefore I brought him a letter from

Zaga Zabo his negligence.

His impriſonment.

Bermudez his Embaſſage from the Negus to the King of Portugall.

from the Emperour, the which I gaue him in Liſbon where he was, and he tooke it and kiſſed it, and reknowledged it to be true, and by it he acknowledged me for his Patriarch and Superiour, and kiſſed my hand, and gaue me his place, without ſpeaking any more words. I commanded to impriſon him with two chaines of Iron, on each arme one, after the manner of his Countrey: the which I tooke from him againe within a few daies, becauſe his Highneſſe intreated me. The Embaſſage which the ſaid Emperour demaunded, was his perpetuall friendſhip and brotherhood: and therefore he deſired him they would marrie their children interchangeably the one with the other; and that from Portugall a ſonne of his ſhould goe to marrie with a daughter of his, and reigne in his Kingdomes after his death, that this alliance betweene the Portugals and them, and alſo the obedience of the Pope might be greater and endure. And likewiſe, he ſent to requeſt him, hee would ſend him ſome men for to defend himſelfe from the King of Zeila, which vſurped his Kingdomes: and he would ſend him great ſtore of riches, for he could verie well doe it. And likewiſe to ſend him ſome Pioners for to cut a hill whereby already Eylale Belale his Predeceſſour did bring the Riuer Nilus, to bring it now alſo that way to annoy Egypt.

The King your Grand-father hauing taken counſell, thought good to grant mee that which I demanded, and commanded to giue mee foure hundred and fiftie Caliuer-men and Pioners, and that they ſhould diſpatch me that I might returne that yeere in company with Don Garcia of Noranya, which then went for Vice-roy of India. I fell ſuddenly ſicke, and the Phyſicians ſaid of poyſon: as it was ſuſpected the Tegazaua cauſed it to bee giuen mee. The chiefe Phyſician which then was, named Iames Lopez, cured me, and he which now is, Leonard Nunyes, and others, which his Highneſſe commaunded: for the which ſickneſſe, I remained that yeere in this Realme.

Anthonie Fernandes.

See Dam. à Goes of this ſiege, 1538.

Preſently, the next yeere, being recouered by the goodneſſe of God, I went in his Highnes Armie. I carryed alſo Anthonie Fernandes, and Gaſpar Suriano both Armenians borne, which by commandement of Presbyter Iohn, came to ſeeke mee, to the which his Highneſſe did many fauours. We arriued in India ſafely, at ſuch time as the Vice-roy Don Garcia, was come from Dio, with the Victorie which he had of the Turkes, Anthonie Selueyra, beeing Captaine of that Fortreſſe, the which Vice-Roy receiued vs with great ioy, and ſhewed me great honour, the Biſhop of Goa came to receiue me with his trayne in Proceſſion, with Croſſe on high, and carryed mee from the Sea-ſide vnto the Sea in a Chaire, which the King your Grand-father gaue vnto mee for that purpoſe: going next vnto me on the one ſide, the Vice-Roy Don Garcia, and on the other, Don Iohn Deça, Captaine of Goa, and re-knowledging me for Patriarch, gaue mee the honour due vnto my dignitie.

Stephen Gama Vice-Roy.

Maczua, or Macua.

The death of King Dauid.

In the meane-while, the Vice-Roy ſickned of a Fluxe, whereof hee dyed: and Don Stephen of Gama ſucceeded in his ſtead. The which I preſently requeſted to diſpatch me, and ſend me to the Presbyter Iohn with the ſuccour, as his Highneſſe had commanded, and he anſwered me, that he could not doe it, becauſe one hundred thouſand Crownes were not ſufficient to diſpatch mee or more, in hazard of neuer being recouered: and I anſwered him, that all that was nothing, for the Presbyter Iohn, which without miſſing it might ſpend a Million of Gold or more, for he hath innumerable riches. It was determined, that he in perſon ſhould tranſport mee: and preſently he commanded a good Nauie of Gallies and Gallions, and other ſhips well furniſhed, as for ſuch a Voyage was neceſſarie, and many choſen men, of the beſt that were in India. With the which Armie we came to the Port of Maçua in the Red Sea: where we found newes that the Emperour Onadinguel, was dead of his naturall death; of the which we all were very ſorrie, and I aboue all, as he whom it touched moſt.

Aba Ioſeph.

I encouraged my ſelfe, till there came from Presbyter Iohn two Friers, good religious men, one of them Prior Prouinciall of many Monaſteries, and a great man among them, called Aba Ioſeph, which went to Ieruſalem, and told vs how the Queene, and a Sonne and Heire of hers did maintaine their eſtate, and reſiſted their Enemies. This being knowne, the Gouernour Don Stephen ſaid vnto me, that I ſhould ſend to viſit them, as in effect, I preſently ſent by one Arias Diz, Tawnie man borne in Coymbra.

Arias Diz, a Mullato Portugall.

In the meane-time, the Gouernour like a good Gentleman, and willing to loſe no time, and beeing a Captaine of a valiant ſpirit, went with the Gallies that came in the Fleete, to the Port of Suez, for to take or burne the Turkes Gallies, which were in that Hauen, which he could not doe becauſe they were on dry Land.

Sixty fugitiues

Being there, tarrying the Gouernours comming, there fled from the Fleet ſixtie men in a Skiffe and a Boat to the firme Land, the which came to a Port of Land very dry and exceſſiue hot, and being willing to trauell into the Land, they found it ſo dry that they dyed for thirſt, and being thus pinched with neceſſitie, one Captaine of the King of Zeila, that was in that Countrey ſent to tell them, that he would ſend them Meate and Water, and would aſſure them their liues, ſo that they would giue him their Weapons: and they ſeeing they had no other remedie, and beeing pinched with need they gaue them: with which preſently they ſlue them all.

At that inſtant the chiefe Captaine ſent a Galley to Arquico, to ſeeke water, in the which he ſent alſo a thouſand Cotton Webs, for to change for Kine, or Beeues to eate: and they which carryed them going from Arquico by Land, where the Armie was; a Bernagais, called Noro, Captaine of the King of Zeila tooke them from them, & ſent word preſently to the chieſe Captaine, that the King of Zeila his Lord was Lord of all Æthiopia, and had wonne all the Countries of the Presbyter Iohn, therefore that he would make peace with him, and traffique with his Merchandize in his Countries, in the which there is much Gold, Iuorie, Ciuet, Frankincenſe, Myrrhe, and many other Drugges, and Slaues, wherein they might make great profit: and hee alſo would giue him ſtore of prouiſion, and would reſtore the Cowes that hee had taken, and would make amends for the ſixtie men that were ſlaine.

Commodities of Zeila.

I told the Captaine that hee ſhould not truſt the words of Moores, for they were falſe, and that they ſaid, was fained, to doe vs ſome harme; therefore that wee ſhould alſo vſe ſome ſlight with them, and it ſhould be this. That he would ſend him a Preſent, and with it words of thankfulneſſe for the good will that hee ſhewed vs, whereby he may thinke that he hath deceiued vs, and may be aſſured of vs: for by this ſlight we ſhall hinder his deceit. The chiefe Captaine did ſo, and commanded the Factor of the Armie to carrie to the Bernagaiz a Barrell of Wine, and another thouſand of Cotton Webs; the Wine for a Preſent, and the Webs for to change for Beeues: and that he ſhould tell him from him, that the other Webs, that ſeeing they were taken in good and lawfull Warre hee ſhould not ſpeake of them, and as touching the men that were ſlaine, that they deſerued not to be reuenged, for as much as they were Rebels and Traytors, and deſerued the death they had: and as touching Traffique and Peace, that for the preſent they were in the holy weeke, and could doe no worke, but as ſoone as the Feaſt was paſt, wee would doe that which he deſired, and would bring our Wares aſhoare for to traffque with them.

Sic ars deluditur arte.

The Portugals ſtratagems.

Hauing taken counſell againe, the chiefe Captaine commanded that the Boates ſhould not go aſhoare, becauſe no Moore or Blacke-moore might haue any meanes to goe thither, and giue him warning. And commanded the Souldier to be in a readineſſe, the ſecreteſt that they could: and that in the Boates, and the other light Veſſels that were in the Armie: in the which hee commanded they ſhould make no fire, becauſe they might not be perceiued: And commanded Martin Correa, that at ten of the clocke at night hee ſhould land with ſixe hundred men, and poſſeſſe the paſſages whereby they might eſcape, he went and killed ſome Turkes and Fartaquis, and tooke all the Carriage they had, which was but little, for he had no time to take any ſtore. The Bernagaiz of Zeila, when he ſaw the King ſet himſelfe to flight, hee likewiſe fled, and lighted vpon Martin Correa, where being knowne a Caleeuer-man killed him; and men comming to reſcue him were many of them ſlaine, Foot and Horſe, and the reſt ſaued themſelues by flight. Our men thought good to cut off his head, and ſend it for a Preſent to the Queen, wherewith ſhe reioyced very much; ſhee ſent a great man of her Countrey, called Eſmacherobel Tigremacan, to the chiefe Captaine, and to me, to giue vs thankes.

The King of Maczua flyeth, and the Barnagaſſo is ſlaine.

As ſoone as the Gouernour Don Stephen came, hee gaue order preſently to diſpatch and ſend me to the King and Queene, and becauſe they vnderſtood alreadie, that the Enterprize was of honour and profit, many did couet it more then before: among the which, one was Don Chriſtopher Gama, Brother to the Gouernour: who deſired mee very earneſtly, that I would giue him the charge of all the men that he was to carrie, for he would goe with me. Preſently there came where I was, Don Iohn of Caſtro, * Don Manuel of Lima, Don Payo of Noronja, Triſtram of Tayde, and Manuel of Soſa, and I granted their requeſt, and gaue him the command of the men for Don Chriſtopher: of the which they were all contented and ſatisfied, and the Gouernour gaue me thankes for it. And preſently hee commanded to enroll the men that hee gaue mee. So foure hundred men, among the which, there went many Gentlemen, and men of account, which beſides the number limited, carryed Seruants, which increaſed the number and profited very much.

Returne of the Vice-Roy from Soez.

* This is hee which had bin with the Vice-Roy in the bottome of the Gulfe, and did write that former Rutter.

Peter Borges Henriques, was before appointed Captaine.

Beginning to order our departure, there came the Chriſtian Bernagaiz, which had beene there alreadie, and brought ſome Camels, Mules, and Aſſes for to beare the Carriage, and alſo for ſeruice and to helpe. I commanded the Bernagaiz, and the Tigremacan, that they ſhould command to bring vs ſome victuals and refreſhing for all the Armie: which commanded to bring many Beeues, Muttons, Goates, Butter, Honey, Millet, Figges and Quinces, and other things in abundance.

The Gouernour with all the Gentlemen of the Armie came to Arquico, where they requeſted me to giue them my bleſſing: the which I gaue them on Gods behalfe, to whom I recommended them, and they went to Sea, and we remayned on Land very ſolitarie. And beginning to trauell, within three dayes we came to Debarua. Within a few dayes they vſed Schiſmaticall and Hereticall Ceremonies, differing from the Romane. I ſatisfied the beſt I could, Don Chriſtopher and his men, and the murmuring ceaſed, and they concluded how to carrie the Ordnance when they iourneyed. They made preſently certaine Carriages like vnto ours: the which, becauſe in the Countrey there was no Iron, they ſhod them with certaine old Caleeuers, which brake, becauſe they would ſerue for no other vſe.

The Vice-Roy and the Pat. part company.

Barua.

Want of Iron.

I ſent to the Queene, who came with all ſpeed poſſible: whom we went to receiue out of the Citie, Citie a league, with all the men of Portugall in Warlike order, and Ancients diſplayed with Trumpets, and as well the Kings as of the Captaines. I ſay of the King, becauſe wee had Ordnance, whereof ſhe was amazed, being a thing vnaccuſtomed. The firſt thing ſhe did, as one that had a reſpect vnto the things of God, ſhe receiued my bleſſing: and preſently receiued Don Chriſtopher with great entertainment and honour, giuing him many thankes, that hee would vouchſafe to take that Enterprize, and charge to defend her from her Enemies. From thence we went to the Citie, and the next day we heard all Maſſe, and wee gaue order that Proceſſions ſhould be made, in the which we all went, and the Queene alſo, with two Infantas her Siſters in-law, and a little Princeſſe her Daughter, which ſhe brought with her, deſiring all of God with great Deuotion and many teares, that he would vouchſafe to heare vs, and giue vs the victorie of his Enemies and ours.

---

§. II.

Don CHRISTOPHER and the Portugals Warre on the King of Zeila, and hauing in two Battels preuailed, in the third are ouerthrowne. A new Captaine appointed. Don CHRISTOPHERS reſolution and death. Mountaine of the Iewes.

DEparting from Debarua, we went eight dayes by rough Countries: at the end of which wee come to plaine grounds, and very well inhabited, and better then they paſt, but in them there dwelt Chriſtians, which for feare did follow the Moore: which as ſoone as they knew our comming, went preſently to Don Chriſtophor, and gaue him obedience. At the end of three dayes, we came to a very pleaſant field, and in it a Fountaine of faire water: in the which we pitcht our Campe round about the Fountaine.

Goranya King of Zeila. Some call him Gradame, Godignus cals him Gragna, which varietie happens by the different pronuntiation of ſo different a Language. Prouoking Preſents.

The next day there came a Meſſenger to vs from Goronya, King of Zeila; with ſome of his men in company, and asking for the Captaine of thoſe men, ſaid vnto Don Chriſtopher, that his King ſent to aske him who he was, and from whence hee came, or who gaue him leaue to enter in his Kingdomes with men of warre: for thoſe Realmes were his, and hee had wonne them by his Lance, and of his Gentlemen, with the helpe of his Prophet Mahomet: therefore if wee would become Moores, and ſerue him, hee would entertaine them well, and giue them his wages: And moreouer, Wiues and Goods to liue vpon: and if not, that wee ſhould preſently auoid his Countrey, and goe out of it. Don Chriſtopher anſwered him, that he was a Captaine of the King of Portugall, by whoſe commandement hee came with thoſe men for to reſtore the Kingdomes of the Presbyter Iohn, which hee tyrannouſly hath vſurped, and to take them out of his hands, and giue them to whoſe they were. And with this meſſage he ſent him for a Preſent, a Looking-glaſſe, and a paire of Mullets to pull the haire with, and an Egge of Siluer of Pegu, ſignifying, that thoſe things pertayned to him. And to the Meſſenger hee gaue two Bracelets of Gold, and a very rich Sute of Cloth of Gold, which things the Queene had giuen to him; and he gaue him alſo a Cypres of Bengala, and a Turkiſh Caſſock with his vpper Garment: this by my counſell in diſgrace of the Goranya, rayſed preſently his Campe, and beganne to march toward the place where we were with one thouſand Horſemen, and fiue thouſand foot, and fiftie Turkes Caleeuer-men, and as many Archers.

Don Chriſtopher commanded to place the Queene (who was very fearefull) and the women with all the Carriage in the midſt of the Squadron. The Moore when hee ſaw vs goe vp a Hill (whereon ſtands the Church of the Ladie of Pitie) wheeled vpon vs to take the height from vs; and he came alreadie ſo neere vnto vs, that the ſhot began to fight on both ſides. When I ſaw the Battle was begun, I called ſixe Portugals, and with the Queene and her Siſters in-law I was going aſide, and in this I knew the Mooriſh King, which came neere to his Antient on a Bay Horſe, and I ſhewed him to Peter Deça a Gentleman, and a good ſhot: which ſhot at him and ſlue his Horſe, and hurt him in the legge. His men came about him, and ſet him on another Horſe, and tooke him from that place. Our Captaine Don Chriſtopher was alſo hurt in his legge; and I commanded the Steward to ſet vp the Queenes Tent in ſigne of victorie. The Moore had inuironed vs on euery ſide, when they ſaw vs ſetting vp Tents, and their King hurt, they began to retyre, and goe after their King, which withdrew himſelfe with the paine of the wound toward a Mountaine that was neere to that place to be cured.

At this inſtant there came to vs a Moore that had been a Chriſtian, Couſin German to the Bernagaiz, and told vs how the King was hurt in his legge: and how great a fauour God had done to vs therein, for if it had not beene ſo he had taken vs all, without doubt, but that God miraculouſly had deliuered vs from his hands: and that therefore hee with all his men did returne to vs, and would ſerue vs and pay the Tributes that vnto that time they payed to that King: and that he went preſently to his Countrey for to ſend vs Beeues and Prouiſion for our Campe: for hee was Captaine and Gouernour of all that Countrey where we were: the which belonged to the Presbyter, and he alſo: and when the King of Zeila conquered it, hee yeelded vnto him, and now that he ſaw him ouer-come, he returned to vs againe, whereby he ſeemed to be a man of, Liue he that ouer-commeth.

Tempora mutantur & nos mutamur in illis.

In the meane while, it pleaſed God that Don Chriſtopher healed of his wound; but we ſuffered great hunger, for there was very little prouiſion in the Campe, and the people died with hunger. Don Chriſtopher went to the Queene, and told her, that the people ſuffered great hunger, and that they had need to eate all they found, notwithſtanding it was Lent, that it would be good to kill the Beaſts, that they had in the Campe, for to eate: and with this requeſt, they came both to my Tent, praying me that I would giue the people leaue to eate fleſh in Lent, becauſe of the neceſſitie there was: and beſides, the Queene requeſted me, that I ſhould giue her my Oxen that I had for my carriage, to giue them to the people, and as ſoone as her Captaine aforeſaid came, ſhee would ſatisfie me, which would ſtay three dayes: and ſo it was, for he preſently came with great ſtore of prouiſion, viz. Beeues, Sheepe and Goates, Butter, and other prouiſions for Lent, and for Eaſter, which was alreadie at hand.

Scarſitie.

Fleſh in Lent.

As ſoone as Eaſter was paſt, the Goranya ſent word to Don Chriſtopher, that he would come to ſee him, that he ſhould prepare himſelfe; which he did as he had ſaid. He came to ſeeke vs, with more and better men then before he brought: for, he had aboue two thouſand Horſe, and infinite number of foot, and an hundred Turks: for the which, the Queene was in ſuch a feare with her Siſters in law, that they knew not what to doe, in ſuch ſort that being at Dinner, as ſoone as they knew the comming of the Moore, they would haue left Dinner. Don Chriſtopher being the next day ordering his men, before day, for to ſet vpon the Moores; the Queene ſent for me, and ſaid to me, that ſhee ſaw the great power that the King Goranya brought, and that it was impoſſible to ſcape his hands if we ſtayed, therefore that ſhee deſired me that we ſhould be gone, for ſhee had ſo determined, and that in any ſort ſhee would doe it; therefore that ſhee requeſted me very earneſtly, that I would not let her goe alone, ſeeing I was her Father, but I ſhould accompanie her, and goe with her. And I, to ſhew her the loue that I bare her, and that ſhee ſhould not thinke that I eſteemed not her life, granted her requeſt, and we both interpriſed the flight. But Don Chriſtopher, which was alreadie warned for that purpoſe, ſent after vs ten Horſe-men, and ſome Foot-men, crying aloud, and ſaying, that it was neither ſeruice of God, nor the worke of a Father, to goe away and leaue them. Hearing theſe wordes, Shee by my meanes returned to the Campe weeping and bewayling her ſelfe. There Don Chriſtopher ſaid vnto me, that as a Father and Prelate, according to the good cuſtome of the Portugals, he requeſted me that I ſhould giue him my bleſſing, and ſhould make him a generall abſolution before he entred into the battell. I did ſo, and granted him a plenarie Indulgence of all his ſinnes: which I might doe, becauſe the Pope had granted it me, and was the ſtile of the Patriarchs of Alexandria. From thence we remoued with our Campe, by the breake of day, downe the Hill, and marched till we came to a Plaine; and preſently, with great furie, they aſſaulted our ſtandings on euery ſide. Our men defended themſelues with the Ordnance and Fire-works, wherewith they annoyed them very much: and before they came, they had caſt a great quantitie of powder in the wayes, whereby they were to come vp; the which, when they were in the heate of the battell, was ſet on fire, and it burned them, proceeding vnder their feet, they not knowing from whence it came, they vnderſtood not the ſtratageme. Our men did caſt among them certaine Balls of wilde fire, and Pots full of powder, wherewith they burned the greateſt part of them, and the other retyred with feare, and durſt come no more neere vs. The Ordnance killed many of the Horſe-men, and of other People, that the Field was all full of them, and the Horſes ranne maſter-leſſe about the fields. The Turks with their Peeces and their Bowes, killed vs twentie men, and the maſter Gunner. Our men killed fifteene Turks. The Queene was next to me, embracing a Croſſe, and weeping, and ſaid vnto mee; O Father, what haue you gayned in bringing me hither? Wherefore did you not let me goe my way? I ſaid vnto her: Lady, doe not afflict your ſelfe; commit your ſelfe to God, and open your eyes, and you ſhall ſee the great deſtruction that is done in your enemies.

The Queenes feare.

Indulgence.

The ſecond battell.

Fierie ſtratagem.

At this time the Foot-men began alreadie to flee, and the Horſe-men durſt not come neere, but skirmiſhed a farre off; and the King ſaid to his men, that the Portugals were no men, but Deuills, for they fought like Deuills. And with this he retyred himſelfe towards the Hill, and left his Campe.

The victorie.

We gathered our Campe, and went forward as faſt as wee could, but they fled as faſt as they could, and wee could not ouer-take them. But wee found many Abexins on foote and horſebacke which returned to vs, which afterward were baptized, and loyall to their King. Of whoſe returne, the Queene and we all were as glad as of the principall victorie. We came to the campe of the Moores, which we found forſaken without any people, but wee found in it all the ſpoile, for the feare which Saint Iames put them in, gaue them no leiſure to take any thing away. Wee found it with Tents vp, and in them Apparell, Houſe-hold ſtuffe, Mony, and other riches, and ſtore of prouiſion, which were very needfull for vs, for it was alreadie very ſcant. Here wee ſtayed, and let the people reſt two dayes.

Great ſpoile.

Nazaretha Countrey appertayning to the Patriarch.

This Countrey and all the borders, is called the Prouince of Nazareth, and it is of the Patriarchs, their owne proper with all iuriſdiction, without the King entermeddling in it by any meanes, neither hath he any Rent thereof. It yeeldeth for the Patriarch three thouſand ounces of gold euery yeere, the which King Thedrus appropriated vnto them, for a certaine offence that he committed againſt a Patriarch.

From the Campe wee drew toward the Mountaines, where the King Goranya with-drew himſelfe, and pitched our Campe in a field, at the foot of the Mountaine, inuironed with the carriages of the Ordnance.

The Turke ſolicited.

The Moore ſent to Zebide to a Baſſa of the great Turke which was there, to aske him ſuccour, ſaying, that he ſhould ſuccour him, and not ſuffer thoſe Kingdomes to be loſt, which were all of the great Turke, and he held them for him, and that in token thereof, hee ſent him one hundred thouſand Oquies of gold, and twentie thouſand for his perſon. An Oqui is a waight of gold, which in that Countrey is worth as much as ten Crownes or Cruzados in this, and weigheth as much. We with-drew our ſelues, while we knew what paſſed, to a ſtrong Mountaine, the which was compaſſed on euery ſide with Rocks and Crags, in ſuch ſort, that in it there was ſcarce a way for foot-men. For to carry the Ordnance and other carriage, was needfull to make a new way, the which the Captaines of the Countrey made with their men, and it was ſo ſtreight, and ſo rough, that the Ordnance could not bee carried vpon the carriages, but they carried it on their backs with Leauers. Aboue was a Plaine where wee pitched our Campe. From thence the Queene ſent through her Prouinces, and I alſo through mine, that they ſhould bring vs ſtore of victualls, and other prouiſions neceſſarie, of which we were preſently well prouided, and the wounded were well cured.

Mountaine of Iewes.

The Iewes purſue the Moores.

Being there well lodged, Don Chriſtopher ſaid vnto mee, that wee ſhould remoue to a higher Hill which was neere from thence, becauſe the Armie might be more ſafe; and that in the meane while he would goe to a Mountaine, which was neere from thence, inhabited with Iewes, in the which was a Captaine of the Moore with an hundred and fiftie Horſe, as we were aduertiſed. And being gone with the Portugals, and ſome few of the Countrey, for to ſhew him the wayes; hee left with vs two Portugall Captaines with his men. As ſoone as hee came to the Mountaine, he ſet vpon the Moore, and killed ſixtie Horſe-men, and tooke thirtie Horſes, the reſt fled. The Iewes, inhabiters of the Mountaine, purſued after the Moores, and taking the paſſages of the Mountaine, which they knew very well, they killed them almoſt all, and among them the Captaine, and tooke all the ſpoile they carried, and the women, which they brought all to Don Chriſtopher, and gaue it him for a preſent, with the head of the Captain, which they brought alſo; and among other Gentle-women which were there, the wife of the Captain Moore was very faire, the which Don Chriſtopher tooke for himſelfe. And becauſe two of his Captaines did looke too much vpon her, he was jealous of them, and tooke away their charges, they being as they ſaid blameleſſe.

Sixe hundred Turks ſent to aide the Moore.

Beades bleſſed.

Don Chriſtopher being in the Mountaine of the Iewes, the Mooriſh King came to ſeeke vs with ſixe hundred Turks, which the Baſſa ſent vnto him, and two hundred Moores on horſe-backe, and a great number on foot: and comming to the foot of the Hill where we were, he pitched his Campe. From thence he ſent a man of his with a Boxe of pedlarie ware to our Campe, to ſell Beades and looking glaſſes, and to tell Don Chriſtopher that his Maſter was a Merchant, and came behinde, and would not tarrie three dayes, with very good merchandize that hee brought to ſell him. This came to light vpon George of Abrewe, and Iames of Silua, that remayneth with vs, and kept the entrie of the Mountaine, which tooke away his Beades, and brought them vnto me, and I bleſſed them, and gaue them to the women and deuout perſons, granting many pardons to them that did pray vpon them, becauſe that their mockage might redound to the praiſe of God, and the profit of his faithfull. We ſent in all haſte to call Don Chriſtopher, which was not come from the Mountaines. Meane while, the Turks in deſpight of our men entred the Mountaine, and did vs much hurt. Preſently that night after they were entred came Don Chriſtopher, and ſent preſently for the other Captaines, to take counſell with them what were beſt to doe; which told him, that it were beſt to ſet vpon the Moores by night: for when the forces are not equall in ſtrength, the weakeſt haue need to vſe ſome policie; and this is one of the beſt we can vſe with them, for the manner of the Turks is not to fight by night, in ſo much that come out of their Tents they dare not. And beſides, we ſhall take them on a ſudden and vnprepared, and we ſhall ouerthrow them before they can come to themſelues: and for the more amazing them, we will aſſault them on two ſides. This counſell ſeemed not good to Don Chriſtopher, becauſe mutable Fortune was willing to change her courſe; and God, to make an end of ſenſualities, which at ſuch times, men that are Chriſtians, ſhould not remember. Don Chriſtopher ſaid, that he would giue battell to the Enemies by day, becauſe they ſhould not thinke that he was afraid of them, wherein he preuailed, though none liked his counſell.

The vnfortunate battell.

As ſoone as it was day they went all downe, and before they ſet any thing in order (becauſe the miſfortune was to haue ſome beginning) by a miſchance, a Horſe of ours brake looſe, and ranne towards the Moores Campe, they came out to ketch him, and our men went out to defend him, and in this ſort the fight began without any order or gouernment. This skirmiſh laſted a great while; in the which many Moores and Turkes died: and likewiſe of ours there died ſome; among whom Don Garcia of Noronia was one. The Ancient-bearer of Don Chriſtopher fought with the Ancient Royall, like a valiant Gentleman, and in his defence ſlue ſome of the Enemies, and wounded them ſo fiercely, that they durſt not come neere him, vntill that for wearineſſe he could fight no longer; then they ſlue him. Don Chriſtopher was wounded with a ſhot in the arme, of the which, although he ſuffered great paine, he left not therefore the battell till very late, that hee found himſelfe almoſt alone, then hee retyred to the top of the Mountaine with ſome few that he found about him. Before he retyred, I ſeeing the ſpoyle of our men, ſaid to the Queene that ſhe ſhould mount, and goe to the Mountaine: and becauſe ſhee would not leaue ſome women that had not whereon to ride, I made her mount perforce, and one ſiſter-in-law of hers and ſo I ſent them before, and I tooke her daughter behind me.

Don Chriſtopher hurt.

Lamentable and deſperate act.

A Nurſe of the Queene, a vertuous woman with two daughters, and other women, tooke a barrell of Powder; ſaying, God forbid, wee ſhould bee deliuered to the power of Infidels, they brought it into the Tent; ſet it on fire and burned themſelues. The like did fifteene or ſixteene men which came ſore wounded from the battell, and could not trauell. I went away with the Girle that I had behind mee where her mother was, which thought ſhee had loſt her alreadie, and when ſhee ſaw her ſhee gaue great thankes to God. Wee went a little farther into the Mountaine, and there we made another ſtand, tarrying for more men, and for Don Chriſtopher, for whom the Queene was very ſorrie, and wee all were very ſad for his not comming, doubting he was dead or captiue. Being in this doubt, we ſaw him come hurt, as I ſaid before, in an arme, with great paine of the wound; for it ſeemed he had the Bullet within. The Queene commanded me to cure him with a little Balme that ſhe had, for to mitigate his paine; and ſhee tooke a Vaile from about her head, and tore it, and bound his arme therewith. But he tooke no reſt, for he remembred more the loſſe and diſhonour, then the paine of the wound: and ſaid, that hee had better beene ſlaine, then to haue loſt the Kings Standard; and that ſeeing it remayned in the power of his Enemies, that hee would not liue. I anſwered him, that hee ſhould not vexe himſelfe ſo much, for with his life and health hee would recouer againe (God willing) that which then hee had loſt: for ſo wee ſaw it fall out euery day in matters of warre, &c. And as touching the Ancient, in that Countrey they tooke no ſuch regard of it; and that preſently they would make ſuch another, hauing men to fight vnder it, and a Captaine to gouerne them: for the men are the true Ancient, and not the ſigne which they carried.

Don Chriſtopher diſconſolateneſſe.

Wee made him mount, and went from thence, and with all ſpeed wee paſſed two Riuers ſo great, that the Foot-men waded to the breaſts. Wee trauelled till we came to the Riuer of the Draw-bridge, which they had told vs, which was ſo deepe, that it could not be paſſed but by that Bridge. There Don Chriſtopher ſaid to me, that he would not paſſe the Bridge, but would remaine on this ſide the Riuer: and called preſently his ſeruants, which tooke him downe, and ſet him vp a Bed whereon he caſt himſelfe. He called me, and requeſted that I would ſhriue him: hauing ended his confeſſion, he ſaid vnto me, that his will was to remaine there: I ſaid vnto him, that I would not ſuffer it, and commanded thoſe that were there to take the Bed, and to carrie him in it as he was, and he ſaid that he would kill himſelfe if they carried him from thence. When I ſaw his determination, I ſaid vnto him, that I would remaine with him: he anſwered me, that I ſhould not doe it; for I was neceſſarie for to gouerne thoſe men, that they might not altogether be loſt, and therewith all that Countrie: but that I ſhould leaue him a little Balme for to dreſſe him with, and that his Chamberlaine, his Secretarie, and other three Portugals, with which he would goe hide himſelfe in a Groue that was there. I could neuer vnderſtand to what end he remained.

From thence I went to the Queene, and deſired her to mount, and that we ſhould paſſe on the other ſide the Bridge; for it drew towards day, and our enemies would come: ſhee anſwered, that in no wiſe ſhee would doe it, nor paſſe any farther, ſeeing Don Chriſtopher remayned there deſolate. But I deſired her to mount, ſaying to her, that not onely ſhee, but her ſonne with all his Kingdomes would be loſt if we tarried there. And with this the Queene mounted, weeping, and ſpeaking ſo many dolorous words, as ſhee could haue vttered for her owne ſonne, if he had remayned there. Wee commanded all the men to goe with the carriage, and all the people with the greateſt haſte poſſible: and before we had paſſed we heard a rumour of Men, and noiſe of Horſes, for the which we made great haſte to goe ouer, and drew the Bridge after vs. By this time it was alreadie day, and we beginning to goe vp the ſide of a Hill on the other ſide, we ſaw many Moores about the place where Don Chriſtopher remayned: the Queene, when ſhe ſaw them, was greatly afraid, and ſaid that wee could not eſcape. Her men told her that ſhee ſhould not feare; for ſhee was alreadie in her owne Countries. Notwithſtanding, wee went on with all haſte poſſible for to loſe them out of ſight: and we trauelled all that day, paſſing many Mountaines and Riuers with great trouble, and heat of the day. There was by thoſe Riuers great ſtore of Caſſia Fiſtola, and Indian Dates, whereof our men did eate, for they had no other food. Finally, we came to a Riuer ſomewhat big, where the people caught ſome Fiſh, which they did eate while the Captaine of that Countrie came with victuals, which preſently brought great ſtore: And there we began to reſt, for we were alreadie in a ſure Countrey.

Or Tamarindos.

Alfonſo Caldera made Captaine.

Wee wanted fortie Portugals: To the reſt that remayned, which were few more then three hundred, I made my ſpeech thus, and ſaid vnto them; that they ſaw very well that it was neceſſarie to giue them a Captaine, that might gouerne them and fight before them, ſeeing wee knew not what might become of Don Chriſtopher, remayning as hee was willing to bee left. They anſwered me, that I ſhould doe what I thought beſt; for they would hold it for very well done, and would obey whom I ſhould command and ordaine. I declared vnto them, that I elected for their chiefe Captaine, one Alfonſo Caldera, borne in Coimbra, a diſcreet and valiant Gentleman: the which all receiued with a good will, except ſome Gentlemen, which becauſe they were of Nobler bloud, thought that charge rather belonging vnto them. Theſe murmured ſomewhat of that which I did: but did not leaue their obedience. I made alſo a Sergeant, and a Iudge, to looke to the Souldiers, that they did no wrong to the people of the Countrey; or betweene themſelues, one to another.

Don Chriſtopher di Gama taken priſoner.

His reſolution.

His Letter.

There came to vs Iohn Gonzales, and Aluaro Deniz, which remayned with Don Chriſtopher, of whom the Queene demanded what was become of Don Chriſtopher: they told vs, how they being hid in the Groue where they remayned, there came a woman fleeing from the Moores, and came into the ſame Groue, and the Moore comming after her, found Don Chriſtopher: and asked him who he was, and he told them that he was Don Chriſtopher: whereof they were ſo ioyfull, that they could not beleeue it: and they called an Eunuch which had beene ours that came there, and asked him if that was Don Chriſtopher, and if he knew him well: and hee ſaid, it was he without doubt, for he knew him very well. They preſented him to their King, which alſo was very glad to ſee him. And after demanding ſome things of him, he ſaid, that if he would become a Moore, that he would doe him much honour. Don Chriſtopher anſwered him ſmiling, that he was the ſeruant of Ieſus Chriſt, whom he would not change for a lying Dog. The King hearing what he ſaid, commanded to giue him a boxe on the eare, and to pull him by the beard. He deſired him with great Oathes and promiſes that he would write to his companions, that they ſhould leaue Preſbyter Iohn, and returne to their Countries: and he ſaid, that he would doe it. And preſently he wrote a Letter, according to the will of the Moore: the which ſent the Eunuch aboue-ſaid, that he ſhould looke well what Don Chriſtopher did write: and he did ſo, therefore Don Chriſtopher wrote that which the Moore commanded, and no other thing: but ſet two thornes in his name, by the which he ſignified, that they ſhould looke what they did. With this Letter of Don Chriſtopher, the Gorania ſent two Moores of his to our Campe, and they gaue it to me.

The Queene, when ſhee ſaw it, remayned almoſt dead, thinking that Don Chriſtopher had written that Letter of purpoſe, and that it would ſomewhat auaile among the Portugals, by whom, vnder God, ſhe truſted to haue her Kingdomes reſtored: and ſhee tooke very ſtrangely that deed of Don Chriſtopher. But after that we declared vnto her the deuiſe of the thornes that came in his Firme, ſhee was glad, and tooke it in good part; and euery one praiſed him very much. Finally, the chiefe Captaine Alfonſus Caldera, in his owne name, and in the name of all his companions the Portugals, anſwered to Don Chriſtopher, that he ſhould giue many thanks to the King Gorania for his good will: but that they would not receiue of him that fauour, neither did they doubt that they ſhould ſtand in need of it, rather to the contrarie, they hoped with the helpe of Ieſus Chriſt their God, to finſh the act; whereunto the King of Portugall their Lord had ſent them thither, which was, to take or kill him, and deliuer from his tyrannie, the Kingdomes of Preſbyter Iohn.

Don Chriſtopher beheaded.

This Letter being deliuered to Don Chriſtopher, hee carried it to the Moore, and hee ſhewed him not therefore the worſe countenance, for hee thought that Don Chriſtopher had written faithfully, he asked him alſo wherewith he had cured himſelfe, and he ſaid vnto him, that hee could make a certaine Medicine wherewith the wounds were very quickly cured: and the Moore deſired him to cure with it his Captaine generall, which was ſore wounded: and he cured him with ſuch Medicines, that the Dogge liued but three dayes. For the which, the Moore commanded to giue him many ſtripes and blowes, and ſaid, that hee would command to kill him. Don Chriſtopher anſwered him, that he could doe him no more hurt then to kill the bodie, for the ſoule God had power ouer it: and that hee was very certaine, that Ieſus Chriſt would receiue his into euerlaſting life. The Moore commanded that they ſhould carrie him to the place where the other Portugals died, and that there they ſhould cut off his head. The which head of Don Chriſtopher, that King did ſend for a Preſent to the Gouernour of Cairo: and one of his quarters he ſent to Iuda: another to Aden: and one legge to the Baſſa of Zebide, which ſent him the ſuccour aboue-ſaid. So much doe they eſteeme in that Countrey, to ouercome a few Portugals.

All the reſt of the bodie of Don Chriſtopher remayned there where they killed him: and from thence certaine Religious men carried it to their Monaſterie which was neere to that place, and doe hold it in great reuerence with eſtimation of a Saint: for preſently, and many times after, did God ſhew by manifeſt Miracles, his labours to bee acceptable and meritorious before Gods Diuine Maieſtie, his death precious, and his ſoule glorified. Preſently, as ſoone as they cut off his head, God ſhewed a great and manifeſt Miracle by him: which was, that in the place where they ſlue him, there ſprung vp a Fountaine of running water, which had neuer been ſeene there, whoſe water giueth ſight to the blind, and cureth ſicke perſons of other diſeaſes, by the goodneſſe and power of God. This Miracle is much like to that which God did in Rome, for his Apoſtle Saint Paul. The Reliques of the bodie of Don Chriſtopher doe ſmell, yeelding ſo ſweet a ſent of themſelues, that it ſeemeth rather heauenly then of the earth.

Miracles, if any be ſo prodigall of Faith to beleeue them. I adde them to let men ſee the probabilitie of other their miracles in India. In other things where they aduantage not their fancies, I beleeue them as men: theſe which looke to Rome and ſuperſtition, incredulus odi.

From thence the Mooriſh King went toward a Kingdome, called Dembia: whereby the Riuer Nilus paſſeth, and maketh a Lake, which hath in length thirtie leagues, and fiue and an halfe in breadth. In this Lake are many Ilands: Aſmache of Doaro, called Obitocon, which is to ſay, Don George, and Aſmache of Guidmi, ſubiects of King * Gradeus, came with one hundred and fiftie Horſe-men, and one thouſand Foot-men. The Captaine conducted them vnto the Queene, which receiued them louingly, and asked whence they came; and they ſaid, that they came from the Campe of Gorania, and that they departed from him there where they killed Don Chriſtopher, the Moore going towards Dembia. The Queene asked them for the death of Don Chriſtopher: and they told her the manner which wee alreadie knew.

A Huge Lake. Io. Gabriel ſaith it is 60. miles long, and 25. broad.

Wee comming to the skirt of the Mountaine of the Iewes, their Captaine came to vs with victuals and refreſhings, and ſaid to the Queene, that ſhee ſhould come vp to the Mountaine: for in no place of that Prouince ſhee could bee ſurer then in that Mountaine; which had no more then one entrance, and that might eaſily be kept, and defended from the Enemies, if they came. This Captaine of the Iewes demanded Baptiſme: and as ſoone as we were on the Mountaine, and had pitched our Campe, I baptiſed him, his wife, and his children. The Captaine Alfonſus Caldera was his God-father: and they named him Don Chriſtopher. From thence Alfonſus Caldera went with ninetie Portugals, and ſome of the Countrie to forage ſome Townes which in that Countrey ſtood yet for the Moore: and they killed much people, burned the Townes, and brought great ſtore of Cattell. Two honeſt old men ſeeing this, in the name of all the people, came to aske mercie of the Queene, ſaying, that they were hers, and were Chriſtians, and that perforce they obeyed, and payed their Tributes to the Moore: and likewiſe for need, becauſe they had none to defend them from the Iewes of the Mountaine, that did euill neighbourhood: therefore that it would pleaſe her Maieſtie to forgiue them, which ſhee did.

Supplies from the Negus.

* The Gradeus by Godignus is called Claudius.

A Mountaine of Iewes.

Captaine of the Iewes baptiſed.

§. III.

Comming of GRADEVS the yong Negus, his reiecting the Patriarch and Pope: their reconciliation and battell with the Moores, in which GORANIA was ſlaine, and after him the King of Aden.

AT this time came Arias Diz, which Don Chriſtopher had ſent to viſite the King, the ſonne of Onadinguell, and of this Queene, called Orita aureata, and the ſonne was called Gradeus. This did not yet follow the Campe with his mother, becauſe he was very young. This meſſage brought Arias Diz, that the King would bee with vs within two moneths. The two moneths almoſt paſt, wee departed from the Mountaine of the Iewes, where we were, and went to other Mountaines in another Prouince, whither the King came within eight dayes, accompanied with fiftie Horſe-men and many on Mules: All the Captaines went to receiue him a little way off the Campe, with all their men, Portugals, and of the Countrey, and accompanied him into the Campe. Entring into the Campe he went preſently to my Tent, and there hee alighted to take my bleſſing. I came to the doore to receiue him, which he eſteemed greatly: for in that Countrey they hold the Patriarch in that eſteeme that here we doe the Pope. From thence he went to ſee the Queene his mother, and withdrew himſelfe, and mourned three dayes for Don Chriſtopher. He commanded his Tent to be ſet vp in the midſt of the Campe.

Gradeus the young Negus.

Some few dayes being paſt, before we medled in any other thing, I ſent to call the Captaine Alfonſus Caldera to my Tent, with the other Captaines and honourable perſons of the Portugall Nation in the Armie, and ſaid vnto them.

My moſt louing children, and moſt Chriſtian Portugals, I remember well, that a few dayes agoe, being in Debarua, ſome of your charities moued with a good zeale, did miſlike ſome Rites and Ceremonies, which the people of this Countrey doe vſe, differing from the Romane cuſtomes. A great Nation cannot be cleanſed of all the Cockle and Tares which the Deuill ſoweth in it; euen as a field can-

The Patriarch Bern. his Speech to the Portugals.

The King acknowledged head by this Patriarch: only except the Popes caſe, and they ſay the ſame with vs. But then one head may bee cut off to pleaſe the other.

not be weeded of all the Weeds and Thornes that grow in it: for if wee ſeeke to weed them cleane, we ſhall alſo pull vp the Wheate among the Weeds, as Chriſt ſaith in the Goſpell. It is enough to doe now the principall, which is the obedience an vniting of the holy Mother Church: this is the Fountaine of all the reſt, from hence depend all the other circumſtances. This hath her foundation in the Head, which is the King. As ſoone as the King ſhall obey, all the reſt will follow him.

Comming to the Kings Tent, I found him with his Mother, whereof I was very glad, and ſaid to him theſe words.

His ſpeech to the Negus.

Moſt louing Son in Ieſus Chriſt: You know, that the moſt Chriſtian King your Father which in glorie deſired mee that I would goe to Rome, for mee and for himſelfe to giue the obedience to the chiefe Biſhop: and if you doe not remember it for your tender age, ſee heere a Letter ſigned by him, which hee gaue mee that the chiefe Biſhop ſhould giue me credit, and know that was true which I ſaid to him on his behalfe: which as I ſay, was to tell him that your Father did acknowlege him to be the Succeſſor of Saint Peeter Prince of the Apoſtles of Chriſt, and Vicar of his vniuerſall Church, it is alſo reaſon you ſhould ſucceed him in knowledge, in vertues, and in the feare of God. Therefore, you conforming your ſelfe with the will and Ordinance of God, and imitating the vertue and knowledge of your Father, ought to giue the obedience to the holy Father the Romane Biſhop: for therein ſhall yee doe that which God commandeth, and ſhall haue for your Friends and Brethren, and helpers in your neceſſities, the King of Portugall, and all other Kings his Brethren and Friends.

The Kings Anſwere and refuſall.

Why the Weſterne Chriſtians are called Frankes. You may reade noted before in Aluarez.

They conceiue wee beleeue foure Gods, becauſe wee hold two Natures in Chriſt which they following the Eutichians and Monothelite hereſies denie.

To the which hee not regarding what hee ſaid, like a youth of little age, anſwered thus. You are not our Father, nor Prelate, but you are Patriarch of the Frankes, and are an Arrian which haue foure Gods: and hence forward we will call you no more Father. I ſaid vnto him againe, that hee lyed, for as much as I was no Arrian, neither had foure Gods: but ſeeing he would not obey the holy Father, that I held him for excommunicate and accurſed, and that I would ſtay no longer nor ſpeake with him, and with this I roſe to goe away: and hee anſwered me, that I was the excommunicate and not hee.

From thence without any more ſpeaking to him, I went to the Portugals, which ſtood without the Tent, and told them what paſſed, and how the King would not obey the Romane Church, but that hee was an Hereticke like Neſtorius and Dioſcorus: therefore, I commanded them in vertue of obedience, and vnder paine of Excommunication of my part, and in behalfe of the King of Portugall (whoſe authoritie I had for it) vnder paine of capitall crime, in no wiſe they ſhould obey that King, nor follow him, nor doe any thing in his fauour. Alfonſus Caldeyra, and all the reſt ſaid, that their Fathers and Grand-fathers were neuer Rebels to the Church of Rome, nor to their King, neither would they be: therfore, that I had no need to lay an Excommunication vpon them, but that I ſhould ſuſpend it, for they without it would doe all that I ſhould command, as obedient children. And from thence they all accompanied me to my Tent, and they went to their Lodgings.

The Patriarcks Speech to the Portugals.

Their reiecting Gradeus his gift.

Within a little while the King ſent a Captaine of his, to carrie three thouſand ounces of Gold to the Portugals, to diuide among themſelues and a rich of aduantage for the Captaine, and deſired them not to leaue him, but to helpe him againſt his Enemies, as they had done thitherto. They anſwered him, that as for that time they would not receiue the fauour that hee ſent them for the difference betweene him and mee, nor to the reſt, that hee ſaid they could anſwere no other thing, but that in all things they would doe that which I ſhould command them.

An Archbiſhop made by the Patriarch.

The Queenes mediation.

With this anſwere they tooke counſell, and agreed that the Queene ſhould come with an Arch-biſhop, which I had made, and all his Captaines to my Tent, to aske me pardon, I would command, and giue the obedience to the Pope. The Queene came and deſired me in honour of the Virginitie of our bleſſed Ladie Virgin, before, in, and after the Conception, that I would goe with her to the Tent of her Sonne, which was very faire, for that which hee had done, and ſaid to me, that he would aske mee pardon and obey mee in all things. I anſwered her, that I would not remoue from thence, but the way to Portugall with the Portugals my children, and companions. At this Anſwere, ſhe kneeled on her knees before me, weeping, and ſaid vnto me, that ſhee charged me on Gods behalfe, that I ſhould not doe ſuch a thing: but that I ſhould goe with her, for all ſhould be done as I would. I, moued with pitie and compaſſion, went with her: and comming to the Kings Tent, he came forth to receiue vs, and with great humilitie hee tooke my hand and kiſſed it, demanding me pardon for that which hee had ſaid to me. And wee three ſitting downe, he ſaid, that he was contented to obey the chiefe Biſhop: and that the obedience which his Father had giuen by me was ſufficient. But I anſwered him, that it was not ſufficient: but that he particularly ſhould giue for himſelfe the like obedience, for ſo was the cuſtome of our Countries, that euery King when he newly reigned did ſend his Meſſengers to giue particularly for himſelfe the obedience to the Pope, whereſoeuer he was: and that ſeeing he ſent not to Rome, as his Father did, that he ſhould giue it to mee in the Popes name, for I had commiſſion from his Holineſſe, to receiue it of him. And beſides, he ſhould giue a publike Teſtimonie ſigned by him, and ſealed in his name, and of all his Kingdomes and Prouinces, confeſſing in it, that the Truth of the Faith is this: that the Church of God is only one, and his Prelate the Vicar of Ieſus Chriſt is alſo one alone, through all the Earth: by whom the Power and Iuriſdiction of Ieſus Chriſt extendeth to the other Prelates, and Chriſtian Princes. The which Writing, one of the principalleſt men of his Kingdome, ſtanding in a high Place or Chaire, ſhould reade with a high and cleere voice, before all the people that were there with him. He did ſo, and commanded it to be done with ſolemne Pompe and ſound of Trumpets.

Ius

The truth of Popiſh faith: or a new Article added to the Creed, to beleeue the Papacie.

This being done, within a few dayes, the Captaine Alfonſus Caldeyra running a Horſe, had a fall; of the which within a few dayes he dyed. Alfonſus Caldeyra beeing dead, I tooke counſell with ſome principall men of the Portugals, and we thought it good, to make Arias Diz chiefe Captaine, becauſe he was a diſcreet and a good Gentleman: which had diſcharged himſelfe wel in ſome important matters, which had beene committed to his charge. Eſpecially, becauſe the King Gradeus deſired it of me, I ſent to call him, and deſired him that he would take that charge vpon him. Hee tooke it, and promiſed to doe in it to the vttermoſt of his power.

Arias Diz or Diaz, made Captaine or Generall of Portugals.

Within a few dayes the King ſent me word, that hee would goe through his Countrey with his men, becauſe we could not be there altogether, wherefore hee deſired mee to remaine there with his Mother: and I anſwered him not, becauſe I vnderſtood that he would flye away. The King ſent preſently after me the * Azaige of Gallan, that with all reuerence and courteſie ſhould ſay to me, that the King my Sonne did ſend to requeſt me, that I ſhould ſend him thither the Captaine Arias Diz with all the Portugals, for ſo it behooued for the ſeruice of God: I anſwered him, I would doe it with a good will. There remayned with mee ſixe Captaines of the Countrey, with two hundred Horſe, one thouſand Targeters, and fiue hundred Archers, and fiftie Harping Irons, with their Hookes all very cunning in Armes. Euery Horſeman carryed three ſorts of weapons. With all this people I came to the skirt of the Mountain, where Goranya was, & cauſed to pitch my Tent very neer to the hil, and neer vnto it, all the Campe with Feaſts and ſhowtings, and ſounding of Trumpets, as they are wont to do in Camps. The horſemen skirmiſhed, and the Footmen reioyced, and ſaid, We will all dye for the Faith of the Sonne of God. Our men entring into the Mountaine, went preſently to a Towne neere from thence: in the which they found no people, but found ſome prouiſion, eſpecially, Wine made of Honey in many pots of Earth, of the which two heedleſſe men did drinke and dyed ſuddenly, for the Moores had poyſoned and left it, for to kill our men. Our people ſeeing the two men dead, would not drinke of the Wine, but broke the Veſſels and ſpilt the Wine: and returned from thence.

The Kings flight.

* A proper name of a Ruler.

Poyſoned Wine.

With theſe newes, I ſent preſently two Horſemen to the King, that hee ſhould come in all haſte to poſſeſſe himſelfe of that Countrey, before the Moore came; for I was alreadie going to hinder the comming of the Moore, and to take the paſſages whereby he was to come. And I ſent to the Captaine Arias Diz, by a Portugall, to tell him that I ſtood in danger of encountring with the Moore, that he ſhould preſently come to me. The King doubted the Iourney, and would not come: but Arias Diz ſaid vnto him, that it neither was nor ſeemed good, the Portugals to bee ſlaine in his defence, and for to reſtore him his Kingdomes, and hee to runne away and leaue them. Arias Diz being departed with the Portugals, the King tooke counſell to goe after him: and ſet forward in ſuch haſte that he ouer-tooke them before night. And altogether trauelled ſo much that night, that they came to our Campe before it was day-breake.

As ſoone as it was day, I left them which came wearie, and with the people that I had before began to aſcend the Mountain before the Moore came, becauſe they hauing that Mountaine, was a great part of the Victorie. We went by ſuch narrow wayes, that wee could goe but two and two, and by Rockes and rough places, that had any bodie fallen from thence, had beene cruſht in a thouſand pieces. We came to the top, by Gods aſſiſtance, and came to a Monaſterie of Friers, which was on the Mountaine, which was of the Inuocation of Saint Paul. The Friers came out to receiue vs in Proceſſion, with the Croſſe on high, and cenſing with Cenſers, and leade vs to the Church to make our Prayers, and giue Thankes to God for the ſuccour hee had ſent them. Prayers being ended, the Captaines pitched their Campe, and reſted. When the King knew that we were aboue, hee commanded his people to tarrie behind, and hee came with the Portugals, neere to the Ancient of the King of Portugall, leauing his owne. It might bee an houre before Sun-ſetting when he came vp, and his men came within night, for all the day was ſpent in comming vp to the Mountaine. So troubleſome it is to aſcend.

Monaſtery.

All the Armie prayed, and did ſing Letanies, praying to God that hee would giue vs the victorie, and to our Ladie, and to all the Saints that they would pray to God for vs. The Religious men did the ſame in their Monaſteries, and the people in their Townes. At this time there came innumerable people to ioyne themſelues with vs, from the Prouinces and Countries round about. We ſaw from the top of the Mountaine, the Moores of Goranya his Campe goe skirmiſhing in the fields that were beyond the Mountaine, and heard them ſay: Before foure dayes be paſt, yee ſhall all be ſlaine, and your King ſhall be gelt, and ſhall be Keeper of the King of Zeila his Wiues: and the Patriarch that brought you hither, ſhall haue a toſted ſtake thruſt through his fundament, that may paſſe through his necke, and come out at his head. The Generall of the Abexines asked leaue of the King to goe with ſome people to skirmiſh with thoſe Moores, and hauing gotten leaue he was ſhriuen, and went downe with foure hundred Horſemen, with the which after hauing killed many Moores, he went ſo farre from his men that the Enemies compaſſed him round, and beeing very wearie, and wounded ſore, they tooke him, and before they killed him, they cut off his priuie Members, for ſo doe that people vſe, and afterward they killed him.

The Abbaſsine Generall ſlain.

The death of this Captaine grieued the King ſo much, that hee wept publikely, and rent his haire: to the pulling off his Crowne, and hurling it on the ground. In the meane ſeaſon, they came to tell him, that the King of Zeila was come, and pitched his Campe at the foot of the Mountaine, as one that determined to come vp. King Gradeus hearing the great noyſe of the Ordnance, which reſounded through the Mountaines, tooke ſo great a feare, that hee determined to flie.

The Bernagaiz vnderſtanding what the King determined, came in haſte to call me at the Monaſterie where I was, and ſhewed mee on the tops of the Mountaine, much people of the Abexines in armes, ſaying to me, that all thoſe were doubtfull, and if they ſaw that wee ſuffered any detriment, or knew that the King did leaue vs, that they all would bee againſt vs, and would ouerthrow vs. Therefore it behooued me to be preſent, for to ſtay the King, and encourage the people: and that might not ſeeme, that I abſented my ſelfe with diſtruſt. I left preſently the Monaſterie, and went with him to the Campe: and the people that were on the Mountaines, when they ſaw me, made a great ſhowt, and ſaid; Seeing the Abuna goeth, the Victorie is ours. Comming where the King was, I ſaluted, and ſaid vnto him. Hope in the mercy of God, which redeemed vs by his precious bloud, that hee will giue vs the Victorie. And ſtaying no longer, I went preſently where the Portugals were, to whom I ſaid. Sonnes, commend your ſelues to the Lord, and doe like your ſelues. And I commanded them to kneele downe there, and Euery one to ſay the Lords Prayer fiue times, and I did the ſame, in praiſe of the fiue principall wounds of our God and Redeemer Ieſus Chriſt, and I granted them all a plenarie Indulgence, giuing the bleſſing of God and mine.

Gorania ſlaine.

The King and his people, when they ſaw vs ſet forward, were amazed at our great and determinate reſolution, and ſtood on a high place, where they diſcouered all the Campe, for to ſee what we did. The Moores ſeeing vs come forwards, reſolued to come and meete vs: We going downe the Hill, Goranya the King of Zeila came before his men, mounted on a white Horſe, all in a complete Armour, and two Turkes with him on each ſide one: and comming neere vnto vs, within Caliuer ſhot, all three ſtood aſide as they came, to giue place for his men to fight. In this ſpace, one Peter of Lyon, which had beene Seruant to Don Chriſtopher, a very low man of ſtature, but a very good Marke-man, and deſirous to reuenge his Maſters death, ſhot at him, and ſtrucke him dead from off his Horſe. The ſame day did others to the other two which came with him, and killed them likewiſe, ſhooting at them. The Moores, when they ſaw their King dead, ſome turned their faces, and ſome ſtayed them, in ſuch ſort, that they were troubled, and hindered one another, that they neither fought nor fled: our men ſeeing their diſorder and confuſion, ſet vpon them and ſlue many.

At this time came in King Gradeus his men, and the Moores and Turkes forſooke the Campe and the field: In the which our men found great Riches, Prouiſion, and Ordnance, and other weapons and furniture. They found the Turkes which then came by the way, with Wallets full of Bread and ſodden Hennes, and others dead with the bit in their mouthes, and found their purſes full of Money of their pay, which they a little before had receiued. They tooke here the King of Zeila his Sonne; the Queene fled to the Prouince of Dagua. They entred a good way into the Countrey of Dembia, whence they brought alſo many Silkes and Bedens, and Fotas of Ormuz, and rich Couerlets. The King Gradeus ſeeing the great and miraculous victorie which God had giuen him, commanded a Monaſterie to bee built very richly, in the place where the battaile was fought, in praiſe of the ſecret of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Vaine glorious foole.

And becauſe it is not well that the baſe Spirit of an Abexine do paſſe without noting, which would haue gloried of that which he did not, and enioyed the labour of another; I will tell what he did. A Captaine of King Gradeus, which ſaw the King of Zeila ſlaine, went vnto him and cut off his head, and went to preſent it to his King; ſaying, That he had killed him, becauſe hee ſhould giue him the reward that therefore hee deſerued, which was very great: for that death, was the principall cauſe of the victorie vnder God, and of the reſtoring of thoſe Kingdomes. The King was very glad to know who had ſlaine his enemy, and thanked him heartily, and made him beſides Captaine Generall of all his Kingdomes. But the Captaine Arias Diz, which knew the truth, and was preſent when the Abexine brought the head, and knew beſides, that Peter of Lyon had kept the left eare of the Mooriſh King (which he cut off when he ſlue him) ſaid to the King: I beſeech your Highneſſe, command to ſearch the head how many eares it hath: they looked and found but one alone. Arias Dez ſaid, A better Gentleman then that, hath kept the other which wanteth, which killed him, and cut it off, when you all looked from the Mountaine what we did, and that other did counſell you to runne away; and ſent preſently to call Peter of Lyon, that he ſhould bring the eare of the Mooriſh King: Hee came and ſhewed the eare, which appeared well to be the fellow of the other. And moreouer, Peter of Lyon ſaid, That the Abexine ſhould ſhew the weapon wherewith he ſlue him, and what wounds he gaue him, to the which he anſwered nothing: Then ſaid Peter of Lyon; Let them goe ſeeke the dead bodie, and they ſhall find that he was ſlaine with a ſhot, with which the Abexine cannot ſhoote: they went to ſee, and found it to be true, whereof the King and all his men were much aſhamed, and that his Captaine in great diſgrace.

We reſted there neere two moneths: while we were there, the King ſent the newes of the victorie to his mother, which was a daies iourney from the place where we left her: and he ſent her word, that ſhe ſhould come where we were, that we might all reioyce and giue God thanks together, and to congratulate mee, becauſe I gaue order to that which was done, and was the cauſe of that victorie. The Queene comming within a league where we were, the King knew it, and without telling me any thing, went with his Horſemen to meet her. The way whereby ſhe was to come into the Campe, for the ſpace of a Bow ſhot, was hanged with Curtaines of Silke, and Teſters of the ſame, and on the ground rich Couerlets. They gaue meate in abundance to all that would haue it; and this laſted one whole weeke. The Queene comming by the way, ſhe came to ſee me to my Tent, and asked me, What euill was it ſhe had done to mee, that I being her Father, went not to meet her with her Sonne: I anſwered, That the fault was not mine, but her Sonnes, which would not take me with him, neither told me any thing.

A diſſention amongſt the Portugals about their Captain, is here omitted.

The Queenes comming and entertainment.

Hauing paſt ſome daies, the King determined to goe and recouer the Prouinces of Maro, Ioa, Guidime and Goiame, which the King of Zeila had in his power, and gaue order to beginne the Warre in the Confines of Ioa, which is a great and rich Kingdome; and ſaid, that I and his Mother ſhould remaine, taking our reſt in his Countries. The King departed with all the Armie, as well of Portugals as of his owne men, to a Countrey called the Monaſterie of Sion: where there are very tall men of ſtature, which ſeeme Giants. Theſe as they were yet vnder ſubiection of the Moores of Zeila, would not obey King Gradeus, although they were his, neither would they giue him prouiſion for his men. Alfonſus of France ſeeing their diſloyaltie, ſaid to the Captaine Arias Diz: What doe you Sir? Wherefore do we ſtay longer on theſe, but enter them perforce. They ſent for the two Faukonets, with the which, and with the ſmall ſhot they aſſaulted them, and peppered them in ſuch ſort, that they ſaid, the Portugals were no humane men, for they fought not like men. Finally, they choſe for their beſt Market to yeeld themſelues, and ſent to tell the King, that they deliuered themſelues into his power. And they alſo requeſted him, he would command the Portugals, not to take from them their Wiues, and their Daughters, nor ſteale their Goods, for they had heard that they vſed ſo to doe.

Countries reduced.

Tall men like Giants.

They yeeld.

Being there, the King of Aden ſent word to the King Gradeus, That hee ſhould not thinke that the King of Zeila was dead, for he remained in his ſtead, and becauſe he ſhould not thinke that thoſe were words of a Cow-heard, which threatneth and doth nothing, he would preſently come to ſeeke him. Departing from thence, they marched ſo long, till they came to a very great Riuer, where they marched to meete the enemy, and to paſſe the Riuer, they inuented a good inuention of Leather Boats, which they made in this ſort. They killed many Beeues, and with the skinnes lined the Boats of Wood, in which they paſſed the men: the Horſes did ſwim ouer, for it was not ſo deepe to hinder the paſſage. This being done, men went ouer to faſten ſome Cords on the other ſide, for to paſſe ouer by them: This they did halfe a league diſtant from the Campe of the enemies, and by night that they might not be ſeene. Hauing paſſed ouer the Riuer, they ſet vpon the Campe of the enemies, of the which they killed many, and among them the King of Aden, But there dyed alſo many Chriſtians, and King Gradeus was alſo hurt, and like to haue beene ſlaine, with the great diſorder that hee and his had, becauſe they knew not how to fight by night: for they diſperſe themſelues through the Campe, and could not keepe together, nor helpe themſelues, and therefore many of them were ſlaine. The Moores ſeeing that their King was ſlaine, ſet themſelues to flight; The Portugals followed the chaſe of the Moores, till they ſlue the moſt part of them, and brought backe againe the Kings wife of Aden: and the King gaue them great thankes, and praiſed God highly, for that ſo great and aſſigned victorie; and ſaid, that he would haue of all, no more but the Sword and the Horſe of the King of Aden, and that all the reſt ſhould bee the Portugals, as well that which they tooke in the purſute, as that which they found in the Campe, which was wonderfully rich, that all the Portugals ſhould diuide it among themſelues brother-like, ſeeing they had got it; and for himſelfe and his, he would haue no more, then the peace and reſtauration of his Kingdomes, which by the vertue and Armes of Portugall he had recouered. But as touching the Queene of Aden, called Dinia Ambara, becauſe it were not decent that ſhe ſhould be captiue of any man leſſe then a King, that he thought good if ſhe would become a Chriſtian, that ſhe ſhould bee the Wife of Arias Diz, and that he gaue them for them, both the Kingdomes of Doror and Bale, which had beene hers, and tooke for himſelfe onely Oygere.

This was the King of Adel.

Leather Boats.

King of Adel ſlaine.

Daroa and Bale giuen Arias Diz.

§. IIII.

§. IIII.

Diſguſts betwixt the Negus and the Portugals: ARIAS DIZ his treacherie. Battell betwixt the Abaſſines and Portugals. Their exile; ARIAS his death.

AFter the King Gradeus had recouered his Kingdomes, and was in peace, I tarried that he ſhould ſolemnize and approue more the obedience which he had promiſed to the chiefe Biſhop, and the conformitie of faithfull Chriſtians, celebrating the Sacraments, and vſing the Rites and Ceremonies of the Romane Church. But hee as he promiſed it with an euill will, ſo he let it be forgotten, and did the contrarie. I ſent him word, that the next day I would come and viſite him: but he made no account of me, nor of my meſſage, nor of my comming. I ſent alſo to the Captaine Arias Diz, that I was come thither, that he ſhould come to receiue me with his men, as it was fit, and they had for a cuſtome. Hee came the next day in the morning with one hundred and fiftie Portugals: which came to take my bleſſing, entertaining and making great offers vnto me: and eſpecially Arias Diz.

The King comming neere where I was, neither hee nor his did make any motion, but were looking out at their Tents and Standings at vs, as in mockage of vs. Arias Diz came to mee, and ſaid: The euill will, Sir, which the King beareth you is well ſeene. And with this began to put forth his Horſe, and to skirmiſh. Some other of the companie, when they ſaw him feaſt, did euen the ſame. But Manuel of Accunia, Gaſpar of Soſa, and Deniz of Lima, which came neere me, ſaid vnto me: Sir, diſſemble with this tawnie Moore; for know yee, that all this which he doth, and ſheweth outwardly, is malice and deceit: for his heart is as the Kings heart; and he will not ſtay long without ſhewing the ſigne of it in the Colours of our Lord and King; therefore truſt him not, but redouble ſtill vpon him; for all that he doth and ſayth, is alſo feigned and falſe. The ſame did Lope of Almanſa, Iames of Abrew, and other honeſt men. Whereof I remayned much amazed: for I held him for no ſuch man: but Gentlemen, and good men telling it me, made ſome impreſſion in me to beleeue it. At this time, wee drew neere where the King was, and diſmounted, and I went to the Courtains where he was, and I heard him ſay, ſpeaking to Arias Diz. Marke my Captaine generall, doe not carrie any more in my Kingdomes that Ancient of the King of Portugall: but carrie mine, and leaue that. Arias Diz anſwered him: I will not leaue the Colours of the King of Portugall. Then the King commanded a Page of his to take them, and carrie them away from thence, and Arias Diz conſented, and ſuffered him to carrie them away. But a Portugall Gentleman, called Iames of Brito, tooke the Colours from the Pages hand: and becauſe he would not let him goe, ſtrooke him with his ſword ouer the head, and made him leaue them perforce.

Gradeus his ingratitude.

When I ſaw that, I returned to my lodging, and all the Portugals with me, and the Traitor Arias Diz alſo. Sending him away with this anſwere, Arias Diz remayned telling mee by way of counſell. Sir, I know not how well it is to ſpeake hardly, and anger the King Gradeus, for wee are in his Kingdomes, farre from our Countries. At this, many Portugals aroſe, and ſaid vnto him, that certainly it appeared, that he was a Traitor to the Crowne of Portugall, and his King; for his words and deeds declared it: therefore that hee was not to bee Captaine of the Portugals.

Hee anſwered, that he was Captaine of the Emperour of Ethiopia, and not of the King of Portugall: therefore that they could not call him a Traitor for ſpeaking in fauour of the ſeruice of the ſaid Emperour, to whom he did owe that and much more, for fauours which he had done to him, and marrying him with Dinia Ambar late wife of King Mahomet, and giuing the title of his Countries. Whereunto I anſwered, ſaying: Arias Diz, I haue notice, that you haue forſaken the Faith of the Baptiſme, which you receiued among the Chriſtians Catholicke, according to the vſe of the Romane Church; and were baptiſed againe with the Baptiſme of the Heretikes and Sciſmatikes of Alexandria, and haue changed the name of Arias into Marke. When he heard me ſay thus, without any tarrying he roſe vp melancholie, and went to his lodging, with ſome few Portugals that accompanied him.

By this time the King ſent me word, that he requeſted mee that wee would come the next day, becauſe that day it was alreadie late, and there was no time for it. Entring into his Tent, the King did not ariſe, neither tooke my bleſſing, as he was wont, neither gaue mee my ſeat in my accuſtomed place, but onely bowed his head a little, and let me ſtand. I ſeeing his new and vnaccuſtomed diſcourteſie, ſaid vnto him. Not onely, King Gradeus, to the King of Portugall art thou vnthankefull; whoſe Colours thou didſt deſpiſe, with the which, thou reſtoredſt thy eſtate: but alſo to Ieſus Chriſt art thou vnreuerent in my perſon, which doe repreſent him, thou alſo wilt bee caſt away, and bee accurſed and excommunicate, if thou doeſt returne to the Hereſies of the Iacobites and Dioſcorians of Egypt: the which for their ſinnes and diſobedience which they committed, rebelling againſt the holy and right Apoſtolicke

Sea of Rome were loſt, and are Captiues to the Turkes, and Infidels: and ſo ſhalt thou bee, if thou wilt not amend. Hee anſwered me, that they of Egypt, and of the Sect of Dioſcorus were not Heretikes, but that we were Heretikes that worſhipped foure Gods, as the Arrians: and that if I had not beene his God-father, as I was, he would command me to be quartered. And hauing paſſed other talke of this qualitie, I returned to my Lodging, where I found many Portugals that tarried for me, to whom I gaue account of what had paſſed with the King.

Being in the Campe with the Portugals, the King ſent me word, that I ſhould not meddle in commanding in the Campe of the Portugals, nor make any alteration in them, for as much as they were deliuered to Marke, his Captaine generall; and that by him hee would they ſhould be gouerned, and by no other. I ſent him word, that the Portugals were ſubiect to the King of Portugall, who had deliuered them vnto mee; and I, at the requeſt of King Gradeus, deliuered them to a Portugall, called Arias Diz. But the Portugals ſaid they would not, neither was it their honour to haue for their Captaine an Heretike and a Traitor; neither would they fight vnder any other Colours but of Portugall: and beſides, ſeeing that King Gradeus did not maintaine that which he had promiſed, which was the obedience to the chiefe Biſhop of Rome, Succeſſor of Saint Peter, that they would not ſerue him, but would returne with mee to Portugall.

Peter Straw went with this anſwere to the King; and ſaid moreouer, that if hee would not obey the Church of Rome, and publikely ſo proclaime, that we all would leaue him, and returne to Portugall, as we ſaid. Whereunto he anſwered, that he was King, and Lord of that Countrey, and that we ſhould not goe out of it, except he were willing; for he would that Marcos his Captaine generall ſhould haue the command and iuriſdiction ouer the Portugals.

The Portugals determined to die, or defend themſelues from the tyrannie of the ingratefull man, and of a Traitor: and they asked me, what meane we ſhould haue for to giue the battell to ſo great a number of people. When I ſaw their determination, I ſaid vnto them; Sonnes, doe not diſmay, for in the greateſt tribulations is God, and ſo will hee be with vs in this. And becauſe our Campe had three entries whereby they might aſſault vs, wee tooke order to fortifie them with ſome Munition, becauſe when it were ſo neceſſarie, wee would fortifie our ſelues within, and defend our ſelues as well as we might. The munition that we laid in thoſe entries was pots full of Powder hid, againſt the enemies did come in to ſet them on fire and burne them, as in effect it was done with their great hurt, as preſently I will ſay: but before they aſſaulted vs, between eleuen and twelue at night, our Horſ-men went out, and ſet vpon the Kings Camp: which ſudden feare, and the noiſe of Trumpets, and Shot, did ſuch effect, that all of them ſet themſelues to flight, and had altogether beene ouercome, if the number of our men had beene ſufficient to haue followed them: but becauſe they were but few, they retyred themſelues preſently.

The Portugals aſſault the Kings Campe.

The King in this hurliburly was ſeeking for a Horſe to flee with the reſt: but ſeeing that our men were retyred, quieted himſelfe: and when it was day, hee commanded we ſhould bee aſſaulted. Euery one ſet in a readineſſe, both his and ours, his Targettiers came, before which were the moſt and the beſt men that they had, and aſſaulted vs by the three places which gaue entrance where the Powder was, where our men tarried for them; and comming with great furie, and cries, our men fayning weakneſſe retyred inward, and gaue them leaue to come where the Powder was: comming vnto it they gaue fire, wherewith many were burnt and ſlaine, the reſt fled away ſcalded and ſindged. When the King ſaw the loſſe of his people, and the deceit of the hope which he had, he tare his rich garments that he ware, which among them is a ſigne of great ſorrow, and ſent preſently to call Marke. He came, and hauing taken counſell between both, they agreed that they could not ouercome the Portugals by warre, without comming into great danger, and want: therefore, they determined to take them by ſleight and deceit, in this manner. They ſent to tell vs, that he repented him much of his errour, becauſe God had manifeſtly ſhewed him, how much he had erred in not accompliſhing that which he had promiſed and ſworne vnto me, but that now he would accompliſh it, and doe all that I would: and therefore he deſired vs we would doe no more harme to his people: to the which we anſwered, that the euill we did was not by our wills; but that they had giuen a cauſe thereunto, whereof it grieued vs very much: therefore if hee did vs reaſon of himſelfe, and did accompliſh that which he had promiſed to God and to vs, that we would doe that which alwaies we had done, which was to ſerue and loue him as a Father and Lord: but if hee would haue any other thing, that we hoped in Ieſu Chriſt, that he ſeeing our iuſtice, would defend vs from his tyrannie, and from the malices of Marke the Traitor. This anſwere the King imparted to Marke, to the which he replied, that to come the ſooner to an agreement with them, hee ſhould vſe two policies: one was, to command all his Subiects, that none ſhould ſerue vs, nor prouide vs of any thing neceſſarie, vnder paine of hauing his eyes pulled out for a Traitor: the other, to offer and giue vs much money and rewards, not onely promiſed for hereafter, but preſently, for on the one ſide, the neceſſitie; and on the other, the couetouſneſſe would ouercome vs.

Powder-plot.

Two ſleights.

The King did ſo, and ſent vs preſently an aſſurance with much money for the men, and for mee a great Preſent of Beeues and Muttons, and other things for prouiſion, promiſing mee that all ſhould bee done at my will, and that againſt Chriſt-maſſe next, which was within foure moneths, I ſhould celebrate generall Orders, as before wee had agreed. Beſides the aſſurance of the King. The Bernagaez Iſaac, did promiſe that he would be on our ſide, and fauour vs by himſelfe, and with all his power: and more he ſaid, and ſware that he perceiued the King to be very repentant for the wrongs he had done vs. We being about to goe where the King was, Marke came with the Portugals that were on his ſide, and were with him, to accompanie vs, and ſo we departed altogether, and going by the way, I deſired Marke that there might be no diſcord betweene him and the Portugals, he promiſed ſo to doe. The King ſhewed ſo great contentment of our friendſhip, that he came out to receiue vs out of the Campe, with all the great men of his Court: and all his men both high and low were very ioyfull.

Treacherous dealing.

Within a few houres, there came to me Baltaſar Montera, Antonie Ferrera, Simon of Andrade, Iames of Brito, Antonie Vaz, and ſaid to mee, that the treaſon which they had inuented for vs was diſcouered: for they had bidden them make them readie to goe baniſhed euery one to his Countrey, farre diſtant one from another, charging the Lords of thoſe Countries, to keepe them in good ſafeguard; all by counſell of the Traitor Marke. I went to the Lords of the Countries which carried them, and deſired them to intreate them well, the which ſaid to mee. Father, know you that Marke commanded vs to carrie theſe men in Irons, and giue them other apparell of Slaues, and vſe them like Slaues; but for your ſake, which are our Father, we will deale better with them. And I went preſently to the King, and ſaid vnto him: Now Sir, what ſhall I doe? I ſee you doe not fulfill your word, and you ſend my Brethren priſoners. The King anſwered me with a good countenance. Father, there ſhall no wrong be done to you; but becauſe it is neceſſarie for vs to prepare to the Warres, which the Gallas make vpon mee, as you know, in the meane while you ſhall remayne in the Countrey of the Gaſſates, praying to God for mee, and you ſhall eate the Rent of that Countrey, which will ſuffice well for you and yours, for the laſt dayes I being retyred there it ſufficed mee and all mine: and I will command to doe you much honor, and to obey you as mine owne Perſon: and againſt Chriſt-maſſe, if it pleaſe God, I comming with health, as I hope, you ſhall celebrate your Orders as we haue agreed. And as touching theſe men, which I command to depart from hence, let it not grieue you, for I doe it to haue no mutinie among the reſt. In the meane while came Marcos in, and ſaid to the King, I beſeech your Highneſſe to ſend to Alexandria for to ſeeke the Patriarch; he anſwered him: Bleſſed bee thou of God, Marke my friend, That is done alreadie.

The Patriarch ſent to the Countrey of the Gaſſates.

The King commanded a Captaine of his to carrie mee to the Countrey of the Gaſſates, and ſhould giue me the poſſeſſion of it, and command the Inhabiters of it that they ſhould acknowledge me for their Lord, and reſort to me with the Rents which they accuſtomed to pay to the King, for ſo his Highneſſe commanded it. I carried with me all my ſeruants, free and bond; and I carried beſides a man of that Countrey, called Franciſcus Matthæus, which had beene a ſeruant of the Ambaſſadour Matthæus, which Queene Helena ſent to Portugall, in the time of the King Don Manuel, your great Grand-father of glorious memorie, and had beene with the ſame Ambaſſadour in Portugall. I gaue him the charge of all my houſe, becauſe he was diſcreet, and had good knowledge. Taking leaue of the King, I trauelled eight dayes iourney, for it is ſo much whence the King remayned, to the Countrey of the Gaſſates, which lyeth betweene many high and rough Hills, and is inhabited with a very barbarous people. After we had paſſed the Mountaines, we deſcended to a great Valley, ſo deepe, that it ſeemed we deſcended into Hell, and the Hills remayned ſo high, that they ſeemed to reach to Heauen. The Captaine, which carried me, commanded all the principall men of that Countrey to meet, and ſaid before me, that the King commanded that they ſhould take mee for their Lord, and to pay mee his Rents, but that they ſhould keepe me well that I went not away from thence, nor returne to the Kings Court, and they promiſed ſo to doe.

A rough countrey and barbarous people.

Arius or Marke the Traitor dyeth.

I was in that Countrey ſeuen moneths, in the which the King went to make warre vpon the Gallas, as he had ſaid to me, and came from thence wearied, and almoſt ouer-come without doing any thing to his profit. Within a little while Marke dyed, and hee commanded him to bee buried in a Church, where the Kings of that Countrey were buried, with great pompe; he and his ſhewing ſo great ſorrow for his death, as though he had beene their owne Brother, or Father, and ſo they ſaid, that in him dyed all their refuge and defence of their Countries. Knowing of the death of Marke, I determined my returne to the Court. And on a day, I commanded to take a Captaine that kept vs, for ſome fault that I found againſt him, and commanded to pull him by the haire and to buffet him, and to binde him hand and foot, and commanded my Caliuermen to ſhoot off their Peeces neere vnto him, which was ſo afraid that hee bepiſt and berayed himſelfe, and deſired me for Gods ſake to looſe him, and he promiſed me to goe ſo farre from the place where I was, that he would neuer ſee me, nor I him.

A plot by fearing the people, to eſcape.

I commanded to looſe him, that hee might giue newes to the reſt, as in effect he did. And I commanded the ſhot, which were ten or twelue, to ſhoot off many ſhots, which reſounded among the Hills that they ſeemed thunder; and by miſchance they killed two men of thoſe with the bullets which they ſhot at randome. Wherewith we ſkared them in ſuch manner, that they fled, and vnhabited the Countrey where we were: and the Captaines ſent to deſire me, that I would goe where I liſted, for they promiſed me not to hinder my iourney. We made ſuch haſte on our iourney, that about euening Prayer wee had gone a dayes iourney, and made an end of comming out of the Mountaines. Two dayes before we came where the King was, we found a Portugall, called Franciſcus Magellanes, who came from ſeeing certaine Lands which the King had giuen him: for he gaue Lands to all the Portugals. And after I told him how I came, he told me of the death of Marke, and how for his death the King had made one Iames of Figueredo Captaine of the Portugals, which within a few dayes died of a laske; and before his death, hee had made two Captaines together, one for the right hand, another for the left; for hee had ordayned that the Portugals ſhould guard him, and goe alwaies neere vnto him in two Squadrons: of the which he made Captaines, Gaſpar of Soſa, and Lope of Almanſa. Which Lope of Almanſa, becauſe he was a ſtranger, and of thoſe that fauoured the partie of Marke, the Portugals would not that hee ſhould bee their Captaine, and Gaſpar of Soſa remayned; wherewith I was very glad: for this Gaſpar of Soſa was my Nephew, and my friend. Wee went all in companie till wee came neere where the King was, and there wee ſeparated our ſelues. Hee went to tell the newes to the Portugals that were with the King.

The Portugals, as ſoone as they knew of my comming, came all to ſee mee with great ioy. The King alſo ſent preſently to viſit me by his Page, and ſent mee word, that hee was very glad with my ſafe arriuall, for he did greatly miſſe me. He commanded to giue me apparell, and beſides, fiue hundred ounces of gold; and I remayned more, becauſe the Portugals deſired me then by mine owne good will, becauſe I perceiued that he did ſeparate me from him, by reaſon of the other Patriarch, which was come from Alexandria, and was euery day to come to the Court, and he doubted that we ſhould meete, and that we would make ſome tumult.

---

§. V.

The comming of another Patriarch. The Calide killed. Of the Gallas and other Prouinces, ſubiect and bordering on the Negus, and rarities there obſerued. The eſcape and returne of the Author.

After the King departed, the Aſmache Robel came one day to mee, and ſaid vnto mee: Father, I being ſo much yours, as you know, will diſcouer vnto you a ſecret that imports you very much; but it ſhall be, you pleighting your faith vnto me neuer to bewray me, for if the King doe know it, he will command to caſt me to his Lions. Sir, you are to know, that becauſe you are of the obedience of the Church of Rome, the King will not that you be Patriarch of his Countrey, and ſent to Alexandria to ſeeke another Patriarch of his obedience, the which is come alreadie, and is in Debarua, on the way toward the Kings Court, therefore the King will not carrie you with him, becauſe hee will poſſeſſe the other with your charge; and beſides, becauſe hee is much grieued at you, becauſe you made him ſweare to obey Rome, and publikely to proclaime that euery one ſhould obey him. Now ſee what you will doe, for if you will be gone, I will abſent my ſelfe from hence, that the King may not ſay, that I was conſenting to your going. I thanked him heartily for the warning, and ſaid vnto him, that hee ſaw, ſeeing it was ſo, how much it behoued me to goe to the Court; therefore that hee ſhould abſent himſelfe as he ſaid, whileſt I departed. Going on my iourney, I found a Portugall, called Manuel Aluarez, Groome of the Chamber of the King your Grand-father; by whom I ſent word to the Captaine Gaſpar of Soſa, that I was going to the Court about a matter very important to them all, whereof I would tell him when I ſaw him; for he was certaine, that the King would not be pleaſed with my comming, I requeſted him, that hee with all the Portugals ſhould aide me when it were needfull.

Another Patriarch.

The next day comming neere the Campe, I found another Portugall, called Laurence Gonſales, which told me that the King knew my comming alreadie, and commanded they ſhould take me, and carrie me to a Rocke where I might end my life, not being able to come out from thence. And becauſe your Highneſſe may know, what Rocke it was where he commanded me to be carried; it is thus, That in the Countrey there be certaine high Hills, ouer-pearing the Countrey with great aduantage, and all about ſteepe like a broken Rocke, ſo that in no wiſe they may bee aſcended, but by very narrow wayes made of hand; and on the top are great Plaines, ſome of a league and more, and ſome of ſeuen or eight leagues, with very good Fields, and Fountaines of good waters on the top, and other diſpoſitions for people to liue in them, as in effect there doth. But the wayes are ſo dangerous, that none can come in or out from thoſe Rocks, without the conſent of them that keepe them. Theſe Rocks ſerue for Fortreſſes, and therefore in that Countrey there are no walled Cities. To one of theſe, did King Gradeus command mee to bee carried by two of his Captaines, to make an end in it, without any hope of comming out. As ſoone as the Portugals knew that they carried mee priſoner, they came preſently to reſcue mee from the hands of thoſe that carried me.

The Author ſentenced to a Rocke.

Within a little while, the King came alſo with his men, and pitched his Campe neere vnto vs, and ſent word to Gaſpar of Soſa, that he had not done well in taking me from his Captaines. And he ſent him word againe, that hee knew no error in his action, ſeeing hee had deliuered his Prelate from the hands of Tyrants, the which for doing good to vnthankfull perſons ſuffered troubles and iniuries. And that his Highneſſe knew very well how much hee did owe the Patriarch, and how much fauour God had ſhewed him for his ſake; and how, while he was in the Armie, and they did obey him, God gaue him alwayes the victorie againſt his enemies; and after we put him from vs, and dealt vncourteouſly with him, were ouer-come of the Gallas, which entred in his Campe, and came to ſlaughter his men neere to the Kings Tent, hauing no body to reſiſt them; and his Highneſſe ſaw himſelfe in ſuch a danger, that he fled from them with great diſhonour. And finally, hee let him vnderſtand, that hee and all the other Portugals would not forſake the Patriarch, which was their Father and had brought them from Portugall, and prayed for them to God. The King ſeeing the Portugals reſolution, he ſent to deſire mee to ſee my ſelfe with him: I ſaid I would, and the Portugals ſaid they would goe with me, and ſo they did. The King receiued me with ſo great curteſie that I miſliked it. I gaue my hand to the King which asked it of me, and promiſed him not to goe from the Portugals, nor from his Kingdomes without his licence. Of the which hee was contented; and gaue mee for my maintenance ſo much Land, that the Rent of it was well worth twentie thouſand Cruzados euery yeere, and ordayned that the Patriarch Ioſeph, which hee had commanded to come from Alexandria, ſhould bee his Patriarch, and I of the Portugals onely; and commanded that Franciſcus Matthaus, which was my Aduge (as here an Archdeacon) and all the other Officers which I had, ſhould ſerue Ioſeph.

Order for both Patriarchs.

The King, to bring the Patriarch Ioſeph to peaceable poſſeſſion in his Countrey, thought it neceſſarie that I ſhould be abſent with all the Portugals, and therefore ordayned to place vs in ſome part of his Kingdome out of the Prouince, which he moſt frequented, which is called Amara, where then he was tarrying for the Patriarch Ioſeph. And to buſie the Portugals in ſomething, he ſent them to the Prouince of Doaro, which neighboureth vpon the Gallas his enemies, to lye there in Garriſon in the frontier. The Prouince of Doaro is alſo neighbour to the Kingdome of Zeila. But the Captaine Calide was not contented that they were placed there, becauſe he tooke away his liuing to giue it vnto them. And therefore determined to kill them, or driue them out of the Countrey. This Captaine was a great Lord, and mightie: for beſides this Prouince of Doaro, being great and ſtrong, he had alſo the Prouince of Bale, and the Captaine of Hadia for his neighbour and friend. From which Countries hee ioyned ſeuen hundred Horſemen, ſixe hundred Archers, and ſixe thouſand Targetiers. He leuied theſe men ſo ſecretly, that almoſt hee came one morning before day to ſet vpon vs. But howſoeuer, wee alwayes kept a watch, and his men feared vs, and doubted the ſetting vpon vs, they were perceiued of our men, and could not giue the aſſault that they would. And becauſe the Calide was knowne by the deuice he wore, our men ordayned that ſeuen Caliuer-men ſhould haue an eye at him particularly, and ſhoot at him; for he being dead, his men were quickly ouer-come. So they did: and as he came in the fore-front, knowne among the reſt, before the battell began he was ſlaine.

This was he which after the firſt battell recoyled from the Moore to the Portugals.

The Captaine ſlaine.

With his death ſome of his men made ſignes of peace, theſe were of thoſe Lands which the King had giuen vs: which ſent vs word that they were our ſubiects, and would obey vs, and pay vs our Rents as the King commanded, for that Rebellion was not mooued by their will. The reſt ſtood ſtill without doing any thing, till we ſet vpon them, and made them flye, and we ſlue ſome of them. With the which newes the King was very glad, for he alwaies was doubtful of the Calide, for he was the neereſt Heire to the Kingdome by his Mothers ſide. I ſay by his Mothers ſide, for by the Father he could not be according to the cuſtome of that Countrey. The cuſtome is, that all the male children of the Kings, except the Heires, aſſoone as they be brought vp, they ſend them preſently to a very great Rocke, which ſtands in the Prouince of * Amara, and there they paſſe all their life, and neuer come out from thence, except the King which reigneth departeth this life without Heires, for then they bring from the Rocke him that is neereſt, to come and raigne. The which neither bringeth Wife * nor Children from thence, if he hath any there, but they remayne vpon the Rocke, and hee marrieth in the Kingdome with another Wife.

Cuſtome of inheritance.

* Aluarez placeth it out of this Prouince, but perhaps in a larger ſenſe, it included in it.

* Aluarez hath an inſtance to the contrarie.

By the death of the Calide of Doaro, wee reſted foure monethes quiet, at the end of the which the King ſent vs word, that we ſhould ſtand vpon our guard, for he had intelligence, that the Gallas determined to come vpon vs on a ſudden, for they deſired to ouercome vs by whatſoeuer meanes they could: becauſe they had not, nor all the Enemies of Preſbyter Iohn any other griefe or annoy, but that which we did vnto them. Theſe Gallas inhabit in the Countries bordering to Magadoxo: they are a fierce Nation, they make warre with their Neighbours, and with all people, no more then onely to deſtroy them, and diſinhabit the Countries: in the Countries where they ouercome, they kill all the men, they geld the young men, the old women they kill, the young they keepe for their vſe and ſeruice. It ſeemeth, that from hence came the * Suimbas, which came deſtroying all Guinea, for in their crueltie they are like. Hearing the warning

The Gallas.

Suimbas*, or Zuimbas, a Generation of Blacke-moores, ſo called, like, or the ſame with the Iags, mentioned by Battell and Pigafetta in Congo warning which the King ſent vs, we beganne to prepare our ſelues with things neceſſarie for the Warre, eſpecially of Powder, for with fire principally did we our parts, and ſupplyed the forces which we wanted. We had great ſtore of prouiſion to prouide our ſelues with Powder, for in the Countrey there is great ſtore of Salt-peeter, Brimſtone, and many Oſiers to make Coales, wherewith we made it very fine, we commanded alſo to rid the Countrie of the women, and youngmen, and all the people that could not fight: and the rich Inhabiters fled alſo with theſe great and ſmall, with feare of the crueltie of the Gallas.

The Gallas approach.

One day they appeared. They were many without number, and they came not diſordered like barbarous people: but cloſe in troupes like Squadrons, and aſſoone as they had ſight of vs; they ſtayed tarrying for the reſt, and from thence they came all in one bodie to pitch neere vnto vs, in a diſtance where our ſhot could doe them no hurt. We becauſe they were many, and wee few, went not out to receiue them: but remayned in our Campe. We were at the moſt an hundred and fiftie (for the reſt were alreadie dead, almoſt all in the Warres, and ſome of ſickneſſes; which were not ſo many, as it ſeemed they might haue beene for our men, that Countrie being hot and ſituated vnder the Sunne) and ſo returned to India with Manuel of Accunia, aſſoone as the King of Zeila was ſlaine, for they thought that by his death all the contention was ended. Our Campe ſtood on a Hill, where we maſtred the other grounds, and ſubdued thoſe that did aſſault vs. There we defended our ſelues ten or twelue dayes tarying for the King. In which time wee ſlue many of their men with ſhot and fire-workes: for they came neere vs without any feare, that we miſt no aſſault of theirs, nor any ſtroke of ours that wee did not beſtow it wel.

By this time our Powder failed vs, and the King came not; wherefore we were faine to leaue the place and goe to ſeeke him. The Gallas did not follow vs, for peraduenture, they deſired alſo to goe from vs, and I doubt not, but that if we had had more forces, that wee had made them retyre in deſpite of them. By this time the King came, and hearing that the Gallas remayned Lords of the Countrey, he fell in a ſwound, without any ſence for a great ſpace. And afterward wept like a child, and ſaid. Great is my ſinne, ſeeing it hath done me thus much hurt. Wonder how I loſe not my wits, thinking on the great loſſe that I receiue. As in effect hee loſt three great Kingdomes: two of them, Bale and Doaro, as bigge as Caſtile and Portugall, and Hadia, alone as bigge as all France. This Kingdome of Hadia reacheth to the borders of Melinde. And in this Countrie is great ſtore of Myrrhe, Incenſe, and Gumme Aunime. Some Portugals anſwered him. Let not your Highneſſe grieue, for God can remedie it all, and will remedie it, if you will reconcile your ſelfe with the Patriarch Don Iohn Bermudez, which is the true Patriarch, and not regard the other Schiſmaticke. Whereunto he gaue no Anſwere, but ſet on forward, and ſaid vnto me that we ſhould follow him. And becauſe he held at that time the warre with the Gallas to be vnfortunate; Hee determined to goe and ſee ſome Kingdomes of his Empire, which yet he had not ſeene, and at his returne to ſet vpon the Gallas, if yet they were not retyred to their Countries: for they came but to ſpoile and deſtroy, and ſo returne.

Loſſe of three great Kingdomes, Bale, Doaro and Hadia.

We trauelled toward the South-weſt from Doaro ſeuen or eight iournies, and came to a Kingdome of Chriſtians, called Oggy, in the which raigned a good man named Frier Michael, Brother-in-law to King Gradeus, and his Tributarie. Who made vs very welcome, and good entertainment to the people. This Kingdome hath fiue thouſand Horſemen, of the which ſixe hundred are great Horſe and harnaſſed, and the reſt are light Horſemen, and they ride on the bare Horſe. It maketh alſo ten thouſand Footmen: the which fight with Darts which they throw, and the Horſemen with long Speares like ours. The armings for their Horſes are of Elkes skins quilted within, and garniſhed very richly on the out-ſide. He carryeth in his Armie ſixe hundred Hand-mils, which women doe grind with. This Kingdome hath a Prouince of Gentiles, called Gorague, which bordereth with Quiloa, and Mangalo. Theſe Gentiles of Gorague are great Witches, and doe diuine in the Inwards, Guts, and Entrailes of the Beaſts that they ſacrifice. They by their Witch-crafts make to appeare that the fire doth not burne in this manner. They kill an Oxe with certaine Ceremonies, and anoynted with the Tallow of that Oxe they command to make a great fire, and cauſe to ſeeme that they goe into it, and that they ſit downe in a chaire, and ſo ſitting at leiſure in that fire they diuine, and anſwere to what is demanded of them without burning.

Oggy, the force and armour thereof.

Goragus. Great Sorcerers.

The Goragues doe pay to their King euery yeare for Tribute, two Lions of Gold, and three Whelpes of Gold and one Ounce of Gold, and certaine Hennes with their Chickens alſo of Gold: which all wayeth as much as eight men can carrie: and this Gold is fine and good. They pay him alſo ſixe Buffes laden with baſe Siluer. They alſo pay one thouſand Beeues aliue; and many Lions, Ounces, and Elkes skinnes. In this Countrey is great ſtore of Ciuet, * Sandalos, * Blacke Wood and Amber. The men of this Prouince ſay, that there come to traffique in it White men: but they know not of what Nation, if Portugals, or Turkes, or any other Nation.

Gold. A beaſt ſo called.

* Or Dates.
* Or Eben wood.

Weſtward from the Kingdome of Oggy lyeth the Kingdome of the Gaffates Tributaries alſo. The Gaffates are Gentiles, and vulgarly it is ſaid that they were Iewes. They are a barbarous and Gaffates ſaid to haue beene Iewes.

euil people, rebellious & quarrelſom. There be many of them in other Prouinces of the Empire, but in euery place they are held for Strangers, & different from other people, and abhorred of them, as the Iewes are here. In this Kingdome they are Lords, and haue no other Nation among them, but ſome Chriſtians which ſeparated themſelues from the Abexines, at the time they denyed the obedience to the Apoſtolike Sea: which Chriſtians euen now doe ſay and proteſt to bee in the obedience of the ſame Sea. The Gaffates doe poſſeſſe in theſe parts a great and rich Country, of much Gold, and of ſome good Commodities, eſpecially of fine Cotton Clothes. Within the Countrey they haue ſpacious and plenteous fields. They ſay that in this Countrey there is an inuiſible Wood, and it maketh men inuiſible. The King when hee came to this Countrey, commanded to make warre vpon the people of the Countrey, and to enter with force of Armes into their Towne, becauſe they had rebelled ſince the death of his Father, and would not pay him his Tributes, nor reknowledge him for their Superiour. The Gaffates came at this, and a morning before day aſſaulted the Campe of the Abexines, and ſlue many of them. The Portugals were neere the Kings Tent, for they were his Guard: when they heard the cry and ſtirre, they came being alreadie almoſt day, and draue the Gaffates out of the Campe killing many of them: and followed after them.

Romiſh Catholikes, if they be not as inuiſible as their wood.

The Portugals here in their Townes found great riches, wherewith they returned ioyfull and rich. They found Bezutos, which are like fine Quilts: and they found Cotton-cloathes very fine like Lawnes: and they found Cypreſſes ſo fine, that a piece of thirtie or fortie yards would be cōtayned within ones hands. They found alſo ſtore of Gold in Pots, and Pans, and buried vnder their hearthes in the houſes where they make their fire: for there they vſe to keepe it hidden as moſt ſecret, and they themſelues diſcouered it to our men, becauſe they ſhould not kill them. The King would make no long tarrying there, for his pretence was not to do them much hurt, but onely to threaten them: and becauſe Winter came on wee left that barbarous people quickly, and went the way to Damute, which lyeth almoſt to the Weſt from theſe Gaffates.

Damute.

Gates or rock-paſſages.

Gold and Cryſtall.

Oxen almoſt as bigge as Elephants, with huge hornes.

An Vnicorne, or Aſinus Indicus not that which the Painters preſent with a horne in the fore-head.

On the Weſt ſide bordereth preſently with the Gaffates, whereof I ſpake before, the Kingdome of Damute, which ſtandeth vpon the Riuer of Nilus: that Riuer maketh there many turnings and very great. The entrance to this Kingdome is difficult, in reſpect of the rough and high Rockes that are by the Riuer of Nilus: in the which beſides their beeing rough, there are alſo made in them at hand certaine paſſages, in the Rockes broken with the Pick-axe, and ſhut with gates and kept with men at Armes, in ſort that with a little force they reſiſt and defend the entry from their enemies, if againſt their will they will come in. Theſe Gates, when the Emperour commeth thither, are broken and open freely to all that will paſſe through them. Damute is a great Kingdome, and hath many ſubiect Prouinces. The principall is of Chriſtians, but ſome are of Gentiles. In all of them is found great ſtore of Gold and Cryſtall ſtone. The Countries are very plenteous and fruitfull, eſpecially thoſe which are neere the Riuer Nilus, the which haue more Mountaines and Riuers then the others. They breed many wild and tame beaſts, and ſtrange Wormes and Serpents very venemous. They breed Oxen, Horſes, Buffes, Mules, Aſſes, Sheepe and other Cattell: the Oxen are greater then ours, ſo much that ſome of them are almoſt as bigge as Elephants. They haue great hornes, that ſome of them doe hold a Tanker of Wine, and do ſerue to carrie in, and to keepe Wine and Water, and as the Tankers Barrels here. I was bold to ſpeake this, becauſe Don Roderick of Lima, brought one of theſe hornes of this bigneſſe to this Kingdome, in the time of the King your Grand-father, when the Embaſſadour Tagazauo, and the Father Franciſcus Aluarez came with him. There is found in theſe Countries a kind of Vnicorne, which is wild and fierce, faſhioned like a Horſe, and of the bigneſſe of an Aſſe. There be in them Elephants, Lions, Ounces, and other beaſts, vnknowne here with vs.

Amazons.

Another tale of the Queene of Saba.

Griffons.

There is neere to Damute, a Prouince of women without men: which doe liue after the manner of the ancient Amazones of Scythia, which in certaine time of the yeere permitted the companie of ſome men that were their Neighbours, and of the children which they bare, they ſent the men-children to their Fathers, and the women they kept with themſelues, and brought them vp in their cuſtomes and ſtile. In the ſame manner doe theſe of Æthiopia, and they burne alſo their left paps, as thoſe did for to ſhoot more readily with their Bow, which they vſe in their Warres, and in Hunting. The Queene of theſe Women knoweth no man, and for that act is worſhipped among them for a Goddeſſe. They are permitted and preſerued, becauſe they ſay, that they were inſtituted by the Queene of Saba, which went to ſee King Salomon. In this Prouince of the Women there be Griffons, which are Fowles ſo bigge that they kill the Buffes, and carrie them in their clawes as an Eagle carryeth a Rabbet. They ſay, that here in certaine Mountaines very rough, and deſert, there breedeth and liueth the Bird * Phenix, which is one alone in the

* Monſtrous huge fowles, or foule monſtrous fooles & lies, which happly the cunning and bragging Natiues reported and we had need of their faith of Miracles, to beleeue. For how did God create firſt and after bring into the Arke all Creatures Male and Female, if this Phenix bee ſole? Qui Bauium non odit, amet tua carmina Mæui. He which beleeueth this Phenix, and theſe Griffons, &c. may beleeue Gamas Miracles. Which I ſpeake not to diſgrace the whole ſtorie (which is vſefull) but to make the Reader warie where things are told vpon report, or are aduantagious to Rome or Portugall. Much of this Chapter ſeemeth to mee Apocrypha, but I leaue libertie of Faith to the moſt licentious Credulitie, which ſhall thinke fitter to beleeue then to goe and ſee. And yet may Africa haue a Prerogatiue in Rarities, and ſome ſeeming Incredibilities be true.

the World, and it is one of the wonders of nature. So doe the Inhabitors of thoſe Countries affirme, that this Bird is there, and they do ſee it and know it, and that it is a great and faire Bird. There be other Fowles ſo bigge, that they make a ſhadow like a Cloud.

Vpward by Nilus towards the South there bordereth with Damute, a great Prouince, called Couche. This is ſubiect to Damute, and Gentiles doe inhabit it: the Prince of it is called by the name of his Title, Axgagce, that is to ſay, Lord of the Riches, as in effect it is ſo. The Axgagce maketh when he needeth ten thouſand Horſemen, and more then twentie thouſand Footmen. He carryeth in his Armie one thouſand Hand-mils vſed by Women, which doe grind with them the flowre neceſſary for the people. At the time that wee came to Damute, this Prince was in Armes with the King of Damute: wherefore, the King Gradeus ſaid to me, that as a Prelate and Mediator of Peace, I ſhould ſend him word, how his Maieſtie was very angrie againſt him, by reaſon of his Rebellion and Diſobedience, and that hee determined to deſtroy him by means of the inuincible and more then humane force of the Portugals, which he brought with him for that purpoſe. I did euen ſo, and ſent him word, that he ſhould obey his Emperour, and bring him his Tributes, and ſee him, for I did aſſure him that his Maieſtie would vſe clemencie with him. So he did, and came preſently with a great ſumme of Gold, and great quantitie of Beeues, and other prouiſion in abundance for all the Armie: and many Slaues, Mules and Aſſes, for the neceſſary ſeruice.

The Axgagce prouided the Emperours Campe with all things in abundance, without wanting any thing. And at the laſt he himſelfe came acompanied with many and proper men on Foot and Horſe: and he was verie richly attyred. Aſſoone as hee came to the place where hee might be ſeene from the Emperours Tent, hee diſmounted from his Horſe, and put off the rich clothes he had on, and remayning in others of leſſe value, he came to the Tent, and tarryed till they commanded him to come in. After that he entred into the firſt receit of the Tent (for it was diuided with certaine Curtaines) and there he caſt himſelfe on the ground vntill the Emperour commanded him to ariſe, and receiued him with good words, and commanded him to apparell himſelfe, and commanded to giue him ſome meate, and there hee ſpake with him behind the Curtaines, without admitting him to his peſence, till after foure dayes he commanded him to come in where he was.

For this honor and courteſie that Gradeus ſhewed to Axgagce, he ſaid vnto him, my Lord, I wil doe you one ſeruice, that neither I nor my Fore-fathers euer did to your Father, nor to the other Emperours your Predeceſſors, which is to ſhew you the riches and ſecrets of my Countries: for with this condition we doe obey you, that you ſhall not ſee them but with our will. Finally, he led vs through his Countries to a great Riuer of ſixtie fathome breadth, or more, in whoſe borders there be many venemous Snakes, ſo much, that their biting is mortall: but by the goodneſſe of God, Nature hath prouided a remedie againſt that hurt: and it is an Herbe, that groweth in ſome places of that Countrey, which is ſo contrary to the Snakes I ſpake of, that they flye from it as from an Enemie, and came not neere him that hath it about him, neither hath their Poyſon any ſtrength where it is, either ſtamped and laid in a Playſter, or the iuyce of it. We ſaw one of theſe Snakes that made an end of eating a Buffe that it had killed, and the King commanded to kill it, which had leaues of greaſe like a great and fat Hogge, which was good for the cold, and other diſeaſes. There be others alſo, which they call, *Of the * ſhadow*, becauſe it hath a skinne on the head, wherewith it couereth a very precious ſtone, which they ſay it hath in her head. On the other ſide this Riuer is a barren ground and vnhabited, the kind of it is browne, red and dry, as that which wee ſee in ſome parts of Ribateio. This Earth hath two parts of Gold, and one of Earth, for ſo it yeeldeth in the melting whereof there bee as many workemen in that Countrey, as here there are Smiths, and more, for in that Countrey there is more Gold, then here we haue Iron. The Lords doe not permit that any Bridge or Boate bee in the Riuer, that there may no eaſie paſſage bee had, and becauſe euery one that liſteth may not goe ouer to gather the Gold. The meanes to paſſe that Riuer is this. They haue Buffes accuſtomed to paſſe ouer, and when they will goe ouer to the other ſide they put them in before, and they goe ſwimming faſt by their tailes, and they fill certaine Bellowes which they carrie with that ſame Earth, and tye them about their neckes, and come againe faſt by their tailes as they went. In this manner the paſſage is not common to all. And thoſe that doe paſſe are bound to try the Gold they bring, in the melting houſes of the Axgagce, for they all are his, for to pay him his duties.

Fat and venemous Snakes.

Strange herbe.

* Or Canopie

Incredible quantitie of Gold.

The King Gradeus to certifie himſelfe better of the truth, commanded ſome of his men to go to the other ſide, which went ouer, and brought of the earth, which the others brought, the which being tried yeelded as much as the other, and the men of Gradeus ſaid, that all the ground of that Prouince was of that qualitie, for they went a great way in it, and found it all to be ſo, and they ſaid that the ground is ſo hot, that they could not lay them downe to ſleepe vpon it, but that they ſought Caues and Slates on which they lay, and alſo that there were in the Countrey certaine red and great Ants that did bite them, and were ſo many, that they did not let them ſleepe. We thinking that we had reaſon to wonder at the great quantitie of Gold which we ſaw, the Axgagce of the Countrey ſaid to King Gradeus, that hee ſhould not wonder, for he would ſhew him yet more: and lead vs downe the Riuer towards the South-weſt, trauelling very eaſily two dayes, at the end of the which hee ſhewed vs on the other ſide the Riuer a Mountaine that in places gliſtered like the Sunne: and ſaid vnto vs that all that was Gold.

A golden gliſtering Mountaine.

The Axgagce baptized.

With theſe and other entertainments that hee did vnto vs, King Gradeus was ſo contented, that he determined to make him a Chriſtian: and he deſired him he would be one, and that hee would be euer his very great friend. He anſwered, that with a good will he would be one. The King commanded preſently to prepare his Baptiſme, and a Biſhop Prelate of the Monaſterie, called Debra Libanus Chriſtned him, which is the head of the Monaſteries of Amara, and King Gradeus was his God-father; and they named him Andrew. There Andrew told King Gradeus, how he had in thoſe parts certaine neighbours which did euill neighbour-hood to him, and did ouer-runne his Countries, robbing and killing his Subiects: and requeſting him, that ſeeing God had brought him thither with that Noble people of Portugall, whoſe fame did feare the people of that Countrey, that he would reuenge him of his enemies which did him great annoy, and they would be warned not to offend his ſubiects any more. The King granted his requeſt, and commanded his men and the Portugals to enter into the Countrey of the enemies, and ouerrunne it, warring againſt it with fire and ſword, robbing and deſtroying their goods, taking the people captiue, and killing thoſe which reſiſted. This they did for a great ſpace of the Countrey, in the which they found great ſpoyle of rich Iewels, and much Gold which they brought. This being done, King Gradeus returned to Damute, where we heard the men of the Countrey ſay, that there were things to bee ſeene of great admiration; ſo much, that being told to them that ſaw them not, they ſeeme Fables, therefore they are not all to be put in writing. But beleeue your Highneſſe, that with reaſon is Africa called the Mother of Monſters; for ſo it is without doubt, eſpecially in the Countrey within, neere to the Riuer of Nilus, where there are Mountaines, Riuers, and deſert places, with great diſpoſition of the Countrey and fauour of the ayre, and of the heauens to bring forth and produce what it liſteth.

Goiame.

Gold ſtones.

Catadupa, by the Ancients placed neerer Egypt.

Returning from Damute by the Riuer Nilus, downeward toward the Red Sea, wee came to the Kingdome of Goiame, which bordereth preſently vpon Damute. Goiame is alſo a great Kingdome, plentifull, and fruitfull, and rich. It is inhabited with Chriſtians, ſubiect to Preſbyter Iohn: It hath Gold, but not ſo much as Damute. In this Kingdome of Goiame there be certaine Riuers, in the which, vnder the Sand are found certaine ſpongie ſtones like our Pumiceſtone, but that they are heauy and yellow; the which being tryed, are conuerted in Gold, the the moſt part of them, ſauing ſome little droſſe. In this Kingdome of Goiame is the Catadupa of Nilus, whereof Tully maketh mention in the dreame of Scipio, and I will declare to your Highneſſe what it is, for it is a great thing, and worthy to be knowne, and it is not all a dreame, as in effect ſome things that ſome large tongued men doe ſpeake of this, and of other things which they neuer ſaw, are but dreames.

The Fals, or Catadhi.

Gaffates.

This Catadupa is a great fall of the Riuer Nilus, from a high Rocke downe. The Rocke is almoſt halfe a league high, ſteepe downe, without any ſlant or hillocke, from thence falleth the Riuer Nilus, altogether in a deepe Lake, and cloſe betweene great and high hils. The quantitie of water is great, for it commeth gathering from more then three hundred leagues to that fall, and it maketh ſo great a noyſe, that it ſeemeth a great Thunder, and amazeth them that are not accuſtomed to it: it ſoundeth ſo, that three or foure Bow-ſhot round about, it ſtunneth the eares, in ſuch ſort, that in all that ſpace there is no other noyſe heard, be it neuer ſo big, but that: neither can the ayre receiue any other but that, which filleth all, ſo doth that ſound drown all others, as the greater light doth darken the other ſmaller. That place is called in the Countrey language, Catadhi, which is to ſay, a noyſe, or a great ſound, whence it ſeemeth that Latines did make the name Catadupa. Weſtward from theſe two Kingdome, Damute and Goiame, towards Guinea, are barten grounds, and euill inhabited; and in them inhabite the Gaffates, and other Gentiles very ſauage. Theſe are not well knowne, neither haue they dealings with the people of that Empire, to the which they neither giue their oath, nor owe any ſubiection, for almoſt all of it lyeth to the Eaſt of Nilus. There is Gold in thoſe Weſterne Countries towards Guinea, but that they ſay, that the Gold of the Land within hath ſparkes of Sand, as ſome that commeth from the Antillas.

Dembia. Huge Lake.

By the ſtreame of Nilus below Goiame, neere neighbouring is another Kingdome of Abexines ancient Chriſtians, great and good, called Dembia. In this Nilus maketh a great Lake, which hath in length thirtie leagues, and twentie in breadth, wherein are many ſmall Ilands, all inhabited with Monaſteries of religious men, of whom I made mention before. And this is not the ſpring whence Nilus proceedeth, for it commeth from farre aboue.

Agaoa.

A little below there lyeth another Kingdome, called Agaoa, inhabited with Moores and Gentiles mingled together. This hath a King by it ſelfe, which neither obeyeth the Preſbyter Iohn, nor the Turke. It extendeth to the Borders of Egypt: vnto Dembia the Riuer Nilus runneth, from the South-weſt to the North-eaſt, and commeth within thirtie or fortie leagues of the Red Sea, almoſt oppoſite to Suaquen: and from thence windeth to the North-weſt, till he Trench intended from Nilus to the Red Sea.

Subia Nubia.

commeth into the Mediterranean Sea. In this Nooke determined the King Onadinguell to make a Trench, and turne the Riuer Nilus to the Red Sea, as his Predeceſſour Ale Belale began to do, and therefore ſent to demand Pioners of the King your Grand-father.

To the Weſt from Dembia lyeth a Prouince, called Subia Nubia (which now is of the Moores; and they ſay, that ſometime it was of Chriſtians, and itſeemeth to bee ſo, for in it are ſome Churches found, yet old and ruinated) and preſently ioyning with Subia Nubia. More to the Weſt lyeth a Kingdome of Moores, called Amar, and it is very great, where through the Merchants of Cayro doe paſſe that go to Ialofa, and to Mandigna, and other parts of Guinea to ſeeke Gold: and from Amar they carrie Salt, which groweth there in Mines, which is very deere in Guinea, for the great ſcarcitie there is of it. Before we doe depart from the Riuer Nilus, in thoſe Countries whereby the Riuer Nilus runneth, in Iuly, Auguſt and September, is the force of Winter, and therefore doth that Riuer increaſe then, and not at other times, and bringeth great ſtore of water, for it commeth very farre aboue Damute, more then two hundred leagues, and to his entring into Egypt eight hundred, with turnings and windings which it maketh, and paſſeth by great Hils, where it gathereth great ſtore of water from many Riuers of great waters. All men doe not know the inward parts of Africa, eſpecially aboue Nilus, the which, neither the Inhabitors of it doe know, nor haue any notice of it all, for it is very great and difficult to ſearch out; and therefore I digreſſed a little from my Hiſtorie, to giue an accompt briefely to your Highneſſe of theſe things I ſaw, becauſe peraduenture there is not another in this Countrey that knoweth them by ſight but I, that dwelt in it thirtie yeares or more. And moreouer, if it had not beene that iourney that I went with the King Gradeus, although I had beene there as much more, I had knowne no part of the Countries which aboue I haue rehearſed. Now I will returne to giue an account of my ſelfe, and of my Companions.

Simem and Amara.

Of theſe ſee Aluarez.

King Gradeus, after he had ſpent in his viſittaion tenne or twelue moneths, determined to returne toward the Prouinces of Simem and Amara, where the Kings and Emperours of that Countrey do make their abode and continuance, becauſe the Countrey is better then the other, and more ſecure, and becauſe they are borne and naturall from thence. In Amara and Vedremudro are Mines of Copper, Tinne and Lead. Heere are certaine Churches cut out of the hard Rocke, which they ſay the Angels did make. And indeede, the worke ſeemeth more then humane. The Traffique of theſe Prouiuces to Damute, where the Abexines chiefely doe prouide themſelues of Gold, is for the moſt part by Iron, whereof there is great ſtore in them, eſpecially in the Prouince of Tigremacan, which is alſo a neighbour with theſe: which Iron is ſo much worth in Damute, that they giue for it Gold by weight, quantitie for quantitie. I touched this matter here, becauſe I thinke, that the Kingdome of Damute, and the Prouince of Couche doe confine with Sofalla, and if from Sofalla they haue the Iron that they haue need of, they will giue their Gold alſo for it. Theſe Prouinces lye to the Eaſt from Goiame and Dembia; and the Prouince of Bethmariam remaineth to the South-eaſt, where the King ſatisfied vs our Rents, which by the comming of the Gallas we had loſt in Doaro.

Bethmariam.

Riches of the Portugals.

The Prouince of Bethmariam is great, and well inhabited, and of great Rent, all the which the King releaſed to vs the Portugals, and the Lands diuided among vs according to the qualities of the perſons. He that receiued leaſt for Rent to his part, had more then one thouſand crownes a yeare; the Captaine had more then tenne thouſand, and I had as much. The King gaue vs this Prouince, becauſe it was a Frontier to the Kingdome of the Gafates that were riſen, becauſe that from hence the Portugals might make in-roades in their Countries, and puniſh them, and bring them to obedience. Finally, our iourney being ended, and the King ſeated in the Prouince of Simem, the Portugals did aske him leaue to goe and ſee the Lands which he had giuen them in the Prouince of Bethmariam. And I demanded alſo licence to goe to my Countrey of Portugall, as I meant, and he gaue it mee, vnderſtanding that of Bethmariam. I asked him this cloaked licence, becauſe I would not breake the oath that I had made vnto him, and becauſe I knew that if I had asked it plainely, he would not haue giuen it me, but rather would haue hindred my comming, or taken away my life, as he deſired many daies before.

Diſſimulation.

Debra Libanus.

I was in the Prouince of Bethmariam as long as Winter laſted, which beganne to come on when we retyred our ſelues; and for to win their fauours and loue of my ſubiects, I cheriſhed them all that I could, and did eaſe the rents that they were bound to pay me, to make them beneuolent and affected, that they ſhould not bewray me when I would go away: for the King had commanded them all, that they ſhould looke to me that I went not out of the Countrey. The ſame had the King alſo commended to Gaſpar of Soſa, Captaine of the Portugals, the which for that reſpect ſent many times to viſite me: and I for to aſſure him, made my ſelfe ſicke of the Gout in one of my Legges, I tooke my bed, ſaying; That I could not go on foote. In the meane ſeaſon, Gaſpar of Soſa went to the Court, and I had opportunitie to doe what I deſired. And alſo, becauſe I would haue no hindrance of them of the Countrey, I ſent to call ſome of the principalleſt of them, and ſaid vnto them, that I was very ſicke as they ſaw, and would goe in Pilgrimage to the Monaſterie, called Debra Libanus, to commend my ſelfe to God, and to requeſt the religious men there, to pray to God for me; therefore, that I deſired them they would reſort with my Rents to a Seruant of mine, with whom I left the charge of my houſe and people.

Croſsing Nilus.

And becauſe the way to Debarua, directly was by the Countries where the King was, I determined to goe by another Countrey diſtant from thence, and vnhabited, and therefore I commanded to carrie prouiſion ſufficient for my ſelfe, and ſeuen or eight perſons which I carried with me, whom I moſt truſted, which I commanded to ſay by the way, that I went verie ſick, and that I went to cure my ſelfe to Debarua, where the Countrey and Ayres are more healthfull. By this way I croſſed a Nooke of Nilus, where I paſſed it twice, with great trouble, becauſe the Coaſts of the Riuer were very craggy, and with great danger of not letting me paſſe through certaine gates that are in them, guarded with armed men. Here I commanded my men that they ſhould ſay, that a Seruant of the King came behind which was knowne, that carried me to Debarua to be cured: and with this deceit they let vs paſſe. At laſt, with the helpe of God, by the interceſsion of our Ladie, to whom I commended my ſelfe, I came ſafe to Debarua, where certaine Portugals receiued me which were there, with great ioy and entertainment: the Bernagaez of that Countrey, as ſoone as he knew that I was there, came to ſee me, and asked me, ſaying; What good comming is this, Father, to this Countrey? I anſwered, that I went very ſicke, and that I went to be cured. He ſaid againe, that he thought I would paſſe to the Countries of Franquia, which are neere the Sea; therefore that hee deſired me that I would not doe ſo, but that I ſhould reſt a few daies, and returne vnto the King: I anſwered, that in no wiſe would I returne to the King, for he knew very well, and all men did know, how great reaſon I had to flye from him: but my intention was to dwell in that Countrey, in an hermitage of our Ladie that was there, and end my life there. Seeing that is your will, ſaid he, I will write to the King, and requeſt him, that he will let you be here, and that I take you to my charge, for to giue account of you, that you ſhall not goe away from hence, and I will ſend him word that you are very ſicke, therefore trouble not your ſelfe, for all ſhall bee done at your will. And ſaid moreouer, Father, That which I aske you for Gods ſake, is, that you will ſuſpend the excommunications, and ceaſe from the curſes which you lay vpon the King, and vpon all this Countrey, becauſe ſome euill may not come to vs; and beſides, that you incenſe not the King againſt you. He ſent an honeſt man of his houſe to the King, which returned in few daies with the anſwer: And it was, that the King was much mooued againſt me, eſpecially, becauſe I ſaid that he was an Hereticke and excommunicate. And the King ſaid, That if it were not for the Portugals ſake, that he had commanded me to be ſlaine. And yet ſaid more, that I was a Traytor and forſworne, becauſe I had broken my Faith and my Oath that I had ſworne to him, not to goe out of his Countries without his licence. To which I anſwered, that he had giuen me the ſame licence, as it is ſaid in the former Chapter. Finally, hee commanded that I ſhould abide in Debarua, and not to go from thence without his ſpeciall commandement; and to the Bernagaez, that he ſhould haue a ſpeciall care of me.

Excommunications and Curſes.

Barua, or Barua.

I was in Debarua more then two yeeres, commending my ſelfe to God, and ſaid Maſſe the moſt daies in a Church of our Ladie that was there, where about nine or tenne Portugals that were there accompanied me, which came flying thither with others, from the vnfortunate battaile in which the Goranya ouercame vs, and tooke Don Chriſtopher. About this time, there came a Venetian, called Micer Suncar, which came from Gran Cayrus with a meſſage from certaine Venetian Merchants which were there, and had taken in charge fortie odde Portugals, which were taken captiues in the parts of Ormuz, and the Turkes demanded thirtie thouſand crownes: and Micer Suncar came to know of Preſbyter Iohn if hee would ranſome them, who ranſomed them, giuing the ſaid price, and other two or three thouſand crownes for their expenſes. There came alſo to mee a religious man of the company of Ieſus, called Maſter Gonçaluo with his companion, which came from India to enquire after me, and the other Portugals, and of the eſtate of that people of Preſbyter Iohn, which after I informed him how it was, went to the Kings Court, and did informe himſelfe in that Countrey what I had done and ſuffered, to reforme that people to the obedience of the Church of Rome, and gaue a publike teſtimony and relation in the Cathedrall Church of Goa.

Ranſome of Portugals.

Gonçaluo a Ieſuite: this is Gonzaluos Rodericke, whoſe Epiſtle followeth in the next Chapter.

De Barua, called elſewhere Baroa.

Being in Debarua, tarrying for paſſage to India, there arriued to the Port of Maçua, Antonie Peixoto a Portugall, with two Foyſts, whereof he was Captaine: Maſter Gonzaluo and I determined to goe and viſite him, and goe with him for India, and that I might doe this without hinderance of the Abexines, I had a good excuſe in this manner. The Church of our Ladie which we had in Debarua, was burnt a few daies before by a diſaſter, wherefore I deſired the Bernagaez which had the charge of me, that he would let me goe to Maçua to aske ſome almes of the Portugals of the Foyſts to re-edifie the ſaid Church, and that he would lend mee a Mule to ride on, and ſome men to accompany and guard me. He did it willingly, for hee thought I was already ſeated in the Countrey, and had no deſire to returne to Portugall, and ſent with me a Prieſt of his owne Sect and Nation, and ſent beſides other, ſixe or ſeuen men to accompanie and guard me, charging vs to returne preſently, and that we ſhould not ſtay. And for more his aſſurance, there went in our company an Ambaſſadour of Preſbyter Iohn to the Gouernour of India.

dia, for whoſe reſpect he thought alſo that the Captaine of the Foyſts would not carrie mee, if he deſired him the contrary. But Antonie Peixoto the Captaine was very glad to carrie me, and when the Ambaſſadour ſaw me embarked, went backe and would not goe with vs, thinking that for my ſake he ſhould not be well entertained among the Portugals. There went with me, as I ſaid, Maſter Gonçaluo, and thoſe few Portugals that were in Debarua. We came to Goa after the paſſing great Tempeſt by Sea and want of victuals, Franciſcus Barreto being Gouernor of India, who receiued vs with great ioy, and commanded me to bee lodged in Saint Paul, with the Fathers of the company of Ieſus, which ſhewed me great loue and honour while I was there, which was about nine or ten moneths, tarrying for ſhipping for this Kingdome. The Gouernor commanded the ouer-ſeer of your Highneſſe goods, to prouide me of all things neceſſarie, and ſo I was alwaies well prouided for of all things neceſſarie in the Countrey, and for the Voyage. The Patriarch Don Iohn Nunnez came thither I being there, and the Biſhop Don Andrew with their companions.

His eſcape to Goa.

Numez the Patriarch the Story of whom, and of Andrew Ouiedo followeth.

As ſoone as the time of ſhipping came, I went to Cochin, becauſe the ſhips are wont to depart from thence, and the Gouernor commanded to giue me a good lodging in one of them, and prouiſion in abundance. Don Iohn Meneſez the ſonne of the Nayler, came for Captaine of that Voyage, and alſo another Don Iohn Meneſez, of whom I receiued great courteſie and entertainement vnto the Iland of Saint Helen, where I remained againſt his will, contending much about it: There I continued a yeere ſuffering ſome bodily trouble, of hunger and other neceſſaries, becauſe that Iland is ſo diſtant from humane communication, that there commeth no people, but ſome fugitiue Slaues which had runne away from ſome ſhips that came thither: and it was ſaid, that they had killed another Chaplaine, with the which mine beganne to be corrupt, and would not ſerue me. Wherefore deſtitute of all humane helpe in mine old age and ſickneſſe, I came perforce the next yeere to Portugall, in the ſhip called Saint Pablo, wherein Ruy of Melo came for Captaine. I came to Liſbon in the moneth of Auguſt, the yeere 1559. Your Highneſſe reigning, whom God giue long life, with Peace and Grace in this world, and the glory of his Kingdome in the world to come, Amen.

His returne home.

They brought newes of vs hither, as of men caſt away: and without doubt, that was a great and inhumane careleſneſſe, and was the cauſe that there was no more good done in the Countrey. For your Highneſſe may beleeue, that the matters of that Empire were in ſuch eſtate, that if that ſmall number of Portugals had beene maintained with ſupplies of men, it might haue gotten ſuch a poſſeſſion and authoritie, that King Gradeus either with his will or without it, would haue obeyed the holy Mother Church: and his people with the conuerſation of ours, and the doctrine of our Preachers, which would haue taught freely, had taken the true Chriſtian Religion, and had left the errors of the Alexandrines, which for their ſinnes are deſtroyed, they and their falſe Doctrine, whereby it hath no vigour for to reſiſt the truth if it were preached and fauoured: for among them there are no proud and ſtubborne learned men, but there are deuout religious men, and very humble, which in good ſimplicitie deſire to ſerue God, and take very eaſily the doctrine of truth, and apply their vnderſtandings to it.

In Temporall things had ſuch profit beene gotten, that neither Peru with his Gold, nor India with his Trafficke, had ſurpaſt them: for there is more Gold in Damute and her Prouinces, then in Peru, which might haue beene gotten without the expences which the India maketh, and without warre.

More profit in this aduenture, then in the Eaſt or Weſt Indies.

Of my ſelfe I gaue alſo ſome account in this Treatiſe, though not much, not to trouble you, as I haue ſaid: for I trauailed many yeares in thoſe Countries, and paſſed many troubles for the ſeruice of God and of your Highneſſe, wherewith I ſhould haue wearied your eares if I had told thē, or the leſſe part of them: For the firſt time I went to India, I went in company of Lope Suarez, Alfonſus of Alburkerke being Gouernour of it, and was there to the time of Iames Lopez of Sequera, by whoſe commandement I paſſe to the Preſbyter Iohn of Ethiopia, in company of Don Rodericke of Lyma, and the Father Franciſcus Aluarez, which returned from thence with an Ambaſſadour of that Emperour, called Tagazauo, of whom I made mention in the beginning of this worke, in whoſe gage and hoſtage I remained in that Countrey: in the which they alwaies ſhewed me great honour and good vſage, to the Emperors taking me for God-father of his ſonne and heire Gradeus, and before the death of his Patriarch, called Abuna Marcus, he elected mee Patriarch of that Countrey and his Empire, according to his cuſtome, and deſired me on his behalfe and mine to goe to Rome, to giue the obedience to the chiefe Biſhop, and to deſire him he would confirme to me that dignitie and Patriarch-ſhip, and from thence to Portugall, to doe that which I ſaid in the beginning of this Booke. Which iourney I made by Land comming to Cayro, and to Ieruſalem, and was taked by the Turkes and miſuſed, and almoſt ſlaine, but by Gods aſſiſtance I came to Rome, in the time of the holy Father Paul the third, who not onely approoued my election, but inſtituted me beſides, and confirmed mee Patriarch of Alexandria, * and gaue me perſonally the poſſeſſion of that Seat. And in teſtimony of the truth of all this, he commanded to paſſe me his accuſtomed Letters and Authenticall Inſtruments, which were ſeene and approued in this kingdome, which I loſt with many other things in the battaile where

He paſſed to Ethiopia with Aluarez.

An eaſie thing to be liberall of another mans.

Don Chriſtopher was taken, and becauſe I ſhew them not they mocke me: but it is no matter, ſeeing God knoweth the truth, and knoweth how much I laboured for the reſtoring of the Faith and Religion of that Countrey. He forgiue my aduerſaries, and to me he will giue himſelfe in reward of my trauails, and to your Highneſſe long life, peace and proſperitie in this life, and in the life to come eternall glorie, Amen.

Chap. VIII.

Late Changes of State and Religion in Ethiopia, with other remarkable Obſeruations.

§. I.

Relations of IOHN NVNNEZ (or NONIVS) BARETVS ſent for Patriarke of Ethiopia, and ANDREA OVIEDO his Succeſſor.

P. Iar. Theſaurus rer. Ind. l. 3. De Abaſſinorum reb. N. God. lib. tres.

* God. l. 2. c. 14. & ſeq.

* Gradeus.

IOhn Bermudez * a Spaniſh Prieſt had been ſent by the Romane Biſhop into Abaſſia, which Patriarchall dignitie (before this miſſion of Nonius) and hauing beene taken by Turkiſh Pirats, yet after diuers Aduentures, perced into Ethiopia, where by Claudius * the Emperour he was well entertained in ſhew, to hold the Portugals the faſter to his ſuccours in the Warre againſt the King of Adel: who being ſlaine, he would acknowledge no other Patriarke to him nor his, but the Alexandrian. Hence aroſe great hatred of the Abaſſines vnto Bermudez, inſomuch that it was vulgarly bruted that he had ſtolne a Veſſell of Gold out of a Church: ſo that hee was forced to returne into Europe. Him haue I (being then a Boy) ſeene at Liſbon, where hee made an end of his life and labours.

Peter an Abaſſine.

About thoſe times, one Peter an Abaſſine, a Monke of Saint Antonies Order, with ſome others of his profeſſion came to Rome, who being of a forward and induſtrious diſpoſition, learned the Latine and Italian Tongues, and eaſily inſinuated himſelfe into the fauours of many; dealt alſo with Pope Paul the Third, very earneſtly to ſend another Patriarke into Ethiopia: as for Bermudez, their wanted not cauſes of that hatred which he had incurred; but for any other, hee ſhould no ſooner ſet foot in Ethiopia, but all men would adhere to him, forſaking the Alexandrian and his Abuna. The Pope by Letters commended the buſineſſe to the King of Portugall, to chooſe a man fit for this buſineſſe, who named thereunto Peter Faber, and writ to the Pope to confirme him; but death tooke him away. The Abaſſine continuing his importunate ſute: in the yeare 1554. Iulius the Third gaue eare hereto, whoſe Buls were ratified by Paul the Fourth his Succeſſor, in whoſe time Nonius was conſecrated at Liſbon, and with him Ouiedo, the one Patriarke, the other entitled Biſhop of Hierapolis. King Iohn gaue many holy Veſtments of Silke and Damake richly and curiouſly wrought; Croſſes, Chalices, Pyxes, and other Veſſels of Gold and Siluer to commend the Romane Pietie by this ſacred ſplendour to the Abaſſine Nation.

Peter Faber.

Nonius before his iourney to leaue behind him Monuments of Ieſuiticall Humiliation (the heart makes it Humilitie by the diſcreet manner and diuine end, which otherwiſe in moſt ſeruile Offices is as meerely titular as was his Patriarkſhip) in this his Patriarchicall dignitie made himſelfe a Seruant to the Societie, wayting on them at Table, yea, (his Epiſcopall Ring laid aſide) was a continuall helper of the Cooke, waſhed with care and pleaſure, the Diſhes, Boxes, Pots, and either Veſſels of the Cookerie; beſides this, hee was a diligent Hearer of Confeſſions, not refuſing once in the night to goe to a meane Cottage to ſhriue a Negro Slaue. Before he went his Patriarchall Voyage, the King ſent to Peter Maſcaregna, the Vice-Roy, to ſend an Ambaſſage into Ethiopia, to prepare way to the Patriarch, who ſent Iames Dias with Gonzales Rode-

Ieſuiticall humilitie vnknowne to Prophets and Apoſtles, Offices Eccleſiaſticall are called Orders, holy Orders: God is a God of Order, Ordo, ſaith Saint Aug. eſt parium impariumque rerum ſua ſuique loca tribuens diſpoſitio. Saint Paul bids men walke in their calling, and forbids inordinateneſſe. Babylon hath name of Confuſion. And what inordinate Confuſion, how confuſed Orders are a Patriarch-Scullion, a Biſhoppe continuall Coqui adiutor? &c. Euen as hee which ſtiles himſelfe a Seruant of Seruants, and a Biſhop, and makes himſelfe King of Kings, yea, Depoſer and Tranſlator. Chriſt once waſhed his Diſciples feet, yet did not the Apoſtles ordinarily doe it, but had their Widowes for this ſeruice. Let Francis and Ignatius with their followers, be Examples of lowſie lowlineſſe, and ſcullerie humilitie. To mee hee is humble, which beareth patiently what God ſends and doth not ſend for phantaſticke croſſes; which breakes not his ranke to ſeeke Enemies, but valiantly holds and fights in his owne file and ſtanding; which denies himſelfe to obey God, and not neglects God to pleaſe himſelfe, in men-dazzling will-worſhips, in Muſters and Monſters of needleſſe ſhewes, vnmortified mortifications, and perhaps proud humiliations.

ricke a Ieſuit Prieſt. Who in the year 1555. arriued at Ercoco, which then belonged to the Abaſſine, to whom they went thence by Land: and hauing declared their meſſage, and deliuered the Kings Letters, they find his mind altered (for he had written before to King Iohn in that buſineſſe.) But the whole Diſcourſe will better appeare in Rodericke's Letter in September, 1566. from Ethiopia to the Ieſuites in Goa: which (ſo much as concerneth this purpoſe) I haue heere tranſcribed.

ON the fifteenth of May, we came to the King of Ethiopia. He was then in his Campe encompaſſed with many Pauilions. Beeing certified of our arriuall, hee commanded a Lodging to bee prouided where we might bee entertained. The next day wee had acceſſe. Hee ſate in his Tent ſpread with a faire Carpet, and adorned with ſilken Hangings on a Bed, the Curtaine opened. Iames approaching deliuered him the Kings Letters, which hee commanded to bee read before all the Portugals in the Campe, with a loud voyce. In them the King ſignified amongſt other things, that the next yeare hee would ſend thither one of his Houſhold, and ſome Religious men beſides, famous for life and learning. Claudius frowned at the hearing hereof, but anſwered nothing to the purpoſe: and thus diſmiſſed, wee returned to our Lodgings. Two or three dayes after hee went to ſee his Grand-mother ten dayes iourney thence: and we were left in the open field, not hauing one man in the Emperours name to prouide vs any thing. Yet were we not forſaken of God, by whoſe prouidence and bountie it came to paſſe, that a Portugall tooke care of vs, and brought vs to a place whereof he was Lord, three leagues diſtant, entertained vs at his Houſe, and commending to his the care of vs, followed after the Emperour. Heere wee ſpent almoſt a moneth, in which time I writ a Booke of the Errours of the Abaſſines, and the truth of the Romane Faith, to offer it to Claudius at his returne. For hee openly ſaid, as I learned of a Portugall, neere about him, that hee neyther needed our Doctrine, nor intended to obey the Romane Church. It was alſo commonly reported, that ſome of the Chiefe men did openly affirme, that they would more eaſily ſubiect their neckes to the yoke of Saracens, then exchange their Cuſtomes with ours. Which did the more confirme mee, to deliuer my mind rather in writing then by word; ſo to learne his Anſwere and vnmaske his opinion ſo long cloſely concealed. So ſoone therefore as hee returned to theſe parts, wee went to his Campe and were entertained of the Portugall Souldiers. For the Emperour had quite forgotten vs, nor cared to know how or where we liued. Now, becauſe I had made my Booke in Portugueſe, and it was neceſſarie to turne it in Chaldee, I petitioned of him by Letters, to aſſigne me two of the beſt learned Monkes to turne ſome Doctrines of Chriſtian Faith into the Chaldee Tongue: for I would in writing ſhew how vndeſeruedly the Abaſſines reckoned the followers of the Romane Faith amongſt Heretikes, and affirmed, that they were worſe then Mahumetans: for ſo they openly ſaid and reported.

Abaſsines blind zeale.

A Booke called the adulterie of the Frankes, that is, of the Weſterne Church.

The diſcourſe betwixt the Negus and the Ieſuit.

And becauſe I knew that they had a Booke which they called the Adulterie of the Frankes, made by the Alexandrine Schiſmatikes, wherein the Chalcedon Councell is reprooued, and many lyes are forged on vs; I deſired of the Emperour that I might haue the vſe thereof. The Booke hee denyed, the Monkes he granted; which yet when they had begunne to tranſlate the Booke, whether becauſe they had beene ſo commanded, or elſe were afraid of any thing, or for ſome other vnknowne cauſe, refuſed to proceed in the Enterpriſe: vntill that by the Portugall Captaines interceſſion, they were commanded to finiſh it, aſſiſted therein by a Portugall, an honeſt man, and well skilled in the Chaldee. When againe, I needed another to tranſcribe in right Characters that which was tranſlated, he was alſo deſired and obtayned of the Emperour. Yet had he ſcarſly begunne, when the Emperour in a rage ſent to reuoke him, and in his name to tell me that I ſhould not ſtay, but ſend him the Booke as it was, or ſurceaſe ſuch buſines. That the thing therefore might be no longer deferred, nor the Emperor haue any excuſe for his ſinne, I thought it neceſſary to ſhew him the Booke ill written and blotted, appointing thereto a certaine day, which was the twentieth of Auguſt. When that day was come, with the Captaine and ſeuen or eight other Portugals, I preſent my ſelfe before him, and hauing ſaluted him, ſhew the cauſe of my comming. He forbids me to proceed, and diuerting his ſpeech to another matter, warily eſcheweth all the blowes made at him. Then I letting other things paſſe offered him the Booke, which beginning to reade, hee conceiued ſo great fury, that he could not but vtter his concealed Poyſon. Thou askedſt (ſaid he) of me that thou mighteſt make a Booke wherein to declare the veritie of the Faith, and Monkes to tranſlate it into Chaldee, both which I granted. And behold, thou haſt done quite otherwiſe. For neither doſt thou explaine the veritie of Faith, but doeſt aſcribe Errours to them which are free from Errors. Thou ſhouldeſt alſo haue knowne how farre this thine Enterpriſe diſagrees with thy condition, which art but a ſimple Prieſt. Knoweſt thou not that theſe things belong to Biſhops, and pertaine only to great Prelates? Why haſt thou thruſt thy Sickle into anothers Harueſt? I confeſſed my ſelfe a man of ſmall worth, yet to haue done nothing diſcrepant with my condition, ſeeing I had written thoſe things which are plainly contained in the Booke of the Goſpels, and in the Holy Councels, and which are to be beleeued of a Chriſtian man. Thou obiecteſt ſaid he, many Errors to me and mine, wherwith we are not entangled, I determine not of your Faith, O Emperour, quoth I, but I am ſure your Abaſſines are erroneous, nor doe I falſly aſcribe any thing to them. If it pleaſe you to make tryall, you may command your Monkes and moſt learned men in your Empire to come hither, and I will make it appeare, that they are ſo enſnared in the Errours there mentioned, as none ſhall be able to denie. He replyed, that he hated the Quirkes of Diſputations, and that it was the cuſtome of Ethnikes to commit their Superſtitions to Queſtions, which Chriſtians, eſpecially the

An iquitie pleaded againſt Rome forth Abaſsine Errour and long Peace.

* Where is it?

the ancient did altogether forbeare. There had now paſſed aboue one thouſand yeares ſince they profeſſed that Faith: if any part thereof were falſe, how chanced that in ſo many yeares none durſt doe as I had done? I anſwered, that God prouoked by bad workes of men often ſuffered them to fall into euill: that he ought to giue great thankes to God that he ſent in the time of his life and Reigne, one to ſhew the way of the ſincere Faith. Then He. The Church of Chriſt hath beene diuided into foure Seas, we are ingraffed into one of theſe from the beginning: from it right and Lawes prohibit to be now ſeparated. I aſſent (quoth I) that there were foure Patriarchall Seas from the beginning, but the Romane by Diuine * Statute was preferred before the reſt, as the Head Mother, and Miſtris of all. When others haue failed, whoſoeuer obey them againſt the Romane, are Enemies, and miſerably diuided from their Head. Looke in my Booke, there ſhall you find the Solutions of all doubts which you propounded. But take diligent heed that the ſpeech of the Prophet, Noluit intelligere, vt bene ageret, be not applyed to you. After many words on both ſides, the Portugall Captaine being Interpreter, I added at laſt, that I wrote my Booke to that purpoſe, that I might know whether his Errours laid aſide, he would obey the Romane See, and entertaine thoſe Religious and Learned men which the King of Portugall ſent him. For if hee would not entertaine and heare them, there was no cauſe that they ſhould come to Ethiopia, which ſought nothing but the ſaluation of the Abaſsines. He anſwered, that hee had Learned and Religious men in his Kingdomes, and therefore needed not that any ſhould be ſent from any other place; neither was it euer in his mind to ſubiect himſelfe or his Countrey to the Romane Biſhop. For that which Gaſpar Magalanes had done in his name with the King of Portugall, was done by the miſtaking of an Arabian Monke which tranſlated his Letters and vnderſtood not his minde. Once; beſides the Alexandrian Patriarch, whom alway hee hath obeyed faithfully, he would acknowledge no Superiour in holy things at all. Whereupon, being out of hope to mollifie his obſtinate mind, hauing leaue I departed. When I went away, looking vpon the Portugall Captaine, he highly commended my Learning, ſaying, that hee much maruelled how beeing ſo young, I could bee ſo excellent in knowledge. I learned after that hee read my Booke thorow, and often had it in his hand, and ſhewed it to his Mother, often to his Brethren, and other Princes of the Empire.

The Abuna can better curſe then diſpute. Leo condemned, Dioſcorus approued. The Romanes loſt that which they neuer had. For that Councell decreed the Priuiledges to Conſtantinople, with Rome (except Prioritie of order) and that (not vpon promiſe by Chriſt, or Succeſſion from Peter) becauſe that and this were Imperiall Cities: and the Councell of Nice acknowledged Alexandrias Priuiledges in Africa, equall to the Romane in Europe.

It was alſo told me that the Abuna knowing what was in it, forbade the reading thereof with a grieuous Curſe. Therefore, the ſecond day after a Meſſenger was ſent to him from the Prete, which in his name might aske leaue to reade it, which the Abuna denying, the Emperour in a rage gaue him many reproachfull and contumelious words, called him Heretike and Mahumetane, which read the Alcoran of the falſe Prophet Mahumet, and forbade ſo holy a Booke, and made by ſuch an Authour to bee read. He added further, that ſeeing he came into thoſe Abaſsine parts to performe the Office of an Abuna and Doctor, he ſhould ſpeedily anſwere to thoſe things which a ſimple Prieſt oppoſed. The Abuna denyed that hee would enter into any Diſputation againſt me: for he came into Abaſsia not to diſpute, but to giue Orders. Nothing was more common in mens mouthes, and ſome Countries fauoured our part, others the contrarie: whereupon the Emperour ſends for ſome Monkes in beſt reputation of Sanctitie and Learning, and commanded them to tranſcribe my Booke very purely. I was much afraid, leſt they would haue left out ſome things which I knew the Emperour was diſguſted eyther to heare or ſee, as thoſe things which I had written of Pope Leo, and Dioſcorus the Patriarke of Alexandria. For the Abaſsines thinke and ſay, that Dioſcorus was a Saint, Leo a bad Man, whom they ſo much hate that they cannot heare his name without horrour. Alſo they reiect the Chalcedon Councell for Errour in Faith, and ſay that it condemned Dioſcorus vniuſtly. Therefore, euer ſince the time of that Councell (the Decrees whereof they wholly reiect) they haue beene diuided from the Romane Church.

They follow alſo the Hereſie of Sergius Paulus and Pyrrhus, condemned by the ſixt Synode at Conſtantinople, and many other Errours. When the time was come that the Emperour ſhould anſwere me, as he had promiſed, I went to the Court, and ſent one to ſignifie to him that I expected an Anſwere. Whereto he ſaid that his Fathers Ambaſſadour had beene tenne yeares in Portugall, neither could hee diſpatch his Affaires in all that ſpace: it is therefore meete that the Ambaſſadour of the King of Portugall ſhould patiently waite my Anſwere. I perceiued whither theſe things tended, nor did I thinke it fit to ſtay any longer, but deſired leaue to depart into India. He cunningly deferred, as a thing vnmeete, that I ſo great a man ſhould ſo ſoone be gone, ſpecially hauing come to treat of Matters ſo weightie; nor could I ſpend my time better then in hearing there the Portugals Confeſſions. But if I were fully reſolued to depart, I ſhould yet giue him one monethes ſpace to anſwere: that being paſt, if I had no Anſwere, I ſhould diſſemble an Anſwere, and might goe whither I would.

a Diſcourſe of the Queene & the Ieſuite.

b Would God this were their one and only, for then their errour would bee found the Ancient and Catholike Truth.

After this, on the fourth day of October, the Emperours Mother ſent a Seruant to mee, deſiring to ſpeake with mee, and to ſee the Chalice which I had brought from Goa, a thing much magnified amongſt them. I went preſently with ſome Portugals, all which ſhee was willing ſhould enter with me. After [a] a few words, comming to talke of Religion, ſhee ſaid, Seeing your Faith and ours differ nothing but are one and the ſame, What needed it I pray, to write any thing thereof, and make a cauſeleſſe broyle? Whereto I briefely, Whether your Abaſsines hold the right Truth you may perceiue by my Writings. Thus I affirme to thee, O Empreſſe, although you had no other Errour, this one, [b] that you are ſeparated from the Romane Biſhop, the Vicar of Chriſt on Earth, it would bee enough and more, vnto eternall deſtruction. She anſwered, that ſhe and her people were ſubiect to Peter and Paul, the Apoſtles, and eſpecially to Chriſt himſelfe. I denyed, that he is ſubiect to Chriſt which is not ſubiect to his Vicar; when Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, He which heareth you * heareth me, and he which deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me. And if it be true which the Euangeliſt Iohn from the ſame Lord relateth, that there ſhall be One Shepheard, and one Sheepefold, whom did ſhe thinke to be that Shepheard? She anſwered, Saint Peter *. If ſaid I, Peter be that one Shepheard, the ſame Office muſt needs agree to them which in order ſucceed Peter. She anſwered, neither I nor mine deny obedience to Saint Peter: We are now in the ſame Faith wherein we haue beene from the beginning: if that bee not right, why did none admoniſh vs in ſo many Ages? Heere I, the Romane Biſhop, which is Paſtor of the whole Church of Chriſt, could not in the yeares paſſed ſend into Abaſſia, by reaſon of the Mahumetans ſtopping vp the paſſage. But the way by Sea being now open, he is able to doe it. Shee ſhould take knowledge that the Common-wealth of Chriſt whereſoeuer it is, is one myſticall body, which in Heauen hath Chriſt the Head, in Earth the Vicar of Chriſt, which is the Head of all Chriſtians. It may not bee doubted, but that members muſt be ſubiect to their Head, and to be directed thereby. From the time the Church began till the yeare 488. it was well in Abaſſia, and all the Patriarchs of Alexandria, but thenceforth they fell to ruine. If they would attaine ſaluation, they ought againe to conioyne with their lawfull Head, and become one bodie with him: for Chriſt himſelfe had ſaid, That there ſhould be but one Sheepfold in the Church, and one Shepheard: but one body except it were monſtrous, could haue but one Head; whereas the body of Chriſt is moſt perfect, and free from all filthineſſe. So great a worke ſaid ſhe, as that is, to wit, that the reſt of the members be ioyned with the Romane Head, belongs nothing to me, nor to thee. It is meete, that other Patriarchs congregated with the Romane, ſhould deliberate of ſo weightie a matter, and decree by their authoritie what is to bee done: For to forſake old Cuſtomes and Rites by priuate counſell, and to vndertake new, is a thing full of danger and offence. I on the other ſide ſaid, That they were very ancient which the true Faith teacheth, nor haue any noueltie in them, and therefore it did rather take away then giue offence, whatſoeuer is done according to the rule of Faith.

* The Apoſtles were no body with this Ieſuite; or all are ſwallowed into the Romiſh Whirlepoole: and no maruel, for Chriſts owne prerogatiue, Of one Paſtor, is next arrogated: as it the Church had no Chriſt to be Paſtor, nor no Apoſtles to heare, but the Roman: called to that headſhip by Phocas, and ſince this diſpute, publiſhing a new Creed added to the Trent Councell. The Abaſsine and Ieſuite haue diuided the truth betwixt them in ſome things, which in ſome other both want. Omnia probate, quod bonum eſt tenete.

After ſome other ſuch like things, followeth in the ſame Epiſtle of Gonzalus. A few daies after, the Emperor remoued this Camp to a place a daies iourney diſtant, and we followed him. When we were in a certaine field, three Monkes came to me; one of which was accounted learned, and was very deſirous to ſee and ſpeake with me about Religion. In the beginning of his ſpeech he confeſſed, that all our things pleaſed him, but yet he could not approue that we neither obſerued the (Saturday) Sabbath, nor abſtained from Swines and Hares fleſh, vomiting out other venome. For he affirmed, that the ſoules of the iuſt departing out of this life, although nothing remaine in them to be purged, are not yet preſently receiued in Heauen to ſee God, but are conueyed to earthly Paradice, there to expect the end of the world. That the Holy Ghoſt proceedeth onely from the Father. That the Sonne is equall to the Father in regard of his humane Nature. That onely Mahumetans and Ethnicks after their death, are caſt into Hell, to abide there euerlaſtingly: but Chriſtians which liue badly are there to be tormented in the fire of Hell, till they purge their ſinnes: for all which are ſigned with the Character of Baptiſme, ſhall at laſt be ſaued, and ſo he conſtrued Chriſts words, He which ſhall be beleeue and be baptized, ſhall be ſaued. But I ſo conuinced his errors by reaſons and Scriptures, that comming neerer, he acknowledged himſelfe ſatisfied. But leſt his Fellowes which were vnlearned ſhould heare, he whiſpered thus to mee. The things which thou teacheſt are true, and I will keepe them all in my mind, and ſo went away. The moneth being paſt, I went to the Emperour, and deſired an anſwer and leaue to depart. Hee anſwered, I might be gone at my pleaſure.

* Chriſt ſaith, I am that good Shepheard, &c. Iohn 10. and by Peter, is ſtill ſo acknowledged, and other miniſteriall Paſtors of their flocks to feed them, not to domineere, &c. 1. p. 5.

Groſſe errors of the Abaſsines about the Sabbath & meats, &c. Diuers others moſt abhominable.

As touching the religious men which King Iohn ſends me; when they ſhall come to Mazua, there ſhall be ſome to receiue and conduct them to me, I ſhall willingly heare them diſcourſing of the Faith. Then departed I from him and betooke me to my iourney. By the way, I viſited ſome Townes of the Portugals, heard many of their confeſſions, brought ſome of them from Concubines to lawfull Wedlocke, their Concubines firſt (being Abaſſines in Sect and Nation) inſtructed in the Romane Doctrine, and reuoked to the Faith. Becauſe the Churches of this Region are conſecrated to the holies of Schiſmatickes, neither haue Altars accommodated to our vſes, wee carried an Altar with vs. When I was in one of theſe Townes, one came thither to ſalute me, ſent from a principall Abbat, which ſixe miles off ruled two great Monaſteries; one of Monkes, the other of Nuns. The name is Beliuanos, or Plurimanes, famous in thoſe parts. For from thence proceeds whatſoeuer is to bee beleeued in all Abaſſia, becauſe there is thought to bee the rule of Faith, and for that cauſe the Abbot himſelfe is in great honour amongſt all. I thought it meete to viſite theſe Monaſteries, and went together with the Portugall, my Companions. The Abbot was abſent, I briefely viewed the Monaſteries. Both they and the Monkes much differ from ours. Each of them hath his owne little houſe ſeparated from others: hee hath his owne part of ground which he tilleth for himſelfe. So are they all diuided in habitation and occupation, that you would thinke you ſaw not a Monaſterie, but a ſmall Village. And although the Monkes dwell on one ſide, and the Nuns on the other, yet are they not ſo ſeparated, but that many Children are ſaid to be begotten betwixt them. Their Order or Family is neither Franciſcan nor Dominican but is called Tecleay Manot. This was the name of the Founder, which with them ſignifieth, The Pillar of the Faith. He hath great opinion of ſanctitie among the Abaſſines, and is ſaid to haue wrought many Miracles. That is the moſt famous, that hee ſlue a Serpent, eſteemed by the Ethnicks for a God, and conuerted the Ethnicks: firſt to the Faith of Chriſt, and after that, many of them to this forme of life. Thus much Gonzalus.

Plurimanos Monaſtery very famous.

Abaſsine Monkes.

The Nuns.

Letter of Alfonſus of France a Portugall, to Gonzalus.

Alfonſus of France a Portugall, which had bene Interpreter betwixt the Emperour and this Gonzalus, did write to Goa to him, touching a diſcourſe twixt the ſaid Emperour and him, touching the ſaid hereſie of Dioſcorus, which he had ſaid might bee euinced by holy Scripture, and authoritie of Saints and Councels. If your Scripture, ſaid the Emperour ſo deemeth of vs, God knowes what ours deemeth of you. I know, quoth I, That the followers of the Romane Faith are eſteemed Heretikes of the Abaſſines, and accounted Neſtorians, as if we admitted two perſons in Chriſt, as well as two Natures; for ſo they had often obiected * to me with contumely: and after mention of his yearely re-baptizing, contrary to Saint Pauls ſaying; One Faith, one Baptiſme, he grew very angry, and threatned me with his Sword, but ſeeing my conſtancie he departed. He concludes, I thus thinke Gonzales, that this Emperour will more eaſily endure the yoake of Saracens, then of the Romane Biſhop.

* Therefore Claudius had obiected foure Gods to Bermudez.

Exorciſing the Seas & Winds. Let this be a generall rule to the Reader, to beleeue a Ieſuite leſt in things neereſt Rome, in other things to giue him Faith, where this Romiſh Faith is not a brewing. For I diſclaime not their humanity, though I truſt not their diuinitie in all points. Yet euen Iannes and Iambres againſt Moſes, did as great miracles as this, or as any which I beleeue of their relation done by theirs. Falſe Prophets haue, Deut. 13. and falſe religions, pretend miracles, 2. Re. 1. which Iohn Baptiſt, an extraordinary and true Prophet had not.

On the thirtieth of March, 1556. Iohn Nonius Barret, Patriarch of Ethiopia, Andrew Ouiedo, Biſhop of Hierapolis, and other Ieſuites ſayled from Liſbon to the Eaſt. In the way a great Tempeſt happened, which (ſaith our Author) by the Patriarchs Prayers was appeaſed. For taking water in a veſſell, and (attired in his holy Veſtments) bleſſing the ſame, he ſprinkling part of it in the Sea, part on the Sailes, Tackling, and other part of the Ship, with a certaine forme of Prayer brought to paſſe, that the Seas and Winds were quiet. Well; if hee could alſo haue giuen ſound lims to Francis Rodericke, his fellow Ignatian, whoſe helpe he vſed in hearing the confeſſions of the Paſſengers, being a man lame and going on Crouches. So ſhould hee haue freed him from that ſcoffe of the Moores at Moſambike, that his Arguments could not ſtand againſt Mahomet, himſelfe being ſo lame; nor could they bee right, himſelfe being ſo crooked. He anſwered well, That their Sect was more deformed then he, and wanted both feete and head too. But the Miracle might haue cured his bodie and their ſoules, or done good in Abaſſia, if their miracles were as readie before Infidels, or thoſe whom they call Heretikes, whoſe curious eyes may examine them, as before Catholikes, whoſe credulitie rather makes then findes them. Once, miracles are not for Beleeuers (which muſt walke by Faith, not by ſight) but for Infidels. But let vs leaue their myſticall tales, and come to the Hiſtoricall Relation. Hauing ſtayed a moneth at Moſambike, they proceeded to Goa, where diſcouraged by Gonzalus his Letters, he aduiſed with others, which thought it meeteſt that he ſhould ſtay at Goa till King Iohn might haue knowledge, and that Ouiedus with ſome others of the ſocietie, meane while ſhould be employed in that Ethiopian buſineſſe. This was put in execution: and Nonius aboade at Goa ſix years ſpace, which he ſpent in his daily Maſſings, Contemplations, hearing Confeſſions: ſomtimes viſiting the Kitchin (as before) alway mending his owne cloaths when they were torne; ſweeping alſo his Chamber, and the reſt of the houſe, carrying forth the Duſt to the place appointed: often waſhing Pilgrims feete, and on ſet daies of Nouices; moſt obſeruant of all the Lawes of the ſocietie, how free ſoeuer from any Superiour, but the Pope onely. Hee dyed in December, 1562.

* I rehearſe theſe things in the Story of Ieſuites, that the world may ſee by what art they attained to that reputation in the Papacy: dazeling mens eyes with a ſeeming ſplendour of humilitie, ſuch as is reiected, Col. 2. vlt. laying this low foundation to their haughtie aſpiring, creeping to the loweſt, and terrifying the higheſt. Phil. 1.

Andrew Ouied a Caſtilian, was appointed by Ignatius, according to the Popes Order, an Adiutor to the former Patriarch whilſt hee liued, and his Succeſſour after his death: and was with him conſecrated Biſhop of Hierapolis, as before is ſaid. His Kitchin and Chamber labours, and domeſticall other ſeruices, fetching Water in Earthen Veſſels on his ſhoulder, lying on the ground among Beggers and famous humilities, I omit (not enuying thoſe new-coyned vertues * to that new Societie; I hold it much better, they were all buſied in the Indian Skulleries and drudgeries, then in European State-affaires. I know bodily exerciſe is eaſie to them which loue not their eaſe, and light to ſuch as delight to be magnified, as hath appeared in Phariſees, Eſſees, in Baals Prieſts, Molochs Votaries, Turkiſh and Ethnicks Regulars; I had not mentioned theſe things, but that the Ieſuits vſe to inſult and inſtult ſo much hereon) I magnifie more both Ouiedo and others, for whatſoeuer labours vndertaken by the Kings Miſſion (I quarrell not altogether the Popes Commiſſion) to reduce ſtrayed ſoules, as were theſe of Abaſſia, whither we now follow him. I am not angry with vertuous deſignes, neither in Pope nor Ieſuite; yea, in ſuch things I honour them: neither will I for their ſakes thinke worſe of that which is a good deede, if not altogether well done, materially commendable, if any way formally defectiue. When they ſeeke knots in Ruſhes, and would deforme reformed Chriſtians, let them haue Peters, Get thee behind me Sathan: but in conuerting the Gentiles from peruerſe errors, or this Abaſſia from Iewiſh, Iacobite, Monothelite hereſies, I will aſſiſt them with my Prayers, and applaud their endeuours: and ſay, Fleſh and blood hath not taught them this, but the heauenly Father; and if Chriſt be truly preached, whether vnder a pretence or ſincerely, I therein ioy, and will ioy. Let them ſtill compaſſe the world to win Proſelites if it be not to compaſſe the world, and circumuent their conuerts; yea, as Moſes learned of Iethro to rule Gods people, ſo I would ſome of ours in Verginia or elſe-where, would follow the Ieſuites ſo farre as they follow Chriſt.

In the yeare 1557. on the Ides of Februarie, Ouiedo with fiue other Ieſuites, paſſed from Goa into Ethiopia: Their names were Antonie Fernandes, Andrew Galdanes, Gonzalus Cardoſius, Francis Lopez, Emanuel Fernandes. There were beſides ſome twentie Portugals: they arriued ſafe at Arcoco. Had they ſtayed fiue daies longer, they had loſt their Voyage, if not themſelues.

Mazua and Ercoco taken by the Turkes.

For on the ſecond of Aprill, the Türkiſh Admirall with a great Fleete tooke Mazua, (being then in the ayd of the King of Zeila) and Ercoco, alſo the only Port Towne then left to the Prete, fortifying them in ſuch ſort, that all paſſage to Chriſtians was preuented. Let vs here inſert the Letter of Emanuel Fernandez.

Letter of Emanuel Fernaudes.

ON our Ladie day in March, 1557. we came to Baroa, and the Barnagaſſo being certified of our comming, came to meet vs, and receiued vs, eſpecially the Biſhop, with ſignification of honour and good will. There was great reioycing of the people to ſee him, which came with great alacritie to kiſſe his hand. In that Citie we ſtayed twentie daies, in which happened the commemoration of our Lords Paſſion; and the myſteries of that holy weeke, we performed in the moſt pious manner wee could. On Good-Friday we made a pompous Proceſſion (reſpecting that place) from our Church to theirs. Great was the concourſe of people to vs, approuing and applauding the Romane Rites. Wee ſpent a good deale of time in hearing the Pontugals confeſſions, and other holies. Many of their Seruants and Children were annointed with Chriſme, and confirmed by the Biſhop. The Barnagaſſo came often to viſite him, and he often, but in vaine, exhorted them to the obedience of the Romane Church. The ſpring comming on, when thoſe parts were in feare of the Turke, we went from Baroa to the Emperour, in which wee ſpent fiftie daies, euery where meeting ſome of Portugall race which needed Sacraments. Eight daies before our arriuall at the Emperours Tent, one of his chiefe men was ſent to vs to ſalute the Biſhop in his name, and many Mules were brought for carriages. At laſt came one in the Emperors Name, to charge vs that we ſhould proceed no further without his command, which happened two daies after. When we were a little off from the Camp, the Emperour ſent word, and we pitched our Tents, and therein aboade that night. The day following about noone, many of the Royall blood, and others of the chiefe Nobilitie, not a few, preciouſly attired and well mounted, came to vs in our Tents. Two of theſe were of principall place, to whom was the office committed of conueying the Biſhop to the Emperour. Meane while the Emperour with his Mother and Brethren aſcended into a high place, whence he might behold vs comming. When we were come, the Prete *appointed that we ſhould paſſe on Horſe-backe into the firſt Court (an honorable courteſie, and differing from the Court cuſtome) and before the entrance of the ſecond Court, wherein was the Tent Royall, we alighted. At the doore of the Tent on both ſides were many men, venerable by Nobilitie or age, ranked in goodly order, and leaning on ſtaues. Heere we ſtayed a while. Then came forth two (*Iſaac the Barnagaſſo was one) which with lowly bowing of the whole body, ſaluted the Biſhop, and (we attending) led him in to the Emperour. He alſo ſhewed no ſmall ſignes of honour and loue to him at his comming. After that a few words had paſſed, Ouiedo produced his Letters from the Viceroy, the Patriarch, and others in India, which were preſently read in the preſence of all. The Emperour was not a little diſturbed therewith, nor was able to conceale his baokwardneſſe to the Romane Church: but warily, and being well affected to the Portugals, he indeuoured as well as he could to hide it, and to ſeeme well apayed: not ſo yet, but ſome euident ſignes of perfidiouſneſſe appeared. And although he neuer purpoſed to relinquiſh his errors, yet at the firſt he well entertained the Biſhop, and allowed him and his company large maintenance. Nor was there any which in word or deed durſt wrong vs, in reſpect of the Princes fauour. Set aſide his profidie, in the whole Abaſſine Empire, was not a man, whom the Emperour Claudius did not exceede in prudence, magnanimitie, and other royall vertues. He was very gentle and affable to the Biſhop, and alway gaue him ſome hope of reclaiming him. When they began to treat of Religion, Ouiedo deſired him that he would be preſent at their diſputations with them, which amongſt the Abaſſines were eſteemed moſt learned. He conſented and often heard the Biſhop arguing matters of Faith with a great troupe of men learned: but in regard of Claudius, all the reſt of that faction were mute. He alone both in heat of ſpeaking and eagerneſſe of victory, ſurpaſſed all which he brought into that contention with him, and with ſuch dexteritie of wit did often defend his errors, that he wrought vs ſome trouble. And although Ouiedo alway got the victorie in diſpute, the aduerſaries yet (ſuch is the cuſtome of obſtinate minds) with laughters and immodeſt clamors, boaſted themſelues to haue gotten the better. When therefore the Biſhop ſaw that he preuailed nothing by this courſe of diſputing, he gathered in writing the erronious opinions of the Abaſſines, and offered the ſame confuted by reaſons and authorities to the Emperors reading. He tooke the ſame and read it, and as he could, anſwered in writing to euery thing, ſtifly auerring, that he would neuer yeeld obedience to the Romane Biſhop, nor decline from his Predeceſſors ſteps in things of Religion, but would hold that Faith which they held; and therefore in vaine did any mortall man indeuour to make him in any ſort to relinquiſh it. Herewithall he began alſo to ſhew ſome tokens of indignation againſt the Biſhop, and openly to affirme that his preſence was diſtaſtfull to him. Whereupon leſt he might prouoke againſt him and his the fury of an impotent man, hee thought beſt to yeeld to the time, and leauing the Emperor, ſought to draw others to the truth. Thus farre Emanuel.

Baroa, or Barua.

Commendation of Claudiu

But when Claudius heard that many of the Nobles and others, both Plebeians and Monks were by the Biſhop and his Companions brought out of their darkneſſe to light, he was much moued, the Abbots eſpecially with complaints incenſing him. Whereupon he ſent for him, and ſharply reproued him, commanding him to treat of the myſteries of Faith with the Portugals, and their Poſteritie, but with none of his Abaſſines. He anſwering, that he was therefore ſent thither, and muſt obey God rather then Man, what danger ſoeuer he incurred; ſo prouoked the Emperor, that Malachales: the Author doubteth whether they were of the Amalekites poſteritie. Modeſty of a Moore.

Adamas Emperour.

Ouiedo baniſhed three times.

Miracles like a bad herb, make the Ieſuits Stories often diſtaſtfull and doubtfull. You cannot haue their Roſe without ſuch prickles: or any remote religious Storie without ſuch vanitie. Other miracles they tell which I haue omitted, as enquiring more after the Abaſſine ſtate and Church, then Popiſh miracles.

he reuiled him, and forbad him to come any more in his ſight: telling him further, that his labour was vaine to impoſe on him or his the Popes yoake. This was in the yeare 1559. in Ianuarie. In Februarie following, the Saracens called Malachales inuaded thoſe parts. On Maunday-Thurſday was a battell betwixt them and the Abaſſines, in which theſe were put to flight, and the Emperour ſlaine, his head cut off and ſent with ludibrious triumph to the King of Adel. The Captaine of the Saracens, in acknowledgement that this victorie came from God, alighted off his Horſe, and triumphed on an Aſſe. To Claudius hauing no iſſue, his brother Adamas Segnedus ſucceeded, a man of euill qualities, and a cruell enemy to the Romane Faith. He had beene before taken in warre by the Saracens, and carried into Arabia, where denying Chriſt hee turned Mahumetan, but being redeemed by Claudius, he returned to the Abaſſine Faith. The Biſhop went to gratulate his ſucceſſion, and receiued honourable entertainment. But after that, vpon occaſion of Conuerts to the Romane Church, he commanded him to bee brought before him, and ſware, that if he proceeded in that kind, it ſhould coſt him his life: and then alſo rent his garment, and laid violent hands on him, at laſt condemning him to exile with Francis Lopez, in a barren high Mountaine, taking away his Chalice alſo, to hinder him from ſaying Maſſe. There they continued eight moneths, in Caues, lying on the ground, liuing on wilde herbs: this place alſo being a receptacle of Robbers, whence they ſet vpon Paſſengers. Hence at length he was deliuered by interceſſion of a Noble woman, which comming thither, ſaw (they ſay) a glorious light ſhining about his perſon and Manſion. He perſecuted alſo the Abaſſine Conuerts with death and baniſhment: fiue of which being caſt to the Lions, found the beaſts more mild then the Emperour, who againe ſent Andrew and them into exile: where being in danger of ſtaruing, at Ouiedos prayer (I will not vrge your credit) a Riuer (like Iordan) opened her bowels, and yeelded them a hidden treaſurie of Fiſhes. Againe, he was reuoked, and againe for like reconcilements to Rome exiled, hauing before offered with his own hands to take away his life, his ſword (by I know not what miracle) falling out of his hand. In this third exile, he adioyned all the Portugals, and that without their wiues and children. But a conſpiracie being ſet on foot by Iſaac Barnagaſſo, and others, which exalted Betanc Zarcar, illegitimate ſonne of the Emperors elder Brother, this made him ſend for the Portugals from their exile. In the firſt battell Adamas was ouerthrowne: in the next, he tooke and ſlue his Corriuall. In the third, another legitimate Brother of Zarcar was ſet vp, and the Turkes called to help with their Ordnance, which put Adamas to flight. This was in the yeare 1562. in the next yeare he died.

Malaſeguetus Emperour.

The Gale.

The Empire was now rent into diuers factions, ſome creating the ſonne of Adamas Emperor, others that brother of Zarcar, and ſome looking to other parts. Andrew, which was now Patriarch (Nonius being dead) got him into Tigrai, neere that famous Abbey, called Abba Guarima, and dwelt in Fremona, a ſmall Village, ſixteene yeares together, in which he neuer ſaw Abaſſine Emperor. For warre had ſet all things in ſuch combuſtion, that although he might reduce ſome Abaſſines, yet for reconciling that whole State was no opportunitie. Malaſeguetus the ſonne of Adamas raigned but ſeuenteene yeares (Barnagaſſo being dead) the Gale in the meane time, inuading, waſting, ouerthrowing and ſpoiling all in their way, poſſeſſing with victorious armes, aboue one hundred Regions or Shires, the greateſt part of the Empire in a ſhort ſpace. The Turks alſo from the Sea ſhoare which they held, made often inroads, ſlaying and captiuing many. Ouiedo meane while, was preſerued at Fremona.

Ouiedos Letter to the Pope.

Haruest loſt for want of labourers.

Sinari.

Sebaſtian King of Portugall vnderſtanding how things were deſperate in Abaſſia, dealt with the Pope to ſend this Biſhop to Iapon, which by Pius the fifth was granted, in the yeare 1556. The Copie hereof he receiued the next yeare from the Ieſuites of Goa, but excuſed himſelfe in a Letter to the Pope, alledging the Impoſſibilitie of getting thence by ſhipping, the Saracens infeſting thoſe Seas. But if fiue hundred Portugall Souldiers were ſent thither from India, which wee long (ſaith he) expect, and earneſtly deſire and hope in God to obtaine; there will be no doubt, but not onely the Abaſſine Rebels will come to the obedience of the Romane Church, but many Ethnicke people alſo to the Faith of Chriſt. For here are in Ethiopia innumerable idolatrous Nations, whom we may goe to without croſſing any Sea, and eaſily draw to the Faith. We know for certaine, that many of the Kingdome of Damute (which they ſay, extendeth from Moſambike to Sofala) haue come to the Emperour, and deſired to become Chriſtians, reiected notwithſtanding for priuate reſpects, he deſiring rather to haue them Slaues in condition, then in Religion Brethren. There were alſo three yeares ſince ſome of the Countrey called Sinari, which ſought to make peace with a certaine Prince, the Emperours Kinſman, with whom they had warres, and offered themſelues both to Tribute and Religion, but repelled by hatred and auarice, exceeding Charitie. There are almoſt innumerable of the neighbouring Ethnicks, whom the Saracen Merchants buy and ſell to the Turkes, which all would giue their names to Chriſt, if Couetouſneſſe did not peruert their Princes. Thoſe fiue hundred Portugall Souldiers, before mentioned, might preuent theſe euils, both with great commoditie to the Portugall affaires, and ſtrengthning the Indian power. For if the Turkes (which eaſily they may) doe firſt poſſeſſe Ethiopia, it is hard to ſay, how much they may thence endanger the Indian buſineſſe, being furniſhed in thoſe places with neceſſaries for ſhipping, Iron for Armes, prouiſion for Armies, Slaues for ſeruice, and the like. That Emperour which perſecuted the Romane Faith is dead. His Sonne which ſucceeded him is young, in iudgement weake, and in name rather then in power an Emperour. For hee hath the ſame Aduerſaries which conſpired againſt his Father, beeing both Principall in Nobilitie and the moſt in number. Whereby all things are ſo confuſed, and embroyled with Ciuill Diſſentions and Forreigne Warres, that nothing were more to bee wiſhed then ſome refuge of Peace, which the moſt know to conſiſt in the Romane Faith. And although the Monkes and many Nobles doe oppugne our Faith, and perſecute the Catholikes: yet the Communaltie, ſo much prompter to truth, as it is leſſe tyed with humane reſpects, doth appoue the Romane Decrees, as doe alſo of the chiefe men not a few.

We indeauour the Saluation of both by publike and priuate Preachings and Diſputations, with Writings alſo refelling Writings, not altogether in vaine. For ſome are conuerted and more would be, but for feare of puniſhments, an eagre Enemie of the Truth in baſe minds. This is the cauſe that in theſe places eſpecially, Religion deſireth an armed hand, that they which will may come without feare to the Catholike Tents, and thoſe which haue comne may abide conſtant. I am of opinion, holy Father, that this Ethiopian buſineſſe is very conducent to the enlarging and ſplendor of the Catholike Religion, although it be, as other things of weight, intangled with many difficulties. Yea, if I bee not much deceiued, no Expedition can now be offered, which can bring greater ornament to the Romane Church, or greater acceſſe to the Catholike Affaires. Here where now I am, about two hundred and thirtie Catholikes dwell, diuided in two little Townes, which therefore we haue lately built, that they which before with loſſe of their goods and greater danger of their ſoules, wandered like Pilgrimes thorow diuers parts of Ethiopia, might haue a fixed Seat, for inſtruction and Chriſtian Sacraments. Others not a few elſe-where, waite the oportunitie to come hither, &c.

An armed hand and band required to further the Ieſuits preaching in Abaſsia.

Thus did Ouiedo moue the Pope and the King to ſuffer him there to abide whiles he liued, ſtill vrging that band of fiue or ſixe hundred Portugall Souldiers to be ſent thither. In the yeare 1576. when the Abaſſine Emperour ſent a Meſſenger into India for that purpoſe, the Patriarch againe writ to the Pope about it, reckoning many Commodities which thence might redound to ſtabliſh there the true Faith. His Miracles, in iudgements inflicted on ſuch as tooke away his goods in procuring life and death by his Prayers, in chaſing away Graſhoppers, &c. I omit. He dyed of the Stone in September, 1577. and was buried at Fremona, where the Abaſſines, as they vſe to Saints, often made recourſe to his Graue, and offered Wheate, Frankincenſe, and other Odours.

And there our Author relates many Miracles to be done, which yet in Ieſuiticall Relations of remote parts are now no Miracles, nor rarities, they are ſo common. His fiue Companions Ieſuites, are by the Ieſuite our Authour alſo much commended for their Apoſtolicall life. Anthonie Fernandez was ſet ouer the reſt, and was the firſt which paſſed out of this life: Cardoſus the next, ſlaine by Theeues. Gualdarus was ſlaine by the Turkes. Lopez liued longeſt, and dyed in May, 1597. before whoſe death Melchior Syluius was ſent into Abaſſia, by the Arch-biſhoppe of Goa. As for Melchior Carnerus made Biſhop at Goa, to ſucceed Ouiedo in the Patriarchate of Æthiopia, becauſe he came not there, we haue alſo excluded him from hence. Anno, 1560. Fulgentius Freruis a Ieſuite ſent out of India to viſit Ouiedo, was taken by the Turkes in the Red Sea, and carried to Cairo: twentie yeares after the ſame happened to Anthonie Monſerrate and Peter Paez Ieſuites, which were ſeuen yeares in Captiuitie. Abraham Georges 1595. ſped better, being taken and martyred for confeſſing Ieſus in Mazua. But hauing a Colledge erected at Diu, P. Paez, Anno 1603. Anthonie Fernandez two yeares after with Fran. Anthonie de Angelis; Azeuedus and Mangonius 1606. were ſhipped by Moores at Diu, and carried to Abaſſia.

Ieſuits which paſſed to Abaſsia.

---

§. II.

Deſcription of the Countries, and the ſeuerall Regions, Religions, and Abaſſine Opinions.

THat part of Æthiopia, which is vnder or neere to Egypt, is called Abaſſia, namely, ſo much as is, or in more flouriſhing Eſtate of that Empire, hath beene ſubiect to the Negus; called Prieſt Iohn, by errour of Couilanus, followed by other Portugals in the firſt diſcouerie, applying by miſ-conceit through ſome like occurrents the Relations in M. Polo and others touching Preſbyter Iohn, in the North-eaſt parts of Aſia, (therefore called a Prieſt becauſe he had the Croſſe, as the Weſterne Archbiſhops vſed, carryed before him) vnto this King; the Abaſſines alſo in Europe, willing by names of neerer ſound to confirme that fancie, tending as they ſuppoſed, to the credit of their Prince. On the Eaſt it is bounded with the Red Sea from ten to twentie degrees of North Latitude, ending in Suachen, anciently called Aſpix. On the Weſt with high Monntaines riſing along, or neerer the Bankes of Nilus: the North parts extend as farre as Meroe, the South to Auia, thence reaching to Adel, a Kingdome of Moores, whoſe chiefe Citie is Ara in nine degrees of North Latitude. The whole circuit is ſixe hundred, or after others betwixt ſeuen and eight hundred leagues. The Name Abaſſia ſeemes deriued from Abaſes, which Strabo ſaith is giuen to inhabited places enuironed with Deſarts.

P. Iar. Theſ. l.3.c.3. N. God. de Abaſ rebus l.1.c.3.

Iohn Gabriel a Portugall.

Tigrai the firſt Kingdome.

Dancali.

Angote and the other fiue.

Aucaguerle.

Dabali.

Oecie.

Rozanagum.

Nerea.

Goroma, large and fertile.

Iohn Gabriel, ſometimes Generall of the Portugals in Abaſſia, a man expert in many Languages, hath written, that the Abaſſine Empire contayneth by ancient right, ſixe and twentie Kingdomes, diſtributed into fourteene Regions: The firſt eight lye from Suachen Weſtward. Tigrai containeth ſeuenteene Tracts or large Shires, each hauing a Lieutenant: the Turkes now poſſeſſe the Sea Ports hereof, and the Moores the adioyning Continent, the in-land parts are inhabited promiſcuouſly by Chriſtians and Heathens, blacke, miſerable and deformed within and without, in ſoule, bodie and ſtate. The next to Tigrai is Dancali, waſhed on the Eaſt by the Red Sea, thence extended Weſtward in a ſhort and barren Tract of Land, inhabited by Moores, tributarie to the Abaſſine. Angote followeth, the fourth Boa, the fifth Amara, the ſixth Leca, all inhabited by Chriſtians. The ſeuenth, is Abagamedri, very large, contayning ſeuenteene Tracts, inhabited partly with Chriſtians, partly with Ethnikes, as is alſo Dambea, hauing only two Tracts. On the other ſide of Dancali, along the Sea Coaſt runneth Aucaguerle, inhabited by Moores which acknowledge not the Abaſſine, abutting on Adel, the chiefe Citie Zeila, ſometimes Aualites. Next to it is Dabali, extending towards Mombaza, the Inhabitants partly Chriſtians, partly Mahumetans, tributary to the Negus. Oecie is within Land, partly Mahumetane, partly Ethnike, ſubiect to the Abaſſine: after which follow Arium, Fatigar, (both Chriſtians) and Zinger, Ethnike. The ſixteenth, is Rozanagum inhabited by Chriſtians, not ſubiect to the Prete. Hence to the North is Roxa an Ethnike Kingdome, Goma inhabited by Chriſtians and Ethnikes obeying the Abaſſine: towards Monomotapa is Nerea, both Chriſtian and Ethnike, a large Kingdome: Zethe only Ethnike, but ſubiect to the Emperour: after which are Conche, Mahaola, only Ethnike, and Goroma which hath twentie Tracts of Chriſtians and Gentiles, almoſt made an Iland by Nilus encompaſſing, able by the fertilitie to nouriſh diuers Armies (which almoſt continually infeſt it for that cauſe) the Sowers following the Reapers without other Tillage. The three laſt Kingdomes lye towards Egypt, to wit, Damote, Sua, Iaſculum: Sua, the heart and ſometime Chiefe Seat of the Empire: Iaſculum extends to Cairo, inhabited by Mahumetanes, yearely euery Lent trauelled by Pilgrims to Ieruſalem, going in Companies out of Dambea.

The names of the Prouinces are Dubane, Xuncho: Daraita, Bora, Calaoa, Aga; (theſe three are inhabited by Chriſtians in name, otherwiſe Ethnikes, the firſt of the former by Ethnikes, the next Saracens; the third Chriſtians) Arima, Arbum, Xancala, Xancora, Suggamo, Bergamo, Aris (which is on the other ſide of Nilus) Euara. Of all theſe Kingdomes, beſides Tigrai, Abagamedri, Goroma, and Dambea, ſcarcely any is ſubiect to the Abaſſine.

But foure Kingdomes now ſubiect to the Negus.

Riuers and Lakes.

Iewes.

Oara.

Gabea.

Lakes.

A. Fernandez his Letter.

The ſame Gabriel recordeth foure principall Riuers in this Abaſſine Æthiopia, and as many huge Lakes. The firſt Riuer is Taucea, running from the South to the North, but intrapped and drunke vp of the thirſtie ſands before it can pay Tribute to the Sea. It hath neighbouring Mountaines of admirable height, almoſt inacceſſible paſſage, and fortified ſcite, inhabited by Iewes, ſtill obſeruing the Moſaicall Ceremonies, dreadfull to the adioyning people. The ſecond Riuer is Oara, running into the Sea of Zeila, richer in waterie treaſures then Nilus: but ſuch is the Abaſſine Superſtition, that they refuſe to drinke of his pleaſant waters, becauſe it watereth in the paſſage the Regions of Mahumetans. (And is not ſome mens fancie of like phrenzie with vs, which refuſe our Churches for the liuing, Church-yards for their dead; and others not ſo ſicke, our Ceremonies and Rites, for a Popiſh paſſage, bee their Antiquitie, Innocencie, and ſeeming profitableneſſe neuer ſo plauſible, and nothing leſſe then Popiſh?) The third Riuer is Gabea, which runnes towards Mombaza, and the fourth Nilus. The firſt Lake, is Aicha in Angote: the ſecond is Dambeabahar, that is, the Sea of Dambea, not farre from Gubbai, where now is the Emperours Court, if at any time he leaues his Tents for the Citie: it is about threeſcore miles long, and fiue and twentie broad, admitting Nilus on one ſide. It hath many Fiſhes, Riuer-horſes, which endanger Sailers; and hath many ſmall Ilands therein to which Traytors are confined. The third Lake is Zella, in Oecie, the fourth not farre thence Xacala. Antonie Fernandez a Ieſuite, in a Letter dated 1610. attributes fortie Prouinces to Abaſſia, but in ſubſtance agreeth with Gabriel, whoſe Tracts are as huge as the others Prouinces.

Nature of the Abaſſine ſoile.

Wormes in the belly by vſe of raw fleſh.

THe ſame Fernandez addeth, that the Abaſſine ſoile is for the moſt part hollow and full of deepe openings. In the midſt of the Champaigne Plaines, in many places out of the hard Rocke ariſe Rockie Hils, which in times of warre ſerue them for Fortreſſes. The whole Countrey abounds with veines of Metall and Metall-medicines: but the Inhabitants partly by ignorance, and partly for feare of the Turkes Inuaſion, if ſuch things ſhould bee knowne, ſuffer them to lye hidden in the Earth. Only they make vſe of ſo much Iron as they find vpon the face of the Earth without digging. Of Plants and Trees is great varietie: but fruits not ſo pleaſant as in Europe. One yet there is very vſefull for the Wormes which breed in them by eating raw fleſh, which would gnaw thorow their entrailes, if they did not preuent that euill with monethly purgations by this Fruit, which both kils the Wormes and emptieth the belly. Peaches, Pomegranates, Indian Figs, Oranges, and Vines are there ſeene, but rare and few. Hares, Goats, Harts, Bores, Elephants, Camels, Buffals, Lions, Panthers, Tigres, Rhinocerotes, and other Creatures are there ſeene, and one ſo huge that a man ſitting on Horſe-backe, may paſſe vpright vnder his belly: his ſhape is like a Camell, but his nature diuers, feeding on leaues which he reacheth from the tops of Trees with his necke ſtretched forth. There are many Riuers and Lakes, in all which are Riuer-horſes innumerable very hurtfull to their Corne: of great bodies, and a mouth ſo wide that they can gape a Cubit and halfe. By night they goe out of the waters into the fields to feed; for they liue on Herbs: and if the Husbandmen watch not well, in one night they will deſtroy their Corne. In the water they are very bold, and aſſaile men like fierce Dogges, and cruelly teare thoſe which they get. They are ſo afraid of fire that a little Boy holding a lighted Torch, may ſcarre away many thouſands of them. There are ſome which hunt and kill them for their fleſh, which differeth little from Beefe. In theſe Riuers and Lakes is alſo found the Torpedo, which if any man hold in his hand, if it ſtirre not, it doth produce no effect: but if it moue it ſelfe neuer ſo little, it ſo tormenteth the bodie of him which holds it, that his Arteries, Ioints, Sinewes, & all his Members feele exceeding paine with a certaine numneſſe: and as ſoone as it is let go out of the hand, all that paine and numneſſe is alſo gone. The Superſtitious Abaſſines beleeue that it is good to expell Deuils out of humane bodies, as if it did torment Spirits no leſſe then men. They ſay, if one of theſe aliue bee laid amongſt dead Fiſhes, if it there ſtirre it ſelfe, it makes thoſe which it toucheth to ſtirre as if they were aliue. There is great ſtore of this kind in Nilus, in the furtheſt parts of Goyama, where there is a Meere or Fenne * without bottome, welling and admirably boyling forth waters continually, whence Nilus ſpringeth. It ariſeth ſmall and firſt for a dayes iourney and halfe trendeth Eaſtward. Then it enters into a Lake as great as any imagined to bee in the World, running thorow the midſt thereof with a ſwift courſe, flying all mixture of waters, and throwes it ſelfe from very high Rockes, whence hauing gotten freer ſcope, it expatiates it ſelfe a while, and ſhortly is as it were ſwallowed vp in deepe yauning Gulfes of the Earth, and ſo ſtraitned, that in ſome places a man may ſtride ouer it. But after it hath paſſed fiue dayes to the Eaſt; it bends backe its courſe to the Weſt, and ſometimes greater, ſometimes leſſe, according to the Seaſon, paſſeth towards Egypt. The Abaſſines report, that it is no hard thing to turne the Riuers courſe ſome other way, and to ſterue Egypt, which I ſcarſly beleeue.

This ſeemeth to be the Camelopardalis.

Riuer-horſes, and their nature.

The Torpedo, a ſtrange kind of fiſh.

* a Palus a bottomleſſe poole

Strange Springs and Courſe of Nilus, which ſome fetch much further from beyond the Line, perhaps, not ſo truly. I. Baptiſta Scortia a Ieſuite hath publiſhed two Bookes of this one Riuer aſcribing to it two originals, one a Lake in twelue degr. of South latitude, fiftie fiue of longitude, whence Cucma floweth, Spirito Sancto, and Coanza: the other vnder the Line in fiftie fiue of longitude, being a Lake of 1700. furlongs ouer, here mentioned by Fernandez. The Abaſſine opinion by the Kings Letters appeare, that Nilus ariſeth hence.

The Abaſſine Aire is moſt part warme and temperate, but in low Land is exceeding hote, and ſomewhat vnwholſome. Their Winter is from the end of May to the beginning of September; and then it beginneth in the Red Sea. I haue found by experience, that this Sea from the change of the Moone to the Full, fourteene dayes together flowes in, and as many through the whole Wane ebbeth or runneth out. In Winter it raineth almoſt euery day in theſe parts, alway afternoone, and not without Thunder. From this Kingdome of Dambea where we liue, both Poles are ſeene, but Antarctike the higher. Neere it are many Stars in forme of a Croſſe, whence it hath that name. In this Tract of Heauen appeareth a certaine ſpot like a Cloud: we ſuppoſe it a part more thinne then others not ſtarred: let Philoſophers examine. About this ſpot many Starres ſhine leſſe then thoſe which adorne the other Pole. The yeare beginneth heere with the Spring on the firſt of September. Their yeare hath twelue monethes, each of them thirtie dayes, and thoſe which remayne from Auguſt to September, are reckoned by themſelues. The Abaſſines no way more expreſſe their ioy and iollitie then by eating and drinking: and eaſily on Holy dayes they come to the Churches, which vſually are compaſſed with Trees for ſhade, where are many Veſſels ſet full of their Wine, which after Seruice ended, they ſucke in ſo vnmeaſurably, that firſt Drunkenneſſe and then Brabbles, and laſtly Frayes vſually follow. They make Wine of Honey tempered with Opium, both pleaſant and profitable taken moderately.

Seaſons in Abaſſia, the Red Seas courſe.

Power of the Moone.

Abaſſine good fellowſhip.

Wine of Vines is rare, and for their Maſſe in Vintage time they vſe Muſt, at other times Wine of Rayſins. Peter Paez a Ieſuite writ, that Anno 1604. hee was with the Emperour who deſired him to ſay Maſſe, which hee could not for want of Wine, which no where could be gotten.

Scarcitie of Wine.

Peter Paez.

At what time Rodericke Lima entred Abaſſia, Dauid * reigned, and after hee had held the Empire thirtie ſixe yeares, his Sonne Claudius ſucceeded: who in the yeare 1559. was ſlaine, hauing ruled almoſt twentie yeares. His Brother Adamas ſucceeded called alſo Mena, and reigned foure yeares dying in the yeare 1563. Sarſa Dengel ſucceeded, who leauing his former name, would be called Malac Seguetus, and died, Anno 1596. His Sonne Iames ſucceeded, a childe, which after ſeuen yeares was taken by his Subiects, depriued and ſent into the Kingdome of Nerea, a certaine Couſin German of his vſurping the Scepter, which he ſcarſly held a yeare, being ſlaine by his Subiects, Anno 1604. Iames was reſtored, and in the ſecond yeare after expelled and ſlaine in battell by another of his Vncles Sonnes, called Sacinus: Paez calls him Saſinozius.

Succeſſion of Emperours.

* Before him was Nahu, whoſe Predeceſſor was Alexander; to him Ciriacus, &c.

ANtonius Fernandez thus writeth of their apparell. The richer ſort buy Garments of the Saracens, and clothe themſelues in their faſhions. The reſt both men and women couer their bodies either Abaſſines apparell.

Fooliſh brauerie.

Dul Ignorance and Idleneſſe.

Their Arts.

Townes and Houſes.

Little or no writing.

either with a Skinne or Pelt, or with a courſe Hempen cloth without other arte then the Weauers. When they doe reuerence to any, they put off this Cloth from the ſhoulders to the nauill, remayning halfe naked. They let their haire grow, and that ſerues them for a Hat and Head-tyre. For finer brauerie they curle and anoint their haire with Butter, which ſhewes in the Sun like Graſſe in the morning dew. Leſt their locks and curles ſhould be diſordered, when they goe to bed, each one pitcheth a Forke or Cratch a foote high in the ground, betwixt the hornes whereof hee repoſeth his necke, and ſleepeth with his head hanging. They vſe to brand markes in their bodies, eſpecially in the face. And on their little fingers they ſuffer the nailes to grow as long as they will, like Cockes ſpurres, which alſo they ſometimes cut from Cockes, and fit to their fingers. They colour their hands and feet (which are bare) with the iuyce of a reddiſh barke. They vſually are artleſſe and lazie, neglecting hunting and fiſhing, and whereas Wooll, Hempe and Cotton might eaſily be had, yet the vulgar are clothed with vndreſſed Pelts, each wearing a Rammes Skinne tyed to his hands and feet. They lye on Oxe-hides without Quilts or Mattreſſes: for Tables they vſe great bowles of wood, rudely hollowed, without any Naperie. Veſſels they haue of blacke Chalke. Few but Saracens vſe Merchandize and in few places: moſt exerciſe Huſbandrie, the Gentry follow Armes and the Court. They haue no great Cities, but Villages vnwalled and vnfortified. Their greateſt Towne hath ſcarſly one thouſand ſixe hundred Houſes. Their Houſes are ſmall, without elegance, without ſtorie, almoſt without arte, round and couered with Earth and Straw. They write no Letters, nor vſe Records in Iudgements, or other Writings, but in their holy things, and Officers of Accompts for the King.

See of theſe Faſts, Aluarez.

They vſe no Dirges or Deuotions for the dead. They vſe Pictures, but not carued nor grauen Images. They paint Chriſt, the Bleſſed Virgin and other Saints in blacke forme, as Deuils and wicked men in white: ſo they paint Chriſt and his Apoſtles at the Maundie blacke, and Iudas white; Chriſt in his Paſſion blacke, Annas, Caiphas, Pilate, Herod, and the Iewes white: Michael blacke and the Deuill white. Their faſting is rigorous not freeing the Sicke. Some Religious men abſtaine wholly from fleſh, which is no eaſie thing farre from the Sea, where they haue few fiſhes. They faſt Wedneſdayes and Fridayes, not taſting ought till night, then eating Herbes without Oyle (which they haue not) or Butter, and Bread with Apples.

Churches.

Their Temples are round and encompaſſed with a double porch, they neither walke, nor talk, nor ſpit, nor ſit, nor laugh in the Church: nor admit Dogges or other Domeſticke creatures into the Church-yard. Horſemen alight and walke on foot before the Church as they paſſe. The great Altar is in the midſt, Curtaines being drawne betwixt the doore and it from one ſide of the Church to the other, wherein none not in Orders may enter: without may Lay-men ſtand, which haue Crutches to ſupport them if they be ſicke or old. Some Churches are only for men, others only for women: in ſmall Villages they are common to both, but with ſeuerall Diuiſions that they may not ſee each other.

Ludouicus Azeuedius in his Letter 1607. ſaith, that they confeſſe not the number and kinds of their ſinnes, but only ſay in generall, I haue ſinned, I haue ſinned. They vſe not Confirmation, nor Extreme Vnction, nor the Communion-Viaticum.

Ant. Fernandez.

A*Ntonie Fernandez,* 1606. writeth, that in Dembea where hee then was in the Citie of Gorgorra, ſome receiued the Romane Faith, others refuſed: that the Emperour that yeare writ to the Pope to ſend thither ſome Patriarch, and to the King of Spaine for Portugall Forces, to reduce his Empire to the Faith, to which the Princes and Grandes oppoſed, and muſt by Armes be forced; but hee feared notwithſtanding the mutable inconſtancie of the Abaſſines, which care little to hold promiſe. God open their eyes: of twentie parts of the Empire, ſeuenteene are almoſt gone. The next yeare he writeth; we are here fiue Prieſts of the Societie, ſome of vs attend the Emperours Campe, to conſerue and encreaſe our Catholike number. Many commend our Doctrine, but are afraid to profeſſe it. They obſerue Iewiſh Circumciſion, Sabbaths, abſtinence from the fleſh which is to the Iewes vncleane, and from Fiſh without Finnes, and though they confeſſe them forbidden by Gods word, yet will they not forſake them. Following the Emperour, I take view of a great part of the Ethiopian Continent. Touching their Rebaptiſations, and tradition of Soules from humane ſeed, and equalitie of Chriſts humane Nature with the Diuine, with other Abaſſine errors, I haue had often conflicts with their learned men, which yeilded to other things eaſily: but in the two laſt opinions were obſtinate. They call Dioſcorus, Bleſſed, condemne Leo with the Chalcedon Councell, with many reproches, and Father on him many lies touching the Natures and operations of Chriſt. They hold alſo, that God doth effect nothing beſides the Conſecration of things and Miracles when they are done, and thence gather that the Soule is produced of Seed. They circumciſe not onely Males, but with a peculiar Rite Females alſo. Yearely on Twelfth day they renew Baptiſme: Apoſtatas returning from Mahumetaniſme, are alſo rebaptized, and likewiſe they which haue committed ſome erroneous crime, or haue married, or haue entred into any Religious Family. On the otherſide, they are ſo rigorous to Infants, that before their appointed day they die without Baptiſme. They come to the Euchariſt without Contrition or Confeſſion, euen the moſt wicked amongſt them. They diſſolue Marriages when they liſt: before the day of Iudgement they ſay, that neither the Soules of the Bleſſed are in Heauen, nor of the wicked in Hell: Purgatorie they deny, and the Spirits proceeding from the Sonne. Theſe errors are common to all; ſome are peculiar to ſome of them, new Hereſies daily ſpringing vp without danger as euery man liſteth.

In his Letters, 1609. In this Ethiopian Empire, euery man liueth in manner in Armes, nor is the Emperours life more quiet then of other men. For euery yeare, Winter being ſcarſly paſt, himſelfe in perſon and his Captaines, renew the Warres, ſometimes againſt Rebels, ſometimes againſt neighbouring enemies. It cannot be vttered what confuſions haue happened theſe two laſt yeares. As ſoone as the preſent Emperour began his reigne, three or foure chiefe men vſurping the Royall name, rebelled againſt him, but were vanquiſhed in battaile. This very yeare, the ſecond of his reigne, as many as haue attempted the ſame and comne into the field. Neither of long time haue things bin quieter. We are alſo conſtrained to waue vp and downe with theſe ſtormes; ſometimes flying to the Mountaines, ſometimes hiding our ſelues in ſecret Caues, ſomtimes we pierce thicke Woods, and vnpaſſable places, and ſuffer innumerable euils, which wee could more patiently endure, if we could gather any haruest to offer to God. This very yeare, when the Emperour was gone againſt a Rebell, ſuddaine newes came to the Campe, that the Gala (a ſauage Nation of Cafres, begotten of Deuils, as the vulgar report) were at hand. It is a hundred yeares ſince theſe paſſed from the fields and woods, where they liued by keeping Cattell, and ſhaking off the Ethiopian yoake, haue attained ſuch power, that they poſſeſſe about the twelfth part of Ethiopia, and are a terrour to all. The Emperour went againſt them, but was ouerthrowne, to the ruine well-neere of the whole Empire. I ſought to comfort him as well as I could, but he gathering his forces, ſuddainely ruſhed on the Conquerours, and recouered his loſſe.

Ethiopia ciuill Combuſtions.

The Gale.

One Iuan de Baltaſar, a pretended Abaſſine, and Knight of the Militarie Order of Saint Antonie, hath written a Booke in Spaniſh of that Order, founded (as he ſaith) by the Prete Iohn, in the daies of Saint Baſil, with rules receiued from him, aboue ſeuen hundred yeares before any Militarie Order was in the world. I know not whether his Booke (which I haue by me) hath more lies or lines, a man of a leaden braine and brazen face; ſeconded, if not exceeded by the Morall, Naturall, and Politicall Hiſtorie of Ethiopia, the worke of his Scholler Luys d'Vreta, a Spaniſh Frier and lyer; The ſaid Godignus euery where through his firſt Booke confutes him, it is more then enough that wee haue named ſuch more then Vtopian, ſuch Legendarie fore-heads: and though we will not blot Paper with mention of their aſſertions, yet haue their ouerflowing commendations of the Ethiopian Faith, and admiration of their State, made thus many Witneſſes to be muſtered, ſometimes repeating the ſame things, by more abundant allegations to ſignifie and prooue the truth. We will further trouble the Reader with ſome extracts of Peter Paez, chiefe of the Ieſuites in thoſe parts. For Melchior Sylnius a Prieſt of Goa, ſent into Abaſſia, conſulting with the Abaſſine Portugals, which way any Ieſuite might be ſent thither, was anſwered, that the Port of Bailur ouer againſt Moha, was freeſt of danger, which Paez ſeeking to doe, by the Monſon was preuented, and the next yeare by a Turke, Seruant of the Captaine of Suachen, trading at Diu, named Rezoam Aga, was in Armenian habite thither conueyed, His iourney himſelfe hath written in a Letter to the Ieſuites at Goa, the foure and twentieth of Iuly, 1603.

Bailur twelue leagues within the ſtreights on the Abaſſine ſhoare.

T*HE two and twentieth of March we ſet Saile,* Rezoam Aga ſent me of his prouiſion twice a day, and landing at Mazua, procured me fauour of the Gouernour, with licence to goe whether I would into Ethiopia or Cairo. I thanked him, and ſaid, That I would goe to a certaine Towne to ſee whether my Kinſman being dead, I might ſucceed in the Inheritance. The Banean Saranga or Captaine of the ſhip had receiued charge of the owner touching me, and ſent two Saracens with mee, with whom and fiue Chriſtians of Abaſſia, I departed on the fift of May. I went in a vile ragged habite for feare of Theeues, which there vſe to rob and kill, which ſo freed our Company, that as wee went by night none ſpake but whiſperingly. Neere morning wee thought to haue ſlept, but a Lyon terryfied vs, within eight paces of me, but with our ſhowting he departed. The next day we paſſed high and cragged Hils, for feare of Theeues, and came at night to a Village of Saracens. On Holy-Thurſday, we came to certaine Chriſtian Herd-men, which ſuppoſing mee a Turke, fled, but learning that I was a Prieſt, kiſſed my hands with ioy, and refreſhed vs with ſtore of Milke in veſſels of Straw, which they ſet on burning ſtones to heate. Bread they had none, and was, they ſaid, a rare thing to them, and farre brought. Their wiues which had hid themſelues, came the next day to intreat my bleſſing, ſome kiſſing my hands, others falling at my feete. We went thence ouer rough Mountaines, troubled alſo with raine, the way not aboue three foote broad, on both ſides ſo ſteepe, that I durſt not looke downe for feare of giddineſſe. Blind almoſt and wearie, we came at laſt to the top, and found a plainer path, (for I had not beene able to haue deſcended the like) and a Towne of Chriſtians which brought vs their Bookes and Croſſes. Here wee were inuited to a poore Cottage, which yet was in good ſeaſon for vs, a violent raine following, which elſe had oppreſſed vs. On the tenth of May we came to Barua, where all my Company left me, but one Saracen and a Chriſtian. Another Saracen which dwelt here ſent mee a Hen, but the Chriſtian which

Letters of P. Paez.

Strange paths.

Vaine ſuperſtition.

Raw fleſh.

Wet, heat, cold, and ill way.

Their houſes.

Siccum ſacrificium.

The King Supreme Gouernor in cauſes Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall.

* This ſeemeth falſly written: for Iames Malac Seguends, both Predeceſſour and Succeſſor.

Relikes.

was with me, gat him away, becauſe the Abaſſines (forſooth) eate not any thing killed by a Turke: and I for feare of offence, ſent it backe with thankes to the ſender, eating dry Bisket brought from Diu, without any other things, though faint. Neither would the Gold I had doe me any ſeruice heere to buy prouiſion, their currant Money being ſtones of Salt. The Bread of my Companions was halfe baked Dough, of round forme, which they bake with putting a hot ſtone into the Dough, and rolling it, caſt it into the fire, ſo that the out-ſide is ſcorched, the in-ſide vnbaked. This they carried in their Budgets, but my ſtomacke could not beare it. Hither on the eleueth of May, came Iohn Gabriel, the Captaine of the Portugals, hauing receiued my Letters from Mazua, with other Portugals. To giue mee better entertainment, they killed a Sheepe, which I taſted not, they eating it a little ſcorched and halfe raw, after the Countrey cuſtome. Here I had a Mule, and we trauelled twentie together, yet not without feare of Theeues, the raine alſo towards euening daily moleſting vs (and we were forced to lye in the open fields) heat alſo exceeding in the aſcent of an exceeding Mountaine, and as exceeding cold on the top. On the fifteenth of May, we came to Fremona, where Ouiedo and others of our Fathers were buried in the chiefe Church of the Portugals. We were receiued with great deuotion of the people. I went to the Patriarchs houſe, which is round as an Apple and couered with ſtraw, as are all which we haue yet ſeene in Ethiopia, (all of Earth, and round, little, without diſtinct roomes; except thoſe of the King and great men which haue ſeuerall roomes, but yet of Earth and Thatched.) The Patriarchs houſe was twentie palmes or ſpans ouer. Heere were Melchior Syluius his things, which had carried with him the holy Veſtments. Sunday following being Whitſunday, I celebrated a dry Maſſe and preached. Many came to Confeſſion. The Portugall Captaine was ſent for to the Court by the new Emperour, to whom I writ, who by writing welcomed me, and licenſed me to goe to him, which I purpoſe at the end of September, which is the end of Winter: for of him depend all the Prieſts, and all will be Catholikes if he command, as well Clergie as Laitie. The Emperours name is Malac Sequed, aged fifteene yeares. On the laſt of Iune, Syluius returned from a worſe iourney then that of ours, more craggie and rough, of twentie daies, which hee goeth twiſe in the yeare to Nanina, to the Catholikes there. I ſend your Worſhips the head of the holy Patriarch, although not whole, hauing bene often digged vp: I adde three pieces of the skull, and the iaw with eight teeth. On the other ſide, ſend you me, I pray, ſome Image of the bleſſed Virgines Conception, of fiue or ſixe ſpannes, for the ſeruice of this Temple wanting an Image. I haue placed the head of Father Francis Lopes in my Bolſter, being yet hairy, for my more viue memorie of his life, which what it was you ſhall receiue by our informations, as alſo of Father Abraham, of whom you haue heard no fame, &c.

Graſſe-hoppers ſcarred with Holy-water.

* Mat. Paris tels of Tudſted (I thinke hee meaneth Thaxted) in Eſſex, where the Deuill comming into the Church at the Priſts aſperſion, ſhreeked and leaped into a Medow two furlongs off. Sure I am, ſuch a Medow is there ſtill, called Lopers, in that Pariſh of my natiuitie.

While Paez remained at Fremona, hee tranſlated the Catechiſme into the Amaran tongue (which is there counted the moſt elegant) and made the Children learne it by heart. In this yeere 1603. great miſery happened by Graſſe-hoppers, from which, Paez freed the Catholikes, by Letanies and ſprinkling the Fields with Holy-water; when as the Fields of Heretikes, ſeuered onely by a Ditch, were ſpoyled by them. Yea, a Heretike vſing this ſacred ſprinkling, preſerued his Corne, which to a Catholike neglecting in one Field, was loſt, and preſerued in another by that coniured aſperſion (ſo neere of kinne are theſe Locuſts to the Deuill, which is ſaid * to hate Holy-water, or elſe make a quare for other Locuſts, worſe then the Ægyptian mentioned Apoc. 9.) About the end of September, when hee had thouhht to haue gone to the Court, newes came, that the Emperours Siſters Husband conſpired againſt him, and impriſoned him, alleadging that he was no Chriſtian, becauſe one of his Guard was an Ethnick, and that his Father was not the King, but one Batius a vulgar perſon. He being produced and thus accuſed, ſtood mute; becauſe (ſaid hee) his Subiects preſumed to iudge their Soueraigne: Hee was ſent into cloſe keeping to Damijeta.

Portugall goods in Indian ſhips.

The Viceroy of Tigrai paſſing by, Paez went to ſalute him: who willed him to ſit downe on his Carpet, when all the reſt ſtood; and asked why the Portugals did not now as in time paſt, frequent the Red Sea; whether they were afraide of the Turkes. Hee anſwered, that Turkes rather feared the Portugals, and fled into the Countrey when they aproached the Coaſt: but this was the true reaſon that all the ſhips of India came thither out of Portugall Ports, and moſt of their goods appertained to the Portugals.

Obeliskes.

King of Naria ſlaine.

He went to the Monaſterie Conegorum, where he ſaw their Church, the Altar inuironed with a threefold Curtaine, reaching to the wall on both ſides, ſometime couered with ſtone, now with ſtraw, the Saracens hauing ſpoyled the former, and therefore darke: they ſhewed him a Crucifixe painted on a Linnen cloth, as a precious thing, yet artleſly wrought. They ſet him on a Carpet, themſelues and the Portugals ſitting on the ground. Ouer againſt the doore, were ten faire ſtones, in the midſt whereof, they ſay, the Emperour is inaugurated. A little further are thirteene ſtones in Pyramide faſhion, the greateſt whereof is twelue ſpannes broade, and about ſixtie high, with much workemanſhip, the matter admirable whence it could bee brought hither. The Viceroy forbade his Iudges to meddle with the Towne of Catholikes, and appointed Paez their Iudge. The Galla did much miſchiefe at this time, and ſlew the King of Narea, tributary to the Abaſſine, whom alſo they aſſaulted, but were ouerthrowne. After this, the King ſent for Paez, who was brought to the King, ſitting on a high Throne, and kiſſed his hand, being bidden alſo to be couered, and to ſit on the Carpet. After this, followed another day; a diſpute about aboliſhing the legall Rites, two wills in Chriſt, and Purgatorie, all which, they denie. The King was deſirous to ſee their Maſſe, but for want of Wine, he could performe onely a dry Office; for which, the King cauſed a great Tent to bee erected, and in it, another leſſe for his Throne: the Ieſuite preached with great aplauſe; whom the Empreſſe alſo deſiring to heare, when the Emperour ſaw him ſtanding, hee aroſe from his Throne, and inuited him to make his Sermon out of it, himſelfe ſitting on the Foot-ſtoole. Another time, when in conference, Paez called himſelfe the Emperours Subiect; no, ſaid hee, my Father and King: and gaue great hopes of the conuerſion of that Nation, which were daſhed by his death, which Paez ſignified in his Letter, the thirtieth of Iuly, 1605. Namely, that Zezelazeus, whom the Emperour had deliuered from exile, and exalted, had conſpired together with Eras Athanatheus, (the next to the Emperor) who yet made faire ſhew, and bound himſelfe after the Alaſſine manner, in the bond of excommunication, to fidelitie and loyaltie, which yet he kept not. Zezelazeus gathered great forces, alleadging againſt the Emperous, that he forſooke his Religion, and imbraced the Portugall and Romane; and therefore all that were zealous, ought to take armes againſt him. This made ſome ſweare to kill all the Portugals, and the Ieſuite eſpecially. Before the battell, he wiſhed him preſent to confeſſe himſelfe to him. In the battell, Anabel which before had forſoken him, returned to his Part with his Sonne: but hee ſuſpecting him; Falſe Traitor thou wenteſt, ſaid he, and ſo thou returneſt, withall, killing him, which his ſonne ſeeing ranne the Emperour thorow the necke, and thruſt him off his Horſe, whom Zezelazeus and the Saracens diſpatched. Three daies hee lay dead in the field, naked and ſubiect to contumelies, and after that, meanely buried.

Want of Wine of the Vine: that of Hony more common.

Ieſuites honor.

The Emperour Malac Segued, called alſo Sauenquil, and Athanas Saqued.

Paez was all this while in Goyame, whence he was ſent for by the Empreſſe, and kindly entertained. Sazinoſius by election ſucceeded in the Empire foure Moneths, then forſaken, and Iames reſtored out of his Narean impriſonment and exile, paſſing thorow the Galle's Countrey with great hazard. In the yeere 1607. Sazinoſius ouercame him in battell, neither was Iames any more ſeene. This Sazinoſius was a man of ſingular arts and parts for warre and peace, munificent and faithfull, aged fiue and thirty yeeres, affected to the Romane faith. A yeere and halfe he had to doe with Rebels, ſame affecting Soueraignty, which hee brought to Subiection. Much adoe he had alſo with the Galla (which came to ſubdue the Agai, which are white Chriſtians, to ſell them to the Saracens) whom in foure battels he ouerthrew. After this, followed another rebellion, with ſucceſſe like to the former. Hee ſent Zezelazeus priſoner into the Kingdome of Goroma, whence he eſcaped and was ſlaine of the Peſants. He ſought to vnite the Abaſſine Church with the Romane, and writ to the Pope and the King of Spaine. His Letters to the Pope are theſe.

Iames ſlaine or loſt.

Agai.

THE Letters of Malaſegued the Abaſſine Emperour, let come to the holy Father Biſhop of Rome, with the peace of Ieſus Chriſt, which hath loued vs, and waſhed vs from our ſinnes in his bloud, and made vs a Kingdome and Prieſts to God and the Father. This peace bee with your Holineſſe, and the whole Church of Chriſt, &c. Such is the ſpoile and ruine of our Empire by warres paſt, that although we haue ſubdued ſome Rebels, yet are there others more puiſſant abroad, the Ethnick Galæ, which haue ſubiected no ſmall part of the Kingdome, and daily moleſt vs with new incurſions, miſerably vexing old and young: which their rage cannot in ſeeming be repreſſed without the ayd of the King of Portugall. Wherefore we intreat him to ſend vs ayde as his Anceſtors did to our Progenitors. And that my Petition may haue more weight, I thought good to write to your Holineſſe, the Paſtor and Father of all the faithfull, to ſignifie ſo much to our Brother, &c. October 14. 1607. The like he writ to the King of Spaine, Decemb. 10. as alſo did Eras Athanatheus.

The reaſon of this name, I thinke to be their cuſtome of changing Name when they come to the Empire.

The Ieſuites there giue their Agnus Dei's, Graines, &c. The Abaſſines weare Amulets of words of the Goſpell, hanging about their necks. Amongſt other Rebels which aroſe in Armes againſt Sazinoſius, was not one farre from Fremona, which had beene an Anchoret, or Hermite in a Wilderneſſe twentie yeares, not putting off yet his ambition of a Scepter. He had theeues to aſſociate him, of which there are plentie. But I haue almoſt beene robbed of diſcretion, and ſeeme to haue robbed my Readers patience to wilder, and while him ſo long in this miſerable Abaſſia.

Religious Rebell.

An Armenian his report of SVSSINVS, the Emperour of the Abaxins, by vs vulgarly called PRESTER IOHN, who came from the ſaid Emperours Court twelue daies ſince.

FIrſt, from Dealeque to the Kings Court, called Dombia, (a very great Citie) is fiue and twentie daies iourney by Carrauan; heere goeth from thence yearely ten Carrauans, whereof eight are great. The Commodities they carrie, are all kind of Indian cloathing, and likewiſe of our Engliſh Commodities, (Broad-cloath, Kerſeys, Lead, Tinne; likewiſe, Veluets, Damaskes, Sattens, Taffitaes, and all other ſorts of Silke Stuffes. Their meaſure is about halfe a yard; Cloath, which is worth in Moha foure Rials of eight, is there worth eight Rials. The price of Kerſeyes, is halfe the price of Broad-cloath: The Colours they moſt deſire, are Reds, Greens, Violets, Murreys, and other light Colours: Yellowes in no eſteeme, nor Blacks.

Veluets of China of all ſorts are worth ten Rials of eight the halfe yard. Veluets of Italy are much more worth: but not ſo profitable to the Merchants, becauſe they are much deerer. Sattens of Florence are worth ten Rials; Damaskes of the better ſort, worth eight or ten Rials. Taffitaes three Rials; all colours well ſold, excepting Yellowes and Blackes.

The Commodities of that Country, with their Prizes.

Ciuet, great quantitie is to be had, the price is three Wakias, (which is neere vpon foure ounces Engliſh, for fiue Rials of eight. Elephants teeth, the Bahar, worth thirtie Rials. The Bahar is three hundred and ſixtie Rottollies of Moha. Waxe one hundred Rottollies, worth one Riall of eight. Gold the Rottolly, worth ſixtie Rials, the Rottolly is neere vpon ſixteene ounces and a halfe. Lead and Tinne in great requeſt. Tinne worth the Rottolly, one Rial, Lead much more worth, becauſe the Turk wil not ſuffer any to be carried into his Country.

Bezar-ſtones many are to be had, and little worth: here are many Beaſts with one horne in their fore-head like a Vnicorne; which horne, they ſay, is good againſt poyſon. There are of them which weigh eight pound, ſome ſeuen, foure, and three pound: the greateſt and faireſt, worth ſome foure Rials the piece, and thoſe of a leſſer ſort worth leſſe: among the Turkes and Moores in Arabia, euery pound is worth one Riall of eight.

From Grancairo there goeth in Auguſt a great Carrauan, and likewiſe another in Nouember. The Commodities they carrie from thence, are Broad-cloaths, Kerſeyes, Veluets, Sattens, Damaskes, and all ſorts of Silkes. From Cayro to Dombia is fiftie daies trauell by Carrauan.

The Kings State.

Firſt, he ſits on a gilt Bed-ſted like thoſe of China, and there commeth great troops of men daily to ſalute him; ſome daies two thouſand, ſome daies more, ſome daies leſſe; but Friday being their day of Faſt, there commeth a farre greater quantitie.

HONDIVS his Map of Aſia.

SEPTENTRIO
EUROPAE PARS
AMERICAE PARS
MARE DEL ZUR
Japan
Graecia
Resane
Moscua
Duina
SAMOIEDA
ARMENIA
MARE ARABICUM et INDICUM
GOLFO DI BENGALA
OCEANUS ORIENTALIS
AEQUINOCTIALIS LINEA
Ceylon
Iava Major
Borneo
Luconia
Mindanao
Timor
NOVA GUINEA ASIA
Miliaria Germanica
30 60 90 120 150
60 70 80 90 100 110 120 130 140 150 160 170

PEREGRINATIONS, AND TRAVELS BY LAND INTO PALESTINA, NATOLIA, SYRIA, ARABIA, PERSIA, AND OTHER PARTS OF ASIA.

THE EIGHTH BOOKE.

CHAP. I.

The Hiſtorie of the firſt Expedition to Ieruſalem, by GODFREY of Bullen, ROBERT of Normandie, and other Chriſtian Princes: written by ROBERT, whom ſome call the Engliſhman, a Monke of Saint REMIGIVS, which was preſent both at the Councell of Claremont, and in the ſaid Expedition: tranſlated and abbreuiated.

IN the yeare of our Lord 1095. a great Councell was celebrated at Claremont, in Auuernie on the Confines of France, wherin Pope Vrban the Second was preſent and Preſident with the Biſhops and Cardinals: where many French and Germane Biſhops and Princes were aſſembled. Eccleſiaſticall Affaires being there ſet in order, the Lord Pope went forth into a broad ſtreet (for no Houſe was able to containe the multitude) and ſpake thus with perſwaſiue pleaſant Rhetoricke vnto them.

Peter the Heremite hauing viſited Ieruſalem, by relation of the Patriark and pretended reuelation moued, ſtirred vp the Pope to this counſaile and Councell.

O yee Nation of the French, O Nation, (as appeareth by many of your workes) beloued and choſen of God, ſeparated from all Nations, aſwell in ſituation of your Region, as in Catholike Religion and Honour of holy Church; to you is our Speech directed, and our Exhortation intended, willing to let you know what lamentable cauſe hath brought vs to your Borders. From the Confines of Ieruſalem and Conſtantinople a grieuous report hath ſpread and often come to our eares, that the Perſians, * a curſed Nation eſtranged quite and alienate from God, hath inuaded the Countries of thoſe Chriſtians, and with ſword, ſpoile and fire hath partly captiued, partly ſlaine them; either ſubuerting, or elſe peruerting to their wicked Rites the Churches of God, polluting his Altars, circumciſing Chriſtians and ſhedding that bloud of Circumciſion on the Altars, or in the Chriſtning Fonts. Whom they pleaſe to kill with ſhamefull death, they open at the nauill, and taking out the entrailes tye them to a ſtake and whip them about the ſame, till being exenterated they fall on the ground: others they bind to a ſtake and ſhoot at; of others they make tryall whether with one blow they can ſtrike off the head. What ſhall I ſay of that which may not, cannot, by ſaying be expreſſed, the rauiſhment of women? The Greeke Empire for the ſpace of two monethes iourney, they haue ouer-runne and ſubdued. To whom then doth the reuenge and deliuerance belong but to you, whom God hath preferred aboue other Nations in honour of Armes, courage of hearts, agilitie of bodies, and abilitie to abaſe euery Enemy. Let the Exploits of your Predeceſſors incite your manly ſpirits, the goodneſſe and greatneſſe of Carolus Magnus, and Lewis his Sonne, with other your Kings, which haue deſtroyed the Kingdomes of Turkes, and in them enlarged the borders of the Church. And aboue all, let the holy Sepulchre of our Lord and Sauiour moue you, which is poſſeſſed of impure Nations; and thoſe holy places which are ſhamefully abuſed and vnreuerently

* Turkes which had come out of Perſia, and began to ſhake the Eaſterne parts of the Greeke Empire in Cilicia, and the adioyning Regions of Natolia, Syria, &c. See Knols Turkiſh Hiſtory uerently defiled by their filthineſſe. O moſt valiant Souldiers, and the Progeny of inuincible Progenitors, doe not you degenerate, but call to mind the vertues of your Anceſtors. And if the deare affection of Wiues and Children ſtay you, remember what our Lord ſayth in the Goſpell, Hee that loueth Father or Mother more then Mee, is not worthy of Mee. Euery one which ſhall forſake Houſe, or Father, or Mother, or Wife, or Children, or Lands for my Name, ſhall receiue a hundred fold, and ſhall poſſeſſe eternall life. Take no care for your Lands and Goods, for this your Land is encloſed with Mountaines and Seas, is to ſtrait for your multitude, and ſcarſly yeelds ſuſtenance to her Inhabitants. Hence it is that you bite and deuoure one another, make warres and ſlay each other. Let hatred ceaſe, braules be ſilenced, Warres be huſht, and Diſſentions be lulled aſleepe. Enter the way of the holy Sepulchre, take away the Land from that wicked people and ſubdue it vnto you. That Land was giuen to the children of Iſrael, flowing, as ſayth the Scripture, with Milke and Honey. Ieruſalem is the Nauill of the Earth, a Land fertile aboue others, as it were another Paradiſe. This hath the Redeemer of Mankind made glorious with his comming, adorned with his conuerſation, conſecrated with his Paſſion, redeemed with his Bloud, ſealed with his Sepulchre. This Royall Citie placed in the midſt of the World, is now held captiue of her Enemies, and is by them which know not God, enthralled to the cuſtome of the Gentiles, She ſeekes then and deſireth to bee freed, not ceaſing to pray for your ſuccour: and that of you chiefly whom God hath beſt fitted for Armes, vndertake yee this way then for remiſſion of your ſinnes, being aſſured of the immarceſſible glory of the Heauenly Kingdome.

Arripite igitur viam hanc in remiſsionem peccatorum veſtrorum, Securi de immarc. gl. reg. Cal.

Theſe and many like words with much Vrbanitie did Pope Urban pronounce, and ſo moued the hearts of all preſent, that with one voice they cryed, Deus vult, Deus vult; which the Pope hearing with eies lifted to Heauen, he gaue thankes to God, and acknowledged it the worke of God which put it into their minds.

Let therefore this voice (ſaith he) be your word in your Warres, and when you ſhall giue the on-ſet on the Enemie, on Gods behalfe this ſhall be your vniuerſall out-crie, Deus [a] vult, Deus vult. Wee neither bid nor counſaile that men aged and feeble, vnfit for Warre ſhould vndertake this iourney, nor women without their Huſbands, and Brethren, or lawfull teſtimonies: for theſe are more hinderance then helpe. Let the rich helpe the poore, and carrie with them at their charge men fit for Warre. Prieſts, or Clerkes of any order may not goe without their Biſhops leaue, without which this way would bee vnprofitable for them. For neither is it expedient for Lay-men to trauell, but with the bleſſing of their [b] Prieſt. Whoſoeuer therefore ſhall haue a purpoſe of this holy Pilgrimage, and ſhall make a Vow thereof to God, that he will offer a liuing Sacrifice holy, acceptable to God, let him weare the ſigne of our Lords Croſſe on his fore-head or on his breſt. And hee which hauing performed his Vow ſhall goe thence, let him put it behind betwixt his ſhoulders. Both wayes ſhall ſuch accompliſh our Lords Commandement in the Goſpell, Hee which doth not beare his Croſſe and come after mee, is not worthy of mee.

[a] God wils, or it is Gods will.

[b] This was the deuotion of that time. Our Kings if they went to Normandie, had the Biſhops bleſſing at the ſhoare, &c.

After this, one of the Cardinals named Gregorie, in the name of all that were proſtrate on the ground, ſaid his Confeſſion, and ſo all knocking their breſts obtayned Abſolution of thoſe things which they had done amiſſe, and after their Abſolution a Bleſſing, and after the Bleſſing licence to returne home. And that it may appeare that this worke was of God and not of Man (as after wee learned) on that very day in which theſe things were ſaid and done, Fame preached it thorow the World; inſomuch that in the Ilands of the Sea it was reported, that the Ieruſalem Voyage was concluded in the Councell. All the Laitie returned home; and Pope Vrbane cauſed the Biſhops to aſſemble the next day, and conſulted with them what courſe might bee taken for ſuch a multitude of Pilgrimes, ſeeing there was not yet amongſt them any Prince of Name. And they all choſe the Biſhop Podienſis, ſaying, that hee was a man fit for Affaires Diuine and Humane, well skilled both wayes and prouident in his actions. He therefore like another Moſes, receiued the charge and conduct of the Lords people, with the Popes bleſſing and of the whole Councel. O how many of diuers age and condition receiued Croſſes in that Councel, and vowed the way of the holy Sepulchre? Thence was it diuulged abroad, and to the eares of Kings and Princes came this honourable Conſtitution of the Councell, It pleaſed all and more then three hundred thouſand conceiue it in their purpoſe, and are now eager to fight with the Turkes.

Peter* the Heremite, and Godfrey of *Bullen.

There was in thoſe dayes one Peter, which had beene an Heremite, much eſteemed among them which are skilled in the World, and preferred before Biſhops and Abbots in Religious account, becauſe he neither did eate bread nor fleſh: yet did hee vſe Wine and all other food, and ſought the chiefeſt abſtinence in Delicacies. He at that time gathered no ſmall multitude of horſe and foot, and made his way thorow Hungaria, being aſſociated to a Dutch Commander, called Godfrey the Sonne of Euſtace Earle of Bullen, but in Office of dignitie hee was a Dutch Leader. He was a man of goodly countenance, tall ſtature, pleaſant ſpeech, worthy behauiour, and ſo milde of diſpoſition, that he ſeemed more like a Monke [c] then a Souldier; but when the Enemie was at hand hee was a dreadleſſe Lion. Hee with his Brethren Euſtace and Baldwin, and a great Armie paſſed the way of Hungarie, the way which Charles the Great appointed to his Armie to Conſtanſtinople. Firſt therefore, Peter the Heremite with his, and a great multitude of Almanes came to Conſtantinople, and found there a copious band of Lumbards, and many others aſſemaſſembled from places farre diſtant. To whom the Emperour denyed entrance into the Citie, ſuſpecting much the Chriſtian valour, eſpecially of the French. He granted them yet to buy and ſell, but forbade them to paſſe ouer the Sea, called Saint Georges Arme, till the dreadfull Armie of the French was comne. For there was an infinite number of Turkes which brutiſhly thirſted for their approach, by whom they muſt needs be deſtroyed, if they paſſed ſooner, as afterward it hapned. But euery company wanting a good Gouernour, guided by an ill head, groweth feeble and is farre from ſafetie. Thus they wanting a prudent Prince to rule them, deſtroyed the Churches and Palaces of the Citie, ſpoyling them of their goods and leaden roofes, ſelling the ſame to the Greekes. Whereupon the Emperour Alexius beeing angry, commanded them to paſſe Saint Georges Arme, which going further, choſe one Rainald for their Leader, not ceaſing to commit the like out-rages, burning Houſes, and robbing Churches. Thus came they to Nicomedia, and thence entred the Land of Romania: and hauing walked three dayes went beyond Nice, and found a Caſtle called Exerogorgo emptie of men, but plentifully ſtored with Corne, Wine, Fleſh and all kind of Prouiſions. The Turkes for feare of the French had gone farre off, but ſent their Spies, by whom they were informed, that theſe new Gheſts were Waſters and Spoilers rather then Vſers and Poſſeſſors, whom therefore they begirt with a ſtrait Siege, the beſieged hauing exchanged their former Riots with ſuch want of drinke, that they were faine to ſupply that want with letting their beaſts bloud, to ſatisfie the Owners thirſt; or elſe with their owne Vrine. This was about Michaelmas, when Rainald their Leader to ſaue his life made cloſe compoſition with the Turkes and fled to them, leauing ſuch as would not turne Turkes as he did, for loue of the World, to be by them turned out of the World by ludibrious and reprochfull deathes, or to hold a title of life with reall captiuitie and baſeſt ſeruitude.

[c] Theſe drones I wis, had no ſtings, except you angred them.

Peter the Heremite was in the Caſtle Ciuito aboue Nice, againſt whom they remooued, and by the way encountred with Walter his Generall, whom valiantly fighting they oppreſſed with multitudes and ſlue: and after that, all the Chriſtians they could meet with, they killed or captiued. Peter himſelfe being gone to Conſtantinople, they forced his Caſtle. The Emperour and the Greekes playd the Greekes, and reioyced hereat, buying their Armes of the needie Souldiers, ſo to diſarme them.

IN the meane-while, God ſtirred vp two Earles alike in Dignitie, Armes, Courage, Name, Bloud and Power, Robert and Robert, the Earles of Normandie and Flanders, and with them Hugo Magnus Brother to Philip the King of France, Stephen Earle Carnotenſis and other inferiour Earles, many both of France, and of the Greater and Leſſe Britaine from the North, and from the South the Biſhop Podienſis and Raimund Earle of Saint Giles (or Tholouſe) which being very rich ſold all that he had and vndertooke the Enterprize. And now the Weſt prepareth to enlighten the Eaſt, and with new raiſed ſtarres to expell that darkneſſe, the brightneſſe of their minds excelling that of their Armes, all reſoluing to die, or conquer. They paſſed the Alpes at diuers times and came to Rome (the Citie not being able to lodge them all) where hauing viſited the holy places, and commended themſelues to the Merits and Prayers of the Apoſtles and other Saints, and receiued the Popes bleſſing, they paſſed thorow Apulia; a Prince whereof named Boamund was then in the ſiege of Malphi, on the Sea-ſhoare, who hearing of their Leaders, Orders, honeſtie, their word Deus vult, their Weapons, Courage, Croſſes on the fore-head or right ſhoulder, ſent for two precious Garments and cut them into Croſſes, and ſaid, If any be our Lords, let him now bee ioyned to me, and yee that now are my Souldiers, become Gods, and enter the way of the holy Sepulchre with me, and take my things as yours. Are not we alſo of French bloud, and did not our Parent come out of France, and ſubdue this Land by Armes? Shall our Kinſmen and Brethren goe to Martyrdome and Paradiſe without vs? In all Ages to come a back-ſliding cowardiſe will bee imputed to vs, if this diuine Warfare bee performed without vs. Preſently all of them cryed, Wee will goe out with thee and vow the way of the Sepulchre; the Croſſes not beeing ſufficient. The Nobles of Apulia, Calabria, and Sicilia, did alſo the like, inſomuch that the Duke of Apulia, Brother to the ſaid Boamund (both Sonnes of Robert Wiſchard) was afraid to abide in his Dukedome, being left alone with children and women.

The ſecond Booke. In that time W. Conquerour and his Sonne Robert were vſually ſtiled Earles, and ſeldome Dukes: and ſtill the Earldome of Flanders and of the Palatine in Germany are ſuperiour to Dukedomes. Earles alſo are often in this and other Authors of this Age, called Conſules, patroni, more regarding ſubſtance then title.

Whiles Boamund prouided neceſſaries, Hugo tooke Sea at Bari, to Dyrrachium, others to Brunduſium, or Otranto. The Emperour had commanded his Officers to take all theſe Pilgrimes and bring them to Conſtantinople to doe him fealtie, that what they tooke ſhould be his. But when Hugo met there Duke Godfrey, he reioyced of his taking, both renewing their old friendſhip, and diſcouering the Emperours fraud: who before had laid ambuſhes to kill cloſely Duke Godfreyes men as they went to prouide neceſſaries, which being perceiued by his Brother Baldwine, was with counter-ambuſh turned on the Imperials, and after another like aſſault on Godfreyes Tents. The Emperour fruſtrated, ſought to make peace, and permitted buying of prouiſion. The reſt not long after arriued, and after them Boamund with Tancred his Nephew, and Richard the Son of Marchis, who paſſed by Bulgaria, and Andrinople, and beeing encountred by the Emperours Forces, in the way ouerthrew them, and after receiued faire ſemblance from him, but with no leſſe malice. Homage was in concluſion required by the Emperour, that is, ſecuritie of peace, that he ſhould conduct and prouide for them, accompanying them with his preſence, and the aſſiſtance of his people, ſwearing to ſupply their neceſſitie in Armes and Clothes, and not to hurt or conſent to the hurt of any Pilgrime. This they ſware vnto, ſo long to continue as the Emperour kept his Oath. But the Earle of Saint Giles refuſed, and would haue him and his Citie deſtroyed. But being perſwaded by the reſt, he took this Oath, I ſweare to Alexius the Emperour that neuer by me nor mine hee ſhall looſe life or honour or whatſoeuer hee now poſſeſſeth iuſtly or vniuſtly. And the Emperour ſware, I Alexius Emperour ſweare to Hugo Magnus, Duke Godfrey, and other the Princes of the French here preſent, neuer to hurt or ſuffer to bee hurt any Pilgrime of the Holy Sepulchre, and that I will proceed with them in Warlike Affaires, and according to my power will prouide them ſufficient Market. This they did, forced by neceſſitie, but hee choſe rather to incurre Periurie then not to remooue the French from his Frontiers.

HONDIVS his Map of Aſia Minor.

Septentrio
PONTUS EUXINUS
Nunc Mar Maggior
Romania
Becſangil
Sarcum
Aegeum Mare
Aldinelli
Germian
Chiutale
Chiancara
Roni
Amaſia
Anadole
Pegian
Bozoch
Caramania
Mentesche
MARIS MEDITER:
Rhodus
Candia
Cyprus I.
Soria
NATOLIA
Milliaria Germanica
Meridies

The third Booke.

AFter this Confederacie the Emperour commanded ſhips to be brought for tranſportation of the Armie. Godfrey and Tancred were firſt tranſported, went to Nicomedia, and ſtaid three dayes: and ſeeing no paſſage the Duke ſent before foure thouſand men with Axes and Ploughes and other Iron Inſtruments to make way, the way being wayleſſe, thorow Hils, Dales and Præcipices. Theſe made way with much labour to Nice, and ſet woodden Croſſes at euery turning. They came to Nice the ſixth of May, and before any prouiſion was brought a Loafe of bread was ſold for twentie or thirtie pence. But Boamund brought plentie, and on Holy Thurſday they beſieged the Citie and addreſſed thereto their Engines, Slings, Rammes and the like. The Turkes made valiant reſiſtance, ſhooting poyſoned Arrowes, which killed whom they but lightly wounded.

Ours erect high Engines about the Walls, by which they might ouer-ſee the men on the Wall, and oppoſed Turrets of Wood to thoſe of Stone. The fight was hote, and the beſieged ready, to yeeld when they ſaw threeſcore thouſand comming in their Troupes from the Mountaines, two for fight, whiles the thrd might enter the Citie. No Hunger-bitten ſtomacke is readier to flye to a Feaſt then the Chriſtians to the fight, where hauing ſlaine them and returned to the Citie, they with Slings caſt their heads into the Citie, and the next day hauing ſhips prepared, entred the Lake on the South-ſide of the Citie, which ſo afrighted the Turkes, that by the Turcopolæ they ſent to the Emperour, that they would yeeld the Citie to him on compoſition to depart with their goods. This was done, and the Turkes carryed to Conſtantinople, (with purpoſe to haue them in better readineſſe againſt the Frankes) after ſeuen weekes and three dayes ſiege, no Citie being ſo defenſible in all Romania.

They departed thence & two daies after came to a bridge, and refreſhing themſelues there two dayes, they parted themſelues being to trauell in a barren Countrey, the greater band being committed to Hugo Magnus; and with him the Biſhop, the Earles of Flanders and Saint Giles, and Duke Godfrey: the other to Boamund. After three dayes march, this later Armie is encountred with three hundred thouſand Turkes, whereat ſome ſhrinking and thinking to flie, Boamund a man popular, and Robert of Normandie a ſtout Warriour, commanded to pitch their Tents; but before this was done, one hundred and fiftie Turkes with poyſoned Arrowes, began a skirmiſh turning their backes (according to their cuſtome in their flight to wound the purſuers) and were taken and ſlaine. There was now no place for flight, the Enemie hauing poſſeſſed the Hils, and the Frankes hauing broken their Launces in thoſe wicked bodies, it came to handie ſtrokes, with the Sword.

Some got to the Chriſtians Tents, and ſlay the Mother and Childe, whoſe cry comming to Boamunds eares, he commits the battell to the Norman Earle, and ſpeedily repaires thither, chaſed the Turkes, and leauing ſome to guard them, returnes to the battell. Here hee finds the Chriſtians ſo tired with labour, thirſt and heat, that had not the women brought them water out of the adioyning Riuer many had dyed. Now had ours once turned their backes, but preſently the Norman Earle diſplaying his Golden Banner, turned his Horſe, and redoubled the Military word, Deus vult, Deus vult, otherwiſe that had proued a diſmall day. But ſeeing Boamund and the Norman, they recouered their ſpirits, chuſing to dye rather then to flye. The Turkes had ſo beſet ours with their multitude, that no way was open but to their Tents: many periſhed by Turkiſh Arrowes; none was idle, the Souldiers fighting, the Prieſts crying and praying, the women conueying the ſlaine to the Tents, the Aire ouer-ſhadowed with a thicke Cloud of ſhot; when Hugo and Duke Godfrey came flying like prouoked Eagles, to their diſtreſſed Airies with fortie thouſand freſhmen. And now the cries of ſome fighting, and others dying, the ratling of Armors and cracking of Launces, filled the Hils and Valleyes with confuſed noyſes of inſulting voyces, and reſulting ecchoes; and manifold deaths are repreſented to the life in miſerable ſpectacles.

Forty thouſand freſh Souldiers.

The Turkes now looking backe to the Hils, ſee the Biſhoppe Podienſis and Earle Raimund, with the reſt of the Armie, deſcending to the on-ſet as a terrible ſtorme, ſhowring Souldiers, and powring Weapons, and not able further to hold vp head or heart, betooke them to their heeles: which put life into our wounded, to purſue and reuenge their hurts; inſomuch, that the Hill is coloured red, the thirſtie earth is drunken, & increaſeth the Neighbour Riuer with new ſtreames of Perſian, Median, Syrian, Saracen, and Turkiſh bloud, leauing their carkaſſes like Graſſe-hoppers without number on the ground; the Night at laſt deliuering the remnant of theſe children of darkneſſe, from the Chriſtian Zeale which now conuerted it ſelfe into Hymnes and Prayſes of the Great Lord of Hoſts.

The next day they buried their dead, diſtinguiſhed by Croſſes, the wiſer ſort giuing them the veneration of Martyrs, and the moſt Honourable Sepulture. The ſpoyle of the Turkes clothed with Silke, the halfe naked Chriſtians, furniſhed them with Armes, and of beggers ſuddenly made them rich. The day after, which was the third of Iuly, they purſued the Turkes which fled as Birds before the Hawke.

Veneration of Martyrs to their ſlaine friends, by zeale or ſuperſtition.

Soliman their Leader (Sonne of that Soliman which had taken all Romania from the Emperour) had after his flight from Nice, procured tenne thouſand Arabians to come to his aide: which being comne, hee told them that the vertue of the Frankes was either Diuine or Diabolicall, whom wee, ſaith hee, had ſo conquered (in conceit) that wee had prouided Withes and Halters to put about their neckes, when ſuddenly a people which feares not death came downe the Mountaines, and entred our Troupes. Alas, wee were three hundred and threeſcore thouſand, and are all ſlaine or fled. This is the fourth day ſince, and ſtill we tremble. And therefore if you will be aduiſed, get yee out of Romania. Thus they fled with him, in all Chriſtian Townes as they paſſed, making a cheerefull countenance and ſemblance of Victorie; and ſpoyling all that opened to them, ſo to impoueriſh the purſuing Frankes by preuenting them of prouiſions, leauing a Deſert Countrey vnto them.

Compare this with eightie eight prouiſion Three hundred and ſixtie thouſand Turkes.

Great Rams and Dogges.

Iconium.

Tarſus:

Thus were they forced to kill moſt of their Horſes, and many to goe on foote; others, to ride on Oxen, Kine, and the great and ſtrong Rams and Dogs of that Countrey. They paſſed thence therefore as faſt as they could, and entred Lycaonia, a plentifull Countrey, and came to Iconium a rich Citie. When they went thence, they by counſell of the Citizens carried veſſels of water with them, which ſerued till the ſecond day after, that they came to a Riuer: where hauing ſtayed two daies, they went forward to Heraclea. Heere were a great multitude of Turkes, which ſeeing the Frankes approach, fled amaine, and left the Citie to ours, which ſtayed there foure daies. Then did Baldwin Brother of Godfrey, and Tancred, ſeparate themſelues with their troups, and went to Tarſus. Many Turkes were there which went to meete them, but were diſperſed, and the next day the Citizens receiued them into the Citie. Here aroſe a contention betwixt Baldwin and Tancred, whether ſhould haue rule of the Citie, which Tancred at laſt yeelded to Baldwin, whoſe Armie was the greater. In ſhort time two Cities, Athena and Mannistra, were yeelded to them, and many Caſtles. The Turkes were now hidden in their ſtrongeſt holds.

Armenia.
Cæſarea.
Coſor.
Antiochia.

* Milites, a common name to Souldiers or Knights: here in this Author giuen commonly to Horſe-men.

Caſtellum Publicanorum.

Rugia.

The greateſt part of the French, entred into the Land of the Armenians, eagerly thirſting to make the Land drunken with bloud of Turkes; the whole Land was quiet before them, and the Armenians receiued them into their Cities. They came to a Caſtle which feared neither armes nor engines. A Souldier in the Campe, an Armenian, deſired to hold that Land of the Princes, in the fealtie of God and the holy Sepulchre; whereto they yeelded, becauſe they knew him to be a valiant man. After this, they came to Cæſarea of Cappadocia, which voluntarily yeelded it ſelfe. Thence they went to a faire City which the Turkes had aſſieged a little before, three weekes, the Citizens whereof came forth to meete them. Another Knight in the Campe, named Peter de Alpibus, deſired this, and obtayned it of the Princes. After this, they came to Coſor, a commodious and plentifull City; where they were gently receiued of the Chriſtian Inhabitants, and ſtayed thee dayes, furniſhing themſelues with neceſſaries, and receiuing abundant refreſhing.

* Knights then differed from the preſent, were created by Abbots, &c. and therefore were many in number, as theſe, Ieroſolymitan and other Stories of that time mention: Militibus, may alſo be interpreted men at Armes, and is in this ſtory alway vnderſtood of Horſe men.

* Leaue not the Hiſtorie for the Miſterie. 1. Theſ. 5. 21 The Monke hath forgotten that an Apoſtle is not of man, nor by man, nor hath a City but the World for his Dioceſe. Saint Paul ſpeaketh otherwiſe, Gal. 1. & 2. & Luke. Acts 9. 11. & 13. Mat 28. Ioh. 21.

Meane while, Ramiundus had intelligence that the Turkes were fled from Antiochia, and had left it weakely manned; who deuiſed thereupon, to conuey thither fiue hundred Knights*, to take the Towre before the reſt knew of it. But when they were comne into the Valley neere Antiochia, they then perceiued that the Turkes were not gone, but fortified the City all they could. They went therefore to the Caſtle of the Publicans, ſubdued it, and turned thence to the Valley of Rugia, where they ſlew many Turkes and Saracens: whereupon, the Armenians reioycing, yeelded themſelues. They poſſeſſed themſelues of Ruſa and many Caſtles. The reſt of the Armie with miſerable diſaſter paſſed mountainous wayes, paſſable onely for Beaſts and creeping things, yeelding a Foot-path indeed, a way of no wider ſpace, Rocks, Shrubs, Thornes, proud Hills aſpiring to the Stars, and Hells of deepe Valleyes affrighting the very eyes, where the Knights* and Eſquires carried their Armes hanging on their necks, ſome throwing them away, to auoide the carriage, all enforced to goe on foote; yea, often bearing the burthens of their Beaſts, which could not paſſe laden: neither might any ſtand or ſit, by reaſon of the followers, or turne himſelfe in thoſe ſtraits, to helpe him which followed. By this vnpaſſable paſſage (the embleme of the true and heauenly Pilgrimage) they came at laſt to Maraſis, where they were receiued cheerefully with plentifull refection. Hauing ſtaid one day, they came the next day into the Valley in which Antiochia is ſeated, chiefe City of Syria; whilome famous by Saint Peter Prince of the Apoſtles: in it, he placed his Epiſcopall Chaire, and* ordered Barnabas and Paul Apoſtles. But as firſt our Lord would conquer it with humilitie and preaching, ſo now with ſublimitie of Armes. Ours came to the Iron Bridge, where they encountered many Turkes, which prohibited their paſſage, and made their way by force, and there found rich ſpoyles. They pitched their Tents on the Riuers banke, not farre from the City; and the next day prepare to goe to the City, and lay ſiege to it in three place. For on one ſide the Mountaines prohibit acceſſe and all militarie Art. On Wedenſday, the twelfth Kal. of December, was this ſiege begunne, and becauſe the City was not onely the minion of Nature, but Paragon of Art, the Princes conſulted to vſe more their Arts then Armes.

The fourth Booke.

FIrſt therefore, they made a Bridge for commodious paſſage ouer the Riuer, for they found a copious Vintage, Caues full of Corne and prouiſions, Trees laden with varietie of fruits, which the Armenians within the City made knowne to them. Engines were erected, Turrets of wood, Slings, Hookes, Rammes, Moles, and other deuiſes. There were within ſo many defenders, as might haue tryed it in the field with ours. They builded a Caſtle, if haply the Turkes preuailed, for better ſecuritie. The Gariſon of Arech hauing cut off diuers of our Victualers, an ambuſh was laide, and many Turkes ſlaine, their heads caſt (by Engines) into the City: and thenceforwards, our men had freer paſſage to the Armenians for prouiſions, which readily brought alſo to ſell. Chriſtmas Feſtiuitie was celebrated with ioyfull ſolemnity: after which, the Winter with Elementary forces, helped the Enemie to aſſault vs, and made prouiſion difficult: famine within; without, Haile, Snow, Ice, Windes, Armies without Armes, but not without harmes, to them which were without ſhelter, expoſed to their fury, euery way pinched, but in reſolution, and therefore quickned by theſe ſpurres: they agreed that Boamund and the Earle of Flanders, with thirtie thouſand choice Horſe and Foot, ſhould enter into the Saracens Land. From Ieruſalem, Damaſco and Aleppo, and other Countries, Perſians, Arabians and Medes, had aſſembled to come to Antiochia, to raiſe that ſiege; but hearing that ſome of the Chriſtians were entered their Countrey, they reioyced, ſecuring themſelues of victory, and diuided their Armie into two, to keepe ours from fleeing any way. The Armies met, theſe truſting in their multitudes, thoſe in Gods Omnipotence, which gaue them a ſhamefull ouerthrow, and put them to flight; wherein our Foot mounted their Horſes to purſue them. Once; they had beene good Purueyors, to bring thus from farre vnto them ſo many Aſſes, Camels, and other Beaſts, laden with Wine, Corne and other prouiſion, and the hungry he filled with good things: his Name be bleſſed for euer.

Famine and Plentie, and Famine.

The meane while the enemie had aſſaulted ours out of the City in their Tents, and ſlew many, and but for the Riuer had done more hurt; which diſaſters together with famine, made ſome of ours bethinke themſelues of flying. An Aſſe-loade of Corne was now ſold for ſeuen pound, an Egge for twelue pence, a Nut for a peny, and many died of hunger. Yea, the Pillars were ſhaken; Peter the Hermite and William Carpenter, fled away by night. This William was of royall deſcent, Vicount of a Caſtle, called Milidune: no ſhield, breaſt-plate or helmet, could endure the ſtrong puſhes of his Lance. Tancred hearing of their flight, purſued them, tooke them, and cauſed them to returne with ſhame. For Hugo Magnus his ſake, (whoſe Kinſman he was) and his former exploits, William was pardoned, ſwearing to doe ſo no more, which yet he ſoone tranſgreſſed, and cloſely fled. In the whole Armie were not found one thouſand Horſes fit for ſeruice. To adde to their ſorrowes, one Tetigius, a Romanian, vndertooke to bring plentie of prouiſion from the Emperour by ſhipping, and left his Oath and Tents in pawne, which he neuer redeemed. The greateſt part of the Armie compelled by famine, ſued for leaue to depart, which the Princes with teares granted.

In this miſerie, a Meſſenger brought them word of a great Armie of Turkes, which that night would bee at Arech the Caſtle aforeſaid, purpoſing to ſet vpon their Tents vnprepared. This made them dance, which before could not goe, as if they had already conquered, chuſing rather to dye by the Sword then hunger. They ſent Spies the next day, which returned word, that they neuer before had ſeen ſo many thouſands of them together. Their huge multitude made ours beginne to flee, which Boamund ſeeing, he brake forth with ſuch furie, that the enemy fled towards the Iron bridge; the Franks lay frankly about them, and now the earth is couered with carkaſſes, the Ayre is filled with clamors, the Riuer is ſwollen with precipitated bodies, and more were ſlaine then eſcaped, which alſo returned to their Caſtle, rifled it, and then forſooke it, leauing it to Ours, which there placed a Garriſon, returning to the Tents with great ioy and great ſpoiles. Their fellowes which that day had fought, and got the better of the Citizens, were now filled with double ioy. The Armenians and Syrians alſo now brought prouiſion to the Campe, and reioyced with vs. The Turkes after hauing ours at aduantage, put the horſemen to flight, and ſlue about one thouſand foote-men: which they ſcarſly had done, when the reſt of the Armie out of the Campe, reuenged the ſame with exceeding Vſurie. Duke Godfrey glorioully behaued himſelfe with the death of many, whom a Golias of theirs, a big and mightie man, had wel-nigh ſlaine, had not God and his valour protected him, whom he repaid with ſuch furie, that lifting vp his ſword, he claue his breaſt in the midſt, diuiding his backebone and entrails paſſing thorow to his right thigh, his whole head with the right ſide of his body falling into the Riuer, the left halfe he ſent backe to the Citie. This ſight bred in them horror and amazement, for he was one of their Admirals (Amira's.) Euen the Riuers ſelfe with another Armie of carkaſſes, ſtood ſtill to wonder at ſuch a ſpectacle, nor could the vpper Waters enforce the lower (ſtayed with a new world of Inhabitants) to giue them leaue to ſee it, till their ſwelling indignation by force obtained it. In that conflict was ſlaine the Sonne of Caſſianus, the great King of Antiochia, and twelue Admirals of the King of Babylon, whom he had ſent with their bands to ayde the King of Antioche. For that Prouince hath one Metropolitane, twelue Conſuls, and one King; and they were gathered out of ſo many Prouinces as there were Admirals. There were alſo ſeuen thouſand taken Priſoners: the baggage was without number. And now the Turkes not onely ceaſed their clamors and ſcornes, but many fled cloſely out of the Citie. The next day the Turkes buried their dead beyond the bridge, which the Chriſtians digged vp againe with diſgrace, (for their faſhion is to burie with Pals, Bowes and Arrowes, Golden Byzantines,* and other things good for bootie) leauing another bootie to the Fowles.

A mightie ſtroke.

Amira's, that is, Lords or Commanders.

*A Coine.

The fift Booke.

IN theſe viciſſitudes and entercourſe of diuerſified Fortunes, came Meſſengers from the King of Babylon, vpon ſafe conduct granted by the Princes. Againſt their comming the Campe was ſet forth, in goodlieſt ſhew of brauery, Shields hung vp vpon poles for the youth to runne at Quintane, (an exerciſe on horſe-backe) Dice, Cheſſe, Militarie skirmiſhes of horſe and foote, to expreſſe their careleſſe and feareleſſe reſolutions, whiles the elder and grauer ſort aſſembled with mature aduiſe and graue counſailes, to ſecure that ſecuritie. The Babylonians approaching, maruelled at this ſight, hauing heard before that they were both famiſhed and heartleſſe, and being brought before the Princes, thus ſpake; The Admirauiſſus of Babylon our Lords ſends greeting and friendſhip to you the Princes of the Frankes, if you will obey his will. In the Court of the King of Perſia our Lord, is a great aſſembly for your ſake, and ſeuen daies the Counſell hath beene prolonged. They maruell why you come armed to your Lords Sepulchre, diſpoſſeſſing their people of their ancient poſſeſſions, and (which is vnlawfull for Pilgrims) ſlaying with the Sword. And if you will come hereafter with Scrip and Staffe, they will cauſe you to paſſe with honour and plentie, they will make the foot horſemen, and the poore to want nothing going or comming. And if you ſhall pleaſe to ſtay a moneth at the Sepulchre, you ſhall want nothing, and walke thorow Ieruſalem, and haue leaue to performe what veneration you will to the Temple and Sepulchre. But if you contemne this indulgence, and truſt in your courage and weapons, we are confident that no humane power is able to force the Babylonians and King of Perſia. Speake now your minds what you like or diſlike herein. The Princes with common aduice anſwered. It is no maruell if wee come armed to our Lords Sepulchre, and exterminate your people from thoſe Confines, ſeeing that they which haue before comne with Staffe and Scrip, haue bene ſhamefully both ſcoffed at and ſlaine. The Land is not theirs, though they haue long poſſeſſed it, becauſe it was anciently ours, who for their malice and in-iuſtice by ours were diſpoſſeſſed. But now it is decreed in Heauen, that it ſhall be rendred to the children which was taken from the Fathers. And let not your Nation glorie that they haue conquered the effeminate Greekes, which by Diuine diſpenſation, the ſword of the Frankes ſhall repay you. It is not of man to ouerthrow Kingdomes, but of him by whom Kings reigne. They ſay they will ſhew kindneſſe, if we come with Scrip and Staffe: let their mercy returne vpon themſelues; will they, nill they, our pouertie ſhall bee inriched by their ſtore. Nor can any humane power affright vs: for when wee dye, we are borne, and looſing a Temporall life, wee recouer an Eternall. Therefore tell thoſe which ſent you, that the Armes which we haue taken in our Countrey, we will not lay by when we haue conquered Ieruſalem. For we truſt in him which teacheth our hands to fight, and maketh our armes as a bow of ſteele, that all offences ſhall be remoued and Ieruſalem taken.

Running at Quintan.

Truce broken.

The Embaſſadours herewith diſpleaſed, by leaue entred the Citie. Ours beganne to build a Caſtle at Machumar, before the gate of the Citie in their buriall place, deſtroyed their Sepulchres of Stone, which they vſed to their ſtructure; being finiſhed, it was committed to Earle Raimund: This ſtraitned their iſſues, and ſtrengthned ours, which hereby had libertie to forage, and brought in great booties, from a place where was an old ruined Caſtle, which alſo they fortified and commended to Tancred, who intercepted prouiſions that were brought to the Citie. The Citie therefore deſired truce, to treat in that time of conditions of yeelding. The laſt day of which, a famous Wallon Knight, was by them taken and cruelly murthered, whoſe Wife, by her teares, cries and complaints, exceeded teares, cryes and complaints, hauing ſpent that ſtore in prodigalitie of her ſorrowes, and now by her miſerie varniſhed with bright luſtre of her exceeding beautie, and the deepe impreſſion of Noble bloud, which her impotent nailes ſcratched from that goodly countenance, and her impacience other whiles ſo ſeuerely recalled to the attendance on her great heart, that ſhe abode as a Marble ſtatue, ſpake more to commiſeration and indignation with not ſpeaking, then the beſt ſpeaking Oratorie could haue pronounced.

Pyrrhus.

Fulcherius.

Reuenge ſlept not long. For one Pyrrhus which had three Turrets in his command, ſent ſecretly to Boamund, (with whom he had treated in the truce) to deliuer them all into his hands, and his Sonne for pledge of his fidelitie. Whereupon by night Boamund and the Princes (as had beene agreed with Pyrrhus) cloſely conueyed the Armie thither, which by day (to deceiue the Turkes) they had ſent forth to forage. Thus ſcaled they the wals, (Fulcherius Carnotenſis being the firſt which entred) and after ſet open the gates to the whole Armie: a Comet that night appearing, the heauenly Meſſenger of earthly mutations. The Citie was promiſed to Boamund, if he could make meanes to obtaine it, vpon occaſion of Pyrrhus firſt ſending to him.

The ſixt Booke.
Antiochia taken

ON the fift of Iune, the Chriſtians entred Antioche, Fulcherius and his fellow Scalers inuaded the Towers, and killed the ſleeping Watches, awaking them to a neuer waking ſleep. They which were awaked out of ſleepe by this noyſe in their houſes, ran forth of their doores to ſee the cauſe, and preſently forth of themſelues and ſeeing together. Death now filleth euery ſtreet and corner, confoundeth all ages, ſexes, conditions. Some running out of the gates, were encountred by others comming from the Campe, and Caſſian the King eſcaping into Tancreds iuriſdiction in poore diſguiſe, was there diſcouered by the Armenians, and his head brought to the Princes, together with his Girdle, which was valued at one hundred and ſixtie Byzantines. Many fled to the Caſtle, which ſeemed impregnable, the Mountaine and the Building conſpiring to deride affronts. Heereto from a neere Tower Boamund gaue aſſault, and (wounded) was forced to retire to another Turret, and the reſt followed him. Onely one abode in the top, and ſeeing himſelfe alone, muſtered out of himſelfe an Armie of reſolute thoughts, out of the wals an Armorie of ſtones and mortar againſt his vnderminers, and laden with one thouſand Arrowes, ſeeing Death importunate, he went forth to meete him, leaping in the midſt of his aduerſe ſquadrons with his Sword and Shield, to take vp company to attend him into the other world. The night followed that bloudy day, but forbad ſleepe to both ſides, feare and wearineſſe executing that ſummons.

The next day, being Friday, whiles ſome were carrying out the dead, others aſſaulting the Caſtle, there was eſpied from the Turrets and Wals a Cloud of duſt, which ſome ſuſpected to be the Conſtantinopolitan Emperor, but proued Corbanan the General of the King of Perſia, with a long and farre gathered Armie of Perſians, Medes, Arabs, Turkes, Azimites, Saracens, Courds, Publicans and diuers other Nations. There were three thouſand Agulans, which vſe none other Armes but Swords, armed to point with Iron. Ours being wearied, gaue them leaue to prouoke, inſult, & run vp and downe caſting vp their Lances and Swords, and againe catching them. Senſadol, Sonne to King Caſſian, had gone to Corbanan, promiſing (before in his Fathers name, now in his owne) to reigne vnder him, to deliuer him the Caſtle of Antiochia, and to doe him homage. The Caſtle was now deliuered. Soone after a ruſtie Sword and worſe Lance, taken from a poore Franke, were preſented to him, with inſultation on all hands ouer that beggerly Nation which thought by ſuch Armes to ſpoile Aſia and ſubdue Perſia. And preſently ſent for his Secretarie to write to the Chalife and to the Soldan, that he now held the French Armie incloſed in the walls of Antiochia, the Caſtle in his owne poſſeſſion; and that the cry was more terrible then the Wolfe. And whereas you writ to me vtterly to deſtroy them, be not offended if I ſend ſome of the chiefe bound to you. Their ſeruice will be vſefull, and the French Kings Brother an honourable Captiue to Perſia. Ply you your pleaſures and get children to reſiſt other Frankes, if need be. As for me, I will not ſee your face till I haue ſubiected all Romania, Syria, and Bulgaria to your ſeruie. Thus did he ſell the skinne of the Beare yet liuing. His Mother ſought to diſſwade him by Prophecies, Starre-gazings, and other Wiſardly Diuinations, which all (ſhee ſaid) portended proſperitie and victorie to the Chriſtians. But hee remayned deafe, and reſolued to try it out from the Caſtle, the Turkes ſtill annoyed Ours, and with ſucceſſions of ſupplyes had great aduantage; the ſtreets were ſtill couered, and Houſes as it were roofed anew with Arrowes. But a worſe Enemie, Famine did more harme; the legge of an Aſſe was ſold for ſixtie ſhillings, and the buyer eſteemed frugall, the Hides of beaſts were dreſſed for food, the children ſtarued at the breſts of their Mothers. Many fled away and raiſed reports that the Citie was loſt, or could not long hold out, Earle Stephanus Carnotenſis by this newes cauſed the Emperour comming to their aſſiſtance to turne backe.

Corbanan.

BVt a certaine Prieſt comforted them with Relation of a Viſion of Chriſt, the Virgine and Peter appearing to him and promiſing reliefe after fiue dayes, which one Peter ſeconded with a ſecond Viſion of Saint Andrew, ſhewing him in Saint Peters Church in the Citie, the Launce which pierced the ſide of our Sauiour, with promiſe of victory to the Bearers; which they went, digged and found it with great ioy, ſinging a Te Deum, & Gloria in Excelſis. All preſently ſware not to flie, nor deſiſt from the Iourney of the holy Sepulchre. By night fire from the Weſt fell from Heauen vpon the Turkes Campe, which cheered Ours and terrified them, as an Enſigne of Diuine vengeance by the Frankes. Soone after the Turkes hauing aſſailed and ſlaine three of ours in a Towre, whiles none of our ſtarued number could be brought out of their Houſes to aſſiſt them; Boamund diſdayning, cauſed fire to be ſet on thoſe Houſes to bring them out by force, and ſuch a wind aroſe with the fire that it burned two thouſand Houſes and Churches.

The ſeuenth Booke. The Stories of theſe times are full of Viſions: hence neglecting the Scriptures, they were fed with Legends. And would God the prodigall Sonne would yet leaue his Huskes, and returne to his Fathers houſe, where the pooreſt ſeruant hath better food.

Peter the Heremite and Heluinus were ſent to Corbanan, in Ambaſſage, which they performed ſtoutly in confidence of the former preſages. The Biſhop Podienſis (the Popes Legate) enioyned three dayes faſt, and they all confeſſed themſelues, obſerued Proceſſions, and on the third day receiued the Sacrament. After which by common counſell the Armie was diuided in ſixe parts, the firſt Band committed to Hugo and the Earle of Flanders, the ſecond to Duke Godfrey, the third to Robert the Norman, the fourth to the Podian Biſhop, which carryed with him the Launce aforeſaid, and a great part of Earle Raimunds forces, the fifth to Tancred, the ſixth to Boamund. The Biſhops, Prieſts, Clerkes and Monkes in their holy Veſtments went out with the Souldiers without the gate, carrying Croſſes in their hands, ſigning the people, and crying, Lord ſaue thy people, and bleſſe thine Inheritance: Bee thou to them a Tower of ſtrength from the face of their Enemie, with other Pſalmes. The like was performed by thoſe which were on the Walls and Towers. Corbanan ſaw them comming forth, and ſaid, let them all come out that we may the better take them. By him ſtood an Aquitaine Renegado, which for his belly had denied his Redeemer, and had told diſgracefull reports of the Chriſtian forceleſſe famiſhed Forces; by whom he now learned to whom euery Band pertayned. And ſeeing their Armes and Order, hee cut off the head that had brought him thoſe Tales. Hee gaue alſo a ſigne to the Amira of his Treaſures, that if hee ſaw a fire kindled in the head of his Armie, hee ſhould flye with all ſpeed.

Of this Lance, ſee Fulcherius. The finder was found a deceiuer.

When Ours were comne into a certaine Valley, the Biſhop of Podium armed, and holding the Launce of our Sauiour erected in his hand, made a Sermon or Speech vnto them, exhorting to courage and charitie, promiſing Victorie to the Suruiuer, Heauen to the Dier, and bleſſed them. Then marched they on moderately, the length of their Armie from the Riuer to the Hill extending ding

Fight and victorie.

If I follow my Author into Thickets (piæ fraudes) yet your diſcretion may chuſe your way.

The Caſtle yeelded.

* Fulch. ſaith he went to France, and after returned.

ding two miles. The Turkes diuided themſelues in two Bands thinking to incloſe Ours: but a ſeuenth Band was appointed to encounter that diuided Armie out of the Souldiers of Godfrey, and the Norman vnder one Rainald. Theſe met and fought, many beeing ſlaine on both ſides. When the other ſixe Bands were come within Arrow ſhot, the Turkes ſhot and the wind retorted their Arrowes on themſelues, ſo that Ours could not find an Enemie, the Turkes flying from the firſt Band, which preſently went to helpe Boamund, which bare the burthen of the fight, and Godfrey followed him. Whiles Ours are in the heat of fight a white Armie appeared from the Mountaines, whoſe Captaines are ſaid to be George, Mauritius, Demetrius, and the Biſhop preſently cryed, that their promiſed helpe was comne. Fire was ſet to the Graſſe when the Turkes fled, for a token of flight to the Campe, which yet were ſet vpon by the Surians and Armenians. There dyed that day one hundred thouſand Horſemen, for they would not take paines to number the Footmen which were ſlaine. The next day fifteene thouſand Camels were found, Horſes, Aſſes, Mules, Oxen, Sheepe, innumerable, with Gold, Siluer, Veſtments and other things of price: with which they returned to the Citie, where they were receiued by the Prieſts in Proceſſion. The Amira of the Caſtle ſeeing his fellowes runne away, asked for one of our Colours, and the Earle of Saint Giles (left to guard the Citie) gaue him his, which hee ſet vp, but hearing that the Citie was granted to Boamund, he ſent for his Ancient, and couenanted with him to ſuffer the Caſtellans to depart with freedome, ſo as they which would might become Chriſtians, the reſt ſhould haue a Conuoy to the Saracens. Himſelfe became a Conuert: and after three dayes faſt, the Gentiles were baptized. The battell was fought on the eight and twentieth of Iune, on Saint Peter and Saint Pauls Euen. Hugo Magnus was ſent in Ambaſſage to the Emperour to come to take his Citie, which hauing done, * he died. The other guiltie of breaking his Oath would not come.

They now conſulted of going to the Sepulchre, but were forced to wait till October, by the drought and heate. One Pilet a Knight of Earle Raimunds, procured many to ioyne with him, and went into the Saracens Land. The Saracens receiued him at Talaman: not farre thence hee wonne a Caſtle of the Saracens. They went to Marra, where many were gathered from Aleph (Aleppo) and other places: they diſcomfited the Turkes, but were not able to lay ſiege till October. The Biſhop Podienſis dyed on the firſt of Auguſt, to the Armies great griefe, and was buried in Saint Peters Church. The Earle of Saint Giles went to Albaria, and forced the Citie, commanding to kill all ſuch as would not turne Chriſtians, which coſt many their liues, becauſe they had taken it from the Chriſtians, and vſed the ſame condition. A Biſhop was alſo elected to gouerne it.

The eighth Booke.

The Chriſtian Army increaſed.

SVmmer being paſt, the Chriſtian Souldiers returned from their ſeuerall abodes to Antioch, and there met together on All-Saints day, beeing now farre more then when they had gone from thence. For from all parts of the World many worthy Knights and Footmen had followed the ſteps of the former, the Chriſtian Armie daily increaſing. And when they conſulted of the way of the Sepulchre. Boamund demanded their couenant touching the Citie. Earle Raimund ſaid it could not be done by reaſon of their Oath to Alexius. Hence grew many meetings and ill greetings. At laſt the Biſhops, Abbots, and more moderate Princes conſulted how both might be kept: and it was agreed that both Boamund and Raimund ſhould goe the way of the Sepulchre with the reſt, the former fortifying the Caſtle, the other the Palace of Caſſian, and the Tower on Saint Simeons gate.

Deſcription of Antiochia.

Marra beſieged

* Teſtudo, was an Engine made of boords couered with Hides to preuent fire within which the Aſſailants might approch to the walls: & in which alſo they might hang with ropes, that Iron Engine, which if it had one hooked beake, was called falx, if two it was called Aries or a Ram wherewith the walls were ſhaken, & ſtones looſed and pulled out.

And becauſe Antioch hath long detayned vs in the narration, and in the ſiege, we will ſpeake ſomewhat of it for their ſakes which haue not ſeene it. Threeſcore and fiue Kings are ſaid to haue ruled there. It is enuironed with two Walls, the former of great ſquare ſtones artificially wrought, and therein are diſtinguiſhed in order foure hundred and ſixtie Towers. It is goodly and ſpacious contayning foure Hils great and high, on the higheſt a Caſtle, neither fearing forcible batterie, or ſuttle engining. There are three hundred and ſixtie Churches in her Territorie, and the Patriarch hath vnder his Iuriſdiction, one hundred fiftie three Biſhops. Foure Hils fortifie it on the Eaſt. Farfar runneth on the Weſt. Ours beſieged it eight monethes and one day, and were in it beſieged three weekes of the Parthians, after which they reſted there in quiet foure monethes and eight dayes, which ended, Raimund went to Rugia, and the next day to Albaria, which two Cities he had ſubdued: the fourth day to Marra.

The Citizens ſcorning the paucitie of his Souldiers, came forth to encounter him, but were ſoone repelled. The next day Boamund adioyned himſelfe to his helpe. Iron Rammes were made, which being hanged with Ropes, and by the Souldiers hands drawn back might be forced on the Walls, with often puſhes to ſhake downe the Wall. A Tower of wood was erected higher then theirs of ſtone, with three lofts furniſhed with Militarie Engines, hauing in the two higher armed men with Pikes, Arrowes, Stone, Balls, and Fires: in the loweſt were thoſe which forced the wheeles on which the Tower was built. Others filled the Ditch, hauing applyed a Tortoiſe * to the Wall ſo to bring thither their Machination. The Citizens had prouided wild-fire, and another Inſtrument to throw great ſtones, but in vaine. For William of Mount Peſſul, with his Company in the higheſt ſtorie, threw downe Mill-ſtones which brake the roofes of houſes, whiles the others digged thorow the Wall. Others ſet a Ladder to the Wall, which Gulferius dela Turre firſt aſcended, and many other followed him: whom the Citizens no leſſe furiouſly aſſaulted, and forced ſome of them downe with deadly præcipice: whom others yet followed: the Prieſts alſo ſtood by the wooden Tower, calling on the Lord Ieſus, to powre his wrath on the Gentiles which knew him not, and the Kingdomes which inuoked not his Name: and to bee our helpe in the nedfull time of trouble. The narrowneſſe of the Wall did not admit aſſiſtants to Gulferie, who laid about like a Lion, and was moſt laid at, his ſhield beeing onerated with Arrowes, Darts and Weapons, that a man could not lift it, and hee was now ſpent and wearie when the other had digged thorow, and ſoone chaſed away the Enemies: which ſo terrified thoſe on the Wall, that Gulferie now without a ſhield full of heart and reſumed life, made way with his Sword and killed more yet with feare (throwing downe themſelues) then with his Weapon. Boamund ſignified to the richer Citizens to flye to a Tower, and there they might redeeme their liues, which vpon his word they did. Much crueltie was ſhewed by ours, ranſacking not only their houſes but their very entrails for Treaſure: neither yet was there any of ſo great a multitude which would confeſſe the name of Chriſt. Euery man had what hee could get. And Boamund of thoſe in the Tower ſlue the old vnſeruiceable, the reſt he ſent to Antiochia to be ſold: but when hee could not perſwade Raimund to deliuer Antiochia to him, hee left him and returned thither.

The Armie which ſtayed all this while there was ſo pinched with Famine, that (horrible to ſpeake) they cut and eate vp the bodies of the Gentiles. The diſcord yet continued betwixt the Earle and Boamund, to the great diſpleaſure of the Armie, Raimund pretending the Oath to the Emperour, and hauing pure Iuſtice on his part. This being diſcourſed at Rugia and Capharda in diuers meetings, euery one wiſhing, but not ſhewing how to effect, concord, they returned to Antioch. But the Norman Earle with all his abode with Raimund, knowing that hee was in the right. Theſe two Earles order their Bands for Ceſarea, the King whereof had ſent to become Raimunds Vaſſall. But when he ſaw the Armie approaching, hee was troubled and forbade to ſell them any thing. The next day he ſent to ſhew them a Foord, whereby they might paſſe thorow Farfar. a Valley, in which were twentie thouſand head of beaſts which they tooke: and going to beſiege a Caſtle therein, it preſently yeelded to them, which Example another Caſtle followed. Thence they came to Caphalia a plentifull Citie in a ſpecious and ſpacious Valley, whoſe Citizens were all fled, leauing their Garners and Gardens, and Houſes plentifully prepared for thoſe which at firſt were filled with wonder and doubt, and after with Iubilee. The like alſo was done by a Caſtle adioyning to that Valley, where they kept their Candlemas. The King of Camel ſent thither to deſire conditions of Peace, or rather to buy the ſame with goodly Preſents. The King of Tripoli imitated his Example. Both their Gifts were receiued, but no peace giuen, except they would become Chriſtians.

Famines thron at Antiochia.

Caphalia.

Camel.

Tripoli.

A fortnight after they went to an old Caſtle called Archas, comparable to famous Cities, in Scite, Walls, Towers. Whiles they continued heere a doubtfull ſiege, fourteene Souldiers of Ours, deſiring Exploits went towards Tripoli, where they encountred threeſcore Turkes with a great bootie of Captiues and Cattell, and returned with the ſpoile to the Campe. Raimund Pilet, and Raimund Vicount of Tentoria, with their companies hereby inſtigated went to Tortoſa, and making great fires by night, as if the whole Armie were there, ſo terrified the Inhabitants that they left their Citie in haſte, ſtored as it was, to ſeeke a new Habitation, this beeing indeed a good Hauen for ours. Maraclea a Neighbor Citie alſo receiued them. Duke Godfrey hearing of this glorious ſucceſſe, ſet forth from Antiochia with Boamund and the Earle of Flanders, and came to the Citie Licia, where Boamund parted from them. The Duke and the Earle came to Gibellum, and beſieged it: but hearing from Earle Raimund of his difficulties, and of a battell approching, they agreed on conditions before required with the Prince of that Citie, and haſted thither to the beſieged Caſtle. Where the Duke ſeeing their ſmall proficience, went to Tripoli, where followed ſo bloudie a battell that the water which runneth into their Citie ſtained their Ciſternes; and then turning aſide to the Valley of Deſen (where ours had ſtaid before a fortnight) there got three thouſand Camels and innumerable Sheepe, Kine and Aſſes, to their great wonder whence they ſhould come in that ſpace. Thus richly laden they returned to the ſiege, and there kept their Eaſter (then the ſecond day of Aprill.) This ſiege continued three monethes and one day, and then (preuailing nothing) they aroſe and went to Tripoli, and there eſtabliſhed the peace which the King and Citizens had deſired. The King deliuered three hundred Pilgrims of ours, and gaue fifteene thouſand Bizantines and open Market to buy prouiſion.

Archas.

He couenanted alſo to become Chriſtian if they could winne Ieruſalem, and ouercome the Babylonian Warre, and be ſubiect to the King of Ieruſalem. Here they ſtaid three dayes, and ſeeing that Harueſt was neere they agreed to take the next way to Ieruſalem. On the fourth of May they ſet out, and paſſing certaine ſteepe Hils, they came to the Caſtle Betelon: the next day to the Citie Zabaris, where they could find no water for themſelues and their Horſes. The next day they came to the Riuer Braim where they refreſhed themſelues that night. The next night was Zabaris.

Tyrus.

was of our Lords Aſcenſion, and they aſcended a hill by a narrow way, where they feared, but found no enemy. Then came they to Baruth, a Citie ſeated on the Sea; thence to Sagitta, and after that to Sur, from that to Aora, thence to the Caſtle called Caiphas, and ſo to Cæſarea. In Cæſarea is Philips houſe ſtill ſhewed, and the Chamber of his Daughters which were Propheteſſes. Here they kept their Whitſontide, pitching their Tents neere the Citie. Thence they paſſed to Ramola, which the Saracens for feare had forſaken, neere which is the Church of Saint George, where hee lieth buried, for veneration of whom they elected a Biſhop, and gaue him Tithe of all their Riches. It was meete that inuincible George, the Standard-bearer of their war ſhould receiue that honour. Thence they turned to Ieruſalem.

S. Georges Tithe.

The ninth Booke.

Ieruſalem beſieged.

AS ſoone as they ſaw Ieruſalem, they wept for ioy, fell downe and worſhipped the Sepulchre. On the North ſide, the Earles of Normandie and Flanders encamped, neere Saint Stephens Church, in the place where he was ſtoned. On the Weſt Duke Godfrey and Tancred. On the South (on Mount Sion) the Earle of Saint Giles. Whiles they reſted in their Tents being wearie, ſome went to ſcoure and ſecure the Countrey. On Munday the fourth of Iune, they beganne the aſſault, and had that day ended the ſiege if they had not wanted Ladders. Another want of Bread ſucceeded for ten daies ſpace, and then their ſhips of prouiſion arriued at Ioppe. The Water of Siloe could ſcarcely ſuffice the men. The Beaſts were driuen ſixe miles to water, with a great conuoy of ſixe thouſand Souldiers. Pilet and one hundred others, were ſent to Iaphia or Ioppe, and ſome that went before to ſearch the way, were ſet vpon by ſeuen hundred Turkes and Arabs, where Achardus a good Souldier ſold his life deerely; but when the reſt came in, the enemies fled. They were now prouided of victuall from the ſhips, but their thirſt was ſo extreame, that they digged holes in the earth, and put the moiſt Turffes to their mouthes to moiſten them; they licked the dewie Marbles, and ſewed beaſts skins new killed to fetch Water in: and ſome rather faſted, ſo to moderate thirſt, then to drinke of that greaſie Water. To the ſiege they addreſſed woodden Towers and Engines.

Great thirſt.

Duke Godfrey cauſed his to be applied on the Eaſt ſide, and the Earle of Saint Giles another, on the South. On Thurſday they faſted, and gaue Almes to the poore; and on Friday the twelfth of Iuly, they aſcended thoſe Towers, and applyed ſcales to the Walls. Duke Godfrey with his Brethren Euſtace and Baldwine, played the Lions. Proceſſion was made about the wals with Croſſes and Relikes, and Altars, whiles they fought on the wals. When the houre approached, in which the Sauiour of men dyed for men, then did one Letoldus firſt from the Dukes Caſtle leap forth, and after him Guicherius, (which had ſlain a Lion by his ſtrength.) The Duke followed his Souldiers, and his other Souldiers him, who chaſed the enemy from the wals, and purſue them into the Citie with a great ſhout. Which when Earle Raimund heard, which was labouring to bring his Tower to the Wall, hee called to his men to follow him to the gate neere the Tower of Dauid, and ſpake to them in the Tower to open; which preſently the Admiravis which kept the Tower, hearing who hee was, did, and committed himſelfe and all his vnto him, together with the Tower.

Letoldus and Guicherius enter the Citie.

But Duke Godfrey ſought neither Tower nor Gold, nor ſpoile, but reuenge for the bloud and wrongs of Pilgrims, whereto he neuer had more opportunitie, not then when at Antioche hee claue in ſunder that Gigantean Gentile. And now he and Guicherius (which cut a Lion in ſunder) claue humane bodies from the head to the raines, and on the right and left hand thorow both ſides: the throng hindred euery mans flight. They which remained, fled to the Temple of Salomon, where they defended themſelues the moſt part of the day; but ours before night breaking in, ſhed ſo much bloud, that ſlaine carkaſſes were tumbled on the Pauement to and fro in a ſtreame of bloud; armes and hands diſmembred floted in bloud, and were ioyned to others bodies, none being able to diſcerne; and the ſlayers themſelues were ſcarſely able to endure thoſe hot miſts of bloudie vapours. After this vnſpeakable ſlaughter, they grew more indulgent, and many captiues of both Sexes were ſpared. Euery corner was ſearched for ſpoile, euery man poſſeſſing what he tooke; Ieruſalem at that time being rich. After this they did goe ioyfully to the holy Sepulchre, and gaue thankes to him which had beene there buried: going did I ſay? Creeping on their knees and elbowes, watering the Pauement with their teares. This done, they went to their houſes, and refreſhed themſelues with food and ſleepe. The next day they went armed to the Temple of Salomon, to make an end of them which had aſcended the roofes, where onely Wings were wanting to flye from that which they could no way flee, preſent deſtruction. Some threw themſelues downe headlong; others, offered themſelues to ſeruitude. The liuing Saracens were enioyned to carry out the dead and burie them, and to cleanſe the Citie.

Cruell execution. Dodechinus in his Appendixe to Mar. Scotus, reciteth out of a letter to Pope Paſcal, written by D. Godfrey, that the bloud reached vſque ad equorum genua.

Godfrey choſen King.

Arnulphus choſen Patriarch.

The enemies deſtroyed, the Citie ſecured, victorie and glory atchieued, queſtion was of a King, and Duke Godfrey was choſen by generall conſent, the eighth day after the taking, who more adorned that Royall Dignitie, then it him, and was an Honor to his Honor, by Knightly bountie, bodily elegance, and excellent manners. The next care was of a Prelate, and Arnulphus was choſen on Lammas-day. This ended, Meſſengers were ſent by the Neapolitans to King Godfrey, Godfrey, offering themſelues to his ſubiection. (This Neapolis is a Citie of Caria, an Aſian Prouince) to whom the King ſent Euſtace his Brother, and Tancred, to whom they deliuered their Citie. The Deuill beſtir'd him, and enuying this riſing Sunne of Chriſtianitie after ſo long a night, raiſed vp Clement the Admiranis of Babylon, and all the Eaſt with him againſt them. He came with pompous preparation to Aſcalon. Euſtace and Tancred were ſent for, and all goe towards Aſcalon, a Citie of Paleſtina, fiue and twentie miles from Ieruſalem. Heere they had all firſt fortified their Spirits by the Euchariſt, and proceeded from the Church towards Aſcalon. The Patriarch left Peter the Hermite in his place, to ordaine Maſſes, Prayers, Proceſſions. Neere Aſcalon they tooke a great bootie of beaſts. The next day, the Patriarch curſed all that ſhould goe about to meddle with ſpoile before the victorie. This was on Friday, on which our Lord had dyed.

The King paſſed the Riuer, and pitched his Tents neere the Sea. Himſelfe had the firſt Band or Vantguard, Robert of Normandie the ſecond, Earle Raimund the third, the Earle of Flanders the fourth; Euſtace, Tancred, and Guaſton de Bebert, the fift. The Foot-men had ſet themſelues with Arrowes and Darts before the Knights, Men at Armes *, and thus ordered, they marched towards the Babylonians. The King was in the left Wing, where was moſt danger, the Earle of Saint Giles in the right, the reſt betwixt them. The Babylonian (whom none durſt tell of the former bootie) being told that the Frankes were comne forth to fight, much diſdained their paucitie, as a diſgrace to haue ſo meane ſo confident enemies. The battell was begun by the Earle of Normandie and his Band, in that quarter where he eſpyed the Admiravis his Standard, and making way with his Sword thorow the midſt of his enemies, by a bloudie paſſage arriued at him that held it, whom hee laid dead at the Admiravis his foote, and tooke the Standard, the Admiravis hardly eſcaping to Aſcalon with his life, whence he might behold the ſlaughter of his people, which by noone were all put to rout and ſlaine in all places, euen to the gates of the Citie in incredible numbers. The ſpoile was exceeding rich. The Standard, which in the top of a Siluer Staffe had a golden Apple, was offered by Earle Robert of Normandie at the holy Sepulchre, the whole Armie hauing returned and entred into the Citie in triumph. This battell was fought the eighth of Auguſt. And thus Ieruſalem, which is ſaid to haue beene built by Melchiſedech, (whom the Iewes ſay, was the Sonne of Noe) is now open to the Pilgrimes with praiſes, which before were receiued with contumelies. Of theſe Pilgrimes and Gates, it is ſaid by Eſay; And thy Gates ſhall be open continually, day and night they ſhall not be ſhut. And againe, of the French Nation, which he brought from the ends of the earth to deliuer it, I will bring thy Children from farre, their Siluer and their Gold with them, in the name of the Lord thy God, and the holy one of Iſrael which hath glorified thee. The Sonnes of thy Pilgrims ſhall build thy wals, and their Kings ſhall miniſter to them. Theſe and many things elſe, we find in the Propheticall Books, which agree to this deliuerance made in our Age.

* Militibus.

Heroike Act of Robert of Normandie.

Dodechinus ſaith, 100000. were ſlaine, beſides 2000. in the gate, innumerable then periſhing at ſea: the whole Armie being 100000. horſe, and 400000. Foot-men.

CHAP. II.

The Acts of the Pilgrimes in their Expedition to Ieruſalem, before and after the taking thereof, extracted out of FVLCHERIVS CARNOTENSIS, which went thither with ROBERT, Earle of Normandie.

IN the yeare 1095. when manifold euils in all parts of Europe were encreaſed, the Faith languiſhing, Vrban the ſecond was Pope of Rome, a man excellent in life and manners, * which alway to the vtmoſt of his wit and ſtrength, endeuored aboue all things to Exalt higher the State of holy Church. And ſeeing that the Faith of Chriſtendome was decayed in all, both Clergie and Laitie, and the Secular Princes in continuall warres with each other, ſpoiling the goods, captiuing the perſons, (whom miſerable priſons enforced to vnreaſonable redemptions) violating holy places, burning of Townes and Monaſteries, making a mockerie of things Diuine and humane, ſparing no man: and hearing that the Prouinces of Romania * were poſſeſſed by the Turks; he called a Councell at Claremont, Herein he decreed the Churches freedome from all Secular Power, that Tithes of all which commeth by husbandrie, ſhould bee proper to God, and neither ſold nor detained; that he which ſhould take a Biſhop ſhould be an Out-law, and the takers or ſpoilers of Clerkes, Monkes and Nuns, Pilgrimes or Merchants, ſhould bee Anathema, as likewiſe Robbers and incendiaries. Theſe and other like being ratified by the Councell, he exhorted them, (Not I, but the Lord) to exterminate the Turkes out of the Chriſtian Confines. I ſpeake to the preſent, I ſend to the abſent, and Chriſt commands it. And all that goe thither, if they ſhall dye in the going by Land, paſſage ouer water, or in fight againſt the Pagans, ſhall haue preſent remiſſion of their ſinnes: which I grant to thoſe which vndertake the Voyage, hauing ſo great a gift from God. Thoſe that haue formerly abuſed

* This the ſanctitie of thoſe times to aduance the Church, not to freedome from ſin, but to fulneſſe of power in exemption from Kings and Soueraigntie ouer them, (wherein Vrbanus was cald Turbanus.) This the ſtate of the Church, that is, the Clergie, and more ſpecially the Papacy. This the great article of Popiſh Faith.

warres againſt Chriſtians, let them goe againſt Infidels, and let them now bee Souldiers which before were Robbers, and let them fight iuſtly againſt the Barbarians, which they did before againſt their Brethren, and for an eternall reward, which were before mercenarie for a few ſhillings, and for a double honour, which wearied themſelues for double detriment of body and ſoule. Here they are poore, there they ſhall be wealthy; here the Lords enemies, there his friends. Let them not delay, but make Money of that which they haue, and the next ſpring ſet forward.

Many preſent promiſed to goe, of which was Ademarus, Biſhop of Podium, afterward the Popes Legat, which ruled the whole Armie. Theſe things ordered in the Councell, and the bleſſing of Abſolution being giuen, they departed home, and divulged what had paſſed. Truce was euery where confirmed by Oath, and many of euery profeſſion vowed to goe, the remiſſion of ſinnes being purchaſed. O what a goodly ſight, and worthy it was to vs all, to ſee the Croſſes of Silke, or wrought in Gold, or of Cloath which they ware on their Iackets, Coates, and Garments on their ſhoulders. Such a worke did Pope Vrban meditate, by which the world after flouriſhed, and reſtored the Churches Rights. But the Deuill raiſed vp Guibertus, Biſhop of Rauenna, an Aduerſarie to him, whom the peruerſeneſſe of the Emperour, whiles Gregorie (Hildebrand) held the Seate, ſupported in his vſurpation of the Apoſtleſhip. But the better ſort acknowledged Gregorie, and after him Vrban, whom by the Emperours ayde, Guibertus forced from Rome, till that yeare when the Frankes went to Ieruſalem by Rome, Guibertus being in Almaine, Vrban by help of Matildis, obtained the whole Apoſtolike power, ſhe being then verie potent in the Romane Countrey.

This Authour ſpeaks like one of Vrbans faction againſt Guibertus and the Emperour, ignorant of Papall ſleights.

This Stephen, Father of King Stephen, is called Comes Carnotenſis, and is ſaid to haue as many Caſtles as were daies in the yeare.

Anno 1096. ſome in March, others in Aprill, May, Iune, Iuly, Auguſt, September, and October, ſet forth, as they could make their prouiſions on this holy Voyage. Peter the Hermite went by the way of Hungarie. Raymond Earle of Prouince, with his Gothes and Gaſcoines, and the Biſhop of Podium by Sclauonia, Hugo Magnus and Buamund by Bulgaria. In September, Robert Earle of Normandie, Sonne of William King of the Engliſh, with a great Armie of Normans, and Engliſh-men and Britans ſet forwards, and with him Stephen Earle of Bloiſe, and Robert Earle of Flanders. The Armies ſtill increaſed as they paſſed, and were neuer vnited till they came to Nice. We Weſterne Frankes paſſed thorow Italy, and found Pope Vrban neere to Luca, with whom Robert the Norman had conference, and Earle Stephen, and wee alſo as many as would; and hauing his bleſſing, we went ioyfully to Rome. And when we had entred Saint Peters, we found before the Altar Guiberts men, which with their Swords in their hands tooke away the offerings: others ranne along the beames, and threw ſtones at thoſe which were proſtrate at their Prayers, ſeeking to ſlay thoſe which were faithfull to Vrban. Vrbans men held one Tower of the Monaſterie, which kept it for him, and withſtood the Aduerſaries. Many which went thither with vs, returned home, but we paſſed thorow Campania and Apulia, and came to Barrum, a good Citie on the Sea. We had thought to haue taken ſhip, but the weather being vnſeaſonable, Robert Earle of Normandie was forced to turne aſide into Calabria; and winter there. But Robert Earle of Flanders with his troups paſſed ouer. Then verie many of the poorer fearing want, ſold their Bowes, and taking their Pilgrimes Staues returned home, to their diſgrace before God and Men.

Seeing ſuch ſacriledge and ſmelling, perhaps the Popes plot.

In March, 1097. Robert Earle of Normandie, and Stephen of Bloiſe returned to the Sea, and on the fifth of Aprill, then Eaſter-day, ſet ſayle at the Hauen Brunduſium. There wee ſaw one ſhip, (without any cauſe appearing) ſinke almoſt foure hundred perſons of both Sexes drowned: on the dead bodies of which were ſeene Croſſes branded on their fleſh, a miraculous token that they departed in Gods mercy. The Horſes and Mules, and much Money was loſt. This ſo appalled many, that they forſooke their Pilgrimage and returned. But we foure daies after arriued at Duratum, and paſſed the difficult paſſages of the Bulgarians by Hils and Deſerts, till we came to the Riuer Dæmon, where the Diabolicall Torrent drowned many, and many more had done, but for the helpe of the Horſe-men. Wee aſcended next day the Hill Bagulat, and came to the Riuer Baldarius, thorow which wee waded, and came the next day to Theſſalonica: and trauelling thorow Macedonia, we came at laſt to Conſtantinople: where after much adoe, our men did homage to the Emperour. Then paſſing Saint Georges Arme, we came to Nice, which the Turkes (who had come out of Perſia, about fiftie yeares before) did now poſſeſſe, and all Romania as farre as Nicomedia. The Princes Buamund, Duke Godfrey, and Earle Raimond then in the ſiege, came to meete the Earles, Robert and Stephen. Then were many Armies combined in one Armie, wherein were a hundreth thouſand armed men, with Corſlets and Head-peeces: which they that had skill of the number, eſteemed to haue ſixe hundred thouſand men apt for warre, beſides thoſe that were vnarmed; to wit, Clergie-men, Monkes, Women and Children. What ſhall I ſay more? If all they which had comne out of their Houſes and begun this vowed iourney, had beene here together, without doubt there would haue beene ſixtie hundred thouſand Warriors. But ſome had returned from Rome, others from Apulia, others from Hungaria, or Sclauonia, many thouſands were ſlaine by the way, and many died, the waies, fields, woods, preſenting many buriall places of Pilgrimes.

Nice taken.

Nice being rendred, on the nine and twentieth of Iune, wee departed into the inner Countries of Romania. On the firſt of Iuly, we had newes of Turkes approaching, and ſet downe our baggage by a Fenne or Reedy place, and beheld Soliman which had held Romania with his Amira's of the Countries, aboue thirtie daies iourney, being three hundred and ſixtie thouſand Archers, on horſeback. Duke Godfrey, Earle Raimond and Hugo Magnus were abſent, to our irrecouerable loſſe, both of ours ſlaine, and of Turkes eſcaped. For it was late before our Meſſengers could bring them the newes, and therefore it was late ere they could come in to our ſuccour. The Turkes gaue ſuch an on-ſet with ſhouts and ſhots, that our hearts failed, and we fled, being ignorant of ſuch kind of fight. Others had on the other ſide the Reeds, aſſailed our Tents, and ſlaine many. But the fore-runners of Duke Godfrey, and Hugo, and Raimond on one ſide; and we which fled on the other (whom they thought to returne in reſpect of them) made them retire. But we were thronged as ſheepe cloſed in a fold, trembling, encompaſſed of the enemy, and could go no way. The Conſcience of Lecherie, Couetouſneſſe and Pride, did now trouble many, this ſeeming to haue hapned for our ſinnes. The cry of Men, Women, Infants, and of the Pagans ruſhing on vs, filled the Ayre. We confeſſed our ſinnes, and the Podian Biſhop with many other Prieſts in white, beſought God, crying, ſinging, praying. Then Robert of Normandie, Earle Stephen, Buamund, and the Earle of Flanders, made reſiſtance what they could. God was appeaſed, and wee ſeeing our fellowes which came laſt, reſumed courage, and put the Turkes to flight. The battell and our ſtraits, laſted from the firſt houre till the ſixth. We marched to Antiochia in Piſidia, thence to Iconium, and could not tell whither to laugh or weepe, to ſee many of ours wanting Horſes, lading Rams, Goats, Swine, Dogs, with their carriages, the weight whereof galled their backes. A ſtrange confuſion was of ſo many tongues in one Armie, Frankes, Flemmings, Friſlanders, Galls, Britons, Sauoyards, Loraines, Almaines, Baioarians, Normans, Scots, Engliſh-men, Aquitans, Italians, Apulians, Spaniards, Danes, Greekes, Armenians. Baldwin Brother of Godfrey poſſeſſed himſelfe of Tarſus, and after of Edeſſa, the Gouernour whereof had ſent to compound with him. In the way neere Samoſate we were in danger, but gat ſafe to Edeſſa, and were receiued of the Gouernor, whom his Citizens after fifteene daies ſlue, but Baldwin kept the Citie, and thence made many roads vpon the Turkes. I Fulcherius Carnotenſis, was the Chaplaine of the ſaid Baldwin.

Bloudy battell

Strangemarch to Iconium.

Fulcherius Chaplaine to Baldwin after Duke Godfrey King of Ieruſalem.

In the moneth of October, the Frankes paſſed ouer the Riuer Fernus, or Orontes, to Antiochia. Gratian the Amira, of Antiochia ſent his Sonne Sanſadoles to the Soldan of Perſia for aide. The Turkes within the Towne killed many Chriſtian Inhabitants (for feare of conſpiring with the Frankes) Greekes, Syrians, Armenians. The Chriſtians wearied with ſo long a ſiege, aſcribed it to their Lecherie, Pride and Rapine, and by common conſent put out all the Women, married and others, out of the Tents, which lodged in Tents neere. The Famine was great, and many were ſlaine daily: all were deſolate, and many fled. The reſt were pinched with cold, parched with heate, waſhed with raines, (their Tents being old and worne) lying in open Ayre without any couert but heauen. Earle Stephen returned home. The next day after, was Antiochia taken, deliuered by a Turke, to whom Chriſt had thrice appeared, and bidden him deliuer the Towne. Gratian the Amira was ſlaine by an Armenian Peaſant. It happened, that after the Citie was taken, a Lance was found by a certaine man, which being found in the ground in Saint Peters Church, he affirmed to bee that wherewith Longinus pierced the ſide of our Sauiour. He ſaid, this was reuealed to him by Saint Andrew the Apoſtle, thrice appearing to him, and ſhewing the place where he digged and found it. The Podian Biſhop would not beleeue him, but Earle Raimond (to theſe two, he declared his Viſion) was credulous: and when it was found, all the people reioyced, and one hundred daies after it was holden in great veneration, and glorioſly handled by Earle Raimond, which alſo kept the Lance. But it hapned that the Biſhop of Bare and many others doubted, that it was a counterfeit. Whereupon after three daies ſupplication and faſting, a great fire of wood was made in the field neere the Caſtle Archas, then by them beſieged, eight moneths after that Antiochia had beene taken, a iudiciall benediction being made on the fire by the Biſhops. The finder of the Lance paſſed voluntarily and ſpeedily thorow the fire, but was ſo burned, that in twelue daies after he died, and left the people ſorrie for the worſhip they had done it. But Earle Raimond kept it, till by ſome accident it was loſt.

Robert cals him Caſſian & King.

Viſions in thoſe daies common, and yet for want of viſion the people periſhed.

Triall by fire touching the Lance before mentioned, by Monke Robert.

The Soldan of Perſia ſent Corbagath with a great Armie, which beſieged Edeſſa three daies, and not preuailing againſt Baldwin, they haſted to Antiochia: and ſixtie thouſand of them entring the Citie by the Caſtle, much annoyed ours. The Frankes were ſad: and a Clergie man flying, our Lord appeared to him, and told him, that At his Mothers requeſt he would help them. To another appeared a Brother of his before dead, and told him, that their fellowes which had died in that expedition would take their parts, and fight againſt the Turkes. The Chriſtians went out of the Citie againſt Corbagath, which would not leaue his Cheſſe at firſt, but after was forced to leaue the field, notwithſtanding his huge troups eſteemed to be ſixe hundred & ſixtie thouſand Horſe and Foot, and ours famiſhed and few, which were enriched with their ſpoiles. Many of them were ſlaine, and their Women in the Tents. After Antioch was taken, the Podian Biſhop died, and the Princes wrote to Pope Vrban: To the holy Lord and venerable Pope Vrban,

The Armie in white, of which Robert fabled.

* Malmsburie ſaith, that Corbagath or Corbanach, was ſlaine by Robert of Normandie.

Buamund, and Raimund Earle of Saint Giles, Godfrey Duke Lotharienſis, Robert Earle of Normandie, Robert Earle of Flanders, and Euſtace Earle of Bullon, Greeting and faithfull Seruices; and as Children to their ſpirituall Father, true ſubiection in Chriſt, &c. They relate the occurrents of the Warre, and deſire him to come in perſon, and ſit in Peters Chaire, whoſe Vicar hee is, where the name of Chriſtians beganne, and to open to them the Gates of both Ieruſalems, &c.

Bara and Mara being taken, Buamund returned to Antioch, and chaſed thence Earle Raimunds men, and poſſeſſed the Citie and all the Prouince. But Earle Raimund and Robert of Normandie proceeded towards Ieruſalem: and in the yeare 1099. beſieged Archas at the foote of Libanus. Duke Godfrey and the Earle of Flanders followed. In Iune, (to omit the reſt) they came before Ieruſalem, which on the fifteenth of Iuly, they tooke, and ſlue about ten thouſand men in the Temple, called Salomons: ſhot alſo many which were vpon the roofe. Our feete in the Temple (Vſq; ad baſes, fortè brachas) were ſteeped in bloud. Our men opened their entrails to ſearch for Byzantines, and after ſome daies, made a great heape of carkaſſes, which they burned to ſearch the Aſhes: Fiue hundred Turkes which had betaken themſelues to the Tower of Dauid, agreed with Earle Raimund, and were ſent to Aſcalon. And now one piece of the Croſſe was found, by reuelation made to a Syrian, which was carried to the Temple of the Sepulchre with Proceſſion. Duke Godfrey was made King: and the King of Babylon, and Leuendalius his Generall, made haſt with great Forces to beſiege or fight with the Chriſtians, and came to Aſcalon, where the Chriſtians obtained a glorious victorie. Robert of Normandie, and Robert of Flanders returned to Conſtantinople by ſhipping; Earle Raimund to Laodicea, where hee left his Wife, going thence to Conſtantinople, with purpoſe to returne: Duke Godfrey retained Tancred, and many others with him at Ieruſalem.

Robert the Norman was offered the Kingdome of Ieruſalem, & neuer thriued for refuſing it, ſaith Malmsbury, and Math. Paris: Earle Raimund alſo had the offer.

HONDIVS his Map of Terrà Sancta.

MARIS MEDITERRANEI PARS
TABULA CANANÆÆ prout tempore Christi et Apostolorum divisa fuit
Mil. Germanica
Horæ itineris
IUDÆA
SAMARIA
GALILÆA INFERIOR
GALLILÆA SUPERIOR seu GENTIŨ
PERÆA
DECAPOLIS
TRACHONITIS
MOABITIS REGIO
PALESTINA
Simeon
Tribus
Dan
Ephraim
Manaſſe
Isachar
Zabulon
Aſſer
Nephthalim
Gad
Rubenæ
Amonitis R.
Gergeſenorum Regio
Asphaltites Lacus item Mare Mortuum et Salsum
Hierusalem
Bethlehem
Hebron
Iericho
Ioppe seu Iaffa
Gaza
Ascalon
Azotus sive Asdod
Cæsarea Stratonis
Ptolemais seu Acon
Tyrus
Sidon
Sichem
Samaria vel Sebaste
Capernaū
Bethsaida
Nazareth
Dalmanutha
Sodoma
Gomorrha
Zeboim
Adama
Hesbon
Philadelphia
Tob
Gerasa
Macherus
Carmelus mons
Seir Mons
Apollonia
Lydda
Emmaus
Magn campus
312
313
314

Buamund was meane while at Antioch, and Baldwine at Edeſſa, where hee had often fights with the Turkes, in the Confines of Meſopotamia. Theſe by mutuall treatie agreed to goe together to Ieruſalem; which alſo they did, and met at Valenum, together with three Biſhops, being fiue and twentie thouſand Horſe and Foote. But paſſing thorow the Saracens Countrey, where no prouiſion could be had, our owne being ſpent, the Horſes and Men were miſerably pinched, both with famine, and alſo with cold, and raines continuing foure or fiue daies together, by reaſon whereof, many which wanted Tents periſhed. I Fulcherius there preſent, ſaw many of both Sexes, and very many beaſts die with cold. Often alſo many were ſlaine by the Saracens, aſſaulting vs in ſtrait paſſages, as likewiſe in foraging: Yea Knights of Noble deſcent hauing loſt, their Horſes, were forced to goe on foote. So difficult is euery great deſigne: and a great matter it was that euer we got to Ieruſalem, which was on the day of the Winter Solſtice. We went after to Bethleem, thereto celebrate the Natiuitie where it was accompliſhed.

Milites, men at Armes.

O how great a ſtinke was ſtill about the walls of Ieruſalem, ariſing from the fallen, ſcattered, putrifying carkaſſes of the Saracens, which made vs to ſtop our noſes? Daybert the Archbiſhop of Piſa, (which had comne with vs) being made Patriarch, wee went thence to Iordan, (the former Armie had waſhed themſelues there, and gathered Palmes at Ierico, according to the cuſtome, in the Garden of Abraham, before the departure of the Earles of Normandie and Flanders) ſome of our Armie ſtaying at Ieruſalem, and ſome of the former going againe with vs. In the yeare 1100. on the firſt day of the yeare, we cut Palmes at Ierico, and the next day departed. Our Princes paſſed by Tyberias, neere the Sea of Galilee, which is there eighteene miles long, and fiue broad, of freſh water: and thence by Caſarea Philippi, called Paneas, where ariſe two Fountaines whence Iordan ſpringeth, and paſſeth by the Sea of Galilee to the Red Sea. We came to the Caſtle Balbat, where three hundred men at Armes of the Turkes ſet vpon vs. and had ſlaine many, whoſe Arrowes being ſpoiled with the raine, they were vnarmed, if Baldwins care had not protected them. So paſſing by Tortoſa and Laodicea, Boamund departed to Antiochia, where he was ioyfully receiued, and held his Kingdome ſixe moneths. Then in Iuly following, one Gabriel, an Armenian, offering to render to him the Citie of Militinia, he went thither with ſmall company, and in the way Daniſman, an Amira, with a multitude of Turkes, ſlue many, put the reſt to flight, and tooke Buamund. Baldwin made after them, but in vaine, ſauing that Gabriel rendred Militinia to him. In the midſt of this his proſperitie, newes was brought him of his Brothers death in Iuly, the ſecond yeare after Ieruſalem was taken, and that all Ieruſalem expected him to ſucceede. Grieuing ſomewhat at his Brothers death, and more reioycing for the Inheritance, hee let out to one Baldwin his Kinſman the Countrey which hee held, and with ſeuen hundred men at Armes, and ſeuen hundred Foot-men, on the ſeuenth of October he ſet forth towards Ieruſalem, paſſing by Antiochia, Laodicea, Gibellum, Maraclea, Tortoſa, Archas and Tripoli. The King of Tripoli gaue him kind entertainment, and intelligence of Duchar King of Damaſco, and Ginabaldole King of Caliptus, waiting and way-laying his comming.

Waſhing in Iordan.

Tiberias. Paneas.

Buamund taken.

King Godfrey dyeth, and Baldwin ſucceedeth.

Neere to Berito, about fiue miles diſtance, is a ſtrait paſſage neere the Sea, which a few hundreds may make good againſt one hundred thouſand. Heere they waited for vs, and heere wee were in ill-taking, not knowing which way for to eſcape or get backward or forwards: howſoeuer we made a ſhew of courage, I wiſhed my ſelfe at Carnote or Orleans. Wee reſolued after an ill nights reſt, to goe backe the next morning, which we did, they purſuing vs in ſuch ſort, that we had no place left for flight or hope of ſafetie. But God mercifully ſaued vs with a great miracle, they being ſuddenly terrified, and their ſhips flying for feare of vs, and we made great ſlaughter, and got great ſpoile. The next day we returned againe, and found the ſtreight aforeſaid cleere, and paſſed the ſame with praiſes to God. The Amiras of Beruto, Sidon, alſo Tyrus, & Achon, made ſhew of friendſhip to vs. But Tancred which held the Caſtle Caiphas was maleuolent to Baldwin, wherefore we entred it not. We came at laſt to Ioppe, where the Frankes acknowledged Baldwin for their King, and haſted thence to Ieruſalem, where hee was welcomed with Proceſſion of Clergie and Laitie, with Croſſes and Candles. Daybert was not preſent as one accuſed, diſtaſted of the people, and held in ſuſpicion.

Sixe daies after, Baldwin ſet forth to Aſcalon, whiles we waſted the Countries, diuers Saracens had hidden their goods and themſelues in holes of the Earth, which being reuealed by the Syrians, they were forced out by fire, made in the entries of their dens and ſlaine, being vſuall Robbers and Murtherers of Chriſtians, we paſſed that way. When our prouiſions were ſpent, we made an in-road into Arabia, and paſſing by Abrahams Sepulchre foureteene miles from Ieruſalem, came into the Valley where Sodom and Gomorrha were deſtroyed, where is now the great Lake Aſfalti, which they call the dead Sea. The length whereof from Zoaras of Arabia, is fiue hundred and eightie furlongs to the places next to Sodom, the breadth one hundred and fiftie, ſo ſalt, that neither Beaſt nor Bird can drinke thereof, which I Fulcherius deſcending from my Mule, taſted, and found more bitter then Ellebore. And becauſe nothing liues therein, it is called the Dead Sea. Iordan enters on the North; on the South is no paſſage out, neither Riuer nor Lake. Neere which Lake or Dead Sea, is a high Mountaine ſalt alſo, by places, hard as a ſtone, and like Ice; which I coniecture, both by the waues waſhing it, and the ſhowers falling downe, it make the Lake ſalt; or elſe the bottome thereof reacheth vnto the great ſalt Sea, by ſome inuiſible paſſage vnder ground. A man can hardly ſinke to the bottom if he would. Hauing compaſſed the South ſide of the Lake, wee found a Village, which they ſay, is Segor, of goodly ſituation, and abounding with Dates, whereof we fed pleaſantly. Of other things we ſeldome found any, (for the Arabs hearing of vs, were fled) except ſome poore ones, blacke as Soote, which we contemned. There I ſaw Fruits on the Trees, which when I had broken the skin, I found to be duſtie within and blacke.

Dead Sea deſcribed.

Sodoms fruits.

Rock of Moſes.

Thence we paſſed the Mountaines of Arabia, where the Inhabitants were fled from their Villages, and had hidden themſelues in Caues. We came to a fertile Valley, watered out of the Rocke which Moſes ſtroke with the Rodde, ſtill continuing with ſuch abundance, that Water-Mills are driuen therewith, where I Fulcherius watered my Horſes. Wee found a Monaſterie in the top of the Mountaine, called Saint Aarons, where Moſes and Aaron were wont to ſpeak with the Lord: and we reioyced to ſee places ſo holy and ſtrange. And becauſe from thence, till neere to Babylon, the Countrey is deſert, we proceeded no further, but returned the ſame way we came to Ieruſalem.

Weakneſſe of the Frankes at Ieruſalem.

Militibus.

Arſuth, which the Ancients cal Antipatrida.

In the yeare 1101. on Chriſtmas day, in the Church of Saint Marie at Bethleem, by the Patriarch (then reconciled) was Baldwin anointed and crowned King, which Godfrey in reuerence to our Lord, there crowned with Thorne, had refuſed. Baldwin was feared as a good Souldier, but his people were few. Wee had yet no Port but Ioppe, neither was the way ſafe from thence for Pilgrims; but when we heard of any ſhips there, we went forth to meete them, which hauing viſited Ieruſalem, ſome ſtayed, others returned. Whereby the holy Land of Ieruſalem remained emptie of people: nor were there to defend it from the Saracens, if they had dared to aſſault vs. For we had not then of men at Armes, aboue three thouſand, and ſo many Foot-men as kept Ieruſalem, Ioppe, Ramula and Cayphas. Neither durſt we ſcarſely at any time aſſemble our forces, for feare of looſing our Fortreſſes: that it was not without miracle that wee continued among ſo many thouſand thouſands ſo ſtrong. Wee durſt aduenture no expedition, but neere to Aſcalon or Arſuth. They which came by Sea brought no Horſes, and by Land none came at vs; neither could the Antiochians helpe vs, or wee them. In March, Tancred left Cayphas to Baldwin, being ſent for to Antioch to gouerne that Kingdome, till Buamund were free.

Eaſter light.

Baldwin taketh Cæſarea.

Milites, Knights, men at Armes, Horſemen.

* Milites.

A Fleet of Italians and Genuois, that had wintered at Laodicea, ſailed thence to Ioppe, and came to Ieruſalem, where on Eaſter Eeuen was great adoe, becauſe the light which that day vſeth to bee kindled from Heauen at the Lords Sepulchre, was not ſeene as in former times. But after much Ceremonies and Prayers, on Eaſter day happened to a Lampe in the Sepulchre, of which the Patriarch had the Key. The Genuois after Eaſter, forced Arſuth to yeeld themſelues to King Baldwin, who alſo with their helpe beſieged and tooke Cæſarea Palæſtina. I ſaw there many Saracens burned for the Bizantines, which they had ſwallowed, or hidden in their mouthes, that with a blow on the mouth many pieces flew out of their mouthes: women alſo had hidden them in places not to be named. Wee went to Ramula, and waited if the Enemie would fight with vs. Seuentie dayes after our departure, wee heard that they ſet forth to ſeeke battell, and Baldwin aſſembled his people from Ieruſalem, Tiberias, Cæſarea and Caypha. And becauſe we had but few Knights (or men at Armes) the King warned all that could to make their Eſquires Knights: ſo that all together were two hundred and threeſcore, and of footmen nine hundred. Againſt vs were eleuen thouſand men at Armes *, and twentie one thouſand footmen. We carried the wood of the Lords Croſſe which comforted vs, & was carried openly by a venerable Abbot. Baldwin comforted them alſo, telling them of Heauen open to the dying, glory among Chriſtians to the ſuruiuing: but France is farre off, if we runne away. The Leader with fiue thouſand of the Enemies were ſlaine: this battell was fought the ſeuenth of September. The next day we returned to Ioppe laden with ſpoile: encountring fiue hundred Saracens, which hauing fought and beaten a part of our forces in the battell, with their Armes haſted to Ioppe, thinking to get the Towne; but not receiued, they thought vs to be their owne fellowes, ſuppoſing the Chriſtians all ſlaine, in that errour comming to vs, till they learned the truth to their coſt. Two Newes-tellers had alſo ſignified to the Ioppites, the death of King Baldwin, and defeating of his Armie, whereupon they had ſent by Sea to Tancred, yea, the Queene did write a Letter of that import to haſten him to their ſuccour, who was alſo ſetting forth when the true report by a Meſſenger purpoſely ſent, ſtayd him. Wee went ſafe to Ieruſalem, and reſted eight monethes.

Ramula.

* He was alſo Duke of Aquitane.

In the yeare 1102. the Babylonians were gathered together at Aſcalon, to deſtroy vs vtterly, being twentie thouſand Horſemen and ten thouſand Foot, beſides victuals. Theſe in May laid ſiege to Ramula. At that time many Frankes were at Ioppe, waiting a fit wind for their returne to France. Theſe had comne the yeare before by Romania, and had loſt their Horſes and all they had. For William, Earle of Poictou *, and Stephen Earle of Blois, (which ſought now to recouer the credit he had loſt in flying from Antiochia) and [a] Hugo Magnus which had returned from Antiochia to France, and Earle Raimond returned from Conſtantinople, where he had made ſtay, and Stephen Earle of Burgundie, and many other Noblemen had adioyned to themſelues an innumerable number of Horſe and Foot, the Armie diuided in two. In the Romanian Confines, Soliman the Turke with great forces of Turkes had diſperſed them, and almoſt deſtroyed them, ſlaying aboue one hundred thouſand of their Horſemen and Footmen, alſo ſome of their women, and ſome he carryed away. Their Mules, Horſes and Beaſts of burthen and goods the Turkes had gotten. The Earle of Poictou ſaued only himſelfe, getting on foot to Antiochia in lamentable caſe, whom Tancred entertained. They which eſcaped (for they were diuided in many Troupes) came to Ieruſalem, except Hugo Magnus which dyed at Tarſus. Some went by Sea and they which had Horſes by Land, which alſo in the way aſſaulted and tooke Tortoſa, where Earle Raimond to their great diſguſt, remayned. Baldwin wayted for them at the Streights neere Beruto, eighteene dayes: they came to Ieruſalem, kept there their Eaſter, viſited the holy places, dined with King Baldwin in the Temple of Salomon, and now waited paſſage at Ioppe, when this newes came that King Baldwin had taken horſe to goe againſt the Babylonians. Stephen of Blois and Stephen of Burgundie, Gefferie of Vendon and Hugh Liziniac (brother to Earle Raimond) got Horſes and followed. But Baldwin improuidently haſting, was in ſight of the Enemies before his forces could haue ſight of him, not attending the foot, and hauing but few Horſes. So that, with two hundred men at Armes, he was encompaſſed of twentie thouſand, where he expected but a thouſand, againſt whom they were enforced to fight, commited great ſlaughter, but loſt the field, the King and ſome others eſcaping to Ramula. Where not daring to ſtay, with fiue followers he departed, and three dayes after, with one only, hungrie and thirſtie eſcaped to Arſuth. The two Stephens of Blois and Burgundie, were ſlaine. The King durſt not aduenture by Land, and therefore ſailed to Ioppe. Thence hee intreated an old poore Syrian, to carrie by by-wayes, newes to Ieruſalem, whither on the third day hee came, and ninetie men at Armes with ſome others of the Citie which could get Horſes, ſet out for Ioppe, whither not without skirmiſhes and loſſe the moſt came. Alſo Hugh of Tiberias had before comne with eightie men at Armes. With ſuch forces as he had, he ſet forth to meete the Enemie then approaching within three miles. Their huge numbers encompaſſing ours, were yet chaſed out of the field, leauing their Tents to the Frankes, with Camels, Aſſes, Money. For the King had then the wood of our Lords Croſſe, which if hee had in the former battell carryed, it is not to bee doubted, but God would haue ſhewed mercie to his people, if the King would haue gone wiſely with his people to the battell. All Winter after they were quiet. Anno 1103. the King beſieged Achon, but not able to take it, he waſted the Countrey and returned to Ioppe. Buamund was now reſtored to libertie and his Antiochian Principalitie, adding alſo Laodicea which Tancred had taken from the Conſtantinopolitans, giuing him recompenſe for it in his owne Land. King Baldwin in a skirmiſh was very dangerouſly wounded neere the heart.

[a] Rob. Mon. was deceiued if this deceiue not.

Aboue one hundred thouſand men ſlaine, beſides women, &c.

Tyrius accuſeth the Emperour of Conſt. for the ouerthrow, l. 10. by his treachery, alſo the Chriſtians were arena ſine calce, and vndiſciplined.

Anno 1104. the King againe beſieged Achon (or Ptolemaida,) aſſiſted by a Fleet of Genuois, of ſeuentie ſhips beaked, [b] and after twentie dayes ſiege tooke it: of great import for the Port, which within the walls harboureth many ſhips ſafely. Buamund and Daibert by Sea went to Italy, he to get people, the other to complaine of Baldwin to the Pope, who fauoured him, but in his returne he dyed.

[b] Roſtratæ, that is, the beaks, or ſtems couered with Iron or Braſſe.

Anno 1105. Earle Raimond dyed in his owne Towne before Tripolis, whom ſucceeded his Nephew William Iordan. The King of Caliptus receiued a great ouerthrow by Tancred, which then ruled in Antiochia, and loſt numbers numberleſſe. The King of Babylon [c] raiſed a great Armie which he ſent to Aſcalon, againſt which Baldwin moued from Ioppe, and ſent to Ieruſalem that they ſhould faſt, pray, and make Proceſſion barefoot, which was done, my ſelfe beeing one. The Patriarke went and carryed the Croſſe. Our men at Armes were fiue hundred, beſides other Horſemen which had not that Militarie place, and two thouſand foot. The Enemie was fifteene thouſand, foure thouſand were ſlaine, of which was the Amira of Aſcalon; the Amira of Achon was taken. Their Nauie before Ioppe returning to Babylon, (Cairo) was aſſailed by Tempeſt, and miſerably diſperſt, whereof fiue and twentie ſhips were taken by vs, beeing full of Saracens. On Chriſtmas Eeuen at Ieruſalem, we felt a great Earthquake.

[c] That is, as in other places of the ſtorie, the Egyptian Chalifa: Cairo being by ſome called Babylon.

Anno 1106. a Comet appeared fiftie dayes decreaſing, beginning in February: alſo three Sunnes, a ſmaller on each hand of the true, both in quantitie and light; a great white Circle enuironing, and in it a Rain-bow of foure colours, the Bow toward the Sunne, and reaching to the other two Sunnes. In the next moneth, the Starres of Heauen ſeemed to raine. Hugh of Tiberias againſt the Damaſcens, had a notable Victorie, with ſixeſcore, chaſing foure thouſand, and ſoone after dyed of an Arrow ſhot.

Such a triple Sun and Rainbow was ſeene 1621. in Deuonſhire.

Anno 1107. ſeuentie of ours chaſed fiue hundred of theirs, beſides one thouſand footmen. Buamund returned out of France with fiue thouſand men at Armes, and threeſcore thouſand footmen, without women; prouided a Fleet at Brunduſium, ſailed into Bulgaria, tooke Aualon, beſieged Duratium a yeare, and forced the Emperour to ſweare to protect the Pilgrimes thorow all his Empire, and he alſo ſware fealtie to the Emperour [d] after which, with part of his Ar-

[d] Malmsb. ſaith, that Alexius had partly poiſoned, partly corrupted his chiefe followers, whereby deiected, he returned to Apulia, and ſoone after dyed.

mie hee returned into Apulia, the greater part according to their Vow, repayring to Ieruſalem by Sea.

Anno 1109. Bertran ſonne of Earle Raimund came out of Prouince, and with ninetie ſhips of the Genuois beſieged Tripolis, but (by diſſention betwixt him and Iordan his emulous Kinſman) to little effect. Baldwin came to the ſiege to intreate the Genuois to his aſſiſtance againſt Aſcalon, Beruth and Sidon and began to agree the two Earles; but Iordan was ſlaine as hee rode in the night with an Arrow, no man knew how nor whence. Bertran ſware fealtie to King Baldwin for his Fathers Inheritance (the cauſe of their quarrell) and when the Saracens had compounded to ſurrender the Towne, their liues ſaued, (which the King had confirmed by Oath) they permitted our chiefe men to enter part of the Towne. Meane-while, I know not how, a ſudden tumult happened amongſt the meaner Genuois, who ſcaled and entred the Towne without the Princes knowledge, and put all to the ſword, no equitie being able to make reſtitution of their heads. But in the Kings circuit they eſcaped.

Tripolis taken.

Berith taken.

Anno 1110. King Baldwin with Bertran tooke Berith after ſeuentie fiue dayes ſiege: and after with Tancred paſſed ouer Euphrates, where they found the Turkiſh forces, which yet refuſed fight, and with weariſome delayes, cauſed that they furniſhed Edeſſa with victuall (the Turkes hauing waſted the Countrey and taken the Caſtles and Husbandmen which ſerued them with food) and departed againe ouer the Riuer, where the Turkes tooke and carryed into Perſia, many of our footmen. In the meane-while, a Fleet arriued at Ioppe out of Norway, and the Weſterne Sea conducted by that Kings Brother, which with their Sea-ſeruice ayded the King in the ſiege of Sidon, which yeelded vpon compoſition in December.

Apamia.

Tyrus.

Anno 1111. Tancred ſent to Baldwin, who with Bertran aſſembled all their forces againſt the Turkes, which in great multitudes had paſſed Euphrates out of Perſia. They paſſed by Apamia, which Tancred had taken the yeare before: but the Turkes refuſing to fight, they departed, Tancred to Antiochia, the King to Ieruſalem. Preparation made, hee beſieged Tyrus or Soor aboue foure monethes in vaine, his two Towers of wood which he had raiſed higher then the walls, beeing diſappointed by two which the Citizens had erected on their walls by night, whence they being higher, caſt fire into the other and conſumed them. And ours which in conceit had diuided the prey, returned home with ſhame. Anno 1112. Tancred dyed.

Great loſſe.
Sichem.

Anno 1113. the Turkes paſſed Euphrates, and commited great ſpoile ouer the whole Countrey, and in a battell King Baldwin loſt his Colours, Tents and goods, twelue hundred footmen, and thirtie of the beſt men at Armes. The Saracens before ſubiect, tooke Armes againſt vs. Sichem, which we call Naples, was taken. The Aſcalonites came to the Suburbs of Ieruſalem, and ſpoiled their Harueſt: nor could a Meſſenger paſſe betwixt the King and them; nor durſt the Husbandmen reape their Harueſt in the Countrey, or exerciſe other buſineſſes. But our Armie being renewed by Chriſtian Pilgrimes from beyond the Seas, the Turkes departed towards Damaſco, and King Baldwin to Achon, where he found the Counteſſe of Sicilia, (Wife of Roger the Brother of Robert Guiſcard) comne to become his Wife.

Graſſe-hoppers & Earthquakes.
Gauterius ſaith, that the people were at their wits end, euery day new Earthquakes, the houſes were forſaken; Letanies, Faſts, and other holies vſed, tents erected in the fields, &c.

Anno 1114. an infinite multitude of Graſſe-hoppers, from the parts of Arabia, came into the Countrey of Ieruſalem, which in Aprill and May much waſted our Corne. Two Earthquakes had happened the yeare before: two alſo this yeare, one ſo great in the Region of Antiochia, that many Townes were halfe or wholly ruined, throwing downe their walls, and the Houſes, and killing the people: ouerturning the Caſtle Trialeth neere to Euphrates, Mariſeum with the walls, Houſes and people was extinct: a great part of Mamiſtria fell.

Anno 1115. in Iune the Turkes paſſed the Riuer into Syria, and Doldequin King of Damaſco, knowing that they hated him for the Murther of their former Generall Manduef, entred league with King Baldwin and Roger Prince of Antiochia, knowing that a three-fold Cord is not eaſily broken. When Baldwin was comne into thoſe parts, the Turkes hid themſelues, whom thinking to haue beene gone out of the Countrey, he returned. Meane-while, the Aſcalonites had beſieged Ioppe by Sea and Land, but returned fruſtrate: againe they ſought to take it vnprouided, and made a ſecond aſſault ten dayes after with like ſucceſſe. The Turkes ſpoyling the Countrey of Syria, the Antiochians ouerthrew them in battell, ſlue three thouſand and tooke many with rich ſpoyle, and three hundred thouſand Byzantines. This yeare Mamiſtria was the ſecond time ſubuerted by an Earthquake, wherewith alſo the like happened elſe-where in the Countrey of Antiochia. This yeare the King built the Caſtle Mount Royall within three dayes iourney of the Red Sea.

Red Sea.

Anno 1116. the King went to the Red Sea, and found the Citie Heli, where the Iſraelites reſted after they had paſſed the Red Sea: the Inhabitants being Fiſhermen were fled into their Boats. In the end of the yeare the King being ſickly and fearing death, put from him Atlaida the Counteſſe of Sicilia, whom he had vniuſtly marryed, his former Wife ſtill liuing at Edeſſa.

Anno 1117. the ſaid Counteſſe returned into Sicilia. Graſſe-hoppers deuoured the Vineyards, Corne, Trees of all kind, eating all greene things and the barkes; going forth in Bands like an accurate Armie, ſome on foot, ſome flying. In the following moneth Iune, the Moone on the thirteenth day of her age was all red and after blacke, and two houres together loſt the light, which happening not in the full we tooke for a ſigne. In Iuly happened an Earthquake in December, the whole Heauen was firie like bloud, in ſome places ſhining white. Pope Paſchal died in Ianuarie after, and King Baldwin in Aprill, and his Wife in Sicil; Alexius the Emperour, and the Patriarke Arnulphus.

In the end of March 1118. Baldwin had ſpoyled the Citie Pharamia, walking on a day by Nilus, his old griefe renewed, whereof he dyed in the way, being returned as farre as Laria. He was buried neere to his Brother Godfrey in Golgotha, hauing reigned eighteene yeares, three monethes. Baldwin Earle of Edeſſa his Kinſman was elected in his ſtead, and was conſecrated on Eaſter day, hauing comne accidentally to Ieruſalem to ſpeake with the King. That yeare the Babylonians came with an Armie of fifteene thouſand Horſemen, and twentie thouſand foot, to Aſcalon, and a great Fleet of ſhips attended on them by Sea. King Baldwin aſſembled his owne with the Tripolitan and Antiochian forces, and ſate three monethes neere to them, neither ſide aduenturing the hazard of battell.

Pharamia. Laria. King Baldwin dyeth, and Baldwin ſucceedeth.

Anno 1119. Roger Prince of Antiochia, made an Expedition againſt the Turkes, and neere to the Towne Arthaſium, was ſlaine with ſeuen thouſand of his people, and of the Turkes not twentie. And no maruell? for they abounding in wealth exceedingly, neither feared God, nor reuerenced man: the Prince vſed manifold adulteries, diſ-herited the Sonne of Boamund, remayning in Apulia with his Mother, hee and his liued luxuriouſly and proudly. King Baldwin ſped better in a battell neere Sardanium, twentie foure miles from Antioch. Our men at Armes were ſeuen hundred, the Turkes twentie thouſand. Gazi was their Generall. A certaine Turke ſpake to a Franke which vnderſtood the Perſian, ſaying, Your God hath forſaken you, ſeeing yee neither hold his Law as ye were wont, nor faith and truth amongſt your ſelues; This wee know and haue obſerued, and to morrow ſhall ouercome you. Hereof wee might well indeed bee aſhamed when a faithleſſe Turke obiected our want of faith. The battel followed, long doubtfull; at laſt the Turkes fled, ſome to Aleppo, ſome into Perſia, God deliuering the King by vertue of the Croſſe carryed by the Biſhop of Caſarea: who after two dayes keeping the field went to Antiochia, the Patriarke therof came forth to meet the holy Croſſe, the King and Biſhop; & on the day of the Exaltation of the Croſſe they entred with the Croſſe into Ieruſalem reioycing, the King ſtaying at Antiochia to ſet things in order, hauing that Kigdome added to his other of Ieruſalem. On Chriſtmas day he and his Wife were crowned at Bethleem.

Prince Roger ſlaine with ſeuen thouſand Antiochians.

Anno 1120. the King remitted Tolls and Impoſts, and hearing that the Turkes were comne into Syria, hee very humbly deſired of the Patriarke and the Clergie, the Croſſe to bee deliuered him, ſaying, that his men ſhould be thereby fortified, and not truſting in his owne or his peoples force, he ſhould obtaine it in ſtead of many thouſands. Heere grew ſome reaſoning betwixt thoſe which went and thoſe which ſtaied, whether the Croſſe ought for ſuch a neceſſitie of Chriſtianitie to be carryed to Antioch, or the Church of Ieruſalem be depriued of ſuch a treaſure. We ſaid, Alas wretches, what ſhall we doe, if God permit the Croſſe to bee loſt in Warre, as once the Iſraelites loſt the Arke of the Couenant? Nilling and willing we did it, with many teares ſhed for it, and Songs in prayſe of it, conueying it out of Towne bare-foote, the King, Patriarch and people, with which the King departed weeping. The Turkes were neere Antiochia, but now retyred to Caliptus: ſome skirmiſhes happened in which many on both ſides were ſlaine or wounded, but without battell ours returned to Antiochia, and moſt of them into Perſia: and in October we entertained the moſt glorious Croſſe of our Lord into Ieruſalem with great ioy.

Anno 1121. the King ſet forth againſt Tuldequine, King of Damaſco, who with the Arabians his Confederates ſpoyled the Countrey neere to Tiberias, tooke the Caſtle Iarras and razed it together with the Towne.

Superſtition of the Croſſe vnlike Ezekiahs Nehuſhtan, although made by diuine appointment, & by Chriſt interpreted to ſignifie Chriſt crucified, Ioh. 3. Yet broken in pieces when abuſed.

Anno 1122. the King went to Tripolis againſt Earle Pontius, which refuſed to bee ſubiect to him, as his Father Bertran had beene, and the matter betwixt them was peaceably ended. Hee went alſo againſt the Turkes which beſiged Sardanium, and repelled them. Bleſſed therefore bee the Banner of the moſt holy Croſſe of our Lord, a preſent helpe to true beleeuers, vnder whoſe protection and conſolation, the faithfull without any loſſe returned home: they being ten thouſand, ours but one thouſand and two hundred. Meanewhile, Goſeline Earle of Edeſſa, was taken, and his Couſin Galeran, by Amira Balac, and ſoone after King Baldwin alſo.

King Baldwin taken Priſoner

Anno 1123. Henry King of Almaine, was pacified with Pope Calixtus. A great Fleete of Venetians which wintered at Corfu, being one hundred and twentie Saile, beſides ſmaller Veſſels, in which were fifteene thouſand armed men, Venetians and other Pilgrims, and three hundred Horſes. The Kingdome in Baldwins Captiuitie was committed to the gouernement of Euſtace, which then held Caſarea and Sidon. The Babylonians with a Nauie of nintie Ships, came and beſieged Ioppe: another land Armie was gone to Aſcalon. The Ioppites men and women reſiſted valiantly: yet, had the ſiege continued, ſo few could not haue holden out. But the rumor of the Chriſtian Fleete had ſcarred away the Enemies, when they had now made a breach in the Wall. Our men were vnited from all places at the Caſtle Chaco, and marched with the Croſſe to Ramath neere Dioſpolis. Wee at Ieruſalem made Prayers bare-foot, and Proceſſions thorow all the Churches of the Citie, and gaue almes. Ours hauing receiued Benediction and Venetian Fleet 120. ſaile.

Chaco Ramath.

Abſolution of the Patriarke; fought neere Azot or Eldot, now called Ibenum, being brought to a ſmall Village. Their Horſe-men fled, their Foot were ſlaine, and their Tents were left to our men. And of thirtie thouſand Babylonians, twelue thouſand were ſlaine by Land and Sea, of ours in this fight but ten: after which, the Patriarke returned to Ieruſalem with the Croſſe; which was receiued without Dauids Gate, and with honorable Proceſſion conuayed to the Temple of the Sepulchre. The Generall of the Venetian Fleet came to Achon, which hearing of the defeat, diuided his Nauie, with one part going towards Ioppe, ſending the other into the Mayne to make the Saracens beleeue that they were Pilgrimes comming from Cyprus. Meeting with the Fleet of Saracens, they made ſuch a ſlaughter that the Sea for foure miles ſpace was died red: for they ſlue the men and tooke the ſhips. After which they fell vpon ten other ſhips laden with victuall and timbers for Engines, Pepper, Cinamon, and diuers Spices, Munition and Money. Some ſhips they burned on the ſhoare, the moſt they brought to Achon. Euſtace dyed, and William de Buris ſucceded in the Protectorſhip. Baldwin eſcaped out of his hard Impriſonment, where he and Earle Ioſeline were bound by a ſtrange ſtratageme. Fiftie Edeſſens, making ſhew as if they were Pedlars or poore Merchants: and waiting an occaſion got into the inner gate, where the Captaine or chiefe of the Warders was at Cheſſe, to whom they made ſhew of complaint for ſome wrong offered: and ſeeing oportunitie, ſuddenly drew their Swords, and ſlue him, layd hold on the Launces (or Halberds) there ſtanding, and laid luſtily about them. The clamour brings many to ſee the buſineſſe which they were ſuddenly ſent to tell in another World, about one hundred Turkes being ſlaine, they ſhut the Caſtle, take out the Captiues, erect the Chriſtian Colours. Balac had dreamed that Ioſeline had pulled out his eyes, whereupon hee ſent to put him to death, and before the Meſſengers were arriued, this had happened. Balacs beſt beloued Wife was in the Caſtle. Earle Ioſeline by night, with three of his Seruants, gat out of the Caſtle in a Moone-light night, thorow the midſt of the beſiegers, and by night trauell got to Euphrates, and with two blowne Bladders and helpe of his companions, beeing ignorant of ſwimming, gate ouer: where vnder a Tree reſting himſelfe almoſt tattered and ſtarued, hee was knowne by a Countriman, which hauing a Wife, and a little Daughter, and a ſilly Aſſe was willing to attend him with his Family. The Earle rode on the Aſſe, and carryed the poore mans childe crying and vnquiet, till they came through the Enemies Countrey to his owne Caſtle Terbexell. Thence (hauing repaid the poore Armenian) he haſted to Ieruſalem where hee offered his Fetters in Mount Caluarie, and with the Croſſe & an Armie had returned to Cartapeta, but in the way newes came that the King was againe captiue, whereupon after much ſpoile in the Saracens Countries, they parted the prey and departed home. Balac had vndermined the Caſtle, erecting timbers in the Mines, and filling the holes with wood, which he fired, and the Earth by that meanes falling, part of the Caſtle fell therewith, ſo that they within were forced to yeeld to mercie. The King Galdran he ſpared: the reſt were hanged, or flayed, or cut aſunder in the middle. The King was ſent Priſoner to Carra.

This Caſtle was Cartapeta.

Terbexel.

Anno 1124. the Patriarke agreed with the Venetians to beſiege Tyrus. Balac laid ſiege to Ierapolis, called Mumbeth, which Ioſeline hearing (beeing then at Antiochia, hee came with his forces and gaue him battell, in which Balac and three thouſand of his men were ſlaine. Balacs head was ſent to Antioch: and his Eſquire bringing the newes to the Campe at Tyrus, was knighted by the Earle of Tripolis. Tyrus was yeelded on the ſeuenth of Iuly, and the thirds giuen to the Venetians in the Citie and Port by compoſition.

Balac ſlaine.
Knighthood.
Tyrus taken.

CHAP. III.

A Supplement of the Holy Land Storie, gleaned out of the large Hiſtorie of WILLIAM Archbiſhop of Tyrus.

*W.Tyr.l.*13.
The Kings libertie.

THe ſame yeare in the end of Auguſt, King Baldwin agreed for his libertie, and returned to Antioch. His ranſome was one hundred thouſand Michaelites (a principall Coine in thoſe parts) which not knowing how to pay, hee was perſwaded to beſiege Halapia, then being in ſome diſtreſſe. The Halapians were aſſiſted by the Saracens beyond Euphrates, whereupon the King returned and went to Ieruſalem. But hearing of Burſequines ſpoiling the Confines of Antioch, aſſiſted by Doldequine of Damaſcus, who had taken Caphardan, and beſieged Sardan, and thence remoued to Haſard: he with the Earles of Tripolis and Edeſſa, came and gaue them battell, and winning the field, got enough to redeeme his Daughter which remayned pledge for his ranſome. Hee inuaded the Territorie of Damaſcus: but being told of the Babylonians comming to Aſcalon, (for it was their cuſtome foure times in the yeare to direct forces thither) hee ſet forth thither and curbed their inſolence.

Anno 1126. he made an expedition by Tyberias and Decapolis, and to the Plaines of Medan, where the Riuer Dan, betwixt Tyberias and Scythopolis runneth into Iordan, making vp that name; before which, that which deſcends into the Sea of Galilee, is called Ior, as ſome ſay, though Beda and others be otherwiſe minded. He encountered with the Damaſcenes, in a dreadfull and long doubtfull battell, which inclined at laſt to the Kings part. Hee reſtored Antiochia to Boamund the yonger, in marriage with his Daughter; againſt whom, Earle Ioſceline conceiued ſuch hatred, that he called in Turkes to his aide, and entred the Territories of Antioch with Fire and Sword, in the abſence of the Prince. At that time Roger Earle of Sicilia, fruſtrated of his hopes in Africa, with his Fleete wanne Syracuſe, ſlaying all, of all Ages and Sexes.

Ior, Dan, Iordan.

Boamund Iunior.

Ciuill Warre.

An. 1127. William an Engliſh man, was made Archbiſhop of Tyrus, being before Prior of the Sepulchre; who being conſecrated by the Patriarch of Ieruſalem, would needes againſt his will, ſeeke his Pall at Rome, where Pope Honorius much honored him, and ſent Giles his Legat with him, to make the Patriarke of Antioch to deliuer his Suffragan Biſhops to him, vnder paine of Suſpenſion. The yeere following, Hugo de Paganis, firſt Maſter of the Temple, and ſome other Religious men, which had beene ſent by the King into the Weſt, to excite aides of thoſe Princes, returned with many Noble-men. Whereupon all the Eaſterne Chriſtians agreed to beſiege Damaſcus. Anno 1130. But hauing loſt many in forraging and skirmiſhing, the Elements with thunders and raines compelled them to retire home. Boamund was one, which in his returne to his Prouince, found Rodoan the Turke, committing ſpoiles, and in ſeeking reuenge loſt himſelfe and his life. The King made haſte to ſet things there in order, where his Daughter the Princes Wife, ſent to Sanguin the Turke for aide, to hold Antiochia to her ſelfe. The Meſſenger by the way was intercepted, and brought to the King. She prepared to withſtand her Father, but in vaine. He returning to Ieruſalem, fell ſicke, and becauſe the Patriarkes houſe was neerer the place of the Reſurrection, lay there; and taking the habit of Religion, hauing commended the Kingdome to Fulke his Sonne-in-law, with his little Sonne Baldwin, he died in Auguſt, 1131.

W. Engliſh man Archbiſhop of Tyre.

Firſt Templers.

Damaſcus beſieged in vaine.

King Fulke.
Lib. 14.

This Fulke had married the Kings eldeſt Daughter, Miliſend, being Earle of Aniou, Turon, &c. and had beene at Ieruſalem in Pilgrimage, and maintained one hundred Horſe-men a whole yeere at his charge, winning ſuch loue of the King and people, that the King beſtowed his Daughter and ſucceſſion on him. Honorius dying, a contention grew for the Papacie, twixt Innocent and Peter, called Anacletus, the matter was tried on both ſides with bloud and ſlaughter. Innocent obtayning, ordained the Church of Tyre to be ſubiect to Ieruſalem, and to haue the ſame place with that Patriarke which before it held with the Antiochian. Great ſtirre aroſe about the Earle of Ioppa; who, being accuſed by Galterus Cæſarienſis of treaſon, was ſentenced to acquit himſelfe by combat; but he appeared not, and was therefore condemned: whereupon hee went to Aſcalon, deſiring aide of the Enemie, which added fewell to the fire, and inuaded the Chriſtians on that confidence. Peace was concluded, and the Earle after that in Ieruſalem, as he was at play, was murthered, and the King ſuſpected as procurer thereof, whereof hee cleered himſelfe by execution of the Malefactor.

The Author ſpeakes againſt the Romane Church, and the two Patriarkes, which cut large, thongs of others hide, &c.

Pontius Earle of Tripolis, with all his power, fighting againſt the Damaſcens, was taken and ſlaine, his Armie diſperſed, the Biſhop taken, and a great multitude killed. The Antiochians had deliuered their Citie to Raimund, with Boamunds daughter to Wife, which the Conſtantinopolitan miſliked, and by great power ſought to ſubdue all that Principalitie, with Horſes, Chariots, Treaſures beyond number, and Forces infinite, paſſing Saint Georges arme, and violently forced Tarſus, and placed his owne, expelling thence the Antiochian Forces. He beſiegeth Antiochia. Sanguin the Turke takes the aduantage to inuade the Countrey of Tripolis, and beſieged Mount Ferrand. Both parts ſue to the King for aide, who going firſt againſt Sanguin, receiued an ouerthrow; the Earle of Tripolis was taken, and almoſt all the Footmen taken or ſlaine with all their carriages. The King fled for ſuccour to a Caſtle vnprouided, out of which whiles his ſubiects ſeeke to deliuer him, Neapolis was taken by other Saracens with cruell execution of all ſorts. Sanguin put the King to ſuch ſtraits before ſuccours could come (which on all hands were prouided) that he was contented to agree on conditions to reſigne the Fortreſſe after much Famine and death. Antiochia was alſo grieuouſly aſſaulted, but peace was by mediation concluded betwixt the Emperour and the Prince, which did him homage.

Ciuill broiles, Earle of Triplis ſlaine.

Tarſus taken by the Emperour of Conſtant.

Earle of Trip. taken, and the King diſtreſſed

The Emperour hauing wintered in Cilicia, the next Spring layeth ſiege to Cæſarea, aſſiſted with the Prince of Antioch, and Earle of Edeſſa to ſatisfie them, which yet by their negligent labours and diligent play, gaue him ſo little ſatisfaction, that being offered money, he accepted it, and returned to Antioch, where aroſe a tumult about his demand of a Garriſon, which grew to blowes, wounds, deaths, which cauſed the Emperour to remit his demand, and to returne home. Meane-while, Theodericke Earle of Flanders, the Kings Sonne-in-law came to Ieruſalem, with a ſtrong Armie. Theſe with the Ieroſolymitans beſieged a Den of Theeues neere Mount Galaad, being an inacceſſible Caue, where a Neſt of Adders reſided, wayting all opportunities of miſchiefe: which while they were doing, the Turkes tooke Tecua. The Maſter of the Temple came vpon them with his forces, and chaſed them, but minding the ſpoyles, the conquered returned and regained the victorie with great ſlaughter and ſpoile.

Cæſarea beſieged.

Tecua taken.

Sanguin ſought now to get the Kingdome of Damaſcus, whereupon they deſired the King, and

Papall Legate depoſeth the Patriarke of Antioch, and holdeth a Councell at Ieruſalem.

and promiſed the Citie Paneas, and twentie thouſand pieces of Gold to King Fulke, to aſſiſt them againſt a common Enemie. But Sanguin feared the encounter and returned. Paneas after a ſtrong ſiege was taken. The Popes Legate commeth into thoſe parts, and after much ſtirre depoſeth Ralfe, the Patriarke of Antiochia, compels him to deliuer his Ring and Croſſe, and commits him to the Prince to Bonds and Impriſonment in a high Mountaine, whence eſcaping to Rome, and obtayning ſome glance of Papall light, in his returne hee was poyſoned. The Legate returneth to Ieruſalem, and dedicates the Temple in great ſolemnitie, and celebrates a Councell with the Patriarke, the Armenian, Median, Perſian, Cappadocian Biſhops, and reformation was promiſed in the things wherein they diſſent from vs. Aimerike an vnlearned man was choſen the Antiochian Patriarke.

Death of the Emperour and King Falco. Baldwin the third. Edeſſa taken.

The Emperour makes another Expedition within foure yeares after the former into Cilicia, and to Edeſſa, with innumerable Treaſures and People, where after much labour to little effect, the next Spring in hunting a wild Beare, with a Poyſoned Arrow hee hurt his hand as hee was ſhooting, whereof he dyed, Anno 1137. and King Fulke, by like diſaduenture followed, in the following of a Hare falling from his Horſe, his braines with the violence thereof, forced out of his noſe and eares. This happened in Nouember 1142.

Edeſſa wonne and loſt.

Baldwin the third ſucceeded. Sanguin the Turke Lord of Niniue (now called Muſul) came and beſieged Edeſſa, the Metropolis of Media called Rages, a Citie better ſtored with Merchants then Souldiers, and by vndermining tooke it, neither ſparing age or ſex; amongſt the reſt, Hugh the Archbiſhop was ſlaine, who hauing horded infinite Treaſure, to ſpare it hee was prodigall of his life, and fame and it alſo, to a cruell vngratefull Heire. He proceeded to beſiege Calogenbar on the other ſide of Euphrates, where one night in his drunkenneſſe hee was ſlaine of his ſeruants; liuing and dying, Sanguine, one of his Sonnes ſucceeded at Muſul, Noradine, another at Halapia. The Captaine of Boſtrum vpon diſcontent with the Damaſcens came to Ieruſalem, and offered to yeeld the Citie to the King, who went with an Armie, but too late, the Enemie hauing poſſeſſion before, wherefore after many dangers and loſſes he returned. Not long after the Edeſſans (Noradine being elſe-where buſied) ſend to Earle Ioſceline, who commeth and ſuddenly becommeth Maſter of the Citie, which he was not able to hold, Noradine returning with a ſtrong power, and recouering it with exceeding ſlaughter of the Citizens and of the Earles Armie.

* Loricatorium.

Incredible numbers ſlaine and loſt. See more of theſe in M. Par. following.

After this, Pope Eugenius ſent Preachers to excite men to take the Croſſe (amongſt them Bernard Abbot of Clarouale) which went thorow Kingdomes and Regions, whereby Conrade the Emperour and Lewis King of France with many Princes embraced the word and ſigne of the Croſſe, which yet did in all that Expedition nothing acceptable to God, our ſinnes deſeruing it. As they which were preſent, conſtantly affirme there were in the Emperours Campe ſeuentie thouſand * harneſſed Horſe-men, beſides Foot-men, Children, Women, and Horſe-men of lighter Armour. And in the Armie of the French as many armed Horſe-men, and a Nauie; able if God had bleſſed them to haue conquered all the Eaſterne Prouinces. The Greekes either by command, or corrupted by the Enemie, led ours by vnpaſſable paſſages, ſo that their Enemies made ſuch ſlaughter, that of all thoſe thouſands of Horſe-men, and innumerable Footmen, ſcarſly the tenth part eſcaped. The French followed the Imperials in like fates, the glory of the Frankes and vertue ſometimes dreadfull, being made a mockerie to their Enemies, Famine and Diſorder purſuing the reſidue which eſcaped the Battell which was in Ianuary 1146.

Raimund ſlaine Earle of Edeſſa taken.

Anno 1148. Noradine inuades the Territories of Antiochia, and in Battell Raimund the Prince with the ſtrength of thoſe parts were ſlaine. Raimunds head and right hand were ſent to the Calipha of Baldac: all the Countrey was ouer-runne by martiall furie. The Soldan of Iconium inuades the Countrey of the Earle of Edeſſa, takes many Cities and Caſtles, and beſiegeth the Earle in Turbeſſel, and vpon conditions departeth. This Earle a voluptuous and diſſolute man reioycing at the fall of Antiochia, fell ſoone after into his Enemies hands, which carryed him to Halapia, where tyred with miſerie he dyed.

The foure parts of the Eaſterne Frankes power. Ciuill Warres.

Emperour of Conſt. his inuaſion.

Maym of the Eaſterne Kingdome.

The power of the Frankes conſiſted in the Kingdome of Ieruſalem, the Principalitie of Antioch, the Earldome of Edeſſa, & the Earledom of Tripolis. After the former miſeries in other parts happened a diſſention twixt the King and his Mother, which diuided the Kingdome betweene them in ciuill combuſtions. The Queene betakes her to Ieruſalem, whither the King followes with an Armie, and (notwithanding the Patriarkes admonition) beſiegeth it, and after that the Citizens had let him in, laid ſiege to the Tower where ſhe was, till at laſt agreement was made on both ſides, internal grudges and relikes of faction ſtil remayning, whiles without as two Milſtones, Noradine and the Soldan of Iconium, ground the State betwixt them to powder. The Soldan of Iconium hauing inuaded againe the Countey of Edeſſa, leſt miſerie ſhould want, the Conſtantinopolitan ſends a great Armie and challengeth the Countrey which the King yeelds to, taking with him the people (which hereupon with their wealth departed) whereof Noradine vnderſtanding with great power aſſailed them, their carriages being ſticked with Arrowes like Hedge-hogs, yet they ſhifted away, the Turkes wanting victuals to follow them. In one yeare did Noradine diſpoſſeſſe the Greekes of their new Poſſeſſions, a rich Countrey beeing quite loſt; and three Archbiſhoprickes cut off from the Church of Antioch, the Edeſſan, the Hierapolitan, and Coricen. The Earle of Tripolis was murthered by the Aſſiſines.

A huge Armie of Turkes called Hiaroquin, whoſe Progenitors had held Ieruſalem, made an expedition thither for recouerie of their priſtine poſſeſſion; where, tyred by the difficultie of the way, they were made an eaſier conqueſt to the Sword of the Chriſtians, ſo that fiue thouſand being ſlaine, the reſt were glad to retire. This was Anno 1152. The King beſieged Aſcalon two Moneths; after which, according to the cuſtome, at Eaſter was a paſſage of Pilgrims in great frequencie, which came thither with huge bands of Horſe and Foote, the Campe daily increaſing, the Palgrims which would haue returned being forbidden, and their Ships being imployed in this ſeruice. Ours with Maſts of Ships, made a wooden Tower, and of the other materials of the Ships, engines and Pent-houſe-prouiſions for ſecuritie of the approachers. After fiue Moneths ſiege, and daily killing and wounding on both ſides, the Babylonian Fleet came to their ſuccour. Gyrard of Sydon the Admirall of our Fleet, thought to encounter with them, but ſeeing their multitudes fled; they being ſeuentie Gallies and other Ships of huge greatneſſe and great prouiſions, which the Egyptian Prince had ſent. A peece of the Wall being razed, they which would haue entred, were forbidden by the Templers (that being the cuſtome for all men to hold whatſoeuer ſpoile they got) in hope of gaine, ſo that their couetouſneſſe expoſed them to the ſlaughter. And our men fainting were incouraged, and the Citie was yeelded, on compoſition to depart with bag and baggage. Abſolon was made Biſhop by the Patriarke, againſt the will of the Biſhop of Bethleem, which appealed to the Pope, and by his ſentence excluded the former. Nocquin a Turke ſeeing the Aſcalonites deſtitute of ſufficient guard, hee (which had vndertooke to guard them into Egypt himſelfe) fell vpon them, rifled them, and left them wandring in the Deſart. This hapned, Anno 1154.

Hiaroquin Turkes.

Paſſage yeerly of Frankes at Eaſter to Ieruſalem.

Aſcalon taken.

Miſchiefes neuer alone.

Anno 1155. was a grieuous famine, and but for the ſtore of Corne which they found in Aſcalon, the people had all periſhed. And the yeere following, the ſoile about Aſcalon, which hoſtilitie had not permitted to be tilled in fiftie yeeres, rendred ſixtie-fold increaſe. Great contention grew betwixt the Patriarke and Hoſpitalars, about Tithes of their goods, and other their inſolencies. The Roman Church not conſidering what it granted, gaue cauſe hereof, freeing the place from iuriſdiction of the Patriarke. This place of the Hoſpitall was giuen firſt by the Egyptian Calypha's to the Amalſitan Merchants of Italie, to build them a houſe, where they erected a Monaſterie of Saint Mary, of Latin Monkes; and another Nunnerie of Saint Mary Magdalen: and after that an Hoſpitall, and an Altar in honor of Saint Iohn Eleymon, or the Almoner. The maintenance of theſe was yeerly almes: which continued till Ieruſalem was won by the Chriſtians, Gerald being then Maſter of the Hoſpitall, to whom Raymund ſucceeded, which now by Roman priuiledge did thus domineere. The Patriarke went a dangerous iourney with others to Rome, where he receiued bad entertainment, the Cardinals (all but two) following Balaam ſonne of Boſor, and going after gifts. The Emperour of Conſtantinople at that time by the Popes conſent inuaded Apulia.

*Lib.*18.
Famine and plentie.

Roman Church blamed by all her Children.
Hoſpitalars beginning.

Pope Adrian.

About this time the Soldan of Egypt ſlew the Calypha, to make his ſonne Noſeredine, Calypha; but the fact being knowne, the Countrey was too hot for him, who flying the Egyptian Frying-pan, fell into the fire of the Frankes, which ſlew him and tooke Noſeredine, whom deſiring to become a Chriſtian, the Templers ſold to the Egyptians for ſixtie thouſand Egyptian pieces of gold, which carried him in an Iron Grate into Egypt, and there cut him in ſmall pieces. The yeere after, Ranialdus de Caſtellione Prince of Antiochia inuaded Cyprus with hoſtile Legions, a Chriſtian neighbour Countrey, alway friendly to vs. He ouerthrew their Armie, waſted Cities, Townes, Monaſteries, rauiſhed Nunnes, obtayned infinite ſpoiles, which he ſoone ſpent as prodigally. The King alſo brake his league with the Turkes at Paneas, for greedineſſe of ſpoile to pay his debts: which was ſoone reuenged. Noradine beſieged the Towne, which the King cauſed him with an Armie to leaue, but ſo, as waiting better opportunitie, which hee ſoone found, to doe more hurt to the Kings Armie; taking the moſt of the geeat Men therein, the King hardly eſcaping, and conſequently (in that time) the Kingdome. He againe beſiegeth Paneas, and againe by the King is repelled. After this, the King beſieged Caeſarea, and with the helpe of Theodorick Earle of Flanders, then with his forces preſent, wanne it: and after that Harenc. He dyed, Anno 1162. and his brother Amalricus ſucceeded.

Egyptian broiles.

Cruell baſeneſſe.

Cyprus inuaded.

League broken vniuſtly.

Caeſarea taken.

He in his firſt yeere deſcended into Egypt, and fought with Dargan the Soldan, and obtained victorie; who, leſt he ſhould proceed further, brake the bankes of Nilus then ſwolne, to ouerflow the Countrey. Dargan was ſoone after ſlaine. Noradine inuaded the Countrey of Tripolis, but by helpe of Weſterne Pilgrims then come thither, his Armie was diſſipated, himſelfe hardly eſcaping, with one Legge bare, leauing his Sword behinde. Of theſe Pilgrims Gilbert de Laci, and Robert Manſel were Commanders. To recouer his credit, he beſieged Harenc, where Boamund the third Prince of Antiochia, Raimund the Earle of Tripolis, and Caliman Preſident of Cilicia and Toros, an Armenian Prince oppoſing, were diſcomfited, and the three former, with diuers other Nobles taken, Anno 1165.

Baldwins death
Amalricus ſucceedeth.
*Lib.*19.

Three Princes taken.

Syracon tooke an in expugnable Fort by corruption of the Keepers, called Cauea de Tyrum. He prepared great forces againſt Sauar the Soldan of Egypt, by authoritie of the Calypha of Baldac, carying Water in Bottles thorow the Deſart. Amalricus followed him, his whole Armie meeting

An Aſſe laden with gold, beſt Fort-taker.

Tempeſt of ſand.

Tribute paid by the Egyptians to the King of Ieruſalem.

The Palace Caſcere.

The Calipha's glorie.

His perſon.

ting at Belbeis or Peluſium. Sauar gaue him royall entertainment, ſhewed him his Treaſures; and Cahere (Cayro) hauing on the left hand Babylon, which the Arabs call Macer, (infinite ruines remaine ten miles beyond Nilus, ſtill called Memphis, and therefore this is not the old Memphis) Iohar built Cahere, in the yeare after Mahomet 358. The King and Soldan agreed to goe meete Syracon, which was paſſed ouer the Riuer before they came. Some remainders they tooke, which told them, that in the Wilderneſſe ſuch a tempeſt of Sand in manner of Clouds, and a thicke Miſt hapned, that they durſt not open their mouthes or eyes, and were forced to alight and lye downe, leſt the Whirle-wind ſhould lift them vp in the ayre, to receiue greater fals on the earth. The Sands there, are moueable with the winds like waues of the Sea, and no leſſe dangerous. Many were loſt, together with their Camels and prouiſions, and many ſcattered in the Deſerts. Sauar, to hold the King with him in that danger, encreaſed the tribute, and gaue larger pay to his followers: to which the Calipha alſo bound himſelfe, Hugo Cæſarienſis being therefore ſent to him. He and Galfridus came to Cahere, and entred the Palace Caſcere, paſſing by darke paſſages needing lights, (in euery of which was a guard) vnto more ſpacious places open to the Sunne, where they ſaw Galleries borne vp with Marble Pillars, the Roofes gilded, with carued workes, the pauements diuerſified, preſenting a Royall ſplendor. There were marble fiſh-ponds, many ſtrange Birds vnknowne in our World, with their prouiſions. Then they paſſed to places as farre exceeding theſe, as theſe the vulgar. Heere was admirable varietie of admirable beaſts. By many turnings they came to the Palace of this Palace, where were greater Gards, more glorious Courtiers, and ſupereminent riches. The Soldan which conducted them, twice proſtrated himſelfe with a kind of adoration, and the third time being proſtrate, he laid aſide his ſword from his necke. Preſently the Curtaines embroydered with Gold and Pearle were drawne from about the Throne, where the Calipha ſate in more then Royall habite, attended with a few Domeſtickes and Eunuches. The Soldan approached with reuerence, and kiſſed his feet, and then acquainted him with the affaires of the preſent ſtate, to which hee gaue a gentle Anſwere. And when Ours deſired him to confirme it with his hand, his attendants made ſtrange, as a thing vnheard off: but at laſt the Soldan vrging, he ſtretched forth his hand, but veiled: to whom Hugo, Sir, Faith ſeekes not corners, and in faith betwixt Princes all things ought to bee bare with open ſinceritie: whereat hee vnwilling, yet ſmiling, gaue him his bare hand, (which the Egyptians much grudged at) putting it into the hand of Hugo, vſing the words of the compact. Hee was as the Lord Hugo hath told vs, a young man, browne, tall, comely, liberall, had innumerable Wiues: his name was Elbadech, the Sonne of Elfeis.

Mehemetan Sects.

Sunni and Sſia. See before in Leui.6.c.1.

Cairaoan.

The Authors ſtory of Mahumetans.

The battell of Beben, in the Confines of the Deſerts.

Alexandria taken.

The diuiſion betwixt the Calipha of Baldac, and this hapned by the Schiſme of Hali, which made himſelfe a greater Prophet then Mehemet: thoſe that acknowldge Mehemet the greateſt being called Sunni, and the followers of Hals, Sſia. In the yeare 286. of Mehemet, aroſe one Abdalla, of Halis Poſteritie, which from Seleucia a Citie in the Eaſt paſſed into Africa, and called himſelfe Mehedi (that is, making plaine) which built Mehedia, tooke Sicilia, made ſpoiles in Italie, and called himſelfe Calipha, firſt of all the followers of Hali: His great Grandchildes Sonne Ebuthemin, by Iohar his Captaine ſubduing Egypt, built Cahere, which ſignifieth conquering: whereupon leauing Caroea in Africa, where foure of his Progenitors had dwelt, he made that the Imperiall Seat, oppoſing himſelfe to the Eaſterne Calipha, as I haue more largely ſhewed in mine Hiſtorie of the Eaſtern Princes & their Acts from Mehemet to this day (1182.) with great diligence, King Amalricus procuring me the Arabian Bookes. But leauing theſe digreſſions, a battell was fought betwixt the King and Syracon, very various both getting the better and the worſe, neither partie conquering nor conquered in the whole, but in diuers parts of their Armies. Saladine Nephew of Syracon tooke Hugo Cæſarienſis. The Biſhop of Bethleem, the Kings Chancellor (in which office I ſucceeded) was wounded and loſt his baggage. Syracon paſſed thence to Alexandria, and the Citizens receiued him. The King followed: but Syracon leauing the Citie to Salahadine, eſcaped by night. The King beſieged the Citie and put them to great ſtraites. Hugo (then captiue) was vſed as an Inſtrument of Treatie, and the Citie yeelded to Amalricus, Anno 1167. But Amalricus by Gerbert Maſter of the Hoſpitall his meanes (Peluſium beeing promiſed to the Hoſpitalers) brake his league and entred Egypt in hoſtile manner, the Templers refuſing to follow, either of enuie to the Hoſpitalers, or of conſcience, which the King violated.

Peluſium taken.

Cairo beſieged.

Peluſium was taken, no Age or Sexe ſpared, and Mahazam Sonne of the Soldan was taken. Sauar ſends to Noradine for aide which ſent Syracon thither with an Armie. The King proceeded towards Cahere, but went ſlowly vpon promiſe of great ſummes from the Soldan, which deceiued him. His Nauie paſſing vp the Riuer by the arme thereof Carabes, forced Tapnis. The King laid his ſiege to Cahere, but vpon promiſe of money remoued a mile further. Milo de Planci diſturbeth the buſineſſe, but Syracon more, who entring Egypt, the King went to meete him, but miſſing returned home. Syracon taking tbe oportunitie entred Cahere in peace, treacherouſly ſlue Sauar, and was by the Calipha made Soldan, ſoone after dying, and Salahadine ſuc-

Lib. 20.

ſucceeding. The Eaſterne Emperour ſent in ſuccour of the Holy Land, a ſtrong Fleet of one hundred and fiftie Gallies of Warre, beſides other Veſſels of ſeruice, whereupon, Anno 1169. Amalricus againe entred Egypt, and came to Damiata, which hee beſieged in vaine, if it bee not more then vaine, that themſelues forced with fire, famine, raines, returned (ſo many as were left) home fruſtrate.

Conſt. fleet.

Terrible Earthquake.

The yeare following followed a moſt terrible Earthquake, vtterly ouerthrowing ſtrong Cities, inuoluing the Inhabitants in the ruines, filling euery place in the Land with laments. Thus fared it with the Cities of Syria, and Phœnicia throwne to the ground, and Antiochia in Cœleſyria was quite ouerthrowne; the Walls, Towers, Churches, Houſes ſo ruined, that to this day they cannot be reduced to a meane reſtauration. Gabul, Laodicea, Nerea called otherwiſe Halapia, Cæſara, Hanuim, Emiſſa, and many other Cities in that Prouince, Townes without number; fared likewiſe. Tripolis was made a heape of ſtones, and publike Sepulchre: ſcarſly any eſcaping. Tyrus loſt her Towers. Theſe terrors continued three or foure moneths, thrice or foure times a day. Paleſtina remayned free.

Baldwin the fourth his Leproſie.

Saladine.

Lib. 22.

After this Salahadine inuadeth the Countrey, taketh Gaza, makes cruell executions and returneth into Egypt. Milo the Armenian adioyneth himſelfe to Noradine, vexeth the Antiochian Territories. Salahadine ſpoyleth all the Countrey beyond Iordan. Anno 1173. Amalricus dyeth, and his Sonne Baldwin ſucceeded, whom his Father at nine yeares of age had committed to our Erudition (then Arch-deacon of Tyre) his right arme was ſtupified and ſenſleſſe, the beginning of an incurable Diſeaſe, when he was a ſtripling proouing a Leproſie. Hee had a Siſter named Sybilla. In the firſt yeare of his Reigne, William King of Sicilia, ſent a Nauie of two hundred ſhips againſt Alexandria, which returned with great loſſe and ſhame. Salahadine the Sonne of Negmend, Brother of Syracon, was called by the Damaſcens, and made Lord of Damaſcus, the Sonne of Noradine being diſherited. Cotobedi Lord of Muſul, came in his Nephewes behalfe againſt him, but in vaine, Salahadine winning the reſt of the Countrey. After this with a huge Armie, he entreth the Kingdome, layeth all waſte, is encountred and ouerthrowne by the King; Salahadine flying with ſcarſe one hundred Horſe, an innumerable company beeing taken or ſlaine. The King 1178. inuaded the Enemies Countrey, and hardly eſcaped the Lord Conſtable and others being ſlaine. In a battell alſo againſt Salahadine, ours hauing gotten the field laden with prey, are ſpoiled and made a prey to the conquered. The Earle Trecenſis and the Brother of King Lewis of France, Peter, and other Nobles with a great power came into Syria but could not withſtand the current of Salahadines victories, which now poſſeſſed himſelfe of a Caſtle which the King had lately built neere Iordan, and raced it. Hee makes league with the King and breakes it, and takes diuers holds by Sea and Land, annoying the Kingdome. But wearie of bloud I follow this Author no further, whoſe ſtorie is left vnperfect, as the King then was in ſtate of bodie, committing the Gouernment of the Kingdome to Guido of Leziniac, on whom before he had beſtowed his Siſter in Marriage. I will likewiſe commit you to an Engliſh Author and Acts in theſe buſineſſes.

If any bee offended, that the date and yeare of each Exploit is not mentioned, it is becauſe the Author had not done it.

CHAP. IIII.

The Continuation of the Ieruſalem Expedition and other Additions, gathered out of MATTHEW PARIS, chiefly relating the Acts of Engliſh Pilgrimes in that Employment.

---

§. I.

Templers beginning and degeneration. Huge ſlaughters of Chriſtians.
SALADINES taking Ieruſalem and the Holy Land.

Beginning of the Templers.

ABout the yeare 1118. the Hoſpitulers were begunne by Hugo de Paganis, and Godfrey of Saint Omar. Theſe were Knights religious in manner of Canons Regulars, deuoting themſelues to the ſeruice of Chriſt in Chaſtitie and Obedience; to whom King Baldwin gaue a reſidence in part of his Palace, the Canons of the Temple of our Lord gaue the ſtreet adioyning to build Offices; the King, Patriarke and Prelates gaue Benefices for their maintenance. Their firſt profeſſion was, for remiſſion of their ſinnes, to ſecure the wayes for Pilgrimes againſt Theeues. Nine yeares after, at the Councell of Treca, a rule and white habit was deſigned them by Pope Honorius: and nine yeares after that their number (being but nine) beganne to increaſe together with their Poſſeſſions; after which in the time of Pope Eugenius, they ſewed Croſſes of red Cloth to their Mantles. In a ſmall time they were ſo many, that in their Couent they haue three hundred Knights, beſides other Brethren, whoſe number is almoſt infinite: and their Poſſeſſions on this and the otherſide of the Sea are ſaid to bee ſo immenſe, that there is no part of Chriſtendome, which hath not beſtowed on them part of their goods, and they are now richer then Kings. And becauſe their abode is neere the Temple, they are called Brethren of the Souldierie of the Temple: and hauing continued ſome time in good order, the humilitie of their profeſſion now being neglected, they haue withdrawne themſelues from the Patriarke their founder, withholding Obedience, and the Churches Tithes, and are become very troubleſome to all.

Their poſſeſſions.

Two huge Armies.

* Loricatorum Equitum.

a Equit. leuioris armaturæ.

This is here repeated for the hugeneſſe of theſe Expeditions.

Defeat of the Dutch.

Anno 1146. was a Councell held at Rhemes, and Preachers appointed for the Holy Land, which the Saracens did ouer-runne without reſiſtance. Conrade the Emperour at the preaching of Bernard tooke the Croſſe, and with him an innumerable multitude. In May following, hee beganne his Pilgrimage, leading with him ſeuentie thouſand Horſe-men *armed, beſides light Horſe-men, * Footmen, Women and Children. Lewis King of France followed him with no leſſe an Armie of armed Horſe-men. They went aſunder for better prouiſion for themſelues and their Horſes. Paſſing Bauaria, the Danow, Auſtria, Hungarie, and both Pannonias, alſo the Bulgarian Prouinces, Meſia and Dacia; Conrade came into Thrace and to Conſtantinople; thence (after ſpeech with Manuell the Emperour) paſſed into and thorow Aſia to Lycaonia. The Soldan of Iconium had hired great forces out of the Eaſt. The Guides which the Conſtantinopolitan had giuen him, with Greekiſh ſleight, as is ſaid, through enuie of their Maſter, brought them into difficult paſſages, and ſo betrayed them, before famiſhed, to the Turkes expected opportunitie and furie; that of the ſeuentie thouſand armed Horſemen, and Footmen, in manner innumerable, ſcarſly the tenth part eſcaped, the reſt ſhared betwixt Famine, the Sword and Captiuitie. Conradus eſcaped to Nice, and ſo to Conſtantinople, where he wintered. The next Spring he paſſed by Sea to Achon, and was receiued by the King ioyfully at Ieruſalem.

French Armie.

Conrades ſtrength.

This yeare 1147. King Lewis came to Meander with ſeuentie thouſand armed Horſemen, beſides a great Nauie of ſhips which followed him. The Enemie attended to hinder their paſſage ouer the water, which coſt many mens liues. Comming to Laodicea, they aſcended a high Mountaine, where they were miſerably diſcomfited by the Turkes. Yet did the King with Elianor the Queene hold on their Pilgrimage to Ieruſalem, where their caſe is much condoled. The Emperour and both the Kings agreed to beſiege Damaſcus, which they did: where the Emperour forcing his way at the watering place, ſtrooke off a Turkes head (which fought luſtily) together with the Head-piece, the necke and ſhoulder armed, with his Sword, diuiding the left arme and ſide vnder it from the reſt of the bodie. The Citizens terrified, corrupted ſome Princes with Bribes, who indeuoured to diſſolue the ſiege, which Treaſon of the Eaſterne Chriſtians, was odious to thoſe of the Weſt, and cauſed the Emperour and the French to returne home, abhominating the fellowſhip of theſe Eaſterne Princes, and cooling others Deuotions to this Pilgrimage.

Eaſterne treacherie.

Prince Raimund ſlaine.

Earle Raimund ſlaine by Aſſaſines.

Templers treacherie.

Pope Adrian.

Aſcalon.

Papall ſchiſme.

After their departure, Anno 1148. Noradine entred the Confines of Antiochia, beſieged Nepa, ſlue Prince Raimund with other Nobles in battell, tooke the Caſtle Hareng, and ſpoyled all the Countrey. Anno 1150. Raimund Earle of Tripolis was ſlaine by the Aſſiſines; a man deplored as dreadfull to the Saracens: Theſe Aſſiſines inhabit the Mountaines neere to Antaradus, in the Prouince of Phœnicia, haue ten Caſtles and fortie thouſand men or more. Theſe elect their chiefe whom they call, The old man of the Mountaine, at whoſe word they will attempt any thing. Theſe haue beene preciſer Saracens then othres foure hundred yeares. Their old man at this time began to embrace Chriſtian Religion, and ſent for that purpoſe a Legate to the King of Ieruſalem, which by one of the Templers was ſlaine, to the hinderance of the buſineſſe till this day. Anno 1154. Adrian an Engliſhman was made Pope, borne in the Territorie of Saint Albans. The ſame yeare Aſcalon was wonne by King Baldwin after a long ſiege.

Pope Adrian dying, 1159. there grew a diuiſion touching the Papacie, betwixt the Engliſh and French, following Alexander, and the Imperials, Octauian: inſomuch, that the Archbiſhop of Collen comming into England, to receiue the Kings Daughter for the Duke of Saxonie to wife, the Altars whereon he ſaid Maſſe were ſubuerted, 1165.

T. Beckrt murthered for maintayning the Clergies Liberties, againſt the Secular power in murthers, &c.

Anno 1171. Thomas Becket was ſlaine in his Church at Canterburie, on the fifth day of the Natiuitie, by William Tracie, Hugh Maruell, Reginald Fitz Vrſi, and Richard Briton, Courtiers, which had heard ſome ſtomackfull ſpeeches of the King, touching the ſaid Archbiſhop, whereupon King Hanry ſent to Rome to excuſe himſelfe. But his Ambaſſadors could not bee admitted to the Popes preſence. Hee ſent others, which on Maundie Thurſday, hearing that the Pope meant to ſentence the King of England by name, and to interdict all his Lands, the Ambaſſadors to decline the ſame, ſware that the King ſhould wholly obey the Pope and his Cardinals. The Authors and Fautors were excommunicated. The Church of Canterburie continued after his Funerall, a yeares Funerall of her Holies, the Pauement plucked vp, the Walls bared, the Bels ſilent.

The King ſwore in the preſence of Albert and Theodine the Popes Cardinals, that hee was not conſcious of Thomas his death: but becauſe he had ſpoken raſhly, and had brought vp ſuch bad Souldiers (which ſo auenged him) hee deſired and obtayned abſolution, promiſing as he was inioyned, To giue ſo much money as ſhould maintayne two hundred Knights, to the defence of the Holy Land for one yeere, and that he ſhould permit appeales thenceforth to be made freely, and that the cuſtomes which in his times were brought in contrarie to the liberties of the Church, ſhould bee reuoked, and that the poſſeſſions taken from the Church of Canterburie ſhould bee reſtored. To this the two Kings, both Father and Sonne, ſware in remiſſionem omnium peccatorum. Soone after he came to Canterburie, 1174. and bare-foot, in manner of a penitent went to the chiefe Church, and with abundance of teares, to the Martyrs Sepulchre, where he continued long proſtrate in prayer. He there proteſted his innocency, but becauſe his words gaue occaſion of the Biſhops death, hee deſired of the Biſhops preſent abſolution, and ſubmitting his bare fleſh to the diſcipline of Rods, he receiued three or foure blowes of euery religious man, of which a great multitude had aſſembled. After which he put on his clothes, gaue precious gifts to the Martyr, aſſigning further fortie pounds a yeere for lights about the Sepulchre, and continued the reſt of that day and the night following in bitterneſſe of minde, continuing his prayers, vigils and faſts till the third day. In the yeere 1176. hee granted the Popes Legat, that no Clergie man ſhould bee brought before a ſecular Magiſtrate for any crime, but for Foreſt and lay fee: that Biſhopprickes and Abbies ſhould not be holden aboue a yeere in the Kings hand: that the killer of a Clergie man ſhould be arraigned before the ſecular Iudge, in preſence of the Biſhop: that Clergie men ſhould not be compelled to trialls by combat.

Beckets murther as the ſeed of her Martyr, the ſeed and aduantage of Rome by appeales, liberties, &c.

Monſter of regall penance.

Clergie-liberties.

Anno 1177. the Kings of England and France did ſweare to goe together in the ſeruice of Chriſt crucified to Ieruſalem, and to take the Croſſe, and to hold firme league. An. 1179. a Councell was holden at Rome againſt Albigenſes, that Eccleſiaſticall perſons ſhould not bee compelled to ſtand to the iudgement of Lay-men, that Archbiſhops viſiting Churches ſhould bee content with fortie or fiftie horſes, againſt pluralities, &c. About the ſame time Pope Alexander writ to Prieſt Iohn, King of the Indians, ſhewing that Philip a Phyſician had told him of his deſire to be inſtructed in the Catholike and Apoſtolike diſcipline, and that they diſſented in nothing from the Doctrine of the Apoſtolike Sea: and that, as Philip had learned of his ſubiects, he deſired to haue a Church and ſome Altar in Ieruſalem, where religious men of his Kingdome might reſide, and be more fully inſtructed in the Apoſtolike diſcipline: He therefore deſiring, to reuoke him from thoſe articles in which they erred from the Chriſtian faith, ſent the ſaid Philip to his Maieſtie, to bee further inſtructed, &c. Baldwin, then King of Ieruſalem, being leaprous, ordayned Guido de Liſiniaco Ouer-ſeer of the Kingdome, whoſe gouernment being not proſperous, it was committed to Raimund Earle of Tripolis.

Councell.

This Prieſt Iohn was not that in Abaſsia, nor that in Tartaria, but one in India.

In theſe times, Saladine Soldan of Damaſco, hauing ſubdued the Saracens in the Eaſt, paſſed ouer Iordan, ſpoiled Crach Caſtle, burned Neapolis, deſtroyed Arabia, waſted Gerinum. And Baldwin being dead, Baldwin a child of fiue yeers old ſucceeded, his nephew by his ſiſter Sybilla: Raimund was Protector. The Clergie and People ſeeing the ſtate of the Kingdome vnlikely to continue, ſent Embaſſadors to Henrie King of England, ſolemnly offering the Kingdome of Ieruſalem, and keyes of the holy Citie and Sepulchre. Heraclius, the Patriarke vnder-tooke the Embaſſage with the Maſter of the Hoſpital, and others, bringing by the way the Letters of Pope Lucius. He found the King at Reading, Anno 1185. whom with his Courtiers they prouoked to teares. They brought vnto him the Keyes of the Natiuitie, of the Paſſion, of the Reſurrection, of the Tower of Dauid, and of the holy Sepulchre, and the Banner of the Kingdome: which all he much honored. The Popes Letter was this. Lucius Epiſcopus ſeruus ſeruorum Dei, &c. Whereas all thy Predeceſſors, aboue other Princes of the Earth, haue long ſince flouriſhed in glorie of Armes, and Nobilitie of minde, and the Chriſtian people hath learned to haue them Patrons in their aduerſitie, worthily is there recourſe to thee, the Heire, not of the Kingdome alone, but of thy Progenitors vertues; with a certayne preſumed ſecuritie, when danger, yea deſtruction is feared to hang ouer the Chriſtian people, that by the arme of Royall Greatneſſe aide may be yeelded to his members, who by his pitie hath granted thee to attayne the height of ſo great glorie, and hath ordayned thee a Wall inexpugnable againſt the wicked enemies of his Name. Your Maieſtie may further take notice, that Saladine the cruelleſt perſecutor of the holy Name of the Crucified, hath ſo preuailed in the ſpirit of furie againſt the Chriſtians of the Holy Land, that except the courſes of his crueltie bee by ſome obſtacles ſtayed, hee hath confidence that Iordan will flow into his mouth, &c.

Saladines exploits.

Henry the ſecond elected King of Ieruſalem.

The Popes Letter.

Hereupon, a Parliament was aſſembled at London at Clerken-Well, in which the King adiured all his Subiects, in the audience of the Legats, to ſhew what might bee moſt expedient for his ſoule, promiſing to performe whatſoeuer they ſhould aduiſe. His Parliament aduiſed that hee ſhould moderately gouerne his Kingdome, and preſerue it from barbarous incurſions, rather then in his owne perſon to prouide for the ſafetie of the Eaſt. As concerning the Kings Sonnes (one of which the Patriarke deſired, if the King refuſed) it ſeemed vnfitting to determine any thing in their abſence. The King with the Patriarke paſſed the Sea to Roan, and had three dayes conference with the French King, and in their preſence many Nobles receiued the Croſſe.

Both the Kings promiſed the ſpeedieſt helpe, and the Patriarke returned home.

Baldwin dieth. Sybilla ſucceeds.

Anno 1186. Baldwin the Child being dead, Sybilla was crowned Queene, as Heire to the former Kings, but was enioyned to diuorce ſolemnely Guido her Husband, with condition vpon Oath, to receiue him for King whomſoeuer ſhe ſhould chooſe. Guido himſelfe alſo intreated it, that the Kingdome ſhould ſuſtayne no damage for his ſake, and returned home. Saladines comming being bruted, ſhee aſſembled the Lords Spirituall and Temporall to conſult about a King: and when they granted her to name whom ſhee liked, all beeing in expectation, ſhee ſaid vnto Guido there preſent, My Lord Guido, I chooſe you for my Husband, and deliuering my ſelfe with the Kingdome to you, doe publikely proteſt that you ſhall be King. Heereat all were amazed that one woman had deluded ſo many wiſe men.

A womans wit.

About this time, Saladines Mother in confidence of the Truce paſſed with great riches from Ægypt, into the parts of Damaſcus, by the borders of Iordan, and was robbed by Reginald of Caſtellion. Whereupon Saladine demanded ſatisfaction and reſtitution according to couenant: but Reginald returned harſh Anſwere. Saladine glad of the occaſion, prepared himſelfe for reuenge. In the end of Ianuary, the Kings of England and France tooke the Croſſe.

Truce broken.

Saladine his reuenge.

Anno 1187. Saladine aſſembleth Parthians, Bedwines, Turkes, Saracens, Arabians, Medes, and Cordines, with whom and the Ægyptians hee inuadeth the Chriſtians. Hee ſlue the Maſter of the Templars, with threeſcore of his Brethren, and beſieged Caluaria. The King aſſembled all the ſtrength of his Kingdome, the Earle of Tripolis being chiefe Commander. They fought and Saladine preuailed. The Earle of Tripolis is ſaid to haue throwne away the Kings Standard, and procured the flight. The King was taken with the holy Croſſe, and the reſt either taken or ſlaine. The Earle of Tripolis and ſome Templers eſcaped. Saladine made vſe of his victorie, ſent the King and Captiues to Damaſcus, tooke Ptolemaida; and after that Ieruſalem, each man redeeming his libertie at ten Bizantines, a woman at fiue, an infant at one, the reſt to bee ſlaues, which had not to pay, of which poorer were fourteene thouſand. They entred the Citie and cauſed in foure corners of the Temple their Superſtitions to bee proclamed. Haſting thence he poſſeſſed himſelfe of all the Cities and Townes, but Aſcalon and Tyrus, and Crach or Mount Royall. For the redemption of thoſe fourteene thouſand, it is to be noted, that Croſſes, Chalices, Guildings, and Church-garments were ſold by conſent.

The King taken.

Ieruſalem taken by Saladine.

§. II.

The Emperour and two Kings take the Croſſe. King RICHARD the Firſt his Expedition, his Noble Exploits in Sicil, Cyprus, and the Holy Land. His impriſonment: and the great miſeries which hapned to England, generally by that Expedition.

ANno 1188. at the preaching of the Popes Legate, the Emperour Fredericke tooke the Croſſe. The Kings of England and France agreed after much conſultation, together with the Earle of Flanders, to take the Croſſe, which the King of England did at the hands of William Archbiſhop of Tyre, * ſent by the Pope for that purpoſe. Whereupon both in the Empire and in both Kingdomes, Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Dukes, Marqueſſes, Earles, Barons, Knights, Gentlemen, and the vulgar did the like. It was alſo ordered, that all of the French Kingdome ſhould weare Red Croſſes, of the Engliſh White, of Flanders Greene, all things to remayne in the preſent State thorow all their States, till fortie dayes after their returne. But the French King entring vpon the King of Englands Territories, diſturbed the Affaires of the Croſſe, King Henry righting himſelfe by Warre. The Emperour Fredericke ſent a Letter of Defiance to Saladine, and challenged to himſelfe the old feathers of the Romane Eagle, euen vnto Æthiopia and Perſia, which Saladine anſwered and out-braued, ſetting forth the puiſſance and numbers of the Saracens, demanding alſo the three remayning Holds to bee ſurrendred to him. He deliuered King Guido, taking his Oath to forſake the Kingdome, and betake himſelfe to Sea. But the Clergie of the Kingdome deliberated and determined, that Faith is not to be kept in the perill of Religion, and therfore the King being abſolued from bonds, many Pilgrims reſorted to him, and with the people of the Countrey made a great band. The King with the Hoſpitulers and Templers, Venetians, and Genuois came to Achon, and layd ſiege to it, which continued to the comming of the Kings, Philip and Richard, and then was taken.

* The Author of the former Storie.

Both Letters are in Mat. P. at large.

Faith not to be kept in perill of Religion, that is, Faith muſt dye that Faith may liue.

Zeale of thoſe times. Vtinam & ſcientia conſcientiæ.

The meaner ſort of men are ſo poſſeſſed with deuout Zeale, that they ſtay not the commings of their Kings and Lords, but flow from the vttermoſt parts of the Wold to ſerue the Lord.

Saladine came with a great power to raiſe the ſiege, but fruſtrated of his hopes, he returned with ſhame, a Nauie of twelue thouſand Danes and Friſlanders, comming to the ayde of the Chriſtians, after three dayes weary fight. Meane-while the French King with Earle Richard, againſt his father King Henrie continued the warre, with much ſpoile and bloudſhed on both ſides. Saladine alſo agreed with the Emperour of Conſtantinople, and reſigned the Churches of the Holy Land vnto him, therein to obſerue the Greeke holies. The Emperour promiſed to ſend Saladine one hundred Galleyes, and Saladine him the whole Holy Land, on condition to hinder the Weſterne Pilgrimes. And if any at Conſtantinople accepted the Croſſe, he was preſently impriſoned. About the ſame time ſome Northerne Pilgrimes ſayling thorow the Engliſh Seas, agreed with Engliſh Pilgrimes, and ſet forth together from Ierteſmouth, which paſſing by Lisbon, were requeſted by the King of Portugall to helpe him to ſubiect the Citie Syluia, ſwearing to permit the ſpoile to them. They tooke it, and of ſixtie thouſand Inhabitants, ſpared onely thirteene thouſand from the ſword; dedicating the Mahometan Temple for a Chriſtian Cathedrall of our Lady.

Greekes and Saracens conſpiracie.

Sy'uia taken by help of Engliſh.

King Henrie, wearied with the French and his ſonnes actions, died, and left his ſonne Richard his Heire: of whom the Poet, Mira canam, ſol occubuit, nox nulla ſecuta eſt; and of his Father, Sufficit hic tumulus, cui non ſuffecerat Orbis. He left aboue nine hundred thouſand pounds in gold and ſiluer, beſides Plate and Iewels, and precious ſtones. At the ſame time died Geffrie Biſhop of Ely inteſtate, of whoſe goods were confiſcate three thouſand markes of ſiluer, and two hundred markes * of gold, beſides other treaſures in Plate, Iewels, and Gold. King Richard depoſed almoſt all the Sheriffes from their Offices and their Dependants, to wring great ſummes by redeeming them. And for regayning of the Holy Land, hee ſet almoſt all things to ſale, Donations, Caſtles, Mannors, Woods, Townes, Sheriffewicks, and the like. Hugo the Pompous Biſhop of Durham, bought to him and his Church the Kings Towne, Seggesfield, with the Wapintake and all appurtenances, and the Earledome of Northumberland, giuing ouer and aboue one thouſand markes to be Iuſtice of England, and to redeeme his voyage to the Holy Land. And for further ſecuritie, hee with infinite money obtayned of the Apoſtolike Sea (which is wanting to none that giueth money frankly) licenſe to remayne, notwithſtanding his voluntarie vow.

King Richard. See what a whirle Poole of treaſure and ſinke of bloud, the land called Holy, proued.

* A marke was eight ounces.

Kings ſales.

Popes praiſe by a Monke.

The Chriſtians and Saladine had a bloudy battell, with great loſſe on both ſides. The French King ſent to treat with the King of England, for their meeting in the Holy Expedition, and ſecuritie of their Countries meanwhile. King Richard hauing faſted and prayed at Thomas Beckets Tombe, vowing to performe to the Church thoſe things, for which he had ſuffered: paſſing to Normandie, in the Sea hee vowed to that Saint to erect in his honor a Chappell in the Holy Land, he being his Protector by Sea and Land; which he performed after at Achon. The Biſhops of Ely and Durham, had chiefe charge of the Kingdome in his abſence: the one being chiefe Iuſtice (and hauing the Kings Seale) from the great Riuer to the South, the other to the North: but this double-headed beaſt agreed not. The Archbiſhop of Canterburie interdicted the Lands of Earle Iohn, whoſe appeale the Popes Legate receiued, and releaſed the Interdict. A tenth part of moueable goods, was giuen for the Holy Land affaires thorow the Kingdome, which in ſtead of almes, vexed the Clergie and Laytie with ſpoile in the exacting. Likewiſe the King fayned that he had loſt his Seale, and made a new, that all men which would bee ſecure, were forced to ſeeke the new Seale, and many to follow him therefore out of the Land, and to fine with him at his pleaſure.

Superſtition aduanced.

Miſeries to England by King Richard his holy Land voyage.

Exactions.

Anno 1190. the Kings of England and France, ſware to each other the Articles of the league (their Earles and Barons did likewiſe) as alſo, that if one died in the Expedition, the Suruiuor ſhould haue the money and people of the deceaſed. William an Engliſh-man, vowed in his way to Ieruſalem, that if he arriued ſafely at Achon, he would build a Chappell to Saint Thomas the Martyrs honor, with a Church-yard, which he did, and was made there the firſt Prior. Saladine corrupting Commanders with money, burned the Chriſtians Fortifications. King Richard procured his Chancellor, the Biſhop of Ely, to be the Popes Legat.

Beckets Hoſpitall at Achon.

The two Kings met at Nizeliac, where in the Church of Saint Denis, King Richard tooke his Scrip and Staffe. They came to Lions, and paſſing the Bridge, it brake, and many were drowned in the Rhoſne. Their people were ſo many that they could not goe together; and therefore the French King went to Genua, the Engliſh to Meſſana. Here King Richard found many Pilgrims which had ſpent al their prouiſion with long ſtay, whom he adioyned to his own troups. King Richard was requeſted to viſit the Pope, which he refuſed, obiecting to the Cardinall the Roman Simonie, which for conſecration of a Biſhop, had taken ſeuen hundred markes, and for the Legantine power of the Biſhop of Ely, had taken fifteene hundred marks, and infinit ſummes of the Archbiſhop of Burdeaux, accuſed by his Clergie. Queene Elenor followed and ouer-tooke her ſonne. The ſame yeere, the Emperour Frederick, betwixt Iconium and Antiochia, was drowned in the Riuer Saphet, falling off his Horſe. The Engliſh fleet, on holy Thurſday, were mightily embroyled in the Spaniſh Seas with a Tempeſt, and Thomas of Canterburie three times appeared viſibly, bidding them not to feare, for He and the Martyr Edmund, and Saint Nicholas, were appointed Patrons of the Fleet, and the Tempeſt preſently ceaſed. Many ſhips were diſperſed, one of which came to Syluia, and eightie well armed men of the companie, were entertayned by the King of Portugall againſt the Emperour of Marocco, with good conditions. Ten Beginning of the Kings expedition.

Roman ſimonie.

The Emperor drowned.

Apparition of Th. Becket

Faith, built not on Scripture, but reuelations.

Engliſh-men entertayned againſt Marocco.

other ſhips came to Lisbon, and diuers trauelled to Marſiles thence by Land. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Baldwin, Hubert of Salisburie, came to Tyrus. Iohn, Biſhop of Norwich, went to the Pope, and emptying his purſe, was releaſed of his vow.

Philip, King of France, arriued at Meſſana, and was entertayned in the Palace of King Tancred. King Richard comming a few dayes after, was forbidden entrance by the French, fearing that prouiſion would not be procured ſufficient for both. The Citizens were willing to receiue him, which the French forbad, aſcending the walls armed and keeping the paſſages. Richard called to armes, and by hoſtile force entred, putting the French to ſlaughter and flight, which kindled a fire in the French Kings breſt, neuer after till himſelfe was extinct, extinguiſhed. King Richard tooke in Calabria the ſtrong Fortreſſe, called Lemba Maris, and another betwixt Calabria and Meſſana, called the Monaſterie of the Griffons. The Griffons hauing ſlaine many men and horſes of the King, he brake in by force and tooke their Citie. The Citizens gaue him pledges, and he fortified there a Caſtle, called Mategriue. A Councell prouinciall was holden at Weſtminſter by the Biſhops Legat, little or nothing to the good of the Church. The Church of Normandie then obtayned her freedome, King Richard granting that Clergie men ſhould not be attached by Seculars, and matters of Oathes, Marriages, Vſuries, &c. ſhould bee tried in the Spirituall Court. Baldwin the Archbiſhop dying at Achon, bequeathed all which he had to the ſuccour of the Holy Land, which Hubert his Executor diſtributed faithfully. William of Ely meane-while made a ditch about the Tower, and exerciſed his bought Dignities with immoderate exceſſe to re-fill his emptied bags, prouing burthenſome to all Churches, both Conuentuall and Cathedrall, riding thorow England with fifteene hundred horſe, with troups of Clergie men and Knights, attended at Table by Noblemens ſonnes, whom hee married to his Neeces and Kindred: buying any Land which was to be ſold, giuing and retayning at pleaſure Abbies vacant, by feare or price obtayning euery Caſtle and Towne, followed with Minſtrels and Songs of all ſorts: none durſt murmure againſt him. His ſtile was in his Letters, W. Dei gratia, Elienſis Epiſcopus, D. R. Cancellarius, totius Angliæ Iuſtitiarius, & Apoſtolicæ ſedis Legatus, &c.

King Richards acts in the Kingdome of Sicilia.

Freedome carnall.

Biſhop of Ely's pride, pompe, exceſſe.

HONDIVS his Map of Sicilia.

SICILIA
MARE TYRRENO
MARE AFRICO
Septentrio
Meridies
Occidens
Oriens
Millaria Italica
10
20
30
40
36
37
38
39
40
VAL DI MAZARA
VAL DE MONE
VAL DI NOTO
Palermo
Cefala
Rosalaimis
C. Rami
S. Vito
Trapano
Marsella
Masara
Cefalu
Termini
Caronia
S. Anastasio
Bonuicino
Petralia
Nicosia
Traina
Enna
Agirone
Randasso
Catania
Messina
Milaso
C. de Orlando
Patti
Brolo
Oliuerio
Le Castro
Taormia
Calatabiano
Monasterium Album
Paterno
C. de la Molina
La Bruca
Leontini
Siracusa
Cassarus
Noto
Notica
Vizini
Camarana
Ragusa
Chiaramonte
Terra noua
Butera
Leocata
Falconara
Gergenti
Siculiana
Heraclea
Xacca
Calatanixatt
Mussumeli
Nato
Grutte
Farrarotto
Palatiu
Prissi
Bicari
Villafranca
Petralonga
Sclafani
Villata
Motia
C. Passaro
Renda
Serra
Sacculino
Faro
Casale
Fardenisi
Savoia
Schiso
Paternio

Anno 1191. the French King tooke ſhip at Meſſana, in the end of March, and in the beginning of Aprill King Richard followed with thirteene Galleons, * one hundred ſhips of burthen, and fiftie Gallies: and thirtie dayes after came to Cyprus. Curſac the Lord of the Iland, which called himſelfe Emperor, tooke and impriſoned many of King Richards men, whereupon he warred againſt him, tooke him and his only Daughter and ſubdued the whole Iland, with all the ſtrong places to his ſubiection. He bound the King in ſiluer Fetters, and impriſoned him at Marguth Caſtle neere Tripolis. The Daughter receiued Honourable cuſtodie with the two Queenes.

* Buccas triplici velorum expanſione.

Cyprus ſubdued by K. Richard.

HONDIVS his Map of Cyprus.

Septentrio
64
65
66
67
MARIS MEDITERRANEI
Occidens
Oriens
35
36
C Cormachiti
C Elenii
Larna
Crusulin
Bloss
Dadia
Lapethi
Alam
Filia
Platdamiſſa
Kalaſsa
Italia
Cado
Salamina
Nota
Nicola
Plusia
Sicha
S Sorai
Lenegra
S Sireo
Nicoſia
Leri
Cato
Petrima
Tripi
Eandra
Facla
Famagusta
Sinori
Nuda
Sala mi ni
Chidia
Timb
Melisona
Snapa
Acro
Leſcara
S. Z
Aliendo
Dafno
Saica
Marato
S. Harino
S. Zuane
Maſoto
Amathusia
Paphia
Pa phi a.
Galatiu
Arsos
Schinica
Chriſo
Tera
Voui
Pisuri
Critini
Sepila
Vaſili
Potamo
Aza
Sinagora
Calopa
C Bianco
C. Pila
C Chiti
C de la Griega
C. de le Gote
PARS
CYPRUS
Milliaria Italica
10
20
Stalimini.
Paleocaſtro
Stalimini
Alandro
Sala
Punta diura
Chius.
S Elia
Pigrino
Mitilene.
Mitilene
Ruina
Vaſilica
S Theodori
Gieremia
Castel Gero
Negroponte.
Valona
Negro ponte
Platari
Athene
Cerigo.
Ponta di S. Nicolo
Cauerna
Rhodus.
Filermo
Villa noua
Portus Rhodi
Ruſacate
Canurla
Zaliſo
Tranquilla

Philip Earle of Flanders going to the Holy Land with the French King, dyed without iſſue. The Armie which beſieged Achon, was beſieged with Famine, which with a well furniſhed Nauie King Richard relieued, in the way ſinking a Dromund, a huge ſhip of Saladines going to aide the beſieged, frighted with Wild-fire, Veſſels ful of vnknown Serpents, & fiue hundred Souldiers. The Kings diuers, whiles it was becalmed, bored many holes therein, ſo that the goods hee ſaued, but drowned three hundred of the men. When the two Kings were now at Achon, they came to capitulation; and Saladine couenanted to render the Croſſe (before taken) and fifteene hundred choice Chriſtian Captiues, and ſeuen thouſand Bizantines to ſaue the liues of the Saracens, the reſt remayning to the Victors. But when the conditions were not kept, two thouſand & ſix hundred Saracens loſt their heads. The French King enuying the glorie of all the Chriſtian Exploits aſcribed to the Engliſh King, pretended for want of money to returne. Hereupon King Richard offered to communicate for the Seruice of the Holy Land, one halfe of his gold, ſiluer, victuals, armes, ſhips: who yet had ſworne, and againſt the wils of his owne. and to the diſguſt of the whole Armie, muſt needs home. Another quarrell aroſe, the King of France purpoſing to deliuer Achon, and all whatſoeuer they ſhould take to Marchiſius of Mount Ferrat, and to make him King of the Holy Land, King Richard ſtanding for Guido. But Meſſana had begunne and an vnhappie running at Tilt, had made runne on this diſſention. Hee left the Duke of Burgundie with one thouſand men at Armes in ſhew to doe ſeruice to King Richard, inſtructed before in Treacherie. Thus ſwearing to inuade no mans Land there preſent, he returned; and King Richard repayred the breaches, and ditched and fortified Achon.

His reliefe of Achon, and taking a Dromund.

Achon taken. French enuie. Cœlum non animum mutant, q.t.m.c.

The Countrey recouered by King Richard.

The Coaſt Cities hearing of his approach fled, hauing no hope of ſuccour from Saladine: thus they did in Caiphas, in Cæſarea, Ioppe, Aſſis, Gaza, Aſcalon, ſo that all the Region on the Sea from Achon to Ioppe was taken, yet not without great loſſe to the Chriſtians, whom Saladines Armie ſtill attended, wayting all opportunities of miſchiefe.

King Richard in a Letter to the Archbiſhop of Roan, tels of a Battell and great ouerthrow giuen Saladine neere Aſſur, wherein more of the chiefe Saracens were loſt, then had beene in one day in fortie yeares before: after which Saladine durſt not attempt by open force, but by ſecret ambuſhes. Hee ouerturned Aſcalon, and made it euen with the ground, hearing of our comming thither, and wee haue hope ſhortly to recouer all our Lords Inheritance.

King Richard giueth the Kingdomes of Ieruſalem and of Cyprus.

King Richard being returned, gaue the Kingdome of Ieruſalem to his Nephew Henrie, with the Wife of Marchiſius de Monte Feratio, beeing heire of the Kingdome, now her Siſter the Queene was dead, Guido conſenting, to whom King Richard gaue Cyprus, lately gotten by the Sword, for which he did him homage. The ſaid Marchiſius, was a little before murthered at Tyrus by the Aſſaſines.

Treaſure of relikes.

God opened the mouth of an Aſſe to teach the Prophet.

When Saladine had taken Ieruſalem, the Inhabitants had gathered together the Relikes they could find, and put them in foure great Iuorie Chiſts, which he (learning what they were) commanded to be carried to Baldach, and giuen to the Calipha, that the Chriſtians ſhould no longer glory of dead mens bones, and beleeue to haue them Interceſſors in Heauen, whoſe bones they worſhipped on Earth. But the Prince of Antioch and the Patriarke loth to be depriued of ſuch a Treaſure, couenanted by Oath to redeeme them at fiftie two thouſand Bizantines, or elſe to returne them. The Prince ſealed them vp, and all Chriſtians were deiected, the time being at hand for the payment. King Richard paid the money that they might intercede for him in Heauen, whoſe bones he had redeemed on Earth from the hands of Infidels.

Chancellors exceſſe.

Pride of a Prelate and his fall.

A Biſhop and Chancellor of England without Engliſh.

Combuſtions hapned, meane-while, in England, by the Chancellors exceſſes, the iſſue whereof was his Depoſition, he and his hauing ſo exhauſted the Kingdomes wealth, that they left not a Girdle ſtriped with Siluer, nor a Ring, or Iewell, or any thing of worth to any, nor Treaſure to a Iew. The Chancellor ſware to the Articles, and to deliuer vp all the Caſtles before his departure. He came to Canterburie, and their tooke the Croſſe of Pilgrimage, and laid downe that of his Legantie Office: and getting cloſely to Douer, thought to haue ſtolne ouer Sea in a Womans Habit. Wayting on the ſhoare for paſſage, a Mariner was ſomewhat homely with him, and found him as arrant a man as himſelfe, by the teſtimonie of his Breeches. Hee calls in company, and women would needs buy of him his piece of cloth, which hee had taken to cloke his Sexe and buſineſſe: but he vnderſtanding no Engliſh, could ſay nothing, whereupon they remoued his Muffler, and found a Shaueling whom they dragged contumeliouſly alongſt the Strand, with cryes, buffets, ſpittings, and haling him thorow the ſtreets, impriſoned him in a Cellar; Who yet eſcaped by leauing his Oath to the Lord, and his Pledges (and his two Brethren) to the Lords, and gate ouer to Normandie.

K. Rich. winneth Darum.

Cauſe of King Richard his captiuitie.

Duke of Burg. treacherous.

King Richard beſieged the Caſtle Darum, the next of Chriſtendome towards Babylon, and wanne it. Soone after hee tooke a rich Carouan of Merchants guided by Saladines Souldiers, with ſeuen thouſand Camels richly laden. The Duke of Auſtria came about that time to performe his Vow in the Holy Land ſeruice, where a quarrell falling out betwixt his Harbengers, and a Norman of King Richards, the King inconſiderately, taking his mans part, cauſed the Dukes Colours to be caſt into a Iakes, which the Duke ſeeking to right, was further wronged with ſcoffes; whereupon the Duke ſeeing himſelfe contemned by the King, turning to the King of Kings inuoked him with teares to his reuenge, which after fell out accordingly. King Richard with his late gotten ſpoile would haue gone and laid ſiege to Ieruſalem, where the feare of his name and comming had alreadie terrified the Inhabitants. But this was hindred by the Duke of Burgundie, (enuying that Triumph to King Richard) counſelling the Templers, and French to his part. Saladine alſo with great gifts corrupted the Duke, ſending him by night fiue Camels laden with Gold, Siluer, Silkes, and other Riches. Whereupon the King conuincing him by witneſſe, called him Traytour, and hee returned from the King in diſpleaſure to Achon.

King Richards acts at Ioppe.

* Eightie Knights and foure hundred Croſſebow-men.

Newes came that Saladine beſieged Ioppe, and King Richard deſired the Duke to aſſiſt him in the Enterprize, which he refuſed and went the ſame night toward Tyrus, where he fell madde, and dyed miſerably. The King haſted to Ioppe by Sea, Saladine hauing already taken the Towne, the Souldiers were vpon deliuery of the Caſtle, when King Richard brake in amongſt them like a furious Lion, and chaſed the Saracens to Ramula. But hearing the next day of the Kings ſmall * numbers they returned, (for only three ſhips had arriued) Salaadine ſent ſixtie two thouſand to ſet vpon the King, which encompaſſed his Tents, and awakd him with their noiſe. He gate vpon his Horſe attended by eleuen others (they had no more till they had borrowed of the Saracens,) racens,) and beyond beliefe ſo laid about him, making way for the reſt, that they in the Towne alſo made out, and quited the field of them. This hapned on Lammas day. Salaadine in his rage ſent for an old Priſoner, whilome Prince of Antiochia, and asked him, What wouldſt thou doe if thou hadſt me in thy power as I now haue thee? Hee (adiured to tell the truth) ſaid, hee would cut off his head; which was his owne ſentence, and Salaadine himſelfe the Executioner. An Heremite told the King he ſhould not winne Ieruſalem, and gaue him a piece of the true Croſſe, as he ſaid. Whiles the King abode at Ioppe, ſeuen weekes, an infectious Diſeaſe ſeiſed on him, and the moſt of his, deadly to all in manner which had it, except the King. Seeing therefore the French alienated, and readie to returne, his monies ſpent, his men diminiſhed by warre and ſickneſſe, his Enemies increaſing daily; he determined to returne home for the reparation of his Purſe and force, concluding meane-while a Truce with the Pagans for three yeares. By Sea hee was incountred with a terrible Tempeſt, ſome drowned, others wracked, few attayning their deſired Port. This hapned in Autumne, whereas Salaadine dyed in the Lent following, and had they ſtayed, had facilitated their Deſignes; both by his death and the diſſentions which followed amongſt his ſonnes and followers. Hereunto was added the Conſpiracie of the Earle of Saint Giles, and all thoſe Princes by whom he was to paſſe: which made him purpoſe to returne by Germanie. He came to Gazara in Sclauonia; where ſome notice of him being taken, he with his ſmall company haſted away at mid-night: but a worſe and darker mid-night hapned. For with one man and a Boy which could ſpeake Dutch, he trauelled three dayes without eating or drinking: he came to Gynatia in Auſtria, and being ſuſpected by the Boyes change of Byzantines, and after by the Kings Gloues which vnawares he had carried vnder his Girdle, hee was beſet and yeelded himſelfe to the Duke, who committed him to ſtrait cuſtodie, and in the yeare 1193. ſold him to the Emperour for threeſcore thouſand pound of Siluer, Collen weight. Heere hee was againe impriſoned, and a ſtrong Gard ſet on him, with whom he made himſelfe merrie in ſports, making them drunke, trying of Maſteries, in all ſeeming Maſter of himſelfe and his hard fortunes. The Emperour would not admit him his preſence or ſpeech, and pretended many calumnies againſt him. At laſt, by mediation of friends he obtayned a hearing, eloquently cleered himſelfe of Imputations, and wonne much reſpect both of others and the Emperour Henry, who after vſed him more familiarly, and demanded one hundred and fortie thouſand Markes of Siluer for his ranſome. This was brought by the Kings Letter, and the Emperours Golden Bull into England by William Biſhop of Ely aforeſaid: and all Biſhoppes, Clergie-men, Earles, Barons, Abbots, Priors were aſſeſſed at a fourth part of their Rents, to ranſome the King. Alſo they ſold for that purpoſe their Chalices of Gold and Siluer. Iohn Biſhop of Norwich, thorow all his Dioceſſe tooke halfe the price of their Chalices and Goods. The Ciſtercian Order (free before from all Taxations) gaue all their Wooll to his Redemption. No Church, no Order, no Degree, or Sexe, was paſſed by, which was not hereto compelled: manifold Tempeſts, Inundations, and Winter Thunders hauing thorow that yeare fore-ſignified the ſame, cauſing alſo great ſcarſitie of Corne and Fruits.

His Armie diſeaſed.

His returne croſſed by a Tempeſt. His hard paſſage.

K. Richard taken by the D. of Auſtria, and ſold to the Emperour.

Miſeries which came to England, by this otherwiſe victorious and glorious Expedition, from the firſt to the laſt thereof.

King Richard being Priſoner, his Brother Iohn made compact with the French King, and ſought to be crowned in England, but the vertue of the Engliſh was more loyall. Philip the French King inuaded Normandie with a very great Armie, not ſparing Order, Age, Sexe, vſing no leſſe the Treaſon of King Richards Subiects corrupted by him. He beſieged Roan, but by the Earle of Leiſters Proweſſe and the Inhabitants valour, was repelled with ſhame.

French perfidie

Anno 1194. King Richard hauing paid the greateſt part of his Ranſome, and giuen Pledges for the reſt, arriued at Sandwich on the Sunday after Saint Georges day. Preſently he viſited Thomas Beckets Tombe, and was with Feſtiuall Solemnitie, receiued ſoone after at London. He haſted to Saint Edmunds to performe his Deuotions; and thence to Nottingham, againſt thoſe which had conſpired with his Brother Iohn, ſome of whom he ſuffered to redeeme themſelues, ſo to redeeme his Pledges, and to inuade the French which continued ſpoyling his Land with fire and ſword. The Sunday after Eaſter he ware his Crowne at Wincheſter. His Brother Iohn humbled himſelfe and the King receiued him to fauour. This was done in Normandie, where he purſued the warre againſt the French. He procured the Duke of Auſtria to bee excommunicated by the Pope, and his Land to be interdicted: whoſe Land was further ſmitten with Famine and Peſtilence, and the Inundation of the Danow, which drowned ten thouſand men: himſelfe alſo falling off his Horſe, his legge was incurably hurt, which beeing cut off, yet the paine continued and killed him, before beeing penitent, abſolued, and abſoluing King Richards Pledges.

King Richards returne.

Duke of Auſtrias death.

Indulgences.

Anno 1195. Pope Cæleſtine writ to Hubert, Archbiſhop of Canterburie, and to the Biſhops of England to preach the Croſſe, Giuing Indulgences to thoſe which vndertooke it, the Remiſſion of impoſed Penance by the Prieſt, as his Predeceſſors had done; namely, that they which with a contrite heart ſhall vndertake this expedition, and for the Penance of their ſinnes; if they depart in the Faith, ſhall obtaine full Indulgence of their crimes and life eternall. Alſo their goods and families, after they haue taken the Croſſe, ſhall be vnder the protection of the Romane Church, and of the Biſhops and Prelates. And nothing which they then at their croſſing did quietly poſſeſſe ſhould be called in queſtion, but till

Interdict.
King Richards death.
France interdicted.

till their returne or death ſhould remaine quiet: Others which miniſter of their goods, ſhall obtaine Indulgence according to the Prelats moderation. Hee exhorted him to be inſtant in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon, going about the Prouince, King Richard and the French came to agreement, but the Archbiſhop of Roan interdicted all Normandie, becauſe of a Caſtle which King Richard there fortified againſt his will. Anno 1199. King Richard died, and Iohn his Brother ſucceeded. The ſame yeare the Kingdome of France was interdicted by the Popes Legat, for the taking of the Elect of Cambray priſoner, who was freed before the ſentence could. Hee came alſo to the King of England, threatning like interdict, if the Biſhop Beluacenſis were not deliuered, whom yet becauſe he was taken in Armes, he diſmiſſed not without his ranſome.

Reuelations.

Anno 1200. an Epiſtle from Heauen was ſent for the keeping of the Sunday or Lords day, from the ninth houre on Saturday, till Munday Sunne riſing, which the Pope approued, and ſent Preachers thorow diuers parts of the world, Euſtace Abbot of Flay comming from him into England for that cauſe. (But of viſions the Stories of theſe times are full.)

Councell of Lateran.

In the yeare 1215. was holden the great Councell of Lateran, in which after other things, the affaires of the holy Land were propounded. We will and command (they are the words of the Pope) that Patriarchs, Arch-biſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, and others, which haue cure of ſoules, doe preach ſtudiouſly the word of the Croſſe, beſeeching by the Father, Sonne and holy Ghoſt, one onely true and eternall God, Kings, Dukes, Princes, Marqueſſes, Earles, and Barons, and other Nobles, and the Communalties of Cities, Villages and Townes, that if they goe not perſonally, they will ſend a ſufficient number of Warriours with expences for three yeares, for the remiſſion of their ſinnes, &c. If any refuſe, let them proteſt to them on our behalfe, that they ſhall anſwer this at the dreadfull Iudgement of the iuſt Iudge, &c. And we define that all which ſhall haue taken the Croſſe, ſhall be vnder Saint Peters protection and ours, and vnder the Arch-biſhops, Biſhops, and Prelats of the Church, and all their goods, &c. as before.

§. III.

Proſecution of the Holy Land Warres: Engliſh Nobles croſſed: RICHARD Earle of Cornwall his Acts there: WILLIAM DE LONGA SPATA, and other Engliſh-men. King or Saint LEVVIS of France his doings and ſufferings: Prince EDVVARD.

* Euery Eaſter was a generall paſſage.

* Incredible tales of the Croſſe, in that credulous age receiued. The croſſe of Chriſt was fruitfull and bare many others, or elſe fancie is mad, which beleeued a Syrian for the ſame before by reuelation, and now another lye.

Croſſes in the Ayre.

THE truce being expired in the firſt generall paſſage * after the Councell of Laterane, the Chriſtian Armie was aſſembled in Achon, with the three Kings of Ieruſalem, Hungarie, and Cyprus, the Dukes of Auſtria and Morauia, and great Forces of the King of Germanie, with many Arch-biſhops, Earles, Gentlemen. The Patriarch of Ieruſalem tooke vp the Croſſe (which had beene hidden * till this time, it being before, as ſome ſay, diuided, and the one part loſt, as you haue heard, and now this other part ſucceeded) and the Chriſtian Armie in the Vigill of Saint Martin, waſhed themſelues in Iordan, and hauing viſited the holy places, returned to Achon. The King of Hungarie ſoone after departed to the great detriment of the holy Land, being requeſted to the contrary by the Patriarch. But away he went excommunicate with his followers, carrying with him Pilgrimes, Gallies, Horſes, Armes. Others cowardly abode in Achon, a ſinfull Citie, and full of all vncleanneſſe: the King of Ieruſalem and Duke of Auſtria, Hoſpitalars, and others, fortified the Caſtle of Caſarea. The Templers and Hoſpitulars of the Dutch houſe, fortified the Caſtle of the Pilgrimes. In Bebon of Friſland appeared a white Croſſe in the ayre towards the North, another toward the South, a third particoloured, in the midſt, with the forme of a Crucified man. Other Croſſes after appeared, whereby the Prouince of Collen was prouoked to the holy Land ſeruice. Theſe with the Friſlanders prouided three hundred ſhips, made with great care, which in the way came to Liſbon: and their diſſention diuided them, ſome ſtaying with William Duke of Holland, in the ſiege of Alchacia a Mooriſh Caſtle, where they wan a great battell againſt the Moores, and ſlue one of their Kings, after that taking the Caſtle alſo.

Damiata beſieged.
Ieruſalem razed

Engliſh Noblemen in ſeruice of the Croſſe.

Anno 1218. The Chriſtian Nauie paſſed from Achon to Damiata, and beſieged it, where after great loſſe of their owne they tooke a Tower. Saphidine Sonne and Succeſſour of Saladine (by the murther of his Bretheren) died, and Coradine his Sonne razed Ieruſalem, making the Walls and Turrets rude heapes, and leauing nothing but the Temple and Tower of Dauid in reuenge of the ſiege of Damiata. The next paſſage brought many Pilgrimes from diuers parts of the world, with the Popes Legat, Ranulph Earle of Cheſter, Saer Earle of Wincheſter, and William Earle of Arundell, Robert Fitz Walter, John Conſtable of Cheſter, William de Harecourt, Barons, and Oliuer the King of England Sonne, with many others. Many loſt their liues on both ſides, and by inundation of the Sea and Riuer, brought new prouiſions of vnwelcome Fiſhes into their Tents, and did much harme, carrying their workes to the other ſide, the water betraying them to the fire. A grieuous diſeaſe, for which the Phyſicians knew no remedie, infeſted the Campe, (by the deſcription it ſeemeth the Scorbute) which killed many. Many conflicts on both ſides ſwept away many. Damiata was in this long ſiege aſſaulted with Sword, Famine, Peſtilence. Nilus refuſing this yeare to viſite a great part of Egypt, made the Soldan to feare a Famine, and in theſe ſtraits hee offered the true Croſſe, which Saladine had taken and all the Kingdome of Ieruſalem, and to repaire the ruines of the razed Citie, and reſtauration of Captiues, (onely he would hold Crac and Mount Royall, paying twelue thouſand Byzantines yeerly tribute, for the Carauans ſecuritie which trauell to Mecca) if they would leaue Damiata. The Princes liked it, the Clergie refuſed, and on the ſeuenth of Nouember, the Chriſtian Armie tooke it, without reſiſtance, it hauing beene a buriall place of her Inhabitants, and now ſtinking like a Graue, the ſtreets and houſes being ſtrewed with carkaſſes, eightie thouſand had dyed therein during the ſiege, beſides three thouſand which they found yet remaining. The ſpoyle thereof was very great, and equally ſhared where theeuery preuented not.

Damiata taken

After Damiata taken, the next paſſage came ſo many Pilgrimes, that Taphnis Caſtle was taken, and both fortified. The Soldan tooke the Caſtle of Caſarea, and did much hurt to Achon and Tyrus. Anno 1222. Philip de Albeneio a ſtout Souldier, and the Maſter of King Henrie went to the Holy Land. Anno 1224. Baldwin Earle of Flanders returned, and was knowne and acknowledged of many. But his Daughter denyed him to be her Father, and procured him to bee hanged betwixt two old Dogges.

This Baldwin, with the Venetians, the Duke of Louaine, the Marqueſſe of Mount-Ferrat, Simon de Montfort, and others, intending the Holy Land, by opportunitie of Greeke combuſtions at Conſtantinople, tooke Iadera, beſieged Conſtantinople ſeuentie two daies, and tooke it, (being before fired) on the twelfth of Aprill, 1204. By common conſent Baldwin was elected Emperour: and the Greekes vpon that occaſion began another Empire at Trebezond. Baldwin by Venetian helpe conquered Thrace, and after the Greekes betaking themſelues to the King of Bulgaria, in a battell againſt him and the Scythians he was ſaid to be ſlaine, Anno 1206. the Scythians putting all Thrace to ſpoyle and ſword. Henrie, Baldwines Brother, was choſen to ſucceed, who ayded by the Marqueſſe, now King of Theſſaly, expelled thoſe Barbarians, and recorded the Countrey, and after eleuen yeares troubleſome reigne, died. Peter his Sonne-in-Law ſucceeded, who was treacherouſly ſlaine, and Robert his Sonne ſucceeded; whoſe Wife a beautifull Ladie in a tumult, was by a Burgundian (to whom ſhe had before beene betrothed) taken in the night, her noſe and eares cut off, her Mother throwne into the Sea; and her Husband then abſent, had his griefe ſo preſent, that he liued not long after, leauing a little Sonne Baldwin, the laſt Latine Emperour of Conſtantinople, affianced to Iohn of Brenne, whom Pope Innocent had made King of Ieruſalem: the Greeks eaſily recouering in that opportunitie. The firſt Baldwin thus reuiued, whether he were a counterfeit or no, is vncertaine. Certaine it is, that our Authour ſaith, all that were of counſaile to that his hanging, dyed an ill death. The laſt Baldwin ſought by helpe of Frankes and Engliſh, (for here he had large gifts) but in vaine to recouer that Empire.

Strange ſtory of Baldwine.
Greeke broiles. Conſtantinople taken by the Latines. See for this Knolls Turkiſh Hiſtorie.

Rufull report.

About this time great multitudes tooke the Croſſe thorow the world, inſomuch that of the Kingdome of England onely, ſixtie thouſand and more ſufficient men, beſides women and old folkes, tooke the Croſſe; Maſter Hubert teſtifying, that he (being a Preacher of the Croſſe) had ſo many in his Catalogue. On Mid-ſomer night, the Lord appeared in the Firmament, in crucified forme and bloudy, to ſhew (ſaith our Author) how acceptable that deuotion was to him. This was ſeene neere Vxbridge by a Fiſh-monger. Peter Biſhop of Wincheſter, and William Biſhop of Exeter were two of theſe, which ſpent fiue yeares in that Pilgrimage. Friderike the Emperour tooke ſhipping toward the Holy Land to performe his vow, but returned, pretending ſickneſſe, ſo that fortie thouſand men which waited his comming that paſſage, returned fruſtrate to their homes, and many to their long home. Whereupon Pope Gregorie excommunicated him. He by publike writings purged himſelfe, and great broyles enſued. The Romans expelled the Pope out of their Citie to Viterbium, and thence to Peruſium, hee hauing no other weapon of reuenge but excommunication. The ſame time, the Earle of Tholouſe had a great victorie againſt the Cruſado Armie, which the Pope had with like Indulgence to that of the Holy Land, excited to warre againſt him and the Albigenſes, (which for denying the Papacy were condemned Heretickes.) Frederike yet made beſt ſpeed to the Holy Land; where the Clergie, becauſe the Pope had excommunicated him, counſelled him to reconciliation, and would not communicate with him. But the Templers and Hoſpitalars receiued him with reuerence. The Soldan ſent him rich preſents. Pope Gregorie in his abſence raiſed warres by Iohn de Brennes, King of Ieruſalem, which out of France and other parts, gathered a great Armie and inuaded, helped by the Popes Forces, the Emperours Dominions. The Soldan troubled with ciuill broiles, reſtored to Fredericke all the Holy Land, ſo that he entred Ieruſalem with his Armie, and they purified the Holy Citie, but the Clergie would not communicate with the Emperour. Maſter Walter, a Frier Preacher, an Engliſh-man, which had done great ſeruice for the Croſſe, appointed by the Pope to that Office, ſaid Maſſe: and the Clergie was reſtored to their Quondam poſſeſſions. The Sixty thouſand Engliſh take the Croſſe, beſides old men and women.

Frederike the ſecond excommunicated.

Albigenſes and Cruſſados.

Popes Acts.

Walter, an Engliſh-man.

Emperour

A Turke more faithfull then Popiſh Templars and Hoſpitalars.

Popes tenths.

M. Par. ſaith, that this puiſſant Emperour at once maintayned ſixe armies in ſeuerall places.

Emperour intending to goe to Iordan after the cuſtome, the Templars and Hoſpitalars treacherouſly gaue intelligence to the Soldan, that he might intrap him: partly enuying his ſucceſſe, loth any ſhould there haue honor but themſelues; and partly, becauſe they heard that the Pope had inuaded his Territories. The Soldan abhorring ſuch perfidie, ſent their Letter to Fredericke, and laid open that helliſh myſterie. Hence aroſe grudges, and the Templars and Hoſpitalars drew the Patriarke into their conſpiracie, which publiſhed a Letter diffamatorie againſt him. Pope Gregorie exacted tenths for the maintenance of thoſe his warres againſt the Emperour, thorow England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, which were rigorouſly, vnder paine of Interdiction and Excommunication exacted, not as the twentieth before to the King, but as might beſt be for the Popes aduantage, and the people forced to pay it before hand, euen for the crops on the ground. The Prelates ſold their Ornaments and Church plate for expedition, and Stephen the Popes Procurator, hauing Vſurers attending like Rauens, ſaue that they preyed on the liuing. All this notwithſtanding, the Emperour returning, ſoone recouered that which the Pope and his King Iohn had taken, and ſome compoſition was made betwixt them. Pope Gregorie ſent Preachers, and writ to excite men to the holy Warre, and ſent others for money to releaſe thoſe vowes, Nec ſciri poterat in quam abyſſum tanta pecunia quæ per Papales Procuratores colligebatur eſt demerſa. Vnde negotium Terra Sanctæ nunquam fœlix, &c. He after excommunicated him againe, and choſe another Emperour, abſoluing his Subiects, perſwading them to be faithfull in infidelitie. But the wickedneſſe of the Roman Church deſerued that the Popes authoritie was not receiued: he addeth of it, Depoſito rubore velut meretrix vulgaris & effrons omnibus venalis & expoſita, vſuram pro paruo, ſimoniam pro nullo, &c.

Manner of preaching the Croſſe.

Engliſh Nobles take the croſſe.

Sale of vowes is ſo common, that I forbeare to follow the Author his often mention.

The Truce betwixt the Emperor and the Soldan expiring, the Pope ſent and writ againe, granting Indulgences as before, and freeing from Vſuries, employing the Preaching Friars and Minors in this Croſſe buſineſſe, who by the Popes Mandate, were attended by the Archdeacons and Deanes, which in euery place cauſed the Pariſhioners, men and women to aſſemble, not one vnder paine of excommunication, being abſent. Many Noblemen of England tooke the Croſſe, Earle Richard the Kings brother, Earle G. Marſhall, Earle Iohn of Cheſter, the Earle of Salisburie and his brother, and many other honorable perſonages. Earle Richard made ſale of his woods, and of whatſoeuer he could for that prouiſion. But the Preachers preaching the ſame Indulgences to them, which gaue ſo much money as would beare the charges, hindred mens deuotions. For this proued a common and vſuall courſe, to exchange vowes for money. Aboue one hundred Knights Templers were ſoone after ſlaine in a battell with the Turkes, beſides other multitudes, Anno 1238.

Battell of Gaza.

Earle Rich. his acts.

Templars pride.

Many croſſed Nobles were aſſembled at Lions, to goe to the Holy Land, when a Meſſenger from the Pope forbad them to proceed; notwithſtanding, that was the place and time appointed by his Preachers, and that they had ſold and pawned their goods and lands for that Expedition. Many returned home diſcontent: Many held on their way. Anno 1240. Earle Richard and the other Engliſh Nobles, tooke leaue to ſet forth on their Holy voyage. That yeere, the Chriſtians not agreeing in the Holy Land, ſuſtayned great loſſe, innumerable being ſlaine and taken. Earle Richard paſſed on his way into France, and was by the Popes Legat forbidden to proceed, who anſwered, that he had prouided his Ships, Moneys, Armes, and deteſting the double dealing of the Roman Church, committed himſelfe to the Sea. The Soldan of Damaſco gaue the Chriſtians all which they challenged beyond Iordan, to helpe him againſt the Egyptian. Earle Richard came to Achon a little after Michaelmas, where he was receiued with all ſolemne ſignifications of ioy. The third day after his comming, he cauſed Proclamation to be made, that no Chriſtian Pilgrime ſhould depart home for want of money, for he would entertayne them in his pay. He writ thence of the great Schiſme and miſchiefe thereon attending, complayning of the Pope: the King of Nauarre and Earle of Britaine, were gone fifteene dayes before his comming: Truce was concluded by him with the Soldan, many Places and Priſoners ſurrendred vnto him, which he there in his Letter particularly nameth. Further, that he and the Chriſtians fortified Aſcalon Caſtle with two Walls and high Towers, to preuent the worſt, if the Saracens ſhould violate the Truce. Hauing receiued on Saint Georges day all the Priſoners, hee returned homewards and landed at Trapes in Sicilia, and hearing of the captiuitie of certayne Biſhops, he went to Rome. He cauſed alſo the diſperſed bones, of thoſe which had beene ſlaine in the diſmall battell of Gaza to be buried. The Emperor receiued him honorably, hauing married his ſiſter Izabel, daughter of king Iohn. He was welcommed into England by the King his brother, in Februarie, 1242. The French Nobilitie much honored him as their Patron, for deliuerie of their priſoners. The Pilgrimes departing after Earle Richard, the Templars enuying, ſcoffed and derided his acts, and brake the Truce which he had made, which the Hoſpitalars obſerued, whom therefore the Templars beſieged in Achon, chaſing alſo the Dutch Knights, turning the great Reuenues againſt Chriſtians, which were giuen againſt Saracens. This diſſention continued betwixt them with great ſcandall. It hapned that the Tartarian Deluge, hauing then ouer-flowed the Eaſterne World, and ouer-whelmed Perſia, the Choroſmines by them expelled and forced to ſhift, were entertayned by the Soldan of Babylon, and promiſed, if they could driue out the Chriſtians, that they ſhould poſſeſſe their Countrey. Whoſe multitudes ſo terrified the Chriſtians, that they conſulted to remoue all the Inhabitants of Ieruſalem to Ioppe, and began in the night to performe it. The Coroſmines entring, found certayne Banners, which they erecting, ſome Chriſtians called backe their fellowes, as if ſome notable triumph had hapned to the Chriſtians, which returned either into the Citie or Suburbs, where the enemie preſently aſſaulting them ſlue ſeuen thouſand. The yong Men and Maydens they made ſlaues. They entred the Holy Citie, and ſlue the old and feeble perſons (which had not gone forth, but fled to the Sepulchre for Sanctuarie) and Nunnes. The Chriſtian Souldierie ſought to reuenge it, fighting with them a bloudie battell till night, loſing innumerable, yet killing many more. On Saint Lukes day, with the generall power of the Holy Land aſſembled to the Patriarke, they fought againſt them, now ſtrengthned with new ſupplyes from the Soldan, where the beſt was, that they ſold their liues at a deare and bloudie rate, more periſhing of the Infidels, but the Chriſtians loſing almoſt all. The Maſter of the Templars, and the Maſter of the Hoſpitalars and Dutch knights fell, and but eighteene Templars and ſixteene Hoſpitalars eſcaped. The number of the ſlaine was ineſtimable on both ſides. The whole Land put on irrecouerable confuſion.

Choroſmines.

Ieruſalem taken.

Bloudie ſlaughter.

And although Pope Innocent, at the Councell of Lions, ſeemed zealous of this quarrell, yet that other quarrell to the Emperour more poſſeſſed him; and the Councell withſtood him to his face, taking authoritie to appoint Collectors for that Subſidie, whereof the Roman Court had beene ſo often, ſo fraudulent a Disburſer. The French King lately ſicke, had vowed a Holy Land voyage, if he recouered, whom almoſt all the Nobilitie followed. But the Pope proſecuting the Emperor, and cauſing a new to be choſen, little ſuccour could be ſent them, ſo that many deſpayring, became Apoſtata's. The Soldan himſelfe deteſted, and openly proteſted againſt the Templars and the Pope. The Biſhop of Worceſter, William de Longa Spata, and many Nobles of England, in imitation of the French, tooke the Croſſe. This William imitated Earle Richard, who couenanting with the Pope got great treaſures, by diſpenſing with that Holy Land vow, deſired the Pope to grant him fauour in that kind, which hee did, cutting a large thong of anothers hide. The Earle gathered infinite ſummes by the Popes grant, taking of one Archdeacon ſixe hundred pounds, and William got aboue one thouſand markes. King Henrie with great deuotion carried ſome of the bloud, ſent him from the Holy Land in a Cryſtall veſſell, pretended to be that of Chriſt, from Paules to Weſtminſter.

King Lewys his vow.

W. de Longa Spata, and many Engliſh pilgrims.

Relikes, the beſt Holy Land wares.

Anno 1248. the Earle of Leiſter tooke the Croſſe to expiate his ſinne, in marriage of her which had vowed chaſtitie. His wife and many Nobles and Knights, followed the example. The French King began his iourney, firſt ſeeking in vaine, to reconcile the Pope to the Emperour. Hee tooke ſhip and left many behind, which returned and were diſpenſed with by the Pope then at Lions, giuing him their prouiſions, and emptying their purſes. William Longſpate followed with two hundred Horſe-men, whom the French King kindly entertayned, and beſought the French to lay aſide their wonted enuie to the Engliſh.

Earle of Leiſter croſſed.

Anno 1250. King Henrie tooke the Croſſe of the Archbiſhop, and the Archbiſhop himſelfe, the Kings brother William de Valentia, and many Courtiers; the Abbot of Burie, and many other followed: ſome being of opinion, that the King did this but for a colour to get money. Fiue hundred Knights, and innumerable croſſed people met at Bermundſey (hauing ſold or morgaged their Lands and Goods, and inuolued themſelues in vſuries for the Holy Land buſineſſe) to conſult of their vowed voyage, intending ſo to ſerue the King of Heauen, howſoeuer their earthly King ſtood affected. Which to preuent, he procured the Popes Letter by money to ſuſpend their iourney till himſelfe went. The French beſieged, and were beſieged at Damiata by the Soldan, and Scarſitie, where many periſhed by Famine and Sword, and many ran to the Enemie and became Apoſtataes. The French alſo were enuious to the Engliſh and William Longſpat, hauing taken fortunately a rich Carauan with Camels, Mules, Aſſes, laden with Silkes, Spices, Gold and Siluer, and other riches and prouiſions, ſlaying and captiuing the men; the French quarrelled hereat, and tooke his purchaſe from him, the Earle of Artois the Kings brother being herein chiefe, which the French King not daring to remedie, hee left him and went to Achon. The French tooke Damiata, and the Soldan offered all the Holy Land and great treaſures for the reſtitution. But they choſe rather to remoue towards Cairo, and the Earle of Artois proudly obiecting to the Templars their pride, and calling W. Longſpat (then returned) tayled cowardly Engliſh, ſaying, that the Armie would doe well if it were cleanſed of tayles and tayled (this hee ſpake vpon occaſion of wiſe counſell giuen him by the former.) William anſwered, We ſhall be this day, where I beleeue, you will not come neere my Horſes tayle: which alſo hapned, the Earle being drowned in flight, and William brauely dying in fight, ſtanding to it when he had no legs to ſtand on (they being cut off) to a miracle of reſolution, and commending his valiant ſoule to the Heauens, hauing firſt ſent many Saracens to Hell. This was the iſſue of the others daring temeritie and pride. Of all the Armie preſent, two Templars onely, one Hoſpitalar, and a baſe perſon eſcaped. The King was behind with the reſt of the Armie, who made another as vnfortunate a battell, in which himſelfe was taken, his Armie almoſt all ſlaine or taken. The Soldan laboured that none ſhould carrie this newes to Damiata, which yet was done by Alexander Giffard, an Henry the third takes the Croſſe.

Engliſh acts.

Damiata taken.

W. Longſpats honourable death.

Al. Giffard.

Damiata giuen vp.

Engliſh man, hauing receiued fiue wounds in the attempt. But Damiata was deliuered in exchange of the King: the Soldan commanding the Chriſtians to bee beheaded which ſtayed behind, and their Nauie to be burned.

Mill-ſtone compact.

Baſe exaction.

Pope accuſed.

Guido, halfe brother to King Henry.

Soone after, the King of Caſtile, tooke the Croſſe, hauing conquered thirteene dayes iourney vpon the Saracens, thinking it better to get the Holy Land from them then any other. But the rapines and ſpoiles which the poorer ſuſtayned from the great men, the Roman Church permitting, yea teaching, as often as they would goe to the Holy Land in pilgrimage, our Authour much lamenteth. And for the extortions of France, the French King ſaith, hee by permiſſion of the Roman Church, gathered a third yeeres tenth of the Clergie, on condition that the Pope, to maintayne his warres againſt Fredericke, might gather as much more. The King would not after permit this, though his owne were gathered by Papall Miniſters, that the Pope might hereby learne to how much his ſhare would ariſe. The Popes Exactor met by chance on the way a poore Prieſt, hauing a piece of bread giuen him for ſprinkling of holy water, whom he asked what his Liuing might be worth by the yeere. The Prieſt (ignorant of Romiſh ſleights) anſwered, ſome twentie ſhillings. Two ſhillings then, ſaid the other, muſt thou giue the King, holding him, that begged his liuing from doore to doore by the throat, and forcing him to ſell his Bookes to pay him. The King borrowed money of the Templars and Hoſpitulars, ſent two of his brethren into France, one being ſlaine, another vanquiſhed, himſelfe reſoluing neuer to returne, and liuing at Achon inglorious. Thoſe two brethren with the Duke of Burgundie, went to the Pope, laying the blame on him, and if hee would not agree with Fredericke (which alone could remedie theſe miſchiefes) he ſhould no longer abide at Lions, but all France would ariſe againſt him. Fredericke by his death, inſtantly following, cut off thoſe hopes. The Quarrels dyed not, but continued hereditarie to the Pope and his Sonnes. Guido, King Henries brother, came out of the Holy Land beggerly miſerable, borrowing horſes of the Abbot of Feuerſham, which he neither repayed according to his promiſe, nor acknowledged ſo much as with thankes, but ſcoffed at his meſſengers ſent to demand them.

Deuilliſh ſtratagem of a iuggling knaue occaſioned by the ſuperſtition of that time.

A former knauerie.

The French Kings Mother and Brethren ſent much money to him by Sea, which with the ſhip was drowned, he bearing this as his other diſaſters with admirable patience, beeing herein eſteemed another Iob. At the ſame time a certain Hungarian Apoſtata, promiſed his Maſter the Soldan of Babylon, to preſent him infinite ſtore of Chriſtian ſlaues, and make the conqueſt of Chriſtendome eaſie. He therefore hauing the French, Dutch, and Latine Tongues goeth about preaching, ſaying, that he had in charge from the bleſſed Virgin to call Shepherds and Herdmen, to whoſe ſimplicitie and humilitie it was granted from Heauen to conquer the Holy Land. For the militarie pride of the Frankes was not acceptable. Hee wanne faith by the indiſſoluble cloſeneſſe of his hand, in which he ſaid was Our Ladies Charter. Shepherds and Herdmen without acquainting their Maſters and Parents, and without care of prouiſions followed him, vſing his Inchantment wherewith he had ſo farre preuailed fortie yeares before (hee was now threeſcore yeares old) gathering an infinite number of children together, which followed him ſinging, whom neither Prayers, Threats, Flatterie, Gifts of Parents or Friends, nor Lockes and Walls could detaine from him. (A certaine Iuggling Fryer Preacher, Robert Bugre, is ſaid to haue infatuated in like manner innumerable and deliuered them to the fire.) But theſe were now fauoured, by the Queene Mother, hoping that they would doe ſeruice for her Sonne, inſomnch, that aboue one hundred thouſand of this Rabble were aſſembled, and carryed a Lambe for their Colours. After this, Theeues, Exiles, Runna-wayes, Excommunicates, and like raskalitie reſorted to them with diuers Weapons, and now they did openly things vnlawfull in Politie and Religion, preaching where they came, and at Orleance breaking into open hoſtility, at Burdeaux, Paris, and other places, which occaſioned their diſperſion and confuſion. One of their Preachers came into England, and was here cut in pieces, his carkaſſe being left for the Fowles, hauing before cauſed much diſorder. Many of them went ouer to the Holy Land.

Greater Indulgence againſt Chriſtians then Turks, by Papall charitie.

Anno 1251. the Pope cauſed ſolemne preaching in Brabant, Flanders, and the Confines of France, that whoſoeuer would warre againſt Conrade the Sonne of Fredericke the Emperour, hee ſhould haue greater Indulgence then for warring in the Holy Land. For if any ſhould be ſigned (with the Croſſe) againſt Conrade, both he ſo marked, and his Father and Mother ſhould receiue remiſſion of all their ſinnes: which, the French King ſending for reliefe, cauſed much murmuring of the French, imputing to the Popes vnchriſtian Warres againſt Chriſtians to enlarge his owne Dominions, this neglect of the French King and Holy Land. And the Queene Mother cauſed the Lands of all which had taken the Croſſe to be ſeiſed, and that if they would warre for the Pope, he ſhould maintaine them.

Croſſes croſſed by Popiſh Extortion.

Anno 1252. the King cauſed the Londoners to be aſſembled to Weſtminſter, to the preaching of the Croſſe, which yet in regard of the Romiſh extorſions few receiued. Some Courtiers did, whom the King magnified, calling the other baſe Mercinaries. His reaſon was; hee had now obtayned of the Pope three yeares tenths of Clergie and Laitie to that purpoſe, which would amount to aboue ſixe hundred thouſand pounds. He was thought to haue taken the Croſſe only for this mony-purpoſe, which Vow hee then ſware to performe both on his breſt like a Prieſt, & after on the Goſpels kiſſing the Booke like a Lay-man, none being hereby more certaine of his purpoſe. Truce was concluded betwixt the French King and Soldan. But ſoone after, Anno 1253. came newes of miſerable ſpoiles there made by the Saracens, Achon beeing only left free from their furie. Anno 1254. the French King returned home. Anno 1255 Conrade being dead, the Croſſe was preached againſt Memfred King of Apulia, Sonne of the Emperour Fredericke. In which caſe the Pope intangled the King of England, giuing that Kingdome to his Sonne Edmund, to the great trouble of this Realme.

Clergie and Lay Oath.

Anno 1259. the Templars and Hoſpitalars at Achon fell to ciuill Warres, well neere to the ruine of both Orders, and of the poore remaynders in thoſe parts. Anno 1260. King Henrie hauing ſworne to the prouiſions of Oxford, repented of his Oath, and obtayned of the Pope Abſolution. Anno 1264. Pope Vrban gaue the Kingdome of Sicilia, to Charles the French Kings Brother, on condition to depriue Memfred thereof, whom Anno 1267. he ſlue in battell.

Pope maintaynes his Kingdome by Croſſes when he wants croſſes.

Anno 1269. Saint Lewes ſent to ſpeake with Prince Edward of England, and inuited him to vndertake with him a Pilgrimage to the Holy Land, which he did, King Henrie permitting all which would to goe with him.

King Lewis and Prince Edward Pilgrims.

Anno 1271. Prince Edward, and his Brother Edmund, foure Earles, as many Barons, and many Gentlemen, went his vowed Pilgrimage. His Wife Elenor accompanied him, who at Achon was deliuered of a Daughter, calld Ioan of Acres. The French King came ſafe to Tunis, where his Sonne firſt, and after himſelfe dyed. The Armie was much endangered, but by meanes of Charles King of Sicilia, was freed, and Tunis made tributarie to Sicilia. Prince Edward had followed Saint Lewis thither: and when King Charles haſted backe, Prince Edward ſware, that if all his company ſhould forſake him, yet he and Fowine (his Horſe-keeper) would hold on to Achon: and with the Engliſh he ſet ſaile thither. But a Tempeſt ouertooke the Sicilian at Sea, and drowned almoſt all his Armie and Treaſure.

Prince Edward and the Engliſh at Tunis, where K. Lewis dyeth

Anno 1272. Prince Edward at Abcon, was much reſpected by the Amira of Ioppe, who writ often to him by a certaine Aſſiſine. Who faining ſome ſecret buſineſſe, the Prince cauſed all to depart the roome, and whiles he looked out of the Window, with a poyſoned Knife he receiued two wounds on the arme: The Prince pulled the Knife from him, and killed him with his owne weapon, but withall in the wreſting, wounded his owne hand. This grieued much the Amira, being ignorant of the Aſſiſines deſigne. With much difficultie the Prince was cured of his venomous wounds.

Prince Edward ſtabbed with a poiſoned knife

King Edwad the firſt his returne and Turneament.

Thus farre we haue followed our Author Matthew Paris to the death of King Henrie, which hapned, Anno 1273. and the death in manner of the Chriſtian State in the Holy Land. Hee returned (which we adde out of Thomas Walſingham) 1274. hauing long in vaine expected the aids of Chriſtians and Tartars at Achon, leauing Souldiers in his pay for defence of the Holy Land. He returned by Sicilia, and receiued kind entertainment of King Charles, and after of the Pope. His Turneament I omit: wherein the Earle Kabilanenſis challenging him, laying hold on the Kings necke, and ſeeking to plucke him off his Horſe, was by the great ſtrength of Edward rayſed from his owne Horſe, and after a hot skirmiſh, forced to yeeld, that the name which had in this Voyage wanne honour in Africa, encreaſed it in Aſia, might receiue further accompliſhment in his Europæan returne.

Anno 1292. Achon was taken by the Soldan, the Citizens hauing ſent their vnſeruiceable perſons and relikes with their treaſures before to Cyprus. Great ſlaughter was committed. In the beginning of Edward the Second, the Templars were condemned, impriſoned, and ſome burned. The Hoſpitalars planted themſelues at Rhodes, and continued till Soliman the Turke diſpoſſeſſed them: ſince which their reſidence hath beene at Malta. The Dutch Knights conquered Pruſſia. The Acts of the Tartars in the Holy Land you may learne in others. It is more then enough that I haue ſummed the Acts of almoſt two hundred yeares, with ſuch expenſe of Chriſtian bloud and treaſure abroad and ſuch conuulſions and confuſions of Religion and ciuill Affaires at home as I know not to haue beene effected by any one particular cauſe ſince the World ſtood, the pretence being not the Monarchie of the World, but of a little Region, and that vnder colour of Religion. I honour the zeale and valorous reſolution of our Progenitors, but I pittie the illuſions and colluſions which hapned to thoſe Worthies by the Popes ſleights, and the malice of the old Serpent, which a little to vnmaske, would to the ſtudious Reader, perhaps be a recreation after theſe fields of bloud. Some particulars whereof wee haue out of Hiſtories of that Age deliuered: but the full cannot bee deliuered, as may appeare by this circumſtance, that beſides often, ſolemne, publike, Royall Expeditions, and the priuate occaſionall Pilgrimages to the Holy Land continually; there was euery yeare againſt Eaſter a generall paſſage both for deuout viſitation of the holy places and ſeruices in theſe holy Warres: which ſummes being added to theſe, amount aboue conceit; eſpecially, if wee adde the Cruſadoes which from this Example awed and tamed Emperors, Kings, Princes, States, Peoples, repugnant to the Popes deſignes, howſoeuer otherwiſe Catholike and Chriſtian. All this bloud was of Chriſtians, beſides the Riuers and Seas of Ethnike, (yet humane) bloud hereby ſhed; of Turkes, Ægyptians, Per-

Generale paſſagium yearly.

Perſians, Choroſmines, Tartars, and ſo many other Aſian and African Nations, not to mention the Chriſtians, Armenians, Syrians, and all the ſubiects of the Eaſterne Empire in this Warre ſo much intereſſed, by it weakned, after it irrecouerable, and now Turkiſh. But becauſe to paſſe from one extreme to another, and ſuddenly to diuert the minde from ſuch Martiall Actions and Paſſions to ſo high ſtudious contemplations, would rather be exchange of toyle then recreation (as in the interim betwixt turbulent Acts on the Stage) I haue preſented a Muſical Pilgrime, whoſe old Engliſh Rithmes may perhaps allay thoſe former conceits of cryes, ſhriekes, wounds, deaths, deſolations: and as when the Minſtrell played, the hand of the Lord came vpon Eliſha, and hee propheſied; ſo in reading this, which tels the holy wares ſo farre ſought, and ſo deere bought in theſe holy Warres, thou mayſt haue the hand of the Lord not only to guide thee from ſuch vanitie, but to lift thee to a higher pitch, and to make thee vnderſtand (or ſome way to apply) concealed Myſteries and darke Propheſies, which that myſtie Age, not ſeeing, fulfilled. The Author is vnknowne and his time: which yet is likely to haue beene about two hundred yeares ſince: Sir Robert Cottons rich Librarie hath yeelded the Manuſcript, whence it was copied.

2.Reg.3.15.

Chap. V.

Here beginneth the way that is marked, and made wit Mount Ioiez from the Lond of Engelond vnto Sent Iamez in Galis, and from thennez to Rome, and from thennez to Ieruſalem: and ſo againe into Engelond, and the namez of all the Citeez be their waie, and the maner of her gouernanuce, and namez of her ſiluer that they vſe be alle theſe waie.

IN the Name of the Fader that ſeteez in trone,
And of Ihu his oonly bleſſet Sone,
And of the Holy Goſt, this bleſſet Trinete,
And alſo of our Ladie S. Marie:
And of all the Seintez of the Court of Heuen,
I make this myndewit milde Steuen:
Wich waye I went I ſchall you telle,
And how be the waie I dide dwelle.
Ferſt to Plummouth to ſee went I,
And landet in the Trade of Bretany,
There we reſted daies too,
And thrugh the Race then did we go
To Burdewez, to that faire Citee:
And there was I daies thre.
And ſo from thennez to Bayon,
For ſo the that is a faire toune.
And from thennez to Petypont St. Ienouhe,
The ferſt toune of Naueron, ſicurly:
Vp in a hee hull hit is faire ſette,
And ther men ſchall make her tribett,
For euery pice of Gold truſt me well,
Thou ſchalt ſwere vpon the Euangele:
And there Iakkez ferſt moſt thou haue,
And the luſt thy Gold to ſaue.
Wymmenez araie vpon there bened,
Like to Myterez they ben wheed:
A raie Mantell they were vpon,
And foule wymmen mony oon.
Then to the Dale of Rounceuale hit is the waie,
A derk paſſage I der well ſaie:
Witelez there ben full neceſſary,
For in that paſſage my mouthe was dry.
Beyond the hull vpon hee,
Is a Mynſter of our Ladee:
Of Chanounez of the Order of St. Auſtyn,
And the well of Rouland, and Oliuer therein.
From thennez euen to Pampylon,
The chef Cite of the Reme of Naueron:
A faire Cite and a large,
Thereto commeth bothe Bote and Barge.
And from thennez to the toune of Keer,
Is xxx. miles long, and hongery heer.
Then to the Gruon in Spayne,
That is the laſt toune certaine,
Of the Realme of Naueron:
And then into Spayne feare ye ſchon,
Iakkez ben ther of little priſe:
For there beginneth the Maruediſez.
Alle is braſſe, ſiluer is none In,
And the Grote of Spayne is ſiluer fyn.
iiij. ſcore for a Coron ſchal thou haue,
Of the Maruediſe of maſter and knaue.
Then from the Grune to Sent Dominico
Thou haſt tenn long miles for to go.
And from thennez to Grunneole,
Much pyn men ther thoole.
Hit ſton vpon a hull on hyy,
And Iewez ben Lordez of all that contray.
Ther moſt thou tribute make or thou paſſe,
For alle thi gud bothe mor and laſſe:
Of that tribute they be full fayn;
For thei hyeer hit of the King of Spayn.
From thennez thou moſt to Pount Roie,
That paſſage ther hit kepeth a boie:
A gud contraie, and euell wyn,
And witelez ther ben bothe gud, and fyn.
And ſo farther to Pount Paradiſe.
At that paſſage thou moſt paie thriez.
And ſo forthe from thennez to Borkez that citee,
A faire toune and a muche ſicurly.

HONDIVS his Map of Spaine.

Septentrio
Meridies
Occidens
Oriens
Cantabricus Oceanus
GALICIA
ARRAGONIA
NAVARRA
VALENCIA
ANDALUSIA
Baleárides ſive Gymneſiae In.
Maiorca
Minorca
Yvica I.
Sucronicus ſinus
Callicitanus ſinus
Virgitanus ſinus
MARE MEDITERRANEUM
Ibericum Mare
Fretum Herculum
Pars Africae
Cabo de S. Vincent
Cabo de Gates
HISPANIA
Scala leucarum Hiſpanicarum

And from thennez to Hoſpitall de Reyne,
To paſſe that Riuer thou ſchalt be fayne.
And ſo forthe to Sent Antony:
And euer ther gothe the Maruedy.
From thennez euen to the cite of Lyones:
Betweene hem ben mony praty tounez.
In that cite ther ſchalt thou paie
Paſſage or thou goe awaie.
By younde the Brugge on thi right hand,
To Sent Saluator the waie is liggand,
Where ij. pottez may thou ſe,
In the wiche water turnet to vyn at Architriclyne.
And mony other reliquez ben there,
But the mountez ben wonder he, & fere.
Wymmen in that Land vſe no vullen,
But alle in lether be thei wounden:
And her heuedez wonderly ben truſt,
Standing in her forhemed as a creſt,
In rowld clouthez lappet alle be forn
Like to the prikke of a N'unicorn.
And men haue doubelettez full ſchert,
Bare legget and light to ſtert.
A Knight, a boie wit out hoſe,
A ſqwyer alſo thei ſchull not loſe.
A Knaue bere iij. dartez in his hand;
And ſo thei ſchull go walkand:
Here wyn is theke as any blode,
And that wull make men wode.
Bedding ther is nothing faire,
Mony pilgrimez hit doth apaire:
Tabelez vſe thei non of to ete,
But on the bare flore they make her ſete:
And ſo they ſitte alle in fere,
As in Irlande the ſame manere.
Then from the citee of Lyonz ſo fre,
On thi lyft hand the waie ſchalt thou ſee,
At that Brugge that I of haue ſaide,
Ouer an heethe to Aſtergo is layde.
That is a cite and faire is ſette,
There the gret mountaines togeder be mette:
And ſo forthe to Villa Frank ſchalt thou go,
A faire contraye, and vinez alſo.
The Raſpis groeth ther in thi waie.
Yf thee luſt thou maie aſaie.
From thennez a deepe dale ſchalt thou haue,
Vp vnto the Mouut of Faue:
He hullez, and of the Spanyſe ſee a cry:
That noyſe is full greuoſe pardy.

And ſo forth euen to Sent Iamez,
Alle waie Pylgrimez ſuche hauez,
And then to Mount noſtre Daine,
The Prior ther hath muche ſchame.
And then ſo forthe to Luaon,
Other Villagez ther be mony oon.
And then to Sent Iamez that holy place;
There maie thou fynde full faire grace.
On this ſide the toune milez too,
By a Chappell ſchalt thou go :
Vpon a hull hit ſtondez on hee,
Wher Sent Iamez ferſt ſchalt thou ſee,
A Mount, Ioie mony ſtonez there ate,
And iiij. pilerez of ſton of gret aſtate :
A C. daiez of pardon there may thou haue
At that Chappell, and thou hit craue.
Then at Sent Iamez wit in that place,
To telle the pardon hit askes ſpace.
Hit is a gret Mynſtor, large, and long,
Of the holdbegging hit is ſtrong:
Glaſon windowez there are but few,
Wit in the Mynſtor in nowther rew :
Viij. Cardinalez choſen there be,
For Confeſſourez, that is verry,
And haue plaine power fully to here,
And penaunce to yef in alle manerd:
And to aſſoyle the of alle thing,
That is the Popys graunting.
Now of the pardon telle I ſhall,
In what place thou maie it calle :
At the Northe ſide of that place,
There is pardon and muche faire grace.
In the Chappell on the rizt hand among the gueſt,
iij. C. daiez of pardon thou haueſt.
Forthermore at the hee antere
A iij. daiez alle time in the yere.
Vnder the hee autere lithe Sent Iame,
The table in the Quere telleth the name :
At alle the auterez ſo by and by,
xl. daiez to pardon is grantet to the.
At the iij. derrez benethe the Quere,
Is plenor remiſſion onez in the yere :
And at alle tymes xl. daies,
The table written ſo hit ſaies.
On the Southe ſide behinde the Derre,
A grete of ſton fyndeſt thou there :
At nine of the Bele the Derre vp is ſett,
And a Bele rongen a gret fet.
Ther men maie ſe of Sent Iame the leſſe,
His heed in Gold araied freche :
To the wiche Pilgrymez her offeryng make,
For the more Sent Iamez ſake.
And there by a nauter there is,
Wher Sent Iame, dud Maſe yuis,
A iij. daies ther maie thou haue,
Of remiſſion, and thou hit craue.
More pardon is nonzt in that place
That in that table mynde haſe.
Then from thennez to Patrovum,
Wher Sent Loudet the ferſt toun
iiij. xx. myles longs from Sent Iamez,
Coron ne vin non men there hauez.
And then to Pont Wederez went I,
L. long miles; that waie is dry :

Iewes and Saraſynez ben there mony on,
A plentifull contraye as man maie gon.
From thennes a vale faire, and clere,
Where wynez groethe of all manere,
Unto the toun of Corpe Sante,
Alle manere fruyte at man maie haunt.
The See cometh thether at alle tide,
And fiſth, and coron on alle ſide.
Wymmen be araied like to men,
Men maie nouzt well nouther ken :
There thei life vn gudely,
Namely men of holy Chirche pardy.
And Bugell fleſch is there full rive,
In alle that contraie hit is ther lif :
And Corpe Sant is the laſt toun,
In Galiſe, and ſtondeth the See vpon.
Then into Portyngale, and I faire
Ouer the Riuer wit gret care :
For ther the Spaynyolez wull ye ſcherche,
Whether any Gold be in thi perche.
Then thi Maruediſe haue no takke,
The Riolez of Portyngale maken the lakke.
When thou comeſt to Valence toun,
The money of that Lond thou ſchalt ſee ſon.
And then ſo forth to Priutia,
And fro thennez to Ponylyme ſchalt thou ga.
And then forthe to Porta hauen,
A faire Cite, and that is the namen :
Oliue treez ther ſchalt thou fynde,
Alle the Lond full, that is the kind:
And ſigez felle wit out faile,
And alle maner plente of vitaile.
The araie of wymmen is wonder to ſee,
How thei be reuelet about the knee.
Of freſch ſiſth thei haue gret ſtore,
At euery place more, and more.
Then ſchalt thou paſſe to Colymbria,
And to Towrez a faire Cite alſo.
And ſo forthe to Sent Helena on hee,
That is a well faire Citee.
And from thennez to Frankeuile,
And ſo to Luſchebon is xiiij. mile,
A faire Cite, and a large,
Thether cometh ſchippez, hulkez, and barge:
That is a faire Vniuerſite,
And of vitellez gret plente.
And in Luſchebon verement
Lithe the holy Martur Sent Vincent.
Vij. mile ouer the water moſt thou gon,
To a toun that hight Kone,
And from Kone to Palmele,
A whilde waie hit is ſome dele.
And to Sent Owell, that is the waie,
To Landauere and Kauerell in the claie.
And to Mount Maior a Caſtell fre.
The chiefe of Portyngale it maie be.
A while contraie full of Lyngge,
Wit the I rede thou brede brynge.
From thennez to Riolez moſt thou faire,
To Eſtermore, that Land is bare.
And ſo to Borbe a litell Vilage,
And then to Eluez that gud ſtage :
The laſt toun of Portyngale to the See,
That departet Portyngale, and Caſtell free,

The Iewez ben Lords of that tovn,
And few chriſten men there come.
Now in to Caſtell ſchall we faire,
Ouer the Riuer, the land is bare,
Full of heeth and honger alſo,
And Saraſynez Gouernourez thereto.
At Baddeſhoſe we ſchall begin,
To enter Caſtelanez wit in.
And from thennez to Talevere,
At Luggebon that Cite is a faire riuer.
To Paralez then moſt thou draw,
And ſo to Mereda, that is the law.
Tovrez Iuliauez forezete we nonzt,
At Sent Petro her vittellez ar bonzt.
Martyn Santio a whilde waie is there,
Foreſtez, and whilde beſtez in fere:
Beres, and Wulfez, other beſtez mony on,
A perelez waie hit is to gon.
Then to Reyne ſo moſt thou ga,
Vnto the Cite of Mater Caliſea.
And then to Kanamare that faire place,
Of catel ther is plente, and that is grace:
The herdez lyn in the felde in Tentez of clothe;
To come to toun that is thann lothe.
From that Cite milez xxx. and to,
To Sent Marie Kadalupe moſt thou go:
A Pilgrimate bothe faire, and fre,
That Mynſtor is of our Ladie:
Of the Order of Sent Ierome the Doctor,
A maruelez ſight is in that Tour.
In wilderneſſe that place is ſette,
There groeth no coron, vin, ne brede:
By xxx. mile on euery ſide,
For whilde beſtez no man dar abide.
Then from that place to Waldepalatia,
And after that euen to Aſidera:
And then to Elecampanario,
From thennez to Quyntana alſo.
And then to the Cite of Salamea,
To Leſtaſeclez, and to Maggaela.
Alle the ſpicery that I man can mene,
In that land hit maie be ſene:
For Saraſynez and Morez be ther duellant,
And euer in her ſpicery thei be workant.
The Morez ben blake as any pikke,
And go alle meſt naket, no men like.
Bellrange that Cite, full hote is hee,
That know nō coude in that Contre.
Walekanale is a tovn full faire,
In Caiſſaile the Cite is gud aire.
And from thennez to Petroſe,
To the Cite of Kantelane before the noſe:
Ouer a narme of the Se moſt thou tee,
To Ciuyle graund, that is ſo fre.
A Paradiſe hit is to be hold
The frutez, vynez, and ſpicery, the I haue tolde.
Vpon the Hauen alle maner Marchandiſe,
And Karekez, and Schippez at alle deuiſe.
Don be the ſtreme ſo maie thou goo,
The Tovn of Sent Lucar de Baramedez to.
Vpon a hull hit ſtondeth full hee,
Froſt ne Snow there maie non be:
Europa that land men calle hit:
The bleſſet contrate that euer was ſet.
About hit Ylez mony oon,
I ſchall tham reken euerichon:
For I haue be ther, and ſayn them alle,
I ſchall you telle, how thei hem calle.
Porta hit is the ferſt place,
And Rota a nother Hauen, to the See it gaſe:
And Serethiez a Cite full faire,
But the Saraſanez hit don apaire.
That is the vntereſt Cite of that Lond
Toward the Saraſanez, I vnderſtand.
And Cordua on that other ſide,
Wit Saraſanez muche ſoro thei abide.
Wit in the Se a Cite of ſight,
The which in that land Calys hight,
From the lond milez fiſe,
There the Karekkez in Hauen do driue.
XX. daiez we reſted the Yles vpon,
Wit Karekkez to Ienne to haue gon:
And for enemyez be the Se were ſo ſtrong,
Therfore we tornet againe be lond,
Vnto the Reyme of Arogony:
And mony maruelez be the waie ſaie we.
Ferſt to Sent Marie de Serrat,
Mony a Pilgryme is wery ther ate,
A deſert place, and full of waaſte,
And mony man his ſtaf ther hath caſt.
From thennez thou ſchalt to Monſhow,
A faire Cite, and riche I trow.
Hullez and vailaiez mony ſchalt thou fynde,
The ſight ther of thenn maketh men blynde.
Litell coron, but craggez and ſtonez,
And that maketh Pylgrymez wery bonez.
Faire wymmen and of febull araie,
The Caſtelanez ar better I dar well ſaie:
For in Caſtell thei be araied comely,
Wit faire grownez full honeſtly:
And in Aragony thei araied be,
In raie cotez full vncomely.
A weddyng I ſaie in Monſhow tovn,
Alle the men and the wymmen then daunſyng in on:
iiij C. on a davnce I dar well ſaie,
From morn to euen all the daie.
Ther is but litell mete and drinke,
Be cauſe men luſt not for to ſwynke.
Then to Leide the Vniuerſite,
There is a plevntuoſe Contre.
Twyez harueſt ther thei haue,
And figez full gret, ſo God me ſaue.
Thei be like to a gret Wardon,
Blew, and faat, as any Bacon.
Ther groeth the Vyn men calle Tribian,
Garnadez ar and Oryngez mony an:
Vnto the come to Sent Pere de Mont,
Alle that waie the maie thann haunt.
And then to Sent Mari de Mount Serrat,
Pylgrymez that Mount thei hate.
Hit is full hee to clymbe vnto,
And the waie is ſtraite to and fro.
V. Croſſes of ſton ſchalt thou haue,
The v. Ioiez of our Lady ther in be graue.
A faire Mynſtor vpon hee,
That Chirche is of our Ladye.
Mony miraclez ther han ben wroght,
And mony Reliquez theder ben brought.

xv. milez vp ſchalt thou aſcende,
And as much donward er thou deſcende.
Taward the Cite of Barſilon,
For ſothe that is a faire toun:
The chef Cite of alle that lond,
And the gret See is ther euen at hond.
From thennez thou ſchalt to Perpynian,
And after to Salſo moſt thou gan.
And ſo forthe then to Narbon,
A faire Cite and well bygon.
And from thennz to Tour Sent Deniſe,
The laſt place of Aragony ywys.
Mount Pylerez that is a Vniuerſitie,
A faire place hit is ſecurly.
And ſo thennez fro to Caſtell Ryſe,
A ſchrewed toun at my deuiſe.
The Dolphyn is Lord of alle that lond,
And hath tham ſugget to his hond.
And from thennez to Auinion,
Is xy. laigez from toun to toun.
And begynneth Prouince full fre,
At the brugge of Auinion I telle the.
Then of Prouince that faire Contray,
Some what thereof I wull the ſaie.
In Dominion in that ſtonding,
The Pope hath a faire dwellyng:
A riole Palys, and well ydight,
Wit Towrez, and wyndowez full of light.
A mery Contray and a faire,
And alſo ther is full good aire.
From that Vniuerſite to Suſhee went I,
Taward Marie Magdaleyn ſicurly.
Ther liather Sent Marie Magdeleyn,
In the frere Prechourez this is certayn.
A faire Contraie hit is, and a clere,
And pepull of diuerſe manere.
At weddyng in that Contre,
Alle the folke of the toun there ſchull be:
And daunce alle the long daie,
Yong and olde, and make tham gaie.
In that Contraie when on is dede,
Thei heire weperez for wyn and brede:
To cryent, and make gret faire,
And rynde her benedez, and make hem bare:
And ſcratt ther facez, and make them blede,
And ſo thei walke thrugh alle the ſtrete.
And at the Meſſe at the ſacrynge,
Then make thei a foule howtynge.
And gon to the graue, and cryon hyy,
Out harrow why woldeſt thou dye:
Men wolde wene at thei were wode,
For thei make ſo foule a lode.
Then from that Contraie to Sent Antonee,
Ben xxx. longe laigez full ſicurlye.
A Mynſtor there is, a faire Abbay,
And there is his harom I dar well ſaie;
In Gold and Siluer araied full well,
And there is of his owne mantell.
To faire well in that Contraie hit is nede,
But the Siluer of that Contraie is alle the ſpede.
The grote of Prouince is ther alle maiſter,
The Kingez armez of Prouince hit doth ber.
Siluer hit is, boothe gud, and fyne,
Like to the armez of Godefrey Boleyne.
xvij. for a coron ſchalt thou haue,
That knoweth well bothe maiſter, and knaue.
From thennez thou ſchalt to Port Dawnton,
And after that, then to Sent Lyon.
Then ſchalt thou paſſe a feble waie,
Into the Mountanez be my faie.
Vnto the Cite of Mount Riall,
Hit is coueret with ſnew at alle.
A longe waie ſchalt thou fynd,
To the Mount of Cyneez er thou wynde.
Ferſt to the toun of Sent Iohan,
A whilde waie ther moſt thou gan.
Alle is ſnew alle tymez of the yere,
Wit ze thi witelez I rede the here.
When thou comeſt to that Mountayn
Aduiſe the well forth er thou gan.
For and the wynd blow, truſt me well,
Thou ſchalt haue payne on that hull:
Or thou come to that other ſide,
For the Mount is hee, large, and vide.
iiij. Mountez ther be, that I know well,
And wich thei be I ſchall the tell:
That be in the waie to Rome,
And mony Pilgrymez that waiez come.
The neſt Mount is Mount Bernard,
That waie is bothe long and hard.
By Sawoie the he waie is right,
That is a mery Countrie, and a light:
And the Dukez moneh is braſſe,
Roundez and mitez they be laſſe.
A nother Mount there is, the name Godarde,
And that is better then Mount Bernard:
For there men paſſe the Lake Luterne,
Taward Mount Godard, the waie to lerne:
And ſo to Belſon, and to Millayne,
And there ben Tuskennez, that money is tayn.
A nother Mount meſte comyn waie,
Is thrugh Almayn, as I you ſaie:
The Marchandez waie, men calle hit ſo,
Out of Engelond to Rome who that wull go.
Now then to Cyneez I wull torne agayn,
And tell forthe my iourney that I haue tayn.
To Heſpitale Sent Antony,
And ſo to Pynnerole that Cite fre.
Then comen the Quaterynez on ploce,
For the Duke of Millayn gouuernance there haſe.
Aud ſo forthe to Mount Rigall,
Then groeth wyn tribian in that vale.
And from thennez to Sauoune,
And ſo to Ienne that riall toun.
By the Riuer of Ienne ſchalt thou paſſe,
To Mount Ros, and Mount Vernage a paſe.
There groeth the Vernage vpon hee,
And the Blaffard is ther gud money.
Then ſchalt thou go to Gena,
And to Sarazan that Cite alſa.
From thennez to Pount Sent Petre,
And ſo to the toun of Luke, wit gud chere.
And then to Piſe that faire Cite,
And ſo to Florence a noubull Vniuerſite.
Ther gothe Quatereyn, and ike the grote,
And faire wymmen of mery note.
From thennez to Sene, that Siluer is gud,
And there to chaunge hit the be houed.

And ſo then forthe to Sent Clerico,
And after to Rede Cofer ſchalt thou go.
After that nexſt to Aquapedant,
And right to Bolſen leſt thou be ſchent.
From thennez euen to Mount Flaſtkon,
And ſo to Viteherbe that faire toun.
And thenne to Caſtell Sent Laurence:
And ſo to Sowterez in Lence.
From thennez to Caſtell Suſanne,
And ſo to Rome that bleſſet toun.
The Duke of Troye that Eneas hight
To Rome he come wit gret myght.

Hondivs his Map of Italy.

ITALIA
Septent
Meridies
Occidens
Oriens
SLAVONIA
LOMBARDIA
Croatia
Bossena
GOLFO DI VENETIA
Mare Ligusticum
Corsica
MARE SARDONIUM
SARDINIA
MARE THIRRENUM
Mare Jonio
SICILIA
Abruzo
Capri
Ischia
Vstica
Palermo
Aethna monte
Milliaria Italica
29
31
33
35
37
39
41
43
45
46
44
42
40
38

Of him come Remus, and Romulus,
After hom callet is Riſe.
Hethen hit was, and chriſten nought,
Tille Peter and Paule had hit brought.
In Rome was ſome tyme I wene,
CCC. Pariſhe Chirchez and ſeuene:
Chapelez ther ben mony alſo,
ij C. and fiſe ther too.
About the wallez milez ij and xl.
And Towers a M. and ſixty.
iiij and xx. grete yatez ther be,
Principale ouer alle other in that Cite:
And in Tranſeibo ther ben thre,
And thre in Leone full ſicurly.
Thuſe partet I from Rome to Venys toun
After the feſt of our Lady Anunciation.
And bode there for my paſſage
To the holy Land I toke my viage.
De ciuitate Romana receſſi in comitiua
Domini Magiſtri Walteri Meddeford, vſq;
Venice, et ſic ad Terram Sanctam cum
Domino Priore Sancti Iohannis London, &c.
Then from Venis I ſchall you telle,
Wiche is the waie be water, and hull.
From Rome to Tode is lx. mile,
Vpon the Riuer of Tibere hit laſt a while.
And from thennez to the Vniuerſite of Peruſe
Is euen xl. long mile waiez.
And thenne to Aſſiſe, Sent Fraunceis is there,
Is x. mile in a valaie faire, and ciere.
And to Remule the Vniuerſite of honor
A man maie ſee mony a faire tour.
Thenn to the See paſſe he ſchall,
Unto Venis men do calle.
Ferſt to Frannkeleyn be the Riuer fre
The moſt to Venis the Cite.

Oſtryes the fynde be the Riuer mony oon,
Cordula is the ferſt of hem ichen.
xxv. mile hit is betwene,
By that ſtreme that runneth ſhene.
And ſo to Cholye thou moſt go,
That is xxv. long milez alſo.
From Cholye to Paleſtyne hit is,
v. long milez no thing leſſe.
And thenn to Malemoke went I,
The wich xiij. long milez by.
And thenn to Venis x. long mile hit is,
Alle thic waie I went I wis.
Aud Venis ſtondes alle in the See,
And Ylez about hit gret plente:
And Lordez thei ben of diuerſez placez,
To telle her Lordſchip I haue no ſpace:
But I dar bit ſo diſcry,
Hit is a riche Toun of ſpicery:
And of alle other marchandiſe alſo,
And right well vitelet ther to.
And namely of freche water fiſche,
Pike, Eile, Tenche, Carpe, I wis:
And of other vitelez mony oon,
And namely of freche Storgon.
Gud chepe, and gret plente,
And ſemely Burgez on to See.
I ſchipped me ther in a Galias,
That laie faſt by Sent Nicolas.
A n' Abbay in that Hauen mouthe,.
From Venis Eaſte, and ſomewhat Southe:
By eſtimation as I conthe ſee,
Too milez from that Cite.
How that we went, and on what viſez,
We were forward mor then thriez.
At the laſt, as Goddez wille vaſe,
Thei aualet the ſaile, and toke the raſe.
The ferſt Land at we come too,
Was a N'yle land, thei ſaid ſoo.
Wiche at men calle Iſtera,
And ther in our ſchippe gon gan:
Hem to refreſche thei were full fayn,
Be cauſe the wether was vs agayn.
What Tounez, and Caſtellez we ſailet by,
Of alle that Land telle ſchall I.
Pyrane a Caſtell, Vmago a Cite,
Cite Noue a nother is bee.
Parenter alſo a nother Cite hit is,
Vithall a Chapell, and a n' Abbay I wis.
Ryne a Cite ſom what full ſtrong,
And Pole a nother, large, and long.
Mony mo wit in that Land there be,
And Venycyanez Lordez of alle ſicurle,
Ther ben other mony be name,
But theſe we ſaw, and by them came.
Then ſailet we forthe full ſicurly,
Be the partiez of Sclauony.
Ther found we a N'yle that hight Nedo
And a nother that hight Kerſo.
And a N'yle that Sarſyg hight,
There is a n' Abbay of Monkes right.
A C. mile from thennez ſailet we there,
And ſete the Yle of Geagere:
Wiche is a N'yle large, and longe,
And a Caſtell faire, and ſtronge.
The Caſtell of Sent Michell hit is called,
A ſtrong place, and well walled.
After that, as we duden go,
We ſaie a Toun hight Beneto.
And on our lift hand as we dude ſaile,
Was the Cite Tregora, in a N'yle.
And the Cite of Spolita, ther ben thre,
Alle hard land, and faire to ſee.
And lxx. milez euer ther fro,
On our right hand as we dud go,
Ayan that forſaide faire Cite,
We ſaie a thing like tille a Tre.
Iche man hadde wonder what hit was,
Some ſaid a Maſt, ſome ſaide hit Naſe.
We askede the Schippemen euerichon,
And thei ſaid, hit was a ſton.
That zought vs wonder for to be,
Suche a ſton ſtande in the See.
But we ſaw hit ſo well wit eyez,
That we weſt well hit was no lyee.
Then we asked what hit hight,
Micella they ſaid full right.
Then ſailet we forthe in our waie,
By the coſt of Sclauony, I yow ſaie.
A N'yle there for ſothe we founde,
That hight Liſſa, on our lift hande.
Too Abbaiez in that Yle was,
Of Sent George, and Sent Nicolas.
Then ſailet we forthe on our Iornaie,
And on our left hand a N'yle we ſaie:
And of a Chirche the olde walles,
The Mount of Sent Andrew men hit calles.
A litell ther fro as we duden ga,
We ſaie a N'yle hight Boiea.
Then ſailet we forthe a gud while,
On our lift hand we ſaie a N'yle,
That men callen there Letena,
Full of pepull, and of vitelez alſa.
And ij. Caſtelles forſooth there bee,
Of frute and of wyne grete plente.
A nother Yle yette we came by,
And alle in the partiez of Sclaueny:
Curſula men calle hit in that Land,
Wit pepull fele, too Caſtelez ſtrang.
A baren Yle then after we founde,
And non frute on alle that Lond:
Caſſa men calle hit, thei ſaie th'ſe,
And x. mile about hit is.
On our lift hand as we ſailet theſe,
We ſaie a N'yle hight Pelagus:
There we ſe in our Romence,
Where Sent George dude his penaunce.
On our lift hand after that,
We founde a N'yle bothe faire, and faat:
That we callen there Auguſta,
And after a nother, that hight Milida.
And after that a Toune well walled,
That Cite Drogonſe men called.
Faire we ſaie hit, and ſailet ther by,
The chef Cite of alle Sclaueny.
And from thennez lx. milez full long,
Is a Cite faire, and ſtrong:
The wiche Cattera called hit is,
And there begynnez Abonnez,

A Land that is nexſt Sklaueny.
Then ſaie we a Toun hight Tyuerye,
After that a Cite we ſaie,
That men callen Dulceny.
And from thennez a litell ſpace,
Is a Caſtell that hight Durace:
The wiche the Venyceanez hald in hande,
And no mo in alle that Lande.
By Abony cooſt, as we dud ga,
We ſaie a Cite hight Valona.
Yett founde we mony Ylez moo,
The nexſt after hight Saiſino:
That is from the Cite of Venece,
Fully vij C. mile waiez.
The heued of the Golfe men calle hit,
Wher ſchippez haue mony a foule fitt.
From that Yle on our right hand,
To the Reme of Pyele I underſtand,
Is but ſyxty milez and ten.
A ſtif ſtreme there rennez: thenne,
From Venece what ſo thou come,
Is euer more Mare Adriaticum.
That is to ſaie in our Engliſe,
The grete See of Adrian I wis.
In that Yle a Caſtell dothe ſtounde,
That the Grekes hald in her hande:
And a Minſter of our Lady,
Full well ſerued, and full honeſtly.
The Grikkez See begynnez there,
And at the nexſt Lond after, as we can faire.
From that Yle of Saiſyneo,
On our lift hand as we dud go,
A C. milez thennez full trew,
We founde the Yle of Curfew:
A faire Cite as I you telle,
And a Caſtell that hight Aungelle.
And from the Cite of Curfew,
Vnto the Ile of Paxſew,
xxx. long milez hit is hold,
And the Venyceanez haue hit in holde.
Bothe theſe Ylez, and other moo,
Forthe on our waie we wull goo.
VVe ſailet forthe bothe erly and late,
Tille the Ile of Dowgate:
A C. mile hit is long and large,
To ſaile from Paxſew wit Bot or Barge.
The Caſtell ner ſtandeth in that ſtage,
The Blake Caſtell in our langage.
Then ſailet we forthe a gret tide,
And founde a N'yle on our lift ſide,
That men calle Cefolonia:
And a Caſtell of folke full alſa.
And a N'yle that Gavut hight,
That is a Caſtell of Grekez right.
Then ſailet we forthe a while,
And founde a nother plentuoſe Ile,
That hight Stryualle in that Land.
There ben holy Monkez duellande,
In a Mynſter of our Lady,
And there thei lif full honeſtly:
And nother woman, foule, ne beſt,
And thei wull agayn there leſt,
Nis non femenyn gender,
Thei maie not there endure.
A wounde miracle there was wroght,
When S. Marke from Alexander was broght:
And was tranſlatet in to Venece,
The Galiez comen be that waiez.
And when the Galiez come zeder thoo,
The Ile cleued euen in too:
And the Galiez token euen the ſame waie,
So thennez the ſee in to this daie.
After that a N'yle we found,
That hight Prodo a waaſt Londe.
Then by a nother ſailet we,
That Morrea hight full ſicurly:
On our lift hand that Lande ſtode,
Faſt ther by our Galiez yode.
The Caſtell of Iunke thei ſate ſoo,
That longeth the King of Nauerre too.
Ten mile be yond the Caſtell,
Upon a wonder hee hull,
Standeth a Chirche hee on hight,
Of Sent Teodete that noble Knight.
After that we came full ſone,
Unto the Cite of Modome.
Taward that Cite as we dud go,
On our lift hand a mile ther fro,
There is a N'yle Sapientia men callez,
A ſtrong Ile, and no wallez.
Upon that Ile the ſee I wiſe,
Hit beteth ther on ſanz myſe.
Of that Ile, and of that Cite,
The Venyceanez Lordez thei bee.
On our lift hand as we dud ſaile,
A waaſt Yle we ſaie ſanz foile,
That men calle ther Seuerigo:
A Heremite there dwelleth, and no moo.
And ſo to Candy we go ſailand,
And the Land of Morez on our lift hand.
From the Lond of Modyn xviij. milez waiez,
Is a Cite worthy for to praiſe:
Corona that place is called,
A ſtrong Toun, and well walled.
Hit ſtondeth in the Lond of Morez,
And the Venyceanez Lordez thei be.
And after that ſame Lande,
We ſaie a Cite hight Diamande:
As a Diamande hit is maked,
Couoret wit ſnow, and neuer naked.
After in the ſame Land of Morrea,
We ſaie a Caſtell hight Moirema.
After in the ſame Land a N'yle we ſee,
That hight Cherigo in that Contre.
In that Ile be Caſtelez too,
And the Venyceanez be Lordez of thoo.
A nother Ile we founde in haſt,
Hight Cetherigo, but hit is waaſt.
And beſtez there be great plente,
On the ſame ſide as ſailet we.
There is a N'yle ij. mile there fro,
That men callen there Gnego:
As a negge hit is maked,
And nonzt in-abitte, but alle naked,
Bothe of men, and of beſtez,
Saue onely Hawkez make there her neſtez.
From thennez we ſailet a certeyn waie,
On our lift hand a N'yle we ſaie:

That men callen Ancello,
And ther in be Caſtellez too.
Thei be of the Lordſchip of Candy,
And the Venyceanez Lordez ſicurly.
Euen Azan that forſaide Ile,
Be the ſpace of lx. mile:
The Ile of Candy there began,
Betweene them we ſailet than.
Then ſailet we forthe on our right hand,
And come to the Ile of Candy Land.
A cite ther was not ferr vs fra,
That men callen Cananea:
And fifty mile that cite fro,
Is another that hight Retimo.
And from thennez milez fifty,
Is the chef cite of alle Candy.
And Candy the cite men calles,
A faire toun, and ſtron of valles.
There groeth alle the Malueſy,
That men haue in all Chriſtyanty:
Or in any place in hetheneſe,
And at Modyn alle the Romeney I wis.
Another cite is in that Ile,
From that cef citte a C. mile.
On our lift hand as we did go,
Setea men calle it ſo.
That Ile bocthe large and longe, viij. C. mile alle Vmbegange.
iiij. good citeez hit hath full ryue,
And caſtellez xx. and fife:
Except Thorpez, and Hamelettez,
And houſez that in the wynez ben ſettez
iiij. M. men there may be raiſet,
Well horſet, and well harneſſet
Of houelerez, and of albeſterez
ij. C. M. ate alle yerez.
From thiſe Ile now wynde we,
And telle we forth, on our Iorny.
Fifty mile we ſailet, and anon,
From the cite of Candy to Capa S. Ion,
That is to ſaie in Engleſe,
S. Iohanez heued I wis.
Ther is a Chappell, and no moo,
The Lordſchip of Candy hit longeth too.
Spina longa men calle hit,
On our lift hand that Ile was ſette.
Then ſailet we forthe ſo anon,
And ſeie the Ile of Refrenan:
A waſt Ile ſtanding in the See.
And after that, anon ſaie we,
An yle that men calle Styppea:
And there in be Caſtellez twa.
On our lift hand as we ſailet thoo,
We ſaw the Ile of Awgeo:
And too Caſtelez ther in bee,
And after an yle hight Nazaree.
Ther is a Caſtell of lyme and ſton,
And Knightez of Rodez Lordes bon.
The nexſt land after that hight Nyſſerey,
And nexſt that the lond of Turky.
And euen ouer ther agayne,
The Ile of Rodez is certayne:
xv. mile the See brode is,
From Turky to the Ile of Rodez.
At the begynning of this Ile,
Wit in but a litell while
Is a thorp that hight Newtoun:
And on a hull there alle alonen,
Is a Caſtell ſtiff, and ſtrong,
That ſome tyme was a cite ſtrong.
The Caſtell hight men ſaie ſoo,
Sancta Maria de Fulmaro.
The ferſt place hit was then,
That euer thei of Rodez wan.
Thei myght not well hold hit,
But be vyſement, and gud witt.
Then at Rodez thei made them zere,
Here dwellyng for euer more.
A ſtrong toun Rodez hit is,
The Caſtell is ſtrong and faire I wis.
From Rodez then a C. mile,
On our lift hand we found an yle,
Caſtell Ruge men calle hit,
The rede Caſtell be my witt.
The Knighetez of Rodez be Lordez and theder go
And ſeie we Ilez no mo:
But too on our lift hand,
On of the Kyngez of Cipreſe land.
The Ile of Cipreſe for ſo the hit hight,
There of fer ferr we had a ſight:
I can not ſaie of toun ne of citee,
Hit was ſo ferre I myght not ſee:
That other was the Ile of Baaf.
On our lift hand toward Iaaf,
Of a land we had a ſight,
Carmeyn de Surry for ſothe hit hight.
The white Frerez were founder ferſt there
Of our Lady there is a Mynſter.
Then to Port Iaaf when we came,
There was mony a blythe mane:
And thanked God of his faire ſonde,
That brought vs ſaue into that land.
And from Iaaf we went to Ieruſalem,
And that waie tornet home agayne.
At Ieruſalem while I was,
I went pilgrimagez in mony place:
And had the pardon that longeth thertoo
As I ſchall zow or I go.
Now at Port Iaff I wull begynn,
To telle the pardon at is ther inn:
The wiche is called Ioppen,
And Port Iaf wit other men.
This pardon ferſt when hit begane,
Was of Pope Silueſter that holy mane:
At the praior of Conſtantyn,
That was an Emperour gud, and fyn.
And of Sent Elene his moder dere,
That found the Croſe as thei ſay there:
And after the place be of degre,
So that pardon confermet hee.
To ſome plenor remiſſion of ſyn,
And ſome vij. zerez, and vij. lenton.
At Port Iaff begynn wee,
And ſo frothe from gre to gre,
At Port Iaff ther is a place,
Wher Petur reiſed thrugh Goddes grace,
From dede to lif to Tabitane,
He was a woman that was her name:

And was wit the Apoſtlez like a knaue,
vij. yere there ſchalt thou haue.
And as many lentonez ſicurly,
And a nother place is ther by.
Wher Sent Petur ſtode and ſiſche,
As much pardon is there I wis.
And after that there is a Cite,
That men callen Leidye:
There is a Chirche in that ſtede,
Where Sent George was don to dede.
And alſo there is a nother place,
Wher heled was Eneas
Of his Palleſſy, and mad clere,
Thrugh Sent Peter Praier.
As muche pardon thou ſchalt haue there,
As I haue tolde of now before.
After that the Cite of Roma,
And the Caſtell of Emus alſa:
In the wiche a Chirche dothe ſtonde,
Where the ij. Diſcipelez were walkand:
And metton wit Iheſu after his ryſyng,
And knew him by the brede breaking.
Alſo in that ſame place,
Is the graue of Cleofas:
Wiche was oon of the too,
And Sent Luke that other alſo.
Then the Cite that a Riamathia hight,
Where Ioſeph was boron that noble Knight:
That toke Iheſu don of the rode tree,
And Samuel the Prophete there lithe hee:
In alle theſe placez that bene met here,
Of Pope Silueſter be graunted there;
vij. yere, and vij. lentonez ther to:
To alle hem that zeder wull go.
Now to the Citee of Ieruſalem we wull wynd,
Where of the Sepulcer is a Chirche hynde.
There in is the Mount of Caluery,
VVher for our ſake Iehu wolde dy.
There is plenor remiſſion,
To alle hem that zeder wull come.
Alſo there faſt by is a place,
VVhere Iheſu Criſt anoyntet was,
Or he was laid in his graue:
Plenor remiſſion ther maie thou haue,
And at the Sepulcer wit in,
Plenor remiſſion maie thou wynn.
There a place by right nere,
VVhere Criſt was like a gardenere:
And aperet to Marie Magdaleyne,
After his upriſt, as Clerkez ſayn.
Nexſt that place a Chapell there is,
In the worſchip of our Ladie, I wis:
VVhere Criſt to his moder ferſt
Aperet, after his upriſt:
There is vij. lentonez, and vij. yere,
And in a wyndow faſt by there,
Is a piler of her ſtate,
To wiche in the houſe of Pilate
Criſt was bounden to, and kete:
An in the ſame Chirche is ſete,
The preſon that Criſt was in ſent,
And the place where thei partyet his veſtment.
At ichon of theſe placez hir before,
Is vij lentonez, and vij. yere more.
A Chapell there is of Sent Elene,
VVhere ſche the croſe faire, and fyne,
The crowne, the naylez were founden there,
And the hened of Longeez ſpere.
In that place where thei founde were,
Is plenor remiſſion alle daiez in the yere.
In that Chirche a piler is founde,
To wiche Criſt was bounden, and cronnet.
And in the Chirche where Adam heued was fun,
Is the middez of the world by reſone.
Alle theſe ben in that Chirche aboute,
And iiij. Chapelez ther be wit oute.
The ferſt of our Lady, and Sent Ion Euangeliſt,
The ij. of the Aungelez, the iij. of Ion Baptiſt:
The iiij. is of Marie Maydeleyn:
Deuote placez alle for certayn.
At alle theſe placez, to pardon by and by,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez ſicurly.
VVit out the dere of that Mynſter,
Is a place lene, and dere:
VVhere Criſt him reſted for wery,
Beryng his croſe for to die.
There is the riche mannez place,
That lett the Lazarer, as Clerkez ſaiez,
Dye for defaute of mete,
There in Helle is made his ſete.
And a waie ther after thou fyndeſt ſene,
Where a man that hight Symeon,
VVit the Iewez conſtraynet was,
For to bere Criſtez croſe.
Then Criſt tornet him agayn,
And to the wymmen thuſe gan ſayne:
VVepe on youre ſelfe, and not on me,
And on your childer wher that thei be.
A nother place there is at hounde,
VVhere our Lady fell don ſownande:
Seeyng her ſon his croſe bere,
Taward his deeth, that dud her dere.
Alſo there is ij ſtonez white,
To the wiche Criſt reſtet alite:
VVit his croſe hym ſelfe to cole,
And a non after ther is our Lady ſtole.
At alle theſe placez forſade here,
Is vij. lentonez, and vij. yere.
And faſt by is the houſe of Pilate,
Wher Criſt was brought to full late:
Bounden, buffetet, and crounet wit thoron,
Demed to deeth on the moron.
Azannez the deſpite that he had there,
Is fully remiſſion, and plenere.
And there is the place, thou maie go in,
Wher Criſt for yaf Madeleyn her ſynn.
And alſo there is Herodez place,
Hoder Criſt was ſende as clerkez ſaiez:
From Pilate to Herode in ſcornyng,
And cladde wit white clothyng.
Alſo by a water thou moſt ga,
That men calle Probatica Piſcina:
There is the Temple verement,
Where in our Lady was preſent:
And weddet to Ioſeph afterward,
Azan her wille hit was full hard:
And after that Criſt he was,
Preſentet in the ſame place,

To that holy man Sent Symeon:
At icke of theſe places haue ye moune
vij. yere, and vij. lentonez therto.
And Criſt was founden in the temple alſo,
Diſputyng whiſly in his ſawez,
Wit the Doctorez of her Lawez.
A Chirche there is of Sent Anne,
Where our Lady was boron of that woman:
Plenor remiſſion is in that place,
Bleſſed be Iehſu of his grace.
After that ſone thou fyndeſt a gate,
Wher Sent Steuen was ladd out ate,
To be ſtoned to his deeth:
And a non after, a nother ſtede,
The gulden zate called hit is,
Where Criſt entred Ieruſalem I wis.
To alle theſe place who ſo wuld gon,
Is vij. lentonez to pardon.
Now to the vale of Ioſophat ſo fre,
A faire place there ſchalt thou ſee:
Where Sent Steuen ſtonet was,
And the tour of Cedron is in that place.
Alſo a gret pece of the croſe of Iehſu,
In that ſame place is, I trow,
And ſerued there for a trugge mony a daie,
That is the voice in that Contraie.
A Chirche of our Lady is there alſo,
And the graue the ſehe was in do:
The pardon of theſe too placez in fere,
Is vij. lentonez, and vij. yere.
And there our Lady beriet was,
Plenor remiſſion is in that place.
In Ioſaphat the vale befor ſaide,
Is the place where Ckiſt praied,
To his fader befor his lideeth:
vij. yere, and vij. lentonez ben in that ſtede.
Then at the Mount of Oliuete,
There is a Chirche faire, and ſwete.
At the gardeyn we wull begyn,
Where Criſt was taken, and bounden in.
And faſt by a place is there,
Where Petur ſmot of Malkes ere.
Alſo a place there ſchalt thou ſee,
Where Criſt ſaid to his Apoſtlez three:
Abide hire to hem theſe he ſaide,
Tille I haue ben at my fader, and praide.
And a place there ſchalt thou fynde,
Where the Apoſtell Thomas of Iynde,
Had a gurdell of our Lady,
When ſche was boron to heuen on hee.
A nother place faſt by is ſette,
Where Criſt vpon the Citee wept.
Alſo the place is nee by there,
Where the Aungele did apere
To our Lady wit the palme, and ſaide to fore:
That dai to heauen ſche ſchuld be bore.
A nother place is not ferr ther fra,
That men callen there Galelia.
The xi. Apoſtelez were gederet there,
And Criſt to hem dude apere:
At alle theſe placez here abouen,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez to pardon.
A nother Chirche is ther by to nemen,
Where Iheſu ſteed vp in to heuen.
What man or woman that cometh there,
He hath remiſſion plenere.
After that a Chirche of lym, and ſton,
Of Sent Marie Egiptian:
And the Sepulcre of Sent Pelage,
In a nother Chirche maie you ſee.
And in the Mount of Oliuete on hight,
A place there is that Bethſage hight.
And of Sent Ion a Chirche there is,
Where the Apoſtlez made the Crede I wis.
There is a nother Chirche right hynde,
Where Criſt the Apoſtolez kenned
The Pater noſter for to praie:
Alſo there is in the ſame waie,
Where our Ladie reſt a ſtage:
For wery goyng on Pilgrymage.
There is the Chirche of S. Iame the leſſe,
To whom Criſt apperet the daie of Paſch.
And after in the ſame place,
The ſame beriet he was.
To alle theſe places to for ſaid,
Is vij. yere of pardon araied:
And vij. lentonez I dar well ſaie,
Paſſe we forthe thuſe on our waie;
To the vale of Siloee,
A faire Well there ſcholt thou ſee:
Wher our Lady Criſtez clothez dude,
When he into the Temple preſent was.
There is the well of Siloee,
VVhere Criſt made a blynd man to ſee.
And a place ther ſchalt thou ſee,
Where Iſaias the Prophete ſo free,
Of the Iewez ſawez he was,
And beried in the ſame place.
Alſo a Chapell thou ſchalt ſee there,
Where the Apoſtlez hud hem for fere.
Alſo the felde hit is faſt by.
That was bought for penyes xxx:
For the wiche Criſt was ſolde,
At ichon of theſe placez that I haue tolde,
Is to pardon vij. yere,
And vij. lentonez alſo in fere.
Of the Mount of Sion I wull you telle,
Where the Iewez both falſe and felle,
Wold haue raſt of the Apoſtlez wit force,
Of our Lady the vere, and the tref coorce:
When thei here bare to her graue.
Alſo faſt by ther ſchalt thou haue,
Where Petur wept, and ſore can rowe,
That he forſoke his Lord Ieſu.
A Chirche of Sent Angel is there beſide,
That was a Palice faire, and wide:
And Anna the Biſchope that place hade,
To the wiche Criſt was ferſt lade:
Examinent, and wit buffetez bete.
A nother Chirche ther by was ſette,
That is of our Lady, and Sent Saluator,
And Caiphas place hit was before:
Where Iewez him bobbed, and dud diſpiſe,
And Petur there forſoke him thyrez.
In the ſame Chirche is there alſo.
A preſon that Criſt was in do:
And in that ſame place thou ſchalt haue,
The ſton that laie on Criſtez graue.

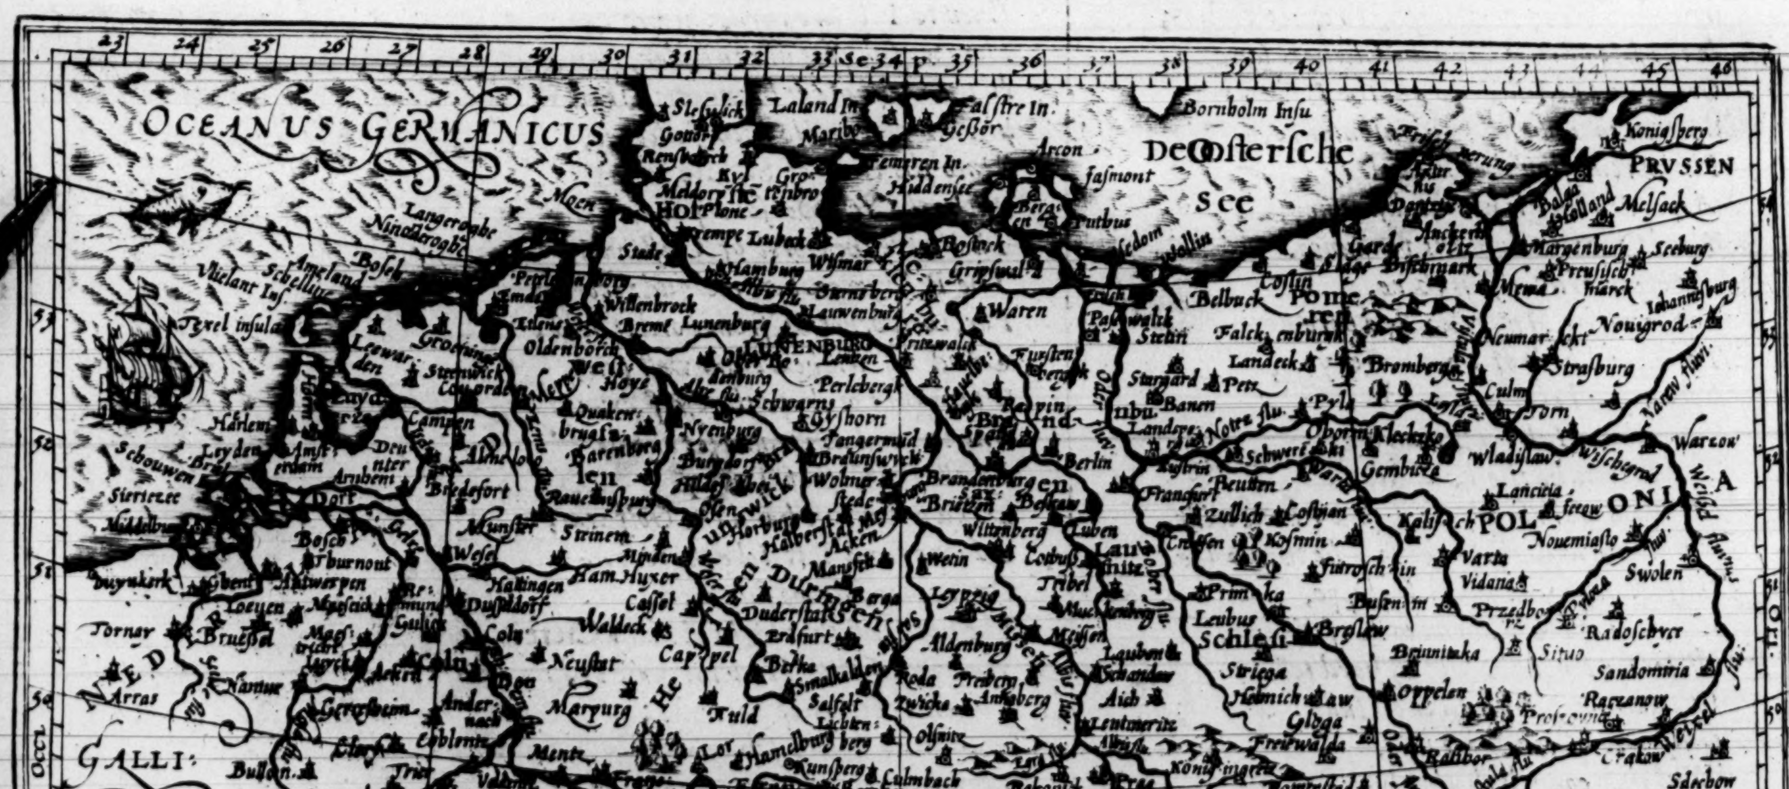
Where that our Lady abode ſo,
xiiij. yere in gret whoo:
And there faſt by ſche made a nynde,
Out of this word when ſche ſchuld wynde.
There is plenor remiſſion,
And there faſt by is a place anon,
Wherein Ion the Euangeliſt,
Was choſen dere to Ieſu Criſt:
And ſange a Meſſe to our Lady.
And faſt by is where Sent Mathy,
Was choſen to the Apoſtolez:
And ther is our Lady Oratory I wis.
Alſo there is another place,
Where Sent Steuen beried was
The ſecounde tyme, as clerkez ſaie ichon,
Wit Gamaleel and Abibon.
Deuote places there ſchalt thou fynde,
And ther Criſt his Apoſtolez taught full hynde:
And wher our Lady herd full prechyng,
Of her Sone Ieſu, heuen Kyng.
And yet thou may fynde more,
Dauid, and Salamon beried there:
And other Kingez by hem ben caſt,
And the Paſche Lambe ther was raſt.
In ichon of theſe placez is vij. yere to pardon,
And vij. lentonez there haue ye mowne.
Alſo there is another place,
Where the Paſche Lambe eten was,
Wit Iheſu, and his Diſciplez inſere,
And the Sacrament was made there:
Plenor remiſſion for ſothe ther is,
And yet another place I wis,
Where Criſt to his Apoſtolez was lowly,
Weſche here fete, and made theim dry:
And where he on the Aſcention day,
Reprouet hem of her febull faie.
Then ſchalt thou fynd there full ſone,
The place where the Apoſtolez ichon,
Receyuet there the holy Goſt,
In the feſte of Pentecoſt:
Plenor remiſſion ther maie thou wynn;
A nother place is yet wit in,
Where Criſt to Sent Thomas aperet,
And to the Apoſtolez, when the zates were ſperet:
Where more Sent Iame beded was.
And yetse is there a nother place,
Where Criſt aperet to Mariez three,
And ſaid to hem, Auete.
vij. yere to pardon be at that place,
And vij. lentonez full of grace.
Then wull we theſe to Beethleem,
That is v. mile from Ieruſalem.
In that waie ther is a place,
Where the thre Kyngez herbaret was s
And where the ſterre aperet to hem.
And alſo a Chirche as thei ſayn,
That ſtondeth in the ſame ſtede,
Where was boron Elias the Prophete.
And the graue of Rachaell;
At ichon of theſe placez, truſt me well,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez thertoo,
To all tham that theder wull goo.
Thenn at Bethleem I will begyn,
And telle the pardon that is therin.
There is a Chirche of our Lady,
Where Criſt was boron full ſicurly:
And the crache that he laie in,
Plenor remiſſion there maie thou wyn.
Alſo there is a deuoute place,
Where Chriſt circumciſet was:
And where the ſterr waynaſchet awaie
From the Kyngez, when thei hit ſaie.
And the Chapell of Sent Ierome,
And the graue that he was in don.
Alſo ther by ſchalt thou haue,
Where the Innocentez were graue.
There is a Chirche of Sent Nicolas,
Where Paule, and Euſtoce beriet was:
Thei were Maydonez full ſicurly.
Alſo ther is a Chirche of our Lady,
Where the Angele cauzt here, and Ioſeph alſo,
Into Egipt for to go.
Of the Angele a Chirche is there,
Where the Angele dud apere,
To the Schepardez, and to hem ſaide,
That Criſt was boron of a Maide,
And the Chirche, or elſe the graue,
Of the xij. Prophets there ſchalt thou haue.
And the Mynſter of Sabaa
That was an Abbas, as thei ſaa.
At iche of theſe place whoſo will go,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez thertoo.
Now here we the pardon of Betany,
VVhere Lazare dyethet, that is werry:
The wiche laie ther iiij. daiez deed;
And Criſt raiſet hym vp in the ſame ſtede
VVhere he clepet hym out of the graue,
Plenor remiſſion there maie thou haue.
There is the houſe of Symeon that good man
In the wiche Marie Mawdelyn came:
On ther Thurſdaie wit oynement ſwete,
To anoynt Criſtez fete.
And there Martha ſaid theſe word,
For ſothe and thou haddeſt be hir, Lord,
Lazar my brother ſchuld not dede be:
Thi brother ſchall riſe, then ſaid he.
Alſo there is the houſe of Maudelyn
VVhere ſche was when Martha can ſayn:
Our Lord, our Maiſter, hir cometh hee,
And Maudelyn ſuſter he calleth thee:
To iche of theſe places forſaide,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez laide.
Ther ben pilgrimagez mony mo,
But I ſaw non of alle thoo:
And therfor I make non mention,
But of the places that I haue gon.
Then at Flem Iordan I wull take
Ther of a mention for to make.
There is a Mynſter of Sent Ioachim,
Fader of our Lady that holy Virgyn.
Alſo the hull hit is thare,
Wher Criſt faſted the ground is bare;
xl. daiez witouten wyn,
Therfor it height Mount Karantyn:
Plenor remiſſion there maie thou haue,
On the top of the hul thou muſt hit craue.
A place is there the deuele temptet Iheſu,
And ſaid if Goddez ſone be thou,

Theſe ſtonez into brede bryngé,
At thou maie ete after thi faſtyng:
In other thyngez he temptet him alſo:
But we wull tale of Ierico:
VVhere Criſt herbaret was,
In the houſe of Zacceus.
Alſo a place ther by maie be,
VVhere Criſt made a blynd man to ſee.
Of Sent Ion Baptiſt a Mynſter ther is:
At ichon of theſe placez I wis,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez therto,
To alle tham that theder wull go.
VVher Iheſu Criſt baptizet was,
Is plenor remiſsion in that place.
Alſo ther is a wilderneſſe honeſome,
VVhere is a Mynſter of Sent Ierome:
And the dede See that is there,
VVher the v. Citeez drenchet were,
For ſinn that thei dud thanne,
And be yond flem Iordan,
Is a full deſert place, and wan,
Of Sent Marie Egiptian.
To alle theſe placez who that wull go,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez therto.
Of the Hullez of Vrie to telle,
A while ther for to duelle:
Ther is a Mynſter faire, and free,
In the wiche place groeeth a Tree,
That went vnto Criſtez croſe:
Thuſe in that Lond hit hath the voiſe.
Ther is the houſe of Symeon,
That in the Temple was redy bon,
On Candelmes daie Criſt to hent
Vnto his armes, he was preſent.
There is a Chirche of Sent Ion Baptiſt,
VVhere our Lady when ſche was wit Criſt,
Salute Elizabet here Coſyn dere,
And ſaid the wordez that folo here:
Magnificat anima mea Dominum.
And Zacarias place is ther alſo,
VVhere he wrote bothe faire, and welle,
Benedictus Dominus Deus Iſrael.
To alle theſe placez who that wull go,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez therto.
Now telle we of the Vale of Mambre,
And of the placez that about hit be.
Ther wull I telle a litell thing,
VVhere was Abrahamez dwellyng:
VVher that he ſaie Childeren thre,
And on for alle worſchippet he.
Paſſe not thi Seruant in this hete,
I ſchall faich water, and waiſch thi fete.
And Clerkez ſayn, and don vs lere
The ferſt tokynning of the Trinitie was there,
Alſo there is the Cite of Ebron,
VVhere Adem, and Abraham in graue was don.
Iſaac and thei ben beried there,
And alle her wifez wit hem in fere.
Alſo faſt by there is a place,
VVhere that Adam formet was:
And there is the Deſert wher Ion Baptiſt,
Dud penaunçe for Iheſu Criſt.
Alſo the Ciſterne ſee you moune,
VVhere that Ioſeph Iacob ſone,
Wit his brether ſchuld haue be caſt in,
For dremez that he redde to hem.
At ichon of theſe placez what at thou be,
vij. yere, and vij. lentonez is graunted the.
Thus to Nazaret let vs wynde,
And telle of that place ſo hynde.
Some what to ſaie that is beſt,
Of that pardon that euer ſchall laſt.
In the begynning thou ſchalt haue a place,
Where Sent Steuen ferſt beried was:
After a Caſtell there ſchalt thou ſee,
That hight Abiera in that Citee:
Wher our Lady knew he had left her ſonn;
A nother Chirche yette fyndeſt thou ſon,
Faſt ther by thenn ſchalt thou haune,
The Welle of the Samaritane.
And the Cite Nebuloſa, or Sichar men hit calle,
In the wiche the graue fynde thou ſchall
Of Ioſeph, that is to fortolde,
That to the Iſmalitez was ſolde.
After that, thou fyndeſt thenne,
The Cite that hight Sebaſtiane.
There Ion Baptiſt in preſon was don,
And after that heuedet full ſone.
There is the Caſtell of Iehenne,
Where the x. Lazarez were Inne.
And Criſt hem heled of her ſekenes,
And the Cite of Naym ther by hit is.
Criſt dud miraclez in that ſtede,
Raiſed a widow ſone from deede.
Alſo in the Cane of Galelie,
Wit in Nazaret that faire Citee,
There is a Chirche full faire ſette,
Where Gabriel our Lady grett.
Alſo in a while thou ſchalt fynde there,
Where Criſt to his Moder water dud bere.
Alſo a faire place is faſt by,
Where the Iewez full ſpituouſly
Iheſu hedlyng wold haue don caſte,
And a myddez hem a waie he paſt.
At ichon of theſe placez befor nemet,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez aſsignet.
There is a Hull that hight Tabor,
Criſt was transfiguret there,
From his Manhod, to his Godhede:
Plenor remiſsion is in that ſtede.
There is the Cite that hight Cafarnaum,
Where Criſt mony miraclez hath don.
The See of Galelie forzete we nought,
Where Criſt mony miraclez hath wroght.
Alſo the Cite of Tiberiadis,
Where Criſt calde Mathew Diſcipull his.
Alſo there is a nother place,
VVhere Archiſinagog Doughter was
VVit Criſt raiſed from the dede,
And Criſt etye wit Mathew brede.
Yet the Hull maie thou kenne,
VVhere Criſt feede v. m. mene,
VVit the brede of louez fiue.
A nother Hull yete fyndeſt thou riue,
VVhere that iiij. m. men were,
VVit ſeuen louez fede there.
Alſo the Cite of Sidonne,
VVhere the woman, dud forthe gon:

And to Criſt ſche ſaide full yare,
Bleſſed be the wombe that the bare.
At iche of theſe placez leue thou me,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez grantet the.
Then telle we of a nother place,
The wiche is called Damace.
Beſide Damace ther is a wate,
Wher Ieſu to Paule can ſaie:
Saule, Saule, why folouest thou me?
Alſo a wyndow ther maie thou ſee,
Where Paule went out when he hym heed:
Alſo in the ſame houſe is keede,
Where that Paule criſtenet was,
Of that holy man Ananias.
Alſo a place ther ſchat thou fynde,
Where Sent George the Knight hynde,
Faught wit the Dragon for the Maide ſake,
And deliueret her from wrake.
At alle theſe placez that I haue tolde,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez, be thou bolde.
Now telle we of the Mount of Synai,
A full deuote place ſicurly,
The Cite of Gaza is in that place,
Where Sampſon ſlayn. and beriet was.
In that Mount vpon hy,
Is a Mynſtor of our Lady:
The Mynſtor of the Buſche men calle hit,
Wher in the body of Sent Katheryne was put.
Alſo behynde the hee Autere,
Is wher Ieſu dud apere,
In that Chirche to Moiſie,
When he kept Getro Madan ſchepe trulee.
In middez of that Hull is a place,
Where dud his penaunce the Prophet Helias;
In the hye of that Hull, by Clerkez ſawez,
God yaf to Moiſes boothe the Lawez:
Written in Tabelez, wit outen miſſe,
Plenor remiſſion ther hit is.
A Garden ther is witout diſtaunce,
Where Onorius dude his penaunce.
A nother Hull alſo is there,
To the wiche Aungelez dud bere
The bleſſed body of Sent Kateryne,
Sche was a holy Virgyn.
Vnder that Hull truſt thou me,
There rennethe the Rede See.
At ichon of theſe placez, that I haue tolde,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez, be thou bolde.
Thuſe from Synai wull I ſkippe,
And telle of the Pilgrimagez of Egipt.
Theſe ſaie I nought, but by herd telle,
Written in a Tabull in the Hull:
Therfor I telle as I hit ſaie,
VVho that cometh thether he maie aſaie.
In Egipt is a Cite faire,
That hight Maſſar, or ellez Kare:
In the wiche mony Chirchez be,
And oon is of our Lady:
De Columpna calleth hit is,
And Sent Barbara beriet ther is.
There is a water of gret priſe,
That cometh out of Paradiſe:
The wiche is callet Nilus,
Men of that Land thei ſaie thuſe.
Alſo ther is a great Gardeyn,
Where that the Bawm groeth in.
Alſo a Mynſter there is ſette,
Of Sent Anton, and Poule the ferſt Heremet:
And of Macary, and other mo,
Theſe from that Cite let vs go.
By the ſpace of iij. daiez Iornay,
There is a Contraie in that waie,
That men calle Menfelcula:
There is a Chirche hight Elmorana,
Where is a Chapell of our Lady.
There ſche dwellet vij. yere truly,
Wit Ieſu her ſone ſo dere,
And wit Ioſeph her Spouſe infere.
In that Chapell on Palme Sondaie,
Of alle Criſten I you ſaie,
That duellen in Egipt Lande,
Do there her ſeruice I vnderſtande.
The Cite of Alexander in Egipt is,
Where Sent Kateryne was ſlayn I wis:
And Sent Iohan Elemoſmere,
That holy Patriarke is beriet there.
And Sent Mark the Apoſtell of Criſt,
Alſo he was Euangeliſt:
There was martired, and to ded don,
And after was beriet ther ſone:
And ſo from thennez to Venece tranſlate.
At ichon of thez placez and thou go ate,
Is vij. yere, and vij. lentonez to pardon,
To alle hem that thether wull come.
Pilgrimagez ther be no mo.
That euer any man dud goe.
But now at my yann turning,
Hereth of our home comyng.
From Ieruſalem ſothe to ſayn,
Euen to Iaff we turnet ayan.
Here we ſchippet alle to geder,
In the Galias that brought vs theder.
iiij. hunderet mile then ſailet we,
Unto the Golf of Satelle:
Wiche the Schippe ſour pardy,
Thei were the worſt of Criſtianty.
The Pilgrymez bere me gud record,
For, thei tornet vs from bord to bord,
And iiij. wikkez I dar well ſaie,
We myght not ſkape the Golf awaie:
But vp, and don trauerſet the See,
By alle the Coſt of Turky.
And on our lift hand the Golf was,
As we from Iaff toke the raſe.
On Turky ſide we ſaie there,
The hee Hull that hight Mount Clere.
And vnder that Hull hit maie be,
The chef heued of Synode:
That is a token to ſchippmen,
Whereby thei the Coſtez kenne.
And after fully fifty mile waie,
Is a Caſtell, as I you ſaie,
The wiche Mirra callet is,
And Sent Nicolas was boron ther I wis:
And Biſchop ther was he made,
And his laſt ende there he hade:
In his graue he was laid thoo,
And after tranſlate to Baſſo,
That is in the Pole Lande;
And there he lithe I vnderſtande.
And xx. mile that Caſtell fro,
Is a Hauen hight Cacabo;

Hit is right depe, and faire of flode,
In alle wederez hit is gude:
For ſchippez therein to take her reſt,
In alle Turky ſide hit is the beſt.
That Hauen tofore, as men ſaid me,
Was ſome tyme a faire Cite:
And was criſtenet as men telle,
Tille gret vengaunce vpon hem felle,
For ſinn that thei dud in the Toun,
Hem to amende thei were neuer bon.
That Cite was drant for the ſame caſe,
Right as Sodome, and Gomore was.
Some wyndowez, and wallez yet ther be,
For I ſaie hem wit myn ee.
From that Hauen of Cacabo,
On our right hand as we dud go,
xxx. mile by Lond I wis,
To the Caſtell Ruge hit is:
We ſailet therby taward Ieruſalem,
And come therby hamard agayn.
And xxx. mile from that Caſtell,
Is a ſtrong Ile truſt me well:
The wiche in the langage of that Lande,
Is callet the vij. beuedez, I vnderſtande.
What is the cauſe thei calle hit ſoo,
For vij. poyntez go out ther fro:
Alle gret Rochez, and long ther thei be,
And ferre in ſonder men maie hem ſee.
For a token men hold hem there,
By cauſe thei ſchuld by theim faire.
And ſixty long mile, and ten,
VVe ſailet to the Ile of Rodez then:
And reſted ther a litell ſpace,
To confort vs in that place.
And euen from Rodez to Venece,
As I went I come home, I wis.
And come to Padua the Cite faire:
There I reſted, and toke the aire.
And from thennez to Caſtell Limimia,
And ſo to Baſſayn, ther are Caſtellez tan.
From thennez to Bononia full euen,
And there we were daiez ſeuen.
And ſo forthe to Caſtell Sent Iohan,
And then to Mirandula that foule Toun.
And euen forthe ſo vnto Hoſtia
Muche Mariſe ther ſchat thou in ga.
Then ſo forthe to the Toun of Veron,
The Venyceanez be Lordez of ichon.
Then ſo forthe to Caſtell Selucian,
And the Blaffard is thi money than.
From that place thou ſchalt to Trent,
That ſtony waie moſt thou heent.
And ſo forthe to the Cite of Merane,
VVhere wyn is plenty to mony ayne.
And then to Mount Sent Nicolas,
VVho is him that waie gas:
For Montez, and Snow, and ile chere,
Failet not there of alle the yere.
So draw the don to Nazaret,
And whaite thi Pike be well ſett.

HONDIVS his Map of Germanie.



And from thennez to Kempton,
For ſothe that is a gud toun.
And then ſo forthe to Memmyng,
There is the Emperour money walking:
Like a barre of ſiluer hit is,
And laſteth ferre, that maie not myſe.
Then to the cite of Vlme is thi waie,
And at the Brugge ther moſt thou paie.
And ſo from Vlme to Oſſelyng
And after that to Kipping.
And ſo thenn den to Bruſhull,
That maketh men her leggez to pull.
And from thennez to Duron,
And thenn to Spire that rioll toun.
From Spire to Vormez are milez xiiij,
And ſo to Mence thou ſchalt I wene.
And to Bynge a toun vpon the Ryene,
And to Weſell, and Couelence, there is gud wyn.
And ſo to Andernak that is thi waie,
And then to Bun, I dar well ſaie.
From thennez to Coleyn that faire cite,
Ther moſt thou chaunge thi money.
And ſo from thennez to Acon,
There be hote bates in that toun.
And thenn to Maſtrik I the rede,
And there new money moſt thou gette.
And ſo forth euen to Diſte,
That waie is wilde, and hit be myſte.
And ſo thou ſchalt to Macheleyn,
That is a toun booth gud and fyn:
There gothe the money of Braban,
And that deceiuet mony man.
And ſo from Mechelyn to Gaunt,
Into Flaunderez moſt thou haunt.
And ſo to Burgez that faire toun,
And thenn to Newport moſt thou gon.
And after that to Donkerke,
And ſo to Grauenyng moſt thou lirke.
And to Calys a toun full free,
Thuſe at the See-ſide we bee.
And for hit is the comyn waie,
From England to Rome, I will not ſaie:
Ne tales make of her gouernaunce,
For to all pilgrymez hit is no ſtaunce.
Then praie ne to the Lord of myghtes moſt,
That brought this Pilgryme to Engelond coſt,
His lif to mayntene to his wille,
In his ſeruice bothe lounde and ſtille.
And when we out of this word ſchull wende,
The ioye of heuen be vs ſende:
That is my praior, and ſchal be aie,
We may be ſaued at Domeſdaie:
And ſo to his blis he vs bringe,
Ieſu that is heuen King:
And ſecur therof, at we maie be,
Saie alle Amen for charite.

CHAP. VI.

The Churches Peregrination by this Holy Land way, and warre into myſticall Babylon: or a Myſterie of Papall Iniquity reuealed, how the Papall Monarchie in and ouer Chriſtendome, was aduanced in that Age and the following, and principally by this Expedition into the Holy Land.

---

§. I.

The Hiſtorie of the Normans, and their proceedings. Of VRBAN and BOAMVNDS policie, abuſing the zeale of Chriſtendome in theſe Warres: and of Satans looſing after one thouſand yeares.

Hitherto you haue heard the Monke and the Prieſt Eye-witneſſes of this Expedition: the one called Robertus Anglus, the other a follower of Robert the Norman: and after them the Tyrian Archbiſhop, and an Engliſh Monke. Neither let any maruell that in theſe Peregrinations, dedicated to the Engliſh name principally, I omit not the Norman, whoſe Father and Brethren reigned here, who for the hope of the Engliſh Crowne forſooke that of Ieruſalem being offered, who dyed in England: and what ſhall I more ſay? What are Engliſhmen but in triple reſpect, Normans or Northmen? From the North parts adioyning came the firſt Angles, or Saxons: from thence alſo the Danes, which made the next Conqueſt: and from theſe North parts, the ſcourge of the World, Omne malum ab Aquilone (ex Scanza inſula que erat quaſi officina gentium, aut velut vagina Nationem, the parts for moſt part ſtill ſubiect to the Crowne of Denmarke) the ſame Daniſh people ſetling themſelues in France, and called Normans, that is, men of the North, after a French ciuilizing and Chriſtianitie, made their third Conqueſt vnder Earle William. This three-fold Cord cannot be eaſily broken, nor can any Engliſhman at this day ſeparate his Norman bloud from the Engliſh, and indiſſoluble mixture euen from the laſt conqueſt remayning in the tongue and people,

Vid. Camd. Brit.

W. Gemetic. de duc. Norm.

ple, the Conquerors vtmoſt indeuours being herein conquered. A great part of Earle Roberts Armie was Engliſh, and as Eadmerus and all the Hiſtorians of that time teſtifie, the monie which defrayed his Armie was Engliſh, Normandie remayning therefore engaged to King William his Brother. Yea, Boamund alſo and Tancred were Normans: fortie of which Nation returning from a Ieroſolymitan pilgrimage, behaued themſelues ſo valiantly at the ſiege of Salerne, againſt the Saracens, that Guaimar the Prince ſent Legats with them into Normandie, to draw ſome aduenturers into his part, where Giſelbert a Nobleman, hauing ſlaine William, and fearing the anger of Robert then Earle or Duke of Normandie, embraced the occaſion, and with his Brethren Rainulph, Aiſclitin, Oſmund and Rodulph, and their followers went into Italie to Prince Pandulph at Capua, Anno Dom. 1017.

Hiſtory of Normans.

Car. Sigon. de Reg. Ital. l.8.

Apulia and Calabria were then ſubiect to the Greeke Empire, which rather tyrannizing then ruling, by the Catapan or Deputie, Melus a principall man perſwaded the Normans to inuade his Countrey, ſo to ſhake of the Greekiſh yoke, and fought foure times with Bubagan the Catapan, in the three firſt battels winning much, which in the fourth at that fatall place of Canna hee loſt againe: the remayning Normans betaking themſelues to Pandulfe and Guaimar. After this Maniacus the Catapan ſent to Guaimar to ſend him his Normans, to fight againſt the Saracens in Sicilia. Lately before (this was, Anno 1039) the ſonnes of Tancred (inuited by their Countrimen) had comne thither with three hundred men at Armes, by whoſe helpe he recouered Syracuſe, and the moſt part of Sicilia, which after their departure the Saracens next yeare repoſſeſſed. Anno 1041. Ardoinus a Lumbard offended with Maniacus, for taking from him a Horſe which he had taken from a Saracen, incited Earle Ranulph a Norman, to aſſiſt him in the warre againſt the Catapan, wherein many fights ouerthrowing the Greekes, matters ſucceeded ſo proſperouſly, that William one of the ſonnes of Tancred was made Earle of Aſculum, Drogo his Brother obtayned Venuſia, and the reſt of Apulia was ſhared amongſt the reſt of the Normans. In this Expedition, William, Drogo, Humfrie, Richard, Roger, and Robert the Sonnes of Tancred were renowmed, of whom many Dukes and Kings in Italy after deſcended. Henry the Emperour confirmed to Drogo Earle of Apulia, and to Ranulph of Auerſa, all which they had gotten. To Drogo ſucceeded his Brother Humfrie, 1051. who inuading the poſſeſſions of the Church, which Pope Leo ſeeking to recouer by battell, was beaten out of the field with exceeding ſlaughter on both ſides, and beſieged in a Caſtle whither he fled, was taken and forced to receiue the Norman into communion.

Normans in Apulia.

Sonnes of Tancred.

Apulia ſhared amongſt Normans.

A warlike Pope.

Baielard the Sonne of Humfrie, by Robert called Wiſcard (brother to the ſaid Humfrie) was expelled from his Countrie of Apulia. He added alſo Rheginum in Calabria, and Troia in Apulia to his conqueſts, ſtiling himſelfe Duke of Apulia and Calabria. His brother Richard winning Capua, vexed the confines of Campania, and both moleſting the Papall Poſſeſſions were curſed by Pope Nicholas, who yet vpon their Oath of vaſſalage to the Church, receiued them and confirmed the one Prince of Capua, the other Duke of Apulia and Calabria, paying twelue pence a yeare on euery yoke of Oxen. Anno 1062. Robert with his brother Roger, warred againſt the Saracens in Sicilia. Richard inuaded a great part of Campania neere to Rome it ſelfe, and ſought to become Patricius; whereupon Henry the Emperour entred Italy, and Richard forſooke Campania.

Robert Wiſchard Duke of Apulia

Anno 1078. Nicephorus put downe Michael from the Empire of the Eaſt, who came and ſought to Robert for ayde, who being compounded with Iordan which had ſucceded his Father Richard, went into Greece, and proſperouſly ſucceded. Hence he was called backe by Hildebrand, or Gregorie the Seuenth, which before had excommunicated him, to helpe him againſt Henrie the Empeour, then hauing taken Rome by force; who hearing of Roberts comming with a ſtrong Armie (leauing Boamund to purſue his Grecian affaires) went with Clement or Guibert, his new made Pope into Etruria. Thus was hee dreadfull to the Eaſterne and Weſterne Emperours at once. He dyed, Anno 1085. Roger his Sonne ſucceeded. This Hiſtorie both as of Normans, and as a preamble to the Expedition of the Frankes, is not vnworthy recitall.

Occaſion of the Normans entring Greece.

Roger the younger brother ſucceeding in the Dukedome of Apulia and Calabria, as alſo in the quarrell of Vrban ſucceſſor of Gregory againſt Guibert (who alſo confirmed his Dutchie to him as Vaſſall of the Church, the poſſeſſions whereof ſuch good fiſhing made he in troubled waters, he had euen to Tibur and Velitre * gotten into his poſſeſſion) his brother Boamund * began to thinke of another ſucceſſion, that as Roger had gotten the inheritance of Calabria and Apulia, from the Eaſterne Empire, he might alſo obtayne the like in Greece. This was not vnknowne to the wiſer in thoſe times, as William Malmeſbury * our Countriman teſtifieth, whoſe words are theſe.

* Car. Sigon. de reg. Ital. l.9.

* Boamund was ſonne to Rob. by a former wife: Roger by the daughter of Guaimar Prince of Salern. W. Gemetic. how this Dutchie added to Sicilia became a Kingdome, is here omitted.

* G. Malm. l.4. initio.

Anno ab incarnatione 1095. Papa Vrbanus ſecundus, qui præſidebat Apoſtolico culmini, euaſis Alpibus venit in Gallias. Aduentus cauſa ferebatur perſpicua, quòd violentia Guiberti Roma extruſus, citra montanas ad ſui reuerentiam ſollicitaret Eccleſias. Illud repoſitius propoſitum non ita vulgabatur, quòd Boamundi conſilio penè totam Europam in Aſiaticam Expeditionem moueret, vt in tanto tumultu omnium prouinciarum facile obæratis auxiliaribus, & Vrbanus Romam, & Boamundus Illyricum & Macedoniam peruaderent. Nam eas terras & quicquid præterea à Dyrrhachio vſque in Theſſalonicam protenditur, Guiſcardus pater ſuper Alexium acquiſierat: idcirco illas Boamundus ſuo iuri competere clamitabat, inops hæreditatis Apulæ, quam genitor Rogero filio minori delegauerat. Thus Vrbanes intent was to get Rome from the Antipope Guibert or Clement, whom the Imperials and ſome Italians followed; neither had hee any great partaker in Italie but Roger, who ſought his owne aduantage.

Anſelme Archbiſhop of Canterburie was by King Rufus diſpoſſeſſed of his reuenues, and liued in Exile for acknowledging him, as Eadmerus his companion in his Italian peregrinations to and with Pope Vrban teſtifieth: no Biſhop in England then daring to acknowledge either of the Popes without the Kings leaue, who alſo admitted no Papall power, but by his leaue in this Kingdome (for his and his fathers power in caſes and ouer perſons Eccleſiaſticall, See Eadmerus and the Annotations of that learned and induſtrious Gentleman, Maſter Selden thereon, and therewith now publiſhed.) And Boamund enioying ſome Caſtles by his brothers indulgence, wanne many other, the men of warre following him. Nam ad fratrem ſpecie tenus Ducatus peruenerat (Malmeſbury addeth toward the end of that Booke) alterum bello meliorem ſecuti. Iam vero parui momenti fuit quòd paterni propoſiti ſequax, Guibertum repellens Vrbano validiſſimè aſtuit, & cunctantem impulit vt Gallias ad Concilium Clari Montis accederet, quò eum Raimundi Prouincialis Comitis & Epiſcopi Caturicenſis Epiſtolæ inuitabant. Concilioq; celebrato libens occaſionem accepit & in Græciam copias traiecit, ſubindeq; promouens exercitum modeſtè Raimundum & Godfridum operiebatur. Quibus venientibus ſociatus magnum incitamentum cæteris erat, diſciplinæ militaris ſcientia & virtute nulli ſecundus.

Eadmerus publiſhed by M. Selden.

This Myſterie hath beene little obſerued of moſt Authors, and was leſſe obſerued in thoſe times by the zealous Princes of Chriſtendome, whoſe valour, wealth, deuotion, glory and liues were engaged ſo deeply in this quarrell, moſt of all other deuices auailed the Papacie, in abaſing the power of Princes Chriſtian.

See how this agreeth with his cunning diſſimulation before mentioned.

And well might Vrban vſe the helpe of Boamund and the Normans in that deſigne, which not only ſorted to that expected effect to ſettle him in Rome, then held by Clement his Corriuall, but to a further aduancement of the Papacie in after times, then either hee or Boamund could then diuine or dreame of. For of the Normans diſpoſition, Henry Huntingdon hath long ſince giuen teſtimonie that God had choſen them to exterminate the Engliſh, becauſe he ſaw them eminent aboue all people in the prerogatiue of ſingular cruelty. For their nature is when they haue deiected their enemies to the vtmoſt, that they then depreſſe themſelues, and bring themſelues and their Lands into pouertie and waſte: and alwayes the Lords of the Normans, when they haue trodden downe their enemies, ſeeing they cannot but be doing cruelty, they hoſtily trample vnder foot their own. Which plainly appeares in Normandie, England, Apulia, Calabria, Sicilia, and Antiochia, very good Countries which God hath ſubiected to them. Thus our Hiſtorian, and thus our Myſterians Vrbanus (then for this diſpoſition called Turbanus) and Boamundus vncharitably ſeeking their owne, abuſed the charitie and deuotion of thoſe degenerated times.

Hen. Hunt. lib. 7.

So it was neceſſary that Myſteries ſhould be carryed in myſtie cloudes: which make mee not a little minde that Reuelation not fully reuealed, yet in ſome imperfect glimpſes offering it ſelfe to view, this Hiſtorie vnmasking that Myſterie; or if it bee not the iuſt interpretation of the Prophecie (a taske too great for me to determine) yet not vnfit to be waied in the ballance of the Sanctuary together, and to be propounded to wiſer conſiderations, at leſt by way of Allegoricall application, if not of Propheticall explication. Saint Iohns myſteriall Reuelation is deliuered in theſe words. Apoc. 9.1. And the fift Angell ſounded, and I ſaw a ſtarre fall from Heauen vnto the Earth, and to him was giuen the Key of the bottomleſſe pit. 2. And hee opened the bottomleſſe pit, and there aroſe a ſmoke out of the pit, as the ſmoke of a Furnace, and the Sunne and the ayre were darkened by reaſon of the ſmoke of the pit. 3. And their came out of the ſmoke Locuſts vpon the Earth, and vnto them was giuen power as the Scorpions of the Earth haue power, &c. 7. And the ſhapes of the Locuſts were like vnto Horſes prepared vnto battell, and on their heads were as it were Crownes like Gold, and their faces were as the faces of men. 8. And they had haire as the haire of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of a Lion. 9. And they had breſt-plates as it were breſt-plates of Iron, and the ſound of their wings was as the ſound of Chariots of many Horſes running to battell. 10. And they had tayles like vnto Scorpions, and there were ſtings in their tayles, and their power was to hurt men fiue monethes. 11. And they had a King ouer them which is the Angell of the bottomleſſe pit, whoſe name is in the Hebrew Tongue, Abaddon, but in the Greeke Tongue, hath his name Apollyon. After the ſixt Angel ſounding, followeth the looſing of the foure Angels bound in the great Riuer Euphrates, for to ſlay the third part of men. And the number of the armie of the Horſemen were two hundred thouſand thouſand. And thus I ſaw the Horſes in the Viſion, and them that ſate on them, hauing breſt-plates of Fire and of Iacint, and of Brimſtone; and the heads of the Horſes were as the heads of Lions, and out of their mouthes iſſued Fire and Smoke, and Brimſtone. By theſe three was the third part of men killed, by the Fire, and by the Smoke, and by the Brimſtone which iſſued out of their mouthes. For their power is in their mouth, and in their tayles: for their tayles were like vnto Serpents, and had heads, and with them they doe hurt.

Diuers Interpreters will direct in the former of theſe Viſions, to behold the Popiſh Clergie, in

* Ap. 1 vlt.
a Col. 3. 1.
b Ephe. 3. 20.
c Heb. 12. 22. d Ph. 3. 19.

e Sanſouino l. 11
* Sac. Cer. R. E. l. 1. 8.

Math. 16.

in the other the Saracenicall Souldiory: both which agree to our preſent buſineſſe, where Papall ſuperſtition, and Saracenicall crueltie begot in ſtrange copulation ſuch numerous innumerable deaths. As for the Starre it noteth an Eccleſiaſticke Angell, or Biſhop, as the Reuelation it ſelfe reuealeth *. This Starre is not fixed, but falleth from heauen, the care of Heauenly [a] affection, heauenly [b] conuerſation, and bringing ſoules by Paſtorall vigilancie to the heauenly [c] Ieruſalem, and Church of the firſt borne, whoſe names are written in heauen; and falleth to the earth, that is, to minde earthly pompe, and ſecular glorie, Whoſe God [d] is their belly, whoſe glorie is in their ſhame, who minde earthly things. That the Pope hath euidently done this, their owne Hiſtories make mention; firſt by Phocas, obtaining a Monarchie ouer the Church, and ſince Hildebrand exalting it ouer Kingdomes, States and Empires, and now at this day exerciſing nothing of a Biſhop, but the Title, leauing the Cure to his Vicario di Roma [e], whiles his Cardinall Conſiſtorie are not Vigiles Eccleſiæ, but Coniudices Orbis terrarum, & Principes mundi, regum * ſimiles, veri mundi Cardines, and himſelfe hath turned Paſce oues into Rege, and playes the King, and playes with Kings, making and marring Kings and Emperours, and wearing himſelfe a triple Crowne: either detaining (as King Iohns) or depoſing and diſpoſing (as Henries to Rodulph) or with the foote ſtriking off, (as Celeſtine to Henrie the ſixt Emperour) or treading alſo on the Emperours necke, (as Alexander to Fredericke.) All this power is challenged to the Keyes of the Kingdome of heauen, promiſed to Peter, Math. 16. in the name of the reſt of the Apoſtles, of whom the queſtion had beene asked, which he in their name anſwered; and that to ſhut out impenitents, and to admit thoſe which beleeue and repent, by Euangelicall miniſtry into the houſe of Gods Church and Family. But neither by word nor Sacraments, publikely, nor priuatly, by teaching, improuing, exhorting, rebuking, doth he either open or ſhut, or exerciſe any proper Epiſcopall Function: ſo that the key of power which he hath, muſt needs bee this Key of the bottomleſſe pit, whereby Hell is opened, (as here in viſion) and Heauen is hidden; both that ſupercelestiall Heauen of glorie, wherein is the Sunne of righteouſneſſe; and this inferiour Eccleſiaſticke heauen of Grace, and of the Church, which as the Aire borroweth her light from that Sunne, or elſe muſt needs abide in night and darkneſſe.

Key of the bottomleſſe pit, and kingdome of Hell.

Alfredi Epiſt. publiſhed before Tho. Walſingham, Mat. Par. in W. 1. Clerici adeo literatura carebant, vt cæteris eſſet ſtupori qui Grammaticam dedicisset.

Gen. 11.

And indeed what are Papall Diſpenſations and Indulgences, (as we ſhall anone ſee) but opening of Hell? What his Cruſados to kill and deſtroy, Interdicting of kingdomes, excommunicating and depoſing of Kings, raiſing warres, ſeditions, treaſons, prohibiting vulgar reading of Scriptures, and the like, but ſhutting of heauen? Theſe, theſe are the Papall keyes ſo much gloried of, keyes of the bottomleſſe pit; yea, the key ſingular to open, and not plurally keyes, as hauing no power to ſhut that Hell which once he hath opened. Hence aroſe (by this opening of the bottomleſſe pit) that Smoake of Ignorance, which bemiſted the world (ſo that in King Alfreds daies not one Prieſt in England could vnderſtand his Latine Seruice, or tranſlate an Epiſtle out of Latine into Engliſh; and if any in the next Ages had his Grammer, he was a wonder to the reſt of the Clergie) cauſed by Barbarians, which filled Italy, France, and other Countries of Chriſtendome before, with a Smoake of Confuſion and combuſtion, whereby the Latine Language was loſt in vulgar vſe, which continued in their Holies: men in that ſmoake not able to ſee what God ſaid to them in his Word, or they to him in their Prayers. Hence a Smoake of blind zeale aſcending as from a furnace: but as the fire of Hell is fire without light, burning and not ſhining, ſuch is eager impetuous zeale without diſcretion, which crucified Chriſt, and perſecuted Chriſtianitie, & in Papiſts hath much changed them for Antichriſt, and Antichriſtianitie. A ſmoake from the bottomleſſe pit, is all vnbrideled Concupiſcence, alway fuming from and to Hell; Bottomleſſe in the originall, without iuſt cauſe of beginning; Bootleſſe in fine, without cauſing Iuſtice in the ending. Pride, Couetouſneſſe, Enuy, and other Helliſh paſſions, are a ſmoake which aſcend, but by aſcending vaniſh; which as in the Builders of Babel, ſeeke a Name, and make as they would build to Heauen, but get no other name but Babel, and after confuſed cloudie Chymaras (like pillars of ſmoake in the Aire) vaniſh to nothing.

* Prieſts had not power to kill, till they had ſubiected the ſecular power to them. See Eadmerus and Nubrigenſis Writers of thoſe times.

Out of this ſmoakie ignorance, and ignorant zeale, and zealous perturbations (the trauels and throwes of the bottomleſſe pit) came Locuſts vpon the Earth, the carnall and earthy minded Biſhops, Prieſts, Cardinals, Abbots, Monkes, and innumerable religious Orders of inordinate Religion: theſe being wholly ſuperſtititious, degenerating into ſuperſtition, and turning their heauenly calling into earthly, eaſe and pompe, and the ſpirituall ſeruice of God, into beggerly, worldly, carnall rites and bodily exerciſes. Thus haue you the Locuſts worſe then Egyptian, ſuch to the ſoule as thoſe in Aluares, and other the former Stories of this Booke mentioned to the bodie, ſaue that they are limited, and may not (as thoſe) hurt the Graſſe and Trees, and greene things, that is, ſuch as haue a liuely Faith in Chriſt. Neither may they kill bodily *, but ſpiritually torment the Conſcience with their Canons, Confeſſions, Penances, Purgatories, Miracles, Viſions, and (which moſt concernes our preſent purpoſe) Pilgrimages, and the like. Their ſhape is like to Horſes, for their courage and wilfulneſſe, Kings and Kingdomes being forced to ſtoop, both to their old Mumpſimus, and to their new Sumpſimus; euen the moſt refractorie or couragious, as William Rufus, and the two firſt Henries, conquered in Clergie immunities by Anſelme and Becket, men of great worth in other kinds, but for this accounted Worthies, eminent in the ſanctitie of thoſe times, for this honored and Canonized Saints. Theſe the Crownes on their heads, or as Dunſtan, Eadmund, and if there were any more Canterburie Canonizations: and ſuch Crownes had the heads of Religious Orders, and firſt Founders and Inuentors of Holies, as Dominicke, Francis, and others, (and now at laſt Ignatius Loyola) and all the Clergie were crowned with dignitie, in their head ouer-topping Kings, in the meaneſt Prieſt exempted from Kings, yea creating his Creator the King of Kings, (that I mention not their ſhauen crownes, nor the Martyrs crownes which befell Prieſts or Laitie, dying in this Ieroſolymitan Peregrination, or in fight againſt Chriſtians, againſt whom the Pope had publiſhed his Cruſado.)

But theſe Crownes were like Gold, not of it, the Pope herein the beſt Alchymiſt, extracting true Gold out of Leaden Bulls, but diſtracting and contracting ſhewes of Gold, ſeeming Canonizations, and ſanctitie in ſhew and ſound of holy Church, rather then true holineſſe: yea, the holy name of Church appropriated to theſe ſhauen crownes, by Popiſh Monopoly. Yet were the ſhewes made faire, and in all their actions they had the faces of men, in reſemblance of iuſt reaſon and reſolution; inſomuch, that as when I looke on the Scripture onely, I wonder how there could bee any Papiſt, ſo when in Hiſtories and the courſes of times, I looke vpon the Church, eſpecially after Hildebrand, I as much wonder that all were not Papiſts, the ſmoake had ſo taken away the light of the Sunne, and the Pope ſet vp ſo many Night-lights of humane reaſons, and Treaſons or Traditions in Canon Law and Schoole Diuinitie. Yea they had alſo the haire of Women, in inſinuating impreſſions, and melting rauiſhments of flattering perſwaſions, promiſed pleaſures of Paradiſe, dazeling pomps in the preſent, and for the future, Merits, Supererogations, deliueries from Purgatorie, Relikes of Saints, Reuelations, Miracles, & a world of the like; which this Hiſtorie of the Holy Land ſheweth ſufficiently, and a Map of which you may ſee in Vrbans elegant Oration, and Boamunds cunning diſſimulation. Their teeth were as teeth of Lions, in preying vpon Temporal Lands, Liberties, Iuriſdictions, and Spirituall deuouring of ſoules. Their Iron Breaſt-plates, were their defenſiue immunities and exemptions, whereby they were hardned and heartned againſt all contrary powers.

The ſound of their Wings, was their preaching of Indulgences, thundering Interdictments, and Excommunications, Penances in Confeſſions, and the like. Their Tailes, were the conſequences of their Doctrine and Actions, which promiſing ſatisfactions to God and Man, yea Merit and Supererogation, the honoring of Saints and Angels, in the fore-part: in the end ſtung like a Scorpion, filled the ſoule of their moſt deuoted with diſconſolation, the body with grieuous bodily exerciſes in Faſtings, Pilgrimages, (as here) ſelfe-whippings; Euer learning, neuer comming to the knowledge of the truth; giuing reall poſſeſſions, and bequeathing true beggerie to their heires, for deliuerance from a Poeticall Purgatorie; crucifying themſelues indeed before a painted Crucifixe, buying repentance at a deare rate, and making more irkſome way to Hell (if Gods infinite mercy preuented not) then that by which many haue attained Heauen. Their King is the Angell of the bottomleſſe pit, (you ſee whoſe Vicar he is indeed) and is named in Hebrew and Greeke, as hardning the Iewes, and corrupting Chriſtians; or as reſtoring both Iewiſh rites and Gentile ſuperſtitions, in both a Deſtroyer. The fiue moneths ſome interpret of this life, ſome alluding to the Graſſe-hoppers Summer ſeaſon; ſome to Noahs floud, ſo long preuailing ouer the Earth; ſome to one hundred and fiftie yeares, taking a day prophetically for a yeare, and reckoning from Hildebrand, to Gregorie the Decretaliſt; ſome for an indefinite time, ſome for a ſhort time: as if they ſhould ſay, It is not for you to know the times or the ſeaſons which the Father hath put in his owne power. I haue rather ſought to lay open their qualities then their durance: as for the time, Time will deliuer it.

Acts 1.7.

Now for the other Viſion of foure Angels, bound in the great Riuer Euphrates; ſome vnderſtand Euphrates myſtically, for the meanes of vpholding and aduancing the Merchandize of myſticall Babylon, that is of Rome and her Poperie: Indeed foure hath beene a famous number, for the foure Goſpels, for thoſe foure firſt generall Councels, for the Eccleſiaſticke Ariſtocracie by the foure Patriarchs, (the fift was in manner titular) for the foure Doctors of the Latine Church: alſo foure hath beene notable in this Papall myſterie and Supremacy; firſt in the ages thereof, the Child-hood from Boniface to Hildebrand, in a ſpirituall Monarchy, long growing vp; the Youth from Hildebrand to Boniface the eight, in addition of power, ouer all powers Royall and Imperiall, with youthfull vigour trampling vnder foote the ſtrongeſt Aduerſaries; the Mans age from thence till Luther, loſing ſomewhat of that King-awing ſtrength, by ſchiſmes amongſt themſelues, and by Councels*, Kings and Kingdomes better opportunitie and vigilance; but holding vp to the vpmoſt their ſpirituall, till Luther gaue beginning to their old declining age, and thus their almoſt precarian and obnoxious power, which by leaue of Kings and States they hold, howſoeuer in ſeeming aboue them. Foure Courſes haue aduanced and vpheld them, Excommunications, (to which interdictments of Kingdomes, and depriuations of Kings are annexed) Decretall Lawes and Conſtitutions to gouerne the Church; Warres by Cruſados and Treaſons, and Inquiſitions againſt contrary opinions. Foure ſorts of men haue beene their Creatures and Creators; degenerated Monkery of later ages, which vndermined the ancient ſanctitie and diſcipline, Canoniſts which wholly corrupted it; Schoole-men which admitted

* As thoſe of Conſtance, Baſil, &c. ſo in the Statute of Præmunire in Rich. 2. &c.

mitted the Philoſophers to bee Maſters in Diuinitie, and Friers which occupied both Churches and Palaces in new and meerely Papall hypocriſies and priuiledges. And ſince, the reuenues of Poperie, as we ſhall by and by ſee, are foure, Temporalties, Collations of Benefices, Indulgences, and Diſpenſations.

But I rather like their Interpretation, which apply theſe foure to the Angels of deſtruction, which literally haue beene looſed from Euphrates vpon the Chriſtian world, and indeed deſtroyed the third part of Chriſtian men with bodily death. For preſently after Boniface the Pope had obtained his Supremacy of Phocas, Mahomet aroſe with his new Sect in the Eaſt; the one with Locuſts, (whereof you haue heard) to corrupt the ſoules; the other with Horſes in his Succeſſors, to deſtroy the bodies of men. And theſe Angels of deſtruction haue beene many waies foure. Firſt, in the foure Doctors, Authours of the foure Sects of that irreligious Religion. For Mahumet hauing taken Mecca, created foure Generals, Ebubezer, Omar, Oſmen, and Ali; whom he called, the foure ſharpe Swords of God, and commanded them to goe into the foure parts of the world, to kill ſuch as reſiſted. After Mahumets death, theſe foure ſucceſſiuely ſucceeded. Theſe may be called foure Angels, as the foure Doctors of the Mahumetan Law, (ſo they are vſually ſtiled by the Mahumetans) and reckoned Saints in their Kalender; whom they ſay Mahomet had prophecied ſhould ſucceed him, who alſo fained his Law receiued from the Angell Gabriel. Theſe were Authors of foure Sects alſo, Ali or Hali, of the Sect Imemia; Oſmen of the Sect Baaneſia, Homar of the Aneſia, Ebubezer of the Melchia. Theſe foure in their ſucceeding Generations, haue bin ſent out from neere the parts of Euphrates: where before they may be ſaid to be bound, becauſe that howſoeuer Choſroes or ſome others at ſome ſtart, or aduantage paſſed ouer, and did hurt to the Romane Empire, (then the moſt flouriſhing part of the Church) yet did they not continue any long ſpace, or much preuaile on this ſide Euphrates, that being the boundary, as it were appointed of God, betwixt the Roman and the Parthian, and after, betwixt the Roman and Perſian Empires. But after the Mahumetans had once appeared from Arabia, which Euphrates waſheth, they in one Age ouer-ranne Egypt, Syria, Paleſtina, Perſia, yea ouerwhelmed Africa, quite thorow to the Streights, and all Spaine, with many other Countries *, neuer after recouered to the Empire. And as they began with foure Angels in foure Sects, and conquering to the foure Winds: ſo there haue beene of them foure principall Deluges, each from Euphrates, ouerwhelming the world. That we reckon the firſt, in that Saracenicall Age: the ſecond, that of the Turkes, which vnder Belpheth tooke Diogenes the Greeke Emperor priſoner, and conquered in manner all the Countrey to Conſtantinople, the occaſion of this Ieroſolymitan expedition, and conſequently, of killing the third part of men, dwelling in remote Countries which they had not ſeene, but came to the Holy Land as the publike ſlaughter place and Shambles of the Chriſtian world: in which it is remarkable, that the two Calyphas of Bagdet and Cairo, one on the one ſide, the other on the other of Euphrates, otherwiſe diſſenting, conſented yet like Herod and Pilate, to kill Chriſt again in his members, and to perpetrate thoſe butcheries, yee haue read of in the former Relations. And let the vnderſtanding Reader examine the Roman Stories, and ſee if in aboue ſixe hundred yeares from Romulus forward, there was ſo much Ethnicke bloud ſpilt on both ſides, to purchaſe the Roman Monarchie, as here in much leſſe then the third part of that time, was occaſioned to be ſpilt by the Romiſh Hierarchie: on both ſides ſhall I ſay? Or may I make the queſtion, euen of that which was meerely Chriſtian of the Eaſterne and Weſterne beleeuers? And the third ouerflowing, was of the Tartars, at firſt not Mahumetan, yea deſtroying Bagdet and the Calypha, and enemies to mankind in generall, but after prouing, and ſtill continuing in greateſt part Mohumetan. Theſe did almoſt roote out the Chriſtianitie of the greater Aſia, and erected the greateſt Empire (not with beſt bloudſhed) that euer was: yea, they not onely ouer-ranne the Chriſtians, as farre as Poland and Ruſſia, Hungaria and Germany by themſelues, but forced the Choroſmines out of Perſia, (which as you haue heard gaue the fatalleſt blow to the Chriſtians in the Holy Land) and rooted out the Turkiſh Kingdome there, and forced them alſo to inuade the Chriſtians, founding in the Chriſtian ruines the Aladine Turkiſh Kingdome in Natolia, and enforcing ouer Euphrates the Progenitors of Ottoman, from whom beginneth our fourth Epocha, and that fourth Deluge of the Turkiſh Nation, which hath deuoured ſuch worlds of Chriſtian fleſh. The Warres alſo of theſe peoples, haue beene principally by Horſes, neither doe I thinke the number expreſſed of two hundred Millions is any whit hyperbolicall, if we conſider the innumerable Armies of innumerable Horſe-men, which they haue in diuers times burthened the World withall. That of the Tartars alone, if Authors report truly, eaſily makes credible that incredible number. The later expedition of the Tartars vnder Tamerlane, how monſtrous doth it ſeeme?

See my Pilg. l. 3.c. 2.§.2.

* See my *Pilg. l.*3.*c.*7.

* See vbi ſup. l. 3.*c.*2.

See of the Tart. my *Pilg. l.*4.*c.*11.and 12. and after fol. in this Worke in Haiton, M. Polo, &c.

See T.H. *pa.*76.

Alſo, Their Horſes hauing power in their mouthes and tailes, agrees to the manner of Warre vſed by thoſe Nations, which vſed a conioyned flight and fight, as before yee haue read, that euen then when they ſeemed to flye, they had Serpent headed tailes, and did flee but in cunning ſleight, to returne to greater miſchiefe, ſhooting alſo as they fled, and wounding their purſuers.

And as the number of foure, ſo ſitteth their foure Doctors, foure Sects, foure Deluges; ſo alſo haue they had foure principall places of reſidence, neere to Euphrates, Mecca ſtill hallowed in their profane Rites, the ſeate of Mahomet and his firſt Succeſſors. After that Damaſcus (for Ieruſalem continued not their Imperiall reſidence) and after that Bagdet, to which by a contrary faction was oppoſed Cairo, ſucceeding herein to Cairaoan, as that to Tunis.

Likewiſe, foure great Nations doe ſtill obſerue theſe Eufratean Angels, the Turkiſh (to whom the huge African tracts haue ſome reference) the Perſian, the Tartars (the chiefe of which is now ſeated in India, the Mogol ſucceſſor of Tamerlan) and the Indian (in many ſmaller and ſpecially maritime Kingdomes) depending for their Faith and Scepter of the Arabians, which beginning with Trade proceeded to Conqueſt. But more then enough of theſe things. Wherein we ſee all plainly agreeing to this warring Religion, as in the former to the Romiſh Locuſts; in both perhaps rather intimating the danger to Chriſtians by both Angels (the one corporall, the other chiefly ſpirituall) then their time: both which wee ſee haue continued ſo long a time, and ſpread ſo farre, that they thereby, the Moore aſwell as Papiſt, plead Catholike from Vniuerſalitie.

See before Finches Iournall.

Yet if we will weigh the time, when both were likely to doe Chriſtendome moſt harme, and like Samſons Foxes looking contrarie, held a fierie coniunction in their tailes, to ſet the World on fire; this Angell of the bottomleſſe pit, puts vs in minde of another Angell which came downe from heauen, hauing the key of the bottomleſſe pit, and a great chaine in his hand, And hee laid hold on the Dragon that old Serpent, and bound him one thouſand yeeres. And caſt him into the bottomleſſe pit, and ſhut him vp and ſet a ſeale vpon him, that he ſhould deceiue the Nations no more till the thouſand yeeres ſhould be fulfilled, and after that he muſt be looſed a little ſeaſon. This is not a falling ſtarre, but an Angell which deſcends; euen Chriſt himſelfe (which is called the Angell of the Couenant) and hath the keyes of Hell and Death, which entreth into the ſtrong mans houſe and binds him (as Primaſius, Andreas Caſarienſis, and other interpreters doe agree) that hee ſhould not ſeduce the Nations or Church of the Gentiles, as before in a generall defection and idolatrie. But after that thouſand yeeres expired, he ſhould be looſed, not ſo long as in the Gentile ſuperſtitions, nor all ſo farre, but exchanging thoſe prophane Idoll names (with greater wrong to Gods holy Angels and Saints) ſhould in holier Names and ſhewes reſtore thoſe Heathen Rites, Lights, Images, and other will-worſhips of Angels and dead men. Now, for a thouſand yeeres after Chriſt, the ſtate of Chriſts Church, though it were ſtill after the primitiue golden Age ſomewhat declining, as the Fathers and Eccleſiaſticall Hiſtories ſhew: Yet in ſubſtantiall and fundamentall points it continued ſound, as Biſhop Iewel in the mayne points of Controuerſie hath ſhewed for ſixe hundred yeeres, and Biſhop Vſher for the foure Ages following, although theſe were much more corrupt then thoſe former. Nemo repente fuit turpiſſimus: and it is true of myſticall Rome alſo, that it was not built in one day. But I had rather the Reader ſhould examine this point in Biſhop Vſher his learned worke, de Chriſt. Eccleſ. Succeſſ. & Statu. I am more then enough buſied in our Holy Land pilgrimage.

Apoc.20.1.

Mal.3. Apoc.1.

See D.Vſher de C.E.S. & St.

Cedrenus mentions diuers ſtarres fallen, one An. 1033. which made a noiſe in the fall (cum ſonitu & fragore) and another the next yeere, which in the night made ſo great a light, that people thought the Sunne had riſen. He mentions alſo terrible Armies of Locuſts, which brought miſerable famine ouer thoſe parts: as if God by viſible ſignes would then warne men to obſerue theſe myſticall predictions, when they were to worke their moſt complete effects. The like is mentioned in the Weſt by Floriacenſis and others. An earthquake at Ieruſalem deſtroyed many buildings, and men, continuing fortie dayes. The Temple of the Sepulchre had a little before beene razed by Azius, whoſe ſonne permitted the reedifying thereof, and preſently there reſorted innumerable numbers; firſt, of the meaneſt; after of the meane ſort, after of Kings, Prelates, Earles; and laſtly, of women both noble and baſe. And when ſome queſtioned what this might ſignifie, it was anſwered, the comming of Antichriſt. Once; from the thouſandth yeere after Chriſt, till Hildebrands time, Anno 1073. hapned more frequent and prodigious ſignes in Heauen, Locuſts, Famines, &c. on earth, then euer we read of, as Glaber and other Hiſtorians haue recorded.

Glab.Rodulph. l.4.c.6. hiſt.ſui temp.

And for thoſe Hieroſolymitan Pilgrimages in ſuch numbers, what did they elſe but make way to theſe bloudie expeditions, after that Peter the Eremite had receiued a reuelation thereof. Neither is it likely, that this reuelation was from any but the Deuill (ſo many ſuperſtitious reuelations, then more plainly arguing this looſing of Satan) which is a lyar and murtherer from the beginning, and can turne himſelfe into an Angel of light, as appeareth by his fore-mentioned vanitie, by the monſtrous impietie of his followers, in ſacrileges and all abuſes to God and Men, in almoſt idolatrie to himſelfe. Whoſe attempts at Ieruſalem, whatſoeuer luſtre they ſparkle forth, yet wanted not ſome ſparke of Hell, in that they were ſo died in bloud, corrupted with ſpoiles, corrupting with ſuperſtition, and with neglect of their œconomicall and politicall calling. Chriſt himſelfe had ſaid, the true worſhippers would worſhip the Father, not at Ieruſalem, nor in that Mountayne, but in ſpirit and truth: for God ſeekes ſuch to worſhip him. And although I denie not that a place dignified with holy actions or paſſions, may bee a Place to the memorie and affection exciting holineſſe, yet for Religion of place to leaue or neglect our place and calling

Greg.Nyſ. de ijs qui adeunt Hieroſol.

Sulp.Seu.l.2. Beda in Mar.13, &c.

Dodechinus, Guibertus, Albertus Aq. &c.

in Religion, is ſuperſtitious; and to aſcribe ſanctitie to the place, is Iewiſh. Gregorie Nyſſene hath written a whole Epiſtle againſt ſuch Hieroſolymitan Pilgrims, alledging, that it is neither commanded, nor is God preſent, or the holy Ghoſt any more there then in other places of Chriſtendome; yea leſſe, becauſe more iniquitie is there committed, in no place more nor more abominable: that himſelfe had beene there, but in the Churches affaires, and made this benefit thereby to know that their owne were more holy; with other like paſſages againſt that ſuperſtitious paſſage. Which might better be ſpoken of theſe Worlds of men, which trauelled nothing from themſelues and their vices in this Pilgrimage, as the ſtories teſtifie: yea Vitriacus Biſhop of Achon, tells of the Chriſtians which liued at Ieruſalem, as if they were the worſt in all the world. And what elſe were the Templers, and other their chiefe Warriours, but ſuch as were, The neerer the Temple, the further from God, verifying that prouerbe, Calum non animum mutant, qui trans mare currunt? The Ancients thought that God ſuffered Ieruſulem before to bee deſtroyed, for the further propagating of the Catholike Church, which liueth and walketh by Faith and not by ſight: id Domino ordinante diſpoſitum, vt legis ſeruitus à libertate fidei atq; Eccleſiæ tolleretur. And ſure, iuſt one thouſand yeeres after this ruine of the Temple liued Hildebrand, who began the Monarchie of the Church, in the depoſing of Kings, which nothing euer ſo much effected as this diſpoſing them firſt to ſerue the Croſſe, and after the Croſſe to ſerue to depoſe them. It ſauours ſomewhat of the Deuills looſing, that they which are called Gods, hereby were ſo looſed from their charges, and their charges or ſubiects by Cruſados looſed from them, looſed againſt them. Mirabilis ſpiritus, (ſaith Dodechinus Abbas in his Appendix to Marianus Scotus) illius temporis homines impulit ad illud iter aggrediendum. A meruailous ſpirit (the looſed Dragon, it ſeemeth) moued the men of that time. For women vſed mans habit and went armed. And he ſaith, that Peter the Eremite carried about a Scroll, which he ſaid, was fallen from Heauen, commanding men hereto. Men, Women, and Children followed him, ſo as Kingdomes were void of Gouernours, Cities of Paſtors, Streets of Inhabitants. They began their bloudie and diſordered out-rages vpon the Iewes, and after that vſed like hoſtilitie againſt the Chriſtians in Hungarie (which had ſhewed them kindneſſe) and other places as they paſſed, beſides their vncleanneſſe, fornications, and abominations amongſt themſelues. Albertus Aquenſis addeth; Biſhops, Abbots, Monkes, Clergie-men, Nobles, Princes, and all the vulgar, aſwell chaſte as inceſtuous, Adulterers, Homicides, Theeues, Perjured, Robbers, and all the kind of Chriſtian profeſſion, and the Woman-kind led with penance (the fruits of which their Expedition declared) runne together at Peters preaching this way. He tells that Chriſt appeared in viſion to Peter, bidding him carrie from the Patriarke, Letters of our Embaſſage, and thou ſhalt rayſe the hearts of the faithfull to purge the holy Places of Ieruſalem, and to reſtore the ſeruices of the Saints (officia Sanctorum.) For now by perils and many tentations, the gates of Paradiſe ſhall be opened to the Elect and Called. Leonem ex vngue. You may know by his Offices of Saints what Chriſt this was, and what Paradiſe was now ſet open, as alſo by Peters peoples proper ſucceſſe, which being fortie thouſand, and the firſt that went, after much villanie, periſhed by Chriſtian and Turkiſh ſwords before the reſt could come, not aboue three thouſand being left. Godſcalke Prieſt, led fifteene thouſand with like ſucceſſe.

Quicquid agebat ſeu loqueb. quaſi quiddam ſubdiuinum videbatur, preſertim cum etiam de eius mulo pili pro reliquijs raperentur, Guib. hiſt. Hier.

1. Cor. 14. Rom. 13.

But aboue all, they were ſo ſuperſtitiouſly deuoted to Peter, that whatſoeuer hee ſaid or did, was held ſubdiuine, and they plucked off his Mules haires for Relikes (his hypocriticall abſtinence, Robert the Monke hath before told you.) Theſe are the words of Guibert an eye-witneſſe, which neuer ſaw man ſo frequented with multitudes, ſo enriched with gifts (which he beſtowed on his followers) ſo applauded for ſanctitie. And which more encreaſed the wonder (he calls it a miracle) victuals being that yeere very deare, yet men ſold their goods cheape to buy prouiſions deare for that way of God, as it was called. Yea, the men which to day laughed at men for this diſtracted deuotion, to morrow were ſuddenly poſſeſſed with like inſtinct, and imitated thoſe whom they had derided. Children, ſaith he, old Wiues, tender Virgins, trembling old Men, deuoted themſelues to warres and Martyrdome: poore men carrying their ſmall ſubſtance in Carts with their little ones, which asked at euery Towne if it were Ieruſalem. Theſe and much more ſhall you read of the generall confuſed raptures of that Age. Fulcberius hath told you of ſixtie hundred thouſand, which vnder-tooke the way, moſt of which repented, or dyed, or were forced to ſtay. God is not a God of confuſion: & qua à Deo ſunt; ordinata ſunt. Theſe confuſions preach Babylon, and theſe raptures, ſtrange inſtincts, ſtrong, impetuous, mad zeale, reuelations, and all abominations in all places, plainly proclaime that Hell was broken looſe indeed: and the crie of bloud, and exaltation of ſuperſtition in Reliques, and the like crie out, that Satan was looſed.

So Eadmerus which was his keeper of them, l.4.

When I read that Anſelme eſteemed the Alpha of his times for learning and ſanctitie, gaue ſo light credit to receiue two haires, brought by a Souldier of Boamunds companie from thoſe parts, with great ioy and reuerence, and to keepe them with great veneration, as two of the haires which the bleſſed Virgin plucked from her head at the Croſſe in the time of the Paſſion: (two others the Biſhop of Roan receiued with a long Proceſſion of Monkes, Canons, Prieſts, People, with the greateſt honor.) What may we thinke of the vnlearned vulgar? Yea, his iudgement of Relikes Eadmerus deſcribeth, vpon occaſion of a Bone, ſaid to be of Priſca the Martyr, giuen him, whom deſiring more, Anſelme reſtrayned, ſaying, that her body cannot bee entire ſo long as this Bone ſhall be wanting. Wherefore if thou ſhalt keepe it worthily, and ſhalt ſerue the Lady whoſe it is with what deuotion thou canſt, ſhee will accept the gift of thy ſeruice as thankefully as if thou ſhouldeſt ſerue her whole bodie. Of the Croſſe you haue alreadie read, vpon what ground it was receiued (a ſuperſtitious Surians report, as the former on a Souldiers) how obſerued and ſerued, and conſequently how multiplyed. Once, Reuelations cauſed adoration at Reliques, Croſſes, Images, Pilgrimages, and the like; that is, the Deuill was looſed a thouſand yeeres after Chriſt, to ſeduce the Nations as before, to Ethnike idolatrie and ſuperſtition, all things fitted to Heatheniſh ſplendor, and himſelfe with ſignes and lying wonders, working effectually in the children of diſobedience; Ethniciſme in Rites and worſhips being reſtored, but Palliated with Chriſtian names and ſhewes. A thouſand yeeres * had paſſed after Chriſt, before the Reall Preſence was decreed (more before Tranſubſtantion, Eleuation, Adoration, Communion in one kind) before the Cardinals grew Kings fellowes, the Election of the Pope being devolued to them; before Canoniſts, and Schoolemen, the iſſues of Lumbard and Gratian, before exemptions of the Clergie from Kings, before Kings became Subiects to the Pope, before there were any Friars, before religious Orders were ſo diuided, ſubdiuided, multiplyed; before Indulgences, Iubilees, Canonizations, legall power of Decretals, Generall Councels of all Chriſtendome called and ordered by the Pope, before marriages wholly prohibited the Clergie, before Saturday made our Ladies day, before Cruſado's, Interdictments, Inquiſitions, and other carnall and ſpirituall Monſters of crueltie. A thouſand yeeres had paſſed before this preſent face of Poperie had once ſeene the World, or the World it; which after that time of the Deuils looſing by degrees crept in, euen the moderne Councell of Trent adding many things, and many things ſtill added occaſionally by Papall Conſtitutions to Popiſh faith. The ſmoke from the bottomleſſe pit darkned the light of the Sunne to humane eyes: and this Papall Moone is euer in change, the Scriptures, as Cardinall Cuſanus writes, altering their ſenſe alſo with the practice & interpretation of the Church. Now indeed was the time when Antichriſt was aſcended his Throne, which had beene cloſely conceiued in former and better times; for euen in Pauls time the myſterie of iniquitie did alreadie worke, when ſome preached Chriſt of enuie and ſtrife, when the Paſtors did not naturally care for the ſtate of the Flocke, with a genuine, Fatherly and Paſtorly regard; but all ſought their owne and not the things of Chriſt, and that in Rome: ſo that whereas charitie ſeeketh not her owne, and God is charitie, and he that dwelleth in charitie dwelleth in God and God in him, the Deuill had no fitter meane to vnder-mine the Faith, then by diuerting charitie, peruerting and ſubuerting it with ſelfe-loue and ambition. Which ſeedes lay hidden (onely now and then ſome motions and ſpringings, as it were, in the wombe of the Roman Church, by ſome proud and wicked Popes teſtified both conception and quickneſſe) till by Phocas his Mid-wiferie Antichriſt was borne, aboue ſixe hundred yeeres after Chriſt, and grew vp by degrees to further maturitie, till a thouſand yeeres were expired, and the Deuill was againe looſed in the Sea of Rome.

* Of the acceſſe to Papall power in that Age by Hildebrands decrees, &c. See D. Vſh. vbi ſup.

Card. Cuſ. Epiſt. ad Bob.

Phil. 1. & 2.

1. Cor. 13.

1. Ioh. 4.

Theſe thouſand yeeres, after ſome were expired in the thouſandth yeere, when Sylueſter the ſecond was Pope, who had attayned the Seate by compact with the Deuill, according to whoſe æquiuocating Oracle he loſt it and his life, ſaying Maſſe in Ieruſalem, a Chappell ſo called, which he vnderſtood of the Holy Citie. The common expectation of thoſe times was of the Deuils looſing and the Worlds end, but ſeeing no ſuch matter (for this was a myſterie, in which men could not ſee Wood for Trees) they fell euery where on worke with building of glorious fabrikes of Monaſteries and Churches. Of which Hilaries words deſerue memorie: Cauete Antichriſtum. Male enim vos parietum amor cepit, malè Eccleſiam Dei in tectis adiſicijſq́; veneramini: male ſub his, pacis nomen ingeritis. Anne ambiguum eſt in his Antichriſtum eſſe ſeſſurum? Wickliffe, White and Luther, with others of later times, haue applyed the looſing of Satan to that time. Otho the Emperour gaue eight Cities to this Syluester in Marca Ancona, for his more Papall Port.

Of this looſing of Satan, ſee D. Vſhers book, de Chriſt. Eccleſ. ſucceſſ. & ſtatu.

Hil. cont. Aur. Arrian.

Others begin theſe thouſand yeeres from Chriſts Paſſion, at which time another Coniurer Theophylact, called Benedict the ninth, was Pope, made at ten or twelue yeeres of age: at which time Authors tell ſtrange reports of deuouring Locuſts in the Eaſt and Weſt, and of a portentuous Dragon, appearing of a mile in length, huge bigneſſe, dreadfull with horrible ſcales, hiſſing, coldneſſe, colours, without legs and feet, as Arnolphus an eye-witneſſe teſtifieth, ending in terrible thunders all that day (the Friday ſeuen-night after Whitſontide) and the next.

Others referre this looſing of Satan to Hildebrands time, another famous Sorcerer, ſo ſtiled (and therefore depoſed) not by Benno alone, but by a whole Synode of Biſhops, Anno 1080. He brought in the doctrines of Deuills, forbidding the Clergie marriage (which cauſed great tragedies) and appointing Saturday faſts. Once; hee exalted the Papacie and Romiſh Church to freedome, wealth, temporall Reuenue, to rule ouer all ſecular Rulers, to be Lady of all Chriſtians, from whom the right of this great, euer-dreadfull and venerable, and almoſt infinite power (they are the words of Onuphrius) hath proceeded. He firſt depoſed the Emperour, and he tooke order for exalting this Urban * the ſecond (the ſecond Turban or Hildebrand) to the Seate. As for the manners of thoſe times how degenerate they were, all the Authors which then writ, yea Tyrius the moſt famous Writer of theſe Holy Land warres, haue deliuered them beyond all parallel of all Ages for crueltie, oppreſsion, ignorance, treaſon, and all abhominations of deſolation: and like Prieſts like People. Let the Reader ſee theſe things more fully handled in Doctor Vſhers learned worke. As for thoſe which begin the Deuils binding at Conſtantines time, and looſing with Boniface, one thouſand and three hundred yeeres after Chriſt, they doe not well conſider that from Gregorie to Boniface there was more effuſion of Chriſtian bloud, then had beene all the times of the ten Primitiue Perſecutions; not onely by Turkes, Tartars, and ciuill warres amongſt the Chriſtians; but alſo by occaſion of the Warres called Holy, both in the millions which periſhed in them, and other millions by them through Indulgences againſt Emperours, Kings, Princes, States, Albigenſes and all the Opponents whatſoeuer. And what are ſeuentie to a thouſand, whetherſoeuer of theſe three opinions be followed?

* Victor the next Pope liued but a little while.

---

§. II.

Of the foure meanes which Popes haue to get monies: Of the two firſt, their Temporalties and Collations of Benefices.

Hiſt. concil. Trid. l. 1. publiſhed in Italian, and Latin, and Engliſhed by Maſter Brent.

Franciſcus Soderinus Cardinall of Volterra, a man verſed in the troubleſome affaires of the Papacies of Alexander, Iulius and Leo, could counſell Adrian that reformation of manners was not the way to extinguiſh Hereſies, rayſed againſt the authoritie of the Church of Rome; but Cruſado's, by exciting Princes and People to roote them out; that thus Innocent the third oppreſſed the Albigenſes, and the ſucceeding Popes the Waldenſes, Picards, Lioniſts, Arnoldiſts, Speroniſts and Patauines: that likewiſe many German Princes if they might haue leaue to ſeiſe on the States of Luthers fauourers, would greedily embrace the condition; and many might bee cauſed to follow them by Indulgences. Neither could any reformation be made without diminiſhing the Rents of the Church, which hauing foure Fountaynes, the one Temporall (the Rents of the Eccleſiaſticall ſtate) the other three Spirituall, Indulgences, Diſpenſations, and Collations of Benefices; none of them could be ſtopped, but that one quarter of the Reuenues would be cut off. You ſee here the foure Riuers of the Popes Paradiſe, the foure feete of the Beaſt, all which had either their beginning of being, or ſtrength at leaſt to ſupport it about theſe times. For as for the Temporall Reuenues, their originall is deriued from the rebellion rayſed againſt Leo Iconomachus, whom for aboliſhing Images, Pope Gregorie the ſecond excommunicated, ac mox Italiæ populos Sacramenti (they are the words of Sigonius the Popes Hiſtorian) quo ſe illi obligauerant religione exoluit, & ne ei aut tributum darent, aut alia ratione obedirent, in dixit. Thus the People reuolted, killed the Emperours Lieutenants and ſware ſubiection to the Pope. Ita Roma, Romanuſq́; Ducatus ad Rom. Pontificem peruenit. So did Rome and the Roman Dukedome accrue to the Pope by treaſon (or by leaſing, for Onuphrius a Papall Antiquarie eſteemes it a tale) and hauing thriued ſo well by treaſon at home, he fared much better by like arts elſewhere: the French, by the Popes counſaile enthronizing Pipine, and depoſing Chilperike: who with Charles his ſonne were not vnthankfull. For to omit Pipines deuotion, his ſonne Charles hauing ſubdued the Lumbards (which ſtill were troubleſome to the Popes, not permitting them well to hold what they had ſo ill gotten) left Apulia and Calabria to the Emperour (which the Normans after turned into another Kingdome) to others other parts, to the Pope he permitted the Exarchate of Rauenna, Pentapolis, the Peruſine Dukedome, the Roman, Tuſcane and Campan, iure principatu & ditione ſibi retentâ; reliqua ipſe ſibi nomine regni retinuit. The Right, Soueraigntie and Iuriſdiction reſerued, made the Pope no abſolute Prince: and the acknowledging him Patricius Romanus, the making and Inueſtiture by Ring and Staffe of Archbiſhops and Biſhops in euery Prouince, yea his chooſing the Pope and ordering the Apoſtolike Sea, made him an abſolute ſubiect. And ſubiects they were till Hildebrands time, and their authoritie, ſaith Onuphrius, extended not further then matters of Faith. Cæterum Imperatoribus ſuberant, ad eorum nutum omnia fiebant, de eis iudicare vel quidquam decernere non audebat Papa Romanus. Primus omnium R. Pont. Greg. 7. armis Nortmannorum fretus, opibus Comitiſſæ Mathildis mulieris per Italiam Potentiſſimæ confiſus, diſcordiaq́; Germanorum Principum bello ciuili laborantium inflammatus, præter maiorum morem contempta Imperatoris authoritate & poteſtate, cum ſummum Pontificatum obtinuiſſet, Cæſarem ipſum (à quo ſi non electus, ſaltem confirmatus fuerat) non dico excommunicare, ſed etiam regno Imperioq́; priuare auſus eſt. Res ante ea ſæcula inaudita. Nam fabulas quæ de Arcadio, Anaſtaſio, & Leone Iconomacho circumferuntur nihil moror. And thus whereas the Popes and the whole Clergie had beene exalted by Princes, they became Princes of their Princes; and in this Gregorie firſt * imitated Dauid, which cut off Goliahs head with his owne ſword, as Otho Friſingenſis hath obſerued. Henrie the fourth King, the third Emperor of that name, was the ſubiect of Gregories furie, a man for humilitie, patience, and many vertues much commended; yea, for bountie to the Church, as at Spire, Mentz, &c. and for valour tried

Car. Sigon. de reg. Ital. l. 3. A. D. 726.

Sig. l. 4.

Onuph. in vita Greg. 7. col. 271, 272. ſee Auentine, and diuers Authors, cited by D. Vſher, vbi ſup.

* Sigeb. Chron. hæc ſola nouitas, ne dicam hæreſis &c. Otho Friſ. lego & relego Rom. regum & Imp. geſta & nuſquam inuenio ante &c. Otho Friſ. Chron. lib 6. in fine & prol. 7.

Vid. lib. de vita Henr. written by one of that time, Malmſb. l. 3. de Reg. Ang.

tried in ſixtie two battels, but ſo haunted with the euill Genius of the Papacie, vt rem religionis tractare ſibi videretur quiſquis in illum (you read our Malmesburie) arma produceret. The temporall power of the Pope, was much increaſed by the great Legacie of Counteſſe Mathildis, (as a little before by the gift of Otho to Sylueſter) and by taking aduantages in the Norman and other occaſions: which they held with vneuen fortunes, and not ſo quiet that Rome it ſelfe could well brooke it (which cauſed diuers of them to liue at Auinion for about ſeuentie yeeres) and was not ſecure to them till the time of Boniface the ninth, a man compoſed of the worſt vices and beſt fortunes, as Theodorike à Niem, one of his Courtiers obſerueth; who firſt, in alto & baſſo (ſaith he) temporale dominium habuit, quod contigit ex diſſenſione ciuium Romanorum. So Platina, Primus populi Romani vim omnem in Pontificem transtulerit, creatis ſuo nutu Magiſtratibus omnibus, munitaq; Sancti Angeli arce, &c. Once, how euer they got this Papall Duchie or temporall Kingdome, they had neuer kept it but by their Spirituall Empire and Monarchie, and that branch eſpecially which lookes to Ieruſalem. For the generation of the Popes Temporalties in Italie, (now valued by ſome aboue diuers Kingdomes) aroſe out of the corruption and ruine of the Empire, the Emperours being Kings aſwell of Italie as Germany, crowned * not onely at Aquiſgraue or Germanie, but at Milan for Italie, and at Rome for the Empire. But the Empire decaying by the Popes ſtratagems, by bandying factions againſt the Emperours, by inciting them to Holy Land Expeditions (to their great weakning) by exciting the World againſt them for neglect, by taking opportunities in their abſence at home, by ſeeking to betray them there, by applying and employng the Cruſados and Indulgences, (yea, ſometimes as before yee haue read of Conrade) greater indulgence againſt them, or theirs then againſt Saracens, (moſt of which Matthew Paris hath deliuered of Fredericke the Second) beſides, Monies raiſed, by Tenths, Lones, Impoſitions, and ſpecially by releaſing Vowes for Holy Land Expeditions, to maintayne Armies againſt them; hence the Imperiall Rent, Guelph and Gibelline long and bloudie diuiſion, and the Emperour quite depriued of Italie, and ſo little left him of Germanie, in Germanie alſo. Thus hath the Pope turned his Keyes into Pick-lockes, into Swords, into Scepters, exerciſing his Spirituall vnlimited power, Extra anni ſoliſq; vias (ſaith * one) to all parts of the World: yea, and if there ſhould be found out more Worlds, as Democritus dreamed, this Dreamer addes that they ſhould all be vnder Papall Iuriſdiction. This hath no Hils, Seas, or Riuers for boundaries, but is without Horizon or limitation. And this power hath two Functions to rule; and to prouide againſt dangers of Wolues; both vicious and hereticall perſons, as alſo Princes either malignant or negligent. For ſeeing that Princes haue original from Elections of the people, and this power is confirmed by mutuall Oathes of Prince and people, and God hath giuen all power of binding and looſing of Oathes to the Pope: therefore Botero concludes all Temporall Princes ſubiect to the Popes cenſure, which Ordine ad Deum, in pretence of defence the Church hath raiſed ſuch Tragedies in the Chriſtian World.

Theod.de Schiſ. l.2.c.13.

Plat. de vit.P.in Bon.9.

* See Bot. and Booke of Eſtates by E.G.

* Botero 2. part.l.4.

Now for Collations of Benefices, theſe partly depend of his Temporall Soueraigntie, and partly are wrung and extorted from Temporall Soueraignes and Patrones, vnder pretence of their Simoniacall beſtowing them. This the pretended quarrell of Gregorie to Henrie, and of his Succeſſors to the next Henrie, and all other Chriſtian Princes. Eadmerus was preſent at the Roman Councell of Pope Vrbane, and heard his words excommunicating all Lay-men giuing, and all Eccleſiaſticals taking Inueſtitures at their hands, and all which conſecrated ſuch ſo inueſted (a cuſtome which had continued many Ages) and all which for preferments of the Church did homage to Lay-men, Dicens nimis execrabile videri, manus quæ in tantam eminentiam excreuerint, vt quod nulli Angelorum conceſſum eſt, Deum cuncta creantem ſuo miniſterio creent, & eundem ipſum pro redemptione & ſalute totius Mundi Summi Dei Patris obtutibus offerant, in hanc ignominiam detrudi, vt ancillæ fiant earum manuum quæ die ac nocte obſcœnis contagijs inquinantur, rapinis & iniuſtæ ſanguinum effuſioni addictæ commaculantur. He addes; His præſentes fuimus, hæc conſpeximus, his ab vniuerſis fiat, fiat, acclamari audiuimus. Thus you ſee the Reall and Corporeall Preſence (that men may know what benefit accrueth to the Pope by that Doctrine) is made an argument of deueſting Princes of Inueſtitures, and making of Prelates: both firſt confirmed in that Age, the one by Pope Nicholas againſt Berengarius, the other by Gregorie and Vrban: thus oppoſing and exalting himſelfe aboue all that is called God, or that is worſhipped, that is ouer all powers Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall (called Gods) and ouer God himſelfe, whom here he profeſſeth to be created by his creature: a three-fold cord of power, all broken by one blaſt of the Pope.

Ead. Nouorum lib.2.

Vid. Selden Annot. ad eund. Malmesbur. &c.

2.Theſ.2.4.

How ſtifly King Henry ſtood for his Inueſtitures, and how Henry the Emperour warred and captiued the next Pope Paſchall for them, Eadmerus, Malmeſbury, and others then liuing teſtifie, the Pope ſwearing and ſtarting from his Oath in that caſe. Neither is it likely that the Popes had thus made all Biſhops and Abbots depend vpon themſelues, without acknowledging homage to their Princes, vſurping ſo euidently al Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy, had not the ciuil combuſtions on one ſide (as here vnder King Stephen the firſt King which diſcontinued them) and exhauſtions into the Holy Land on the other ſide, made the Pope dreadfull, whoſe breath could thus lead the Weſterne World into the Eaſt. Thus did the Pope vſurpe a Monopoly of the Keyes by Elections, Poſtulations, Tranſlations, Reſeruations, Prouiſions, Vnions, Permutations, Acceſſes, Regreſſes, Coadiutories; by Compoſitions for Palls, Croſier Staues, Miters, Rings; perſonall a The Pope can make his Cardinals rich and himſelfe by their creation, both by money for that dignity, and by al their former Benefices falling to him.

Theod. à N. l. 2. c. 7, 8, 9, 10. & d.

b The words of P. Alexander, treading on the Emperors necke. Super Aſpidem & Baſiliſcum ambulabis, &c.

Viſitations by Biſhops and Abbots of the Apoſtles ſtaires; by making his Cardinals; [a] (which in this Age firſt grew to be Giants and men of renowme, and as I ſaid, Kings fellows, being before but Biſhops, Prieſts, & Deacons,) able to carrie it out in pomp and Maieſtie as beſits the Apoſtles of Chriſts Vicar; and by inriching his Kindred, Countrymen, Officers, and Fauorites with the beſt Benefices and Prelacies in euery Countrey, (whereof let the Reader informe himſelfe in Matthew Paris, of that Ægyptian Babylonian ſeruitude in his time, as alſo of his impoſing ſummes of money to bee giuen out of theſe, and if they had it not, to be taken vp of the Caurſines (Out-landiſh Papall Vſurers, at abominable rates) Tenths, Firſt-fruits, Thirds, Fifthes, and I know not what Annuities and Penſions, yea, the open and ſhameleſſe ſale of theſe at Rome (read Theod. à Niem a Courtier to many Popes, of Arts beyond what Simon, or Magus, or the Deuill himſelfe had euer heard of, if it could be Simonie which the Popes did, who forſooth could not ſinne as their flatterers ſaid) and laſtly, by making Lawes in all theſe and other Eccleſiaſticall affaires to remayne to all Generations, whereby the Clergie was exempt from Kings, not Kings from their Clergie; yea, forced out of their means and Lands, to maintayne the ſubiects of another Soueraigne; euery Monaſterie being a Caſtle, euery Cathedral a ſpirituall exempt Citie, euery Prelate the Popes Captaine, and to whom alſo they were particularly ſworne. Conſider this legge of the beaſt, and conſider Monſtrum horrendum, informe, conceiued long before, in receiuing Appeales from all parts, but borne in that Smoke from the bottomleſſe pit, when Satan was looſed; nor euer could haue growne to full age, if Indulgences had not ſtrengthned the Popes, to tread vnder foote all [b] Aſpes and Baſiliskes (ſo they eſteemed gaine-ſaying Kings and Emperours) nor were Indulgences of any force at all in this kinde before this Expedition, when and whence ſprung their vnexpected puiſſance, and thence the Popes, as ſhall anon appeare.

See the ſtories before related.

Beſides, the Eaſterne Patriarkes which before theſe warres, held of long time in many Ages no communion with the Popes of Rome, by this meanes became ſubiect to him, Antiochia firſt, then Ieruſalem, and after that Conſtantinople it ſelfe (Romes Corriuall) being ſubiected and ſubdued by theſe Expeditions from the Weſt; and I know not what Genius, both in the Eaſt and Weſt, making the Biſhops in ſeeming moſt religious, make this a part of their Religion to quarrell with their Kings, (and one with another for ſuperioritie of their Seas) and goe to the Pope for refuge, as is ſeene in Anſelme of Canterburie, Thurſtan of Yorke, and others; and eſpecially Thomas Becket, whoſe murder in that quarrell, conſtrued to a Martyrdome, and rewarded with a Canonization, did ſuper-exceedingly aduance and aduantage the Popes power ouer Kings; furthered by the emulation of the French King againſt the Engliſh, which inſtigated the Biſhop firſt, after the Pope; laſtly, his owne ſonnes againſt him, honouring the new Saint alſo with perſonall Viſitation, Offering and Pilgrimage. Alſo Daibert the firſt Weſterne Patriarch of Ieruſalem, taught his Succeſſors this Leſſon, who went to Rome to complaine of his King; William an Engliſhman, firſt Latine Archbiſhop of Tyre, and William, the Authour of the Holy Land Hiſtory, with others muſt needs fetch their power from Rome: and the Eaſterne Empire beeing before weakened by the Saracens and Turkes, now engirt on both ſides by the Weſterne Frankes, the heart and bowels being alſo by ciuill diſſentions embroyled, it muſt needs follow that by the fall of her Competitor, Rome muſt ariſe, ſit alone and reigne as a Queene; Whoſe ambitious neglects, hath ſince betrayed that whole Empire to the Turke.

§. III.

Of Diſpenſations.

BVt Temporalties and Benefices were but the hinder legges, of this Babylonicall Beaſt, for ſtabilitie; Diſpenſations and Indulgences were the two fore-legs, more actiue for prey and puiſſance. And theſe alſo now began to bee of vigour and ſtrength in the Church to Papall Monarchicall intents and purpoſes. As for Diſpenſations it is true, that there was ſome vſe of them in the ancient Church: it beeing neceſſary that as in the Temporall, ſo in the Eccleſiaſticall Republique, there ſhould be according to conducent circumſtances, a qualification of rigid (which differing times may eſteeme rigorous) Canons. Euen the Ceremonies of Diuine Law yeelded to the neceſſitie of Charitie, as in Dauids eating the Shew-bread, iuſtified by Chriſt himſelfe, who preferres Mercie to Sacrifice. How much more in the milder times of the Goſpell, and in the Canons and Conſtitutions Eccleſiaſticall, not giuen immediately by miniſterie of Angels; nor to a Iewiſh Pinfold, or one compendious people, and that for a ſet time till Shilo came; but to a Sea of peoples, by miniſtery of men, without limitation of time; may the difference of times, manners, and men require a diſpenſing by change, or ſuſpenſion by conniuence, making the beſt harmonie of Mercie and Iudgement. No man puts new wine into old veſſels: nor were later, weaker times fitted to the ſeueritie of the Ancients, which were both more holy, and by neceſſitie were forced for want of the Temporall Sword, to whet the Spirituall ſharper. Neither can men ſee all circumſtances which may ariſe, nor are all men or times of one conſtant tenor. Summum ius, ſumma iniuria: The wringing of the Noſe bringeth forth bloud; the forcing of wrath bringeth forth ſtrife. Charitie couereth a multitude of offences, is weake with them that are weake, and burneth when others are offended, maketh vs all things to all: yea, caſts forth the wheate into the Sea to preuent ſhipwracke, notwithſtanding a promiſe of deliuerance. Hence new Parliaments, Statutes, Edicts; hence later Councels, Synods, Canons.

Ground and reaſon of Diſpenſations.

Pro.30.vlt. & 10.
1.Cor.9.
Acts 27.

But what is this to the Popes Non obſtante? a plenitude of power to diſpenſe with Oathes, Vowes, and whatſoeuer Diuine or Humane, ſtanding in the way of his Monarchie? True it is, that aboue foure hundred yeares before this time, Gregorie Biſhop of Antiogh did diſpenſe with the Oath of the Armie, which ſaid, they had ſworne not to admit Philippicus their Commander, alledging the Epiſcopall power of binding and looſing: but this was to preuent, not to inuent Treaſon; to reduce to, and not ſeduce from loyaltie & ſubiection to their Emperor. In theſe times firſt were the Keyes of the kingdom of heauen, pretended by Peters pretended Succeſſor, to exclude the Kings of the earth, with Petra dedit Petro, Petrus Diadema Rodulpho, ſetting vp one & putting down another Emperor at Papall pleaſure. Little did Diſpenſations before auaile the Papacie (except in enlarging the Phylacteries of his ſpirituall power, in admitting Appeales, and making himſelfe a Buſie-bodie, and Interloper, Magnus Eccleſiæ ardelio) but now the Cedars of Libanus quaked with feare of fire from the bramble, when Diſpenſations with the Oathes of Subiects, had depoſed Henry the victorious Emperour, by the Miniſterie of his owne Sonne. In vaine did that Sonne ſeeke afterwards to ſtop the current in taking the Pope Priſoner: Sero medicina paratur; his Fathers Example might teach him to feare ſome Abſolom, to imitate himſelfe.

Euag.l 6.c.12.
In malis promiſſis reſcinde fidem, in turpi voto muta decretum.
Iud.9.

And eſpecially Diſpenſations were brought into requeſt, by the queſt of the Holy Land: when large Merit and larger Indulgences, Priuiledges, Prauiledges attend the Vow, and taking the Croſſe on the one ſide; and larger ſummes fill the Popes Coffers on the other ſide by the Popes diſpenſing: when ſome Friars goe before to preach the Cruſado and holy Warre, other Friars are ſent after with Faculties to diſpenſe for ſo much money, as the Expedition would coſt you, leauing you no leſſe merit with a great deale more ſafetie, eaſe and pleaſure at home: when the Pope can thus proſtitute the zeale of Chriſtians, to let and ſet it to Farmers and Vndertakers, as to Richard Earle of Cornwall, (whoſe ſummes this way gotten were incredible, able to make way to his Imperiall Election) when the like Diſpenſations are beſtowed as Papall fauours to repaire the broken ſtate of others: when Diſpenſations raiſe vp new Locuſts from the bottomleſſe pit; not only exempting ſome principall Monaſteries from Epiſcopall Iuriſdiction, as the Popes peculiars vnder Saint Peters immediate protection (and hee thus obliged the chiefe Colledges of the chiefe learned men of thoſe times, to maintayne that power which priuiledged them) but Chapters of Cathedrall Churches, whole Orders of Religion, as the Cluniacenſian and Ciſtercian Congregations; and after that the Orders of Friars in their ſeuerall ſwarmes, diſpenſing to them, not only Exemptions from Biſhops, but power to build Churches, to receiue Confeſſions, to preach in all places, to be Biſhops in euery Dioceſſe, and Curates in euery Pariſh; at once Papall Lords by Diſpenſations, and Mendicants by Vow and Profeſſion. Yea, euery pettie Prieſt might obtayne by his Purſe an exemption from Epiſcopall power. And laſtly, new Diſpenſations, and new Priuiledges haue hatched a new Ignatian Societie of parti-coloured Leopards, Regular-Secular-Clergie-Lay-Fathers-Friars-all-things-nothing.

Nummus ait pro me, nubit Cornubia Romæ.
See hiſt.Conc. Trid. pag.221.

Thus Diſpenſations made way to get monies by Sales; Friends by Gifts, Patrons by patronizing (Forts and Armies of Learned men in Abbies, Couents, Colledges, Congregations, Orders) yea, they robbed the Church of her Officers and Labourers; it being now a glorious vertue for Biſhops and Prieſts to forſake their flockes, and in ſtead of Spirituall warfare againſt the Deuill, (by preaching to caſt downe, with weapons not carnall, imaginations and euery high thing exalted againſt the knowledge of God) to imbrace this carnall againſt the Turks, walking in and warring after the fleſh: yea, they were diſpenſed with for non reſidence, mean-while, and to receiue or lay to pawne the fruits of their Benefices for that three yeares, no leſſe then if they were reſident. So Baldwin Archbiſhop of Canterbury, made a Pilgrimage thorow England and Wales, to winne Pilgrimes for this warre. Pope Gregorie had excommunicated Fredericke the Emperour, for not going to the holy warres, as he had vowed: hee went and did glorioully, as you haue read alreadie: but the Hoſpitulars and Templars purſuing the Popes quarrell ſought to betray him to the Soldan, (a perfidie odious to that Infidell) and in his abſence the Pope ſets Iohn de Brenes, to conquer and ſubiect his Sicilian Dominions. For quarrels of thoſe Templars, and others, he is againe excommunicated; and the third time by Innocent in the Councell of Lions: Omneſq; (ſaith the Pope therein) qui ei iuramento fidelitatis aliquo modo aſtricti vel obligati, à iuramento huiuſmodi perpetuò abſoluimus & liberamus, authoritate Apoſtolica firmiter & ſtrictim inhibendo ne quiſquam de cetero ſibi tanquam Imperatori vel Regi pareat, vel quomodo libet parere intendat. Decernendo quoſlibet qui deinceps ei, velut Imperatori vel Regi, conſilium vel auxilium præſtiterint (could the Deuill haue roared lowder againſt Charitie?) ſeu fautorem, ipſo facto excommunicationis vinculo ſubiacere, &c.

2.Cor.10.4.
Concil. Sur.tom. 3.pag.754.
Mat.Paris. Hen.3.pag.911. in Concil.Lugdu.
Of Baldwins Itinerarie, Giraldus hath written a book.

To palliate this Diſpenſation of Oathes, and electing a new Emperour, the Holy Land buſineſſe was alſo a goodly couert, where beſides the Diſpenſations to beneficed Prieſts (after this Expedition, giuen to all ſuch as could pay the price, inſomuch, that Iohn Manſell had foure thouſand Markes of Eccleſiaſticall Reuenue in thoſe dayes of Henry the Third, and others incredible purchaſes in that kind of pluralities) he authorizeth Biſhops to excommunicate and interdict the Lands of ſuch as hauing receiued the Croſſe did not performe their vow. All Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, and ſuch as haue cure of ſoules, are enioyned to preach this word of the Croſſe to their Cures, to goe or ſend Souldiers thither for remiſſion of their ſinnes. Croſſed Detters are freed from paying Vſuries, although bound thereto by Oath, &c.

* Non obſtante was a clauſe, ſignifying not-withſtanding, that is not-withſtanding any Canon, Law, Promiſe, Priuiledge, &c he would diſpenſe, and they might do the contrarie.

And thus treaſonable Diſpenſations beganne by Hildebrand, grew vp to ſtrength and maturitie by this Holy Land buſineſſe, and both Laitie and Clergie at once were exempt from oaths, vowes, and bonds to God and Men. Hence grew that Non obſtante, * ſo often mentioned by Matthew Paris, for the grieuances whereof the whole Parliament ſent Anno 1246. Meſſengers or Legats, to Lions to treate with the Pope, and for which that Lincolne Biſhop Robert Groſted (whom the Weſterne Church admired for Learning and Sanctitie) both writ to the Pope, and on his death-bed proued him to be Antichriſt. He affirmeth alſo that the King vndertooke to ſweare with moſt ſolemne Ceremonies of Candle curſe, that which hee obſerued not, in confidence of the Popes Diſpenſation: yea, falſified his owne, and fruſtrated his Progenitors Acts and Grants in profeſſed imitation of the Popes Non obſtante: vowed this Holy Land Expedition, and ſware where hee had no meaning to doe any thing, but get money of his people; part whereof might procure Papall Diſpenſation. Yea, hereby the Popes haue obliged Kings, States, and Kingdomes to them, by diſpenſing with oathes, with Marriages in degrees forbidden, or hauing other wiues liuing, ſo that their Poſterities ſtand obnoxious to the Pope for feare of illegitimation.

See abundant teſtimonies hereof in Conc. Lat. ſub Iul. 2. & Leon. 10.

In the firſt of theſe the Pope by Temporalties became a temporall Prince by Treaſon to his Prince; in the ſecond by Collation of Benefices, hee became vniuerſall Biſhop, ſwallowing the power of all Biſhops and Church-men, and of Princes ouer them, into a Papall Whirle-poole, which he confirmed by Lawes, ſitting in Eccleſiam (as it was propheſied of the Man of Sinne) as repreſenting the whole Church, inueſted in her whole power, which vnder him as vnder couert Barnes was no perſon in Law, but hee anſweres all in Law, and is himſelfe in his written Decretals, and in his preſent Conſiſtorie, the ſpeaking Law of the Church: In this third, he is more then Law, cutting aſunder the Gordian knot, by Diſpenſations, if he cannot by Gloſſes, and qualifying Interpretations vntye it; aboue Law, aboue the Church, aboue God, aboue himſelfe by his Non Obſtante, in fulneſſe of power diſanulling all their acts hindering his acts and preſent purpoſes. And whatſoeuer hath beene by former Popes, by Councels, by themſelues ordained for reformation, vna falſa lachrymala quam vix vi extorſerit, one goodly pretence forced to ſome ſhew of equitie, ſhall with a Diſpenſing Non Obſtante, turne to ſerue his turne, and bring money to his Coffers, though purpoſely deuiſed againſt it.

Hiſt. Conc. Trid. pag. 251.

Guicciard. hiſt. lib. 6.

Thus dealt he with Commenda's (deuiſed for the good of the Church, which was commended for a time to ſome other fit Rector, till a proper Rector and worthy might be procured) to a longer time, yea, to terme of life, for the goods, not the good of the Church. Euen after Luthers preaching Pope Clement commended to Hyppolitus all the Benefices of the World, Secular and Regular, Dignities and Parſonages, Simple and with Cure, being vacant for ſixe monethes, to beginne from the firſt day of his poſſeſſion, with power to diſpoſe of, and to conuert to his vſe all the fruits. Yea, this Cardinall de Medicis (which plucked out the eyes of his brother Iulius whom his Miſtris loued more then him for his eyes ſake) continued to hold the Archbiſhopricks of Milan in Lumbardie, Capua in the Kingdome of Naples, Strigonium in Hungarie, beſides the Biſhoprickes of Agria in Hungarie, Mutina, and Ferrara in Italie, places ſo far diſtant. Vnions deuiſed for the Churches prouiſion in the inſufficience of one liuing, by adding ſome neere one, were ſtretched to thirtie or fortie wherſoeuer lying, as if the good not of the Church, but of the perſon had beene intended.

See Rain. and Harr. 7. 6.

Matthew Paris in his time tels that the Pope ſent to the Biſhops of Canterbury, Lincolne, and Saliſbury, to prouide three hundred Romanes in the Benefices next vacant, giuing none other till theſe were prouided, which neuer meant to come at any cure but of the money. Yea, when they dyed other Italians ſucceeded, ſo that their receits in this kind, far ſurmounted the Crowne Lands: and after complaints to the Pope, and the fore-mentioned Councell ſo zealous of the Holy Land, the caſe was worſe, as it hapned to the Iſraelites by Pharoes Taxe-maſters, ſwelling from ſixtie to ſeuentie thouſand Markes. Clement the ſixt reſerued for two Cardinals, which hee had lately made, the Benefices void and to be next void, beſides Biſhoprickes, and Abbeyes, to the ſumme of two thouſand Markes, which in the valuations of thoſe times, might one with another be two hundred, forſooth, for theſe Principes mundi, conſiliarij noſtri (ſo ſaith Pope Pius of his Cardinals) & coniudices orbis terrarum, ſucceſſores Apoſtolorum circa thronum ſedentes, Senatores vrbis & Regum ſimiles, veri mundi Cardines, ſuper quos militantis oſtium Eccleſiæ voluendum ac regendum eſt. Thus Cardinall * Wolſey is ſaid to haue had more Reuenues, then all the Biſhops and Deanes in England now.

T. Walſingham in Ed. 3.

Sac. Cer. Ec. Rom lib. 1. ſ. 8. c. 3.

* Herologia Anglica.

In the Councell of Trent (which pretended to reforme, intended to palliate, if not further to pollute with abuſes, at leaſt in the greater and Papall part) the Pope could not indure the queſtion of Reſidence due iure diuino, which the Spaniſh Biſhops vrged, and in the queſtion of Diſpenſations had Adrian a Dominican Friar, to defend his abſolute and vnlimited power; and though he diſpenſed without cauſe, the diſpenſation was to be held for good, alledging that of Saint Paul, that Miniſters are diſpenſers of the myſteries of God, and to them is the diſpenſation * committed (his paterne was the Diſpenſer or Steward, Luc.16. which is ſaid to deale wiſely, as the Pope did in the Maſter piece of their skill, this whole Councell) and though the Popes diſpenſation in diuine Law be not of force, yet euery one ought to captiuate his vnderſtanding, and beleeue that he hath granted it for a lawfull cauſe, and that it is temeritie to call it in queſtion. Laynez, the Generall of the laſt Locuſt-brood (the * Ieſuites) ſaid, that to ſay the Pope cannot by diſpenſation diſoblige him who is obliged before God, is to teach men to preferre their owne conſcience before the authoritie of the Church; that it cannot be denyed that Chriſt had power to diſpenſe in euery Law, nor that the Pope is his Vicar, nor that there is the ſame Tribunall and Conſiſtorie of the Principall and the Vicegerent; ſo it muſt be confeſſed that the Pope hath the ſame authoritie: that this is the priuiledge of the Church of Rome, which it is hereſie to take away, &c. that it belonged not to the Councell to reforme the Court, becauſe the Scholar is not aboue his Maſter, nor the Seruant aboue his Lord. And thus muſt all men diſpenſe with Romiſh Diſpenſations: and thus it comes to paſſe that the Popes Exchequor is like vnto the Sea, into which all Riuers runne, and yet it runnes not ouer; as one obſerued which ſerued long, and well obſerued the reſerued courſes in the Popes Court.

Hiſt.conc Tr.l.7.

1.Cor.4.

* A gloſſe contrarie to the Text, as if Diſpenſing the Word, were concealing or cancelling it.

* Hiſt conc.Tr. lib.8.

Theod. Niem. Nem.vn.tr.6. c.37.

Neither is it amiſſe to heare Sanſouino tell the manner of diſpenſing Diſpenſations at Rome, in his eleuenth Booke, written wholly del Gouerno della Corte Romana. The authoritie of the Pope (ſaith he) as the Head, diſperſeth it ſelfe into ſo many members, that the Courtiers vſe to grow old before they vnderſtand that gouernment. There is firſt, the Colledge of Cardinalls, the Head whereof is the Pope (therefore called Maximus) and the Cardinals members; of which the number is not certayne in our times, howſoeuer it is found that in former times there were but twelue. Theſe Illuſtrious Fathers aſſemble once a weeke, which Aſſembly is called the Conſiſtorie; in which Senate are appointed Biſhops, Archbiſhops, Metropolitans and Patriarks when the Seas are void, whoſe election doth not belong * to a Chapiter, Citie, Prouince, King, or other perſon: in which caſe they are choſen by the Pope and this Senate. Here they treat of all things which belong to Worſhip, to Faith, to Religion, to the peace of Chriſtendome, to the temporall eſtate of the Church of Rome. In this ſacred Senate (as the greateſt in the World) all Prouinces, all Regulars, and all Kings, haue their Fathers Defenders, which they call Protectors, who propound the cauſes of their Prouinces, &c.

F. Sanſouino del gou.de diuerſi regni.

* Euen in theſe the Pope hath made prouiſions at his pleaſure, as in many Archbiſhops of Cant. &c.

For the Penitentiarie, he addes, that all the World ſeekes to the Pope for many graces in that matter, which our Lord Ieſus Chriſt left vnto Peter, to wit, of looſing and binding in earth whatſoeuer he will. Now this part being by the Pope reſerued to himſelfe; that other is accuſtomed to be granted of him, that is, that of looſing, to one of the Cardinals, who is called the chiefe Penitentiarie, who for ſo much as appertaynes to that which is common in the diuine Law, and to his Abſolution, exerciſeth the Iuriſdiction committed to him by the Pope by many Vicars and Subſtitutes, called Penitentiaries (or Penitentiers) diuided thorowout all the greateſt Churches of Rome, as Saint Peters in the Vatican, Saint Iohn de Lateran, Saint Marie Major. But the Diſpenſations which are made touching obſeruation of humane Lawes, he granteth not but in ſome caſes, and by himſelfe. And by a generall commiſſion from the Pope he heares Sutors in ſuch affaires, and hauing ſeene their Demands, if there be any cauſe * for which the Sutor meriteth to be heard, and that which he requireth hath beene accuſtomed to be granted by the Pope; he writes by authoritie Apoſtolicall and of his Office, and not by the Popes mouth but by that generall commiſſion in his Letters of commiſſion from the Popes mouth, hee affirmes, and his Aſſertion is beleeued as in a thing belonging to his Office, and reſcribes alway to the Supplication on that ſide directed to the Pope in one of theſe formes, fiat in forma, fiat de ſpeciali, fiat de eſpreſſo, with which varietie of wordes he lets the Taxers vnderſtand the importance of the Suit: and as the Reſcript of the Penitentiarie differs in forme, ſo the taxes of the payments are altered by the Officers. And in theſe times the multitude of humane Lawes is ſo increaſed, both by the Pope, and by Councells, and by Monaſteries, that men being in ſome ſort bound, deſiring their ancient libertie, haue recourſe by way of Supplication to the Penitentiarie, who hauing ſigned the Suppliants Bill with his hand, they diſpatch the Bulls vnder his Name and Seale. And for that many times hee doth not write backe preciſely, requiring ſome atteſtation of the Suppliant, hee appoints Iudges by his writing, which taking knowledge of the Cauſe, perfect the Act; and herein he appoints others in his place. And this holy Office of the Penitentiarie, for the greater commoditie of them which come for Expeditions hath foure and twentie Defenders of Suppliants, which are called the Proctors of the holy Penitentiarie. Theſe as Aduocates declare the Contents of his Suite, and as it were plead the Cauſe before the Penitentiarie, of whom they procure to obtayne their Suite, and to get their Bulls diſpatched. He vſeth alſo to reſcribe in many Cauſes appertayning to Iuſtice, and as it were alway to grant in the one kinde and in the other, here vnder noted, Diſpenſations matrimoniall in degrees forbidden by the Law * of Man, legitimations of Children; Diſpenſations in reſpect of them, or for want of members due to ſuch as are to receiue Orders

Note how meane Gods Lawes are to humane in Rome.

* Quod ſi doloſi ſpes refulſerit nummi.

The fruit of many Canons and Lawes Eccleſiaſticall, publike and priuate.

* This the reaſon of their ſtrict law: as for the Law of God as in Henry the eight &c. the Fees is too great for the Penitentiarie.

ders or Benefices; alſo for incompatabilitie of more Benefices. Abſolutions from homicide in Foro Conſcientiæ; for Clerkes in both Courts, with retention of Benefices and Diſpenſations for more. The like for Simonie, for Exile, moreouer from an Oath for the effect of the operation, from falſe Oathes, commutation of Vowes, and Licences from obſeruation of any humane Law, and eſpecially of Regulars from any Chapiter (or Article) of the Lawes of their Rules. He giues Indulgences to places and perſons; and moreouer, infinite Commiſsions in forme of Law, as namely, the Declaration of the Nullitie or Inualiditie of Marriage, which are called Declaratorie: and in many other things which are knowne to them that practiſe in the Eccleſiaſticke Courts.

They doe euery day demand the Subſcriptions from the Pope of ſuch things as come from his voluntarie and proper liberalitie, as the grants of Benefices and other things, which are alſo generally committed to the Great Penitentiarie, and all matters which pertayne to Iuſtice in things Eccleſiaſticall thorow all parts of the World, as alſo in things profane of the temporall patrimonie of the holy Church of Rome, and of any other place of the World which haue recourſe to the Court of Rome, by reaſon of the perſon being Eccleſiaſticall, or by Princes ſending it, or by conſent of the parties. The Pope for the more eaſie diſpatch of Sutors in all theſe things, hath ordayned two Audiences, in one of which they demand matters of Grace, in the other thoſe of Iuſtice.

Officers and Counſellors of the Popes ſtate.

Vicario di Roma.

But for theſe and the like Officers, the Vice-chancellor, the Audience of the Chamber (as it were his priuie Counſel) the priuate diſpatches by the Secretarie, the Chamberlan (which hath power in the Temporall State) Treaſurer, Aduocate, Proctor, Commiſſaries, Marſhalls (to one of which the Whores of the Citie pay a yeerly Taxation, which they call Tribute) I omit and referre the Reader to the Author. The laſt he mentions is the Vicar of Rome, who hath the ſame authoritie which the Pope hath ouer the Prieſts in all things, in Rome and in the Dioceſe, hearing all Clergie caſes as Ordinarie; impoſeth Penance, conferreth Sacraments, calleth Congregations, viſits Churches and Monaſteries, makes Inquiſition, correcteth, puniſheth, remooueth and giueth Benefices: his authoritie extends fortie miles out of Rome, in ſome caſes. The Pope hath alſo giuen him all thoſe Pontificalia, which euery Ordinarie exerciſeth in his Dioceſe, as to conſecrate places profane, to reconcile ſuch as are profaned, to promote to holy Orders, to puniſh Blaſphemies, Vſuries, Periuries, Inceſts: and in caſe of corporall puniſhments to ſend them to the Secular Iudges. He hath foure Notaries or publike Scribes, and two Vicars ſubſtitute. So farre is the Pope degenerated from a Biſhop in any thing but Title, and vſing that onely, that through couetouſneſſe with fayned words he might make merchandiſe of men, as turpilucricupidus, a louer of filthy gayne (euen that of Curtezans filthineſſe) yea, of the ſoules of men, which are reckoned among the Babylonian wares of theſe Merchants of the earth. And what elſe are theſe diſpenſations thus abuſed, but ſoule-ſale, which is made more euident (is any thing more impudent then a Whore?) by their Taxa Cameræ, a Booke publiſhed in print, whereby men may know the prices of their Abſolutions for Simonie, Sodomie, Inceſt, Homicide, and other the Maſter and Monſter ſinnes and degenerations of mankind. In which marke alſo, that being breaches of the Law of God, an inferior Penitentiarie by his Booke of Taxation can abſolue, but thoſe crimes againſt humane Lawes require the chiefe Penitentiarie to turne the Law into a Net, and become a good Sponge-man to exenterate his purſe more thorowly.

2. Pet. 2. 3.

Apoc. 18. 13.

Soules ſold, whiles their ſin remaynes, though their mony be gone; yea is increaſed with boldneſſe and frequency in hope of Diſpenſations: ſinnes being thus made both veniall and venall.

Bud. de Aſſe. li. 5.

And as Rome by Diſpenſations is made a Merchants ſhop, Litium officina capturarumq́ improbarum, where are kept perpetuall Marts of Sacriledge, which make ſinnes not onely Veniall but Venall; and Golden Canons become Lesbian Rules by Papall Leaden Bulls, flexible and pliant according to the price and banke of the Romiſh money changers: ſo by Indulgences hath ſhe beene indulgent to all her Chapmen (except they wanted money) and hath made them the foundation of the Tower of Babylon; in this, Indulgences and Diſpenſations agreeing that nothing hath more rayſed, nothing more razed her gorgeous and glorious Fabriques; Henrie the eight, vpon the one occaſion forſaking wonted commerce with Rome, and Luther by the other prouoked to open his mouth ſo wide and loud, that he awakned all Europe to behold her filthy whoredomes. And if any thinke the later times either more Caſta, or more Cauta, let him obſerue what Nouus Homo, an vnknowne Supplicant of Rome, hath reuealed touching the myſteries of the Datarie (the Office where matters of Benefices are diſpatched) where the beſtowing of Benefices is deferred, that inquirie may be made of the richeſt Competitors; each Liuing is charged with a penſion of halfe, or a third, or two thirds of the worth, and then by another Ordination by preſent payment of fiue yeeres purchaſe extinguiſhed. As if the Benefice bee worth three hundred crownes a yeere, a penſion is impoſed of two hundred, leauing one hundred for the Incumbent; who paying one thouſand crownes and a hundred more for Seales and Expedition, buyes repentance at a deare rate. The Regreſſus and Expectatiuæ forbidden by the Councell of Trent, are deluded with Coadiutorſhips, ſold for a yeeres profit in colour of expediting Bulls, with aſſurance of future ſucceſſion: by which and like meanes (you may not call that Simonie which the Pope doth; and it is diſputable amongſt them, whether the Pope can commit that ſinne, although the very name comes from Simon Magus his ſeeking to contract with Simon Peter) Paul the fifth is reported to haue extracted out of his Lead twentie hundred thouſand Scutes, to buy Lands for his Nephew (or ſonne) Borgheſius. The truth of which, by the Regiſters Nouus homo, in a Supplication by a Romiſh Catholike to his Maieſtie, Engliſhed by M. Cr.

(ſaith the Author) in the Office of Bettus, a publike Notarie, in a particular kept ſecret, appeareth.

---

§. IIII.

Of Indulgences.

THus haue we ſeene the Popes Temporalties, ariſing from Conſpiracies againſt Emperours, his Collations from the ſpoile of all Kings and Princes of their Inueſtitures, in pretence of Simonie, to further intenſions and extenſions of Simonie; his Diſpenſations, Factors and Bawds for Compenſations, by this Man of Sinne, which thus ſinned and kept a Trade, Shop, Mart, Sale, and gaine of Sinne: but that which had leaſt ſhew of reaſon, and yet was the right fore-legge of the beaſt, whereon he had ſureſt ſtanding, whereby he had ſecureſt holding his prey, wherewith he made ſtrongeſt fights againſt his Aduerſaries, was Indulgences. And whereas the Riuer of the Popes Eden, is parted into foure heads, this firſt compaſſeth the whole Land of Hauila, where there is Gold, and the Gold of that Land is good. Of which the Author of the Hiſtorie of the Councell of Trent, relateth that this manner of gaining Money was put in practiſe, after Pope Vrban the ſecond had giuen a plenarie Indulgence to all that ſhould make war in the Holy Land; imitated by his Succeſſors, ſome of which granted it to thoſe that maintained a Souldiour, if they went not in perſon. And after, the ſame Indulgences or Pardons were giuen, for taking Armes againſt thoſe that obeyed not the Church of Rome, although they were Chriſtians: and for the moſt part, infinite exactions were made vnder thoſe pretences, all which, or the greater part were applied to other vſes. Thus Pope Leo the tenth, 1517. ſent an Indulgence thorow all Chriſtendome, granting it to any which would giue Money and extending it to the dead; for whom his will was, that when the diſburſement was made, they ſhould be deliuered from the paines of Purgatorie: giuing alſo power to eate Egges and Whitmeats on faſting daies, to chuſe themſelues a Confeſſor, and other ſuch like abilities. And although the execution of this enterpriſe of Leo had ſome particular neither pious nor honeſt, notwithſtanding many of the Grants made by the preceding Popes, had causes more vniuſt, and were exerciſed with more Auarice and Extortion. He diſtributed part of the Harueſt before it was reaped or well ſowne, giuing to diuers perſons the Reuenues of diuers Prouinces, and reſeruing ſome alſo for his owne Exchequer. The Indulgences of Saxonie, and from thence to the Sea, he gaue to Magdalene his Siſter, Wife vnto Franceſcheto Cibo, Baſtard Sonne of Innocent the eight; by reaſon of which marriage, this Leo was created Cardinall at the age of fourteene yeares. She to make the beſt of it, committed the care of preaching the Indulgences, and exacting the Money vnto Aremboldus, a Genoa Merchant, (now a Biſhop and Merchant too) who found Miniſters like vnto himſelfe, who aymed at nothing but gaine: which would not vſe the Hermite Friers (as had beene the cuſtome of Saxonie in this caſe) but Dominicans, which to amplifie the value, ſpake many ſtrange things; and in Tauernes, games, and other things not fit to bee named, ſpent that which the people ſpared from their neceſſarie expences, to purchaſe the Indulgences.

Gen.2.10.11.
Hiſt.C.T.l.1.

Originall of Indulgences.

By this meanes Martin Luther an Hermite Frier, firſt began to ſpeake, firſt againſt theſe new abuſes; and after being prouoked by the Pardoners, he ſet himſelfe to ſtudie this matter, being deſirous to ſee the rootes and foundations of the Doctrine of Indulgences. He publiſhed ninetie fiue Concluſions herein, to be diſputed on in Wittenberg, which none accepted: but Iohn Thecel propoſed others contrarie in Frankfort of Brandeberg. Luther proceeded to write in defence of his, and Iohn Ecchius to oppoſe; and theſe Writings being gone to Rome, Sylueſter Prierias, a Dominican Frier, wrote againſt Luther: which conteſtation inforced both the one and the other partie to paſſe to other things of greater importance. For the Doctrine of Indulgences hauing not beene well examined in former Ages, the eſſence and cauſes of them were not well vnderſtood. Some thought they were nothing but an abſolution made by Authoritie of the Prelate from Penance, which the Church in moſt ancient times impoſed by way of Diſcipline vpon the penitent, (which Impoſition was aſſumed in ſucceeding Ages by the Biſhop onely, after delegated to the Penitentiarie Prieſt, and in concluſion left wholly to the will of the Confeſſor) and that they deliuered vs not from paying the debt due to the Iuſtice of God. Others thought, that they freed from both. But theſe were diuided: ſome thinking that they freed vs, though nothing were giuen in recompence, others ſaid, that by reaſon of mutuall participation in charitie of the members of holy Church, the Penance of one might bee communicated to another, and free him by this Compenſation. But becauſe it ſeemed that this was more proper to men of holy and auſtere life then to the authoritie of Prelates, there aroſe a third opinion, which made them in part an abſolution, (becauſe authoritie was neceſſary for them) and in part a Compenſation. But becauſe the Prelats liued not in ſuch ſort as they could ſpare much of their Merits to others, there was made a treaſurie in the Church, full of the Merits of all thoſe who had more then would ſerue their owne turne: the diſpenſation whereof is committed to the Pope, who when he giueth Indulgences, recompenſeth the debt of the Sinner, by aſſigning ſo much in value out of the Treaſure. It being oppoſed that the Merits of Saints being finite, this treaſure might be diminiſhed; they added the Merits of Chriſt which are infinite: which cauſed

Occaſion of Luthers preaching.

Doctrine of Indulgences vnknowne.
Diuers opinions of them.

Effects of the opinion of merit and ſupererogation.

another doubt, what needed thoſe drops to this Ocean; which gaue cauſe to ſome to make the Treaſure to be onely of the Merits of Chriſt.

Theſe things then ſo vncertaine, and had no other foundation then the Bull of Clement the ſixt, made for the Iubilee, 1350. Wherefore Thecel, Echius, and Prierius, laid for their ground-worke the Popes Authoritie, and Conſent of the Schoolemen, concluding that the Pope not being able to erre in matters of Faith, and himſelfe publiſhing the Indulgence, it was neceſſarie to beleeue them as an Article of Faith. This made Martin to paſſe from Indulgences to the Popes Authoritie, &c.

Pope Adrian the Sixt.

Myſterie.

Hiſt. C. T. l. 8.

After Leos death, Adrian ſucceeded, who being a Deuine, had written in that matter, and thought to eſtabliſh his Doctrine by Apoſtolicall Decree, that is, that an Indulgence being granted to one which ſhall doe ſuch a Worke, the Worker obtaineth ſo much of it as is proportionable to his Worke; thinking Luthers obiection thus anſwered, (How a peny could gaine ſo great Treaſure) and yet Indulgences remaining in requeſt, ſeeing he that hath not all, hath his proportionable part. But Cardinall Caietan told him it was better to keepe this ſecret, leſt the Popes grant might ſeeme to profit nothing, that Indulgences are but abſolutions from Penance impoſed in confeſſion onely: and if he would reſtore the diſuſed penitentiarie Canons, men would gladly ſeeke Indulgences. This being propoſed in the Penitentiary Court, Cardinall Puccio, Datarie to Pope Leo, a diligent Miniſter to finde out Money, (which had counſailed Leo to thoſe Indulgences, and was now cheefe Penitentiarie) related to the Pope with a generall aſſent the impoſſibilitie; that thoſe Canonicall Penances were gone into diſuſe, becauſe they could be no longer ſupported for want of the ancient zeale, whereas now euery one would be a Iudge and examine the reaſons; and in ſtead of curing they would kill. At length the Cardinall of Volterra propoſed the way to extinguiſh Hereſies, to bee not by Reformations, but by Cruſados, (as is ſaid before.) And in the Councell of Trent, when Indulgences came to bee examined, the Biſhop of Modena told them they would finde it difficult, and to require a long time, it being impoſſible to make that matter plaine, but by determining firſt whether they be Abſolutions, or compenſations onely and ſuffrages; or whether they remit the penalties impoſed by the Confeſſors onely, or all that are due; whether the treaſure be of the Merits of Chriſt onely, or of the Saints alſo; whether they extend to the dead, or though the receiuer performe nothing; with other difficulties. But to determine that the Church may grant them, and that they are profitable to thoſe which worthily receiue them, needed no great diſputation, and a Decree might be compoſed without defficultie: and hee with other Frier Biſhops was deputed to make a Decree in this ſenſe, adding a prouiſion againſt the abuſes.

Tract. de Iub. Io. Pheſteo ap. Morn myſt. Iniq. pag. 1036.

Theod. l. 1. c. 68. Plat. in Bon. 9. Krantz. Metrop. l. 11. c. 10. T. Gaſc. in Diction. Theol.

Thus farre haue we gleaned out of that fertile Corne-field. As for that of Clements Iubilee Indulgence, it is not amiſſe to recite ſome part, in which euery Pilgrime to Rome hath power granted, to chuſe his Confeſſor or Confeſſors, to whom hee giues full power to abſolue all Papall caſes, as if the Pope himſelfe were perſonally preſent: and if he dies in the way being truly confeſſed, that he be quite free, and abſolued from all his ſinnes: and moreouer, wee command the Angels of Paradiſe that they carrie the ſoule into the glory of Paradiſe, being fully abſolued from Purgatorie. Theodorike a Niem ſpeaking of Boniface the ninth his Indulgences, ſaith that his pardoners got in ſome one Prouince by ſale of them, one hundred thouſand Florens, releaſing all ſinnes to ſuch as were confeſſed, euen without Penance, Diſpenſing for Money with irrigularities, &c. Yea, ſome Pardoners deſcended ſometime (ſaith Gaſcoigne) to take for them a ſupper, a nights-lodging, a draught of Wine or Beere, a game at Tennis, and ſometime a venereall Act. Pope Alexander the ſixt gaue thirtie thouſand yeares Indulgence, for the ſaying of a certaine Prayer to Saint Anne. And Iulius his warring Succeſſor gaue large Indulgences to euery man which ſhould kill a French-man, with whom he had Warres. Others to Stations, Roſaries, Croſſes, Churches, Images, Graines, Pilgrimages, Prayers, throwing Wood into the Fire to burne Heretickes, and other like parts of Faith and Charitie. But let vs come to the Originall of this ſinke.

Io. Epiſt. 144.

P. Dam. ep. ad Petrum cereb. & ap. Sur. Oct. 14. vid. Spalat. rep. Eccleſ. l. 5. c. 8 Sig. de Reg. Ital.

P. Virg. de In. ver. li. 8.

Ludi ſeculares.

Roff. art. 18.

Some aſcribe their beginning to Pope Iohn, about the yeare 880. which yet is but giuing his opinion of them that die in Warre againſt Infidels, not an Indulgence to any. Petrus Damianus tels of Monks, redeeming Penances with Pſalmodies, and ſelfe-whippings, redeeming a yeares penance with a thouſand ſtripes, and fiue thouſand ſtripes with once ſinging the whole Pſalter, with other voluntarily impoſed taskes. Sigonius tels of Pope Alexander, about the ſame time, Anno 1071. conſecrating the Church of Caſſinum, and giuing great Indulgences to all preſent; which brought thither moſt Italian Princes and Biſhops, and Agnes the Empreſſe. Some tell of Gregorie the firſt, in the time of publike Peſtilence, enioyning a publike kind of Penance, the Letanies, and Stations or viſiting on ſet daies certaine Churches, with prayers for deliuerance, and remiſſion to be giuen by the Prieſts, to ſuch as penitently confeſſed their ſinnes. Theſe Stations gaue occaſion to Boniface the eight, of proclaiming his Iubilee euery ſecular yeare in imitation of the Secular games, which Clement reduced to fiftie, and Sixtus Quartus to fiue and twentie. Theſe Iubilees begunne in Anno 1300. haue Indulgence generation, Iewiſh and Ethnicke imitation, which the other haue little Commerce with, as being void of Commerce. Biſhop Fiſher of Rocheſter writing againſt Luther, doth more fitly make Indulgence, a Daughter of Purgatorie Family: Quamdiu enim (ſaith he) nulla fuerat de Purgatorio cura, nemo quaſiuit Indulgentias. Nam ex illo pendet omnis Indulgentiam exiſtimatio. Si tollas Purgatorium, quorſum Indulgentijs opus erit? Caperunt igitur Indulgentia poſtquam ad Purgatorij cruciatus cruciatus aliquandiu trepidatum eſt. And indeed Purgatorie hath beene the gainefulleſt fire to the Pope, and as a painefull-gaine-foole Mother, might well procreate this Daughter: both iſſuing from conceit, that temporall puniſhment remaineth to be ſatisfied, after the fault of ſinne remitted. Therefore haue they inuented that Treaſurie of the Merits of Chriſt and the Saints to bee this way employed, a name fitting the nature, being the beſt Treaſurie, (for externall Treaſures) which euer the Pope had; in warre to pay Souldiers, warring in his cauſe, at their owne coſts, in peace to fill his Coffers. But let vs looke to a purer generation, whereof this is the corruption and degeneration.

When as in the firſt times of the Church, onely feare of God and Eccleſiaſticall Diſcipline held men in awe, the Magiſtrates being Ethnicke; ſeuere Canons, and ſincere Zeale held things in order. And if men tranſgreſſed, yet either for intenſion of their ſuperabundant ſorrow, or for encouragement and prouocation to Martyrdome, or in danger of death relaxation was made and Indulgence; the Church receiuing ſome ſatisfaction for the externall ſcandall, and beleeuing that God for the merit of his Sonne, and propenſe mercy was ſatisfied alſo in that ſacrifice of a contrite heart and broken ſpirit; God graciouſly accepting that Care, feare, clearing of ones ſelfe, zeale, indignation, deſire, and reuenge, (the affects and effects of true repentance) and the Church imitating the mercy of the heauenly Father; as wee ſee in the inceſtuous Corinthian. This ſatisfaction did not by merit redeeme, but in Faith and Penance appeaſe him, being reconciled in his Sonne; for he ſheweth Mercy (not Merit) to thouſands in them that loue him and keepe his Commandements: he turning to them when they turne to him. Indulgences and Diſpenſations were adulterouſly commixed to deſtruction of this both publike and priuate Penance, when men were taught in ſtead of a Contrite heart, to giue a contrite purſe; and in ſtead of ſatisfying God, (to vſe that word) that is, appeaſing and meeting him by repentance, doing what he exacts and expects; or ſatisfying the Church in her Sanctions, by externall humiliation, teſtifying internall humilitie and conuerſation; to put ouer all to a Iubilee and Plenarie Indulgence. Which if they bee good, why doth not the Popes Charitie freely giue what he freely receiued? What greater Simonie then ſale of Merits, the chiefe graces of the holy Ghoſt; yea, of Chriſts owne Merits? And what ſhall become of this Treaſurie after the laſt day?

2. Cor 7.

Adulterous commixtion of Indulg. and Diſpenſ.

Let Bellarmine and Valentianus alledge the communion of Saints, and other Scriptures of ſeeming ſupererogation, as Col. 1. 24. and the power of the Keyes, yet doth Valentia confeſſe their nouitie, whence followes their inualencie and vanitie. Once, their Money-valencie and Man-valency, was not begun before by Gregorie the ſeuenth againſt the Emperor, as is ſaid, and by Vrban heere applied to the Holy Land Warre. Yea, theſe of Vrban did but giue occaſion to the after Popes, to make them ſo ſtrong pillars of the Babylonicall Tower, the Indulgences being then but Calues, which after grew to be Bulls, as appeareth by the various reports of this his Speach, and Act in the Councell of Claremont. I haue read ſeuen or eight ſeuerall Orations, written moſt of them by men of that time, and ſome profeſſing themſelues preſent, which yet haue made it the triall of their wits, what they could, or elſe haue added what Vrban at diuers times, did ſay or write, or other Popes after him: the later compoſing themſelues to their own times, when Indulgences were common and current. You haue heard Robertus and Fulcherius already. Baldricus the Arch-biſhop being preſent, deliuers that part of his ſpeech, which looks this way in theſe words: Confeſſis peccatorum ſuorum ignorantiam, ſecuri de Chriſto cœleſtem paſciſcimini veniam. Guibertus, perorauerat vero excellentiſſ. omnes qui ſe ituros vouerant, (in his long Oration I find nothing to this purpoſe) Beati Petri poteſtate abſoluit, eadem ipſa authoritate Apoſtolica firmauit, &c. Malmeſbury had it of thoſe which heard it in this ſenſe, Ituri habentes per Dei conceſſum & beati Petri priuilegium omnium abſolutionem criminum, & hac interim lætitia laborem itineris alleuiant, habituri poſt obitum fœlicis martyrij commercium. Vitriacus Biſhop of Acon, Omnibus in remiſſionem omnium peccatorum peregrinationem iniungens. William Archbiſhop of Tyre thus, Nos autem de miſericordia Domini & Beatorum Petri & Pauli authoritate confiſi fidelibus Chriſtianis qui contra eos arma ſuſceperint, & onus ſibi huius peregrinationis aſſumſerint, iniunctas ſibi pro ſuis delictis pœnitentias relaxamus. Qui autem ibi in vera pœnitentia deceſſerint, & peccatorum indulgentiam & fructum æternæ mercedis ſe non dubitent habituros. M. Paris after them, & more fitted to Indulgences, Nos autem de Omnipotentis Dei maximè & BB. App. eius Petri & Pauli authoritate confiſi, ex illa quam nobis (licet indignis) Deus ligandi atq; ſoluendi contulit poteſtatem, omnibus qui laborem iſtum in proprijs perſonis ſubierint & expenſis, plenam ſuorum peccatorum, ſi veraciter fuerint corde contriti & ore confeſſi, veniam indulgemus, & in retributione iuſtorum ſalutis æternæ pollicemur augmentum. Thus the later, perhaps from ſome later Popes, * which after Vrban had broken the Ice, gaue further Indulgence to the ſpirit of Indulgences, til (like the Frog in the fable) they cracked themſelues in ſunder with ſwelling. Some you ſee mention only the merit of the worke, ſome adde the power of the Keyes in looſing, or abſoluing from ſinne in the Conſcience, others abſolution from enioyned penances (by the Confeſſor) the laſt to a plenary Indulgence, yet at moſt but an abſolution and that from penall Canons, as it were by commutation of penance, in ſtead of that impoſed by the Ghoſtly Father, or Canonicall ſentence of the Prelate, vndertaking in perſon, or by purſe in maintenance of another this peregrination. Vpon this timber they ſoone after built hay and ſtubble, which hath by Luthers kindling ſet Rome on fire.

Greg. de Valent. de Indulg. vid. Spal. l. 5. c. 8.

Vid. Geſta Dei per Francos.

G. Malm. l. 4. Baronius hath the ſame.
Iacob. de Vitriac. hiſt. Ier.
W. Tyr. hiſt. l. 1.

* Matth. Paris his very words are in Pope Gregorius Indulgence granted, Anno 1234. and before that in Cæleſtine and Innocent.

See of all theſe Mat. Paris and the Relations before recited.

In following times, this Expedition and Indulgences thereof, were followed by the opinions of ſatisfying God for former ſinnes or imputations (as in Henry the Second for Beckets murther) to be expiated by this Warre. Secondly, of freeing of others ſoules hereby out of Purgatory. Thirdly, of freedome from Oathes, as is before mentioned out of the Councell of Lions. Fourthly, of Immunity of perſons and goods, as of Prieſts to be abſent, and yet taking the profits of their Liuings for three yeares preſent, and to be free from payments; Laymen freed from Collections, Taxations and other publike grieuances. Fiftly, againſt priuate Sutes, their perſons and goods after the Croſſe receiued, to be vnder Saint Peters and the Popes protection, and the defence of the Church, by ſpeciall Protectors appointed, that till their returne or death certainly knowne, none might meddle with them vnder paine of Excommunication (a good prouiſo for Bank-rupts.) Sixtly, the proportion of this Indulgence to the proportion of ayde or counſell (concilium vel auxilium) or money that way employed. Seuenthly, the Suffrage and Prayers of the Synod, that this Iourney might profit worthily to their ſaluation. Eightly, power for all whomſoeuer but Regulars to goe, though vnfit; redeeming, changing, or deferring it by the Popes grant. Likewiſe, they increaſed ſinne by this meanes, Murtherers, Theeues, Adulterers, Bank-rupts, and others hauing the Holy Land for refuge againſt Law, and for ſafety of them and theirs, yea, for Merit and Indulgence; that becomming hereby the very ſinke of ſinne, confluence of all villaine, the heart and centre of abomination: as appeares in Vitriacus and others.

Hurts in Faith and Manners by theſe Expeditions, and Pilgrimages to the Holy Land.

Pope grew great by Holy Land warres.

M. Paris, p. 535.

* Pag. 653. of all Chriſtendome.

Pag. 485.

Pag 703.

* Pag. 1219.

And as morally, ſo alſo doctrinally, Purgatorie, Merit, Supererogation, Superſtitious Pilgrimages, and the like, tooke further rooting by theſe Holy Land Expeditions; but eſpecially the Popes power hereby increaſed in and ouer Kings and Kingdomes, thus intermedling, peruerting and preuenting courſes of Iuſtice by his Indulgence-Buls horned with Excommunication: by impoſing this Expedition on Kings as Penance: by exhauſting their Treaſures, Souldiers and Forces; by buſying them farre off, whiles he and his might take and make oportunitie to adulterate all at home: by puſhing with theſe hornes of Indulgences againſt Kings themſelues; without other force, employing the forces of one Prince againſt another, and of their owne ſubiects againſt their Soueraignes. So was King Iohn forced to ſurrender his Crowne, and take it of the Pope in farme, the French and his owne being armed againſt him: ſo Conrade, Memfred, Ladiſlaus, and other Kings of Sicil; George, King of Bohemia, &c. By this was the Imperiall Eagle plucked and ſtripped, greater Indulgences being giuen, that more money might bee gathered to maintayne with Holy Land money, his warre againſt Fredericke the Emperour; ſending ſimple Meſſengers with Legatine power, which by Commanding, Minacing, Excommunicating, Preaching, Praying, beſides, his white white Bull, which might mooue ſtony hearts (melting out their metall) as to ſuccour the Holy Land, indeed, to ruinate the Emperour. For which cauſe he had procured a Tenth, of Clergy and Laity in many Kingdomes; *and that with ſtrict Inquiſition of the value to the Popes beſt commodite, euen of the fruits before the Harueſt, preſent pay to bee made vnder paine of Interditing and Excommunicating: which made the Prelates ſell their Chalices and Church goods, that I mention not the vſurers his Chaplen, and Agent Stephen had to byte, flay and deuoure the flocke with further exactions. This was Gregorie the Compiler of the Decretals. Theſe moneyes the Pope gaue to Iohn de Breſnes, to warre againſt the Emperour then in the Holy Land, and forced thither by the Popes Excommunication. He extorted alſo a fifth of beneficed Forreiners for that purpoſe, & abſolued his Subiects from their Allegeance. And when ſome expoſtulated with the King of England, for ſuffering his Kingdome to be made a prey, He anſwered, I neyther will nor dare contradict the Lord Pope in any thing: ſo that hee obtayned a fifth in England: and after that, ſent Peter Rubeus to new vn-heard of execrable exactions by lyes and cauilations. What ſhall I tell * of Ruſtandus, which was ſent to gather new Tenths, and to exchange the Kings Vow for the Holy Land, into a Sicilian Expedition againſt Memfrede, with equall Indulgences? Yea, greater Indulgences are granted to ſuch as would warre againſt Chriſtians, if the Popes Enemies, as before you haue read, then in the Holy Land againſt the Turkes.

* Spalat. de rep. E. l. 5. c. 9.

M. Paris, pag. 302. & ſeq.

Contrary to Indulgences are Interdictments, as Samſons Foxes hauing a fierie coniunction in their tayles: of which Hildebrand is noted firſt Author; by which, if a Prince offended, his Subiects and whole Dominions were Interdicted, that is in Papall Interpretation, a publike Excommunication was denounced againſt him and his, and all externall publike Holies ſuſpended. You ſhall haue it in Mat. Paris his words of King Iohn, who being offended that the Pope had reiected from the Archbiſhopricke of Canterburie, the Biſhop of Norwich, whom the greater and ſounder part of the Monkes in due ſolemnity, by the Kings conſent had choſen, obtruding one of his Cardinals Stephen Langton vpon him, whom he refuſed: the Pope cauſed the Biſhop of Ely and Worceſter, to denounce his Interdict, which was alſo contrary to Papall Priuiledges obſerued. There ceaſed therefore in England all Eccleſiaſticall Sacraments (except confeſſion, and houſell in danger of death, and Baptiſme of children.) The bodies of the dead were carried out of Cities and Villages, and buried likes Dogges in by-wayes, and Ditches without Prayers and Miniſterie of the Prieſts: whereupon diuers Biſhops forſooke his Land and ſuch combuſtions followed, that the Pope excommunicated him (which was denounced by the former Biſhops) after which hee abſolued his Subiects from their Alleageance, and prohibited them in paine of Excommunication to auoyd his table, counſell, conference. All which yet were of no great force till the diſmall ſentence of depoſition, nor that but by Indulgences and Cruſados.

For the Pope writ to the French King Philip to vndertake the execution, for the remiſſion of all his ſinnes; and expelling the King of England, to hold the Kingdome of England to him and his Succeſſors for euer. He wrote alſo to all great men, Knights and Warriours in diuers Nations, that they ſhould ſigne themſelues with the Croſſe for the deiection of the King of England, following the French King in this Expedition, labouring to reuenge the quarrell of the vniuerſall Church. Hee ordained alſo that whoſoeuer ſhould beſtow his goods, or helpe to expugnate that obſtinate King, they ſhould remayne ſecure in the peace of the Church (euen as they which viſit the Sepulchre of our Lord) in their goods and perſons and ſuffrages of ſoules, (or deliuerance of ſoules out of Purgatory.)

The iſſue whereof was, that great prouiſions were made on both ſides, King Iohn hauing at Barhamdowne, threeſcore thouſand armed men, beſides, a ſtrong Nauy at Sea: the French on the otherſide was come to the Sea with his owne and the Engliſh, an innumerable Army, when Pandulfus the Popes Legate craftily ſent to him to ſatisfie the Pope, which he could no way doe but by reſigning his Crowne and Kingdome, to receiue it againe in fee farme of the Pope, doing him homage, and paying him rent: which when the King had granted, Pandulfus ſought to perſwade the French party to peace, and the Engliſh to returne. The French hereupon ſtormed, inuaded the Earle of Flanders, King Iohns Confederate, who now with his forces ſuccored him with fiue hundred ſhips, which tooke three hundred French ſhippes richly prouided, and burned one hundred others: the French being croſſed in a double ſenſe, not without great effuſion of Chriſtian bloud: the Pope ayming at his owne deſigned greatneſſe, to vſe the French againſt the Engliſh, and the Subiects againſt their Prince; as afterward taking the Kings part againſt his Subiects, and excommunicating the French, that as in the Fable, he might play with both, and pray on both; ſpending themſelues in mutuall emulations.

Miſerable warres and bloudſhed of Chriſtians by Papall procurement.

Yet would not his Subiects obey him, prouiding great forces to inuade France, till the Sentence were releaſed: whereupon he entertayned Stephen, and the other Biſhops falling at their feet with teares, deſiring them to haue mercy on him, and the Kingdome of England, who thereupon abſolued him, ſwearing to the conditions propounded: his Deſignes againſt France, through that delay prooued fruſtrate notwithſtanding. In the Pope and his Biſhops, he found ſo little certainty that he ſent Embaſſadors to the King of Morocco, offering vaſſallage to him, if he would protect him; which being refuſed, knowing (ſaith the Author) that the Pope was aboue all mortall men ambitious and proud, and an inſatiable thirſter after money, and waxen, and prone to all villanies, for bribes or promiſes, he ſent him Treaſure, and promiſes of more, and alway to bee his Subiect, if hee would confound the Archbiſhop, and excommunicate the Barons whoſe parts he had before taken; that he might ſo impriſon, diſherit and ſlay them. Innocent was contented to be thus nocent, and releaſed the Interdict, which had continued ſixe yeares, three monethes and fourteene dayes, to the irreparable loſſe of the Church in Temporals and Spiritutals. The Pope taking part now with the King, hee had opportunitie to reuenge himſelfe of his Peeres, who hereupon rayſed Ciuill Warres, and ſware themſelues to the French Kings Sonne, England remayning thus on fire, till the death of King Iohn, (which hapned amidſt theſe flames) to the terrour of his Succeſſors in ſo daring attempts againſt the Pope.

King abaſed to his ſubiects.

Interdict of ſix yeares and three monethes

And thus you ſee what Cruſadoes and Indulgences could doe in thoſe dayes, in and ouer this Kingdome: Interdicts can intend and pretend nothing, but rayſing Diſſcontents and Rebellions, as if God ſhould impiouſly be depriued of his worſhip, and men vncharitably of the meanes of their ſaluation, for one mans fault, if a fault, if not the Popes only fault as well as tyrannicall puniſhment. For Gods Law forbids the fathers eating ſower Grapes to ſet the childrens teeth on edge, and the ſonne to beare the fathers fault, but the ſoule that ſinneth ſhall dye: which the Venetian lately vnderſtood, and nobly vindicated againſt the Pope, as King Iohn would haue done, if the times had beene anſwerable. But Indulgences you ſee heere, were the Executors and Executioners of the Popes fury, euen to the ſubiection of the moſt vnwilling Kings and Kingdomes, which is the Maſter-piece of Popery in the getting. And for the keeping and mayntayning this Monarchie, Cruſadoes and Indulgences ſtayd not heere, but by the ſame Innocent (the firſt Decreer alſo of Tranſubſtantiation) was extended againſt the Albigenſes, or Waldenſes, then reputed Heretikes, (as wee now are by the Papiſts) and condemned for thoſe Doctrines, which they had learned out of the Scriptures againſt the Papall Pride and Superſtition. Other things are aſcribed to them, as now to vs by the Ieſuits, with like Truth and Charity, as out of their owne Authors which beſt knew, is euident. As Vrbans intent had beene againſt the Antipope, which his Succeſſors after followed, ſo Innocent and other Popes diſpoſed the Croſſe and Indulgence againſt thoſe which mayntayned the Truth of the Goſpell, and in all likelihood had but for this oppoſition, ruined the Papacie. He ſent Preachers (ſayth Matthew Paris in whoſe ſteps we ſtill inſiſt) vnto all the Regions of the Weſt, and enioyned Princes, and other Chriſtian people for remiſſion of their ſinnes, that they ſhould ſigne themſelues with the Croſſe to root out

Interdicts; how vniuſt.

Ez.18.

Albigenſes, or Waldenſes. Pag.322. A.1213.

this peſtilence, and oppoſing themſelues to ſuch miſchiefes, by force and armes ſhould defend the Chriſtian people. He added alſo by authoritie of the Sea Apoſtolike, that whoſoeuer to expugnate them, ſhall vndertake the enioyned labour, ſhould remayne ſecure aſwell in their goods as perſons from all incurſions of enemies. At this preaching, ſo great a multitude of men which tooke the Croſſe aſſembled, as is not beleeued at any time to haue met together in our Climate. But wee will learne this buſineſſe of others which better knew it.

Pop.hiſt. Fran. lib.1. fol.7.

Tom.4.Concil. Edit.Rom.1612. pag.44.

Poplinerius ſaith, the Waldenſes againſt the will of all Chriſtian Princes (ſo did the Apoſtles againſt the will of Ethnike Princes, (and Princes called Chriſtians, were now made drunke with the Whores cup) ſowed their Doctrine, little differing from that which the Proteſtants now embrace, not only thorow all France, but almoſt all the Coaſts of Europe. For the French, Spaniards, Engliſh, Scots, Italians, Germanes, Bohemians, Saxons, Polonians, Lithunians, and other Nations, haue ſtiffely defended it to this day. One of Innocents Decrees in the Councell of Lateran, which alſo decreed Tranſubſtantion, is, that if a Temporall Lord being required and warned by the Church, ſhall neglect to purge his Countrey from hereticall filthineſſe, the Biſhops ſhall excommunicate him: if he continue ſo a yeare, let it be ſignified to the Pope, that he may free his vaſſals from their alleageance, and expoſe his Land to bee occupyed of Catholikes, which may poſeſſe it without contradiction, the Heretikes being rooted out, &c.

Vmbert. ſerm.p. 2.Ser.64.
See D.Vſher de C.Ec.Stat.c.8. 9.10.
Sabel.En.9.l.6.

Indulgences were preached in this ſort, the Text, Pſal.94.16. Who will riſe vp for mee againſt the euill doers, &c. or the like applyed to the people: You ſee beloued, how great the malice of Heretikes is, &c. Therefore the holy Mother Church, though vnwilling, calleth againſt them a Chriſtian Armie. Whoſoeuer therefore hath the zeale of the faith, whoſoeuer is touched with the honour of God; whoſoeuer will haue this great Indulgence, let him come and take the ſigne of the Croſſe, and ioyne himſelfe to the Chriſtian Souldierie. Some thinke that the Crouched Order of Crucigeri, was then confirmed by this Innocent; many Croſſed, and going to or returning from Syria, winning the Popes fauour by their Exploits againſt the Albigenſes. I might adde the Orders of Militarie Knights, as Templars, Hoſpitulars, and others which hence had their originall, and were ſo potent in wealth and numbers, that they could beard Kings, and had their dependance and priuiledges of the Pope.

Military Orders, lay Fraternities and Friers.
See Vſher, pag.261.
Inquiſition begun.
Inn.Ep.dec.l.1.

Dominicke Author of the Dominicans, preached to conuert with the word, and had helpers with the Sword, to expugnate thoſe which his word could not. Theſe were called, Fratres de militia B. Dominici, and they and their wiues were a certaine guilde, called the Brethren and Siſters of Penance of Saint Dominicke. Likewiſe, the Office of the Inquiſition was inſtituted by this Innocent, charging the Biſhops in remiſſion of their ſinnes, to receiue his Commiſſaries, and to aſſiſt them againſt Heretikes, drawing forth the Spirituall Sword againſt thoſe which were by the Inquiſitors named; and let the Laymen confiſcate their goods, and caſt them out of their poſſeſſions. And whoſoeuer ſhould deuoutly aſſiſt them, we grant that Indulgence of their ſinnes which we grant to thoſe which viſit the ſtaires of Saint Peter, or Saint Iames. This he wrote in behalfe of Rainer and Guido. But after this Inquiſition was delegated to Dominicke, for the Countries of Prouence, who rayſed this Dominican Order, (ordure) whoſe chiefe care ſhould be againſt Heretikes: he ſomewhat verified the Popes Dreame, ſeeming to ſtay the Church of Lateriane, beeing readie to fall, which the Franciſcans apply to Saint Francis. And indeed, had not theſe in this Age vphold the Lateran Babylon, together with the Schoolemen, [a] the beſt of which were Friars, and the Canoniſts; it is likely the Albigenſes, Waldenſes, Pooremen of Lions, Inzabbatati, (other names they giue them) had then ruined it, they then with like Arts, Diſpenſations, and Reputation doing that, which ſince Luther and Caluine the Ieſuites haue laboured.

[a] Moſt of the chiefe Schoolmen were Dominicans or Franciſcans.

* Pet.de vin.l.1 Ep.27.

1.Tim.6.

The new Locuſts * ſupplanted the former Clergie, exerciſed Penances, Vnctions, Baptiſmes, and began two Fraternities, wherein they receiued men and women ſo generally, that ſcarſly any were free: the people being vnwilling to heare others preach; that the Prieſts were defrauded of their Tithes, and had not to liue: the Churches now retayning nothing but a Bell, and old duſtie Image. The Friers began at Cottages, and now haue Kings Houſes and Palaces erected, and hauing no riches are richer then all rich men, whiles we begge, &c. Theſe became acute Schoolemen, Sententraries, Queſtioniſts, Summiſts, Quodlibetiſts, and I know not what irrefragable, ſubtle, Angelical Doctors and Diſputants, bringing in Oppeſitions of Science falſly called, languiſhing about Queſtions and ſtrifes of words: theſe made Diuinitie a Linſey wolſey garment; not as their Maſter of Sentences, of Fathers and Scriptures; but admitted Ariſtotle free of the Diuinitie Schooles, and ploughed with an Oxe and an Aſſe, their Miſcelan fields.

Sabel.En.9.l.6.

Theſe Dominicans and Franciſcans were appointed alſo, Inquiſitores heretica prauitatis, and made many bloudy Sacrifices, for their vnbloudy Sacrifice, and other Popiſh Hereſies in pretence of Heretical prauitie: growing into ſuch numbers, that Sabellicus numbred of Dominicans, one and twenty Prouinces; twentie foure thouſand, one hundred forty three Couents, and in them Fryars entred, fifteene hundred Maſters or Doctors of Diuinitie, in all twenty ſixe thouſand, foure hundred and ſixtie. Of Franciſcans, forty Prouinces deuided into Warden-ſhips, Couents, and Places; the perſons innumerable, coniectured threeſcore thouſand. Yea, the Generall promiſed to Pope Pius of bodies able to ſerue in his intended war againſt the Turke, thirty thouſand and Franciſcans, thirtie thouſand Auguſtine Friars, the Carmelites more, and other Orders I mention not, nor can I number theſe Locuſts.

Matth. Paris invegheth often againſt the inſolencie of theſe Friars and their Papall priuiledges, odious to the Monkes and Secular Clergie. They were (ſaith he) Counſellors and Meſſengers of great men, Secretaries of our Lord the Pope, getting hereby Secular fauour: quarrelling about prioritie of Order, that in three or foure hundred yeeres the Monkes had not ſo degenerated, as theſe within foure and twentie yeeres after their firſt Manſions in England, whoſe buildings now grow Royall Palaces. They wait on rich men dying, extort Confeſſions and ſecret Teſtaments, commending themſelues and their owne Order alone, ſollicitous to get Priuiledges; in the Courts of Kings and great men, Counſellors, Chamberlans, Treaſurers, makers of Marriages, Executors of Papall exactions; in their Preachings bitter or flattering, Reuealers of Confeſsions, Contemners of other Orders, accounting the Ciſtercians Semi-laikes and Ruſtikes, the blacke Monkes proud and Epicures, ſeeking to be entertayned as Legats or Angels of God in their preaching. And if a man were confeſſed of his owne Prieſt, what ſay they, of that Idiot, ignorant of Theologie, the Decrees, Queſtions? they are blind Leaders of the blind: come to Vs, we know to diſtinguiſh leprie from leprie, know hard, difficult things and the ſecrets of God: whereupon Noble-men and Ladies entertayned them, contemning their owne Prieſts and Prelates. And to returne to Indulgences, Theſe were the Popes Publicans, preaching the receiuing of the Croſſe (giuing notice of ſuch preaching before-hand, and entertayned by the Clergie in Veſtments with Banners and Proceſsion) to all Ages, Sexes, Conditions, to the Sicke and Aged, the next day for money abſoluing them from their vowed Pilgrimage. But I am wearie of this ſtinking ſinke of hypocriſie, which for the World denyed the World, the Fleſh for the Fleſh, and obeyed to ſuch enormous rebellions.

Pag. 561.

Pag. 823.

Pag. 921.

Pag. 1017.

Yet let vs examine the Indulgences againſt the Waldenſes, in the yeere 1208. innumerable multitudes receiued the Croſſe in their breſts; the Pope writ to King Philip and all his Princes, to inuade Narbone, Tholonſe, and other parts. The next yeere, from all parts of France, Flanders, Normandie, Aquitane, Burgundie, the Biſhops, Earles, and Barons, with an infinite number, met at Lions and came to Byterra, where they ſlue ſixtie thouſand, promiſcuouſly Papiſts and Waldenſes, by aduiſe of the Popes Legat, who ſaid, The Lord knoweth who are his: ſome ſay an hundred thouſand, not ſparing Sexe or Age, burning the dead bodies. Thence they went to Carcaſſon, where they ſpared onely the mens liues, not leauing them their apparell. Simon Montfort, Earle of Leiceſter, was made Generall, who tooke Roger the Lord of the Countrey, and all the Countrey with an hundred Caſtles, and many others rendred themſelues. In the yeer 1210. was a new Expeditihn of theſe croſſed Votaries out of France, England, and Loraine, which tooke Minerbia, where an hundred and fourescore choſe rather to burne then turne: entred Toloſe, waſting all, taking Cities and Caſtles, burning ſuch as would not turne. They tooke Raimund and his Caſtle of Therme, his Wife and Daughter; he dyed in priſon, they with other Ladies in the fire. Leopold Duke of Auſtria, Adolph Earle de Monte, William Earle of Iuliers went thither out of Almaine. An. 1211. a new Armie from many parts, tooke many Cities and Caſtles, burning and hanging many, committing the conquered Countrey to Simon Montfort. Lauallis was taken, and choiſe giuen to turne or burne, three hundred and fiftie chooſing this. The Ladie was caſt in a Well and ſtones throwne on her.

See Vſh. de Chriſt. Eccleſ. Stat. c. 10.

Raimund * Earle of Tholouſe had aide of the King of Arragon, and was an hundred thouſand ſtrong (Armoricanus hath two hundred thouſand) but was ouer-throwne by the Croſſes and Montfort, and the King of Arragon ſlaine, and the certayne number, ſaith Paris, of the ſlaine, could not be certainly numbred: ſome ſay two and thirtie thouſand. Hence new croſſed Knights which ſerued for Indulgence and ſpoile, in the yeeres 1214. and 1215. Simon poſſeſſing himſelfe of the great Countries of Earle Raimund, by the Popes procurement, and King Philips grant. The Warres continued 1216. 1217. 1218. in which Simon was ſlaine. The Warres were proſecuted by Amalricus his ſonne, and Lewis ſonne to King Philip. Theſe tooke Miramonda and ſlue Man, Woman and Child.

* R. Earle of Toloſe had the Countrey of Saint Giles, Prouence, Dauphine, Venaſme, Ruthen, Cadure, Albig. &c.

Anno 1219. Toloufe was beſieged in vaine, Famine and Mortalitie plaguing the Armie. The Warre continued 1220. 1221. In the yeere 1223. the Pope ſent his Legat, a Cardinall, with twentie Biſhops. King Philip died and appointed twentie thouſand pounds to helpe Amalricus againſt the Albigenſes, which grew now ſtrong in Dalmatia, Bulgaria, Croatia. Anno 1225. King Lewis made an Expedition to beſiege Auinion, ſeuen yeeres excommunicate by the Pope, with an Armie of Cruſado's. But Earle Raimund had plowed the grounds and preuented all prouiſion, that Sword, Famine and Peſtilence diſmayed that huge Armie, wherein the King himſelfe died, and aboue two and twentie thouſand of the Aſſailants. Loth to wearie you with ſuch bloudie ſpectacles, effects of Antiphraſticall Indulgences, this Warre is ſaid to continue about ſeuentie yeeres. The Waldenſes encreaſed notwithſtanding daily, and the Warre, ſaith Thuanus, was of no leſſe weight then that againſt the Saracens (which occaſioned this whole diſcourſe) and they were rather in the end ſpoiled then conuerted or conuicted, ſome remayning cloſe in Prouence, ſome in the Alpes, ſome in Calabria to our times, and ſome in Briſaine.

Bertrand. Geſt. Toloſ.

Thu. Præfat. hiſt.

Æn. Syl. hiſt. Bo. Dubr. vl. 23. 24. & ſeqq.

The Bohemians alſo were their iſſue, againſt whom the Pope vſed like courſes of Indulgences, one hundred and fiftie thouſand at one time croſſed vnder Sigiſmund to the war, being out of diuers Kingdomes, not to mention the Cruſado's by the Cardinals of Wincheſter and Iulian, with innumerable bloudſhed. But I am loth to lothe and wearie you with ſuch cruell Indulgentiall morſells, the Popes feaſt of mans fleſh to the blinded World. Thoſe Bohemian warres had firſt originall from Hus his preaching, and that alſo againſt Indulgences preached againſt the King of Naples: they were long and bloudie, but more long and bloudie haue thoſe of this laſt and worſt Age beene from like originall, which I leaue to other Authors, to reckon the many many hundreths of thouſands of Chriſtians, which one neighbour Countrey, yea one little piece of her neighbour Countrey (not to mention others ſtill bleeding, crying, dying) haue loſt in quarrels, died in the bloud of Religion. Money is the life of merchandiſe, Sinowes of warre, and vpholder of Greatneſſe, without which, Peters ſucceſſion, paſce Oues, I haue prayed for thy Faith, Conſtantines ſuppoſed donation, and the keyes of the Kingdome of Heauen, had not preuailed to a Papall earthly Monarchie. And Indulgences and Cruſado's haue beene his beſt both Mine and Mint for Money: firſt, in ſharing with Kings which tooke the Croſſe, and by Papall power impoſed Tenths that he might haue a Twentieth, as he did to Saint Lewis of France. Secondly, in letting out his Indulgences to Kings at a Rent, whereby at this day ſome get more then by ſome Kingdomes. Thirdly, by redeeming the Vowes by ſuch meanes as you haue now heard of the Friars, one binding to the Vow, another for money looſing, like a blacke and white Deuill witching and vnwitching the ſuperſtitious vulgar. Fourthly, Kings taking the Croſſe to oppreſſe their Subiects for the charge, with part of the purchaſe purchaſing a Papall Abſolution. Fiftly, agreeing with Kings to fleece the Church for the Holy Land, that he might doe as much againſt the Emperour. Sixtly, letting out theſe Cruſado's to ferme, by which Richard Earle of Cornwall, in Matt. Paris, daily ſo enriched himſelfe, how much more the Pope? the Popes preacher (playing the harueſt man, to bring into his Barnes or Treaſurie) that the fame of his money made him to be choſen Emperour. He of one Archdeaconrie reaped ſix hundred pounds. William Longſpat got by the like gift of the Pope, aboue a thouſand marks. Seuenthly, giuing Indulgences, that is, the money which might be made of them in recompenſe of friendſhip, labours, expenſes. Eightly, ſelling Indulgences to Churches, Images, Altars, Graines, Prayers, &c. thorow the Chriſtian world. Ninthly, by Iubilees, whereof Cruſado's were Forerunners and Apparitors. Tenthly, by diſpenſations the Iuno, ſiſter and wife of this Indulgent Ioue, or Pluto rather. Eleuenthly, by inſtituting Offices; Penitentiaries, Notaries, and I know not what rabble for theſe purpoſes and his Exchequer Receits, and then ſelling thoſe multiplyed Offices for the greateſt ſumme. But who can ſumme vp theſe Accounts? eſpecially being workes of Darkneſſe, myſtie myſteries, which yet are thus farre reuealed, enough to proue the Author the Man of ſinne, which by his owne verie ſinne, and ſuppoſed pardon of others, hath let the raines of the World looſe to Sinne; and hereby ruled the World holding the raines in his owne hand. Once; his temporall Monarchie, Collations of Benefices, Diſpenſations had neuer vnder-propped this myſticall Monarchie, had not Cruſado's and Indulgences awed Kings, excited and incited furious Armies, armed furies; depopulated and ruined Kingdomes, and by mayne force bett downe all Opponents abroad, and filled his Coffers at home.

Matt.Par.

Pag.977.

See Act. and Mon. of Tho. Cromwell.

But for this of money, Sixtus or Xiſtus the fourth, was wont to ſay, that hee ſhould neuer want money ſo long as he wanted not a Hand and a Pen. And Xiſtus the fifth, in fiue yeeres and a halfe had gathered fiue millions of treaſure, notwithſtanding his magnificent and admirable expenſes, in Palaces, Churches, Obeliskes, Conduits, and the like. So much could Friars Minors skill of getting both Papacie and Money. And that you may know of what vſe prohibited marriages to Prieſts and religious Orders are, you may conſider how the Pope may make Armies of their numbers in extremitie; and of their purſes at pleaſure make ſponges. Pius the fourth leuied at one time of the Religions foure hundred thouſand Ducats; and if he would haue admitted Reſignations of Benefices with Regreſſes, as he was aduiſed, he might that way haue made a million. Paul the third maintayned twelue thonſand foot and fiue hundred horſe at his pay, vnder Charles the fift againſt the Lutherans, and yet rayſed his houſe as you ſee: Clement the ſeuenth hath notwithſtanding his captiuitie done more for his Houſe. Pius the fift ſent foure thouſand foot and one thouſand horſe, to aide Charles the ninth againſt the Proteſtants. But I haue wearied the Reader in obſeruing the effects of this Pope holy Expedition to Ieruſalem, and the Papall aduancement thereby. I will adde the vertues of thoſe Holy Land Inhabitants, and then you ſhall ſee it the Holy Land indeed, ſo termed by Antiphraſis, Dignum patella operculum, Lettice ſutable to the lips of His Holineſſe, who may alſo haue that Title for the ſelfe ſame cauſe.

§. V.

Superſtition aduanced in and by the Holy Land Expeditions, and the Chriſtians Chriſtianitie in thoſe parts worſe then in other. Diuers Sects of Chriſtians in the Eaſt.

FIrſt for ſuperſtition, this voyage proued a Mart for Reliques, as is before in part obſerued of the multiplyed Croſſe, of the Speare, of the Bloud of Chriſt, ſolemnely carried by King Henrie to Weſtminſter, of our Ladies haires, &c. Of the Crowne of Thornes, Matth. Paris tells, that Baldwin, Emperour of Conſtantinople before mentioned, ſold it to the French King for money, to pay his Armie. Peter the pilgrime Biſhop of Winchester, bequeathed ineſtimable ſummes of money to Religious Houſes by him founded at Hales, Tikeford, Seleburne, Portſmouth: and whereas two Churches had beene dedicated * to Saint Th. Becket at Acon, he remoued one of them to a more conuenient place, and changed their Order into a more competent, ſubiect to the Templars, and gaue beſides by Will fiue hundred marks to it. But Vitriacus, the Biſhop of Acon, will beſt acquaint vs with their conditions, who hauing reckoned the Peeres of that Kingdome, the Earle of Tripolis, Lords of Berith, Sidon, Caiphas or Porphyria, Caſarea, Mount Royall, of Aſſur, of Ibelim, with ſome others; the Prince of Galilee, Lord of Tiberias; Earle of Ioppe and Aſcalon, &c. tells vs of the flouriſhing ſtate of Religion by the odor of holy and venerable places there, ſorted and fitting to mens deuouter humours; ſome chooſing to liue in the Deſart called Quarantena, where our Lord was tempted, liuing Heremiticall liues in petie Cells; others, in imitation of Elias in Mount Carmell neere Caiphas, in Hiues of ſmall Cells, foure miles from Acon: others, in the Deſarts of Iordan; others liuing ſolitarie in the Deſart of Galilee, where Chriſt preached. In Thabor was a Monaſterie builded, and in diuers other places. Others choſe rather to liue in Cities, eſpecially Ieruſalem, Nazareth, and Bethleem.

Pag. 731.

* By Engliſhmen.

Pag. 634.

Peeres of the Kingdome of Ieruſalem.

Quarantena.

Ieruſalem was the Mother of the Faith, as Rome is of the faithfull; it ſtands on a high Hill, is on both ſides Mountaynous, abounding with Wheat, Wine, and Oile, and all temporall good things: yet hath but one Fountayne, called Siloe, flowing out of Sion, ſometimes hauing little or no Waters. And as it is more holy then any place, ſo it hath drawne to it more religious Perſons. In it is a Temple of huge quantitie, whence the Templars haue their name, called Salomons Temple. Whatſoeuer places (in all that Countrey) our Lord trod on, are eſteemed holy and conſecrated, and for precious Reliques by the faithfull; whence Religious both Clerks and Laymen, aſwell militarie as of other condition, haue beene drawne thither: namely, the Brethren of the Hoſpitall of Saint Iohn, the Templars, and the Brethren of the Hoſpitall of Saint Marie of the Dutch. The Hoſpitalars were from the time of the Surians, hauing a Latine Church of Saint Marie, the Abbot whereof built an Hoſpitall in honor of Saint Iohn Eleemon. After the Franks Expedition, Gerard the Maſter, adioyning ſome others to him tooke a religious habit and white Croſſe, whom Agnes the Abbeſſe followed. Theſe buried their dead in Acheldama, and whiles they were poore obeyed the Abbot, and payed their Tithes, and called the poore to whom they miniſtred, their Maſters and Lords, but after became as Princes of the Earth. The Templars alſo were at firſt Lions in battell, Lambs at home, Eremites and Monkes in the Church, hauing Banners blacke and white (as mild to Chriſtians, terrible to the Infidels) ſeuere in their owne ſocietie, obſequious to the Patriarke, beloued for their Religion and humilitie, as the former, inſomuch that Dukes and Princes denyed the World and followed them.

Ieruſalem deſcribed.

Templars, ſo called of a Temple built by Mahumetans.

Hoſpitalars.

Acheldama.

Templars.

And becauſe a threefold Cord is not eaſily broken, that of the Dutch Knights was added, from a ſmall beginning increaſing into a ſwelling ſtreame. For one Dutch man with his family dwelling at Ieruſalem, many of his Countrey Pilgrimes, which knew not the language, were glad of his entertainment in a ſmall Hoſpitall by him therefore builded, to which alſo he added a Chappel in honour of our Lady, and partly procured of his owne goods, partly by almes, to the poore and ſicke Pilgrimes. Some Dutchmen liking the intent, gaue all they had thereto, binding themſelues by vow; and when ſome of Gentle and Noble bloud had adioyned themſelues, they became both followers of the Hoſpitulars in their care of the poore, and of the Templars in Military Deuotion.

Dutch Knights originall.

The Holy Land alſo flouriſhed with Regulars, Religious, Anchorites, Monkes, Canons, Nuns, Incloſed perſons, Virgins, Widowes. It was alſo full of peoples, Genuois, Piſans, Venetians, men fit for the Sea, and ſage Counſels; Frankes, Almans, Britons, Engliſhmen, leſſe ordered or circumſpect, more impetuous, more ſuperfluous in Dyet, prodigall in Expenſes, deuout in the Church, feruent in Charity, more couragious in Battell, and formidable to the Saracens: which yet for the vanitie of ſome, are by the Pollans, called the Sonnes of Hemaudius. They which deſcended of the Conquerors are called Pollans, eyther becauſe they were Pulli, in reſpect of the Surians, or becauſe their Mothers were moſt of them Apulians, the Army wanting women enough, and procuring from Apulia, the neereſt place of the Weſterne Church. There are beſides in the Holy Land,

Holy Land Inhabitants.

Colts, Chickens or young things.

one hundred and fiftie thouſand at one time croſſed vnder Sigiſmund to the war, being out of diuers Kingdomes, not to mention the Cruſado's by the Cardinals of Wincheſter and Iulian, with innumerable bloudſhed. But I am loth to lothe and wearie you with ſuch cruell Indulgentiall morſells, the Popes feaſt of mans fleſh to the blinded World. Thoſe Bohemian warres had firſt originall from Hus his preaching, and that alſo againſt Indulgences preached againſt the King of Naples: they were long and bloudie, but more long and bloudie haue thoſe of this laſt and worſt Age beene from like originall, which I leaue to other Authors, to reckon the many many hundreths of thouſands of Chriſtians, which one neighbour Countrey, yea one little piece of her neighbour Countrey (not to mention others ſtill bleeding, crying, dying) haue loſt in quarrels, died in the bloud of Religion. Money is the life of merchandiſe, Sinowes of warre, and vpholder of Greatneſſe, without which, Peters ſucceſſion, paſce Oues, I haue prayed for thy Faith, Conſtantines ſuppoſed donation, and the keyes of the Kingdome of Heauen, had not preuailed to a Papall earthly Monarchie. And Indulgences and Cruſado's haue beene his beſt both Mine and Mint for Money: firſt, in ſharing with Kings which tooke the Croſſe, and by Papall power impoſed Tenths that he might haue a Twentieth, as he did to Saint Lewis of France. Secondly, in letting out his Indulgences to Kings at a Rent, whereby at this day ſome get more then by ſome Kingdomes. Thirdly, by redeeming the Vowes by ſuch meanes as you haue now heard of the Friars, one binding to the Vow, another for money looſing, like a blacke and white Deuill witching and vnwitching the ſuperſtitious vulgar. Fourthly, Kings taking the Croſſe to oppreſſe their Subiects for the charge, with part of the purchaſe purchaſing a Papall Abſolution. Fiftly, agreeing with Kings to fleece the Church for the Holy Land, that he might doe as much againſt the Emperour. Sixtly, letting out theſe Cruſado's to ferme, by which Richard Earle of Cornwall, in Matt. Paris, daily ſo enriched himſelfe, how much more the Pope? the Popes preacher (playing the harueſt man, to bring into his Barnes or Treaſurie) that the fame of his money made him to be choſen Emperour. He of one Archdeaconrie reaped ſix hundred pounds. William Longſpat got by the like gift of the Pope, aboue a thouſand marks. Seuenthly, giuing Indulgences, that is, the money which might be made of them in recompenſe of friendſhip, labours, expenſes. Eightly, ſelling Indulgences to Churches, Images, Altars, Graines, Prayers, &c. thorow the Chriſtian world. Ninthly, by Iubilees, whereof Cruſado's were Forerunners and Apparitors. Tenthly, by diſpenſations the Iuno, ſiſter and wife of this Indulgent Ioue, or Pluto rather. Eleuenthly, by inſtituting Offices; Penitentiaries, Notaries, and I know not what rabble for theſe purpoſes and his Exchequer Receits, and then ſelling thoſe multiplyed Offices for the greateſt ſumme. But who can ſumme vp theſe Accounts? eſpecially being workes of Darkneſſe, myſtie myſteries, which yet are thus farre reuealed, enough to proue the Author the Man of ſinne, which by his owne verie ſinne, and ſuppoſed pardon of others, hath let the raines of the World looſe to Sinne; and hereby ruled the World holding the raines in his owne hand. Once; his temporall Monarchie, Collations of Benefices, Diſpenſations had neuer vnder-propped this myſticall Monarchie, had not Cruſado's and Indulgences awed Kings, excited and incited furious Armies, armed furies; depopulated and ruined Kingdomes, and by mayne force bett downe all Opponents abroad, and filled his Coffers at home.

Matt. Par.

Pag. 977.

See Act. and Mon. of Tho. Cromwell.

But for this of money, Sixtus or Xiſtus the fourth, was wont to ſay, that hee ſhould neuer want money ſo long as he wanted not a Hand and a Pen. And Xiſtus the fifth, in fiue yeeres and a halfe had gathered fiue millions of treaſure, notwithſtanding his magnificent and admirable expenſes, in Palaces, Churches, Obeliskes, Conduits, and the like. So much could Friars Minors skill of getting both Papacie and Money. And that you may know of what vſe prohibited marriages to Prieſts and religious Orders are, you may conſider how the Pope may make Armies of their numbers in extremitie; and of their purſes at pleaſure make ſponges. Pius the fourth leuied at one time of the Religions foure hundred thouſand Ducats; and if he would haue admitted Reſignations of Benefices with Regreſſes, as he was aduiſed, he might that way haue made a million. Paul the third maintayned twelue thonſand foot and fiue hundred horſe at his pay, vnder Charles the fift againſt the Lutherans, and yet rayſed his houſe as you ſee: Clement the ſeuenth hath notwithſtanding his captiuitie done more for his Houſe. Pius the fift ſent foure thouſand foot and one thouſand horſe, to aide Charles the ninth againſt the Proteſtants. But I haue wearied the Reader in obſeruing the effects of this Pope holy Expedition to Ieruſalem, and the Papall aduancement thereby. I will adde the vertues of thoſe Holy Land Inhabitants, and then you ſhall ſee it the Holy Land indeed, ſo termed by Antiphraſis, Dignum patella operculum, Lettice ſutable to the lips of His Holineſſe, who may alſo haue that Title for the ſelfe ſame cauſe.

§. V.

§. V.

Superſtition aduanced in and by the Holy Land Expeditions, and the Chriſtians Chriſtianitie in thoſe parts worſe then in other. Diuers Sects of Chriſtians in the Eaſt.

FIrſt for ſuperſtition, this voyage proued a Mart for Reliques, as is before in part obſerued of the multiplyed Croſſe, of the Speare, of the Bloud of Chriſt, ſolemnely carried by King Henrie to Weſtminſter, of our Ladies haires, &c. Of the Crowne of Thornes, Matth. Paris tells, that Baldwin, Emperour of Conſtantinople before mentioned, ſold it to the French King for money, to pay his Armie. Peter the pilgrime Biſhop of Wincheſter, bequeathed ineſtimable ſummes of money to Religious Houſes by him founded at Hales, Tikeford, Seleburne, Portſmouth: and whereas two Churches had beene dedicated * to Saint Th. Becket at Acon, he remoued one of them to a more conuenient place, and changed their Order into a more competent, ſubiect to the Templars, and gaue beſides by Will fiue hundred marks to it. But Vitriacus, the Biſhop of Acon, will beſt acquaint vs with their conditions, who hauing reckoned the Peeres of that Kingdome, the Earle of Tripolis, Lords of Berith, Sidon, Caiphas or Porphyria, Caſarea, Mount Royall, of Aſſur, of Ibelim, with ſome others; the Prince of Galilee, Lord of Tiberias; Earle of Ioppe and Aſcalon, &c. tells vs of the flouriſhing ſtate of Religion by the odor of holy and venerable places there, ſorted and fitting to mens deuouter humours; ſome chooſing to liue in the Deſart called Quarantena, where our Lord was tempted, liuing Heremiticall liues in petie Cells; others, in imitation of Elias in Mount Carmell neere Caiphas, in Hiues of ſmall Cells, foure miles from Acon: others, in the Deſarts of Iordan; others liuing ſolitarie in the Deſart of Galilee, where Chriſt preached. In Thabor was a Monaſterie builded, and in diuers other places. Others choſe rather to liue in Cities, eſpecially Ieruſalem, Nazareth, and Bethleem.

Pag. 731.

* By Engliſhmen.

Pag. 634.

Peeres of the Kingdome of Ieruſalem.

Quarantena.

Ieruſalem was the Mother of the Faith, as Rome is of the faithfull; it ſtands on a high Hill, is on both ſides Mountaynous, abounding with Wheat, Wine, and Oile, and all temporall good things: yet hath but one Fountayne, called Siloe, flowing out of Sion, ſometimes hauing little or no Waters. And as it is more holy then any place, ſo it hath drawne to it more religious Perſons. In it is a Temple of huge quantitie, whence the Templars haue their name, called Salomons Temple. Whatſoeuer places (in all that Countrey) our Lord trod on, are eſteemed holy and conſecrated, and for precious Reliques by the faithfull; whence Religious both Clerks and Laymen, aſwell militarie as of other condition, haue beene drawne thither: namely, the Brethren of the Hoſpitall of Saint Iohn, the Templars, and the Brethren of the Hoſpitall of Saint Marie of the Dutch. The Hoſpitalars were from the time of the Surians, hauing a Latine Church of Saint Marie, the Abbot whereof built an Hoſpitall in honor of Saint Iohn Eleemon. After the Franks Expedition, Gerard the Maſter, adioyning ſome others to him tooke a religious habit and white Croſſe, whom Agnes the Abbeſſe followed. Theſe buried their dead in Acheldama, and whiles they were poore obeyed the Abbot, and payed their Tithes, and called the poore to whom they miniſtred, their Maſters and Lords, but after became as Princes of the Earth. The Templars alſo were at firſt Lions in battell, Lambs at home, Eremites and Monkes in the Church, hauing Banners blacke and white (as mild to Chriſtians, terrible to the Infidels) ſeuere in their owne ſocietie, obſequious to the Patriarke, beloued for their Religion and humilitie, as the former, inſomuch that Dukes and Princes denyed the World and followed them.

Ieruſalem deſcribed.

Templars, ſo called of a Temple built by Mahumetans.

Hoſpitalars.

Acheldama.

Templars.

And becauſe a threefold Cord is not eaſily broken, that of the Dutch Knights was added, from a ſmall beginning increaſing into a ſwelling ſtreame. For one Dutch man with his family dwelling at Ieruſalem, many of his Countrey Pilgrimes, which knew not the language, were glad of his entertainment in a ſmall Hoſpitall by him therefore builded, to which alſo he added a Chappel in honour of our Lady, and partly procured of his owne goods, partly by almes, to the poore and ſicke Pilgrimes. Some Dutchmen liking the intent, gaue all they had thereto, binding themſelues by vow; and when ſome of Gentle and Noble bloud had adioyned themſelues, they became both followers of the Hoſpitulars in their care of the poore, and of the Templars in Military Deuotion.

Dutch Knights originall.

The Holy Land alſo flouriſhed with Regulars, Religious, Anchorites, Monkes, Canons, Nuns, Incloſed perſons, Virgins, Widowes. It was alſo full of peoples, Gennois, Piſans, Venetians, men fit for the Sea, and ſage Counſels; Frankes, Almans, Britons, Engliſhmen, leſſe ordered or circumſpect, more impetuous, more ſuperfluous in Dyet, prodigall in Expenſes, deuout in the Church, feruent in Charity, more couragious in Battell, and formidable to the Saracens: which yet for the vanitie of ſome, are by the Pollans, called the Sonnes of Hemaudius. They which deſcended of the Conquerors are called Pollans, eyther becauſe they were Pulli, in reſpect of the Surians, or becauſe their Mothers were moſt of them Apulians, the Army wanting women enough, and procuring from Apulia, the neereſt place of the Weſterne Church. There are beſides in the Holy

Holy Land Inhabitants.

Colts, Chickens or young things.

Land, Greekes, Iacobites, Maronites, Neſtorians, Armenians and Georgians, of much ſeruice for husbanding the Earth and other commodities.

The Authour doth heape more ſentences of Scripture to diſcouer their abominations, then here are mentioned, to ſhew them deplorate and deſperate: eſpecially conſidering their ſins out of meaſure ſinfull, and their Holies ſo leauened with manifold ſuperſtitions.

But when the Deuill (I ſtill follow our Author) had found no reſt in the firſt poore Pilgrims; hee found the houſe emptie, ſwept and garniſhed (men idle and dwelling ſecurely, abounding with temporall goods) and taking ſeuen ſpirits worſe then himſelfe (the ſeuen deadly ſinnes, for their ingratitude worſe) hee entred againe, and the laſt ſtate was worſe then the former. They were proud, high-minded, contumelious, ſeditious, malicious, ſorcerers, ſacrilegious, couetous, ſlouthfull, drunkards, gluttons, adulterous, theeues, robbers, homicides, traitors, men of bloud, diſobedient to Parents and Elders, without affection, truce breakers, mercileſſe: Reproach and lying man-ſlaughter, and theft, and adulterie ouer-flowed, and bloud touched bloud. So was the imagination of wicked mens intent to euill at all times, ſo farre was all vertue and religious honeſtie decayed, that there was ſcarſly any found which made difference betwixt the holy and profane, or ſeparated the precious from the vile. All were gone head-long to confuſion; from the ſole of the foot to the crowne of the head there was no ſoundneſſe: and as was the People, ſuch was the Prieſt.

For when all the World in manner had made it ſelfe tributarie in Almes, Gifts, Oblations, the Paſtors fed themſelues, minding the Wooll and Milke, not the Soules of the Flocke; yea, became examples of Treaſon, rich by Chriſts pouertie, proud by his humilitie, glorious by his ignominie, fattened and groſſe by the patrimonie of him Crucified; howſoeuer Chriſt had ſaid, Feede my Sheepe, not, Sheare my Sheepe. They ſought their owne, not the things of Chriſt, became blinde guides of the blinde, dumbe Dogs not able to barke; entring the Lords Houſe pompouſly, wanting the Key of knowledge, polluted with Gebezis leproſie, erecting the Chayres of Doue-ſellers and Money-changers, which our Lord ouer-threw, in the Churches euery-where, ſaying with Iudas, What will you giue mee? and I will betray him to you. All of them loued Gifts and followed Rewards, taking the Keyes from Simon Peter, and deliuering them to Simon Magus: manifold wayes luxurious, idle; feeding not with crummes from the Lords Table, but with whole Loaues and delicate Meates, their Whelps which of filthy Concubines they themſelues more filthy had procreated.

Regular Orders, Maſters of miſſe-rule and diſorder.

The Regulars alſo infected with the poyſon of Riches, and increaſed with poſſeſſions beyond meaſure, contemned their Superiours, and not onely became irkſome to the Eccleſiaſtikes, but enuied and detracted each other to the grieuous ſcandall of Chriſtendome, to contumelies, open hatreds, conflicts, violences, battells. For hauing begunne to build the Tower of Babel, with diuided Tongues, they not onely diſagreed amongſt themſelues, but bandying factions procured diſcords amongſt others. And howſoeuer many of them as graines of Corne amongſt Chaffe, and Lillies amongſt Thornes, as the times gaue leaue, obſerued their rules, and ſate not downe in the Chayre of peſtilence; yet the impietie of the worſe preuailed, and their iniquitie ſuperabounded, that in contempt of Eccleſiaſticall Diſcipline, they receiued to their Holies thoſe which by name had beene excommunicated: Abbots, Priors, Monkes, their miſerable and mercenarie Chaplens, thruſt their Sickles into others Harueſts, made vnlawfull marriages, viſited and houſelled the ſicke for gayne, not for godlineſſe; binding and looſing againſt God and holy Canons, the Soules which belonged not to their charge; admitted the dead to burialls (their Paſtors contradicting, and vſurped Parochiall right. Nunnes alſo leaped out of their Cloyſters, frequenting publike Baths with ſecular perſons. And as any were greater amongſt the Lay-men, ſo much more perniciouſly corrupted they their wayes: a corrupt Generation, as Lees of the Wine, Cockle of Wheat, and Ruſt of Siluer.

Pullani, wicked and abominable.

Theſe Pullani, delicate, wanton, effeminate, more accuſtomed to Baths then Battells, giuen to vncleanneſſe and leacherie, curiouſly dreſſed after womens wont, were contemned of the Saracens, and (if they had none of the Weſterne people with them) more vilipended then Women. They made league with the Saracens, and quarrelled with themſelues, for light matters rayſing ciuill warres, and often borrowing aide of the Infidells, ſpending the Treaſure and Stocke of Chriſtians againſt Chriſtians. They were deepe Diſſemblers, not eaſie to bee perceiued in their fallacies till they had deceiued; iealous mewers vp of their wiues, that their owne Brethren and neereſt Kindred might ſcarſly haue acceſſe; and keeping them from the Churches, and Sermons, and other things neceſſarie to their ſoules, hardly once in the yeere admitting them the Church. The richer ſort erected Altars neere their wiues beds, and by ſome * wretched Chaplens and vnlearned Sir Iohns, procured Maſſes to bee ſaid, that they might ſeeme Chriſtians. And how much cloſer their wiues are kept, ſo much more they whet their wits with a thouſand deuiſes and infinite plots to finde ſtarting holes; furniſhed by the Surians and Saracen women, with ſorceries, miſchiefes, and innumerable abominations. They are ingratefull, and many wayes irkſome to thoſe Pilgrims, which come from remote parts to their aide, with great labours and intolerable expenſes, liking better their eaſe and carnall pleaſures, then warres with the Saracens. Theſe Pilgrims they entertayne at immoderate charge, defrauding and impoueriſhing them in buying, and bartering to their owne exceeding enriching; afflicting them with reproaches and wrongs, and calling them [a] Sonnes of Hernaud, as it were Fooles and Ideots.

* Per miſeros capell. & imperitos presbyterunculos.

[a] Before filios Hernaudij, one is falſe printed

Surians.

There are others, continuing from ancient times vnder diuers Lords, Romanes, Greekes, Saracens and Chriſtians, called Surians, vnfit for Warre, men for the moſt part Vnfaithfull, Double-dealing, Lyers, Inconſtant, Fortune-fawners, Traytors, Gift-takers, eſteeming Theft and Robbery for nothing, Spyes to the Saracens, imitating their Language and Condition. Theſe ſhaue not, but nouriſh their beards, as doe the Greekes with great care, attributing thereto much virilitie, grauitie, authoritie and glorie. Whereupon, when Baldwin Earle of Edeſſa, hauing marryed the Daughter of a rich Armenian, ſuffered his Beard to grow; to extort money from his Father-in-law, he ſaid, he had impawned his Beard for a great ſumme to certaine Creditors; who gaue him thirtie thouſand Bizantines, to preuent that diſgrace to his Family, and on condition neuer to engage his Beard againe. Theſe Syrians vſe the Tongue and manner of writing of the Saracens in contracts, and all ſauing their Diuinitie and Holies, for which they haue the Greeke Letter; ſo that their Laity vnderſtand not their ſeruice, as the Greekes doe, whoſe Rites they wholly obſerue. They obey the Latine Prelates, for feare of the Princes, otherwiſe not hauing Greeke Biſhops of their owne, nor would regard their cenſures, but that our Lay-men in contracts and other buſineſſe, would not haue to doe with them being excommunicated. For they ſay amongſt themſelues, that the Latines are all excommunicated, and therefore cannot excommunicate. The Surians and Greekes admit not fourth Marriages. Their Prieſts marry not after their Orders, but vſe their wiues which before they marryed. They account not Sub-deaconſhip in holy Orders. Their ſimple Prieſts confirme with Chriſme, which with the Latines is not lawfull but to Biſhops. They keepe Saturday holy, nor eſteeme Saturday Faſt lawfull but on Eaſter Eeuen. They haue ſolemne Seruice on Saturdayes, eate fleſh, and feaſt it brauely like the Iewes.

The Weſterne Church for many Ages vſed much ſhauing, as in old pictures is ſeen Beards of price.

Force of Excommunication againſt contracts.

Iacobites.

There are alſo in the Holy Land and the Eaſt parts Iacobites, ſo called of one Iames a Diſciple of the Patriarke of Alexandria. Theſe of long time haue inhabited the greater part of Aſia, ſome amongſt the Saracens, and ſome, as in Nubia, and great part of Æthiopia, poſſeſſing whole Countries. They Baptiſe and circumciſe their children, and obſerue not Auricular Confeſſion: ſome make Croſſes with fire in their cheekes or temples; and they mayntaine but one nature in Chriſt. Some of them vſe the Chaldee Letter, others the Arabike, that is, the Saracenicall.

See of this our former Abaſsine Relations.

Neſtorians.

There are in the Holy Land, and by themſelues in India, Neſtorians, eſpecially, in the Countrey of Preſbyter [b] Iohn. Theſe, with the Iacobines, are ſaid to be more then the Latines and Greekes: and beſides thoſe which dwell by themſelues entyre, there are ſaid to be more of theſe Chriſtians ſubiect to the Infidels, then are of Saracens themſelues. They diuide the perſon of Chriſt, making the Virgin Mary Mother of the humane Perſon, & the Son of God another diuine Perſon. Neſtorius and this his Hereſie were condemned in the Epheſine Councell. They vſe the Chaldee Letter, and leauened Hoſts as the Greekes doe.

[b] Not the Abaſsine, but in Aſian India, where the Portugalls found Biſhops and other Chriſtians, called S. Thomas Chriſtians.

The Tartars cauſed much alteration in theſe parts.

Maronites.

About Libanus are ſome called Maronites, many in number which acknowledged (Maro was their Maſter) but one nature in Chriſt. Theſe Monothelites were condemned in the ſixth generall Councel at Conſtantinople. They vſed Sacraments by themſelues fiue hundred yeares, and after by Aimerike, Patriark of Antiochia, were reduced to the Roman Faith, whoſe Traditions they follow; inſomuch, that when all the Eaſterne Prelates except the Latines, vſe no Rings, Miters, nor Paſtorall Staues, nor Bels, (but Boords on which they knocke with a Sticke or Hammer to call the Aſſembly) the Maronites vſe all; and their Patriarke was preſent at the Councell of Laterane, vnder Innocent the Third. They vſe the Chaldee Letter and Saracen Language.

Armenians.

The Armenians are diuided from all other Chriſtians in Rites; hauing a Primate of their owne, whom they call Catholicon, obſerued by all of them as another Pope. They haue Letters and Language proper, and Lyturgies in the vulgar. At Chriſtmaſſe they faſt, and at Twelfday they ſolemnize our Lords Baptiſme, and his Spirituall Natiuitie, as they improperly ſpeake. Lent they faſt ſo ſtrictly, that they not only abſtayne from Fleſh, Egges, Whit-meates, but alſo from Fiſh, Oyle, and Wine, yet faſt not but eate fruites, and as often as they pleaſe. On ſome Fridayes they eate fleſh. They mixe no water with Wine in the Sacrament. The Armenians promiſed obedience to the Pope, when their King receiued of Henry the Emperor his Land, and the Crown of the Archbiſhop of Mentz: but retayne their old Rites notwithſtanding. There is alſo a warlike people dreadfull to the Saracens, called Georgians, of Saint George; whom they haue for their Patrone, and worſhip as their Enſigne bearer aboue other Saints, vſing the Greeke Holies. Their Prieſts haue round crownes, the Lay-men ſquare: and when they come to Ieruſalem on Pilgrimage, they enter with Banners diſplayed and without Tribute: the Saracens forbearing them, leſt they ſhould after their returne bee reuenged on other Saracens. Their noble women vſe Armes in Battels, as Amazons.

Georgians.

Moſarabes, or Moxarabes.

The Moſarabes are Latine Chriſtians, and obſerue the Romiſh Rites, dwelling amongſt the African and Spaniſh Saracens. Yet ſome of them diuide the Sacrament into ſeuen parts, others into nime, whereas the Romane Church doth it into three. There are other miſerable Eaſterne people, as Eſſees of Iewiſh deſcent, and Aſſaſines, and Saducees, and Samaritans.

They

The Holy Land the receptacle of all Impietie and Impuritie from other parts of Chriſtendome.

They which haue beſt knowne the Holy Land Affaires and Changes, affirme, that no greater plague hath hapned then flagitious and peſtiferous men, Sacrilegious Theeues, Robbers, Murderers, Parricides, Periured, Adulterers, Traytors, Pirates, Drunkards, Ieſters, Dicers, Players, Runnagate Monkes, and Nunnes becomne common Whores, and ſuch women as leauing their Husbands haue followed Bawdes, or ſuch as haue forſaken their Wiues and marryed others. Theſe Monſters haue runne away, and flying to the Holy Land, haue ſo much more boldly perpetrated there their former euils without ſhame, as they haue beene further from thoſe which knew them; neither fearing God nor reſpecting men. The eaſineſſe of eſcaping, and impunitie of ſinning haue looſed the reines to their Impietie: becauſe that after villanies committed, they runne to the Saracens, and deny Chriſt, or elſe by ſhip flye to ſome Ilands, or getting to the houſes of Regulars, * which euery where they found, by their pernicious libertie of Priuiledges, defending the wicked, they eſcaped without puniſhment. Some Murderers alſo condemned to mutilation or death in their owne Countries, by praying or paying obtayned often to bee condemned to perpetuall Exile in the Holy Land; and neuer altering their manners, haue there preyed on Pilgrimes and Strangers, kept Bawdie-houſes and Gaming-houſes, and Receptacles for Theeues and Murthers, paying a yeerely Penſion to the potent and rich, to patronize them in theſe exorbitancies; extorting the ſame with greater ſummes from Whores and Gameſters. Many alſo came to the Holy Land, not for Deuotion, but Curioſitie and Noueltie.

* The Templers, &c.

Thus you haue had a view of the Inhabitants, both Clergie and Laitie, Natiue and acceſſorie: all fleſh corrupting their way, and making it the moſt vnholy Sinke in the World, not the nauill of the Earth, as ſome call it, but the Knaue-ill, Slaue-uile, and baſe confluence of villanie; not the foundation of Religion, but the fundament of the Deuill and of Irreligion, as formerly in other Ages, ſo worſe then all worſts in this, that it was inhabited by theſe Pullans and Pilgrimes. Neither haue I in this Relation augmented or exagerated, but for breuitie haue fallen farre ſhort of the Authors blacke pitchie colours, wherein hee deſcribeth their Helliſh darkneſſe. And howſoeuer he much commends the firſt Pilgrimes (as comparatiuely they deſerued) yet euen that their righteouſneſſe was but pannus menſtruata, dyed in a deepe graine of Superſtition, beſides their other pollutions which the former Storie hath related. The beſt was a Popiſh pietie, the worſt was farre farre worſe then Heatheniſh Impietie (Corruptio optimi peſſima) ſo little good did Religion & Chriſtianity hereby receiue euen here. And as for the hurt it receiued in the Weſt, we haue declared and proued at large; Religion comming to the Weſt and worſt, and that bright Sunne almoſt ſet in a darke miſty myſticall Cloud, and darkneſſe from the bottomleſſe Pit, principally by this meane and occaſion.

Let none traduce me, as if I held it wholly vnlawfull to viſit holy places, or to warre againſt Infidels, or that I enuy the Pope himſelfe, his Temporalties: (howſoeuer gotten at firſt, as you haue heard) or abſolutely deny Abſolutions, Diſpenſations, Indulgences: the abuſes I taxe, and hiſtorically haue ſhewed how by corruptions, confuſions, combuſtions, the face and body of the Church hath beene empayred, weakned, and ſicke (ſo neere to death in ſo many many members and limmes) of the Antichriſtian or Romiſh Diſeaſe. As Chriſt is the name not of the Head alone, but of the whole myſticall body, which is one Seed, one City, one Temple, one Vine, one New man, one CHRIST: *So is Antichriſt both the head & myſtical body; the name howſoeuer it be moſt properly due to the Popes in their ſucceſſions, as the head, yet competible alſo to the whole body of the Popiſh Church, which together makes vp that myſticall Babylon, which thus by the carnall Ieruſalem, and Iewiſh Opinions and Rites, hath ſo impoueriſhed the new, ſpirituall and heauenly Ieruſalem, and her Celeſtiall Priuiledges, whereof we are children by Regeneration, and enfranchiſed citizens in manifold Priuiledges. Neyther perhaps, did any one ſtratageme ſo farre reduce Iudaiſme, or induce Poperie, or ſeduce the Chriſtian world, as this Holy Land vnholy degeneration. Chriſtianity, is to liue by faith and not by ſight, and to haue a conuerſation heauenly, and the exerciſe of a ſpirituall warfare againſt the World, the fleſh, the Deuill, by the panoply of God, hope of Saluation for a Helmet, Breſt-plate of Righteouſneſſe, Girdle of Sincerity, Greaues of the Goſpell, Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, and Shield of Faith (the euidence of things not ſeene, the ground of things hoped for) with perſeuerant Watching and Prayer But theſe Expeditions firſt hapned in a tumultuary warring and ſpoyling Age; were begun for temporall reſpects in the firſt moouers; in many if not moſt of the followers apprehended to like purpoſe of ſpoyle (all being as you haue ſeene, the Souldiers owne, hee could get) which blanched ouer with Honour, Religion, Merit; Once; being the ſeruice of two Maſters at once, God and Mammon, (which in true Religion is incompetible) eaſily wonne entertaynment. And if men now will aduenture voluntarily to fight any quarrels of any Region or Religion, for foure ſhillings a week, (eight dayes to the weeke) in an Age more compoſed generally to words then workes: is it any maruell, if ſo many inducements, in ſuch a miſt and ſmoke could whet ſo many Swords and courages in thoſe Martiall times, where earthly purchaſes were the guerdon of the liuing, with Fame, Nouelties, and many many ſenſuall Holies; and Martyrdome was the Crowne of the dead with God, Heauen and Eternitie.

* 1.Cor.12.12. Antichriſt ſignifieth, in the ſtead of Chriſt, againſt Chriſt, or emulous of Chriſt. The Pope is all, in profeſſion his Vicar, in ſhew emulous by zeale, indeed an emulous Corriuall, and cloſe Enemie of Chriſt. Vid. B. Downam de Antichriſt. l. 1. 1.Theſ. 5. Epheſ. 6. Heb. 11.

To conclude, Hypocriſie was the beginning, Bloud was the proceeding, Superſtitious Pietie that is impietie or impious pietie, with impuritie and deſolation were the end. This whole buſineſſe was (as the Serpents ſeducing Eue, and was propheſied of Antichriſt) not an open profeſſed enmitie againſt Chriſt, but in coloured loue of Chriſt and his patrimonie, a more ſubtle deceitfull working, the Deuill transformed into an Angell, that hee might proue the worſe Deuill: this Expedition being after the working of Satan with all power, and ſignes, and lying wonders, and with all deceiuableneſſe of vnrighteouſneſſe, as was foretold of that Sonne of perdition (which hereby and herein he hath proued, if euer by any one courſe, as is ſhewed, to the perdition of thouſands and thouſands of thouſands, both bodies and ſoules) a ſtrange Chymera, headed like a Lion, and in ſhew preſenting a Lionlike fortitude, for the honor of that Lion of the Tribe of Iuda; yet after the Goats belly of various luſts, tayled like a Dragon; and enuenoming to manifold deaths with the poyſon of the old Serpent: in ſhew kiſſing, indeed betraying, with Iudas; in ſhew lifting Chriſt higher, indeed crucifying him; the Pope in ſhew crowning theſe Pilgrims, but with a crowne of Thornes, with manifold externall miſeries, void of all internall conſolation, his Indulgences notwithſtanding; in ſhew preſenting the faces of men, and haire of women, indeed the tayles of Scorpions, which thoſe Locuſts had in their tayles. Once; herein was Chriſt many wayes crucified betwixt two theeues, in Vrban and Boamund the firſt Founders; in ſuperſtition and hypocriſie, the principall Mouers; in Reuelations of Peter the Heremite and others, and Papall Indulgences, the chiefe Confirmers: in the Greekes and Infidels, the one by Treacherie, the other by open Violence, the mayne Confounders, (like two Mill-ſtones, grinding the Weſterne Chriſtians and this whole exploit, to poulder) in expoſing Chriſtian bodies to bloudie crueltie, and their ſoules to crueller impietie; in confuſions and manifold diſorders in Families and Commonwealths, by abſence of Ouer-ſeers at home, and buying vanitie, nothing, and leſſe then nothing (for that was the end) with Seas of bloud and heapes of carkaſſes abroad; in abaſing the lawfull power of Kings, and exalting (in manner as yee haue heard) the vſurped Papall Monarchie; that is, by Excommunications, Interdicts, Treaſons, Cruſado's, Votifrages, Perjuries, aboliſhing them which are called Gods; and Him by whom Kings reigne, both in this his Ordinance, and in the whole face of his Religion; that the Man of ſinne might exalt himſelfe aboue all that is called God, or that is worſhipped; ſo that now, and principally hereby, He as God ſitteth in the Temple of God, ſhewing himſelfe that he is God. This was then a myſterie hidden from the wiſe and prudent: but now, and hereby, that Wicked is reuealed.

2. Theſ. 2.

CHAP. VII.

Monuments of Antiquitie, taken out of ancient Records, to teſtifie the quondam commerce betwixt our Kings and their Subjects, and thoſe Eaſterne Princes.

REx Coradino Illuſtri Soldano Damaſci, ſalutem. De tranſmiſſis nobis à Nobilitate veſtra muneribus per Anſelmum de Ienua mallonum Soldani, gratiarum vobis rependimus actiones; prompti ac parati in hijs quæ licet, veſtræ placere voluntati. Hoc quidem à Serenitate veſtra pro ampliori petimus munere, vt, ſi quos terræ noſtræ Chriſtianos captiuatos tenetis, eos liberos & expeditos reddere, & intuitu noſtri nobis mittere velitis: certis datis indicijs, quod ad eorum liberationem noſter eis profuit interuentus. Quo intellecto ad condignam viciſſitudinem Serenitati veſtræ merito teneamur. Teſte meipſo apud Weſtmonaſterium, Anno Regni noſtri duodecimo.

Literæ Henrici tertij Regis Angliæ Coradino Soldano Damaſci, de captiuis redimendis. Dorſo Clauſ. Anno 12. Regni ſui. & An. Dom. 1228.

Henricus Rex, &c. Sciatis nos conceſſiſſe, dilecto & fideli noſtro Philippo de Albiniaco, quod ſi de eo humanitus contigerit, antequam iter peregrinationis ſuæ arripuerit verſus terram Ieruſalem, quicquid ante obitum ſuum aſſignauerit, vel legauerit de terra de Periton, quam habet de dono noſtro, & de terris de Clyneton, Bamton, & Wytton, quas habet de Balliuo noſtro ad debita ſua acquietanda, vel eleemoſynas faciendas, vel ad mercedem militibus & ſeruientibus ſuis pro ſeruicio ſuo retribuendam, niſi prius terras illas hæredibus eorum, per voluntatem noſtram, vel per pacem reddiderimus, ratum habemus & ſtabile vſque in tres annos à die obitus ſui completos. In cuius &c. Teſte Rege apud Weſtmonaſterium 14. Iulij, Anno Regni ſui decimo ſeptimo.

Patentes, Anno 17. Henrici tertij. Pro Philippo de Albiniaco.

Rex conceſſit & licenciauit Simonem de Wiſtlegray, quod peregrini de partibus iſtis euntes peregre verſus terram Ieruſalem, Sanctum Iacobum, & alibi ad partes tranſmarinas, in Naue ipſius Simonis, quæ vocatur Gladyghyne ſaluo & ſecure transfretare poſſint. Et mandatum eſt omnibus Balliuis & fidelibus Regis, &c. Quod eidem Simoni & hominibus ſuis in ducendo Peregrinos in Naue prædicta, ſicut prædictum eſt, nullum faciant, nec fieri permittant damnum vel grauamen. Et durant literæ vſq; ad feſtum Sancti Michaelis. Teſte Rege apud Rading, quinto die Aprilis, Anno Regni ſui decimo nono.

Patenter, Anno 19. Henrici tertij.

Rex omnibus, ad quos præſentes literæ peruenerint, ſalutem. Sciatis, quod conceſſimus dilecto & fideli noſtro Oliuero de Sancto Georgio, quod in auxilium peregrinationis ſuæ, quam facturus eſt in Terram Sanctam, inuadiare poſſit terram ſuam de Brocton vſque ad terminum trium annorum, à feſto Sancti Michaelis, Anno Regni noſtri decimo nono, Ita quod ipſe cui terram illam inuadiauerit, illam teneat vſque ad terminum prædictum trium annorum, quicquid de ipſo Oliuero interim contingat. In cuius rei teſtimonium &c. Teſte Rege apud Windeſoram viceſimo octauo die Aprilis, Anno Regni ſui decimo nono.

Pro Oliuero de Sancto Georgio.

* * *

The Kings Letters to the Prelates, to excite their charitable deuotions, for reliefe of the Hoſpitall of Saint Samſon in Conſtantinople, and the Licence granted to Friar Thomas their Meſſenger for one yeere, granted at Windſor, A. Reg. 22. is here omitted.

* Sennor vel Domini.

*Rex Saladino, ſocio Thath Nuncij * Veteris de Muſſa, ſalutem. Significauimus prædicto Thath, quod bene placet nobis, quod ad nos in Angliam veniat, expoſiturus nobis Nuncium ſuum, pro quo ad nos veniſtis in Angliam, ſicut per literas noſtras Patentes, quas ei mittimus, plenius ei ſignificamus. Et ideo vos ſcire volumus, quod bene placet nobis, quod ſi cum literis noſtris prædictis ad ipſum perſonaliter accedere volueritis, id libenter faciatis: vel eas per quem volueritis prædicto ſocio veſtro tranſmittatis. Teſte Rege apud Kenynton 20. die Iulij, Anno Regni ſui 22.*

Pro Magiſtro Militum Templi de denarijs conceſſis ad redemptionem Fratrum.

Rex omnibus ad quos &c. ſalutem. Sciatis, quod conceſſimus Magiſtro Militum Templi Ieruſalem quingentas Marcas ad opus ſuum, reddendas in Anglia vel Hibernia Magiſtro Militiæ Templi Anglicanæ, ad redemptionem Militum & Fratrum eiuſdem Templi Ieruſalem, qui à Saracenis capti fuerunt in bello inter Caſtra de Gaſtun & Trepeſbac in terra Antiochiæ. Teſte Rege apud Geldeford primo die Ianuarij, Anno Regni ſui viceſſimo ſecundo.

Patentes, Anno 32. Henrici tertij.
Pro Gerardo de Rodes.

Gerardus de Rodes, qui profecturus eſt ad Terram Ieruſalem de licentia Domini Regis, habet literas Domini Regis de protectione, cum hac clauſula, quod quietus ſit de ſecta Comitatuum & Hundredorum, & de omnibus placitis & querelis, exceptis placitis de dote, vnde in his habet, aſſiſa nouæ diſſeiſinæ, & vltimæ præſentationis Eccleſiarum, duraturas quamdiu idem Gerardus fuerit in peregrinatione prædicta. Teſte Rege apud Winton, ſexto die Iunij, Anno Regni ſui triceſſimo ſecundo.

De Protectione.

Robertus de Ver, qui de licentia Regis peregre profecturus eſt in Terram Ieruſalem, habet literas Regis de protectione Patentes ſine clauſula, duraturas per triennium. Teſte Rege apud Weſtmonaſterium 27. Iunij, Anno Regni ſui triceſſimo tertio.

Pro Galfredo de Lezignan.

Rex Ademaro de Lezignan, ſalutem. Sciatis, quod dedimus Gulfredo de Lezignan fratri noſtro, in auxilium ad faciendam peregrinationem in Terram Sanctam, ducentas Marcas, quas nobis debetis pro cuſtodia terræ, quæ fuit Thurſtani Diſpenſer &c. Et ideo vobis mandamus, quatenus prædictas ducentas Marcas præfato Galfredo, vel eius certo Nuncio ſine difficultate ſoluatis. In cuius &c. Teſte Rege apud Weſtmonaſterium 10. Ianuarij, Anno Regni ſui 34.

The Kings letters to Dolgiet the King of Tartaria.
Rotula Romæ, Anno 1. Edw. 2. Anno Domini 1307.

Excellentiſſimo Principi, Domino Dolgieto, Regi Tartarorum Illuſtri, Edwardus Dei gratia Rex Angliæ, Dominus Hiberniæ, & Dux Aquitaniæ ſalutem, & fœlices ad vota ſucceſſus. Celſitudinis veſtræ Nuncios ad celebris memoriæ Dominum Edwardum imper Regem Angliæ, Patrem noſtrum, qui antequam ad ipſum veniſſent, extremum clauſerit fati diem, cum literis veſtris miſſos poſt dicti Patris noſtri deceſſum admiſimus: & literas veſtras prædictas, & ea quæ ijdem Nuncij veſtri nobis ex parte veſtra per commiſſam à vobis credentiam retulerunt, audiuimus & intelleximus diligenter: de beneuolentia & amore quos vos & progenitores veſtri erga dictum progenitorem noſtrum & nobis hactenus geſſiſtis, & adhuc geritis, necnon de miſſione Nunciorum veſtrorum, & dilectione & vnitate, quas inter vos & nos hinc inde creſcere cupitis, & augeri: Et de eo præcipuè, quod amicitiam inter nobiles Anteceſſores veſtros & genitorem noſtrum prædictum habitam memoriter retinetis, prout literarum veſtrarum ſeries patefecit: ac alijs rumoribus contentis in eiſdem veſtris literis & expreſſis, grates referentes veſtræ magnificentiæ Regiæ ſpeciales. De pace ſiquidem ab ortu ſolis vſque ad confinia vltra mare Deo propicio per vos facta gaudemus in Domino, & efficimur valde læti. Cæterum ſuper eo, quod intelligi vobis datur, quod inter nos, qui diſcordes fuimus citra mare pax & concordia reformatur: Excellentiæ veſtræ Regiæ volumus eſſe notum, quod inter nos firmiter credimus & ſperamus, ſuper quibuſcunq; diſcordijs & controuerſijs hinc inde ſuſcitatis, in breui, mediante Dei præſidio, finalem fieri & concordiam atque pacem. Datum apud Northampton decimo ſexto die Octobris, Anno Regni noſtri primo.

Another Letter to the King of Tartarie, againſt the ſuperſtition of Mahomet.

Sereniſſimo Principi ac Domino, Tartarorum Imperatori Potentiſſimo, Edwardus Dei gratia Rex Angliæ, Dominus Hiberniæ, & Dux Aquitaniæ, fœlicem regnandi gloriam cum ſalute. Reges & Principes terreni tanto magis dinoſcuntur Regi Cœleſtis gloriæ complacere, quanto ſimplices Chriſti fideles ardentius defendere, & nocuos & perfidos nituntur viribus debellare. Quibus ex collato ſibi diuinitus incumbit officio æqua iuſtitiæ libra rempublicam gubernare, & Chriſti infideles Chriſtianæq; fidei contrarios & rebelles impugnare & deſtruere iuxta poſſe. Hinc eſt quod cum in partibus Aſiæ & Africæ à longiſſimis retroactis temporibus multum inualuerit prophana ſecta & ſordida Machometi, circumquaq; pullulans & diffundens ſua infecta germina nimis late peſtem ſæculo ſuæ contagionis nephariæ immittendo: Nos qui, Deo permittente, ſumus ſceptro Regio inſigniti ad tam nefandæ ſectæ eradicationem libenter intenderemus, ſi loci diſtantia, & alia ardua negocia nobis incumbentia hoc fieri permitterent quouis modo. Nam tempus ad hoc adeſt acceptabile, vt accepimus his diebus, maxime cum in libris ipſorum contineri dicatur, infra breue tempus terminari & adnullari debere ſectam nephariam Machometi. Vos igitur veſtrum laudabile propoſitum in hac parte continuantes inchoata per vos ad huiuſmodi ſectam ſordidam à ſeculo penitus abolendam velitis perducere ad effectum. Ad hæc ad veſtram accedunt præſentiam Religioſi, honeſti, & literati viri, vt populum veſtrum ad fidem Catholicam, ſine qua ſaluus fieri nemo poteſt, diuina operante virtute, reducant, & inſtruant in eâdam: Ac ad ſumendum bellum contra deteſtabilem Machometi ſectam habilitent & informent: venerabilis ſcilicet frater Willielmus Dei Gratia Lidden Epiſcopus, vir vtique diſcretus, moribus & ſcientia præditus, cum ſua venerabili comitiua: quem ob honorem omnipotentis Dei, & fauorem fidei Chriſtianæ vobis quanto affectuoſius poſſumus, commendamus. Rogantes ex corde quatenus eundem Epiſcopum & eius Comitiuam Dei intuitu, ſub cuius imperio cuncta conſiſtunt, gratioſe & curialiter admittentes, eiſdem in proſecutione negocij prædicti exhibere vos velitis fauorabiles & benignos præfato Epiſcopo, in his quæ veſtra magnificentia pro augmentatione fidei Catholicæ eduxerit exponenda, fidem credulam exponendo. Datum apud Langley vltimo die menſis Nouembris, Anno Regni noſtri primo.

Like Letters of commendation of the ſaid Biſhop William, to the King of Armenia, and others to the Prince Gentis Matalorum in partib. orient. are vpon Record, but here for breuitie omitted. Another to the ſaid King here followeth.

Anno. 1. Edwardi. 2. The Kings Letters to the king of Armenia.

Sereniſſimo Principi, & amico ſuo chariſſimo, Leoni Dei Gratia Armenorum Regi illuſtri, Edwardus Rex Angliæ, &c. Salutem & fœlices ad vota ſucceſſus. Literas veſtras de credentia per diſcretos viros Theodorum, Cantorem Abbatiæ de Treſarco, Dominum Baudinium filium Domini de Negrino, conſobrinum veſtrum, & Dominum Leonem, Milites, familiares veſtros & Nuncios ſpeciales, ſuper nouis periculis vobis & Regno veſtro, cunctiſque eiuſdem Regni Chriſticolis emergentibus nobis miſſos recepimus. Et ea quæ ijdem Nuncij veſtri vobis ex parte veſtra per credentiam eis commiſſam exponere voluerunt, audiuimus & intelleximus diligenter. Super quibus dolemus in intimis, & turbamur. Verum quia claræ memoriæ Dominus Edwardus Rex Angliæ, pater noſter, viam vniuerſæ carnis eſt ingreſſus: quamobrem eiuſdem Regni regimen ſuſcepimus, & Coronacionis noſtræ ſolennia celebrari fecimus, non eſt diu; diuerſaque & ardua ex hijs cauſis nobis incumbunt negocia hijs diebus: dictorum negociorum requiſitionibus ex parte veſtra nobis factis annuere non poſſumus in præſenti. Sed cum tempora nobis ad hoc aduenerint oportuna, libenter adhibebimus cum Dei præſidio ſuper requiſitionibus prædictis conſilium quod poterimus bono modo. De xenio ſiquidem quod veſtra munificentia nobis miſit, veſtræ ſerenitati grates referimus ſpeciales: parati ſemper ad ea facienda quæ veſtris vtilitatibus nouerimus conuenire. Datum apud Weſtmonaſterium tertio die Martij, Anno Regni noſtri primo.

Edwardus Dei Gratia Rex Angliæ, &c. Religioſo viro, & ſibi in Chriſto chariſſimo, fratri Iohanni de ordine Minorum, Leonis quondam Regis Armenorum illuſtris filio primogenito, ſalutem cum dilectione ſincera. Literas veſtras de credentia, &c. vt ſupra.

Anno ſexto Edwardi ſecundi. De conductu pro Epiſcopis Samaritanis prædicare volentibus, literæ Regis Dauidi Regi Iurgianorum: or of the Georgians.

Magnifico Principi ac potenti, Dauid Dei gratia Regi Iurgianorum, Edwardus eadem Dei gratia Rex Angliæ, Dominus Hiberniæ, & Dux Aquitaniæ proſperorum incrementa ſucceſſuum, cum augmento fidei Orthodoxæ. Creator & Redemptor humani generis Ieſus Chriſtus, qui omnes vult ſaluos fieri, & neminem vult perire, hominem ad ſuam factum imaginem, proto parentis Adæ lapſu à ſupernis excluſum ſedibus, tanto dilexit caritatis affectu, vt pro ipſius redemptione perpetua, de intemerato Virginis naſcens vtero, noſtræque humanitatis indutus velamine, tanquam Paſtor optimus pro ſuis ouibus mortem pati, & ſuam dare animam non horreret, qui poſt paſſionem ſuam, ſecundum Scripturas, tertia die reſurgens à mortuis, diſcipulis ſuis ſe viuum præbuit in multis argumentis, per dies quadraginta apparens eis, & loquens de Regno Dei, & eos ſpiritus Sancti virtute perluſtrans & ſapientia, miſit in omnem Iudæam, & Samariam, & vſque ad vltimum terræ, ſuæ reſurrectionis gloriam & doctrinam Euangelicam prædicare, vt in omnem terram ſonus eorum exiret, & in fines orbis terræ verba eorum credentibus panderent. Euntes, inquiens, in mundum vniuerſum prædicate Euangelium omni creaturæ: Qui credit & baptizatus fuerit ſaluus erit: Qui vero non crediderit condemnabitur. Cum igitur vir religioſus & prouidus frater Guillermus de Villa Noua, ordinis Minorum Epiſcopus, præſentium lator, ſanctæ fidei Orthodoxæ Profeſſor & Zelator feruidus, de mandato Sanctæ ſedis Apoſtolicæ ad partes Tartarorum, & aliorum, qui fidem non norunt Catholicam, vna cum nonnullis Co-epiſcopis & fratribus eiuſdem ordinis, vt vobis, & ipſis Euangelium Chriſti, verbumque ſalutis annunciet, & transferre proponat: vos rogamus & hortamur in Domino Ieſu Chriſto, per veſtræ ſalutem animæ requirentes, quatenus præfatos Epiſcopos cæteroſque Religioſos & Catholicos, eiſque adhærentes, & adhærere volentes per loca veſtræ ditioni ſubiecta libere, ſaluo, & ſecure tranſire. Verbumque Dei, & ſanctum Domini Ieſu Chriſti Euangelium prædicare audire volentibus permittentes, ipſis faciatis ob Diuinæ Maieſtatis reuerentiam, noſtrorumque contemplatione rogaminum ſecurum præſtari conductum, ipſoſque malignantium incurſu defendi. Datum apud Douarram viciſſimo ſecundo die Maij, Anno Regni noſtri ſexto. Teſte Regi.

Eodem modo mandatum eſt Imperatori Trapezandarium. Teſte Rege, vt ſupra.

Rex potenti viro Imperatori Aquilonari, depoſito Gentilitatis errore, lumen verum agnoſcere quod eſt Chriſtus Creator & Redemptor humani generis Ieſus Chriſtus, qui omnes vult ſaluos fieri, & neminem vult perire, &c. vt ſupra. Teſte vt ſupra.

Eodem modo mandatum eſt ſubſcriptis : videlicet; Carpenta Perſarum & Medorum Imp. Imperatori de Cathay.

Diuers others of Richard the Second, Henry the Eight, &c. collected to this purpoſe. I haue omitted.

TO THE READER.

Like that Scribe which brings out of his Treaſurie new and old: ſo haue I here done, and ſo our Author following. To thoſe elder Stories and Records I haue added this later Voyage to Ieruſalem and Conſtantinople : and He, beſides his Trauels, hath added his Studies, the Voyage of his Minds Induſtrie, aſwell as of his bodies Peregrination; as a Learned Argus, ſeeing with the Eyes of many Authors, and comparing things old and new. Pardon me, that I haue here much pruned his ſweet Poetrie, his farre-fet Antiquitie, and other fruits of his Learning : I would not haue his owne Worke out of requeſt. I preſent men rather as Trauellers, then as Scholers; and in this Hiſtoricall Stage produce them, telling what they haue ſeene; not what they can ſay, or what other Authors haue written : not that I diſproue this (for what elſe is my whole Pilgrimage ?) but that I hold on here another courſe ; where if euery man ſhould ſay all, no man could haue his part; and where euen breuitie it ſelfe is almoſt tedious (as you ſee) by Multitudes. The other parts of Maſter Sandys are not ſimply ſuperfluous , yet are theſe to our preſent purpoſe ſufficient.

Chap. VIII.

A Relation of a Iourney begunne, Anno Dom. 1610. written by Maſter George Sandys, and here contracted.

§. I.

His iourney from Venice to Conſtantinople, and Obſeruations by the way.

Marriage of the Sea.

FRom Venice wee departed on the twentieth of Auguſt, 1610. in the Little Defence of London. The Venetians are Lords of this Sea, but not without contention with the Papacie. On Aſcention day, the Duke accompanyed with the Clariſſimoes of that Signiory, is rowed thither in the Bucentoro, a triumphall Galley, richly, and exquiſitely gilded : aboue a roome (beneath which they row) comprehending the whole length and breadth of the Galley; neere the poope a throne, the reſt accomodated with ſeates, where he ſolemnely eſpouſeth the Sea : confirmed by a Ring throwne therein, the Nuptiall Pledge and Symboll of ſubiection. This Ceremonie receiued a beginning from that Sea-battell fought and wonne by the Venetians , vnder the conduct of Sebaſtiano Zani, againſt the forces of Fredericke Barbaroſſa in the quarrell of Pope Alexander the Third. Who flying his furie in the habit of a Cooke repayred to Venice, and there long liued diſguiſed in the Monaſtery of Charitie. Zani returning in triumph with the Emperours Sonne, was met by the Pope, and ſaluted in this manner : Here take, O Zani, this Ring of Gold, and by giuing it to the Sea, oblige it vnto thee. A ceremonie that ſhall on this day bee yearely obſerued, both by thee and thy Succeſſors, that Poſteritie may know how you haue purchaſt the Dominion thereof by your valours , and made it ſubiect vnto you, as a Wife to her Husband.

Sclauonia.

We ſayled all along in the ſight of Dalmatia, at this day Sclauonia, of the Sclaui, a people of Sarmatia. They diſſent not from the Greeke Church in their Religon. Throughout the North part of the World their Language is vnderſtood and ſpoken, euen from thence almoſt to the Confines of Tartarie. The men weare halfe-ſleeued Gownes of Violet cloth, with Bonnets of the ſame. They nouriſh onely a locke of haire on the crowne of their heads : the reſt all ſhauen. The women weare theirs not long; and dye them blacke for the moſt part. Their chiefe Citie is Raguſa (heretofore Epidaurus) a Common-wealth of it ſelfe, famous for Merchandize, and plentie of ſhipping. Many ſmall Ilands belong thereunto, but little of the Continent. They pay Tribute to the Turke, fourteene thouſand Zecchins yearely : and ſpend as much more vpon them in gifts and entertainment, ſending the Grand Signior euery yeare a ſhip loden with Pitch for the vſe of his Gallies. Whereby they purchaſe their peace; and a diſcharge of duties throughout the Ottoman Empire.

Corfu, the firſt Iland of note that we paſt by, lyeth in the Ionian Sea; ſtretching Eaſt and Weſt in forme of a Bow: foure and fiftie miles long, foure and twentie broad, diſtant about twelue from the mayne of Epirus, called formerly Corcyra, adorned with Groues of Oranges, Limons, Pomegranates, Fig-trees, Oliues and the like: enriched with excellent Wines and abundance of Honey. Vpon the North-ſide ſtands a Citie that takes the name of the Iland, with a Caſtle ſtrongly ſeated on a high Rocke, which ioyneth by an Iſthmos to the Land, and impregnably fortified. The Turkes haue teſtified as much in their many repulſes. It is the Chaire of an Archbiſhop, inhabited for the moſt by Grecians, as is the whole Iland, and ſubiect to the Venetians.

Saint Maura lyeth next vnto this, once adioyning to the Continent, and ſeparated by the labour of the Inhabitants: yet no further remoued then by a bridge to bee paſt into. Called it was formerly Leucadia, of a white Rocke which lyeth before it, toward Cephalonia. On which ſtood the Temple of Apollo. In this Iland they haue a Citie inhabited for the moſt part by Iewes: receiued by Baiazet the Second; at ſuch time as they were expulſed Spaine by King Ferdinand.

Val de Compare, a little beyond preſenteth her rockie Mountaines, contayning in circuit about fiftie miles, now inhabited by Exiles and Pirates. Once called Ithaca, ſo celebrated for the birth of Vlyſſes: Betweene this and the mouth of the Gulph of Lepanto, (once named the Gulph of Corinth) lye certaine little Ilands, or rather great Rockes, now called Curzolari, heretofore Echinades, made famons by that memorable Sea-battell there obtayned againſt the Turke by Don Iohn of Auſtria, in the yeare 1571. and ſung by a crowned Muſe.

Curzolari.

We ſayled cloſe by Cephalenia, triangular in forme, one hundred and ſixtie miles in circumference: the Mountaynes intermixed with profitable Valleyes, and the Woods with Champian. Vnwatered with Riuers, and poore in Fountaines, but abounding with Wheate, Honey, Corents, Manna, Cheeſe, Wooll, Turkeyes, excellent Oyle, incomparable (though not long laſting) Muſcadines, and Powder for the dying of Scarlet: This growes like a bliſter on the leafe of the holy Oke, a little ſhrub, yet producing Acornes: being gathered, they rub out of it a certaine red duſt, that conuerteth after a while into wormes, which they kill with Wine when they begin to quicken. Amongſt her many harbours, Argoſtoli is the principall, capacious enough for a Nauie. The Inhabitants of this Iland are Grecians, the Venetians their Souereignes. Hauing paſt through the Streights, that diuide this Iland from the next, (vulgarly called Canale del Zant,) on the ſecond of September we entred the Hauen of Zacynthus, and ſaluted the Caſtle with our Ordnance.

This Iland (nine hundred miles diſtant from Venice) ſo called of Zacynthus the Sonne of Dardanus, and at this day Zant; contayneth in circuit not paſt threeſcore miles. On the South and South-eaſt ſides rockie and mountaynous, but plaine in the midſt, and vnſpeakably fruitfull, producing the beſt Oyle of the World, and excellent ſtrong Wines, both white and red, which they call Ribolla. But the chiefe riches thereof conſiſteth in Corents, which draweth hither much trafficke (eſpecially from England and Holland, for here they know not what to doe with them:) inſomuch that wheras before they were ſcarce able to free themſelues from importunate famine, they now (beſides their priuate gettings, amounting to one hundred and fiftie thouſand Zecchins) doe yearely pay vnto Saint Marke fortie eight thouſand Dollars for Cuſtomes and other Duties. It is impoſſible that ſo little a portion of Earth, ſo employed, ſhould be more beneficiall, the mountaynous part being barren, and the reſt comprized within two or three not very ample Valleyes, but thoſe all ouer husbanded like an entyre Garden. They ſow little Corne, as employing their grounds to better aduantage: for which they ſometimes ſuffer, beeing ready to ſtarue, when the weather continueth for any ſeaſon tempeſtuous: and they cannot fetch their prouiſion, which they haue as well of Fleſh as of Corne, from Morea, being ten leagues diſtant. They haue Salt-pits of their owne, and ſtore of freſh water, but little or no wood, though celebrated for the abundance thereof, by Homer and Virgil.

Zacynthus, or Zant.

Store of Corants.

It is here a cuſtome ſtrictly obſerued (as alſo elſe-where within the Streights belonging to the Chriſtians) not to ſuffer any to trafficke or come aſhoare before they haue a Pratticke from the Signiors of Health, which will not be granted vntill fortie dayes after their arriuall, eſpecially if the ſhip come from Turkie, and bring not a Certificate, that the place from whence they came is free from the infection: if ſo, perchance their reſtraint may be ſhortned, during which time they haue a Guardian ſet ouer them. They will not ſuffer a Letter to be deliuered, if ſealed with thred, before it be opened and ayred. If ſuch as come to ſpeake with them doe but touch one of the ſhip, or ſometimes but a rope, they ſhall be forced to aſcend, and remayne there for the time limited; it being death to him that ſhall come aſhoare without licence. Notwithſtanding, they vpon requeſt will carrie you to the Lazaretto (which is the nature of a Peſt-houſe) there to abide vntill the date be expired. But if any fall ſicke amongſt them in the meane-ſeaſon, their Pratticke is accordingly prolonged. A great inconuenience to the Merchants, but at Venice intolerable, where when they haue Pratticke, they are enforced to vnlade at the Lazaretto. So vnder pretence of ayring their goods are opened; their quantitie, qualitie and condition known; redounding much to their detriments. But for that we came from Venice, wee were freed from this miſchiefe, and preſently ſuffered to land.

Pratticke of health.

The Towne, taking or giuing a name to the Iland, ſtretcheth along betweene the Weſt ſide of the Hauen and the foote of the Mountayne: perhaps a mile in length, in breadth but narrow. The ſtreets vnpaued, the building low, by reaſon of the often Earth-quakes whereunto this Iland is miſerably ſubiect. Two hapned during my ſhort abode heere, though of ſmall importance. Although the ſeate of the Towne be exceſſiue hot, yet is it happily qualified by a North-eaſt gale that bloweth from Sea moſt conſtantly about the midſt of the day.

The Great Turke hath yearely a preſent of Falcons from the Gouernor (accompanyed, as ſome ſay, with twelue hundred Zecchins) which he calleth a Tribute: it beeing in his power to diſtreſſe them at his pleaſure, by reſtrayning the reliefe of victuals which they haue from Morea, and his adioyning Dominions. Whileſt wee were here, the Captaine Baſſa paſt by with ſixtie Gallies; who yearely about this time ſayleth in circuit, to receiue Tribute, ſuppreſſe Pirates, and to doe ſome exploit vpon the Malteſes, Spaniards, and Florentines, with whom they are onely in hoſtilitie. Diuers of their Gallies putting into the Hauen, were courteouſly entertaynd for the Venetians endeauour, as much as in them lyes to keepe good quarters with the Turke; not onely for the reaſon aforeſaid, (which perhaps might extend as farre as their Citie: their Territories though large and fruitfull, too narrow to ſuſtayne ſo populous a State, if vnrelieued from Turkie, and that their paſſage into the mid-land Sea were interrupted) not for the loſſe they ſhould ſuſtayne by the ceſſation of Trafficke with the Mahometans: but knowing him by deare experience too powerfull an Aduerſary for them by Land, and though they are perhaps ſtrong enough by Sea, yet ſhould they loſe a Nauie, their loſſe were vnrecouerable, whereas the Turke within the ſpace of a yeare is able to ſet forth another.

Murtherers.

The Inhabitants of this Iland are in generall Grecians (of whom wee will ſpeake no more then concernes the particular cuſtomes of the place, referuing the reſt to our relation of that people: in habit they imitate the Italians, but tranſcend them in their reuenges, and infinitely leſſe ciuill. They will threaten to kill a Merchant that will not buy their Commodities, and make more conſcience to breake a Faſt, then to commit a Murther. One of them at our beeing heere, purſued a poore Sailer (an Engliſhman) for offering but to carrie a little bagge of Corents aboord vncuſtomed, and killed him, running vp a paire of ſtaires for ſuccour. He is weary of his life that hath a difference with any of them, and will walke abroad after day-light. But cowardize is ioyned with their crueltie, who dare doe nothing but ſodainly, vpon aduantages; and are euer priuately armed. Encouraged to Villanies by the remiſneſſe of their Lawes: for none will lay hands vpon an offender, vntill fourteene dayes after that hee bee called to the Scale, (an eminent place where one doth ſtand and publikely cite the offenders:) who in the meane-time hath leiſure to make his owne peace, or elſe to abſent himſelfe: if then he appeare not, they baniſh him; and propound a reward according to the greatneſſe of the offence, to him that ſhall either kill or take him aliue: and if it be done by one that is baniſhed, his owne baniſhment (the leaſt reward) is releaſed. The Labourers doe goe into the fields with Swords and Partizans, as if in an Enemies Country, bringing home their Wines and Oyles in Hogs-skins, the in-ſides turned outward. It is a cuſtome amongſt them to inuite certaine men vnto their Marriages, whom they call Compeeres. Euery one of theſe doe beſtow a Ring, which the Prieſt doth put vpon the Bride and Bridegroomes fingers, interchangeably ſhifting them; and ſo hee doth the Garlands on their heads. Of theſe they are neuer iealous (an abuſe in that kind reputed as deteſtable a crime, as if committed by a naturall Brother;) ſo that they lightly chuſe thoſe for their Compeeres that haue beene formerly ſuſpected too familiar. The Bridegroome entring the Church, ſtickes his Dagger in the doore; held auailable againſt Inchantments. For heere it is a common practice to bewitch them: made thereby impotent with their Wiues, vntill the Charme be burnt, or otherwiſe conſumed: inſomuch that ſometimes (as they ſay) the Mothers of the betrothed, by way of preuention doe bewitch them themſelues, and againe vnlooſe them as ſoone as the Marriage is conſummated. The Nuptiall ſheets (as in ſome caſes commanded by the Moſaicall Law) are publikely ſhowne: and preſerued by their Parents as a Teſtimonie of their vncorrupted Virginities.

Danger of remiſſe Lawes.

There be here two Biſhops, one of the Greekes, and another of the Latines. The Greekes haue diuers Churches, the principall that of S. Nicolas, (which giueth to the Hauen a name, and not far remoued) with a Monaſtery of Caloieros; for ſo are their Monkes called. On the other ſide of the Harbor, vpon the top of the Promontory, they haue another far leſſe; with a Chappell dedicated to the Virgin Mary, called Madonna del Scopo, reputed effectreſſe of Miracles, and much inuocated by Sea-faring men. As the Duke of Venice doth marrie the Sea, ſo yearely doth this Biſhop vpon the Twelfe day baptize it: although with leſſe ſtate, yet with no leſſe Ceremonie. The Venetians heere (as in Candy) doe ioyntly celebrate the Grecian Feſtiuals: either to gratifie, or elſe to auoid occaſions of tumult. As for the Romane Catholike Biſhop, hee hath his Cathedrall Church and reſidence within the Caſtle: where there is a Couent of Franciſcans. A mile and halfe off, in the ſight of the Towne, on the ſide of a Mountaine, they haue another Monaſterie, called the Annuntiata, where the Latins haue their burials, built in the yeere 1550. when vnder the ground there were found two Vrnes; one full of aſhes, and the other of water, in an ancient Sepulchre. Vpon a ſquare ſtone that couered the Tombe, was engrauen M. TVL. CICERO HAVE ET TV TERTIA ANTONIA, and vnder the Vrne which contayneth the aſhes, AVE MAR. TVL. It being ſuppoſed that Cicero was there buried: peremptorily affirmed by a Traueller then preſent; reporting withall, that he ſaw this Epitaph:

Sepulchre of Cicero.

Iohannes Zuallardus in Itin. lib. 1.

Of Orators the Prince, of Speech the Pride,
Tullie, with his Wife in this Vrne abide:
Tullie, that of himſelfe thus writ; O Rome
Bleſt, in that I thy Conſul, am become.

Ille oratorum princeps, & gloria linguæ
Romanæ, iacet hac, cum coniuge Tullius vrna:
Tullius ille, inquam, de ſe qui ſcripſerat olim,
O fortunatam natam, me conſule, Romam.
Adamus Teſſlenius in ſuo Itin.

The Iewes haue here a Synagogue, (of whom there are not many) one hauing married an Engliſh woman, and conuerted her to his Religion. They weare a blue riband about their hats for a diſtinction. The forraine Merchants here reſident, are for the moſt part Engliſh, who by their frequent deaths doe diſproue the aire to be ſo ſalubrious as is reported: who haue their purchaſed interments in gardens: neither ſuffered by Greekes nor Latines to be buried in Churches. If a Stranger here take a fraught of a Venetian, and a Venetian ſhip be in Port, the Maſter thereof vpon a proteſtation, will enforce the Stranger to vnlode, and ſerue his owne turne therewith, if it be for his benefit. In this Iland there are fortie Villages.

On the fourteenth of September I embarqued in another Engliſh ſhip, called the Great Exchange; firſt bound for Chios, and then for Tripolis. With a proſperous wind wee compaſſed a part of Morea: more famous by the name of Peloponneſus: ſhaped like a Plantan leafe, and embraced almoſt by the Corinthian and Saronian armes of the Mediterraneum: on the North adioyning by a narrow Iſthmos to the reſt of Greece; where ſtood that renowmed Citie of Corinth. But I rather thinke, for their wholſome aduice, and expedite execution, in freeing the State of thoſe monſters, called the Dogs of Iupiter, that is, infernall Furies, and miniſters of his vengeance. Alphonſus King of Naples, was wont to ſay merrily, that the Harpyes had left the Strophades to inhabite at Rome: intimating thereby the auarice of that Clergie. Wee left on the left hand two Rockes, at this day called the Strinaly: where onely liue a few Greeke Coloieros, that receiue their ſuſtenance of almes from the neighbouring Ilands. There is in one a Spring of freſh water, ſuppoſed to haue his originall in Peloponneſus, and ſo to paſſe vnder the Sea, in regard of a certaine tree ouer-ſhadowing a little Lake, the leaues thereof (or like vnto thoſe) being often found in this Fountaine, there growing none of that kind in the Iland. Wee thruſt betweene Cape Malio and Cerigo, about fiue miles diſtant; once Porphyris, of his excellent Porphyr; but better knowne by the name of Cythera. An Iland conſecrated vnto Venus. In the Towne riſing two furlongs vp from the Hauen, ſtood her celebrated Temple (the moſt ancient that the Grecians had of that Goddeſſe,) and therein her Statue in complete armour. Out of this it is ſaid, that Paris made a rape of Helena, or rather here firſt enioyed her in his returne from Sparta. The ruines are now to be ſeene, together with that of Vranias. The Iland is ſixtie miles in compaſſe; it hath diuers Harbours, but thoſe ſmall and vnſafe. A delightfull ſoyle, inhabited by Grecians, and ſubiect to the Venetians.

Morea.

Corinth.

Strophades.

This is the firſt of the Ægean Sea: the largeſt arme of the Mediterraneum, extending to the Helleſpont, and diuiding Greece from the leſſer Aſia. A Sea dangerous and troubleſome to ſayle through, in regard of the multitude of Rockes, and Ilands, euery where diſperſed. Inſomuch, that a man is prouerbially ſaid to ſayle in the Ægean Sea, that is, encumbred with difficulties. The Ilands of this Sea were anciently diuided into the Sporades, and Cyclades. The Sporades are thoſe that lie ſcattered before Crete, and along the coaſt of Aſia: The Cyclades, ſo called in that they lie in a circle.

Mare Ægeum.

Amongſt the reſt of the laſt named wee ſayled by Delos, (now Diles) hemd with ſharpe Rockes. The ruines of Apollos Temple are here yet to be ſeene, affoording faire Pillars of marble to ſuch as will fetch them, and other ſtones of price, both in their nature, and for their workmanſhip; the whole Iland being now vninhabited.

Delos.

Three dayes after our embarkment (as quicke a paſſage as euer was heard of) we arriued at Sio, a famous Iland, called formerly Chios. Sixſcore and fiue miles it contayneth in circuit, extending from South vnto North: the North and Weſt quarters extraordinarie hilly. In the mideſt of the Iland is the Mountaine Aruis (now Amiſta) producing the beſt Greeke Wines. But the Lenticke tree, which is well-nigh onely proper to Sio, doth giue it the greateſt renowne and endowment. Theſe grow at the South end of the Iland, and on the leaſurely aſcending hills that neighbour the ſhoare. In heighth not much exceeding a man, leaued like a Seruice, and bearing a red berrie, but changing into blacke as it ripeneth.

Chios.

In the beginning of Auguſt lanch they the rine, from whence the Maſticke diſtilleth vntill the Maſticke.

the end of September, at which time they gather it. None ſuffered to come amongſt them during the interim, it being death to haue but a pound of new Maſticke found in their houſes. The wood thereof is excellent for tooth-picks. By reaſon of theſe trees they haue the beſt Honie of the world, which intermingled with water, is not much inferiour in reliſh to the coſtly Shurbets of Conſtantenople. The Iland produceth Corne and Oyle indifferent plentie. Some Silke they make, and ſome Cottons here grow, but ſhort in worth vnto thoſe of Smyrna. It hath alſo quarries of excellent Marble, and a certaine greene earth, like the ruſt of Braſſe, which the Turkes call, Terra Chia: but not that ſo reputed of by the ancient Phyſicians. The coaſt, eſpecially towards the South, is ſet with ſmall Watch-towers, which with ſmoake by day, and fire by night, doe giue knowledge vnto one another (and ſo to the vp-land) of ſuſpected enemies. The enuironing Sea being free from concealed Rockes, and conſequently from perill. On the Eaſt ſide of the Iland, foure leagues diſtant from the Maine of Aſia, from that part which was formerly called Ionia, ſtands the Citie of Sio, hauing a ſecure Hauen (though daily decaying, yet with a ſomething dangerous entrance, ſtreightned on the North ſide by the ſea-ruined wall of the Mould, incroching neerer the Diamond, which ſtands on the other ſide of the Mouth, ſo called of the ſhape, riſing out of the Sea, and ſupporting a Lanterne, erected by the Genoeſes,) inſomuch that ſhips of the greateſt ſize doe anchor in the channell: but ours thruſt in, when going aſhoare, I was friendly entertayned of the Engliſh Conſull.

Engliſh Conſul.

The Towne ſtretcheth along the bottome of the Hauen, backt on the Weſt with a rockie Mountaine, the building meane, the Streets no larger then Allies. Vpon the Caſtle hill there is a Bannia, which little declines from the ſtate of a Temple; paued with faire tables of marble, and ſupported with Columnes, contayning ſeuerall roomes, one hotter then another, with Conduits of hot water, and naturall Fountaines. On the North ſide of the Citie ſtands the Caſtle, ample, double walled, and enuironed with a deepe ditch: manned and inhabited by Turkes, and well ſtored with munition. This not many yeeres ſince was ſodainely ſcaled in a night by the Florentines, who choaking the Artillerie, and driuing the Turkes into a corner, were now almoſt maſters thereof: when a violent ſtorme of wind, or rather of feare, enforced their companions to Sea, and them to a compoſition; which was, to depart with enſignes diſplayed. But the Gouernour hauing gotten them into his power, cauſed their heads to be ſtrucke off, and to be piled in morter on the Caſtle wall; where as they yet remayne, but not vnreuenged. For the Captaine Baſſa vpon his comming, ſtrangled the perfidious Gouernour, either for diſhonouring the Turke in his breach of promiſe, or for his negligence in being ſo ſurpriſed. Since when, a watch-word euery minute of the night goeth about the walls, to teſtifie their vigilancie. Their Orchards are here enriched with excellent fruits; amongſt the reſt, with Oranges, Limons, Citrons, Pomgranats, and Figs. Vpon theſe Fig-trees they hang a kind of vnſauoury Figge: out of whoſe corruption certaine ſmall wormes are ingendred, which by biting the other (as they ſay) procure them to ripen. Partridges here are an ordinarie food; whereof they haue an incredible number, greater then ours, and differing in hue, the beake and feete red, the plume aſh-colour. Many of them are kept tame; theſe feeding abroad all day, at night vpon a call returne to their ſeuerall owners.

Solyman the Magnificent, picking a quarrell with the Gouernour for the Genoas, for a ſuſpected correſpondencie with the great Maſter of Malta, during thoſe warres, and diſcouery of his deſignes; hauing beſides neglected accuſtomed preſents, with the payment of two yeeres tribute, ſent Pial the Captaine Baſſa to ſeize on the Iland; who on Eaſter day in the yeere 1566. preſenting himſelfe before Sio, with foureſcore Gallies, ſo terrified the Inhabitants, that before they were ſummoned, they quietly ſurrendred both it and themſelues to his diſpoſure. The Gouernour, together with the principall families, intending to depart for Italie, hee ſent vnto Conſtantinople; and ſuffered the common people to ſtay or remoue at their liking: So that the whole Iland is now gouerned by Turkes, and defiled with their ſuperſtitions: yet haue the Chriſtians their Churches, and vnreproued exerciſe of Religion. Beſides impoſitions vpon the land, and vpon commodities ariſing from thence, the Great Turke receiues yeerely for euery Chriſtian aboue the age of ſixteene, two hundred Aſpers: but the husbandmen are exempted vntill marriage.

120. Aſpers amount to a Sultanie.

The Inhabitants for the moſt part, are Turkes and Grecians; thoſe liuing in command, and looſely: the other husbanding the earth, and exceeding them infinitely in number. They are in a manner releaſt of their thraldome, in that vnſenſible of it: well meriting the name of Merrie Greekes, when their leaſure will tolerate. Neuer Sunday or holiday paſſes ouer without ſome publike meeting or other: where intermixed with women, they dance out the day, and with full crownd Cups enlengthen their iollitie. Frequented by forraine Merchants, Natolia affoording great ſtore of Chamolets and Grogerams, made about Angra; and a part brought hither, before ſuch time as the Goats (whoſe haire they pull, white, long, and ſoft) were deſtroyed by the late Rebels, Turkiſh Rebels.

conſiſting for the moſt part of the expulſed Inhabitants of burned Townes; who hauing loſt all that they had, knew not better how to recouer their loſſes, then by preying vpon others; and ſo ioyned with their vndoers, led by Calender Ogly and Zid Arab: and growne to ſo fearefull a head, that the Great Turke (ſome ſay) had once a thought to haue forſaken the Imperiall Citie, they being fiftie thouſand, but deſtitute of Artillerie. After foyled by Morat Baſſa the great Vizer, who for that ſeruice (but chiefly for the ouer-throw of Ianballat the Baſſa of Aleppo, and naturall Lord of the rich Valley of Achillis) was called by him his Father and Deliuerer. They beſieged this Citie; and were by certayne Engliſh ſhips that lay in the Roade, vnfriendly ſaluted. In the end, burnt a part thereof, and tooke a ranſome for ſparing the reſt. But their principall commoditie is Cotton wooll, which here groweth in great quantitie. With the ſeeds thereof they doe ſow their Fields, as wee ours with Corne. The ſtalke no bigger than that of Wheate, but tough as a Beanes: the head round and bearded, in ſize and ſhape of a Medler: hard as a ſtone; which ripening breaks, and is deliuered of a white ſoft Bombaſt intermixed with ſeeds, which they ſeparate with an inſtrument. You would thinke it ſtrange, that ſo ſmall a ſhell ſhould contayne ſuch a quantitie, but admire if you ſaw them ſtiue it in their ſhips: enforcing a Sacke as bigge as a Wooll-packe into a roome, at the firſt too narrow for your arme, when extended by their inſtruments: ſo that oft they make the very decks to ſtretch therewith.

Engliſh ſeruice.

Cotton.

Taking with me a Greeke that could ſpeake a little broken Engliſh, for my Interpreter: on the twentieth of Nouember, I did put my ſelfe into a Barke, Armado of Simo, a little Iland hard by the Rhodes (the Patron a Greeke, as the reſt) being laden with Spunges. That night we came to an anchor, vnder the South-weſt ſide of Mytylen. This Iland, not paſt ſeuen miles diſtant from the Continent of Phrygia, contayneth eight ſcore and eight miles in circuit. The South and Weſt parts Mountaynous and barren, the reſt leuell and fruitfull, producing excellent Corne.

Mitylen or Lesbos.

On the one and twentieth of September, the Windes grew contrarie: and the Seas (though not rough) too rough to be brooked by ſo ſmall a veſſell, no bigger, and like in proportion to a Graueſ-end Tilt-boate, yet rowing vnder the ſhelter of the Land, we entred the Gulfe of Callonus, they hoping to haue found ſome purchaſe about a ſhip caſt there away but a little before; diuers of them leapt into the Sea, and diuing vnto the bottome, ſtayed there ſo long as if it had beene their habitable element. And without queſtion, they exceed all others in that facultie, trayned thereunto from their child-hood, and hee the excellenteſt amongſt them that can beſt performe it. Inſomuch, that although worth nothing, he ſhall be proffered in marriage the beſt endowed, and moſt beautifull Virgin of their Iland. For they generally get their liuing by theſe Spunges, gathered from the ſides of Rocks about the bottome of the Streights; ſometimes fifteene fathome vnder water. A happie people, that liue according to nature; and want not much, in that they couet but little. Their apparell no other then linnen breeches, ouer that a ſmocke cloſe girt vnto them with a Towell; putting on ſometimes when they goe aſhoare, long ſleeueleſſe Coates of home-ſpun Cotton. Yet their Backs need not enuie their Bellies: Biſcot, Oliues, Garlicke and Onions being their principall ſuſtenance.

Cunning Diuers.

Spunges.

Vpon the two and twentieth of September, the winds continuing contrarie, we but a little ſhortned our iourney. Deſcrying a ſmall Saile that made towards vs; and thinking them to bee Pirats, we rowed backe by the ſhoare with all poſſible ſpeed. In the euening we returned to the place that we fled from. When going aſhoare, one attyred like a woman, lay groueling on the Sand, whileſt the reſt skipt about him in a ring, muttering certayne words, which they would make me beleeue were preualent Charmes to alter the weather to their purpoſe. On the three and twentieth wee continued weather-bound, remoouing after it grew darke vnto another anchorage; a cuſtome they held, leſt obſerued by day from Sea or Shoare, they might by night be ſurpriſed. We lay in a little Bay, and vnder a Cliffe, where not one of vs but had his ſleepe interrupted by fearfull dreames, he that watched affirming, that he had ſeene the Deuill, ſo that in a great diſmay we put from ſhoare about mid-night. But whether it proceeded from the nature of the vaporous place, or that infeſted by ſome ſpirit, I leaue to decide. It is reported of a little Rockie Iland hard by, named formerly Æx, and ſacred vnto Neptune (whereof we haue ſpoken ſomething alreadie) that none could ſleepe vpon it for being diſturbed with apparitions.

Charmes.

On the foure and twentieth the Sea grew calme, and wee proceeded on our voyage. Towards euening we went aſhoare on the firme of Aſia for freſh water, and came that night vnto Tenedos. With the morning they renewed their labour, rowing along the chalkie ſhoare of the leſſer Phrygia. Now againſt Cape Ianizari (deſirous to ſee thoſe celebrated fields, where once ſtood Ilium the glorie of Aſia, that hath affoorded to rareſt wits ſo plentifull an argument) with much importunitie and promiſe of reward (it being a matter of danger) I got them to ſet mee aſhoare. When accompanied with two or three of them, we aſcended the not high Promontorie, leuell aboue, and crowned with a ruined Citie, whoſe imperfect walls doe ſhew to the Sea their antiquitie. Wherein are many ſpacious Vaults and ample Ciſternes for the receit of water. The foundation hereof ſhould ſeeme to haue beene laid by Conſtantine the Great, who intending to remoue the ſeate of his Empire, began here to build; which vpon a new reſolution he erected at Byzantium. This is that famous Promontorie of Sigeum, honoured with the Sepulchre of Achilles, which Alexander (viſiting it in his Aſian expedition) couered with flowers, and ranne naked about it, as then the cuſtome was in Funerals: ſacrificing to the ghoſt of his Kinſman, whom he reputed moſt happy, that had ſuch a Trumpet as Homer, to reſound his vertues.

Tenedos.

C. Ianizari.

Sigeum.

tues. In the Playne beyond vs (for wee durſt not ſtraggle farther from the ſhoare) wee beheld where once ſtood Ilium by him founded, called Troy promiſcuouſly of Tros. Afterward feigned to haue beene walled about by Neptune and Phœbus, in the dayes of Laomedon. Who hath not heard of this glorious Citie, the former taking, the ten yeeres warre: and later, finall ſubuerſion ; which befell according to Euſebius, in the yeere of the World 1784. and ſecond of Abdons gouernment of Iſrael. The ruines at this day not more then coniecturally extant.

Troy.

Theſe Riuers, though now poore in Streames, are not yet ſo contemptible, as made by Bellonius, who perhaps miſtaketh others for them, (there being ſundrie Riuolets that deſcend from the Mountaynes) as by all likelihood he hath done the ſite of the ancient Troy. For the ruines that are now ſo perſpicuous, and by him related, doe ſtand foure miles South-weſt from the aforeſaid place, deſcribed by the Poets, and determined of by Geographers: ſeated on a hanging Hill, and too neere the nauall ſtation to affoord a Field for ſuch diſperſed Encounters, ſuch long Purſuites, interception of Scouts, (then when the Troians had pitched neerer the Nauie) and executed ſtratagems, as is declared to haue hapned betweene the Sea and the Citie. Theſe reliques doe ſufficiently declare the greatneſſe of the later, and not a little the excellencie. The walls (as Bellonius, but more largely, deſcribeth it) conſiſting of great ſquare ſtone, hard, blacke, and ſpongie, in diuers places yet ſtanding ſupported on the inſide with Pillars, about two yards diſtant one from another, and garniſhed once with many now ruined Turrets, contayning a confuſion of throwne-downe buildings, with ample Ciſternes for the receit of Raine, it being ſeated on a ſandie ſoile, and altogether deſtitute of Fountaynes. Foundations here are of a Chriſtian Temple, and two Towers of Marble, that haue better reſiſted the furie of Time; the one on the top of the Hill, and the other neerer the Sea in the Valley. From the wall of the Citie, another extendeth (ſupported with Buttreſſes, partly ſtanding, and partly throwne downe) well-nigh vnto Ida, and then turning, is ſaid to reach to the Gulfes of Satelia, about twentie miles diſtant. Halfe a mile off, and Weſt off theſe Ruines, oppoſing Tenedos, are the hot water Baths, heretofore adorned, and neighboured with magnificent buildings; the way thither incloſed, as it were, with Sepulchres of Marble (many of the like being about the Citie, both of Greeks and Latins, as appeareth by the ſeuerall Characters. Two Baths there be; the one choked with rubbidge, the other yet in vſe, though vnder a ſimple couerture. But now the ruines beare not altogether that forme, leſſened daily by the Turkes, who carried the Pillars and ſtones vnto Conſtantinople, to adorne the buildings of the Great Baſſas, as they now doe from Cyzicus. This notable remainder of ſo noble a Citie was once a ſmall Village of the Ilians. For the Ilians, after the deſtruction of that famous Ilium, often ſhifting the ſeate of the new, here fixt it at laſt, as is ſaid, by the aduice of an Oracle, contayning one onely contemptible Temple, dedicated to Minerua, at ſuch time as Alexander came thither, who then offered vp his ſhield, and tooke downe another (that which he after vſed in his fights) enriching the Temple with gifts, and honouring the Towne with his Name, exempting it from tribute, and determining vpon his returne to erect in it a ſumptuous Temple, to inſtitute ſacred Games, and to make it a great Citie. But Alexander dying, Lyſimachus tooke vpon him that care, who immured it with a wall, contayning fortie furlongs in circuit, yet ſuffered it to retayne the name of Alexandria. After it became a Colonie, and an Vniuerſitie of the Romanes, of no meane reputation. Fimbria the Queſtor, hauing in a ſedition ſlaine the Conſul Valerius Flaccus in Bithynia, and making himſelfe Captaine of the Roman Armie, the Citizens refuſing to receiue him, as a Robber and a Rebell, beſieged this Citie, and in eleuen dayes tooke it; who boaſted, that he in eleuen dayes had done that, which Agamemnon with fiue hundred ſaile of ſhips and the whole Greeke Nation, could hardly accompliſh in ten yeeres. To whom an Ilian anſwered, That they wanted a Hector to defend them. Pieces of ruines, throughout theſe Playnes, lye euery where ſcattered.

Lemnos.

Terra Sigillata.

Returning againe to our Barke, hard by on the left hand left we Imbrius, now called Lembro, once ſacred to Mercurie; and not farre beyond Lemnos, famous for the fabulous fall of Vulcan. Whereupon, and no maruell, he euer after halted. The Grecians there now inhabiting, doe relate, that he brake his Thigh with a fall from a Horſe on the ſide of a Hill, which at this day beareth his name: the Earth in that place thereupon receiuing thoſe excellent vertues of curing of wounds, ſtopping of fluxes, expulſing poyſons, &c. now called Terra Sigillata, in that ſealed, and there onely gathered. This Hill lyeth South of the ruines of that ancient Hephaſtia, which gaue a name vnto Vulcan, and about three flight-ſhots remoued. Betweene which ſtandeth Sotira, a little Chappell, frequented by the Greeke Coloieros vpon the ſixt of Auguſt; where they begin their Oriſons, and from thence aſcend the Mountayne to open the veine from whence they produce it: which they doe with great preparations and ſolemnities, accompanied with the principall Turkes of the Iland. That which couereth it, being remooued by the labour of well-nigh fiftie Pioners, the Prieſts take out as much as the Cadee doth thinke for that yeere ſufficient (leſt the price ſhould abate by reaſon of the abundance) to whom they deliuer it; and then cloſe it vp in ſuch ſort, as the place where they digged it, is not to bee diſcerned; the veine diſcouered, this precious Earth, as they ſay, doth ariſe like the caſting vp of Wormes, and that only during a part of that day: ſo that it is to be ſuppoſed, that they gather as much as the ſame will affoord them. Certayne bags thereof are ſent to the Great Turke, the reſt they ſell (of which I haue ſeene many Cups at Conſtantinople:) but that which is ſold to the Merchants, is made into little Pellets, and ſealed with the Turkiſh Character: the ceremonies in the gathering hereof were firſt inducted by the Venetians.

And now we entred the Helleſpont, ſo called of Helle, the Daughter of Athamas King of Thebes, and Siſter of Phryxus; who, flying the ſtratagems of their ſtep-mother Ino, was drowned therein. Bounded on the left hand with the Thracian Cherſoneſus (vulgarly called Saint Georges Arme) a Peninſula pointing to the South-weſt, whereon ſtood the Sepulchre of Hecuba, called Cynoſſema, ſlaine by them, and buried in the aforeſaid Promontorie. On the right hand, the Helleſpont is confined with the leſſer Phrygia, diuiding Europe from Aſia, in ſundrie places not aboue a mile broad, and in length about fortie, (now called the Channell of Conſtantinople) and hauing a Current that ſetteth into the Ægeum: a trade-wind blowing either vp or downe, which when contrarie to the ſtreame, doth exceedingly incenſe it. The Mountaynes on each ſide are clothed with Pines, from whence much Pitch is extracted. Three leagues aboue the entrance, and at the narroweſt of this Streight, ſtand Seſtos and Abydos; oppoſite to each other, formerly famous for the vnfortunate loues of Hero and Leander, drowned in the vncompaſſionate Surges, and ſung by Muſæus. Here Xerxes, whoſe populous Armie drunke Riuers drie, and made Mountaynes circumnauigable, is ſaid to haue paſt ouer into Greece, vpon a Bridge of Boats; which when broken by Tempeſts, he cauſed the Sea to be beaten (as if ſenſible) with three hundred ſtripes, and Fetters to be throwne therein; forbidding any to ſacrifice vnto Neptune.

Helleſpont.

Seſtos and Abydos,

Abydos ſtands in Aſia, which the Mileſians firſt founded, by the permiſſion of Gyges King of Lydia, vnto whom all the Countrey was ſubiect. Taken by the Turke in the reigne of Orchanes. Seſtos ſtands in Europe, though neuer great, yet ſtrongly built, and once the principall Citie of Cherſoneſus: afterward defaced, a Caſtle was built in the roome thereof. Abydos is ſeated vpon a low leuell; and Seſtos on the ſide of a Mountayne, yet deſcending to the Sea: both bordering the ſame with their Caſtles; whereof the former is foure ſquare, the other triangular. Theſe at this day are vulgarly called the Caſtles. All ſhips are ſuffered to enter, that by their multitude and appointment doe threaten no inuaſion; but not to returne without ſearch and permiſſion, of which we ſhall ſpeake in the proceſſe of our Iournall. A little beyond wee paſt by the ruines of a Caſtle, which the Turkiſh Carmaſals and Gallies ſtill ſayling by, ſalute with their Ordnance, it being the firſt Fort by them taken in Europe, who call it Zembenic. That night wee came to Callipoly, ſome twentie miles diſtant, and thruſt into a little Hauen North of the Towne, but onely capable of ſmall Veſſels.

Callipoly is a Citie of Cherſoneſus, ſeated at the bottome of a Bay; ſo ſhallow, that ſhips doe there vſually anchor, as throughout the whole Helleſpont. Callipolis maketh a faire ſhew a-farre off; but entred, is nothing leſſe then it promiſed: a part thereof poſſeſſing the ſhoare, and the reſt the riſing of the Mountayne: vnwalled, and without either Citadell or Fortreſſe. Along the ſhoare, there are diuers drie ſtations for Gallies. On the South ſide of the Citie in a little Playne, are ſundrie round Hills; the Sepulchres, as they ſay, of certayne Thracian Kings: for ſuch was the ancient cuſtome of buriall. The Countrey aboue is Champan, and not barren, but rarely inhabited. Here is a Ferrie for tranſportation into Aſia. Greekes and Iewes, together with the Turkes, doe inhabit the Towne, and are admitted their Churches and Synagogues. Here alſo is a Monaſterie of Romiſh Friars, of the Order of Saint Auguſtine; one of them being at this time (but not dwelling in the Couent) the Franke Conſul; whoſe office is to diſpatch, and diſcharge the dues of all Chriſtians ſhips, not ſubiect to the Grand Signior, and admitted free trading below at the Caſtles. To his houſe I repayred, with hope of ſome refreſhment after my weariſome voyage: but hee then from home, I was forced to returne to my water-bed; there being no Innes for entertainment throughout inhoſpitall Turkie: yet is this Towne well furniſhed with all ſorts of prouiſion. What is here ſold by the Greeks, you may agree for on a price: but the Turks will receiue your money, and giue you a quantitie for it, according to their owne arbitrement; but truly enough, and rather exceeding, then ſhort of your expectation. For two or three Aſpers (whereof twentie are neere vpon a ſhilling) a Butcher will cut off as much Mutton (for they diuide it not into ioynts) as will well ſatisfie three, though hungrie; which they carrie to the Cookes, who make no more adoe, but ſlicing it into little Gobbets, pricke it on a Prog of Iron, and hang it in a Fornace. Derided and flurted at by diuers of the baſer people, at night we returned to our Barke. And departing the next morning, were forthwith met with a contrarie winde, which droue vs to the ſhelter of a Rocke not farre from the Towne: where we abode all that day, and the night enſuing: they opening and waſhing part of their Sponges, which laid on the ſhoare, by the bulke you would haue thought to haue beene a fraught for a Pinnace; which ſtiued into Sackes, when wet, were beſtowed vnder the ſide Benches and croſſe Bankes of this little Veſſell.

Callipolis.

No Innes.

On the ſeuen and twentieth of September, before day wee left the ſhoare, and after a while entred the Proponticke Sea: confined with Thrace on the one ſide, and with Bithynia on the other. Hauing climbed the Mountayns ſteepe towards the Sea, wee got to the Towne, and bought bought vs ſome victuals, at night we returned to our Boate, which lay in an obſcure Bay, where they ſpent the next day in waſhing the reſidue of their Sponges, whileſt I and my Interpreter ſpent our times on the top of the Mountayne in the Vineyards, not well pleaſed with this their delay, now more affecting their eaſe then when without the Helleſpont: being rid of that feare (for no Pirat dare venter to come within the Caſtles) which had quickned their expedition. In the euening we deſcended, where we found the Patron lying on his backe vpon a Rocke, all dropping wet: ſpeechleſſe, and ſtrugling with death to our ſeeming. The Greekes together by the eares, euery one with his fellow; ſome in the Boate, and ſome vpon the Shoare. Amongſt the reſt there was a blinde man, who had married a yong wife, that would not let him lie with her; and thereupon had vnder-taken this iourney to complaine vnto the Patriarch: hee hearing his brother crie out at the receit of a blow; guided to the place by the noiſe, and thinking with his ſtaffe to haue ſtrucke the ſtriker; laid it on with ſuch a force, that meeting with nothing but Ayre, and not able to recouer himſelfe, he fell into the Sea: and with much difficultie was preſerued from drowning. The clamour increaſed with their contentions, and anon the Patrone ſtarting vp, as if of a ſodaine reſtored to life; like a mad man skips into the Boate, and drawing a Turkiſh Cymiter, beginneth to lay about him (thinking that his Veſſell had beene ſurprized by Pirats,) when they all leapt into the Sea; and diuing vnder water like ſo many Diue-dappers, aſcended without the reach of his furie. Leaping aſhoare, hee purſues my Greeke, whom feare had made too nimble for him; mounting a ſteepe Cliffe, which at another time hee could haue hardly aſcended. Then turning vpon me onely armed with ſtones, as God would haue it, hee ſtumbled by the way, and there laid like a ſtone for two houres together; that which had made them ſo quarrelſome being now the Peace-maker, hauing caſt the fetters of ſleepe vpon their diſtemperatures. For it beeing proclaimed death to bring Wine vnto Conſtantinople, and they loth to powre ſuch good Liquor into the Sea, had made their bellies the ouer-charged Veſſels. When the Patron awaked, and was informed by my Greeke how he had vſed me, and withall of my reſolution (which was rather to retyre vnto the Towne, and there expect a paſſage, than to commit my ſafetie vnto ſuch people) he came vnto me, and kiſſed me, as did the reſt of his companions, (a teſtimonie amongſt them of good-will and fidelitie) and ſo enforced mee aboord. The winds the next day blew freſh and fauourable. That night wee came to anchor a little below the ſeuen Towers: and betimes in the morning arriued at the Cuſtome-houſe. Then croſſing the Hauen I landed at Galata, and ſo aſcended the Vines of Pena; where by Sir Thomas Glouer, Lord Embaſſador for the King, I was freely entertayned: abiding in his houſe almoſt for the ſpace of foure monethes. Of whom without Ingratitude and Detraction I cannot but make an honourable mention.

Merrie Greekes.

Galata.
Sir T. Glouer.

§. II.

Conſtantinople deſcribed, the Turkes Seraglio, Pera; the Turkiſh Empire and Gouernment: Some Obſeruations of the Turkiſh Religion.

THis Citie by deſtinie appointed, and by nature ſeated for Soueraigntie, was firſt the ſeat of the Romane Emperors, then of the Greeke, as now it is of the Turkiſh: built by Conſtantine the Sonne of Helena, and loſt by Conſtantine the Sonne of another Helena (a Gregorie then Biſhop, whoſe firſt Biſhop was a Gregorie) to Mahomet the ſecond, in the yeare 1453. with the ſlaughter of her people, and deſtruction of her magnificent ſtructures. The like may bee obſerued of the Romane Emperours, whoſe firſt was Auguſtus, and whoſe laſt was Auguſtulus.

It ſtands on a Cape of Land neere the entrance of the Boſphorus. In forme triangular, on the Eaſt-ſide waſhed with the ſame, and on the North-ſide with the Hauen, adioyning on the Weſt to the Continent. Walled with bricke and ſtone, intermixed orderly, hauing foure and twentie gates and poſternes; whereof fiue doe regard the Land, and nineteene the water; being about thirteene miles in circumference. Than this there is hardly in nature a more delicate Obiect, if beheld from the Sea or adioyning Mountaines; the loftie and beautifull Cypreſſe Trees ſo intermixed with the buildings, that it ſeemeth to preſent a Citie in a Wood to the pleaſed beholders. Whoſe ſeuen aſpiring heads (for on ſo many hils and no more, they ſay it is ſeated) are moſt of them crowned with magnificent Moſques, all of white Marble, round in forme, and coupled aboue; being finiſhed on the top with gilded Spires, that reflect the beames they receiue with a maruellous ſplendor; ſome hauing two, ſome foure, ſome ſixe adioyning Turrets, exceeding high, and exceeding ſlender; Tarraſt aloft on the out-ſide like the mayne top of a ſhip, and that in ſeuerall places equally diſtant, from whence the Taſilmanni with elated voices (for they vſe no Bels) doe congregate the people, pronouncing this Arabicke Sentence, La Illah Il- lella Muhemet re ſul Allah: viz. There is but one God, and Mahomet his Prophet. No Moſque can haue more then one of theſe Turrets, if not built by an Emperor. But that of Sancta Sophia, once a Chriſtian Temple, (twiſe burnt, and happily, in that ſo ſumptuouſly re-edified by the Emperour Iuſtinian) exceedeth not onely the reſt, by whoſe patterne they were framed, but all other Fabrickes whatſoeuer throughout the whole Vniuerſe. A long labour it were to deſcribe it exactly, and hauing done, my eies haue ſeene it, would but condemne my defectiue Relation. The principall part thereof riſeth in an Ouall, ſurrounded with Pillars, admirable for their proportion, matter and workmanſhip. Ouer thoſe others, through which ample Galleries, curiouſly paued, and arched aboue, haue their proſpect into the Temple, dignified with the preſence of Chriſtian Emperous at the time of Diuine Seruice, aſcended by them on Horſe-backe. The roofe compact, and adorned with Moſaike Painting: an Antique kind of worke, compoſed of little ſquare pieces of Marble; gilded and coloured according to the place that they are to aſſume in the figure or ground, which ſet together, as if emboſſed, preſent an vnexpreſſable ſtatelineſſe, and are of a maruellous durance: numbred by Pancirollus amongſt things that are loſt, but diuers in Italie at this day excell in that kind, yet make the particles of Clay, gilt, and coloured before they be neiled by the fire. The reſt of the Church, though of another proportion, doth ioyne to this with a certaine harmonie. The ſides and floore all flagged with excellent Marble, vaulted vnderneath, and contayning large Ciſternes, repleniſhed with water from an Aquæduct. Before the entrance, there is a goodly Portico; where the Chriſtians that viſit it vpon curioſitie, as well as the Turkes, doe leaue their ſhooes before they doe enter. Within on the left hand, there is a Pillar couered with Copper, euer ſweating, (I know not why, vnleſſe in beeing paſt through by ſome Conduit) which the Turkes wipe off with their Handkerchers, through a vaine Superſtition perſwaded, that it is of ſacred and ſoueraigne vertue. The doores are curiouſly cut through, and plated; the wood of one of them fained to be of the Arke of Noe, and therefore left bare in ſome places to be kiſſed by the deuouter people. Euagrius that liued a thouſand yeares ſince, affirmeth this Temple to haue beene from Eaſt vnto Weſt, two hundred and threeſcore feet long, and in height one hundred and foureſcore: and Antonius Menauinus, that in the dayes of Baiazet, it contayned at once ſixe and thirtie thouſand Turkes. Perhaps the ancient Fabricke then ſtanding entire, whereof this now remayning, was little more then the Chancell. Better to be beleeued then Bellonius a moderne eye-witneſſe, who reports that the doores thereof are in number equall to the dayes of the yeare: whereas if it hath fiue, it hath more by one, then by me was diſcerned. Mahomet the Great, vpon the taking of the Citie, threw downe the Altars, defaced the Images, (of admirable workemanſhip, and infinite in number) conuerting it into a Moſque. To euery one of theſe principal Moſques belong publike Bagnios, Hoſpitals, with lodgings for Santons, and Eccleſiaſticall perſons, beeing endowed with competent Reuenues. The inferiour are built for the moſt part ſquare, many penthouſd with open Galleries where they accuſtome to pray at times extraordinarie: there being in all (comprehending Pera, Scutari, and the Buildings that border the Boſphorus) about the number of eight thouſand.

S. Sophia.

Moſaike painting.

Sweating Pillar.

Suntq́; in eo Templo (ſi licet dicere tot portæ quot in anno dies. Obſer. lib. 2. cap. 76.

But of this Sophia, is almoſt euery other Friday frequented by the Sultan, beeing neere vnto the fore-front of his Serraglio, which poſſeſſeth the extremeſt point of the North-eaſt Angle, where formerly ſtood the ancient Byzantium; diuided from the reſt of the Citie by a loftie wall, contayning three miles in circuit; and comprehending goodly Groues of Cypreſſes intermixed with Plaines, delicate Gardens, artificiall Fountaines, all varietie of fruit-trees, and what not rare? Luxurie being the Steward, and the Treaſure vnexhauſtable. The proud Palace of the Tyrant doth open to the South, hauing a loftie Gate-houſe without lights on the out-ſide, and ingrauen with Arabicke Characters, ſet forth with Gold and Azure all of white Marble. This leadeth into a ſpacious Court three hundred yards long, and about halfe as wide, on the left ſide whereof ſtands the round of an ancient Chappell, contayning the Armes that were taken from the Grecians, in the ſubuerſion of this Citie; and at the far end of this Court a ſecond Gate, hung with Shields and Cymiters, doth leade into another full of tall Cypreſſe Trees, leſſe large yet not by much then the former. The Cloyſters about it, leaded aboue, and paued with ſtone, the Roofe ſupported with Columnes of Marble hauing Copper Chapters, and Baſes. On the left hand the Diuano is kept; where the Baſſas of the Port doe adminiſter Iuſtice, on that ſide confined with humble buildings, beyond which Court on the right hand there is a ſtreet of Kitchens: and on the left is the Stable, large enough for fiue hundred Horſe; where there is now to be ſeene a Mule ſo admirably ſtreakt, and dapled with white and blacke, and in ſuch due proportion, as if a Painter had done it, not to imitate Nature, but to pleaſe the Eye, and expreſſe his Curioſitie. Out of this ſecond Court there is a paſſage into a third, not by Chriſtians ordinarily to be entred, ſurrounded with the Royall Buildings, which though perhaps they come ſhort of the Italian, for contriuement and fineneſſe of workmanſhip; yet not in coſtly curiouſneſſe, matter, and amplitude. Betweene the Eaſt wall (which alſo ſerueth for a Wall to the Citie) and the water, a ſort of terrible Ordnance are planted, which threat deſtruction to ſuch as by Sea ſhall attempt a violent entrie or prohibited paſſage: and without on the North-ſide ſtands the Sultans Cabinet, in forme of a ſumptuous Sommer Houſe, hauing a priuate paſſage made for the time,

Turkes Palace, or Seraglio.

Streakt Mule, perhaps a Zebra, of which ſee the former Booke in Andrew Battell.

time, of waxed Linnen, from his Serraglio: where he often ſolaceth himſelfe, with the various Obiects of the Hauen, and from thence takes Barge to paſſe vnto the delightfull places of the adioyning Aſia. This Palace howſoeuer enlarged by the Ottomans, was firſt erected by Iuſtinus, who named it Sophia of the Empreſſe.

Ottoman Monuments.

Now next to theſe the Ottoman Mauſoleas doe require their regard, built all of white Marble round in forme, and coupled on the top; hauing ſtately Porches, within each is the Tombe of a ſeuerall Sultan, with the Tombes of his Children, that either haue dyed before him, or haue after beene ſtrangled by their tyrannicall Brethren, according to the Turkiſh pietie. The Tombes nor longer, nor larger then fitting the included bodies, each of one ſtone; higher at the head then feet, and compaſt aboue: without other ornament then couers of Greene, and Turbants laid vpon the vpper ends, at the foure corners of thoſe of the Sultans, there ſtand foure Tapers of Waxe as bigge as a thigh, but not lighted. The floores of the Monuments are ſpread with Carpets: and ſome there are that doe continually liue therein, performing ſuch duties of Prayers and Lamentations, as agreeth to their cuſtomes; at certaine times beſprinkled alſo with the teares of their Off-ſpring.

The Tower. Other Seraglios.

The South-eaſt Angle of this Citie is taken vp by the ſeuen Towers, called anciently Ianicula: employed, as the Tower of London, for a Store-houſe of the Sultans Treaſure, and Munition, being alſo a Priſon for capitall Offenders. We omit to ſpeake of the great mens Serraglios; that of the women belonging to the deceaſſed Emperours; and that of the Virgins: the Alberges of Ianizaries; the ſeuerall Seminaries of Spachies and Giamoglans: the Beſeſtans (where finer ſorts of Commodities are ſold,) Hoſpitals; Markets of men and women, &c. ſince hereafter we are to treate of moſt of their Orders; the buildings themſelues not meriting a particular deſcription: conuerting our Diſcourſe to thoſe few remainders of many Antiquities, whereof the Aquæduct made by the Emperour Valentinian, and retayning his name, doth principally challenge remembrance. This hath his heads neere to the Blacke Sea, not farre from a Village called Domuz-dere, of the abundance of wilde Hogges thereabout, the place being woodie and mountaynous, where many Springs are gathered together, and at ſundry places doe ioyntly fall into great round Ciſternes, from thence conueyed to conioyne with others (amongſt which, as ſuppoſed, is the Brooke Cydarius) led ſometimes vnder the Earth, now along the leuell, then vpon mightie Arches ouer profound Valleyes, from Hill to Hill, for the ſpace wel-nigh of thirtie miles, vntill arriuing at the Citie, and ſurmounting the ſame, it falleth at length as from a head-long Cataract into an ample Ciſterne, ſupported with neere two hundred Pillars of Marble; and is from thence by Conduits conducted vnto their publike vſes. This was repayred by Solyman the Great, great-grand-father of this now reigning Achmet: whoſe wiſhes and endeauours are ſaid to haue aymed at three things; which were, the re-edifying of Ponte Piccolo, and Ponte Grande, (which croſſe two armes of the Sea, and the reſtoring of this Aquæduct; theſe he accompliſhed: but the third, which was the expugnation of Vienna, he could neuer accompliſh Not farre from the Temple of Sancta Sophia, there is a ſpacious place ſurrounded with buildings, like to that of Smith-field; and anciently called the Hippodrom, for that there they exhibited their Horſe-races, as now Atmidan by the Turkes, a word of like ſignification, where the Spachies of the Court play euery Friday at Giocho di Canni; which is no other then Priſon Bace vpon Horſe-backe, hitting one another with Darts, as the other doe with their hands; which they neuer throw Counter but at the backe of the Flyer. Nor is it the leaſt contentment to the Chriſtian to behold the terrible falls that they often get (not rarely coſting them their liues) whilſt by the wreathing of their bodies, or a too haſtie turne, they ſeeke to auoide the Purſuer; and ſometimes the Darts not lighting in ieſt on their naked neckes, and reuerſed faces. In this place there ſtandeth a ſtately Hieroglyphicall Obeliſke of Theban Marble.

A Brazen Columne and an Obeliſk are omitted.

And in Aurathaſar (that is, the Market of Women) there is an Hiſtoricall Columne to bee aſcended within, farre ſurpaſſing both Tartars, and that of Antoninus, which I haue ſeene in Rome, the Workman hauing ſo proportioned the Figures, that the higheſt and loweſt appeare of owne bigneſſe.

And right againſt the Manſion of the Germane Emperours Embaſſador (who onely is ſuffered to lodge within the Citie) ſtands the Columne of Conſtantine, about the top whereof, you may reade this Diſtichon, ΤΟ ΘΕΙΟΝ ΕΡΓΟΝ ΕΝΘΑΛΕ ΦΘΑΡΕΝ ΧΡΝΟΩ ΝΕΟΙ ΜΑΝΟυΗΑ ΕυΣΕΒΗΣ ΑυΤΟΚΡΑΤΩΡ. Theſe are all the Remaines that are left (or all that are by the Chriſtians to be ſeene, beſides the Relikes of the Palace of Conſtantine, now made a Stable for wilde beaſts) of ſo many goodly buildings, and from all parts congeſted Antiquities, wherewith this Soueraigne Citie was in times paſt ſo adorned: and with them are their memories periſhed. For not a Greeke can ſatisfie the Inquirer in the Hiſtory of their owne Calamities. So ſupine negligent are they, or perhaps ſo wiſe as of paſſed euils to endeauour a forgetfulneſſe. But to ſay ſomething of Conſtantinople in generall: I thinke there is not in the World an Obiect that promiſeth ſo much afarre off to the beholders, and entred, ſo deceiueth the expectation.

Baſe buildings.

The beſt of their priuate buildings, inferiour to the more contemptible ſort of ours. For the Turkes are nothing curious of their houſes, not onely for that their Poſſeſſions are not hereditary; but but eſteeming it an egregious folly to erect ſuch ſumptuous Habitations, as if hee were to liue for euer. None being aboue two ſtories high, ſome of rough ſtone, ſome of timber, ſome of Sunne-dryed bricke: their Roofes but riſing a little, couered with ſuch Tiles as are layd on the Ridges of ours, one contrary to another; yet ſome part of ſome of them flat, (thoſe belonging to men of principall degree) planted with flowers and trees of the rareſt colours, and productions. Many vacant places there are in the Citie, and many rowes of buildings, conſiſting of ſhops onely, all belonging to the Grand Signior, who lets them out vnto Tradeſmen; into which their wiues come not: prohibited by Mahomet that women ſhould buy or ſell (though now not ſeldome they doe) or ſhew themſelues publikely. The ſtreets for the moſt part are exceeding

The Suburbs.

Holy Sepulchre.

narrow; ſome raiſed on the ſides for more cleanlineſſe: many hauing ſteep aſcents, in many places bounded with long dead walls, belonging to great mens Serraglios; ſo negligent are they of exterior garniſhings. All the ſuburbs that this Citie hath, lie without the gate of Adrinople, adioyning to the North-weſt angle thereof, and ſtretching along the vppermoſt of the Hauen; where within a ſtately Monument, there ſtandeth a Tombe of principall repute in the Mahometan deuotion: the Sepulchre of Iupe Sultan a Santon of theirs, called vulgarly and ridiculouſly, the Sepulchre of Iob. To which the Captaine Baſſa doth repaire before he ſet forth, and at his returne, there performing appointed orations and ceremonies: and vpon a victorie obtayned, is obliged to viſite the ſame euery morning and euening for the ſpace of three weekes. Before this, in a Cypreſſe groue, there ſtandeth a Scaffold, where the new Sultans are girt with a ſword, by the hands of the Mufti their principall Prelate, with diuers ſolemnities.

The Hauen.

Cruelty.

Terrible fires.

Ianizaries inſolence.

Tempeſts.

Plague.

Now ſpeake wee of the Hauen, rather deuouring then encreaſed by a little Riuer, called formerly Barbyſes, now by the Greekes, Chartaricon, and Chay by the Turkes: much frequented by fowle, and rigorouſly preſerued for the Grand Signiors pleaſure, who ordinarily hawkes thereon; inſomuch that a ſeruant of my Lord Embaſſadors was ſo beaten, for preſuming to ſhoote there, that ſhortly after he died (as it is thought) of the blowes. This falleth into the Weſt extent of the Hauen; throughout the world the faireſt, the ſafeſt, the moſt profitable. So conueniently profound, that the greateſt ſhips may lay their ſides to the ſides thereof, for the more eaſie receit, or diſcharge of their burthen. The mouth of it is land-lockt by the oppoſite Aſia, opening Eaſtward into the Thracian Boſphorus, which by a long narrow channell ſtretching North and South, ioynes the blacke and white Seas: ſo call they the Seas North and South of the Boſphorus. So that no wind bloweth, which brings not in ſome ſhipping or other, to the furniſhing of this Citie; hauing (as hath beene ſaid before) on the left hand the Euxine Sea, with the Lake of Meotis, inhabited about by multitudes of Nations, and entred into by many nauigable Riuers; whereby whatſoeuer groweth, or is nouriſhed in thoſe farre diſtant Countries, is eaſily tranſported vnto it: on the right hand Propontis, and the Mid-land Sea, (bordered with Natolia, Syria, Ægypt, Africa, Spaine, France, Italie, Greece, and Dalmatia, with their fruitfull Ilands) and without, the great Ocean. Inſomuch as it ſeemeth by the opportunitie of nauigation to participate with their ſeuerall commodities, daily brought hither by forrainers; ſeated of it ſelfe in a Countrey, though not altogether barren, yet not ſufficient to ſuſtaine the Inhabitants. Moldauia and Valachia doe ſerue them with Beeues and Muttons; and as for Fiſh, the adioyning Seas yeeld ſtore and variety, as the concaues of the Rockes doe ſalt, white, pure, and ſolid, made onely by the labour of the ſurges. Subiect it hath beene to ſundrie horrible combuſtions: vnto that which befell in the dayes of Leo, and not long after in the reigne of Baſilicus, (when amongſt other infinite loſſes that famous Librarie periſhed, contayning an hundred and twentie thouſand volumes; wherein the inward skin of a Dragon the Odyſſes and Iliads of Homer were written:) and to diuers others, this laſt, though leſſe, may be added, which hapned on the fourteenth of October, in the yeere 1607. in which three thouſand houſes were burnt to their foundations. Nor is it to be maruelled at: the Citizens themſelues not daring to quench the fire that burneth their owne houſes, or by pulling ſome downe to preſerue the remaynder: an office that belongeth to the Aga, and his Ianizaries; who nothing quicke in their aſſiſtance, doe often for ſpite or pillage, beate downe ſuch buildings as are fartheſt remoound from danger. So that the miſchiefe is not onely wiſhed for the bootie, but prolonged; and not ſeldome they themſelues ſet the Iewes houſes on fire; who made warie by the example, are now furniſhed of arched vaults, for the ſafeguard of their goods, which are not to bee violated by the flame. The fall of houſes heretofore by terrible and long-laſting earthquakes, now by negligence in repayring, tempeſts, and the matter that they conſiſt of, is heere alſo moſt frequent, many (as hath beene ſaid) being built of Sun-dried bricke. And although it enioyes a delicate aire, and ſerene skies, euen during the Winter, when the Eaſt, the Weſt, or South wind bloweth; yet the boyſterous Tramontana, that from the blacke Sea doth ſweepe his blacke ſubſtance, heere moſt violently rages, bringing often with it ſuch ſtormes of ſnow, that in September I haue ſeene the then flouriſhing trees ſo ouercharged therewith, that their branches haue broken, accompanied with bitter froſts, which diſſoluing, reſolue therewith the vnfirme matter that ſuſtaynes them. Laſtly, the plague (either hapning through the vice of the Clime, or of thoſe misbeleeuers, or hither brought by the many frequenting Nations) for the moſt part miſerably infeſteth this Citie, encreaſed by the ſuperſtition of the Mahometans.

Galata or Pera.

On the other ſide of the Hauen (continually croſſed by multitudes of little Boats, called Permagies, and rowed for the moſt part by Ægyptians) ſtands the Citie of Galata, ſo called, as ſome write of the Gaules, once the maſters thereof, or as others will haue it, of Galac, which ſignifieth Milke, for that there the Greekes kept their cattell; as Pera (another name thereof,) which ſignifieth Beyond, in that on the other ſide of the Hauen; but more anciently Cornu Byzantium. Infirmely walled, yet great, if you comprehend the ſuburbs therewith, extending from along the ſhoare to the vpper tops of the Mountaines, ſurpaſſing Conſtantinople in her loftie buildings built by the Genoas; who bought it of the Greeke Emperours (in their declining eſtate, poſſeſt of little more then the regall Citie, and title; for the moſt part ſuſtayned by forraine contributions) and by them ſurrendred vnto Mahomet the Great, the day after the ſacking of Conſtantinople. At the Weſt end thereof the Grand Signiors Gallies haue a drie ſtation: and at the Eaſt end right againſt the point of his Serraglio, called Tophana and Fundacle, lies a number of great Ordnance vnplanted; moſt of them the ſpoyle of Chriſtian Cities and Fortreſſes, as may appeare by their inſcriptions, and Impreſes; and many of them of an incredible greatneſſe.

Scutari.
Chalcedon.

Now, right againſt the mouth of the Hauen, on the other ſide of the Boſphorus, ſtands Scutari, a Towne of Bythinia. Scutari ſometimes belonged to Chalcedon, once a free Citie, and ſeated a little below it: ſo called of a Brooke, now without a name, that runs into Propontis; called alſo, The Citie of the Blind; becauſe of the fooliſh Megarians that built it. Famous for the fourth generall Councell there holden; and now onely ſhewing a part of her ruines.

Blacke Sea.

The blacke Sea is diſtant ſome fifteene miles from Conſtantinople, ſo named of his blacke effects, or for the thicke miſts that vſually hang ouer it.

Here the Turke prohibiteth forrainers to trafficke, there being no other paſſage there into but by Riuers: neither this paſſage of Boſphorus, as ſome coniecture, hath beene alwayes: but forced by the violence of ſtreames that fell into the ouer-charged Euxine. Where it ruſheth into the Boſphorus there are two Rockes, that formerly bare the names of Cyanea and Symplegades: which for that ſo neere, as many times appearing but as one, they were fayned by the Poets vnſtable, and at ſundry times to iuſtle each other. Here vpon the top of a Rocke, ſuppoſed by ſome to be one of theſe, yet too farre remoued from a fellow to be ſo, ſtands a Pillar of white marble, called vulgarly, The Pillar of Pompey. Vpon the ſhoare there is an high Lanterne, large enough at the top, to contayne aboue threeſcore perſons, which by night directeth the Sayler into the entrance of the Boſphorus.

Boſphorus.

The Boſphorus ſetteth with a ſtrong current into Propontis, and is in length, about twentie miles; where broadeſt, a mile; and in two places, but halfe a mile ouer. So called, for that Oxen accuſtomed to ſwim from the one ſide to the other. One of thoſe two fore-mentioned Streights lies before Conſtantinople; the other, fiue miles aboue and a halfe, where on Europe ſide there ſtandeth a Caſtle, called formerly Damalis, and now, The Blacke Tower.

The Turkiſh Empire is the greateſt that is, or perhaps that euer was from the beginning. For firſt, the European part thereof extendeth weſtward vnto the Archdukes of Auſtrias Dominions, ſtretching to the Adriatick Sea by the confines of Raguſa, bounded on the South with the Mediterraneum; on the Eaſt, with Ægeum, Propontis, and Pontus, euen to Theodoſia, a Citie of the Scythian Cherſoneſus; and on the North almoſt to Ruſſia and Polonia; contayning Romania, Bulgaria, Seruia, Raſcia, the tributarie principalities of Valachia and Moldauia; the greater part of Hungary, Boſna, Albania, Macedon, Epirus, all Grecia and Peleponneſus; all the fruitfull Ilands of the Ægean Sea: Raguſa payes for her libertie; nor is Candie, Zant, or Cephalania held without Preſents. But what is this, compared to her Aſian Territories? within which, all Natolia is compriſed; on three ſides embraced with the Ægean, Euxine, and Cilician Seas; contayning the Prouinces of Pontus, Galatia, Bythinia, Phrygia, Lycia, Pamphilia, Cilicia, Cappadocia, and the leſſer Armenia; beyond which, Colchis ſtretching Northward to Cataie, and bounded on the Eaſt with the Countrey of the Georgians, whereof the Turkes poſſeſſe not a little. A great part it alſo contayneth of the greater Armenia: all Syria (in which Cœloſyria, Phœnicia, and Paleſtine;) Babylonia and Meſopotamia: Arabia felix, which ſtretcheth out into the South Sea, interpoſing the Perſian and Arabian Gulfes, doe bow to that Soueraigntie: ſo doe the Inhabitants of Petrea, and Deſerta; ſuch I meane, as haue knowne habitations. In Africa it extendeth all along the coaſts of the Mediterraneum, euen from the red Sea to Acrath, a Citie of Mauritania (except ſome few places poſſeſt by the Spaniard) wherein is the Countrey of the Troglodites, the miraculouſly fertile Kingdome of Ægypt, Tripoly in Barbarie, the Kingdome of Tunis, and Citie of the Argers with her Territories, with the tributarie Kingdomes of Feſſe and Morocco. To this adde Cyprus, Rhodes, and all the fertile Ilands of the mid-land Sea, that lie Eaſt of Candie. Thus great at this day is the Ottoman Empire: but too great for it are their aſſumed Titles: as God on earth, Shadow of God, Sole Monarch of the World, King of Kings, Commander of all that can be commanded, Soueraigne of the moſt noble Families of Perſia and Armenia, Poſſeſſor of the holy Cities of Mecha and Ieruſalem, Lord of the blacke and white Seas, Sultan of Babylon, and ſo proceeding with a repetition of their ſeuerall Kingdomes. Like ſwelling attributes gaue this now reigning Sultan to our Soueraigne, in a Letter writ lately, which I will inſert for the ſtrangeneſſe: Vnto the moſt glorious and moſt mightie King Iames, one of the great Lords of the creation of Ieſus, and moſt laudable amongſt all the Princes of the Nation of Meſſia, a Iudge of all debates and differences of the people of Nazarets, Poſſeſſor of great Maieſtie, riches, and of glorie, a Iudge of the moſt great Kings of England, &c. farcing his Letter with like fuſtian, calling his owne Court, Our moſt happie and ſhining Port, a Port of refuge for the World: and ſubſcribing, From our Imperiall reſidence of Conſtantinople, moſt ſtrongly and mightily guarded: Yet in his owne ſtile more modeſt, contayning no more then Sultan Achmet Chan, Sonne to Mahomet Chan moſt inuincible.

Hondivs his Map of the Turkiſh Empire.

TURCICUM IMPERIUM
Milliaria Germanica
30 60 90 120
SEPTEN TRIO
MERIDIES
OCCI.
ORI.
RUSSIAE CONFINIA
TARTARIAE PARS
Mare de Bachu Olim Caspium Mare
Pontus Euxinus
NATOLIA
MARE MEDITERRANEUM
AEGYPTUS
Arabia Deserta
Arabia felix
AYAMAN
Mare Elcatif
PERSICI REGNI
MARE RUBRUM
MARIS RUBRI PARS

But the barbarous policie whereby this tyrannie is ſuſtayned, doth differ from all other: guided by the heads, and ſtrengthned by the hands of his ſlaues, who thinke it as great an honour to be ſo, as they doe with vs that ſerue in the Courts of Princes: the Naturall Turke (to be ſo called a reproach) being rarely employed in command or ſeruice: amongſt whom there is no Nobilitie of bloud, no knowne parentage, kindred, nor hereditary poſſeſſions, but are as it were of the Sultans creation, depending vpon him onely for their ſuſtenance and preferments. Who diſpoſeth, as well of their liues as their fortunes, by no other rule then that of his will; although ſometime for forme he vſeth the aſſent of the neuer gain-ſaying Mufti. Theſe are the ſonnes of Chriſtians (and thoſe the moſt compleatly furniſhed by nature) taken in their childhood from their miſerable Parents, by a leuie made euery fiue yeeres (or oftner, or ſeldomer, as occaſion requireth) throughout the whole Empire, (excepting certaine priuiledged places, amongſt which are Sio and Conſtantinople,) who are beſtowed in ſeuerall Seminaries, inſtructed in the Mahometan Religion (changing their names vpon their circumciſion) taught the vſe of their ſeuerall weapons, and made patient of hunger and labour, with inured abſtinence, and continuall exerciſe. Theſe they call Iemoglans, who haue their faces ſhauen (the token of ſeruitude,) wearing long Coats and copped Caps, not vnlike to our Idiots. The choiceſt of them for ſpirit and feature, are after a while receiued into the Grand Signiors Serraglio, diſtinguiſhed by chambers like to thoſe in Hoſpitals, according to their ſeniorities; where all are brought vp in the diſcipline of warre; and not a few, acquainted with the ſecrets of State: ſuch as by the excellency of their gifts doe aſſure the expectation of a future eminency. Thoſe of the firſt chamber, are the firſt preferred: yet not in order, but according to the worth of the place, and worthineſſe of the perſon. Of theſe come the Beglerbegs, (the name ſignifying, a Lord of Lords) of whom there be onely two, the one of Greece, and the other of Natolia: who command all the horſe-men in thoſe Countries vnder the Generall) the Great Baſſas, (whereof ſome are Generals of Armies, ſome Vizers of the Port, the reſt Vice-royes of Prouinces) the Sanziaks Gouer-

Ianizaries.

nours of Cities, for ſo the name ſignifieth, with their Territories and Forces, and other Officers both of Warre and Peace; with thoſe of the Court, of principall place and attendance. Of the other Iemoglans ſome come to bee Chauſes, who goe of Embaſſies, execute Commandements, and are Purſuiants, and vnder-Sheriffs; attending the imployment of the Emperour, who mounted on horſe-backe, carrie Dabuzes (a weapon like a Mace) before him, and on the Courts of Iuſtice: ſoliciting alſo the cauſes of their Clients. But the Spachies and Ianizaries which are made of theſe Iemoglans (the principall cauſe of their inſtitution) are the nerues and ſupporters of the Turkiſh Monarchy. The Spachies are Horſe-men, weaponed for the moſt part at once, with Bow, Maſe, Lance, Harquebuſſe, & Cymiter: whereof they haue the ſeuerall vſes, agreeing with their fights, their flights or purſuments. For defence, ſome weare Bucklers, and ſhirts of Male. The skirts of their coats, when they ride, are gathered within long Stammell broges, that reach to their anckles, and there doe ioyne to their Buskins, ſhod with Iron, and ſupplying the want of Spurres, with their large and ſharpe Stirrops. Their Saddles are plated behind & before, the ſeate deep and hard: and for Capariſon, vſe for the moſt part the skins of Leopards, Lions, Tygres, Panthers, and the like. In Cities when on foot, they weare Gownes of Stammell with long hanging ſleeues, and are diſtinguiſhed from others by the folding vp of their Shaſhes. Of theſe there be two ſorts; the Vleſſigi, which is to ſay, ſtipendaries, who are almoſt altogether made of theſe Iemoglans; and the Timariots, who conſiſt of all ſorts of people. The firſt as yet vnpreferred, vnder the command of ſeuerall Captaines, do attend vpon the immediate imployment of the Emperor: who alloweth vnto each the daily penſion of ten Aſpers, paid them euery quarter. Of theſe there be 32000. the one halfe of them are called Spaheioglans, who weare red Pendants on their ſpeares, & when in the field, march on the right hand the Sultan: as the other on the left, who are called Silihtarſpaheis, bearing yellow & white Pendants. The other diſperſed throughout the whole Empire, do liue vpon their particular Tenements for terme of life aſſigned them, and thereupon ſo called. It being the policy of this State, to erect in the conquered Countries a number of Timariots, anſwerable to the greatneſſe thereof: whereby the principall part of the ſouldiery is prouided for, and the Empire ſtrengthned, both againſt forraine inuaſions, and reuolts of the ſubdued. Of theſe, as they ſay, there are vpward of ſeauen hundred thouſand: euery one being to find as many Horſe, as his Farme doth double the yearely value of ſixtie Sultanies, ready to be commanded by their ſeuerall Sanziacks, as they by their Baſſas: theſe beare on their Lances white and red Pendants. But the Ianizaries (a name that ſignifieth New Souldiery) are thoſe that beare ſuch great ſway in Conſtantinople: inſomuch, that the Sultans themſelues haue beene ſometimes ſubiect to their inſolencies. They are diuided into ſeuerall Companies vnder ſeuerall Captaines, but all commanded by their Aga, a place of high truſt; and the third in repute through the Empire: howbeit, their too much loue is to him an aſſured deſtruction. Theſe are the Flower of the Turkiſh Infantry, by whom ſuch wonderfull victories haue beene atchieued. They call the Emperour Father, (for none other is there for them to depend on) to whoſe valour and faith in the time of warre hee committeth his perſon, they hauing their ſtations about the Royall Pauillion. They ſerue with Harquebuſſes, armed beſides with Cymiter, and Hatchets. They weare on their heads a Bonnet of white Felt, with a flap hanging downe behind to their ſhoulders; adorned about the browes with a wreathe of Metall gilt, and ſet with ſtones of ſmall value, hauing a kind of ſheathe or ſocket of the ſame erected before, wherein ſuch are ſuffered to ſticke Plumes of Feathers as haue behaued themſelues extraordinary brauely. They tucke vp the skirts of their coats when they fight or march, and carry certaine daies prouiſion of victuals about with them, nor is it a cumber, it being no more then a ſmall portion of Rice, and a little Sugar and Hony. When the Emperour is not in the field, the moſt of them reſide with him in the Citie: euer at hand vpon any occaſion to ſecure his perſon, and are as it were the Pretorian cohorts with the Romanes. They are in number about fortie thouſand, whereof the greater part (I meane of thoſe that attend on the Court) haue their being in three large Serraglios, where the Iuniors doe reuerence their Seniors, and all obey their ſeuerall Commanders (as they their Aga) with much ſilence and humilitie. Many of them that are married (a breach of their firſt inſtitution) haue their priuate dwellings: and thoſe that are buſied in forraine imployments, are for the moſt part placed in ſuch Garriſon Townes as doe greatly concerne the ſafetie of the Empire; ſome are appointed to attend on Embaſſadours; others, to guard ſuch particular Chriſtians as will be at the charge, both about the Citie, and in their Trauels, from inciuilities and violences, to whom they are in themſelues moſt faithfull: wary and cruell, in preuenting and reuenging their dangers and iniuries, and ſo patient in bearing abuſes, that one of them of late being ſtrucken by an Engliſh-man, (whoſe humorous ſwaggering would permit him neuer to reuiew his Countrey) as they trauelled along through Morea, did not onely not reuenge it, nor abandon him to the pillage and outrages of others, in ſo vnknowne and ſauage a Countrey; but conducting him vnto Zant in ſafetie, ſaying, God forbid that the villany of another ſhould make him betray the charge that was committed to his truſt. They are of one Trade or other: The pay that they haue from the Grand Signior, is but fiue Aſpers a day; yet their eldeſt Sons as ſoone as borne, are inrolled, and receiued into penſion, Spachies.

Timariots.

Some ſay there are a million.

but his bountie extendeth no further vnto his Progeny, (the reſt reputed as naturall Turkes) nor is a Ianizarie capable of other preferments then the command, of ten, of twentie, or of an hundred. They haue yearely giuen them two Gownes apeece; the one of Violet cloath, and the other of Stammell, which they weare in the Citie, carrying in their hands a great tough Reede, ſome ſeuen foote long, tipped with Siluer, the weight whereof is not ſeldome felt by ſuch as diſpleaſe them. Who are indeed ſo awfull, that Iuſtice dare not proceed publikely againſt them (they being onely to be iudged by their Aga) but being priuatly attached, are as priuatly throwne into the Sea in the night time. But then are they moſt tumultuous (whereto they doe giue the name of affection) vpon the dangerous ſickneſſes of their Emperours, and vpon their deaths commit many out-rages. Which is the cauſe that the great Baſſas as well as they can, do conceale it from them, vntill all things be prouided for the preſentment of the next for them to ſalute. Whereupon (beſides the preſent larges) they haue an Aſper a day increaſe of penſion: ſo that the longer they liue, and the more Emperours they out-liue, the greater is their allowance.

But it is to be conſidered, that all theſe before named, are not onely of that tribute of children. For not a few of them are captiues taken in their child-hood, with diuers Renegados, that haue moſt wickedly quitted their Religion and Countrey, to fight againſt both, who are to the Chriſtians the moſt terrible Aduerſaries. And withall they haue of late infringed their ancient cuſtomes, by the admitting of thoſe into theſe orders that are neither the Sonnes nor Grandſonnes of Chriſtians; a naturall Turke borne in Conſtantinople, before neuer knowne, being now a Baſſa of the Port.

Tartars.

Achingi.

Azapi.

Ouer and aboue theſe, and beſides the auxiliary Tartars, whereof there are lightly threeſcore thouſand (who liue on ſpoile, and ſerue without pay) that are euer aſſiſtant; the Grand Signior hath other Forces, whom they call Achingi, who haue nothing but what they can get by foraging, being Hindes of the Countrey, and tyed to ſerue on Horſe-backe, for certaine priuiledges that they hold, in number about thirtie or fortie thouſand: but ſmall in value, as are the Azapi, who ſerue on foote (yet properly belonging to the Gallies) better acquainted with the Spade then Sword: thruſt forward with purpoſe rather to weary, then to vanquiſh the enemy, whoſe dead bodies doe ſerue the Ianizaries to fill vp ditches, and to mount the walls of aſſaulted Forteſſes; beſides many voluntaries, who follow the Army in hope to ſucceede the ſlaine Spaheis and Ianizaries, now nothing curious at ſuch a time to receiue thoſe that bee not the Sonnes of Chriſtians into the Order. Such are the Turkiſh Forces, both in qualitie and proportion, and hee that ſhall ſee three hundred thouſand of theſe in an Armie (as he might haue done this laſt Sommer in Bithynia) ſo diſciplined, ſo appointed, and ſo daringly reſolute: whoſe onely repute conſiſts in their valours; and whoſe defeats are puniſhed in their Commanders as offences, furniſhed with ſuch abundance of great Ordnance (much whereof they caſt according to their occaſions, carrying with them the Metall vpon the backes of Camels) will not onely not wonder at their victories, but rather how the reſt of the yet vnvanquiſhed world hath withſtood them. I haue heard a Prince (and he of no ſmall experience) impute the ſundry ouerthrowes giuen them, by a ſmall number of Chriſtians, to the paucitie of Commanders, and their want of experience, ſome one Sanziack hauing vnder his conduct fiue thouſand Timariots; and he perhaps but newly crept out of the Sultans Serraglio, exerciſed onely in ſpeculatiue conflicts. So that their numbers proue often but cumbers, and the aduantage loſſe, encountred by the many expert Directors of few, who are alſo farre better defenſiuely armed. But he that hath bounded the Sea, hath alſo limited their furies. And ſurely it is to bee hoped, that their greatneſſe is not onely at the height, but neere an extreame precipitation: the body being growne too monſtrous for the head, the Sultans vnwarlike, and neuer accompanying their Armies in perſon; the Souldier corrupted with eaſe and libertie, drowned in prohibited Wine, enfeebled with the continuall conuerſe of Women, and generally lapſed from their former auſteritie of life, and ſimplicitie of manners. Their valours now meeting on all ſides with oppoſition, hauing of late giuen no increaſe to their Dominions, and Empire ſo got, when it ceaſſeth to increaſe, doth begin to diminiſh. Laſtly, in that it hath exceeded the obſerued period of a Tyrannie, for ſuch is their Empire. Now when they march, the Tartars doe ſcoure the Countrey two daies iourney before, then follow the Achingi, after them the Timariots, next thoſe few Iemoglans that be, next them the Ianizaries, the Chauſes follow on horſe-backe, (who carrie Bowes and Arrowes, beſides their Maſes and Cymiters) then comes the Sultan with the Officers of his Court, and Archers of his Guard, who are foot-men: the ſtipendarie Spaheis marching on either ſide of him. An hundred Coaches couered with red, with foure Horſes apeece, are drawne after, which carrie the Hichoglans (his Pages) and Eunuchs; about theſe the Iemoglans, called Baltagies, are placed. The carriages of the Army enſue, followed by voluntaries, who goe in hope (as before ſaid) to bee entertained in the roomes of the ſlaine, with the Seruants of the Spaheis of the Court, and certaine Ianizaries Att-oglans Lepzlers and Deuigilers. The Ianizaries haue the models of Elephants, Boots, Swords of Wood, and the like, borne before them for their Enſignes; and the Royall Standard is no other then a Horſe taile tied to the end of a ſtaffe.

Colours.
Royall Standard.

As

Sea force.

As for their forces at Sea, they are but ſmall in compariſon of what they haue beene, and compared to thoſe of particular Chriſtian Princes, but contemptible. Approued by the Florentine, who with ſixe ſhips onely hath kept the bottome of the Streights for theſe three yeeres paſt in deſpite of them: inſomuch as they haue not dared to hazard the reuenue of Ægypt by Sea, but haue ſent it ouer Land with a Guard of Souldiers, to their no ſmall trouble and expences: the whole Armado comming often in view, yet not ſo hardie as to aduenture the onſet. The Admirall hauing thought it a ſafer courſe to employ the Pirats of Tunis and Algers in that ſeruice, who haue many tall ſhips (the ſpoile of Chriſtian Merchants) and warlikely appointed: now growne expert in Nauigation, and all kind of Sea-fights, by the wicked inſtruction of our fugitiue Pirats, and other Renegados. But thoſe Pirats haue no heart to ſuch an enterpriſe, where the victorie would proue ſo bloudie, and the bootie ſo worthleſſe. The Nauie that is yeerly ſet forth in the beginning of May, to annoy the Enemie, ſuppreſſe Pirats, collect Tribute, and reforme diſorders in the Maritime Townes that belong to the Admiraltie, conſiſts of not aboue threeſcore Gallies, which are all that can be ſpared from their other places of imployment. During the Winter the Armado is diſperſed, and the Gallies are drawne into their drie ſtations. In which time the Pirats, both Chriſtian and Mahometan, doe rob on the Ægean and Mediterranean Seas vncontrolled, but by the defenſiue ſtrength of the Aſſailed. So much the continuance of honors in Families are auoided, that when a Baſſa is giuen (for ſo I may terme it) to the Siſter or Daughter of a Sultan for an husband, the children begotten on them, doe moſt rarely riſe aboue the degree of a priuate Captaine. But more ſeuere are theſe Tyrants to their owne, who lop all the Branches from the Bole; the vnnaturall Brother ſolemnizing his Fathers funerals, with the ſlaughter of his Brothers. So fearfull are they of riualitie, and ſo damnably politike; making all things lawfull that may ſecure the perpetuitie of their Empire. Yet they mourne for thoſe being dead, whom they murdered; honoring them with all dues of buriall, and cuſtomarie lamentations. Now if the Ottoman Line ſhould faile, the Crim Tartar is to ſucceed (both being of one Familie, and of one Religion) as the Turke the Tartar; who hath at this day the election of the Tartarian Emperours: but with this limitation, that hee is to bee one of the ſonnes of the deceaſſed.

Their Sabbath

Their Prayers.

Lyturgie.

Monkes.

They are commanded ſeuen times a day to reſort vnto publike Prayers: the firſt aſſembling is called Timgil-namas, which is two houres before day: the ſecond Sabah-namas, at day breake: the third Vyle-namas, at noone: the fourth Kyndy-namas, at three of the clocke: the fift Akſham-namas, after Sunne-ſet: the ſixth Ghogic-namas, two houres within night: and the ſeuenth Giuma-namas, at ten of the clocke in the morning: the laſt alſo on Fridayes obſerued by all, at other times but by the more religious. Congregated (as aforeſaid) by the chanting of the Prieſts from the tops of ſteeples: at which times lightly, though they be in the fields, they will ſpread their vpper garments on the earth, and fall to their deuotions. Moreouer, I haue ſeene them conioyntly pray in the corners of the ſtreets, before the opening of their ſhops in the morning. Friday is their Sabbath; and yet they ſpend but a part thereof in deuotion, and the reſt in recreations: but for that time they obſerue it ſo rigorouſly, that a Turke here lately had his eares nayled to his ſhop-boord for opening it too timely. Before they pray, they waſh all the Organs of their ſenſes; their legs to their knees, and their armes to their elbowes: their priuities after the purgings of nature; and ſometimes all ouer from top to toe: for which there are houſes of office with conduits belonging to euery principall Moſque. Where water is wanting, they doe it with duſt. At the doore of the Moſque they put off their ſhooes; and entring, ſit croſſe legged vpon rewes of Mats, one behind another, the poore and the rich promiſcuouſly. The Prieſt in a Pulpit before them, not otherwiſe diſtinguiſhed in habite but by the folding vp of his Turbant. When they pray, they turne their faces towards Mecha: firſt ſtanding vpright, without any motion of their bodies, holding the palmes of their hands vpward; ſometimes they ſtop their eyes and eares, and oft pull the haire on the ſides of their faces: then thrice they bow, as in their ſalutations; and as often proſtrating themſelues on the earth, doe kiſſe it. Doing this ſundrie times, they will looke backe vpon no occaſion, vntill they come vnto the ſalutation of Mahomet: at which time they reuerſe their faces, firſt ouer the right ſhoulder, and then ouer the left; beleeuing that his comming will be behind them when they are at their deuotions. The Prieſt doth ſomtimes reade vnto them ſome part of the Alcoran (holding it, in reuerence to the booke, as high as his chin) ſometimes ſome of their fabulous Legend, intermixing Expoſitions and Inſtructions, which they hearken vnto with heedie attention, and ſuch ſteadie poſitures of body, as if they were intranced. Their Seruice is mixed with Songs and Reſponſes: and when all is done, they ſtroke downe their faces and beards with lookes of deuout grauitie. If they finde a Paper in the ſtreets, they will thruſt it in ſome Creuice of the adioyning wall; imagining that the name of God may be contayned therein, and then prophane to be trod vnder foot, or otherwiſe defiled. They number their often repetition of the Names of God and his Attributes (with other ſhort ejaculations of Prayer and Praiſe) vpon Beades: ſome ſhaking their heads inceſſantly, vntill they turne giddie: perhaps in imitation of the ſuppoſed trances (but naturally infirmitie) of their Prophet. And they haue an Order of Monkes, who are called Derviſes, whom I haue often ſeene to dance in their Moſques, on Tueſdayes and Fridayes, many together, to the ſound of barbarous muſicke; dances that conſiſt of continuall turnings, vntill at a certayne ſtroke they fall vpon the earth, and lying along like beaſts, are thought to be rapt in ſpirit vnto celeſtiall conuerſations. Now the Women are not permitted to come into their Temples (yet haue they ſecret places to looke in through Grates) partly for troubling their deuotions, but eſpecially for that they are not circumciſed, as are the women of Perſia and Æthiopia. Nor circumciſe they the Males vntill they be able to anſwere the Prieſt, and promiſe for themſelues, which is for the moſt part at the age of eight. They are circumciſed in the houſes of their Parents, at a feſtiuall meeting, and in the midſt of the Aſſembly, the Child holding vp his fore-finger, in token that he is a Mahometan. As ſoone as cut, the Prieſt waſheth the wound in water and ſalt, and bindeth it in linnen. Who changeth not his name, but is from thenceforth called a Muſſelman, which is, a true Beleeuer. This done, he is carryed vnto the Bannia, where his haire (before that time worne at full length) is ſhauen, and ſo kept euer after, all ſauing a locke on the top of his crowne; by which they dreame that they ſhall be aſſumed by Mahomet into Paradiſe: then put they on him a white Turbant; and ſo returning with Drums and Hoboys, is with great ſolemnitie conducted to the Moſque, and preſented with gifts according to his qualitie.

Lent.

Deſperate impietie.

Grauitie.

Whether are the moſt Fooles and Mad?

The Turkes doe faſt one moneth in the yeere, which they call Ramazan: which changeth yeerly (ſo that in thirteene yeeres they faſt one) wherein, they ſay, that the Alcoran was deliuered vnto Mahomet by the Angell. Obſerued by all but the Infirme and Trauellers: who are to faſt for as long a time, when ſo they recouer, or come to the end of their iourney. But they faſt but during the day, in the night they feaſt, and then are all their ſteeples ſtucke round with Lamps, which burne till the morning, affording an obiect of great ſolemnitie. Such as in ſtead of abſtayning from meates, doe abſtayne at that time from their Moſques, they carrie about in ſcorne, and ſeuerely chaſtiſe; but ſuch as then drinke wine, they puniſh with death. Vpon the diſcouerie of the new Moone (which they ſuperſtitiouſly gratulate, eſteeming him happy that diſcouereth it firſt, and by the courſe thereof doe reckon their yeere) falling out this yeere on the ſeuenth of December, the feaſt of the great Byram did begin, which doth continue for three dayes together, obſerued by them as Eaſter is with vs. On the firſt day the Grand Signior riding to Sancta Sophia, in all the pompe and glorie of Empire (of which we ſhall ſpeake hereafter) vpon his returne we ſaw a ſort of Chriſtians, ſome of them halfe earth alreadie, crooked with age, and trembling with palſies; who by the throwing away of their Bonnets, and lifting vp of their fore-fingers, did proffer themſelues to become Mahometans. A ſight full of horror and trouble, to ſee thoſe deſperate wretches that had profeſſed Chriſt all their life, and had ſuffered no doubt for his ſake much contumely and oppreſſion; now almoſt dying, to forſake their Redeemer, euen then when they were to receiue the reward of their patience. To theſe the Tyrant a little inclined his body, who before not ſo much as caſt his eye aſide, but ſate like the adored ſtatue of an Idoll. For they hold it a great grace, and an act of ſingular pietie, to draw many to their Religion, preſenting them with money, change of rayments, and freeing them from all Tribute and Taxes. Inſomuch, that if a Chriſtian haue deſerued death by their Law, if hee will conuert, they will many times remit his puniſhment. But they compell no man. During this feſtiuall they exerciſe themſelues with various paſtimes, but none more in vſe, and more barbarous, then their ſwinging vp and downe, as Boyes doe in Bell-ropes: for which there bee Gallowſes (for they beare that forme) of an exceeding height, erected in ſundrie places of the Citie; when by two ioyning Ropes that are faſtned aboue, they will ſwing themſelues as high as the tranſome: perhaps affected in that it ſtupifies the ſenſes for a ſeaſon: the cauſe that Opium is ſo much in requeſt, and of their foreſaid ſhaking of their heads, and continued turnings. In regard whereof, they haue ſuch as haue loſt their wits, and naturall Idiots, in high veneration, as men rauiſhed in ſpirit, and taken from themſelues, as it were to the fellowſhip of Angels. Theſe they honour with the Title of Saints, lodge them in their Temples, ſome of them going almoſt ſtarke naked; others clothed in ſhreds of ſeuerall colours, whoſe neceſſities are ſupplyed by the peoples deuotions, who kiſſe their Garments as they paſſe through the ſtreets, and bow to their benedictions; yea, many by counterfeiting the Idiot haue auoided puniſhment for offences which they haue vnwittingly fallen into. Whilſt the Byram laſteth, you cannot ſtirre abroad but you ſhall be preſented by the Deruiſes and Ianizaries, with tulips and trifles, beſprinkling you with ſweet water; nor ceaſſe ſo to doe, till they haue drawne Rewards from you.

The Turkes are incouraged to almes by their Alcoran, as acceptable to God, and meritorious in it ſelfe, if giuen without vaine-glorie, and of goods well gotten, alledging it to be a temptation of the Deuils, to abſtayne from Almes, for feare of impoueriſhment. Their more publike Almes conſiſt in ſacrifices (if not ſo wrongfully termed) vpon their feſtiuals, or performance of vowes: when Sheepe and Oxen are ſlaine by the Prieſt, and diuided amongſt the Poore, the Owner not ſo much as retayning a part thereof. They ſay, they giue much in priuate: and in truth, I haue ſeene but few Beggers amongſt them. Yet ſometimes ſhall you meet in the ſtreets with couples chained together by the necke, who beg to ſatisfie their Creditors in part, and are at the yeeres end releaſed of their Bonds, prouided that they make ſatisfaction if they proue afterward able. At their deaths they vſually giue Legacies for the releaſe of Priſoners, the freeing of Bond-ſlaues, repayring of Bridges, building of Canes for the reliefe of Paſſengers: and the great men, to the erecting of Moſques and Hoſpitals, which they build not ſeldome in their life time. But Mahomet the Great, and Solyman the Magnificent, haue in that kind exceeded all others: whoſe ſtately and ſumptuous ſtructures doe giue a principall ornament to the Citie; where the ſicke and impotent are prouided for, and the ſtranger entertayned (for here bee no Innes) the reuenue of that of Mahomets, amounting to an hundred and fiftie thouſand Sultanies. To theſe there belong Phyſicians, Chyrurgions, Apothecaries, the charge thereof committed vnto their Prieſts, who bring vp a certayne number of youths in the Mahometan Law, and frequently pray for the departed ſoules of the Founders in the Chappels of their Sepulchres. They extend their charitie to Chriſtians and Iewes, as well as to them of their owne Religion; nay, Birds and Beaſts haue a taſte thereof. For many onely to let them looſe, will buy Birds in Cages, and bread to giue vnto Dogges; for moſt haue in this Citie no particular owners, being reputed an vncleane Creature, and therefore not ſuffered to come into their houſes, thinking it neuertheleſſe a deed of pietie, to feede and prouide them kennels to litter in, moſt of them repairing to the Sea ſide nightly, where they keep ſuch a howling, that if the wind ſit South-ward, they may be eaſily heard to the vpper ſide of the Citie of Pera.

With the Stoicks they attribute all accidents to deſtinie, and conſtellations at birth. Since death can be neither haſtned nor auoided, being withall perſwaded, that they die brauely that die fighting: and that they ſhall be rewarded with Paradiſe that doe ſpend their bloud vpon the enemies of their Religion, called Shahids, which is Martyrs, by them. For although they repute murder to be an execrable crime, that cries to Heauen for vengeance, and is neuer forgiuen: yet are they commanded by their law, to extend their profeſſion by violence, and without compaſſion to ſlaughter their Oppoſers. But they liue with themſelues in ſuch exemplary concord, that during the time that I remained amongſt them (it being aboue three quarters of a yeare) I neuer ſaw Mahometan offer violence to a Mahometan, nor breake into ill language; but if they ſo chance to do, a third will reproue him, with, Fie, Muſſel-men, fall out! and all is appeaſed. He that giues a blow hath many gaſhes made in his fleſh, and is led about for a terror, but the man-ſlayer is deliuered to the kindred or friends of the ſlaine, to bee by them put to death with all exquiſite torture.

Mahometans may in this be examples to Chriſtians.

---

§. III.

The Muftie, Cadileſchiers, Diuans: Manners and attire of the Turkes. The Sultan deſcribed, and his Cuſtomes and Court. The Cuſtomes of the Greekes. Sir Tho: Glover.

The Mufti.

THE dignitie of the Chaliph amongſt the Turkes, with much abatement, doth now remaine in the Mufties (which name doth ſignifie An Oracle, or Anſwerer of doubts) as Succeſſors to Ebbubecher, Omar and Ozman; the other being both High-Prieſts and Princes; theſe Patriarchs, as it were, and Soueraignes of their Religion. Throughout the whole Turkiſh Territories, there is but one, who euer reſideth in the Royall Citie, or followes the perſon of the Emperour. He is equall to the ancient Popes, or rather greater both in repute and authoritie. The Grand Signior doth riſe at his approach to ſalute him, and ſets him by him, and giues him much reuerence. His life is onely free from the Sword, and his fortunes moſt rarely ſubiect to ſubuerſion. The Emperour vndertaketh no high deſigne without his approuement. He hath power to reuerſe both his ſentence, and the ſentence of the Divan, if they be not adiudged by him conformable to the Alcoran, but his owne is irreuocable. In matters of difficultie they repaire to him, and his expoſition ſtandeth for a Law. To conclude, he is the ſupreme Iudge, and rectifier of all actions, as well Ciuill as Eccleſiaſticall, and an approuer of the Iuſtice of the Militarie. The place is giuen by the Grand Signiors, to men profoundly learned in their Law, and of knowne integritie. He ſeldome ſtirres abroad, and neuer admits of impertinent conuerſation. Graue is his looke, graue is his behauiour; Highly affecting ſilence, and moſt ſpare of ſpeech. For when any come to him for iudgement, they deliuer him in writing the ſtate of the queſtion, who in writing briefly returnes his oraculous anſwer. He commonly weareth a veſt of greene, and the greateſt Turbant in the Empire: I ſhould not ſpeake much out of compaſſe, ſhould I ſay as large in compaſſe as a buſhell. I oft haue beene in this mans Serraglio, which is neither great in receit nor beautie, yet anſwerable to his ſmall dependancie, and infrequencie of Sutors. He keepeth in his houſe a Seminarie of Boyes, who are inſtructed in the myſteries of their Law. He is not reſtrained, nor reſtaineth himſelfe from pluralitie of Women. His incomes are great, his diſburſings little, and conſequently his wealth infinite; yet he is a bad paymaſter maſter of his debts, though they be but trifles. He much delighteth in Clockes and Watches, whereof, as ſome ſay, he hath not ſo few as a thouſand.

Cadileſchiers.

Next in place to the Muftie, are the Cadileſchiers, that are Iudges of the Armies, (but not to meddle with the Ianiſarie) and accompany the Beglerbegs when they goe into the field. Of theſe there are onely two; one of the European part of the Empire, and another of the Aſian. Theſe are alſo elected by the Grand Signior, as the Cadies by them, (yet to bee allowed by the other, and to kiſſe his Veſt:) of whom there is one in euery Towne, who beſides their ſpirituall Functions, doe adminſter Iuſtice betweene partie and partie, and puniſh offenders. Of inferior Prieſts, there be ſome particularly appointed to ſing at the tops of their ſteeples, and to congregate the people; ſome to looke to the Ceremonies, and ſome to reade and interpret the Alcoran. There are alſo other religious Orders, which I omit to ſpeak of, being of their owne taking vp, neither commanded nor commended, and rather to be eſteemed Vagabonds then religious perſons, conſider we either their life or their habits.

Teſtimonie.

The Divan.

They were formerly but foure, to whom Mahomet the third added fiue.

*Caputain Baſſa.

* Ricekitab.

* Teſtedar.

Aſſurances and writings.

Among the Turkiſh Commandements, one is that drawne originally from our Sauiours, Thou ſhalt not doe what thou wouldſt not haue done to thee: whereupon for the moſt part their Ciuill Iuſtice is grounded, not diſagreeing greatly from the Lawes of Moſes. All euictions there, as elſewhere depend vpon Witneſſes: yet will not the oath of a Chriſtian or a Iew be receiued againſt a Turke, as will a Turkes againſt them, and theirs one againſt another. But the kindred of Mahomet haue their ſingle teſtimonies in equall value with the teſtimonies of two others: notwithſtanding the oath of a Mahometan will not be taken, if impeached for a drinker of Wine, or eater of Swines fleſh. Euery Baſſa keepes a Divan (ſo they call the Court of Iuſtice) within his Prouince: but the higheſt of all, and to which they may appeale from all other, is that, which is kept foure daies of the weeke in the Grand Signiors Serraglio, from whence no appeale is admitted but to the perſon of the Muftie. Here the Vizier Baſſas of the Port, who are nine in number (or as many as then are not otherwiſe employed) doe ſit in Iuſtice (where alſo they conſult of matters of State, and that publikely, not excepting againſt Embaſſadours Drogermen, lightly alwaies preſent: ſo preſume they of ſtrong hand) aſſiſted by the * Admirall, and * Chancellor, (the * Treaſurer in the ſame roome keeping his Court) where all cauſes whatſoeuer that are heard, within the ſpace of three daies are determined, the Great Viziers Baſſa being Preſident of the reſt. But Briberie, not knowne vntill lately amongſt them, hath ſo corrupted their integritie, that whoſe cauſes (if they beare but a colour of right) doe ſeldome miſcarrie where gifts are the Aduocates: yet this is the beſt of the worſt, that they quickly know their ſucceſſes. But many times when the oppreſſed ſubiects can haue no Iuſtice, they will in troupes attend the comming forth of the Emperor, and by burning Straw on their heads, or holding vp Torches, prouoke his regard: who brought vnto him by his Mutes, doth receiue their petition, which oftentimes turnes to the ruine of ſome of thoſe great ones. For aſſurances of Purchaſes, they haue no Indentures, no fines and recoueries. The omitting of a word cannot fruſtrate their eſtates; nor Quirks of Law preuaile againſt Conſcience. All that they haue to ſhew, is a little Scedule, called a Hodget or Sigil, onely manifeſting the poſſeſſion of the Seller, as his of whom he bought it, or from whom it deſcended vnto him, which vnder-written by the Cadie of the place, doth fruſtrate all after-claimes whatſoeuer.

Puniſhments.

Now the puniſhments for offenders, be either Pecuniarie or Corporall. To impoſe the former, they will forge all the ſlanders that they can, to eate vpon the leſſe circumſpect Chriſtians, but the other are ſeldome vniuſtly inflicted. Their formes of putting to death, (beſides ſuch as are common elſe-where) are impaling vpon ſtakes, ganching (which is to be let fall from on high vpon hookes, and there to hang vntill they die by the anguiſh of their wounds, or more miſerable famine,) and another inuented (but now not here vſed) to the terror of mankind, by ſome deuilliſh Perillus, who deſerued to haue firſt taſted of his owne inuention, viz: they twitch the offender about the waſte with a Towell, enforcing him to draw vp his breath by often pricking him in the body, vntill they haue drawne him within the compaſſe of a ſpanne; then tying it hard, they cut him off in the middle, and ſetting the body on a hot plate of Copper, which ſeareth the veines, they ſo vp-propping him during their cruell pleaſure: who not onely retaineth his ſenſe, but the faculties of Diſcourſe, vntill hee be taken downe, and then departeth in an inſtant. But little faults are chaſtiſed by blowes, receiued on the ſoles of the feet with a baſtinado, by hundred at a time, according to the qualitie of the miſdemeanor. A terrible paine that extendeth to all the part of the body, yet haue I ſeene them taken for money. The Maſter alſo in this ſort doth correct his Slaue; but Parents their Children with ſtripes on the belly. The Subaſhie is as the Conſtable of a Citie, both to ſearch out, and puniſh offences.

Their perſons and Manners.

It remayneth now that we ſpeake of the perſons of the Turkes, their diſpoſitions, manners and faſhions. They be generally well complexioned, of good ſtatures, and full bodies, proportionably compacted. They nouriſh no haire about them, but a Locke on the crowne, and on their faces onely; eſteeming it more cleanly, and to bee the better prepared for their ſuperſtitious waſhings. But their Beards they weare at full length, the marke of their affected grauitie, and token of freedome, (for ſlaues haue theirs ſhauen) inſomuch that they will ſcoffe at ſuch Chriſtians as cut, or naturally want them, as if ſuffering themſelues to be abuſed againſt nature. All of them weare on their heads white Shaſhes and Turbants, the badge of their Religion, as is the folding of the one, and ſize of the other, of their vocations and qualitie. Shaſhes are long Towels of Callico woond about their heads: Turbants are made like great Globes of Callico too, and thwarted with Rols of the ſame; hauing little copped Caps on the top, of Greene or Red Veluet, being onely worne by perſons of ranke, and he the greateſt that weareth the greateſt, the Mufties excepted, which ouer-ſizes the Emperours. And though many Orders haue particular Ornaments appointed for their heads, yet weare they theſe promiſcuouſly. It is an eſpeciall fauour in the Turke to ſuffer the Chriſtian Tributarie Princes and their chiefeſt Nobles to weare white heads in the Citie: but in them, what better then an Apoſtaticall Inſinuation? But to beginne from the skinne, the next that they weare is a Smock of Callico, with ample ſleeues, much longer then their Armes: vnder this a paire of Calſouns of the ſame, which reach to their ancles, the reſt naked; and going in Yellow or Red Slip-ſhooes, picked at the toe, and plated on the ſole: ouer all they weare a halfe-ſleeued Coate girt vnto them with a Towell: their necke all bare, and this within doores is their Sommer accoutrement. Ouer all when they goe abroad they weare Gownes, ſome with wide halfe ſleeues, (which more particularly belong to the Grecians,) others with long hanging ſleeues, and the Gownes buttened before, and a third ſort worne by the meaner ſort, reaching but a little below the knee, with hanging ſleeues not much longer then the arme, and open before; but all of them vngathered in the ſhoulders. In the Winter they adde to the former, Calſouns of Cloth, which about the ſmall of the legge are ſewed to ſhort ſmooth Buskins of Leather without ſoles, fit for the foote as a Gloue for the hand, lining their Gownes with Furre, as they doe their Coats; hauing then the ſleeues (or quilted Waiſt-coats vnder them) reaching cloſe to their wriſts. They weare no Gloues. At their Girdles they weare long Handkerchers, ſome of them admirable for value and workmanſhip. They neuer alter their faſhions, not greatly differing in the great and vulgar, more then in the richneſſe. Cloth of Tiſſue, of Gold and Siluer, Veluet, Scarlet, Sattin, Damaske, Chamolets, lined with Sables, and other coſtly Furres, and with Martins, Squerrils, Foxes and Cony-skins; worne according to their ſeuerall qualities. But the common weare is Violet Cloth. They retayne the old Worlds cuſtome in giuing change of Garments, which they may aptly doe, when one Veſt fitteth all men, and is of euery mans faſhion.

Their Turbants.
Shaſhes.
Callico ſmockes.
Gownes.

The Clergie goe much in Greene, it being Mahomets colour; and his Kinſmen in greene Shaſhes, who are called Emers, which is Lords: the women alſo weare ſomething of Greene on their heads, to be knowne. There liues not a Race of ill-fauoureder people; branded perhaps by God for the ſinne of their ſeducing Anceſtor, and their owne wicked aſſuming of hereditary holineſſe. But if a Chriſtian out of ignorance weare Greene, hee ſhall haue his clothes torne off from his backe, and perhaps be well beaten. They carrie no Weapons about them in the Citie; onely they thruſt vnder their Girdles great crooked Kniues of a Dagger-like ſize, in ſheathes of Metall; the Hafts and Sheathes of many beeing ſet with ſtones, and ſome of them worth fiue hundred Sultanies. They beare their bodies vpright, of a ſtately gate, and elated countenance. In their familiar ſalutations they lay their hands on their boſomes, and a little decline their bodies: but when they ſalute a perſon of great ranke, they bow almoſt to the ground, and kiſſe the hemme of his Garment. The ornaments of their heads they neuer put off vpon any occaſion. Some of them perfume their Beards with Amber, and the in-ſides of their Turbants: and all of them affect cleanlineſſe ſo religiouſly, that beſides their cuſtomarie Lotions, and daily frequenting of the Bannias, they neuer ſo much as make water, but they waſh both their hands and priuities: at which buſineſſe they ſequeſter themſelues, and couch to the Earth; reuiling the Chriſtian whom they ſee piſſing againſt a wall, and ſometimes ſtriking him. This they doe to preuent that any part of either excrement ſhould touch their Garments, eſteeming it a pollution, and hindering the acceptation of Prayer, who then are to bee moſt pure in heart and habite.

Clergie attire.
Emers deformed.
Their Kniues.
Gate.
Cleanneſſe.
Offices of nature.

So ſlouthfull they be, that they neuer walke vp and downe for recreation, nor vſe any other exerciſe but ſhooting, wherein they take as little paines as may bee, ſitting on Carpets in the ſhadow, and ſending their Slaues for their Arrowes. They alſo ſhoote againſt Earthen wals, euer kept moyſt in ſhops and priuate houſes for that purpoſe, ſtanding not aboue ſixe paces from the marke, and that with ſuch violence, that the Arrow paſſes not ſeldome through: nay, I haue ſeene their Arrowes ſhot by our Embaſſadour through Targets of Steele, pieces of Braſſe two inches thicke; and through wood, with an Arrow headed with wood, of eight inches. Their Bowes are for forme and length, not vnlike the Lath of a large Croſſe bow, made of the hornes of Buffoloes, intermixed with ſinewes, of admirable workmanſhip, and ſome of them exquiſitely gilded. Although there bee Wraſtlers amongſt them, yet they bee ſuch as doe it to delight the people, and do make it their profeſſion; as do thoſe that walke vpon Ropes, wherein the Turkes are moſt expert; going about when they haue done, to euery particular Spectator for his voluntary beneuolence. Of Cards and Dice they are happily ignorant; but at Cheſſe they will play all

Sloth.
Shooting.
Bowes.
Wraſtlers.
Games.

the day long: a ſport that agreeth well with their ſedentarie vacancie; wherein notwithſtanding they auoyde the diſhoneſt hazard of money.

Horſes.

The better ſort take great delight in their Horſes, which are beautifull to the eye, and well ridden for ſeruice, but quickly iaded if held to a good round trot (for amble they doe not) in an indifferent Iourney. But the Turkes doe not lightly ride ſo faſt as to put them vnto eyther. Their Saddles be hard and deepe, though not great, plated behind and before; and ſome of them with Siluer, as are their maſſie Stirrops, and the Reines of their Bridles, ſuted vnto their coſtly Capariſons. When they ſtand in the Stable they feed them for the moſt part, if not altogether, with Barley; being heere of ſmall value, and onely ſeruing for that purpoſe. They litter them in their owne dung, firſt dryed in the Sunne and pulverated, which keepes their ſkinnes cleane, ſmoth, and ſhining.

Reuerence to Superiors. Left hand before right.

The Turkes doe greatly reuerence their Parents, (ſo commanded to doe by their Law) as the Inferiour his Superiour, and the young aged, readily giuing the prioritie to whom it belongeth, (the left hand as they goe in the ſtreets preferd before the right, in that made Maſters thereby of the Sword of the other, and the chiefeſt place the fartheſt from the wall) liuing together as if all of a Brother-hood. Yet giue they no entertaynment vnto one another, nor come there any into their houſes but vpon ſpeciall occaſion, and thoſe but into the publike parts thereof; their women being neuer ſeene but by the Nurſes and Eunuches which attend on them.

Hoſpitalitie. Houſhold.

Yea, ſo iealous they are, that their Sonnes when they come to growth are ſeparated from them. As their houſes are meane, ſo are their furnitures: hauing nothing on the in-ſide but bare white walls, vnleſſe it be ſome eſpeciall roome, in the houſe of ſome of high qualitie. But the Roofes of many of them are curiouſly ſeeled with in-laid wood, adorned with Gold and Azure of an exceſſiue coſtlineſſe; the greater part of the floore, and that a little aduanced, beeing couered with Turkie Carpets, whereon when they tread they doe put off their ſlip-ſhooes. Many of their roomes haue great out windowes, where they ſit on Cuſhions in the heate of the day. They lye vpon Mattreſſes, ſome of Silke, ſome of ſtayned Linnen, with Bolſters of the ſame, and Quilts that are ſutable, but much in their clothes, the cauſe perhaps that they are ſo louſie. Nor ſhame they thereat, many ſhall you ſee ſit publikely a louſing themſelues in the Sunne; and thoſe no meane perſons.

Sit croſſe-legged.

They haue neither Tables nor ſtooles in their houſes, but ſit croſſe-leg'd on the floore at their victuals, all in a Ring. In ſtead of a cloth, they haue a Skinne ſpread before them; but the better ſort ſit about a round boord, ſtanding on a foot not paſt halfe a foot high, and brimd like a Charger. Their Diſhes haue feet like ſtanding Bolls, and are ſo ſet one vpon another, that you may eat of each without the remoouing of any.

Dyet.

Their moſt ordinarie food is Pillaw, that is, Rice which hath beene ſod with the fat of Mutton. Pottage they vſe of ſundry kinds, Egges fryed in Honey, Tanſies, (or ſomething like them) Paſties of ſundry Ingredients: the little fleſh which they eate is cut into gobbets, and either ſod, or toſted in a Furnace. But I thinke there is more in London ſpent in one day then is in this Citie in twentie. Fiſh they haue in indifferent quantitie. But the Commons doe commonly feed on Herbes, Fruits, Rootes, Onions, Garlicke, a beaſtly kind of vnpreſſed Cheeſe that lyeth in a lumpe; hodge-podges made of Flower, Milke, and Honey, &c. ſo that they liue for little or nothing, conſidering their fare, and the plentie of all things. They are wayted vpon by their ſlaues giuen them, or purchaſed with their Swords, or Money: of theſe to haue many it is accounted for great Riches.

Meales and Feaſts.

When one hath fed ſufficiently he riſeth, and another taketh his roome, and ſo continue to doe vntill all be ſatisfied. They eate three times a day, but when they feaſt they ſit all the day long, vnleſſe they riſe to exonerate Nature, and forth-with returne againe.

Drinke.

They abſtaine from Hogs-fleſh, from bloud, and from what hath dyed of it ſelfe, vnleſſe in caſes of neceſſitie. Their vſuall drinke is pure water, yet haue they ſundry Sherbets, (ſo call they the Confections which they infuſe into it) ſome made of Sugar and Limons, ſome of Violets, and the like, (whereof ſome are mixed with Amber) which the Richer ſort diſſolue thereinto. The Honey of Sio is excellent for that purpoſe, and they make another of the iuyce of Raiſins, of little coſt, and moſt vſually drunke of. Wine is prohibited them by their Alcoran, they plant none, they buy none: but now to that libertie they are growne (the naturall Turke excepted) that they will quaffe freely when they come to the houſe of a Chriſtian: inſomuch, as I haue ſeene but few goe away vnled from the Embaſſadors Table. Yet the feared diſorders that might enſue thereof, haue beene an occaſion that diuers times all the Wine in the Citie hath beene ſtaued (except in Embaſſadors houſes) and death hath beene made the penaltie vnto ſuch as preſumed to bring any in. They preferre our Beere aboue all other drinkes. And conſidering that Wine is forbidden, that water is with the raweſt (eſpecially in this Clime) the deareneſſe of Sherbets, and plentie of Barley (being here ſold not for aboue nine pence a buſhell) no doubt but it would proue infinitely profitable to ſuch as ſhould bring in the vſe thereof amongſt them.

Coffa-houſes.

Although they be deſtitute of Tauernes, yet haue they their Coffa-houſes, which ſomething reſemble them. There ſit they chatting moſt of the day, and ſippe of a drinke called Coffa (of the Berrie that it is made of) in little China diſhes, as hot as they can ſuffer it: blacke as ſoote, and taſting not much vnlike it (why not that blacke broth which was in vſe amongſt the Lacedemonians?) which helpeth, as they ſay, digeſtion, and procureth alacritie: many of the Coſſamen keeping beautifull boyes, who ſerue as ſtales to procure them cuſtomers. The Turkes are alſo incredible takers of Opium, whereof the leſſer Aſia affoordeth them plentie: carrying it about them both in peace and in warre; which they ſay expelleth all feare, and makes them couragious: but I rather thinke giddy headed, and turbulent dreamers; by them, as ſhould ſeeme by what hath beene ſaid, religiouſly affected. And perhaps for the ſelfe-ſame cauſe they alſo delight in Tobacco; they take it through reeds that haue ioyned vnto them great heads of wood to contayne it, I doubt not but lately taught them, as brought them by the Engliſh: and were it not ſometimes lookt into (for Morat Baſſa not long ſince commanded a Pipe to bee thruſt through the noſe of a Turke, and ſo to be led in deriſion through the Citie,) no queſtion but it would proue a principall commoditie. Neuertheleſſe, they will take it in corners, and are ſo ignorant therein, that that which in England is not ſaleable, doth paſſe here amongſt them for moſt excellent.

Opium.

Tobacco taking puniſhed.

Marriage.

Puniſhment of Adulterie.

They are by their law in generall exhorted to marrie, for the propagation of their Religion: and hee ill reputed of, that forbeareth ſo to doe vntill the age of fiue and twentie. Euery man is allowed foure wiues, who are to be of his owne Religion, and as many Concubine ſlaues as hee is able to keepe, of what Religion ſoeuer. For God (ſayth the Alcoran) that is good and gracious, exacteth not of vs what is harſh and burdenſome; but permits vs the nightly companie of women, well knowing that abſtinency in that kind is both grieuous, and impoſſible. Yet are they to meddle with none but their owne peculiars: the offending woman they drowne, and the man they ganſh. They buy their wiues of their parents, and record the contract before the Cadi, which they after ſolemnize in this manner. Many women are inuited by the mother of the Bride, to accompanie her the night before the marriage day, whereof they ſpend a great part in feaſting; then leade they her into a Bath, where they anoint and bathe her: ſo breaking companie they depart vnto their ſeuerall reſts, and in the morning returne to her chamber, where they tricke her in her richeſt ornaments, tying on her ſilken Buskins with knots eaſily not vnknit. The Bridegroom hauing feaſted a number in like manner, in the morning they alſo repaire to his houſe, in their beſt apparell, and gallantly mounted, from whence they ſet forward by two and by two, to fetch home the Bride, accompanied with Muſike, and conducted by Sagdich, who is the neereſt of his kindred; vnto whom the Bride is deliuered, with her face cloſe couered. Who ſet aſtride on horſe-backe, hath a Canopie carried ouer her, in ſuch ſort as no part of her is to bee diſcerned. So the troope returning in order as they came, after them are carried in Serpets (a kind of baskets) their preſents and apparell; then followeth ſhe, and laſtly her ſlaues, if any haue beene giuen her. The Bride-groome ſtandeth at his doore to receiue her, who is honoured by his gueſts (yet goe they not in) with ſundrie preſents before their departure. If ſhee be of qualitie, ſhee is led to the Bride chamber by an Eunuch, where women ſtand prepared to vndreſſe her. But the Bride-groome himſelfe muſt vntye her Buſkins (as amongſt the Romanes they did their Girdles) to which hee is fayne to applie his teeth. Now, he is to entertaine his wiues with an equall reſpect, alike is their diet, alike is their apparell, alike his beneuolence (for ſuch ſweet ſtuffe is contayned in the precepts of their Doctors) vnleſſe they conſent to giue or change turnes; or elſe they may complaine to the Cadi, and procure a diuorcement. But the husband may put away his wife at his pleaſure: who may marrie vnto another within foure moneths after, prouided ſhee proue not with child, and then not vntill ſo long after her deliuery. But if he will haue her againe, hee muſt buy her: and if after the third diuorce, another is firſt to lie with her, as a puniſhment inflicted for his leuitie: They giue him the reuerence of a maſter; they are at no time to denie him their embracements, whom he toucheth not againe vntill they haue beene at the Bannias. They receiue chaſtiſement from him, and that they hold to be an argument of his affection. They feed apart, and intermeddle not with houſhold affaires. All that is required at their hands, is, to content their huſbands, to nurſe their owne children, and to liue peaceably together: which they doe (and which is ſtrange) with no great iealouſie, or enuie. No male accompanies them aboue twelue yeeres old, except they be Eunuchs: and ſo ſtrictly are they guarded, as ſeldome ſeene to looke out at their doores. They be women of elegant beauties, for the moſt part ruddie, cleere, and ſmooth as the poliſhed Iuorie; being neuer ruffled by the weather, and daily frequenting the Bannias, but withall by the ſelfe-ſame meanes they ſodainly wither. Great eyes they haue in principall repute: affected both by the Turks and the Grecians, as it ſhould ſeeme, from the beginning. For Mahomet doth promiſe women with ſuch, (nay as big as Egges) in his imaginarie Paradiſe. And of thoſe the blacker they be, the more amiable: inſomuch that they put betweene the eye-lids and the eye a certaine blacke powder with a fine long penſill, made of a minerall brought from the Kingdome of Fez, and called Alcohole; which by the not diſgracefully ſtayning of the lids doth better ſet forth the whiteneſſe of the eye; and though it trouble for a time, yet it comforteth the ſight, and repelleth ill humours. Into the ſame hue (but likely they naturally are ſo) doe they die their eye-breies, and eye-browes (the later by Arte made high, halfe circular, and to meet, if naturally they doe not) ſo doe they the haire of their heads, as a foyle that maketh the white ſeeme whiter, and more becomming their other perfections. They part it before the midſt, and plaite it behind, yet ſometimes wearing it diſheueled. They paint their nayles with a yellowiſh red. They weare on the top of their heads a Cap not vnlike a Sugar-loafe, yet a little flat, of paiſt-boord, and couered with Cloth of ſiluer or Tiſſue. Their vnder-garments (which within doores are their vppermoſt) doe little differ from thoſe that bee worne by the men, which wee will preſent to the eye to auoide repetition.

After the firſt, ſayth Laonic. Chalcocon.l.3. pag.237.

Iealouſie.

The better ſort about the vpper part of their armes, and ſmalls of their legs weare bracelets, and are elſewhere adorned with Iewels. When they goe abroad they weare ouer all long Gowns of violet cloth, or ſcarlet, tyed cloſe before, the large ſleeues hanging ouer their hands, hauing Buskins on their legs, and their heads and faces ſo mabbled in fine linnen, that no more is to be ſeene of them then their eyes: nor that of ſome, who looke as through the ſight of a Beuer. For they are forbidden by the Alcoran to diſcloſe their beauties vnto any, but vnto their fathers and husbands. They neuer ſtirre forth, but (and then alwayes in troupes) to pray at the graues, and to the publike Bannias: which for excellency of buildings are next to their Moſques. But hauing in part alreadie deſcribed ſome of their formes, I will a little treate of their vſe; which haue beene in times paſt, and are at this preſent, in ſuch requeſt with theſe Nations (as once with the Romanes, as may appeare by their regardable ruines) that few but frequent them twice in the weeke, as well for their health, as for delight and cleanlineſſe. For the ſtomackes crudities, proceeding from their vſuall eating of fruits, and drinking of water, is thereby concocted: which alſo after exerciſe and trauell reſtoreth to the wearied bodie a wonderfull alacritie. The men take them vp in the morning, and in the afternoone the women. But both amongſt the Romanes did ordinarily frequent them together: a cuſtome, as they ſay, continued in Switſerland at this day, and that amongſt the moſt modeſt. The men are attended vpon by men, and the women by women; in the outermoſt roome they put off their clothes, and hauing Aporns of ſtayned linnen tyed about their waſtes, then entring the Baths to what degree of heate that they pleaſe, (for ſeuerall roomes, and ſeuerall parts of them are of ſeuerall temperatures, as is the water let in by cocks to waſh the ſweat and filth of the bodie) the ſeruitors waſh them, rub them,

Women kept cloſe.

Baths and manner of bathing.

them, ſtretch out their ioynts, and cleanſe their skins with a piece of rough Grogeram; which done, they ſhaue the heads and bodies of men, or take away the haire with a compoſition of Ruſma (a minerall of Cyprus) and vnſleakt Lime; who returning to the place where they left their clothes, are dryed with freſh linnen; and for all this they pay not aboue three or foure Aſpers: ſo little, in that endued with reuenues by their Founders. But the women, doe anoint their bodies with an oyntment made of the earth of Chios, which maketh the skin ſoft, white, and ſhining; extending that on the face, and freeing it from wrinkles. Much vnnaturall and filthie luſt is ſaid to bee committed daily in the remote cloſets of the darkeſome Bannias: yea, women with women; a thing vncredible, if former times had not giuen thereunto both detection and puniſhment. They haue generally the ſweeteſt children that euer I ſaw; partly proceeding from their frequent bathings, and affected cleanlineſſe. As wee beare ours in our armes, ſo they doe theirs aſtride on their ſhoulders.

Vnnatural luſt.

Children.

Now, next to their wiues wee may ſpeake of their ſlaues: for little difference is there made betweene them: who are Chriſtians taken in the Warres, or purchaſed with their Money. Of theſe there are weekly Markets in the Citie, where they are to be ſold as Horſes in Faires: the men being rated according to their faculties, or perſonall abilities, as the Women for their youths and beauties, who are ſet out in beſt becomming attires, and with their aſpects of pitie and affection, endeuour to allure the Chriſtians to buy them, as expecting from them a more eaſie ſeruitude, and continuance of Religion: when being thrall to the Turke, they are often inforced to renounce it for their better entertainment. Of them there bee many of excellent outward perfection; and when the buyer hath agreed of the price (but yet conditionally) they are carryed aſide into a roome, euen to the ſearch of her mouth, and aſſurance (if ſo ſhe be ſaid to be) of her virginitie. Their Maſters may lye with them, chaſtiſe them, exchange, and ſell them at their pleaſure. But a Chriſtian will not lightly ſell her whom he hath layne with, but giue her her libertie. If any of their Slaues will become Mahometans, they are diſcharged of their bondage: but if a Slaue to a Turke, he onely is the better intreated. The Turkes do vſe their Bond-women with little leſſe reſpect then their Wiues, and make no difference betweene the Children begotten both of the one and the other: who liue together without ielouſie, it being allowed by their irreligious Religion. Notwithſtanding, their Wiues doe onely receiue, as proper vnto them, their Sabbaths beneuolence. The old and moſt deformed, are put to moſt drudgerie.

Slaues.

Sale of them in Markets.

Their condition.

The Men-ſlaues may compell their Maſters before the Cadie, to limit the time of their bondage, or ſet a price of their redemption, or elſe to ſell them vnto another: but whether of the two, they lightly referre to the Slaues election. If they bee onely fit for labour, they will accept of the time; but if skilfull in any craft, of the price: which expired or payed, they may returne into their Countries. But Gally-ſlaues are ſeldome releaſed, in regard of their ſmall number, and much employment which they haue for them; nor thoſe that are Slaues vnto great ones, to whom the Cadies authoritie extends not. Many of the Children that the Turkes doe buy (for theſe Markets doe affoord of all Ages) they caſtrate, making all ſmooth as the backe of the hand, (whereof diuers doe dye in the cutting) who ſupply the vſes of Nature with a Siluer Quill, which they weare in their Turbants. In times paſt, they did but onely geld them, but being admitted to the free conuerſe of their women, it was obſerued by ſome, that they more then befittingly delighted in their ſocieties.

Gelded Eunuch.

But others ſay, that Selymus the ſecond, hauing ſeene a Gelding couer a Mare, brought in amongſt them that inhumane cuſtome. The firſt that euer made Eunuch, was Semiramis. They are heere in great repute with their Maſters, truſted with their States, the Gouernment of their Women and Houſes in their abſence; hauing for the moſt part beene approoued faithfull, wiſe, and couragious; inſomuch as not a few of them haue come to ſit at the ſterne of State, (the ſecond Vizer of the Port being now an Eunuch,) and others to the Gouernment of Armies.

But now ſpeake we of their Funerals. After their death, the Men by the Men, and the Women by the Women, are laid out in the midſt of the roome. When diuers of their Prieſts do aſſemble, and hauing performed certaine idle ceremonies, as in wrapping their beades about it, and in the often turning it, inuoking God to haue mercy on the departed; which done, they waſh it, ſhaue it, and ſhroud it in Linnen, which they leaue vntied both at the head and feet. Then lay they the Corſe on a Beere, placing a Turbant at the vpper end, and carrying it to the Graue with the head forward: ſome of the Deruiſes going before with Tapers, the Prieſts after ſinging, and laſtly, his friends and acquaintance. But perſons of principall qualitie haue their Horſes led before them, with Enſignes trailed on the earth, and other rites of that nature; diuers of the Santons going before, naming of God, and ſhaking of their heads, and turning about vntill they fall downe giddy. The ſides and bottome of the graue are boorded, and a boord laid ouer the Corſe, to keepe the earth from it, leauing a ſufficient compaſſe to kneele in. For they are of opinion, that two terrible Angels, called Mongir and Guanequir, doe preſently repaire vnto the graue, and put the ſoule againe into the body, as if (ſaith the Alcoran) a man ſhould put on a ſhirt, and raiſing him on his knees, with his head vncouered, (the winding-ſheete being left vnknit for that purpoſe) demand of him in particular, how he hath behaued himſelfe in this life: which if not well, the one ſtrikes him on the head with a hammer nine fathoms into the earth, the other tearing him with an Iron hooke; and ſo continue to torment him vntill the day of Iudgement. A Purgatory ſo feared, that in their Mattins they petition God to deliuer them from the examinations of the blacke Angels, the tortures of the Graue, and their euill iourney. But if he haue ſatisfied them in his reply, they vaniſh away, and two white Angels come in their places; the one laying his arme vnder his head; the other ſitting at his feet, and ſo protect him vntill doomeſday. The Emperors, and ſome of the great Baſſas (whereof we haue ſpoken ſufficiently before) haue their particular Mauſoleums. Thoſe of a ſecond condition are buried in their Gardens, in Sepulchers without couers, filled within with earth, and ſet with varietie of Flowers. But the common ſort are buried by the high-way ſides, and fields of moſt frequency, adioyning to the Citie, hauing a ſtone of white Marble more then a foote broad, and foure foote high, ingrauen with Turkiſh Characters, erected at the head, and another at the feete, the graue betweene lying low like a trough. To theſe the women flocke euery Thurſday in multitudes, weeping out their Children, Husbands, Kinsfolkes, and dead Progenitors, often kiſſing the ſtones, and praying for their deliuery from the aforeſaid blacke Torturers: many times leauing bread and meate on their graues, (a cuſtome alſo of the Pagans) for Dogges and Birds to deuoure, as well as to relieue the poore, being held an auailable almes for the deceaſſed. The better ſort doe mourne in white (as for blacke, I neuer ſaw it worne by a Turke) and but for a little ſeaſon. And the Women are not to marry by their law, vntill foure moneths and ten daies after the death of their Husbands.

Funerals.

put

White and Blacke.

Phyſicke.

Poetry.

Muſicke.

Liberall Arts.

Printing reiected.

Language.

Paper.

Painters.

To ſpeake a word or two of their Sciences and Trades: ſome of them haue ſome little knowledge in Philoſophie. Neceſſitie hath taught them Phyſicke, rather had from experience then the grounds of Art. In Aſtronomy they haue ſome in-ſight; and many there are that vndertake to tell fortunes. Theſe frequently ſit in the ſtreetes of the Citie, reſorted vnto by ſuch as are to take a iourney, or goe about any buſineſſe of importance. They haue a good gift in Poetry, wherein they chant their Armours in the Perſian tongue to vile Muſicke; yet are they forbidden ſo to doe by their Law: Citternes, Harpes and Recorders, being their principall Inſtruments. But their lowd Inſtruments doe rather affright, then delight the hearing. On a time the Grand Signior was perſwaded to heare ſome choiſe Italian Muſicke: but the fooliſh Muſicians (whoſe wit lay onely in the ends of their fingers) ſpent ſo much time in vnſeaſonable tuning, that he commanded them to auoid, belike eſteeming the the reſt to be anſwerable. They ſtudie not Rhetorick, as ſufficiently therein inſtructed by Nature; nor Logick, ſince it ſerues as well to delude as informe, and that wiſedome (according to the opinion of the Epicures) may be comprehended in plaine and direct expreſſions. Some there be amongſt them that write Hiſtories, but few reade them, thinking that none can write of times paſt truly, ſince none dare write the truth of the preſent. Printing they reiect, perhaps for feare leſt the vniuerſalitie of learning, ſhould ſubuert their falſe grounded religion and policie, which is better preſerued by an ignorant obedience: Moreouer, a number that liue by writing would bee vndone, who are for the moſt part of the Prieſt-hood. The Turkiſh tongue is loftie in ſound, but poore of it ſelfe in ſubſtance. For being originally the Tartarian, who were needie ignorant Paſtors, they were conſtrayned to borrow their Termes of State and Office from the Perſians, (vpon whoſe ruines they erected their Greatneſſe) of Religion (being formerly Pagans) from the Arabians; as they did of Maritime Names (together with the skill) from the Greekes and Italians. In Natolia it is moſt generally ſpoken. They vſe (as the Perſians) the Arabique Character. In writing they leaue out the vowels, vnleſſe it be in the end of a word, ſo that much is contriued in a little roome. They curiouſly ſleeke their Paper, which is thicke, much of it being coloured and dapled like Chamolets, done by a tricke they haue in dipping it in the water. They haue Painters amongſt them, exquiſite in their kind, (for they are not to draw by their Law, nor to haue the figure of any thing liuing) yet now many priuatly begin to infringe that precept, and the Grand Signior himſelfe hath a fanne, whereon the battels of Hungarie are painted. Colours alſo they haue, nor leſſe faire then durable.

Euery man hath a Trade.

Euery one hath ſome Trade or other, not ſo much as the Grand Signior excepted. Their Trades are lightly ſuch as ſerue for their owne vſes, neither much ſupplying forraine Marts, nor frequenting them. A lazy people, that worke but by fits, and more eſteeme of their eaſe then their profit, yet are they exceſſiue couetous. And although they haue not the wit to deceiue (for they be groſſe-headed) yet haue they the will, breaking all compacts with the Chriſtians that they find diſcommodious, ſo that they ſeldome will deale with them. But with one another they buy and ſell onely for ready Money, wherein the moſt of their ſubſtance conſiſteth: the occaſion that few ſuites doe happen amongſt them. I haue ſpoken ſufficiently, at leaſt what I can of this Nation in generall, now conuert we to the Perſon and Court of this Sultan.

He is, in this yeare 1610. about the age of three and twentie, ſtrongly limmed, and of a iuſt ſtature, yet greatly inclining to be fat: inſomuch as ſometimes he is ready to choake as he feeds, and ſome doe purpoſely attend to free him from that danger. His face is full and duly proportioned, onely his eyes are extraordinary great, by them eſteemed (as is ſaid before) an excellency in beauty. Fleame hath the predominancy in his complexion. He hath a little haire on his vpper lip, but leſſe on his chin, of a darkſome colour. His aſpect is as haughty as his Empire is large; he beginneth already to abſtaine from exerciſe; yet are there pillars with inſcriptions in his Serraglio, betweene which he threw a great Iron Mace, that memorize both his ſtrength and actiuitie. Being on a time rebuked by his Father Mahomet, that he neglected ſo much his exerciſes and ſtudies, he made his reply: That now he was too old to beginne to learne, intimating thereby, that his life was to determine with his Fathers, whereat the Sultan wept bitterly. For he then had two elder Brothers, of whom the eldeſt was ſtrangled in the preſence of his Father vpon a falſe ſuſpition of treaſon, and the other by a naturall death did open his way to the Empire. Perhaps the conſideration thereof hath made him keepe his younger Brother aliue, contrary to their cruell cuſtome; yet ſtrongly guarded, and kept within his Serraglio. For hee is of no bloudy diſpoſition, nor otherwiſe notoriouſly vicious, conſidering the auſteritie of that gouernment, and immunities of their Religion. Yet is he an vnrelenting puniſher of offences, euen in his owne Houſhold: hauing cauſed eight of his Pages, at my being there, to be throwne into the Sea for Sodomy (an ordinary crime, if eſteemed a crime in that Nation) in the night time, being let to know by the report of a Canon, that his will was fulfilled. Amongſt whom, it was giuen out that the Vice-royes naturall Sonne of Sicilia was one, (a youth lately taken Priſoner, and preſented vnto him) yet but ſo ſaid to be, to diſhearten ſuch as ſhould practiſe his eſcape. His valour reſts yet vntried, hauing made no war but by diſputation, nor is it thought that he greatly affects it, deſpairing of long life in regard of his corpulency. Whereupon he is now building a magnificent Moſque, for the health of his ſoule, all of white Marble; at the Eaſt end, and Southſide of the Hippodrom, where he firſt broke the Earth, and wrought three houres in perſon. The like did the Baſſas, bringing with them preſents of Money, and Slaues to further the building. His occupation (for they are all tyed to haue one) is the making of Iuory Rings, which they weare on their Thumbs when they ſhoote, whereupon he workes daily. His Turbant is like in ſhape to a Pumpion, but thrice as great. His vnder and vpper garments, are lightly of white Sattin, or cloath of Siluer Tiſſued with an eye of Greene, and wrought in great branches. Hee hath not ſo few as foure thouſand perſons that feede and liue within his Serraglio, beſides Capagies, of whom there are fiue hundred attired like Ianizaries, but onely that they want the ſocket in the front of their Bonnets, who waite by fifties at euery gate. The chiefe Officers of his Court are the Maſter (as we may terme him) of the Requeſts, the Treaſurer, and Steward of his Houſhold, his Cup-bearer, the Aga of the Women, the Controller of the Iemoglans: who alſo ſteereth his Barge, and is the principall Gardiner. Diuers of theſe Iemoglans marching before the Grand Signior at ſolemne ſhewes, in a vaine oſtentation of what they would vndergoe for their Lord, gathering vp the ſkinne of their Temples to thruſt Quils through, and ſticke therein Feathers for a greater brauery, ſo wearing them to their no ſmall trouble, vntill the place putrifie; ſome when the old breakes out, cutting new holes cloſe to the broken. Yea the Standard-bearers of this Crue, thruſt the ſtaues ſometimes of their Sandards through the ſkinne and fat of their bellies, reſting the lower end on a ſtirrop of Leather, and ſo beare them through the Citie. Fiftly, Mutes he hath borne deafe and dumbe, whereof ſome few be his daily companions; the reſt are his Pages. It is a wonderfull thing to ſee how readily they can apprehend, and relate by ſignes, euen matters of great difficultie. Not to ſpeake of the multitude of Eunuchs, the Foot-men of his Guard, Cookes, Sherbet-men, (who make the foreſaid beurage) Gardiners and Horſekeepers. Relate we now of his Women, wherein we will include thoſe as well without as within his Serraglio.

Sultan deſcribed.

Cruell policy.

His Acts.

His occupation.

His attire.

His Court.

His Women and Virgins.

And firſt begin we with his Virgins, of whom there ſeldome are ſo few as fiue hundred, kept in a Serraglio by themſelues, and attended on onely by Women, and Eunuches. They all of them are his Slaues, either taken in the warres, or from their Chriſtian Parents, and are indeed the choiſeſt beauties of the Empire. They are not to be preſented to the Emperour, vntill certaine moneths be expired after their entrance, in which time they are purged and dieted, according to the cuſtome of the ancient Perſians. When it is his pleaſure to haue one, they ſtand ranckt in a Gallery, and ſhe prepareth for his bed to whom he giueth his Handkerchiefe, who is deliuered to the aforeſaid Aga of the Women, (a Negro Eunuch) and conducted by him into the Sultans Serraglio. She that beareth him the firſt Sonne, is honoured with the Title of Sultana. But for all his multitude of Women, he hath yet begotten but two Sonnes and three Daughters, though he be that way vnſatiably giuen, (perhaps the cauſe that he hath ſo few) and vſeth all ſorts of foods that may inable performance. He cannot make a free Woman his Concubine, nor haue to doe with her whom he hath freed, vnleſſe hee doe marry her, it being well knowne to the wickedly witty Roxolana: who pretending deuotion, and deſirous for the health, forſooth, of her ſoule to erect a Temple, with an Hoſpitall, imparting her mind to the Mufti, was told Sultana.

Roxolanas ſtory.

by him that it would not be acceptable to God, if built by a Bond-woman. Whereupon ſhe put on a habite of a counterfeit ſorrow, which poſſeſſeſt the doting Solyman with ſuch a compaſſion, that he forth-with gaue her her freedome, that ſhe might purſue her intention. But hauing after a while ſent for her by an Eunuch, ſhee cunningly excuſed her not comming, as touched in Conſcience with the vnlawfulneſſe of the fact; now being free, and therefore not to conſent vnto his pleaſure. So he whoſe ſoule did abide in her, and not able to liue without her, was conſtrained to marrie her. The onely marke that ſhee aymed at, and whereon ſhe grounded her ſucceeding Tragedies. This alſo hath married his Concubine, the mother of his younger Sonne, (ſhe being dead by whom hee had the eldeſt) who with all the practiſes of a politicke Stepdame, endeuours to ſettle the ſucceſſion on her owne, adding, as it is thought, the power of Witch-craft to that of her beautie, ſhe being paſſionately beloued of the Sultan. Yet is ſhe called Caſek Cadoun, which is, the Lady without haire: by Nature her ſelfe, both graced and ſhamed. Now when one Sultan dieth, all his women are carried into another Serraglio, where thoſe remaine that were his predeceſſors, being there both ſtrictly lookt vnto, and liberally prouided for. The Grand Signior not ſeldome beſtowing ſome of them (as of his Virgins, and the women of his owne Serraglio) vpon his great Baſſas and others, which is accounted a principall honour. But for his Daughters, Siſters, and Aunts, they haue the Baſſas giuen them for their Husbands: the Sultan ſaying thus, Here Siſter, I giue thee this man to thy Slaue, together with this dagger, that if he pleaſe thee not, thou maiſt kill him. Their husbands come not vnto them vntill they be called: if but for ſpeech onely, their ſhooes which they put off at the doore, are there ſuffered to remaine: but if to lye with them, they are laid ouer the bed by an Eunuch, a ſigne for them to approach, who creep in vnto them at the beds feete. Muſtapha and Hadir, (two of the Vizers of the Port) haue married this Sultans Siſter, and Neece; and Mahomet Baſſa of Cairo, his daughter, a child of ſixe yeares old, and he about fiftie, hauing had preſents ſent according to the Turkiſh ſolemnities, who giueth two hundred thouſand Sultanies in dowry. Not much in habite doe the Women of the Serraglio differ from other, but that the Fauourite weares the ornament of her head more high, and of a particular faſhion, of beaten Gold, and inchaced with Gems; from the top whereof there hangeth a veile that reacheth to her anckles, the reſt haue their Bonets more depreſſed, yet rich; with their haire diſheueled.

Husbands of his Siſters and Daughters.

Entertainment of Embaſſadors

When the Sultan entertayneth Embaſſadours, hee ſitteth in a roome of white Marble, gliſtring with Gold and Stones, vpon a low Throne, ſpred with curious Carpets, and accommodated with Cuſhions of admirable workmanſhip; the Baſſas of the Bench being by, who ſtand like ſo many Statues without ſpeech or motion. It is now a cuſtome that none doe come into his preſence without preſents, firſt faſtned vpon his Baſſas, as they ſay, by a Perſian Embaſſadour; who thereupon ſent word to the Sophy his maſter that hee had conquered Turkie. The ſtranger that approacheth him is led betweene two: a cuſtome obſerued euer ſince the firſt Amurath was ſlaine by the Seruian Cobelitz, a common Souldier, who in the ouerthrow of Coſſoua, riſing from among the dead bodies, and reeling with his wounds, made towards the Sultan then taking a view of the ſlaine, as if hee had ſomething to ſay; by whom admitted to ſpeech, hee forthwith ſtabd him with a Dagger, hid vnder his Caſſocke for that purpoſe. They goe backward from him, and neuer put off their Hats; the ſhewing of the head being held by the Turke to bee an opprobrious indecency. Now, when hee goeth abroad, which is lightly euery other Friday (beſides at other times vpon other occaſions) vnto the Moſque: and when in ſtate, there is not in the world to be ſeene a greater ſpectacle of humane glorie, and (if ſo I may ſpeake) of ſublimated manhood. For although (as hath beene ſaid) the Temple of Sancta Sophia, which he moſt vſually frenquenteth, is not aboue a ſtones caſt from the out-moſt gate of the Serraglio, yet hath he not ſo few as a thouſand Horſe (beſides the Archers of his Guard, and other Footmen) in that ſhort proceſſion; the way on each ſide incloſed, as well within as without, Capagies and Ianizaries, in their ſcarlet Gownes, and particular head-ornaments. The Chauſes ride formoſt with their gilded Maces; then the Captaines of the Ianizaries with their Aga, next the Chieftaines of the Spachies, after them their Sanziaks; thoſe of the ſoulderie wearing in the fronts of their Bonnets the Feathers of the Birds of Paradiſe, brought out of Arabia, and by ſome eſteemed the Phœnix. Then follow the Baſſas and Beglerbegs: after them the Pretorian foot-men, called the Solacchi, whereof there be in number three hundred; theſe are attired in Calſouns and Smockes of Callico, wearing no more ouer them then halfe-ſleeued Coates of Crimſon Damaske, the skirts tuckt vnder their girdles: hauing Plumes of Feathers in the top of their copped Bonnets; bearing Quiuers at their backes, with Bowes ready bent in their left hands, and Arrowes in their right, gliding along with a maruellous celeritie. After them ſeuen or nine goodly Horſes are led, hauing Capariſons and Trappings of ineſtimable value, followed by the idolized Sultan gallantly mounted. About whom there runne fortie Peichi (ſo called in that they are naturally Perſians) in high-crowned brimleſſe Caps of beaten Gold, with Coats of Cloath of Gold girt to them, with a girdle called Chochiach: the Pages following in the reare, and other Officers of the Houſhold. But what moſt deſerueth admiration amongſt ſo great a concourſe of people, is their generall ſilence: inſomuch, as had you but onely eares, you might ſuppoſe (except when they ſalute him with a ſoft and ſhort murmur) that men were then folded in ſleepe, and the World in mid-night. He that brings him good newes (as vnto others of inferiour condition) receiueth his reward, which they call Muſtolooke. But this Sultan to auoid abuſes in that kind, doth forth-with commit them to Priſon, vntill their reports bee found true or falſe; and then rewards or puniſheth accordingly. Although he ſpends moſt of his time with his women, yet ſometimes he recreates himſelfe in hawking, who for that purpoſe hath (I dare not name) how many thouſand Faulkners in penſion, diſperſed throughout his Dominions: and many of them euer attendant. Their long-winged Hawkes they whiſtle not off as wee doe, but putting a bridle about their neckes, they make them couch to their fiſts, and ſo galloping to the Brooke, fling them off at the fowle, being reared ſodainly by the noyſe of a Drumme that hangs at their Pummels, by vſe made cunning in that kind of preying. They carrie them on the right hand. A hardie Hawke is highly eſteemed; and they haue a kind of them called Shabans, much leſſe then a Falcon: yet ſo ſtrangely couragious, that nothing flyeth in the Ayre that they will not bind with. They alſo hawke at the field, for I haue ſeene them carrie Spaniels with them: yet thoſe in beautie not like vnto ours, but of a baſtard Generation. They feed their Hawkes with hard Egges when fleſh is wanting, and ſeldome beſtow of them the mewing. Although he affects not hunting, yet entertaynes he a number of Huntſmen. Their Dogs they let goe out of ſlips in purſuit of the Wolfe, the Stagge, the Bore, the Leopard, &c. Thoſe that ſerue for that purpoſe are ſtickle haired, and not vnlike to the Iriſh Grey-hounds.

Going to the Moſque.

Generall ſilence.

Hawking and Hawkes.

Huntſmen.

Now the yearely Reuenue which he hath to defray his exceſſiue disburſements, ſuch a World of people depending vpon him, amounts not aboue fifteene Millions of Sultanies, (beſides the entertaynment for his Timariots) which is no great matter, conſidering the amplitude of his Dominions: being poſſeſſed of two Empires, aboue twentie Kingdomes, beſide diuers rich and populous Cities; together with the Red, moſt of the Mid-land, the Ægean Euxine, and Propontícke Seas. But it may be imputed to the barbarous waſtes of the Turkiſh Conqueſts, who depopulate whole Countries, and neuer re-edifie what they ruine. So that a great part of his Empire is but thinly inhabited, (I except the Cities) and that for the moſt part by Chriſtians, whoſe pouertie is their onely ſafetie and protectreſſe. But his caſuall in-comes doe giue a mayne acceſſion to his Treaſurie: as Taxes, Cuſtomes, Spoiles, and Extortions. For as in the Sea the greater fiſhes doe feed on the leſſe, ſo doe the Great ones here on their Inferiours, and hee on them all: being, as afore-ſaid, the Commander of their liues, and generall Heire of their ſubſtances. He hath diuers Mines of Gold and Siluer within his Dominion, that of Siderocapſa in Macedon, hauing beene as beneficiall vnto him as the largeſt Citie of his Empire, called anciently Chryſites: and not vnknowne to Philip the Father of Alexander; who had the Gold from thence wherewith he coyned his Philips, as alſo from thoſe of Cranider, from whence he yearely extracted a thouſand Talents. He hath onely two ſorts of Coine, the Sultanie and the Aſper. The Sultanie is equall in value to the Venice Zecceene, and ſixe ſcore Aſpers amount to a Sultanie, called rather Aſpro, of the whiteneſſe thereof, in that conſiſting of ſiluer.

Conſtantinople is ſaid to contayne ſeuen hundred thouſand perſons: halfe of them Turkes, and the other halfe Iewes and Chriſtians, and thoſe for the generall Grecians. But Pera hath three Chriſtians for one Mahometan: for no Iew dwels in Pera, though they haue their ſhops there. We omit to ſpeake of the Iewes vntill we come into Iewrie; and now will bend our diſcourſe to the Grecians: a Nation no leſſe ſcattered then they, but infinitely more populous. For not onely three parts of the Inhabitants of all Greece and Romania are Grecians, but almoſt all that dwell in the Ilands of the Mid-land Sea, Propontis and Ægeum. Infinite numbers there are of them both in the Leſſe, and the Greater Aſia, and in Africa not a few. For (beſides diuers Colonies by them formerly planted) when Antipater, Perdiccas, Seleucus, Lyſimacus, Antigonus, Ptolomie, and the reſt of the Succeſſors of Alexander had ſhared his Empire among them, they endeuoured as much as they could to plant their new-got Kingdomes with their Countrey men: whoſe Poſteritie in part remayneth to this day, though vaſſalled to the often changes of forraine Gouernours: ſupplyed by the extenſion of the latter Greeke Empire, who yet retayne whereſoeuer they liue, their Name, their Religion, and particular Language. A Nation once ſo excellent, that their Precepts and Examples doe ſtill remayne as approued Canons to direct the mind that endeauoureth vertue. Admirable in Arts, and glorious in Armes; famous for gouernment, affectors of freedome, euery way noble: and to whom the reſt of the World were reputed Barbarians. But now their knowledge is conuerted, as I may ſay, into affected ignorance, (for they haue no Schooles of Learning amongſt them) their libertie into contented ſlauery, hauing loſt their minds with their Empire. Now they delight in eaſe, in ſhades, in dancing and drinking: and no further for the moſt part endeauour their profit, then their bellies compell them. They are generally taxed by the ſtranger Chriſtians of perfidiouſneſſe, inſomuch, as it is growne into a Prouerbe, Chi ſide in Grego, ſara intrigo, in them more anciently noted. There be diuers rich men of them in Pera, but thoſe I thinke were deſcended of the Genoes; who were as hath beene ſaid, the owners of that Citie. Many of them exerciſe Merchandize in Veſſels called Carmaſals, and haue of late gotten the vſe of the Compaſſe, yet dare they not aduenture into the Ocean. They are of diuers Trades in Cities, and in the Countrey doe till the Earth (for the European Turkes doe little meddle with Husbandry) and dreſſe their Vines, by them onely planted. They haue a Ceremonie of baptizing of their Wines, which is the reaſon that the Iewes will not drinke thereof: performed in the memorie, and on that day wherein Chriſt conuerted water into wine: the Prieſt in the midſt of his Oraiſons powring thereinto a ſmall quantitie of water.

Greekes.

Drinkings.

Women.

And although the Greekes doe now for the moſt part imitate the Turkes, (I meane heere in Turkie) in ſitting at their meate, yet retaine they ſtill that vice of immoderate drinking. They pledge one another in order; and he that cals for wine out of his turne, is reputed vnciuill. Their Glaſſes are little, but at euery draught emptied; and when they haue once drunke hard, they obſerue no Rule, but prouoke one another to exceſſe. Neuer ſilent; and euer and anon kiſſing thoſe that ſit next them on the cheeke and fore-head: and ſo likewiſe they doe in their ſalutations after a long abſence, and to thoſe to whom they would giue an aſſurance of their good will. Vſed of long, as appeareth by the Scriptures, amongſt theſe Eaſterne Nations. But to kiſſe their women is an vnſufferable wrong; vnleſſe it be betweene the Reſurrection and Aſcention; vſing alſo this greeting, that, Our Sauiour is riſen. The women for the moſt part are browne of complexion, but exceedingly wel-fauoured, and exceſſiuely amorous. Their Garments differ little from theirs amongſt whom they liue. They couer not their faces (the Virgins excepted) vnleſſe it bee with Painting; vſing all the ſuppliment of a ſophiſticate beautie. And not without cauſe, for when they grow old, they moſt grow contemptible, beeing put to doe the drudgeries of the houſe, and many times to waite on their children. They are coſtly in their attyre, and will complaine to the Patriarke, if their Husbands maintayne them not according to their ſubſtances. The Greekes, as the Turkes doe vſe little houſhold ſtuffe; and lye vpon Mattreſſes.

Their language.

Now the Grecians themſelues, (except ſome few) are ignorant in the ancient Greeke, it being called the Latine Greeke, and is a Language peculiar to the Learned. Yet the vulgar Greeke doth not differ ſo farre from the ſame, as the Italian from the Latine, corrupted not ſo much by the mixture of other Tongues, as through a ſupine wretchleſneſſe. In ſome places they ſpeake it more purely than in others. For the Boyes of Pera will laugh, when they heare the more barbarous Dialect of other maritime Grecians. And there be yet of the Laconians that ſpeake ſo good Greeke, (though not Grammatically) that they vnderſtand the Learned; and vnderſtand not the vulgar. Their Liturgie is read in the ancient Greeke, with not much more profit perhaps to the rude people, then the Latine Seruice of the Romiſh Church to the illiterate Papiſts.

The foure Patriarkes.

They haue foure Patriarchs: One of Conſtantinople, another of Alexandria, the third of Ieruſalem, and the fourth of Antioch. He of Conſtantinople hath vnder his Iuriſdiction all Peloponneſus, Grecia, Thracia, Dacia, Mœſia, Macedonia, Epirus, Albania, Dalmatia, Illyria, a great part of Polonia, Ruſſia, the Ilands of the Adriaticke Sea, and of the Archipelagus, with Candie, Rhodes, Coos, almoſt all the leſſer Aſia, Colchis, not a few that inhabit about the Fennes of Mœtis, and Northerne ſhoare of Euxinus: as Sicilia and Calabria were, vntill they returned vnto the Sea of Rome. Vnder the Patriarch of Alexandria, are thoſe of Egypt and Arabia. The Greekes of Paleſtine, and of the Countries thereabout, doe obey the Patriarch of Ieruſalem. And he of Antioch, who hath his ſeate in Damaſcus, (for Antiochia is now deſolate) hath ſubiect vnto him the Grecians of the leſſer Armenia, Celicia, Beritus, Tripoly, Aleppo, and other places of the greater Aſia. In all theſe parts they haue the free exerciſe of their Religion: with publike Temples, and numbers of ſtrong Monaſteries. If a Patriarch dye, another is elected by a Synod of Biſhops. But the Patriarch of Conſtantinople hath the Supremacie of the reſt aſſigned him by the Councell of Chalcedon, as Metropolitan of the Imperiall Citie: whoſe Dioceſſe exceedeth the other ſo much, in that moſt of thoſe Northerne Nations were wonne to Chriſtianitie by the Induſtry of his Predeceſſors, and reduced to their Gouernment. So if we doe conſider it, the Grecian Religion both in extent and number exceedeth the Romane. And as the Papiſts attribute an extraordinarie holineſſe to Rome, ſo doe the Greekes vnto Athos, a Mountaine of Macedona; ſo named of Athon the Sonne of Neptune, deckt with ſtill-flouriſhing Trees, and abounding with Fountaines: called alſo the Holy Mountayne by the Chriſtians. A place from the beginning dedicated to Religion; lying directly Weſt from Lemnos: and ſo high, that though it be ſeuen hundred furlongs diſtant; yet is it ſaid a little before the ſetting of the Sunne, to caſt a ſhadow on that Iland.

Caloieros.

This ſtretcheth out into the Sea, and ioynes vnto the Continent by an Iſthmos, about a mile and halfe broad: which was cut through by Xerxes, (as hath beene intimated before) and made circumnauigable. But time hath left now no impreſſions of his barbarous labour. It is well nigh three dayes iourney in length, conſidering the difficultie of the way; and halfe a dayes ouer. The top thereof reſembleth the forme of a man, ſtretched on his backe from Weſt vnto Eaſt; and formed (according to Strabo) to the ſimilitude of Alexander. This Mountayne is onely inhabited by Grecian Monkes, whom they call Caloieros, vn-intermixed with the Laitie: of whom there are there reſiding not ſo few as ſixe thouſand, that liue in Monaſteries ſtrongly munited againſt the Incurſious of Robbers and Pirats. Of theſe there be in number twentie foure. The Caloieros weare Gownes of blacke, of a homely ſtuffe, with Hoods of the ſame; and their haire at full length. They neuer marrie, abſtaine from fleſh, and often (eſpecially during their Lents) from fiſh that hath bloud in it. They liue hardly, feeding on Biſcot, Onions, Oliues, Herbs, and ſuch fiſh as they take in the adioyning Seas. For they all of them labour for their ſuſtenance, leauing their Monaſteries betimes in the mornings; and imploying the day, ſome in tillage, ſome in the Vineyards, ſome in making of Boats, ſome in fiſhing, others at home ſpinne, weaue, ſew, and doe all the Offices that belong vnto women: ſo that none but are buſied about one thing or another, to the behoofe of their particular Couents: and men they bee that are onely meete for ſuch Drudgeries. For amongſt ſo many, not paſt three or foure can write or reade, throughout a whole Monaſterie: inſomuch, that at their Lyturgies, that is read to them firſt, which they are to ſing after. In theſe Monaſteries many excellent Manu-ſcripts haue beene preſerued, but thoſe that now are, be onely of Diuinitie, all other Learning (as amongſt the Turkes) at this day deteſted by the Religious. The Coloieros of this place haue a repute aboue all others: and for their ſtrictneſſe of life, and obſeruance of Ceremonies, are in their ſeuerall Monaſteries relieued from ſeuerall Nations. The Patriarch of Conſtantinople is ſaid to pay yearely for the Prieſts and Coloieros, that are vnder his Iuriſdiction within the Turkiſh Dominions, twelue thouſand Sultanies.

The Patriarchs of Conſtantinople were heretofore men of ſingular grauitie and learning; but now nothing leſſe: rather choſen for temporall reſpects, then either for their knowledge or deuotion; admitted not ſeldome to the place at the age of fortie, though prohibited, if vnder threeſcore, by an ancient Canon. Although elected by their owne Biſhops; yet often appointed, and euer to be allowed by the Grand Signior: frequently diſplanted, and baniſhed vnto the Rhodes, by the briberie of their Succeſſors. Some few of their Prieſts are learned. For them it is lawful to marrie, but Bigamie is forbidden them, and Trigamie deteſted in the Laitie. There are no other Orders amongſt them beſides the foreſaid Caloieros, and certaine Nunnes whom they call Coloieras. Yet of the laſt but a few, who are for the moſt part poore old Widdowes, that exerciſe themſelues in ſweeping of the Churches, attending on the ſicke, and actions of like nature. Their Churches are many of them well ſet forth and painted with the repreſents of Saints, but they haue no carued nor imboſſed Images. Lampes they haue continually burning. Their ordinarie Lyturgie is Saint Chryſoſtomes; but on Feſtiuall Dayes they doe reade Saint Baſils, and then attired in their Pontificals. Their behauiour therein expreſſeth there, to my vnderſtanding, no great either decencie or deuotion. They adminiſter the Euchariſt in both kinds: if the bread bee not leauened, they thinke it not auaileable; and they drinke of the cup very liberally. One Article they hold againſt the Catholicke Creed; which is, that the Holy Ghoſt proceedeth onely from the Father.

Foure Lents they haue in the yeare, and then a damnable ſinne it is to eate fleſh, or fiſh that hath bloud in it (except in the Lent before Eaſter, when all ſorts of fiſh may bee eaten by the Laitie:) but ſhel-fiſh they eate, and the Cuttle: whoſe bloud, if I may ſo tearme it, is like Inke; a delicate food, and in great requeſt. They faſt on Wedneſdayes, Fridayes, and on holy Eeues: but on Saturdayes they feaſt, in regard that it was the old Sabbath. They compute the yeare as we doe. They yeeld no Supremacie to the Romane Papacie, but hold that Church for Schiſmaticall. And although many times out of the neceſſitie of their Affaires, and to purchaſe reliefe, they haue treated of a Conciliation; and ſometimes it hath beene by their Agents concluded: yet what they haue done hath beene generally reiected vpon their returne, both by the Greekes and thoſe other Nations that profeſſe their Religion. Of their Marriages I haue elſe-where ſpoken, and now conclude wee will with their Funerals: wherein they retayne not a few of their ancient and Heathen Ceremonies. Their lamentaions are the ſame that they were, and beyond all ciuilitie.

The women betimes in the morning doe meete at appointed places, and then cry out mainely; beating of their breaſts, tearing their haire, their faces and garments. And that the clamour may be the greater, they hire certaine Iewiſh women, that haue lowdeſt voyces, ioyning therewith the prayſes of the dead, from the houre of his Natiuitie vnto the houre of his diſſolution: and keeping time with the melancholicke Muſicke. Nor want they ſtore of Spectators, partly drawne thither to delight their eyes, and partly by iealouſie. For then the choice, and prime women of the Citie (if the deceaſſed were of note) doe aſſiſt their Obſequies; with boſomes diſplaid, and their haire diſ-ſheueled: glad that they haue the occaſion to manifeſt their beauties, which at other times is ſecluded from Admirers.

The reaſon why the Grecians did burne their dead, was, becauſe that part which was diuine in them, ſhould as it were in a fierie Chariot againe re-aſcend to the Celeſtiall Habitations, as vnto Earth the Earthly returned. They vſed to quench the fire with Red Wine, and gathering the bones together to include them in Vrnes as the Vrnes in Sepulchres, (which had no title, vnleſſe they were ſlaine in fighting for their Countrey) exhibiting games, and prizes for the Victors in honour of the deceaſſed. Notwithſtanding all were not burnt, but ſome buried in their apparell, as now being Chriſtians they are: who vſe Extreme-vnction, as inducted by S. Iames;

yet not onely denie the Romane opinion of Purgatorie, but furthermore erroniouſly maintayne, that neither the ſoules of the bleſſed nor damned doe ſuffer either ioy or torment, or ſhall till the generall Iudgement. But enough of the Grecians.

Engliſh Embaſſador.

The Germane Emperour, the Kings of England and of France, haue heere their Liedger Embaſſadours: as the Venetians their Baily, and diuers tributarie Princes their Agents. Some meerly employed about State Affaires; others together therewith, about the trafficke of their Nations. But the Engliſh onely negotiates for the Merchants, hauing two in the hundred vpon euerie ſhip, beſides a large Penſion: with the name of a great proportion of prouiſion from the Grand Signior. The Engliſh Conſulſhip of Chios is in his diſpoſing, and accountable to him; and out of that of Alexandria hee hath no ſmall ſhare, though ſerued by a French man. There hath bin ſome contention between him and the French, about the protection of the Dutch Merchants; but now they doe diuide the profits. The Engliſh Conſul of Aleppo is abſolute of himſelfe, yet hath from hence his redreſſes of iniuries: whole chiefe employment is to protect the perſons and goods of our Nation, to labour a reuenge of wrongs, and a reſtitution of loſſes. And to giue * this no more then his due, for this place none can be more ſufficient; expert in their Language, and by a long experience in their natures and practiſes: being moreouer of ſuch a ſpirit, as not to be danted. And ſurely, his chiefeſt fault hath beene his misfortune; in the too violent, chargeable, and ſucceſſeleſſe ſollieiting of the reſtitution of the Prince of Moldauia, (whom aduerſitie hath rather made crafty then honeſt:) whoſe houſe doth harbour both him and his dependents; beeing open alſo to all of our Nation: a Sanctuary for poore Chriſtian ſlaues that ſecretly flye hither, whom hee cauſeth to bee conueyed into their Countries, and redeemeth not a few with his money.

* Sir Thomas Glouer.

---

§. IIII.

The Holy Land deſcribed, the Countrie, Cities, Inhabitants, holy Places, and memorable Rarities of Ieruſalem.

* His Iourney out of Egypt thither, you haue before l. 6 c. 8. For leauing Conſtantinople in Ianuary, in the Trinitie of London he ſailed by Samos, Patmos, Coos, Rhodes &c. to Egypt.

NOw are we in the Holy * Land, confined on the North with the Mountaynes of Lybanus, and a part of Phœnicia: on the Eaſt it hath Cœloſyria and Arabia Petrea: on the South the ſame together with Idumea, the Weſt is bounded, a part with Phœnicia, and the reſt with the Mid-land Sea. Diſtant from the Line one and thirtie degrees, extending vnto thirtie three, and ſomething vpward. So that in length from Dan (the ſame with Cæſarea Philippi,) vnto Berſheba, (now Gebelin) it contayneth not more then an hundred and fortie miles; where broadeſt not fifty. A Land that flowed with Milke and Honey: in the middeſt as it were of the habitable World, and vnder a temperate Clime. Adorned with beautifull Mountaynes, and luxurious Valleyes; the Rockes producing excellent Waters: and no part emptie of delight or profit.

The Inhabitants.

Iewes.

It is for the moſt part now inhabited by Moores and Arabians: thoſe poſſeſſing the Valleyes, and theſe the Mountaynes. Turkes there be few, but many Greekes, with other Chriſtians, of all Sects and Nations, ſuch as impute to the place an adherent holineſſe. Here be alſo ſome Iewes, yet inherit they no part of the Land, but in their owne Countrey doe liue as Aliens; a people ſcattered throughout the whole World, and hated by thoſe amongſt whom they liue; yet ſuffered as a neceſſary miſchiefe: ſubiect to all wrongs and contumelies, which they ſupport with an inuincible patience. Many of them haue I ſeene abuſed; ſome of them beaten: yet neuer ſaw I Iew with an angry countenance. They can ſubiect themſelues vnto times, and to whatſoeuer may aduance their profit. In generall they are worldly wiſe, and thriue wheresſoeuer they ſet footing. The Turke employes them in Receit of Cuſtomes, which they by their policies haue inhaunced, and in buying and ſelling with the Chriſtian: beeing himſelfe in that kind a Foole and eaſily coozened. They are men of indifferent ſtatures, and the beſt complexions. Throughout the Turkes Dominions they are allowed their Synagogues: ſo are they at Rome, and elſewhere in Italie; whoſe Receit they iuſtifie as a retayned teſtimonie of the verity of Scriptures; and as being a meanes of their more ſpeedie conuerſions: whereas the offence that they receiue from Images, and the loſſe of goods vpon their conuerſions, oppugne all perſwaſions whatſoeuer. Their Synagogues (for as many as I haue ſeene) are neither faire without, nor adorned within more then with a Curtayne at the vpper end, and certaine Lampes (ſo farre as I could perceiue) not lightned by day-light. In the midſt ſtands a Scaffold, like thoſe belonging to Quereſters, in ſome of our Cathedrall Churches: wherein he ſtands that reades their Law and ſings their Lyturgie: an Office not belonging vnto any in particular, but vnto him (ſo hee bee free from deformities) that ſhall at that time purchaſe it with moſt money; which redounds to their publike Treaſurie. They reade in ſauage Tones, and ſing in Tunes that haue no affinitie with Muſicke: ioyning voyces at the ſeuerall cloſes. But their fantaſticall geſtures exceed all Barbariſme,

Their patience

Thriftineſſe.

Of the Iewiſh people and their Sects and Rites, you may reade this Author, & more fully my Pilgrimage, l. 2.

riſme, continually weauing with their bodies, and often iumping vp-right (as is the manner in Dances) by them eſteemed an action of zeale, and figure of ſpirituall eleuation. They pray ſilently, with ridiculous and continuall noddings of their heads, not to bee ſeene and not laught at. During the time of Seruice their heads are veyled in linnen, fringed with knots; in number anſwerable to the number of their Lawes: which they carrie about with them in proceſſion; and rather boaſt of then obſerue. They haue it ſtucke in the iambs of their doores, and couered with glaſſe: written by their Cacams, and ſigned with the names of God, which they kiſſe next their hearts in their goings forth, and in their returnes. They may not print it, but it is to bee written on Parchment, prepared of purpoſe (the Inke of a preſcribed compoſition) not with a Quill, but a Cane. They doe great reuerence to all the names of God, but eſpecially to Iehoua; inſomuch that they neuer vſe it in their ſpeech. And whereas they handle with great reſpect the other Bookes of the old Teſtament, the Booke of Heſter (that part that is Canonicall, for the other they allow not of) writ in a long Scroll they let fall on the ground as they reade it, becauſe the name of God is not once mentioned therein; which they attribute to the wiſdome of the Writer, in that to be peruſed by the Heathen. Their other books are in the Spaniſh Tongue and Hebrew Character. Although they agree with the Turke in Circumciſion, deteſtation of Images, abſtinency from Swines-fleſh, and diuers other Ceremonies: neuertheleſſe, the Turkes will not ſuffer a Iew to turne Mahometan, vnleſſe hee firſt turne a kind of Chriſtian. As in Religion they differ from others, ſo doe they in Habite, in Chriſtendome enforcedly, here in Turkie voluntarily. Their vnder-garments differing little from the Turkes in faſhion, are of purple cloth; ouer that they weare Gownes of the ſame colour, with large wide ſleeues, and claſped beneath the chin, without band or collar: on their heads high brimleſſe Caps of purple, which they moue at no time in their ſalutations. They ſhaue their heads all ouer; not in imitation of the Turke: it being their ancient faſhion. Their familiar Speech is Spaniſh: yet few of them are ignorant in the Hebrew, Turkiſh, Moriſco, vulgar Greeke, and Italian Languages. Their onely ſtudies are Diuinitie and Phyſicke: their occupations Brocage and Vſurie; yet take they no intereſt of one another, nor lend but vpon pawnes; which once forfeited, are vnredeemable.

Doctors of their Law.

Their attire.

They marrie their daughters at the age of twelue, not affecting the ſingle life, as repugnant to ſocietie, and the law of creation. The Sabbath (their deuotions ended) they chiefly employ in nuptiall beneuolencies, as an act of charitie, befitting well the ſanctitie of that day. Although no Citie is without them throughout the Grand Signiors Dominions, yet liue they with the greateſt libertie in Salonica, which is almoſt altogether inhabited by them. Euery male aboue a certaine age, doth pay for his head an annuall tribute. Although they be gouerned by the Turkiſh Iuſtice; neuertheleſſe, if a Iew deſerue to die by their law, they will either priuately make away, or falſly accuſe him of a crime that is anſwerable to the other in qualitie, and deſeruing like puniſhment. It is no ill turne for the Franks that they will not feed at their Tables. For they eate no fleſh, but of their owne killing; in regard of the intrals, which being diſlocated or corrupted, is an abomination vnto them. When ſo it falls out, though exceeding good (for they kill of the beſt) they will ſell it for a trifle. And as for their Wines, being for the moſt part planted and gathered by Grecians, they dare not drinke of them, for feare they be baptized: a ceremonie whereof we haue ſpoken alreadie. They ſit at their meate, as the Turks doe. They burie in the fields by themſelues, hauing onely a ſtone ſet vpright on their Graues, which once a yeere they frequent, burning of incenſe, and tearing of their garments. For certaine dayes they faſt and mourne for the dead, yea euen for ſuch as haue beene executed for offences. As did the whole Nation at our being at Conſtantinople for two of good account that were impaled vpon ſtakes; being taken with a Turkiſh woman, and that on their Sabbath. It was credibly reported, that a Iew, not long before, did poyſon his ſonne, whom he knew to be vnreſtrainably laſciuious, to preuent the ignominie of a publike puniſhment, or loſſe by a chargeable redemption. The fleſh conſumed, they dig vp the bones of thoſe that are of their families; whereof whole bark-fuls not ſeldome doe arriue at Ioppa, to be conueyed, and againe interred at Ieruſalem: imagining that it doth adde delight vnto the ſoules that did owe them, and that they ſhall haue a quicker diſpatch in the generall iudgement. To ſpeake a word or two of their women. The elder mabble their heads in linnen, with the knots hanging downe behind. Others doe weare high Caps of plate, whereof ſome I haue ſeene of beaten Gold. They weare long quilted Waſtcoats, with Breeches vnderneath; in Winter of cloth, in Summer of linnen; and ouer all when they ſtirre abroad, looſe Gownes of purple flowing from the ſhoulders. They are generally fat, and ranke of the ſauours which attend vpon ſluttiſh corpulency. For the moſt part, they are goggle-eyed. They neither ſhun conuerſation, nor are too watchfully guarded by their husbands. They are good work-women, and can and will doe any thing for profit, that is to be done by the Art of a woman, and which ſutes with the faſhion of theſe Countries. Vpon iniuries receiued, or violence done to any of their Nation, they will crie out mainly at their windowes, beating their cheekes, and tearing of their garments. Of late they haue beene bleſt with another Heſter, who by her fauour with the Sultan, preuented their intended Salonica.

The Iewes iuſtice.

Diet.

Burials.

Women.

maſſacre, and turned his furie vpon their accuſers. They are ſo well skilled in lamentations, that the Greekes doe hire them to crie at their funerals.

Gaza.

But now returne we vnto Gaza. It ſtands vpon a hill ſurrounded with valleyes; and thoſe againe wel-nigh enuironed with hills, moſt of them planted with all ſorts of delicate fruits. The building meane, both for forme and matter: the beſt but low, of rough ſtone, arched within, and flat on the top including a quadrangle: the walls ſurmounting their roofes, wrought through with pot-ſheards to catch and ſtrike downe the refreſhing winds, hauing ſpouts of the ſame, in colour, ſhape and ſight, reſembling great Ordnance. Others couered with mats and hurdles; ſome built of mud; amongſt all, not any comely or conuenient. Yet there are ſome reliques left, and ſome impreſſions, that teſtifie a better condition: for diuers ſimple roofes are ſupported with goodly Pillars of Parian marble, ſome plaine, ſome curiouſly carued. A number broken in pieces doe ſerue for threſholds, iambs of doores, and ſides of windowes, almoſt vnto euery beggarly Cottage. On the North-eaſt corner, and ſummitie of the hill, are the ruines of huge arches ſunke low in the earth, and other foundations of a ſtately building. From whence the laſt Sanziack conueyed marble Pillars of an incredible bigneſſe; enforced to ſaw them aſunder ere they could be remoued: which hee employed in adorning a certaine Moſque below in the valley. The Caſtle now being, not worthie that name, is of no importance: wherein lieth the Sanziaek (by ſome termed, a Baſſa) a ſickly young man, and of no experience, who gouernes his Prouince by the aduice of a Moore. His Territories begin at Ariſſa. On the Weſt ſide of the Citie, out of ſight, and yet within hearing, is the Sea, ſeuen furlongs off; where they haue a decayed and vnſafe Port, of ſmall auaile at this day to the inhabitants. In the valley on the Eaſt ſide of the Citie, are many ſtragling buildings; beyond which, a hill more eminent then the reſt, on the North ſide of the way that leadeth to Babylon; ſaid to be that (and no queſtion the ſame deſcribed in Scriptures) to which Samſon carried the gates of the Citie; vpon whoſe top there ſtandeth a Moſque, enuironed with the Graues and Sepulchres of Mahometans. In the Plaine betweene that and the Towne, there ſtand two high Pillars of marble, their tops much worne by the weather: the cauſe of their erecting vnknowne, but of great antiquitie. South of this, and by the way of Ægypt, there is a mightie Ciſterne, filled onely by the fall of raine, and deſcended into by large ſtaires of ſtone: where they waſh their clothes, and water their Cattell.

Reaſon of low doores.

The ſame day that wee came, wee left the Carauan, and lodged in the Citie, vnder an Arch in a little Court, together with our Aſſes. The doore exceeding low, as are all that belong vnto Chriſtians, to withſtand the ſodaine entrance of the inſolent Turkes. For they heere doe liue in a ſubiection to be pitied; not ſo much as daring to haue handſome houſes, or to employ their grounds to the moſt benefit: ſo dangerous is it to be eſteemed wealthy. During our abode here, there came a Captaine with two hundred Spaheis, ſent by Morat Baſſa to raiſe thirtie thouſand Dollars of the poore and few Inhabitants of this Citie. The Grecians haue certaine ſmall Vineyards: but that they haue Wine, they dare not be acknowne, which they ſecretly preſſe in their houſes. They burie their Corne vnder ground, and keepe what they are to ſpend in long veſſels of clay; in that it is ſubiect to bee eaten with wormes (as throughout Ægypt) and will not laſt if not ſo preſerued. In the principall part of the Citie they haue an ancient Church, frequented alſo by the Copties. The Greekiſh women (a thing elſewhere vnſeene) here couer their faces, dying their hands blacke; and are apparelled like the Moores of Cairo. Euery Saturday in this Church-yard vpon the Graues of the dead, they keepe a miſerable howling; crying of cuſtome, without teares or ſorrow. The Subaſſee would haue extorted from vs wel-nigh as much money as wee were maſters of: which wee had hardly auoyded, had not the ſicke Sanziack (in that adminiſtred vnto by our Phyſician) quitted vs of all payments. So that there is no trauelling this way for a Franke, without ſpeciall fauour.

Slauery of the Inhabitants.

Saturday ſorrow.

Thruſt out of our lodging (as we were about to leaue it) by the vnciuill Spaheis, who ſeized on diuers of our neceſſaries: on the eighteenth of March wee returned to the Carauan. Wee payed halfe a Dollar apiece to the place for our Camels: and for their hire from Cairo, for thoſe of burthen, ſixe Sultanies; for ſuch as carried paſſengers, eight. Wee gaue them more, two Sultanies apiece to proceed vnto Ieruſalem. Here the Carauan diuided: not a ſmall part thereof taking the way that leadeth vnto Babylon. The next day wee alſo diſlodged: leauing the Iewes behind vs, who were there to celebrate their feſtiuall. The Captaine of the Carauan departed the night before, taking his way through the mountainous Countrey by Hebron: out of his deuotion to viſite the graues of the Patriarchs; a place of high eſteeme amongſt them, and much frequented in their pilgrimages. The ancient Citie (the ſeat of Dauid before he tooke Sion from the Iebuſites) is vtterly ruinated. Hard by there is a little Village, ſeated in the field of Mechpelah, where ſtandeth a goodly Temple, erected ouer the Caue of their buriall, by Helena the mother of Conſtantine; conuerted now into a Moſque. Wee paſt this day through the moſt pregnant and pleaſant valley that euer eye beheld. On the right hand a ridge of high Mountaines, (whereon ſtands Hebron:) on the left hand the Mediterranean Sea, bordered with continued hills, beſet with varietie of fruits: as they are for the moſt part of this dayes iourney. The Hebron.

Champaine betweene about twentie miles ouer full of flowry hils aſcending leaſurely, and not much ſurmounting their ranker valleys, with groues of Oliues, and other fruits diſperſedly adorned. Yet is this wealthy bottome (as are all the reſt) for the moſt part vninhabited, but onely for a few ſmall and contemptible Villages, poſſeſſed by barbarous Moores; who till no more then will ſerue to feed them: the Graſſe waſte-high, vnmowed, vneaten, and vſeleſly withering. Perhaps ſo deſolate in that infeſted by the often recourſe of Armies, or maſterfull Spaheis: who before they goe into the field (which is ſeldome vntill the latter end of harueſt, leſt they ſhould ſtarue themſelues by deſtroying of the Corne) are billited in theſe rich paſtures, for the benefit of their Horſes, lying in Tents beſides them; committing many outrages on the adioyning Townes and diſtreſſed paſſengers.

Pleaſant champaine.

Ten miles from Gaza, and neere vnto the Sea, ſtands Aſcalon, now a place of no note; more then that the Turke doth keepe there a Garriſon. Ten miles North of Aſcalon along the ſhoare ſtands Azotus: and eight miles beyond that Acharon, now places of no reckoning. About two of the Clocke wee pitched by Cane Sedoe; a ruinous thing, hard by a ſmall Village, and not a quarter of a mile from the Sea: the Carauan lying in deepe paſtures without controlment of the Villagers. The next day we departed two houres before Sun-riſe: deſcending into an ample valley, and from that into another; hauing diuers Orchards towards the Sea. The Countrey ſuch (but that without trees) as wee paſt through before. No part ſo barren, but would proue moſt profitable, if planted with Vines, and fruits; made more then probable, by thoſe that grow about Gaza. Paſſing through a ſpacious field of Oliues, about noone wee pitched on a little hill, lying Eaſt, and within a furlong of Rama, called Ramula by the Moores; which ſignifieth ſandy. It is ſeated in a plaine, on a little riſing of the earth, ſtretching North and South, built of free-ſtone, the ſtreets narrow, the houſes contemptible. Yet are there many goodly ruines, which teſtifie farre better building, eſpecially thoſe of the Chriſtian Churches. Here is a Monaſterie, much of it ſtanding; founded by Philip the good Duke of Burgundie, in that place where ſometimes ſtood the houſe of Nicodemus; built for the reliefe and ſafety of Pilgrims in their paſſage to Ieruſalem: and although quitted by the Friers, yet at this day ſeruing to that purpoſe, called Sion-houſe, and belonging to the Monaſterie of Mount Sion.

Aſcalon.

Cane Sedoe.

Ramula.

Sion houſe.

Ioppe was called the Port of Iury; the only one that it had. Then more conuenient then now: much of it choked with ſand, and much of it worne with the continual aſſaults of the waters. Of the City there is no part ſtanding, more then two litle Towers, wherein are certain harquebuſes acroſſe, for the ſafe-guard of the harbour. Vnder the cliffe, and opening to the Hauen are certaine ſpacious Caues, hewen into the rock: ſome vſed for Ware-houſes, and others for ſhelter The merchandizes here embarqued for Chriſtendome are only Cottens, gathered by certaine Frenchmen, who reſide at Rama in the houſe of Sion. The Weſterne Pilgrims doe for the moſt part arriue at this place, and are from hence conducted to Ieruſalem by Attala, a Greeke of Rama; and Drugaman to the Pater-guardian, paying ſeuen Sultanies a piece for his Mules, his labour, and diſcharge of Caphar. The like rate he hath for bringing them backe againe: a great expence to to poore Pilgrims for ſo ſmall a iourney; which muſt be payed although they accept not of his conduct. Yet by this meanes they doe paſſe ſecurely: hee being in fee with the Arabians that poſſeſſe the Mountaines. Now the Carauan did againe diuide, the Moores keeping on the way that leadeth to Damaſcus. Here wee ſhould haue payed two Dollars a piece for our heads to a Sheck of the Arabs. But the Sanziack of Gaza had ſent vnto him that it ſhould be remitted. He came vnto our Tent, and greedily fed on ſuch viands as we had ſet before him. A man of a tall ſtature, clothed he was in a Gambalocke of ſcarlet, buttoned vnder the chin with a boſſe of gold. He had not the patience to expect a preſent, but demanded one; wee gaue him a piece of Sugar, and a paire of Shooes, which he earneſtly enquired for, and cheerfully accepted. On the twentieth of March with the riſing Sunne wee departed. A ſmall remainder of that great Carauan; the Noſtraines (ſo name they the Chriſtians of the Eaſt *) that rode vpon Mules and Aſſes, being gone before. Amongſt whom were two Armenian Biſhops: who footed it moſt of the way, but when (alighting themſelues) they were mounted by ſome of their Nation. Before wee had gone farre we were ſtayed by the Arabs, vntill they had taken Caphar of the reſt. The Subaſſee of Rama beſides had two Medines vpon euery Camell. The day thus waſted did make vs miſdoubt that we ſhould not get that night vnto Ieruſalem: but the miſſing of our way (for the Arabs had left vs contrarie to their cuſtome) turned our feare to deſpaire. Some ſixe miles beyond Rama the hills grew bigger and bigger, mixed with fruitfull valleyes. About two miles further wee aſcended the higher Mountaines: paying by the way two Medines a head; but at ſeuerall places. The paſſage exceeding difficult; ſtreightned with wood, and as it were paued with broken rockes: which by reaſon of the raine then falling, became no leſſe dangerous to our Camels. At length wee came to a ſmall Village, where we firſt diſcouered our erring. Some counſelled to ſtay, others to proceed; both dangerous alike, the way vnknowne, vnſafe, the inhabitants theeues, as are all the Arabians. Whileſt we thus debated, the night ſtole vpon vs, and bereft vs of the election. The much raine enforced vs to flee for ſhelter vnto a ruinous Chappell, where diſtruſt ſet the watch, which we carefully kept till the morning. Betimes

Ioppe.

Charges of Pilgrims.

So call they their Leaders for the moſt part Santons.

A kind of riding Gowne.

*Perhaps becauſe moſt of them are Neſtorians.

Partridges.

Ieruſalem.

Monaſterie of Franciſcans.

wee forſooke the Village, deſcending the way wee had aſcended, guided by the chiefe of the Towne, who for a ſumme of money had vndertaken our conduct to the top of the Mountaines, hauing hired Aſſes for our more expedition: yet others croſſing vs as wee returned along the Valley, with ſhewes of violence, would haue extorted more money. Our paſſage for fiue houres together lay through a narrow ſtreight of the Mountaines; much of our way no other then ſuch as ſeemed to haue beene worne by the winters torrent. We paſt by a ruinous Fort, ſeated neere a Fountaine, ſufficient when it ſtood, to haue made good that paſſage. In the way wee ſprang a number of Partridges; others on each ſide running on the Rocks; like in colour vnto thoſe of Chios. Aſcending by little and little, at length wee attained to the top, which ouertopt and ſurueyed all the Mountaynes that wee had left behinde vs. From hence to Ieruſalem the way is indifferent euen. On each ſide round Hils, with ruines on their tops, and Valleyes, ſuch as are figured in the moſt beautifull Land-skips. The ſoyle, though ſtonie, not altogether barren, producing both Corne and Oliues about inhabited places. Approaching the North Gate of the Citie, called in times paſt the Gate of Ephraim, and now of Damaſcus; we onely of all the reſt were not permitted to enter. When compaſſing the wall vnto that of the Weſt, commanded by the Caſtle, we were met by two Franciſcan Friers, who ſaluted and conueyed vs to their Couent. Wee entred, as afore-ſaid, at the weſt Gate, called the Gate of Ioppa. On the right hand, and adioyning to the Wall, there ſtandeth a ſmall ill-fortified Caſtle: yet the onely Fort that belongeth to the Citie; weakely guarded, and not ouer-well ſtored with Munition; built by the Piſans at ſuch time as the Chriſtians inhabited this Citie. Turning on the left hand, and aſcending a part of Mount Gihon, we came to the Monaſterie of the Franciſcans (being now in number betweene thirtie and fortie) who in the yeere 1561. thruſt out of that which they had on Mount Sion, had this place aſſigned them. But of the Founders name I am ignorant: nor is hee much wronged by being forgotten: ſince ſo meane a building can giue no fame to the builder.

The Pater-guardian with due complement entertained vs: a reuerent old man, of a voluble tongue, and winning behauiour. His name Gaudentius; his Nation, Italy. Euery third yeere they are remoued; and a Succeſſor elected by the Pope, from whom they haue a part of their exhibition: the reſt from the Spaniard and Florentine. Nor is it a little that they get by the reſort of the Pilgrims of Chriſtendome. For all that come muſt repaire to their Couent; otherwiſe they ſhall be accuſed for Spies, and ſuffer much trouble: the Romane Catholikes rewarding them out of deuotion, and the reſt out of curteſie: which, if ſhort of their expectations, they will repine at as loſers. Wee foure, for eight dayes entertainment beſtowed little leſſe amongſt them then an hundred Dollers; and yet they told vs wee had hardly payed for what wee had eaten. A coſtly rate for a monaſticall diet. But the Turke is much more fierce vpon them: awayting all aduantages that may giue a colour to extortion. A little before our comming, a Turke being denyed by a Friar of ſome trifle that hee requeſted, gaue himſelfe ſuch a blow vpon the Noſe that the bloud guſhed forth: and preſently exclayming as if beaten by the other, complayned to the Sanziacke; for which Auania they were compelled to part with eight hundred Dollers. Brought much behind hand, as they alledge, with ſuch loſſes, they vſe oft to rehearſe them as motiues vnto charitie.

Turks knauery.

Knights of the Sepulchre.

Ioannes Cotouicus Doctor of both Lawes, was made one of thoſe Knigh. then whom I know not any more exact and copious in deſcription of theſe parts, both in diſcourſe and pictures: his Booke printed at Antwerp, A. 1619. Our Authors pictures alſo would much haue illuſtrated theſe Relations: but I remit the more curious to his owne Booke, too long for our purpoſe, who intend longer iourneyes.

The Couent hath alſo another in-come by the Knights of the Sepulchre; who pay thirtie Sultanies apiece to the Pater-guardian: who by vertue of his Patent doth giue them that dignitie. The Kings of France were Soueraignes of that Order, by whom it was inſtituted in the yeere 1099. who granted them diuers Immunities. They bare fiue Croſſes Gules, in forme of that which is at this day called the Ieruſalem Croſſe; repreſenting thereby the fiue wounds that violated the Bodie of our Sauiour. None were to bee admitted if of a defamed life, or not of the Catholike Religion. They are to bee Gentlemen of Bloud, and of ſufficient meanes to maintayne a port agreeable to that calling, without the exerciſe of Mechanicall Sciences. But now they will except againſt none that bring money, inſomuch that at our being there they admitted of a Romane, by Trade an Apothecarie, late dwelling in Aleppo. They take the Sacrament to heare euery day a Maſſe, if they may conueniently. If warres bee commenced againſt the Infidels, to ſerue here in perſon, or to ſend other in their ſteads no leſſe ſeruiceable: To oppugne the Perſecutors of the Church, to ſhunne vniuſt Warres, diſhoneſt Gaine, and priuate Duells: Laſtly, to bee Reconcilers of diſſentions, to aduance the common good, to defend the Widdow and Orphane, to refrayne from Swearing, Periurie, Blaſphemie, Rapine, Vſurie, Sacriledge, Murder, and Drunkenneſſe: to auoide ſuſpected Places, the companie of infamous Perſons; to liue chaſtly, irreproueably, and in Word and Deed to ſhew themſelues worthy of ſuch a Dignitie. This Oath taken, the Pater-guardian layeth his hand vpon his head, as hee kneeleth before the entrance of the Tombe: bidding him to bee Loyall, Valiant, Vertuous, and an vndaunted Souldier of Chriſt and that holy Sepulchre. Then giues hee him the Spurs, which hee puts on his heeles; and after that a Sword (the ſame, as they ſay, which was Godfreyes of Bullein) and bids him vſe it in defence of the Church, and himſelfe; and to the confuſion of Infidels: ſheathing it againe, he girts himſelfe therewith. Who then ariſing, and forth-with kneeling cloſe to the Sepulcher, enclining his head vpon the ſame; he is created by receiuing three ſtrokes on the ſhoulder, and by ſaying thrice, I ordaine thee a Knight of the holy Sepulcher of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, in the Name of the Father, the Sonne, and the Holy Ghoſt; then kiſſes he him, and puts about his necke a chaine of Gold, whereat hangeth a Ieruſalem Croſſe: who ariſing, kiſſes the Sepulcher, and reſtoring the aforeſaid Ornaments, departeth.

From the top of this Monaſterie, ſuruey you may the moſt part of this Citie: whereof much lies waſte; the old buildings (except ſome few) all ruined, the new contemptible. None exceed two ſtories: the vnder no better then Vaults; the vpper arched aboue, and ſtanding vpon Arches, being well confirmed againſt fire, as hauing through out no combuſtible matter: the Roofes flat, and couered with Plaiſter. Inhabited it is by Chriſtians out of their deuotion; and by Turks, for the benefite receiued by Chriſtians, otherwiſe perhaps it would be generally abandoned.

Mount Caluary.

After a little refreſhment, the ſame day we came (which was vpon Maundie-Thurſday) we went vnto the Temple of the Sepulcher, euery one carrying with him his Pillow and Carpet. The way from the Monaſterie continues in a long deſcent, (the Eaſt ſide of Gihon) and then a little aſcendeth to Mount Caluary. Mount Caluarie a rocky hill, neither high nor ample, was once a place of publicke execution: then without, but now wel-nigh within the heart of the Citie, whereupon the Emperour Adrian erected a Fane vnto Venus; but the vertuous Helena (of whom our Countrey may iuſtly glorie) ouerthrew that receptacle of Paganiſme, and built in the roome thereof this magnificent Temple, which not onely poſſeſſeth the Mount, but the Garden below, together with a part of the Valley of Carcaſſes, (ſo called, in that they threw thereinto the bodies of the executed) which lay betweene Mount Caluary, and the Wall of the old Citie. The Frontiſpice oppoſing the South, of an excellent ſtructure; hauing two ioyning doores; the one now walled vp, ſupported with Columnes of Marble, ouer which a tranſome ingrauen with Hiſtoricall figures; the Walls and Arches creſted, and garniſhed with Floritry. On the left hand there ſtandeth a Tower, now ſomething ruined, (once, as ſome ſay, a Steeple, and depriued by Saladine, of Bels vnſufferable to the Mahometans:) on the right hand, by certaine ſteps a little Chappell is aſcended, coupled aboue, and ſuſtained at the corners with pillars of Marble: below through a Wall, which bounds the Eaſt ſide of the Court, a paire of ſtaires doe mount to the top of the Rocke, (yet no Rocke euident) where is a little Chappell built (as they ſay) in the place where Abraham would haue ſacrificed Iſaac; of much deuotion, and kept by the Prieſt of the Abiſſines. This ioyneth to the top of the Temple, leuell, and (if I forgot not) floored with plaiſter. Out of the Temple there ariſe two ample coupulos: that next the Eaſt (couering the Eaſt end and Iles of the Chancell) to bee aſcended by ſteps on the out-ſide: the other, ouer the Church of the Sepulcher, being open in the middle. O * who can without ſorrow, without indignation behold the enemies of Chriſt to be the Lords of his Sepulcher! Who at feaſtiuall times ſit mounted vnder a Canopie, to gather Money of ſuch as doe enter: the profits ariſing thereof, being farmed at eight thouſand Sultanies. Each Franke payes foureteene, (except he be of ſome religious Order, who then of what Sect ſoeuer, is exempted from payments) wherein is included the Impoſt due at the gate of the Citie; but the Chriſtians that be ſubiect to the Turke, doe pay but a trifle in reſpect thereof. At other times the doore is ſealed with the Seale of the Sanziacke, and not opened without his direction: whereat there hangs ſeuen Cords, which by the Bels that they ring, giue notice to the ſeuen ſeuerall Sects of Chriſtians (who liue within the Temple continually) of ſuch as would ſpeake with them, which they doe through a little Wicket, and thereat receiue the prouiſion that is brought them. Now to make the foundation euen in a place ſo vneuen, much of the Rocke hath beene hewne away, and parts too low, ſupplyed with mightie Arches: ſo that thoſe naturall formes are vtterly deformed, which would haue better ſatisfied the beholder, and too much regard hath made them leſſe regardable.

The roofe of the Temple is of a high pitch, curiouſly arched, and ſupported with great pillars of Marble: the out Iles gallered aboue; the vniuerſall Fabricke ſtately and ſumptuous. After we had diſpoſed of our luggage in a part of the North-gallery, belonging to the Latines, the Confeſſor offered to ſhew vs the holy and obſeruable places of the Temple: which wee gladly accepted of; he demaunding firſt if deuotion or curioſitie had poſſeſt vs with that deſire. So that for omitting Pater Noſters, and Aue Maries, wee loſt many yeeres Indulgences, which euery place doth plentifully affoord to ſuch as affect them, and contented our ſelues with an Hiſtoricall Relation. Which I will not declare in order as ſhewne, but take them as they lye from the firſt entrance of the Temple. Right againſt the doore, in the midſt of the South Ile, and leuell

Let his friends enioy him, and Heauen where is his glory: as for his Sepulcher, He is riſen, he is not there. And what then haue his enemies, but what himſelfe would not hold, and which could not hold him? Which it hath pleaſed him to permit to them, that his followers might follow him to heauen in their affections and conuerſation, Col. 3. Phil. 3. their hearts being both the place of his Sepulcher, where by vertue of his death, our Old Man mortified & of his Reſurrection, whereby we liue not, but he liues in vs. Yet is this complaint iuſt, becauſe Iniuſtice and ſuperſtitions of Chriſtians haue made Infidels, Lords of that holy place. Pilgrimages are good, when we are thereby made Pilgrimes from the world and our ſelues. Thy ſelfe is the holyeſt place thou canſt viſit, if with faith and repentance made the Lords Temple, which the Iewiſh ſignified; and to which the Fathers did, and wiſe men ſtill doe viſite theſe places, by folly peruerted to ſuperſtition (as in the former Diſcourſe is obſerued) when Place hath more place then Grace, or religious immitation of thoſe whoſe holineſſe had made the places eſteemed holy.

Place of anointing Chriſts body.

with the pauement, there lyeth a white Marble in forme of a Graues-ſtone, enuironed with a raile of Braſſe, about a foote high: the place (as they ſay) where Ioſeph of Aramathia, and Nicodemus, anointed the body of our Sauiour with ſweete ointments. This they kiſſe, and kneele to, rubbing thereupon their Crucifixes, Beades, and Handkerchiefes; yea, whole webs of Linnen, which they carrie into farre Countries, and preſerue the ſame for their ſhrouding ſheetes. Ouer this there hang ſeuen Lamps, which burne continually. Againſt the Eaſt end of the ſtone, there is a little Chappell. Neere the entrance on the right hand, ſtands the Sepulcher of Godfrey of Bullein: with a Latine Epitaph, thus Engliſhed.

Hic iacet inclitus Godefridus de Buglion qui totam iſtam terram acquiſiuit cultui Chriſtiano, cuius anima requieſcat in pace, Amen.

Here lieth the renowned Godfrey of Bullein, who won all this Land to the worſhip of Chriſt. Reſt may his ſoule in peace, Amen.

On the left hand ſtands his Brother Baldwins, with this inſcription.

Rex Balwinus, Iudas altar Machabeus,
Spes Patriæ, vigor Eccleſiæ, virtus vtriuſque:
Quem formidabant, cui dona tributa ferebant,
Cedar, Ægypti Dan, ac homicida Damaſcus:
Proh dolor! in modico clauditur hoc tumulo.

Baldwine the King, another Macabie,
The Churches, Countries, ſtrength, hope, both their glory;
Whom Cedar, Ægypts Dan, Damaſcus fraught
With Homicides, both fear'd, and tribute brought;
O griefe! Within this little Tombe doth lie.

Legend of Adam.

Chappels of Mount Caluary.

Place of the Paſſion.

Rocke rent.

Georgians.

Place of nayling.

The firſt and ſecond Kings of Ieruſalem. The farre end of this Chappell, called the Chappell of Saint Iohn, (and of the Anointing, by reaſon of the ſtone which it neighboureth) is confined with the foote of Caluarie, where on the left ſide of the Altar there is a cleft in the Rocke: in which, they ſay, that the head of Adam was found, as they will haue it, there buried, (others ſay in Hebron) that his bones might bee ſprinkled with the reall and precious bloud of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt; which he knew ſhould bee ſhed in that holy place, by a propheticall fore-knowledge. Ouer this are the Chappels of Mount Caluarie: Aſcended on the North ſide thereof by twentie ſteppes; the higheſt hewne out of the Rocke, as is a part of the paſſage, obſcure, and extraordinarily narrow. The floore of the firſt Chappell, is checkered with diuers coloured Marbles, not to bee trod vpon by feete that are ſhod. At the Eaſt end vnder a large arched concaue of the Wall, is the place whereon our Sauiour did ſuffer, and may aſſuredly be thought the ſame: and if one place bee more holy then another reputed of, in the world the moſt venerable. Hee is void of ſence that ſees, beleeues, and is not then confounded with his Paſſions. The Rocke there ariſeth halfe a yard higher then the pauement, leuell aboue in forme of an Altar, ten foote long, and ſixe foote broad, flagged with white Marble, as is the Arch and Wall that adioyneth. In the midſt is the place wherein the Croſſe did ſtand, lined with Siluer, Gilt, and Imboſſed. This they creepe to, proſtrate themſelues thereon, kiſſe, ſalute, and ſuch as vſe them, ſanctifie therein their Beades and Crucifixes. On either ſide there ſtandeth a Croſſe; that on the right ſide, in the place where the good Theefe was crucified; and that on the left, where the bad, diuided from Chriſt by the rent of the Rocke, (a figure of his ſpirituall ſeparation) which cloue aſunder in the houre of the Paſſion. The in-ſides doe teſtifie that Art had no hand therein: each ſide to other being anſwerably rugged, and there where vnacceſſable to the Worke-man. That before ſpoken of, in the Chappell below is a part of this, which reacheth (as they ſay) to the Centre. This place belongeth to the Georgians, whoſe Prieſts are poore, and accept of Almes. No other Nation ſay Maſſe on that Altar: ouer which there hang fortie ſixe Lamps, which burne continually. On the ſelfe-ſame floore, of the ſelfe-ſame forme is that other Chappell, belonging to the Latines, diuided onely by a Curtaine, and entred through the former. In the midſt of the pauement is a ſquare, inchaced with ſtones of different colours, where Chriſt, as they ſay, was nailed vpon the Croſſe. This place is too holy to be trod vpon. They weare the hard ſtones with their ſoft knees, and heate them with their feruent kiſſes; proſtrating themſelues, and tumbling vp and downe with ſuch an ouer-actiue zeale, that a faire Greeke Virgine, ere aware, one morning ſhewed more then intended, whom the Frier that helpt the Prieſt to ſay Maſſe ſo tooke at the bound, that it ecchoed againe, and diſturbed the mournefull ſacrifice with a mirthfull clamor; the poore Maid departed with great indignation. Ouer the Altar which is finely ſet forth, three and thirtie Lampes are maintined. Theſe two Chappels looking into the Temple, are all that poſſeſſe the ſummit of the Rocke, excepting that of the Immolation of Iſaac without, and ſpoken of before, and where they keepe the Altar of Melchiſedech. Oppoſite to the doore of the Temple, adioyning to the ſide of the Channell, are certaine Marble Sepulchers, without Titles or Epitaphs. Some twentie paces directly Weſt from Mount Caluarie, and on that ſide that adioyneth to the Tower, a round white Marble, leuell with the pauement, retaineth the memorie (as they ſay) of that place, where the bleſſed Virgine ſtood, and the Diſciple whom Chriſt loued, when from the Croſſe hee commended each to other, ouer which there burneth a Lampe. A little on the right hand of this, and towards the Weſt, you paſſe betweene certaine pillars into that part of the Church, which is called, the Temple of the Sepulcher.

Chappels of ſeuerall Sects.

The Altar.

the Temple of the Reſurrection, and of the holy Sepulcher. A ſtately, round, cloyſtered below, and aboue: and ſupported with great ſquare pillars, flagged heretofore with white Marble; but now in many places depriued thereof by the ſacrilegious Infidels. Much of the neather Cloyſter is diuided into ſundry Chappels belonging vnto ſeuerall Nations and Sects, where they exerciſe the rites of their ſeuerall Religions. The firſt, on the left hand to the Abiſſines; the next to the Iacobites; the third, to the Copties, (cloſe to which, on the left ſide of another, there is a Caue hewne out of the Rocke, with a narrow entrance, the Sepulcher of Ioſeph of Aramathia;) the fourth, to the Georgians; and the fifth, to the Maronites. The Chappell of the Armenians poſſeſſeth a great part of the Gallery aboue, and the reſt lying towards the North, belongeth to the Latines, though not employed to religious vſes. Now betweene the top of the vpper Gallerie, and extreme of the vpright Wall, in ſeuerall concaues, are Pictures of diuers of the Saints in Moſaique work, full faced, and vnheightned with ſhaddowes according to the Grecian painting, but much defaced by malice, or continuance. In the midſt on the South ſide, is the Emperour Conſtantines, oppoſite to his Mothers, the memorable Foundreſſe. This Round is couered with a Cupolo, ſuſtained with Rafters of Cedar, all of one piece, open in the midſt like the Pantheon at Rome, whereat it receiueth the light that it hath, and that as much as ſufficeth. Iuſt in the midſt, and in the view of heauen, ſtands the glorified Sepulcher, a hundred and eight feet diſtant from Mount Caluarie; the naturall Rocke ſurmounting the ſole of the Temple, abated by Art, and hewne into the forme of a Chappell, more long then broad, and ending in a Semi-circle, all flagged ouer with white Marble. The hinder part being ſomething more eminent then the other, is ſurrounded with ten ſmall pillars adioyning to the Wall, and ſuſtaining the Corniſh. On the top (which is flat) and in the midſt thereof a little Cupolo couered with Lead, is erected vpon ſixe double, but ſmall Corinthian Columnes of poliſhed Porphyre. The other part being lower then this by the height of the Corniſh, ſmooth aboue, and not ſo garniſhed on the ſides, ſeruing as a Lobby or Portico to the former, is entred at the Eaſt end, (hauing before the doore a long pauement, erected ſomething aboue the floore of the Church included betweene two white Marble walls, not paſt two foot high) conſiſting of the ſelfe-ſame Rocke, doth containe within a Concaue about three yards ſquare, the roofe hewne compaſſe, all flagged throughout with white Marble. In the midſt of the floore there is a ſtone about a foot high, and a foot and a halfe ſquare; whereon, they ſay, that the Angell ſate, who told the two Maries that our Sauior was riſen. But Saint Matthew ſaith, he ſate vpon the great ſtone, which he had rolled from the mouth of the Sepulcher; and which, it is ſaid, the Empreſſe cauſed to bee conueyed to the Church of Saint Sauiour, ſtanding where once ſtood the Palace of Caiphas. Out of this a paſſage through the midſt of the Rocke, exceeding not three feet in height, and two in breadth, hauing a doore of gray ſtone, with hinges of the ſame, vndiuided from the naturall, affoordeth a way to creepe through into a ſecond Concaue, about eight foote ſquare, and as much in height, with a compaſt roofe of the ſolid Rocke, but lined for the moſt part with white Marble. On the North-ſide a Tombe of the ſame, which poſſeſſeth one halfe of the roome, a yard in height, and made in the forme of an Altar: inſomuch, as not aboue three can abide there at once; the place no larger then affoordeth a libertie for kneeling. It is ſaid, that long after the Reſurrection, the Tombe remained in that forme, wherein it was when our Sauiour lay there; when at length, by reaſon of the deuouter Pilgrimes, who continually bore away little peeces thereof, (Relikes whereunto they attributed miraculous effects) it was incloſed within a Grate of Iron. But a ſecond inconueniency which proceeded from the tapers, haire, & other offerings throwne in by Votaries, which defiled the Monument, procured the pious Helena to incloſe the ſame within this Marble Altar, which now belongeth to the Latines: whereon they onely ſay Maſſe, yet free for other Chriſtians to exerciſe their priuate deuotions; being well ſet forth, and hauing on the farre ſide an Anticke and excellent Picture, demonſtrating the Reſurrection. Ouer it, perpetually burneth a number of Lamps, which haue ſulled the roofe like the in-ſide of a Chimney, and yeelds vnto the roome an immoderate feruour. Thouſands of Chriſtians performe their vowes, and offer their teares here yearly, with all the expreſſions of ſorrow, humilitie, affection, and penitence. It is a frozen zeale that will not bee warmed with the ſight thereof. And, ô that I could retaine the effects that it wrought with an vnfainting perſeuerance! who then did dictate this Hymne to my Redeemer:

Sauiour of Mankind, Man, Emmanuel:
Who ſin-leſſe dyed for ſinne, who vanquiſht Hell.
The firſt fruits of the graue. Whoſe life did giue
Light to our darkneſſe: in whoſe death we liue.
O ſtrengthen thou my Faith; correct my will,
That mine may thine obey: protect me ſtill.
So that the latter Death may not deuoure
My Soule ſeal'd with thy Seale. So in the houre
When thou whoſe Bodie ſanctifide this Tombe,
Vniuſtly iudg'd, a glorious Iudge ſhalt come
To iudge the World with Iuſtice; by that ſigne
I may be knowne, and entertaind for thine.

Chappell of the Apparition

Without, and to the Weſt end of this Chappell, another very ſmall one adioyneth, vſed in common by the Ægyptians and Æthiopians. Now on the left hand as you paſſe vnto the Chappell of the Apparition, there are two round ſtones of white Marble in the floore: that next the Sepulcher couering the place where our Sauiour, and the other where Mary Magdalen ſtood (as they ſay)

ſay) when he appeared vnto her. On the North-ſide, and without the limits of the Temple, ſtands the Chappell of the Apparition: ſo called (as they ſay) for that Chriſt in that place did ſhew himſelfe to his ſorrowfull Mother, and comforted her, pierced with anguiſh for his cruell death, and ignominious ſufferings. This belongeth to the Latines, which ſerueth them alſo for a Veſterie; from whence they proceed vnto their pompous Proceſſions. On the Eaſt-ſide there ſtands three Altars, that in the midſt in a Cloſet by it ſelfe, dedicated to God and our Lady. That on the right hand is called the Altar of the holy Croſſe, whereof a great part was there (as they ſay) reſerued.

Pillar whereto Chriſt was bound.

But when Sultan Solyman impriſoned the Friers of Mount Sion, (whom hee kept in durance for the ſpace of foure yeares) the Armenians ſtole it from thence, and carryed it to Sabaſtia, their principall Citie. That on the left hand in the corner, and neere vnto the entrance, is called the Altar of the Scourging; behind which there is a piece of a Pillar, of that (as they ſay) whereunto our Sauiour was bound when they ſcourged him. This ſtood on Mount Sion, and there ſupported the Portico to a Church in the dayes of Saint Ierome; when broken by the Saracens, the pieces were recollected, and this part here placed by the Chriſtians. The reſt was diſtributed by Paul the Fourth, vnto the Emperour Ferdinand, Philip King of Spaine, and the Signorie of Venice; in honour whereof they celebrate the ſixt of Aprill. It is (as I remember) about three foot high, of a duskie black-veind Marble, ſpotted here and there with Red; which they affirme to be the markes of his bloud wherewith it was beſprinkled. Before it there is a grate of Iron, inſomuch as not to be toucht but by the mediation of a ſticke prepared for the purpoſe; being buttened at the end with Leather, in manner of a Foyle, by which they conuey their kiſſes, and bleſſe their lips with the touch of that which hath touched the Relike. Through the aforeſaid Veſtery, a paſſage leades into certaine Roomes, heretofore a part of the Colledge of the Knight-Templers: by a generall Councell held in Vienna, in the yeare 1312. this Order was extinguiſht, and their Lands for the moſt part conferred vpon the Knight-Hoſpitallers of Saint Iohns of Ieruſalem, of whom wee ſhall ſpeake when wee come vnto Malta. The Temples in London belonged vnto them, wherein the Church (built round in imitation of this) diuers of their Statues are to be ſeene, and the poſiture vſed in their Burials. Here the Franciſcans entertayned vs during our abode in the Temple. Returning againe through the Chappel of the Apparition, a little on the left hand there is a concaue in the wall, no bigger then to contayne two perſons beſides the Altar; which is called the Chappell of the Angels: belonging alſo to the Latines, but lent by them to the deſpiſed Neſtorians, during the celebration of Eaſter. Winding with the wall along the outward North-alley of the Chancell, at the farre end thereof there is a Grot hewne out of the Rocke, where they ſay, that the Iewes impriſoned our Sauiour, during the time that they were a prouiding things neceſſary for his crucifying. This is kept by the Georgians; without other ornament then an vngarniſhed Altar: ouer which hangeth one onely Lampe, which rendreth a dimme light to the Priſon. Vntreading a good part of the fore-ſaid Alley, we entred the Ile (there but diſtinguiſhed by Pillars) which bordes on the North of the Chancell: and turning on the left hand, where it beginnes to compaſſe with the Eaſt end thereof, wee paſſed by a Chappell contayning an Altar, but of no regard: wherein they ſay, the Title was preſerued, which was hung ouer the head of our Sauiour: now ſhewne at Rome in the Church of the holy Croſſe of Ieruſalem. Next to this in the ſame wall, and midſt of the Semi-circle, there is another, the place where they ſay, the Souldiers caſt lots for his garments, of which the Armenians haue the cuſtodie. A little beyond you are to deſcend a paire of large ſtaires of thirtie ſteps, part of the paſſage hewne out of the Rocke of Caluary, which leadeth into a Lobby, the roofe ſupported with foure maſſie pillars of white Marble, which are euer moiſt through the darkneſſe of the place (being vnder ground) and ſometimes dropping, are ſaid to weepe for the ſorrowfull paſſion and death of Chriſt. At the farre end, containing more then halfe of the roome, is the Chappell of Saint Helena: hauing two great Altars erected by Chriſtian Princes in her honour. On the South thereof ſtandeth a ſeate of ſtone, ouer-looking a paire of ſtaires which deſcend into the place of the Inuention of the Croſſe: where, they ſay, that ſhe ſate whilſt the Souldiers remoued the rubbidge that had couered it. Theſe ſtaires (eleuen in number) conduct into an obſcure vault, a part of the Valley of Carcaſſes. There threw they our Sauiours Croſſe, and couered it with the filth of the Citie, when after three hundred yeares, the Empreſſe Helena trauelling vnto Ieruſalem, in the extremitie of her age, to behold thoſe places which Chriſt had ſanctified with his corporall preſence, threatned torture and death to certaine of the principall Iewes, if they would not reueale where their Anceſtours had hid it. At laſt, forſooth, they wreſted the truth from an old old Iew, one Iudas, firſt almoſt famiſhed, who brought them to this place. Where after he had petitioned Heauen for the diſcouery; the earth trembled, and breathed from her Cranies Aromaticke odours. By which miracle confirmed, the Empreſſe cauſed the rubbidge to be remoued, where they found three croſſes, and hard by, the ſuperſcription. But when not able to diſtinguiſh the right from the other, they ſay that Macarius, then Biſhop of Ieruſalem, repairing together with the Empreſſe vnto the houſe of a noble woman of this Citie, vncurably diſeaſed, did with the touch of the true

Templers.

Chappell of the Angels.

Chappell of S. Helena.

Croſſe reſtore her to health. At ſight whereof the Iew became a Chriſtian, and was called therevpon Quiriacus. Being after Biſhop of Ieruſalem, in the Reigne of Iulian the Apoſtata, hee was crowned with Martyrdome. At which times it was decreed, that no Malefactor ſhould thenceforth ſuffer on the Croſſe; and that the third of May, ſhould be for euer celebrated in memoriall of that Inuention. In this Vault are two Altars, the one where the Croſſe of Chriſt was found, and the other where the other. Aſcending againe by the aforeſaid ſtaire into the Temple, on the left hand betweene the entrance, and Mount Caluarie, there is a little Roome which is called the Chappell of the Deriſion. Where vnder the Altar is reſerued a part (as they ſay) of that Pillar to which Chriſt was bound, when Pilates Seruants crowned him with Thornes, clothed in an old Purple Robe, placing a Reed in his hand, in ſtead of a Scepter, and crying, Haile King of the Iewes: with other opprobrious Taunts, and Reuilings. This is kept by Abiſſens. Now nothing remayneth to ſpeak of but the Quire, not differing from thoſe in our Cathedrall Churches. The Weſt end openeth vpon the Sepulcher: the Eaſt ending in a ſemicircle, together with the Iles, is couered with a high Cupolo: on each ſide ſtand oppoſite doores which open into the North & South Alleyes; all ioyntly called the Temple of Golgotha. A partition at the vpper end excludeth the halfe round (behind which their high Altar) which riſeth in the manner of a loftie Screene, all richly gilded (as moſt of the ſides of the Chancel) and adorned with the Pictures of the Saints in Antike habits: flat and full faced, according to the manner of the Grecians, to whom this place is aſſigned. Towards the Weſt end from each ſide equally diſtant there is a little Pit in the Pauement, which (they ſay) is the Nauell of the World, and endeauour to confirme it with that ſaying of the Scripture, God wrought his Saluation in the midſt of the Earth: which they fill with holy Water. The vniuerſall Fabricke, maintayned by the Greeke Emperors during their Soueraigntie, and then by the Chriſtian Kings of Ieruſalem, hath ſince beene repayred in the ſeuerall parts by their particular Owners. The whole of ſo ſtrong a conſtitution, as rather decayed in beautie then ſubſtance.

Inuention of the Croſſe.

Nauell of the World: if you liſt to beleeue.

Hauing viſited theſe places (which beſtow their ſeuerall Indulgences, and are honoured with particular Oraiſons) after Eeuen-ſong, and Proceſſion, the Pater-guardian putting off his Pontificall Habit, clothed in a long Veſt of Linnen girt cloſe vnto him, firſt waſhed the feet of his fellow Friers, and then of the Pilgrimes: which dryed by others hee kiſſed, with all outward ſhew of humilitie. The next day, being Good-friday, amongſt other Solemnities, they carried the Image of Chriſt on a ſheete ſupported by the foure corners, in Proceſſion, with Banners of the Paſſion: firſt, to the place where he was impriſoned, then in order to the other, performing at each, their appointed Deuotions. Laying it where they ſay he was fixed on the Croſſe, the Frier Preacher made ouer it a ſhort and paſſionate Oration: who acted his part ſo well, that hee begot teares in others with his owne; and taught them how to be ſorrowfull. At length they brought it to the to place where they ſay, he was imbalmed: where the Pater-guardian anointed the Image with ſweet Oyles, and ſtrewed it with Aromaticke Powders, and from thence conueyed it to the Sepulcher. At night the Lights put out, and company remoued, they whipped themſelues in their Chappell of Mount Caluarie. On Saturday their other Solemnities performed, they carryed the Croſſe in Proceſſion, with the Banners of the Buriall, to the afore-ſaid Chappell: creeping to it, kiſſing, and lying groueling ouer it. On Eaſter day they ſaid ſolemne ſeruice before the doore of the Sepulcher. The whole Chappel couered on the out ſide with cloth of Tiſſue, the gift (as appeareth by the Armes embroydered thereon) of the Florentine. In this they ſhewed the varietie of their Wardrobe, and concluded with a Triumphant Proceſſion, bearing about the Banners of the Reſurrection. Thoſe Ceremonies that are not locall, I willingly omit. At noone wee departed to the Monaſterie, hauing laine on the hard ſtones for three nights together, and fared as hardly.

Waſhing of feet.

Good-friday Ceremonies with an Image.

The other Chriſtians (excepting ſuch as inhahit within, of each ſort a few, and that of the Clergie) entred not vntill Good-friday. Viz. Grecians, Armenians, Copties, Abiſſines, Iacobites, Georgians, Maronites, and Neſtorians.

Of theſe reade before Vitriacus, ſup. c. 6. §. 5.

The Abiſſens on the Paſſion Weeke forbeare to ſay Maſſe, putting on mournfull Garments, and countenances ſutable. They vſe no Extreme vnction, but carrie the dead to the Graue, with the Croſſe, the Cenſer, and holy Water, and ſay Seruice ouer them. To conclude, they ioyne with the Copties for the moſt part in ſubſtance of Religion, and in Ceremony; one Prieſt here ſeruing both: an Æthiopian, poore, and accompanyed with few of his Nation; who fantaſtically clad, doth dance in their Proceſſions with a skipping motion, and diſtortion of his bodie, not vnlike to our Antickes. To which their Muſicke is anſwerable; the Inſtruments no other then Snappers, Gingles, and round-bottomd Drummes, borne vpon the backe of one, and beaten vpon by the followers.

The Iacobites had two Patriarkes; one reſident in the Mountaine Tur, the other in the Monaſterie of Gifran, neere vnto the Citie of Mordin, ſeated (they ſay) on ſo high a Mountayne that no Bird flyeth ouer it. But now they haue but one Patriarke, and that hee of Gifran; alwayes a Monke of the Order of Saint Anthonie, and named Ignatius; ſtiling himſelfe the Patriarke of Antioch; who for the more conueniencie is remooued to Carmit. They haue a Biſhop ſtill reſiding in Ieruſalem, of which the Patriarke is alſo a Iacobite.

The Georgians differ not much from the Grecians in their opinions: not called (as ſome write) of Saint George their ſelected Patrone, but of their Countrey, ſo named long before the time wherein hee is ſuppoſed to haue liued; lying betweene Colchos, Caucaſus, the Caſpian Sea, and Armedia; heretofore Iberia, and Albania. A warlike people, infeſted on both ſides with the Turkiſh and Perſian Inſolencies. They haue a Metropolitan of their owne; ſome ſay, the ſame that is reſident in Mount Sina. They ſay, that they marrie within prohibited degrees, they are diuided into eighteene Biſhopprickes; and are not here to be diſtinguiſhed from the Sorians, nor they from them, being almoſt of one Religion: and called Melchites, heretofore of their Aduerſaries, which ſignifieth a King in the Syrian Tongue; for that they would not embrace the Hereſies of Eutyches and Dioſcorus, but obeyed the Edict of the Emperour, and Councell of Chalcedon. Their Patriarke is the true Patriarke of Antioch, who abides in Damaſco, for that Antioch lyes now wel-nigh deſolate. Their Biſhop is here poore, ſo are his ornaments; in their Proceſſions, for State, or in regard of his age, ſupported on both ſides. Their Muſickleſſe Inſtruments are Fannes of Braſſe, hung about with Rings, which they gingle in ſtops according to their marchings.

* See of them, ſup.c.6.§.5. long ſince wonne by Aimerike.

The Maronites are Chriſtians inhabiting Mount Lybanus, ſo called of Marona, a Village adioyning, or of Maro their Abbot. They vſe the Chaldean Tongue, and Syrian Character in holy matters. A limme they weare of the Iacobites, and once ſubiect to the Patriarke of Antioch: but wonne to the Papacie * by Ioh. Baptiſta a Ieſuite, in the dayes of Gregorie the Thirteenth, who ſent them a Catechiſme printed at Rome in the Arabian Language: ſo that now they doe ioyne with the Latines. An ignorant people, eaſily drawne to any Religion, that could not giue a reaſon for their owne: poore in ſubſtance, and few in number.

Fire from Heauen See before in Fulcherius, ſup.c.2.

But the Greekes doe here ſurpaſſe all the reſt in multitude; and the Armenians in brauerie, who in ſtead of Muſicall Inſtruments, haue Sawcers of Braſſe (which they ſtrike againſt one another) ſet about with gingles. All differ in habit, and moſt in Rites; yet all conioyne (the Latines excepted) in celebration of that Impoſtury of fetching fire from the Sepulcher vpon Eaſter Eeue. The Turkes deride, yet throng to behold it: the Galleries of the round Temple beeing peſtered with Spectators. All the Lampes within the Church are at that time extinguiſhed; when they often compaſſing the Sepulcher in a ioynt Proceſſion, are fore-runne and followed by the people with Sauage clamours (the women whiſtling) and franticke behauiours, befitting better the ſolemnities of Bacchus; extending their bare armes with vnlighted Tapers. At length the chiefe Biſhops approach the doore of the Sepulcher; but the Æthiopian Prieſt firſt enters (without whom, they ſay, the Miracle will not fadge) who after a long ſtay (meane-while the people hurrying about like mad-men) returnes with the ſacred flame, ſuppoſed at his Prayers to burſt out of the Sepulcher; whereat confuſedly they fire their Lights: and ſnatching them one from another, ſtriue who ſhould firſt conuey it to their particular Chappels; thruſting the flame amongſt their clothes, and into their boſomes, (but ſwiftly with-drawing it) perſwading ſtrangers that it will not burne them: kindling therewith all their Lampes, vnlighted with other fire vntill that day twelue-moneth.

Neſtorians.

But I had almoſt forgot the Neſtorians, ſo called of Neſtorius, by birth a Germane, who liued in the dayes of Theodoſius, and by him made Biſhop of Conſtantinople. Theſe hated of the reſt, in an obſcure corner, without Ceremonies or Pontificall habit, full of ſeeming Zeale and Humility, doe reade the Scriptures, and in both kinds adminiſter the Sacrament, denying the Reall Preſence: the Prieſt (not diſtinguiſhed from the reſt in habit) breaking the bread, and laying it in the palme of the Communicants hand; they ſipping of the Cup, which is held betweene his. They kiſſe the Croſſe, but pray not before it, nor reuerence they Images. They will not haue Marie to be called the Mother of God. Their chiefeſt Hereſie is, that they diuide the Diuinitie of Chriſt from his Humanitie. Their Doctrine diſperſed throughout all the Eaſt, by meanes of Coſro the Perſian King, who enforced all the Chriſtians within his Dominion (out of a mortall hatred that he bare to the Emperour Heraclius) eyther to forſake his Empire, or to become Neſtorians; as through a great part of Cataia. It is now embraced, but by few; moſt of that Sect inhabiting about Babylon. Their Patriarkall ſeate is Muzal in Meſopotamia, ſeated on the bankes of Tygris: their Patriarke not elected, but the dignitie deſcending from the Father to the Sonne. For Marriage is generally allowed in their Clergie; and when Widdowers, to marry againe at their pleaſure. They haue the Scriptures, and execute the Miniſterie in the Chaldean Tongue. They allow not of the Councell of Epheſus, nor any that ſucceeded it. All this while there were no leſſe then a thouſand Chriſtians, men, women and children, who fed and lodged vpon the pauement of the Temple. On Eaſter day about one of the clocke in the morning, the Nations and Sects aboue mentioned, with ioyfull clamours, according to their ſeuerall cuſtomes, circled the Church, and viſited the holy places in a ſolemne Proceſſion; and ſo for that time concluding their Ceremonies, departed.

Eaſter Solemnitie.

§. V.

§. V.

Viſiting of Emaus and Bethlehem, and other places: Alſo other obſeruations of the Ieroſolymitan Holies.

VPon Eaſter Munday wee hired certaine Aſſes to ride to Emaus, accompanied with a Guard, and certaine of the Friers. About the mid-way, at the foot of a hill, there are the ruines of a Monaſterie, built by Saint Helena: they ſay, in that place where Ieſus appeared to the two Diſciples. Here the Latines performed certaine deuotions, and tooke of the ſtones (as generally they did from all ſuch like places) preſerued as precious. Emaus ſtands ſeuen miles off, and Weſt of Ieruſalem. The way thither mountainous, and in many places as if paued with a continuall rocke; yet where there is earth, ſufficiently fruitfull. It was ſeated (for now it is not) vpon the South ſide of a hill, ouer-looking a little valley, fruitfull in Fountaines. Honoured with the preſence of our Sauiour, who there was knowne by the breaking of bread in the houſe of Cleophas his Cooſin-german, and afterward the ſecond Biſhop of Ieruſalem. In the ſelfe-ſame place a Temple was erected by Paula (a Roman Ladie, of whom we ſhall ſpeake hereafter) whoſe ruines are yet extant, neere the top of the Mountaine; vnto which the Arabians would not ſuffer vs to aſcend, who inhabite below in a few poore Cottages, vntill we had payed Caphar they demanded. This Citie was burnt in the Iewiſh warres, by the commandement of Varus; and vpon the deſtruction of Ieruſalem, re-edified by the Romanes; who in regard of their victorie, called it Nicopolis. In the yeere 131. throwne downe by an earth-quake, it was foureſcore and twelue yeeres after reſtored by the Emperour Marcus Aurelius; and afterward dignified during the gouernment of the Chriſtians with an Epiſcopall Sea, being vnder the Metropolitan of Cæſarea. Nicephorus, and the Tripartite hiſtorie report of a miraculous Fountaine by the high-way ſide, where Chriſt would haue departed from the two Diſciples: who when he was conuerſant vpon earth, and wearied with a longer iourney, there waſhed his feet; from thenceforth retayning a curable vertue againſt all diſeaſes. But relations of that kind, haue credite onely in places farre diſtant. In our returne, wee inclined a little to the left hand, and after a while aſcended the top of a Mountaine, (whoſe Weſterne valley was the field, they ſay, of that battell, when the Sunne and Moone ſtood ſtill at the commandement of Ioſua.) Out of the ruines of an ancient building, a ſmall Moſque is aduanced; where they hold that the Prophet Samuel was buried, who had his Sepulchre in Rama on Mount Ephraim; though diuers other Townes ſo ſeated, are ſo called, which ſignifieth High in their Language. But our guides were well practiſed in that precept:

Emaus.

Nicopolis.

Of Streames, Kings, Faſhions, Kingdomes askt, there ſhowne;
Anſwer to all: th'vnknowne relate as knowne.

Atque aliqua ex illis dum regum nomina quærunt
Quæ loca, qui mores, quæue feruntur aquæ:
Omnia reſponde; nec tantum ſi qua rogabit,
Et quæ neſciris, vt bene nota refer. Ouid.

who endeauour to bring all remarkable places within the compaſſe of their proceſſions. The Mahometans either deceiued with this tradition, or maintayning the report of their profite, would not ſuffer vs to enter but at an exceſſiue rate; which wee refuſed to part with. The next Mountaine vnto this, doth weare on his Crowne, the ruines of a Caſtle that belonged to the Machabees. Another more humble, and neerer the Citie, preſenteth a pile of ſtones, ſquare, flat, and ſolid: the Sepulchre, they ſay, of the ſeuen brethren who were tortured to death by Antiochus, whom I rather iudge to haue beene buried at Moden, the ancient ſeat of that Familie; which ſtands on the vttermoſt confines of the Mountaines of Iudea, where were to be ſeene ſeuen Sepulchres of white marble, each bearing a Pyramis on his ſquare; ſaid by Ioſephus to haue ſerued in his time for Sea-markes. From hence we approached the North-weſt ſide of the Citie, where in the Vineyards are ſundry places of buriall hewen out of the maine rocke; amongſt the reſt, one called the Sepulchre of the Prophets. The firſt entrance large, and like the mantle-tree of a chimney, cut curiouſly on the out-ſide: through which we crept into a little ſquare roome, (euery one carrying a light in his hand) the ſides cut full of holes (in manner of a Doue-houſe:) two yards deepe, and three quarters ſquare. Out of that roome wee deſcended by two ſtreight paſſages into two other roomes, likewiſe vnder ground: yet more ſpacious, and of better workmanſhip, but ſo rounded with the Sepulchres as the former; neighboured with a Vault, which ſerues for a Ciſterne, and filled with a liuing Fountaine. A little beyond, vpon the Weſt ſide of a large ſquare Court, hewen into the rocke ſome three fathoms deepe, and entred vnder an arch of the ſame, there is another manſion for the dead, hauing a porch like to that of the Prophets: and garniſht without (amongſt other figures) with two great cluſters of Grapes, in memoriall of thoſe, as they ſay, which were brought by the ſpies into the hoſt of the Hebrewes. On the left hand you creepe through a difficult deſcent, which leadeth into faire roomes vnder the ground, and one within another, benched about with coffins of ſtone bereaft of their couers, there being ſome bones yet remayning in ſome of them. This is famed to bee

Sepulchres.

the houſhold Monument of certaine of the Kings of Iuda. In which there is nothing more admirable, then is the artificiall contriuing of the doores, the hinges and all, of the ſelfe-ſame ſtone, vnſeperated from the rocke without other ſuppliment. Hitherto (if not further) by all likelihood the old Citie extended. From hence we returned to the Couent.

Berſhebas Bath.

Turpentine tree.

Simeons houſe.

Starre of the wiſe-men.

Abacuck.

Elias.

Iacob.

Rachels Sepulchre.

Dead Sea.

Dauids Ciſternes.

The day following wee rode towards Bethlehem, which ſtands about ſixe miles South from Ieruſalem. Going out from the gate of Ioppa, and turning on the left hand by the foot of Mount Sion. Aloft on whoſe vttermoſt angle ſtood the Tower of Dauid, (whoſe ruines are yet extant) of a wonderfull ſtrength, and admirable beautie, adorned with ſhields, and the armes of the mightie. Below on the right hand of the way in our paſſage, they ſhewed vs a Fountaine at the Southſide of a ſquare Serraglio; deliuered to be that wherein Berſheba bathed. North of which, the valley is croſſed with a ruinous Aquaduct, which conueyed water vnto the Temple of Salomon. Aſcending the oppoſite Mountaine, we paſſed through a Countrey, hilly and ſtony: yet not vtterly forſaken of the Vine, though onely planted by Chriſtians, in many places producing Corne, here ſhadowed with the fig-tree, and there with the Oliue. Sundry ſmall Turrets diſperſed about, which ſerue for ſolace as well as for ſafe-guard. Some two miles from the Citie, on the left hand, and by the high-way ſide, there groweth a Turpentine-tree yet flouriſhing, which is ſaid to haue affoorded a ſhelter to the Virgin Marie, as ſhee paſſed betweene Bethlehem and Ieruſalem. This tradition how euer abſurd, is generally beleeued by thoſe Chriſtians: a place of high repute in their deuotions. Towards the Weſt about two miles off, on a little hill ſtands an ancient Tower: which is ſaid, to haue beene the habitation of Simeon. A mile beyond the foreſaid Tree, in the midſt of the way there is a Ciſterne, vaſt within, and ſquare at the mouth; which is called the Ciſterne of the Starre. For that (as they ſay) the wiſe-men of the Eaſt, there firſt againe did ſee that conducting Starre, which went before them to the place of our Sauiours natiuitie. A little on the right hand there are the ſmall remaynes of an ancient Monaſterie, built, they affirme, in that place where the Angell tooke vp Abacuck by the haire of the head, and conueyed him to Babylon. Halfe a mile further, on the left ſide of the way, there is another Religious houſe, but in good repaire, in forme of a Fortreſſe, and enuironed with high walls, to withſtand the inſolencies of the Infidels; poſſeſſed by the Greeke Coloieros, and dedicated to Elias. Hard by there is a flat rocke, whereon they told vs that the Prophet accuſtomed to ſleepe; and that it beares as yet the impreſſion of his bodie. Indeed there are certaine hollowes in the ſame, but not by my eyes apprehended to retayne any manly proportion. As farre beyond are the decayes of a Church, which ſtood (as they ſay) in the place where the Patriarch Iacob inhabited. About a mile further Weſt of the way, and a little off, ſtands the Sepulchre of Rachel, (by the Scripture affirmed to haue beene buried here about) if the entireneſſe thereof doe not confute the imputed antiquitie: yet kept perhaps in repaire by her offſpring, as a Monument of venerable memorie. The Tombe it ſelfe reſembleth a great Trunke, couered with a Cupolo mounted on a ſquare, which hath on each ſide an ample arch ſuſtayned onely by the corners. This is enuironed with a foure-ſquare wall; within which ſtand two other, little, but of the ſame proportion; kept, and vſed for a place of prayer by the Mahometans. Below it on the ſide of a Mountaine ſtands the ruines of that Rama, whereof the Prophet: A voyce was heard in Rama, Rachel weeping for her children, &c. From this ridge of the hills, the Dead Sea doth appeare as if neere at hand: but not ſo found by the traueller, for that thoſe high declining Mountaines are not to be directly deſcended. Within halfe a mile of Bethlehem, ſeparated from the ſame by a valley, and a little on the left hand of the way, are the Ciſternes of Dauid, whereof he ſo much deſired to drinke, and when they brought him of the water, refuſed it: a large deepe Vault, now out of vſe, hauing onely two ſmall tunnels at the top, by which they draw vp the water.

Bethlehem.

Adonis.

Saint Maries.

And now wee are come to Bethlehem, where in a Grot at the Eaſt ſide of the Citie, employed for a Stable (the Inne being peſtred with ſtrangers) the Virgin fell in trauell, and produced vnto the world a Sauiour. In this Caue from the time of Adrian, vnto the raigne of Conſtantine, they celebrated the impious lamentation of Adonis (much honoured by the Syrians) who aboue had his Statue ſhadowed with a groue of Myrtles: which the vertuous Helena ſubuerted, and erected thereupon this goodly Temple yet entire, and poſſeſt by the Franciſcans of Ieruſalem, of whom ſome few are here continually reſident; called Saint Maries of Bethlehem: in forme repreſenting a Croſſe the ſtalke whereof compriſeth the bodie; entred at the lower end through a Portico ſuſtayned with ſixteene Pillars. The roofe, in the midſt, is lofty, flat, and (if I forget not) of Cedar: the Sides, of the ſame fabricke, but much more humble, are vpheld with foure rankes of Pillars (ten in a row) each of one entire marble, white, and in many places beautifully ſpeckled; the largeſt, and faireſt that euer I ſaw, whoſe vpper ends doe declare that they haue in part beene exquiſitely gilded: The walls are flagged with large tables of white marble, wel-nigh to the top; the reſt adorned with Moſaique painting, although now greatly defaced. It is both here reported, and recorded by hiſtorie, that a Sultan of Egypt allured with their beautie, ſet certaine Maſons a worke, to take downe thoſe Tables, with intent to haue tranſported them vnto his Caſtle of Cairo; when a dreadfull ſerpent iſſued out of the wall, and brake in pieces ſuch as were remoued: ſo that terried therewith, he deſiſted from his enterpriſe. The three vpper ends of the Croſſe, doe end in three Semi-circles, hauing in each an Altar. In the midſt the Chancell, roofed with a ſtately Cupolo, couered without with Lead, and garniſhed within with Moſaique figures.

This Church is left for the moſt part deſolate, the Altars naked, no Lamps maintained, no Seruice celebrated, except at times extraordinary: yet are there a few poore Greekes and Armenians, who inhabite within on the right hand of the entrance, and in the oppoſite corners. Adioyning on the left hand, ſtands the Monaſtery of the Franciſcans, entred through the Church, ſufficiently ſpacious, but of no commendable building; accommodated with diuers Gardens, and enuironed with defencible walls; at whoſe North-weſt corner a tottered Tower doth challenge regard for the waſte receiued in that places protection. They brought vs into their Chappell, not ſlightly ſet forth, and dedicated to Saint Katherine, hauing Indulgences conferred thereupon from Mount Sina. From which wee deſcended with Lights in our hands, and then were led by a narrow long entry into a little ſquare Caue, ſupported in the midſt with a Pillar of the Rocke. On the left hand, an Altar, and vnder that a paſſage into a Vault; wherein, they ſay, that the Infants ſlaine, by the bloudy Edict of Herod, were buried. Out of this Caue or Chappell, there are two other entries: in that on the right hand, ſtands the Sepulcher of Euſebius the Confeſſor, and Diſciple vnto Saint Ierome: this directeth into another Grot, wherein are two Tombes, in forme not vnlike vnto Altars: the farther contained the body of Paula a Romane Ladie, deſcended of the ancient families of the Gracchi and Cornelij. She built foure Monaſteries neare adioyning to this Temple, (whoſe ruines do yet giue teſtimony of her pietie,) one ſhe planted with men; the three other with Virgins, who neuer paſt the bounds of their Couents but on Sundayes onely, (and then attending on their ſeuerall Gouerneſſes) to performe the Oraſons in the Church, and Caue of the Natiuitie: her ſelfe the Abbeſſe of one of them, and ſo for the ſpace of twentie yeares did continue. She likewiſe built an adioyning Hoſpitall for Pilgrims, whoſe ruines declare it to haue beene no meane Fabricke. The other Tombe did couer the body of Saint Ierome, who liued in her time, and in the Monaſterie which ſhee had founded: his bones, together with the bones of Euſebius, were tranſlated to Rome, and ſhrined in the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore; ouer which, Pope Sixtus Quintus hath erected a ſumptuous Chappell. Out of this we paſt into another Grot, which they call his Cell; wherein hee lay (as they ſay) full fiftie yeares and ſixe moneths, and there twice tranſlated the Bible. Returning into the aforeſeid Chappell of the Innocents, by the other entry we paſſed into a Vault or Chappell, twelue foote wide, fortie long, and fifteene in height: the ſides and floore all lined with faire white Marble: the compaſſed roofe adorned with Moſſe-worke, and Moſaique Gilding, though now much periſhed. At the vpper end, in an arched Concaue, ſtands an Altar garniſhed with a Table of the Natiuitie. Vnder this a Semi-circle; the ſole ſet forth with ſtones of ſeuerall colours, in the forme of a Starre: and in the midſt a Serpentine, there ſet to vphold the memory of that place where our Sauiour was borne: the credite whereof I will neither impeach, nor inforce. In this Citie it was, and in a ſtable; nor is the report by the ſite refuted, though vnder ground, hewne out of the liuing Rocke, as is the reſt before ſpoken of. For he that trauels through theſe Countries, will not wonder to ſee ſuch Caues imployed to like vſes. Neither is it likely, that they that ſucceeded thoſe times ſo neerely, ſhould erre in the place ſo celebrated in their deuotions, and beautified with ſuch coſt. On either ſide of this Altar in the Corners, there are two equall aſcents, which Land on the oppoſite out-ſides of the Chancell, cloſed with doores of Braſſe cut through, through which they paſſe in their ſolemne Proceſſion. Now on the South ſide, and neere vnto the foote of the ſtaires, you deſcend by three ſteps into a leſſer Grot: ſeparated onely from the former, by three fine Columnes of diſcoloured Marble, which ſeeme to ſupport the ouer-hanging Rocke. On the Weſt ſide there is a Manger hewne out in a Concaue, about two foote high from the floore, and a little way hallowed within: wherein, they ſay, that our New-borne Sauiour was laid by the Virgine; now flagged about with white Marble, as the Rocke that roofes it; at the left end ſuſtained with a ſhort Serpentine. In the bottome of this Manger, and iuſt in the middle, a round Serpentine is ſet, to denote the place where he lay, which retaineth, as they would make vs beleeue, the effigies of Saint Ierome, miraculous framed by the naturall veines of the ſtone, in reward of his often and affectionate kiſſes. But ſurely, they bee the eyes of Faith that muſt apprehend it: yet preſent they it in Picture. On the oppoſite ſide of this Grot, there is a Bench in the Rocke, not vnlike to an Altar: where the Magi of the Eaſt, that were conducted hither by the Starre, diſpoſed, (as they ſay) of their Preſents.

Monaſterie of Franciſcans.

Innocents Sepulcher.

Paulas Sepulcher.

Much difference was betwixt the ancient and later Monaſtaries and Monkes. Thoſe liker our Vniuerſities, free from vow, and fitted with arts and ſanctitie, as Seminaries of the Church: The Nuns and Pilgrimes alſo much differed from the later more degenerate. S. Ierome himſelfe, this Noble Paula and her daughter Euſtochium are witneſſes hereof.

Place of the Natiuitie.

Saint Ieromes natural Image

Magi.

Theſe places be in the keeping of the Franciſcans, and not leſſe reuerenced then Caluarie, or the Sepulcher, viſited alſo by the Mahometan Pilgrimes. Where Lamps ſtill burning do expell the naturall darkneſſe; and giue a greater State thereunto, then the light of the day could affoord it. Baldwine the ſecond did honor this place with an Epiſcopall Sea (being before but a Priorie) adioyning thereunto, together with the Church of Aſcalon, many Townes and Villages. In the place where this Citie ſtood, there are now but a few poore Cottages ſtanding. Moſt of the few Inhabitants Greekes and Armenians, who get a beggerly liuing by ſelling vnto ſtrangers the Models of the Sepulcher, and of the Grot of the Natiuitie; cut in wood, or caſt in ſtone, with Croſſes, and ſuch like Merchandizes, and in being ſeruiceable vnto Pilgrims.

Iacobs fielde.

Angels apparition to the Shepheards.

Our Ladies Well.

After dinner we deſcended a foote into the Valley which lyeth Eaſt of the Citie, fruitfull in paſturage, where Iacob fed his flocke (at this day called his field) neere the Tower of Adar; but more famous for the Apparition of the Angels, who there brought to the Shepheards the glad-tidings of our Saluation. In the midſt of the field, on the ſelfe-ſame place, as is ſuppoſed, and two miles diſtant from Bethlehem, Saint Helena erected a Church, and dedicated it to the Angels; now nothing but ruines. Returning from thence, and turning a little on the left hand, we came to the Village where thoſe Shepheards dwelt, as yet ſo called: in the midſts whereof there ſtandeth a Well; the ſame, as the rumor goeth, that the bleſſed Virgine deſired to drinke of, when the churliſh Villagers refuſing to draw her vp water, it forth-with miraculouſly flowed to the brim; greedy to paſſe through her bleſſed lips, and ſatisfie her longing. Of this the Arabs would not ſuffer vs to drinke before we had giuen them Money. Neerer to Bethlehem, and at the foote of the hill, are the ruines of a Chappell, where Ioſeph (as they ſay) had his dwelling, at ſuch time as the Angell commanded him to flie into Ægypt. Neere the top, and not farre from the backe of the Monaſterie, there is a Caue containing two roomes, one within, another deſcended into by a narrow entrance, and in ſome places ſupported by Pillars. In this it is ſaid, that Ioſeph hid our Sauiour and his Mother, whilſt he prepared things neceſſarie for his iourney. The ſtone thereof puluerated, and often waſhed, of much a little will remaine, and not vnlike to refined Chalke; which taken in drinke, is ſaid to haue a Soueraigne vertue, in reſtoring Milke both to Women and Cattell, much vſed by the Moores themſelues for that purpoſe. Ouer which ſtood one of the Nunneries built by Paula, now onely ſhewing the foundation, and wherein ſhe dyed. Theſe places ſeene, we re-entred the Monaſterie, and there repoſed our ſelues the night following.

Bezec.

Bethſur.

Eunuchs Baptiſme.

Iohn Baptiſts Wilderneſſe.

Zacharies houſe

Elizabeth and Marie.

Each of vs beſtowing a piece of Gold on the Vicar, betimes in the morning we departed, bending our courſe to the Mountaines of Iudæa, lying Weſt from Bethlehem: neere to which, on the ſide of the oppoſite hill, we paſt by a little Village, called (as I take it) Bezec; inhabited onely by Chriſtians: mortall (as they ſay) to the Mahometans, that attempted to dwell therein. About two miles further we paſſed by Bethſur, ſeated in a bottome betweene two rocky Mountaines, once a ſtrong Fort: firſt built by Rhoboam, and after repaired by the Machabies: famous for ſundry ſieges; being in the vpper way betweene Ieruſalem and Gaza, where wee ſaw the ruines of an ample Church; below that, a Fountaine not vnbeholding by Art, whoſe pleaſant Waters are forth-with drunke vp by the earth that produced them. Heere, they ſay, that Philip baptized the Eunuch; whereupon it retaineth the name of the Æthiopian Fountaine. And no queſtion, but the adioyning Temple was erected out of deuotion to the honour of the place, and memorie of the fact. Yet ſeemeth it ſtrange vnto me, that a Chariot ſhould be able to paſſe thoſe rocky and declining Mountaines, where almoſt a Horſe can hardly keepe footing. Hauing trauelled about a mile and a halfe further, we came to the Caue where Iohn the Baptiſt is ſaid to haue liued from the age of ſeuen, vntill ſuch time as hee went vnto the Wilderneſſe by Iordan, ſequeſtred from the abode of men, and feeding on ſuch wilde nouriſhment as theſe vninhabited places affoorded. This Caue is ſeated on the Northerne ſide of a deſart Mountaine (onely beholding to the Locuſt tree) hewne out of the precipitating Rocke, ſo as difficultie to be aſcended or deſcended to: entred at the Eaſt corner, and receiuing light from a window in the ſide. At the vpper end there is a Bench of the ſelfe-ſame Rocke, whereon (as they ſay) he accuſtomed to ſleepe; of which, who ſo breakes a piece off, ſtands forth-with excommunicate. Ouer this, on a little flat, ſtands the ruines of a Monaſterie, on the South ſide naturally walled with the ſteepe of the Mountaine: from whence there guſheth a liuing Spring, which entreth the Rocke, and againe burſteth forth beneath the mouth of the Caue; A place that would make ſolitarineſſe delightfull, and ſtand in compariſon with the turbulent pompe of Cities. This ouer-looketh a profound Valley, on the far ſide hem'd with aſpiring Mountaines; whereof ſome are cut (or naturally ſo) in degrees like Allies, which would bee elſe vnacceſſably fruitfuleſſe, whoſe leuels yet beare the ſtumps of decayed Vines, ſhadowed not rarely with Oliues and Locuſts. And ſurely I thinke, that all, or moſt of thoſe Mountaines haue beene ſo husbanded, elſe could this little Countrey haue neuer ſuſtained ſuch a multitude of people. After wee had fed of ſuch prouiſion as was brought vs from the Citie, by other of the Fraternitie that there met vs, wee returned towards Ieruſalem, leauing the way of Bethlehem on the right hand, and that of Emaus on the left. The firſt place of note that wee met with, was there where once ſtood the dwelling of Zacharie, ſeated on the ſide of a fruitfull hill, well ſtored with Oliues and Vineyards. Hither came the bleſſed Virgine to viſite her Couſin Elizabeth. Here died Elizabeth, and here in a Grot on the ſide of a Vault or Chappell, lies buried: ouer which a goodly Church was erected, together with a Monaſterie; whereof now little ſtandeth but a part of the Wals, which offer to the view ſome fragments of painting, which ſhew that the reſt haue beene exquiſite. Beyond, and lower is our Ladies Fountaine, (ſo called of the Inhabitants) which maintaineth a little current through the neighbouring valley. Neere this, in the bottome, and vttermoſt extent thereof, there ſtandeth a Temple, once ſumptuous, now deſolate; built by Helena, and dedicated to Saint Iohn Baptiſt, in the place where Zacharie had another houſe where the Prophet was borne, in a roome hewen out of the rocke; of principall deuotion with thoſe Chriſtians: poſſeſt, as the reſt, by the beaſtly Arabians, who defile it with their Cattell, and employ it to the baſeſt of vſes. Tranſcending the leſſe ſteepe hills, and paſſing through valleys of their Roſes voluntarily plentifull; after a while wee came to a Monaſterie ſeated in a ſtreight betweene two rockie Mountaines, enuironed with high walls, and entred by a doore of Iron; where a Biſhop of the Georgians hath his reſidence, who curteouſly entertayned vs. Within they haue a handſome Chappell, at the vpper end an Altar, and vnder that a pit, in which they ſay that the Palme did grow (but rather, if any, the Oliue, whereof that place hath ſtore) of which a part of the Croſſe) was made: for it was framed (as they report) of foure ſeuerall woods; the foot of Cedar, the bole of Cypreſſe, the tranſome of Palme, and the title of Oliue. This is called therevpon the Monaſterie of the holy Croſſe. Where in ſtead of Bells they ſtrike on a hollow beame (as the Grecians doe in the Temple of Golgotha) to ſummon their aſſemblies. Betweene this and Ieruſalem, we ſaw nothing worth noting, that hath not beene ſpoken of already.

Roſe valleys.

Monaſterie of the holy Croſſe.

The day following, wee went to reuiew the remarkable places about the Citie. Paſſing by the Caſtle of the Piſans, on the left hand entring at a little ſquare paſſage, wee were ſhewed a ſmall Chappell, the doore and windowes rammed vp; for that (as they ſay) the Mahometans became mortally ſicke, that, though but by chance did come into it, ſtanding where ſtood the Temple of Saint Thomas. From hence wee were brought to the Palace of Annas, deſtroyed by the Seditious in the time of the ſiege, where now ſtandeth a Church dedicated to the bleſſed Angels, and belonging to the Armenians, who haue their dwellings about it. Within the Court there is an old Oliue tree, enuironed with a low wall; vnto which, it is ſaid, that they bound our Sauiour: Turning on the right hand, wee went out at a Port of Sion. South and not farre from thence, on the midſt of the mount is the place, as they ſay, where Chriſt did eate his laſt Supper; where alſo after his reſurrection, the doores being ſhut, hee appeared to his Apoſtles; where they receiued the holy Ghoſt; where Peter conuerted three thouſand; and where, as they ſay alſo, they held the firſt Councel, in which the Apoſtles Creed was decreed. Here Helena built a moſt ſumptuous Temple including therein a Cœnaculum, where that marble Pillar was preſerued that ſtood before in the Palace of Pilate, to which they tyed our Sauiour when they whipped him. This Church ſubuerted by the Saracens, in the ſelfe-ſame place the Franciſcans had a Monaſterie erected, who in the yeere 1561. were remoued by the Turkes: they building here a Moſque of their owne, into which no Chriſtian is permitted to enter. Yet not in the reſpects aforeſaid, ſo reuerenced by the Infidels, but in that it is deliuered by tradition (and not vnlikely) that Dauid had there his Sepulchre. Betweene this, and the walls of the Citie, the Franckes haue their buriall, where lie ſixe Engliſh-men, ſent (as may bee ſuſpected) vnto their long-homes not many yeeres ſince, though coloured by the Franciſcans, in whoſe Monaſterie they lay, with pretence of Diuiue vengeance for the ſuppoſed murder of their Drogaman. Seuen they were in all, all aliue and well in one day, ſixe dead in the other; the out-liuer becomming a conuert to their Religion. Turning a little on the left hand, we came to a ſmall Church, incloſed within a ſquare wall, arched within, with a walke on the top in manner of a Caue; the habitation of the Armenians, who haue of this Church the cuſtodie. Heere flouriſhed the proud Palace of Caiphas, in which our Sauiour was buffetted, ſpit vpon, and ſo ſpitefully reuiled. Here Helena built a faire Church to Saint Peter; but that deſtroyed, in the roome thereof this leſſe was erected, and dedicated to Saint Sauiour. On the right hand in the Court, they vndertake to ſhew where the fire was made, by which Peter ſtood when he denied his Maſter: and at the ſide of the Church doore, the chapter of a Pillar, whereon the Cocke crowing did moue him to contrition. At the vpper end of the Church, vpon a large Altar lieth a Stone, that (as they ſay) which was rolled againſt the mouth of the Sepulchre.

Chappell vnlucky to Mahometans.

Laſt Supper.

Dauids Sepulchre.

Engliſhmen murthered by Friers.

Palace of Caiphas.

Peters Deniall.

Graue-ſtone.

From hence we deſcended into the valley of Gehinnon, which diuideth Mount Sion from the Mountaine of Offence, ſo called for that Salomon by the perſwaſion of his wiues there ſacrificed to Chamoch and Molech; but now by theſe Chriſtians called the Mountaine of Ill counſell, where they ſay, the Phariſes tooke counſell againſt Ieſus; whoſe heighth yet ſhewes the reliques of no meane buildings. This valley is but ſtreight, now ſeruing for little vſe; heretofore moſt delightfull, planted with Groues and watered with Fountaines; wherein the Hebrews ſacrificed their children to Molech. On the South ſide of this valley, neere where it meeteth with the valley of Iehoſaphat, mounted a good heighth, on the ſide of the Mountaine is Aceldama, or the field of bloud; purchaſed with the reſtored reward of Treaſon, for a buriall place for ſtrangers. In the midſt whereof a large ſquare roome was made by the mother of Conſtantine: the South ſide walled with the naturall rocke; flat at the top, and equall with the vpper leuell. Out of which ariſeth certaine ſmall Cupolos open in the midſt to let downe the dead bodies. Through which we might ſee the bottome all couered with bones; and certaine Corſes but newly let downe: it being now the Sepulchre of the Armenians. A greedy Graue; and great enough to deuoure the Gehinnen.

Aceldama.

the dead of a whole Nation. For they ſay, (and I beleeue it) that the Earth thereof within the ſpace of eight and fortie houres, will conſume the fleſh that is laid thereon. The like is ſaid of Saint Innocents Church-yard in Paris : and he that ſees the multitude of bones, that are there piled about it, the daily burials (it being a generall Receptacle for ſtrangers) and ſmalneſſe of the circuit, may be eaſily induced to credit. And why might not the Earth be tranſported from hence, as well as that at Rome in Campo Sancto, brought thither in two hundred and ſeuentie ſhips by the commandement of the aforeſaid Empreſſe? which though changing ſoyles retayneth her vertue : it being alſo a place of buriall for Forreiners. In the Rocke about there are diuers Sepulchers, and ſome in vſe at this day : hauing great ſtones rolled againſt their mouthes according to the ancient cuſtome. Beyond on the point of the Hill, a Caue hewne out of the Rocke, conſiſting of ſeuerall Roomes, is ſaid to haue hidden ſixe of the Apoſtles in the time of Chriſts Paſſion : firſt made without doubt for a Sepulcher; and after ſeruing for an Hermitage: the Roofe of the larger Roome retayning ſome ſhew of gilding. Below, where the Valley of Gehinnon and Iehoſaphat, like two conioyning ſtreames doe trent to the South, there is a dry Pit; where the Prieſts are ſaid to haue hid the ſacred fire when the Iewes were carried captiue into Babylon : and ſeeking it after their returne did find it conuerted into water. But Nehemiah cauſed it to be ſprinkled on the Altar: when forth-with with the beames of the Sunne it miraculouſly flamed. This Valley of Iehoſaphat (ſo called of that good King) from hence extendeth full North, and then enclineth a little to the Weſt, firſt preſenting (though naturall) no other then a large dry Ditch to the Eaſt of the Citie contracted betweene it, and the ouer-pearing Hils of the oppoſite Oliuet. It is ſaid to be about two miles long, and if it be ſo, but ſhort ones: where broadeſt fruitfull; watered by the Torrent Cedron, which runneth no longer then fedde with ſhowres: loſing his intermitted ſtreames in the Lake of Aſphaltis. It was alſo called the Valley of Cedron, and of the King: where the generall Iudgement ſhall be, if the Iewes or Latines may be beleeued; who ground their opinions vpon the Propheſie of Ioel : which I will not gain-ſay, ſince ſome of our Diuines haue of late ſo laboured to approue it. Of the ſame opinion are the Mahometans. In the wall aboue it, there is a window not farre from the Golden Gate: where they ſay, that Mahomet ſhal ſit whilſt Chriſt doth execute Iuſtice. Paſſing to the Citie ſide of the Valley, at the foot of the Hill, and Eaſt of the South-eaſt corner, is the place where the Prophet Eſay was ſawne in ſunder by the Commandement of Manaſſes his Grand-father by the Mother: and there buried, where there is a little Pauement vſed for a place of Prayer by the Mahometans. Cloſe below this ſtood the Oke Roguel, where now a white Mulbery is cheriſhed. North of it, in a gut of the Hill (aboue which in the wall ſtood the Tower) was the fiſh-poole of Siloe : contayning not aboue halfe an Acre of ground, now dry in the bottome : and beyond the Fountayne that fed it : now no other then a little Trench walled in on the ſides, full of filthy water : whoſe vpper part is obſcured by a Building (as I take it a Moſque) where once flouriſhed a Chriſtian Church built by Saint Helena. Depriued of thoſe her ſalubrious ſtreames; yet held in honour for their former vertues. Paſſing along wee came to our Ladies Fountayne (vpon what occaſion they ſo call it, is not worth the relating) in a deepe Caue of the Rocke, deſcended into by a large paire of ſtaires, and repleniſht with pleaſant waters. Here the Valley ſtreightning, and a little beyond no broader then ſerues for a Channell to the Torrent, on the other ſide ſtands the Sepulcher of Zacharie, who was ſlaine betweene the Temple and the Altar: all of the naturall Rocke, eighteene foot high, foure ſquare, and beautified with Doricke Columnes of the ſame vnſeparated ſtone, ſuſtayning the Corniſh, and topt like a pointed Diamond. Cloſe to this there is another in the vpright Rocke; the Front like the ſide of an open Gallerie, ſupported with Marble Pillars, now betweene rammed vp with ſtones. Within a Grot, whither Iames retyred (as they ſay) after the Paſſion of our Sauiour, with purpoſe neuer to haue receiued ſuſtenance vntill he had ſeene him : who in that place appeared vnto him after his Reſurrection. In memoriall whereof the Chriſtians erected a Church hard by; whoſe Ruines are now ruined. A little farther there is a ſtone Bridge of one Arch, which paſſes the Torrent. In a Rocke at the foot thereof, there are certayne Impreſſions : made (as they ſay) by our Sauiours feet when they led him through the water. At the Eaſt end of this Bridge, and a little on the North, ſtands the Pillar of Abſolon; which he here erected in his life time, to retayne the memorie of his name, in that his Iſſue Male fayled, (but he was not buried therein) being yet entyre and of a goodly Fabricke : riſing in a loftie ſquare; below adorned with halfe Columnes, wrought out of the ſides and corners of the Doricke forme : and then changing into a round, a good height higher doth grow to a point in faſhon of a Bell : all framed of the growing ſtone. Againſt this there lyeth a great heape of ſtones which increaſeth daily. For both Iewes and Mahometans paſſing by, doe throw ſtones againſt it : yet execrating Abſolon for his Rebellion againſt Dauid. Adioyning there is a large ſquare, but lower by far, which hath an entrance like the Frontiſpice of a Porch cut curiouſly without; the earth almoſt reaching to the top of the entrance : hauing a Grot within hewne out of the Rocke : ſome ſay, a Kingly Sepulcher; perhaps appertayning to the former. A little more North and vp the Torrent, at the foot of Oliuet, once ſtood the Village Gethſemani; the place yet fruitfull in Oliues : and hard by the delightfull Garden wherein our Sauiour was betrayed.

Fleſh deuouring Earth.

Caue.

Valley of Iehoſaphat.

Cedron.

Eſay ſawne.

Siloe.

Zacharies Sepulcher.

Abſolons Pillar.

Stone throwing.

Gethſemani.

They point out the place where he left two of his Diſciples, and a little higher the third when he went to pray, and with all the place where he was taken. In this Garden there is alſo a ſtone, whereon they ſay that our Lady ſate, and beheld the Martyrdome of Saint Steuen, who ſuffered on the ſide of the oppoſite Hill. Without the ſaid Garden, in the ioyning of two wayes, they ſhewed vs the place, as they will haue it, where Saint Thomas ſtood, when incredulous forſooth of our Ladies Aſſumption, ſhe let fall her Girdle to informe his beliefe.

And now we are come to the Sepulcher of the bleſſed Virgin, made thus, as it is, by the Mother of Conſtantine. Before it a Court; the building aboue ground, a ſquare pile onely, flat at the top, and neatly wrought, like the largeſt Portico to a Temple. You enter at the South-ſide, and forth-with deſcend by a goodly paire of ſtaires of fiftie ſteps: about the midſt of the deſcent, are two ſmall oppoſite Chappels; in that on the right hand are the Sepulchers of Ioachim and Anna; in that on the left of Ioſeph: the Parents and Spouſe of the Mother of Ieſus. Theſe ſtaires doe leade you into a ſpacious Church, ſtretching Eaſt and Weſt, walled on each ſide, and arched aboue with the naturall Rocke. Vpon the right hand in the midſt there is a little ſquare Chappell, framed of the eminent Rocke, but flagged both within and without with white Marble, entred at two doores. At the far ſide her Tombe, which taketh vp more then the third part of the Room, now in forme of an Altar: vnder which, they ſay, that ſhe was decently buryed by the Apoſtles; and the third day after aſſumed into Heauen by the Angels. In this there burneth eighteen Lamps continually; partly maintained by the Chriſtians, & partly by the Mahometans, who haue this place in an eſpeciall veneration. Neere the Eaſt Semicircle of the Church, there ſtandeth a great Altar (ouer which the little light that this darke place hath, doth deſcend by a Cupolo.) neere the Weſt another, but both vnfurniſhed: and by the former a Well of excellent Water. In a Canton of the Wall, right againſt the North end of the Sepulcher, there is a Clift in the Rock, where the Turkes do affirme, that our Lady did hide her ſelfe, when perſecuted by the Iewes; into which I haue ſeene their women to creepe, and giue the cold Rocke affectionate kiſſes. The oppoſite Canton is alſo vſed for an Oratory by the Mahometans, who haue the keeping of the whole, and will not ſuffer vs to enter of freecoſt. Remounting the ſame ſtaires, not farre off on the left hand, towards the Eaſt, and not aboue a ſtone caſt from the Garden of Gethſamani, a ſtraite paſſage deſcendeth into a vaſt round Caue, all of the naturall Rocke, the Roofe confirmed with Arches of the ſame, receiuing a dimme light from a little hole in the top, in times paſt all ouer curiouſly painted. The place, they ſay, where Chriſt did pray, when in that bloudie agonie he was comforted by the Angels. From hence wee bent our courſe to the Citie. High on the Hill, where three wayes meete, and vpon the flat of a Rocke, is the place where Saint Steuen (who bore the firſt Palme of Martyrdome) was ſtoned to death. The ſtones thereabout haue a red ruſt on them; which, they ſay, giue teſtimonie of his bloud-ſhed. A little aboue, we entred the Citie at the gate of Saint Steuen, (where on each ſide a Lion Retrograde doth ſtand) called in times paſt the Port of the Valley, and of the flocke; for that the Cattell came in at this gate, which were to be ſacrificed in the Temple, and were ſold in the Market place adioyning. On the left hand there is a ſtone bridge, which paſſeth at the Eaſt end of the North wall into the Court of the Temple of Salomon: the head to the Poole Betheſda, vnderneath which it hath a conueyance, called alſo Probaticum, for that the Sacrifices were therein waſhed ere deliuered to the Prieſts. It had fiue Ports built thereto by Salomon; in which continually lay number of diſeaſed perſons. For an Angell at certaine ſeaſons troubled the water; and he that could next deſcend thereinto was perfectly cured. Now a great ſquare profunditie, Greene, and vneuen at the bottome, into which a barren Spring doth drill from betweene the ſtones of the North-ward Wall, and ſtealeth away almoſt vndiſcerned. The place is for a good depth hewne out of the Rocke, confined aboue on the North-ſide with a ſteepe Wall, on the Weſt with high Buildings (perhaps a part of the Caſtle of Antonia) where are two doores to deſcend by, now all that are, halfe choked with Rubbidge; and on the South with the Wall of the Court of the Temple: whereof it is fit that ſomething bee ſpoken; although not ſuffered to enter without the forfeiture of our liues, or renouncing of our Religion.

Sepulchers of the bleſſed Virgin and her Parents.

Turkiſh womens deuotion to the bleſſed Virgin.

Betheſda.

I will not ſpeake of the former forme, and magnificencie thereof, by ſacred Pens ſo exactly deſcribed. Firſt built by Salomon, deſtroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, re-edified by Zerubabel, (yet ſo far ſhort of the firſt in glory, that thoſe wept to behold it, who had beheld the former) new built or rather ſumptuouſly repayred by Herod the Great; and laſtly, vtterly ſubuerted by Titus. The Iewes aſſayed to re-edifie it in the Reigne of Adrian, of whom he ſlue an infinite number, leuelled it with the floore, and threw the Rubbidge into the Valley of Iehoſaphat, to make it leſſe ſteepe, and the place leſſe defenceable, planting in the Roome thereof a Groue, which hee conſecrated vnto Iupiter. Afterward Iulian the Apoſtata, to diſproue the Propheſie of our Sauiour, did licence the Iewes to re-build it, furniſhing them with mony out of his Treaſurie: when loe, a terrible Earth-quake ſhooke downe what they had begun; and a flame burſting forth, deuoured the Workmen, reported by Amianus Marcellinus a Pagan, and liuing in thoſe times. But who built this that now ſtandeth, is doubtfull. Some doe attribute it to the Chriſtians; others to a Prince of the Arabians, (which is confirmed by the Chriſtians of theſe Countries) and hee

Salomons Temple.

the

Mount Moria.

Golden Gate.

Turkiſh Propheſie.

the Saracen Omer, next Succeſſor vnto Mahomet. Seated it is vpon Mount Moria, n the South-eaſt corner of the Citie; without doubt in the very place where Salomons ſtood: the more eminent building conſiſting of an eight ſquare round of a blewiſh ſtone; adorned with adioyning Pillars, and Tarraſt aboue. In the midſt of the ſheluing Roofe, another vpright aſpireth, though leſſe by far, yet the ſame in forme and ſubſtance with the former, being couered ouer with a Cupolo of Lead. To the Weſt of this a long building adioyneth, like the bodie of a Church, compaſt aboue, and no higher then the vnder Tarras of the other, but like it in colour. Now the Court (the ſame with that of the old Temple) is iuſt foure ſquare euery way, about a flights ſhoot ouer. In the Eaſt Wall, which is alſo a Wall to the Citie, ſtands the Golden Gate, (ſo called in that it was gilded) which belonged onely to the Temple, through which Chriſt paſſed twice; firſt in triumph, and after a Captiue. It is ſaid that the Emperour Heraclius returning from his Perſian Victory, attempted to haue entred thereat in all his glory; but was miraculouſly prohibited, vntill he had put off all his Princely Ornaments; in a ſimple habite bearing that part of the Croſſe of Chriſt on his ſhoulders, which he had recouered from the Perſians. This Gate is now rammed vp by the Turkes, to preuent as ſome ſay, a Propheſie: which is; that the Citie ſhould there be entred by the Chriſtians. A part of the South-ſide, is alſo incloſed with the wall of the Citie. The reſt not inferiour in ſtrength, ſurrounded with a deepe Trench hewne into the Rocke: though now much choaked, heretofore inhabited in the bottome like a ſtreet. In the midſt of this out-court, there is another; wherein the aforeſaid Moſque doth ſtand, raiſed ſome two yards aboue it, and garniſhed on the ſides with little Turrets, through which aſcended; all paued with white Marble (the ſpoile of Chriſtian Churches) where the Mahometans, as well as within, doe performe their particular Orayſons. Sundry low buildings there are adioyning to the wall: as I ſuppoſe, the Habitation of their Santons. In the midſt of that, on the South-ſide, there is a handſome Temple couered with Lead; by the Chriſtians called the Church of the Purification of the Virgine: now alſo a Moſque. Godfrey of Bullein, with the reſt of the Citie tooke this place by aſſault, and ſlue within the circuit thereof tenne thouſand Saracens. By him then made a Cathedrall Church: erecting Lodgings about it for the Patriarch and his Canons. Into which there are now but two entranees: that on the Weſt; and this Gate ouer the head of the Poole Betheſda (called of old the Horſe-gate, for that here they left their Horſes, it beeing not lawfull to ride any further) reſembling the Gate of a Citie. One thing by the way may bee noted: that whereas our Churches turne to the Eaſt. The Temple of Salomon regarded the Weſt, perhaps in reſpect of Mount Caluarie.

Ioachims houſe.

Pilates Palace.

Iudgemeut place.

Sanctum Sanctorum.

Repaſſing the aforeſaid Bridge, (ſeeing we might proceed no farther) on the North-ſide of the ſtreet that ſtretcheth to the Weſt, now in a remote corner, ſtood the Houſe of Iaachim, where a goodly Church was built to the honour of Saint Anna, with a Monaſterie adioyning: of which ſome part yet remayneth, but polluted with the Mahometan Superſtition. Turning backe, we tooke vp the ſaid ſtreet to the Weſt: not far onward, at the left hand ſtood the Palace of Pilate, without all queſtion the Caſtle of Antonia, neere adioyning to the wall of the Temple, where now the Sanziacke hath his Reſidence; depriued of thoſe lofty Towers, and ſcarce appearing aboue the wals that confine it. On the right hand, at the far end of a ſtreet that pointeth to the North, ſtood the ſtately Manſion of Herod: of which ſome ſigne there are left, that witneſſe a periſhed excellency. Now at the Weſt corner of that of Pilates, where the wall for a ſpace doth turne to the Eaſt, there are a paire of high ſtaires which leade to the place of Iuſtice, and Throne of the Romane Preſident, where the Sauiour of the World, was by the World condemned. The ſtaires that they ſay then, were called Scala Sancta, I haue ſeene at Rome neere Saint Iohns in the Lateran; tranſlated thither by Conſtantine. Three paire there are in one Front, diuided but by wals: the middlemoſt thoſe: being of white Marble, and eighteene in number; aſcended and worne by the knees of the Suppliants, who deſcend by the other. At the top there is a little Chappell called Sanctum Sanctorum, where they neuer ſay Maſſe: and vpon this occaſion. A holy Father in the Roome adioyning, hauing conſumed moſt part of the night in his Deuotions, is ſaid, an houre before the dawning, to haue ſeene a proceſſion of Angels paſſe by him, ſome ſinging, and others perhaps that had worſe voyces, bearing Torches: amongſt whom Saint Peter with the Euchariſt; who executed there his Pontificall Function: and that done returned. This rumored the day following about the Citie, numbers of people flockt thither; who found the Roome all to bedropt with Torches in confirmation of this Relation. Whereupon decreed it was, that not any (as not worthy) ſhould ſay Maſſe on that Altar. Now the way betweene the place of thoſe ſtaires and Mount Caluarie, is called the Dolorous way: alongſt which our Sauiour was led to his Paſſion: in which they ſay, (and ſhew where) that hee thrice fell vnder the weight of his Croſſe. And a little beyond there is an ancient Arch that croſſeth the ſtreet, and ſupporteth a ruined Gallerie: in the Eaſt-ſide a two arched window, where Pilate preſented Chriſt to the people. An hundred paces farther, and on the left hand there are the Relikes of a Church, where they ſay that the bleſſed Virgin ſtood when her Sonne paſſed by, and fell into a trance at the ſight of that killing Spectacle. Sixtie ſixe paces beyond (where this ſtreet doth meete with that other which leadeth to Port Ephraim, now called the Gate of Damaſcus) they ſay, that they met with Simon of Cyrene, and compelled him to aſſiſt our Sauiour in the bearing of his burthen. Turning a little on the left hand, they ſhewed vs where the women wept, and he replyed; Weepe not for me you Daughters of Ieruſalem, &c. Then turning againe on the right, we paſſed vnder a little arch, neere which a houſe aſcended by certain ſteps; the place where Veronica dwelt, who gaue our Sauiour, as they ſay, a Napkin as he paſſed by the doore, to cleanſe his face from the bloud which trickled from his Thorne-pierſt browes; and ſpittle wherewith they had deſpitefully defiled him: who returned it againe enriched with his liuely counterfeit, now to be ſeene at Rome vpon Feſtiuall dayes, in Saint Peters Church in the Vatican. Fronting the far end of this ſtreet, an ancient Gate which ſtood in the Weſt wall of the old Citie, yet reſiſts the ſubuerſions of time, called by Nehemia, the old Gate; by the Iebuſites the Port of Iebus, and the Gate of Iudgement; for that the Elders there ſate in Iuſtice: through which the condemned were led to execution vnto Mount Caluarie: then two hundred twentie paces without, and a little on the left hand; though now almoſt in the heart of the Citie. From hence we aſcended the Eaſt-ſide of Mount Caluarie (eight hundred paces from the Palace of Pilate) and ſo deſcended into the Court of the Temple of the Sepulcher. Right againſt it are the ruines of loftie buildings, heretofore the Alberges of the Knight Hoſpitallers of Saint Iohns. Turning to the South we were ſhewed, where once ſtood the dwelling of Zebedeus, in which Iames and Iohn were borne heretofore a Collegiat Church, but now a Moſque. A little higher wee came to the Iron Gate, a paſſage in times paſt betweene the vpper Citie, and the neather (which gaue way vnto Peter conducted by the Angell) built by Alexander the Great: who hauing taken Tyrus, and the Sea-bordering Cities of Phœnicia and Paleſtine, begirt Ieruſalem with his Armie: when on a ſudden the Gates were ſet open, Iaddus the High Prieſt iſſuing forth, clothed in his Pontificall Habit, and followed with a long trayne in white Rayments: whom Alexander eſpying, aduanced before the reſt of the company; and when he drew neere fell proſtrate before him. For it came vnto his remembrance, how once in Dio a Citie of Macedon, conſulting with himſelfe about his Aſian Enterprize, he had ſeene in a Viſion one ſo apparelled, who bid him boldly proceed, and told him that the God whom he ſerued would protect his Armie, and make him Lord of the Perſian Monarchie. Then hand in hand they entred the Citie, the High Prieſt conducting him vnto the Temple, where hee ſacrificed vnto God according to the manner of the Hebrewes: Iaddus expounding vnto him the Propheſies of Daniel, which foretold of his victories. From thence we proceeded vnto the Houſe of Saint Marke, of which an obſcure Church in the cuſtodie of the Sorians doth retayne the memory. And beyond, we came to the Church of Saint Iames, ſtanding in the place where he was beheaded; erected by the Spaniards, together with an Hoſpitall, and now poſſeſt by the Armenians. This ſeene, we returned to the Couent.

Dolorous way.

Simon of Cyrene

Veronica.

Zebedees houſe.

Saint Iames.

The day following, wee went out (as before) at the Port of Sion. Turning on the left hand along the wall, wee were ſhewed the place where Peter wept, when hee had denyed our Sauiour; dignified once with a Church, and whereof there now remayneth ſome part of the foundation. Right againſt it there is a Poſterne in the wall, formerly called Port Eſquelme; at which they bore forth the filth of the Citie. The foundation of this part of the wall is much more ancient, and much more ſtrong then the reſt, conſiſting of blacke ſtones of a mightie ſize. Not farre beyond, we croſſed the Valley of Ichoſaphat, and mounted the South end of Mount Oliuet, by the way of Bethania. Hauing aſcended a good height, on the right hand they ſhewed vs where Iudas hanged himſelfe (the ſtumpe of the Sycamore, as they ſay, not long ſince extant) being buried in a Grot that adioyneth. Neerer the top where Chriſt curſed the fig-tree; many there growing at this preſent. Deſcending the Eaſt-ſide of the Mountaine, a little on the left hand, we came to a deſolate Chappell, about which diuers ruines; the Houſes heretofore of Simon the Leper. From thence we deſcended vnto the Caſtle of Lazarus, (whereof yet there is ſomething extant) the Brother to Marie and Martha: cloſe vnder which lyes Bethania, (two miles from Ieruſalem) now a tottered Village, inhabited by Arabians. In it the Vault where Chriſt rayſed Lazarus from death; ſquare and deepe, deſcended into by certaine ſteps. Aboue are two little Chappels, which haue in either of them an Altar: where ſtood a ſtately Church erected by Saint Helena: and after that an Abbey, Queene Miliſend the Foundreſſe. A little North of Bethania, we came to the ruines of a Monaſterie, now leuell with the floore, ſeated in the place vnto which the penitent Marie retyred from the corrupting vanities of the Citie. South-ward of this, and not far off, ſtood the Houſe of Martha, honoured likewiſe with a Temple, and ruinated alike. Equally diſtant from both, there is a ſtone, whereon, they ſay, that our Sauiour ſate, when the two Siſters intreated him to reſtore life to their Brother now foure dayes buryed: the Pilgrime that breakes off a piece thereof, ſtands excommunicated. A little aboue, there is a Fountayne of excellent water, deepe ſunke into the Rocke, (by which we refreſhed our ſelues with prouiſion brought with vs) called the Fountayne of the Apoſtles. Now we aſcended Mount Oliuet againe, by another way more inclining to the North. Vpon the right hand, and not far from the top, ſtood Bethfage, whoſe very foundations are now confounded; from whence Chriſt paſt vnto Ieruſalem in triumph vpon an Aſſes Colt: euery Palme-ſunday by the Pater-guardian ſuperſtitiouſly imitated.

Sion Port.

Peters penance.

Iudas

Bethania.

Lazarus.

Marthas houſe

Bethfage.

Quarantena.
Dead Sea.
Iordan.
Ierico.
Balme.

Here looke we backe, and for a while ſuruey the high mountaine Quarantania, the low Plains of Iericho, Iordan, and the Dead Sea; which we could not goe to, by reaſon of our tardy arriuall, the Pilgrims returning on the ſelfe-ſame day that wee came vnto Ieruſalem. Vndertaken but once a yeere in regard of the charges, then guarded by a Sheck of the Arabians, to reſiſt the wild Arabs, who almoſt famiſhed on thoſe barren Mountaines (which they dare not husband for feare of ſurpriſall) rob all that paſſe, if inferiour in ſtrength: yet payed wee towards that conduct, two Dollars apiece to the Sanziack. Iordan runneth wel-nigh thirtie miles from Ieruſalem; the way thither by Bethania; made long and troubleſome by the ſteepe deſcents and labyrinthian windings; being to the iudgement of the eye, not the fourth of that diſtance. In this the Pilgrims waſh themſelues, and bring from thence of the water, ſoueraigne (as they ſay) for ſundry diſeaſes. A great way on this ſide the Riuer, there ſtands a ruined Temple, vpon the winding of a crooked channell, forſaken by the ſtreame, (or then not filled but by inundations) where Chriſt (as they ſay) was baptized by Iohn. On the right hand ſtood Ierico, a Citie of fame (and in the time of the Chriſtians an Epiſcopall Sea) beautifull in her Palmes, but chiefly proud of her Balſamum, a Plant then onely thought particular vnto Iurie, which grew moſt plentifully in this valley, and on the ſides of the Weſterne Mountaines which confine it, being about two cubits high, growing vpright, and yeerely pruned of her ſuperfluous branches. In the Summer they lanced the rine with a ſtone, (not to be touched with ſteele) but not deeper then the inward filme; for otherwiſe it forthwith periſhed: from whence thoſe fragrant and precious teares did diſtill, which now are onely brought vs from India; but they farre worſe, and generally ſophiſticated. The bole of this ſhrub is of leaſt eſteeme, the rine of greater, the ſeed exceeding that, but the liquor of greateſt, knowne to be right in the curdling of Milke, and not ſtayning of garments. Here remayned two Orchards thereof in the dayes of Veſpaſian; in defence of which, a battell was fought with the Iewes that endeauoured to deſtroy them. Of ſuch repute with the Romanes, that Pompey firſt, and afterwards Titus did preſent it in their triumphs as an eſpeciall glorie: now vtterly loſt through the barbarous waſte and neglect of the Mahometans. Where Ierico ſtood, there ſtandeth a few poore Cottages inhabited by the Arabians. The valley about ten miles ouer, now producing but a ſpiny graſſe; bordered on the Eaſt with the high Arabian Mountaines, on the Weſt with thoſe of Iurie; amongſt which, Quarantania the moſt eminent, in that wilderneſſe where Chriſt for fortie dayes was tempted by the Deuill, ſo high, that few dare attempt to aſcend to the top; from whence the Tempter ſhewed him the Kingdomes of the earth; now crowned with a Chappell, which is yet vnruined. There is beſides in the ſide an Hermitage, with a Ciſterne to receiue raine-water; and another Grot, wherein the Hermites were buried. Here Saint Ierome (as they ſay) fulfilled his foure yeeres penance.

Mount Oliuet.
Chappell of the Aſcenſion.
Foot-print.
Cell of Pelagia.

But now returne wee to the ſummit of Mount Oliuet, which ouer-toppeth the neighbouring Mountaines, whoſe Weſt ſide doth giue you a full ſuruey of each particular part of the Citie, bedect with Oliues, Almonds, and Fig-trees; heretofore with Palmes: pleaſantly rich when husbanded, and now vpbraiding the barbarous with his neglected pregnancy. So famous in ſacred hiſtories, and ſo often bleſt with the preſence of Chriſt, and apparition of Angels. It is not much leſſe then a mile in heighth, ſtretching from North to South, and hauing three heads. On the middlemoſt (and that the higheſt) there ſtandeth a little Chappell, of an eight ſquare round, at euery corner a Pillar, mounted on three degrees, being all of white marble, and of an elegant ſtructure: within it is not aboue twelue foot ouer, paued with the naturall rocke, which beareth the impreſſion of a foot-ſtep, they ſay, of our Sauiours; the laſt that he ſet vpon earth, when from thence he aſcended into Heauen: A place in honour inferiour vnto none, frequented by Chriſtians, poſſeſt by Mahometans, yet free to both their deuotions. Built it was by the mother of Conſtantine, and couered like the Sepulchre, with a ſumptuous Temple (whoſe ruines yet looke aloft) together with a Monaſterie. On the South-ſide of which, they ſhewed vs the Cell of Palagia; a famous, rich, and beautifull Curtizan of Antioch, who conuerted by the Biſhop of Dimiata, retired hither vnknowne, and here long liued in the habite and penurie of an Hermite, being not till dead, diſcouered for a woman. Deſcending, wee were ſhewed by the way, where our Sauiour taught them the Pater noſter, where hee fore-told of the deſtruction of Ieruſalem, where the Apoſtles made the Creede, where hee wept ouer the Citie, (a paued ſquare, now a Mahometan Oratorie) and ſuch like traditions, not much worthy the mentioning. So croſſing the valley by the Sepulchre of the bleſſed Virgin, we entred the Citie at the gate of Saint Steuen; returning the ſame way (as the day before) to the Monaſterie.

Much of the day, and all the night following we ſpent in the Church of the Sepulchre: they then concluding the ceremonies and ſolemnities of that Feſtiuall. The next day wee prepared for our departure. Wee agreed with certaine Muccermen (ſo call they their Muliters) of Aleppo (who had brought a Portugall hither with his Ianizarie, and interpreter then newly come from India) to carrie vs vnto Tripoly, and to defray all charges (our diet excepted) for ſixe and twentie Dollars a man, and for halfe ſo much as if we went but to Acre, greatly to the diſpleaſure of Atala the Drogaman; that would not vndertake our conuey vnder a greater ſumme:

who found a time to effect his malice; yet his little paines wee rewarded with foure Dollars. Caphar and Aſſe hire about the Countrey had coſt vs ſixe Sultanies. We gaue money to the Frierſeruants, and that not niggardly, conſidering our light purſes and long iourney; whereof the Pater-guardian particularly enquired, leſt their vow of pouertie they ſhould couetouſly infringe (or rather perhaps defraud his deſire) by retayning what was giuen, to their priuate vſes: A crime with excommunication puniſhed: yet that leſſe feared, I ſuppoſe, then detection. They vſe to marke the armes of Pilgrims with the names of Ieſus, Maria, Ieruſalem, Bethlehem, the Ieruſalem Croſſe, and ſundry other Characters, done in ſuch manner as hath beene declared before. The Pater-guardian would needs thruſt vpon vs ſeuerall Certificates, which returned him as many Zecchines: he deſired that we would make their pouertie knowne, with the dignitie of thoſe ſanctified places: as a motiue to reliefe, and more frequent Pilgrimages.

§. VI.

His returne. Obſeruations of memorable places by the way. Of Mount Carmel, Acon, Sidon, Tyrus of Facardin, Emer of Sidon his Greatneſſe.

LEauing behind thoſe friendly Italians that accompanied vs from Cairo (being now alſo vpon their returne) on the firſt of Aprill we departed from Ieruſalem, in the companie of that Apothecarie (now Knight of the Sepulchre) and the Portugall before mentioned; together with an Alman and a French-man; all bound for Tripoly. Wee returned by the way which we ſtrayed from in our comming; leſſe difficult to paſſe; the Mountaines more pleaſant and fruitfull, neere the Citie there are many Sepulchres and places of ruines, here and there diſperſed. On the right hand, and in ſight, is Silo, of a long time a ſtation for the Arke of the Couenant, the higheſt Mountaine of Iury, bearing on the top ſome fragments of a Citie. North of it on another, the remaynes of that Rama Sophim (with more likelihood of the truth then the other) which was the habitation of Samuel: whoſe bones are ſaid to haue beene tranſlated vnto Conſtantinople, by the Emperour Arcadius. After foure miles riding wee deſcended into the valley of Terebinth, famous, though little, for the ſlaughter of Golias. A Bridge here croſſeth the Torrent, neere which the ruines of an ancient Monaſterie, more worthie the obſeruing for the greatneſſe of the ſtones, then fineneſſe of the workmanſhip. Hauing rid foure miles further, they ſhewed vs Moden, the ancient ſeate of the Macchabees, toward the North, and ſeated on the top of an aſpiring hill, which yet ſupporteth the reliques of a Citie: whereof there ſomething hath beene ſpoken already. Beyond, by the high-way ſide there is another Monaſterie, not altogether ſubuerted: of late inhabited by ſome of the Franciſcans, who beſet one night by the Arabs, and not able to maſter their terrour, quitted it the day following. About a ſtones caſt off, there ſtandeth a Church, now deſolate, yet retayning the name of the Prophet Ieremie. But whether here ſtood that Anatboth or no that challengeth his birth, I am ignorant. About three miles further, wee paſſed by a place, called Sereth, where by certaine ruines there ſtandeth a pile like a broken Tower, engrauen with Turkiſh Characters, vpon that ſide which regardeth the way; erected as they ſay, by an Ottoman Emperour. Now hauing for a while deſcended thoſe Mountaines that neighbour the Champaine, we came to the ruines of an ancient building, ouer-looking the leuell: yet no leſſe excelling in commodious ſituation, then delicacie of proſpect. They call it, The houſe of the Good Thiefe. Perhaps ſome Abbey erected in that place; or Caſtle here built to defend this paſſage. Vpon the right hand there ſtandeth a handſome Moſque, euery way open, and ſupported with Pillars, the roofe flat, and charged on the Eaſt end with a Cupolo, heretofore a Chriſtian Chappell. This is ten miles from Rama, whither we came that night; and wet as we were, tooke vp our lodgings on the ground in the Houſe of Sion: nothing that day befalling, ſaue the violence done vs by certaine Spaheis, who tooke our Wine from vs; and payments of head-money in ſundry places, vnto which we were neither chargeable nor troubleſome.

Shilo.

Vale of Terebynth.

Moden.

Ieremie.

Good thiefes houſe.

Not vntill noone next day departed we from Rama: trauelling through a moſt fruitfnll Valley. The firſt place we paſſed by was Lydda, made famous by Saint Peter, called after Dioſpolis, that is, the Citie of Iupiter, deſtroyed by Ceſtius; here yet ſtandeth a Chriſtian Temple, built, as they ſay, by a King of England to the honour of Saint George, a Cappadocian by birth, aduanced in the Warres to the dignitie of a Tribune, who after became a Souldier of Chriſt; and here is ſaid to haue ſuffered Martyrdome vnder Diocletian. Others ſay, that there neuer was ſuch a man, and that the ſtorie is no other then an allegorie. The Greeks haue the cuſtodie of this Church, who ſhew a Scull, which they affirme to be Saint Georges. In the time of the Chriſtians it was the ſeate of a Suffragan, now hardly a Village. Eight miles from Rama ſtands the Caſtle of Augia, built like a Caine, and kept by a ſmall Garriſon. A little beyond, the Muccermen would haue ſtaid (which wee would not ſuffer, being then the beſt time of the day for trauell) that Rama.

Lydda.

Saint Georges Temple built by a King of England.

Turkiſh knauerie, brauerie, ſlauerie.

Goodly Forreſt.

Silent riding.

Shining Flies.

they might by night haue auoided the next Village, with the payments there due: where wee were hardly intreated by the procurement of Attala, who holds correſpondencie with the Moores of thoſe quarters. They would not take leſſe then foure Dollars a man (when perhaps as many Medeins were but due) and that with much iangling. They ſought occaſion how to trouble vs, beating vs off our Mules, becauſe forſooth, wee did not light to doe homage to a ſort of halfe-clad Raſcals; pulling the white Shaſh from the head of the Portugal (whereby he wel hoped to haue paſt for a Turke) his Ianizarie looking on. Here detayned they vs vntill two of the clocke the next morning, without meate, without ſleepe, couched on the wet earth, and waſhed with raine; yet expecting worſe, and then ſuffered vs to depart. After a while wee entred a goodly Forreſt, full of tall and delightfull Trees, intermixed with fruitfull and flowrie Launes. Perhaps the earth affoordeth not the like; it cannot a more pleaſant. Hauing paſſed this part of the Wood (the reſt inclining to the Weſt, and then againe extending to the North) we might diſcouer a number of ſtragling Tents, ſome iuſt in our way, and neere to the skirts of the Forreſt. Theſe were Spaheis belonging to the Hoſt of Morat Baſſa, then in the Confines of Perſia. They will take (eſpecially from a Chriſtian) whatſoeuer they like; and kindly they vſe him if he paſſe without blowes: nor are their Commanders at all times free from their inſolencies. To auoid them, we ſtrucke out of the way, and croſſed the pregnant champaine to the foote of the Mountaynes, where for that day we repoſed our ſelues: when it grew darke, wee aroſe, inclining on the left hand, mingling after a while with a ſmall Carauan of Moores; enioyned to ſilence, and to ride without our Hats, leſt diſcouered for Chriſtians. The clouds fell downe in ſtreames, and the pitchie night had bereft vs of the conduct of our eyes, had not the Lightning affoorded a terrible light. And when the raine intermitted, the Aire appeared as if full of ſparkles of fire, borne too and fro with the wind, by reaſon of the infinite ſwarmes of Flies that doe ſhine like Glow-wormes, to a ſtranger a ſtrange ſpectacle. In the next Wood we out-ſtript that Carauan, where the theeuiſh Arabs had made ſundrie fires; to which our footmen drew neere to liſten, that we might paſſe more ſecurely. An houre after mid-night the skie began to cleere, when on the other ſide of the Wood we fell amongſt certaine Tents of Spaheis; by whom we paſt with as little noiſe as we could, ſecured by their ſounder ſleepings. Not farre beyond, through a large Glade betweene two Hils, we leiſurely deſcended for the ſpace of two houres (a Torrent ruſhing downe on the left hand of vs) when not able longer to keepe the backs of our Mules, we laid vs downe in the bottome vnder a plump of Trees on the farre ſide of a Torrent. With the Sunne we aroſe, and found our ſelues at the Eaſt end, and North ſide of Mount Carmel.

Mount Carmel.

Elias his houſe.

Friars Carmelites.

Tortora.

Caſarea.

Mount Carmel ſtretcheth from Eaſt to Weſt, and hath his vttermoſt Baſis waſht with the Sea, ſteepeſt towards the North, and of an indifferent altitude: rich in Oliues and Vines when husbanded; and abounding with ſeuerall ſorts of Fruits and Herbs, both medicinable and fragrant: now much ouer-growne with Woods and Shrubs of ſweet ſauour: celebrated for the habitation of Elias, whoſe houſe was after his death conuerted into a Synagogue; where Oracles, it is ſaid, were giuen by God; called by Suetonius the God Carmelus, whoſe words are theſe, intreating of Veſpaſian: In Iudea conſulting with the Oracle of the God Carmelus, the Oracle aſſured him, that whatſoeuer he vnder-tooke ſhould be ſucceſſefull. Where then was nothing more to be ſeene then an Altar. From hence proceeded the Order of the Friar Carmelites, as ſucceſſors to the children of the Prophets there left by Elias; who had their beginning in the Deſarts of Syria, in the yeere 1180. inſtituted by Almericus Biſhop of Antioch, and ſaid to haue receiued their white habite from our Ladie, whom Albertus the Patriarke of Ieruſalem tranſported firſt into Europe. There is yet to be ſeene the remaynes of their Monaſterie, with a Temple dedicated to the bleſſed Virgin; vnder which a little Chappell or Caue, the ancient dwelling of Elias. This is inherited by an Emer of the Arabians, who after the ancient cuſtome of that Nation doth liue in Tents, euen during the Winter, although poſſeſt of ſundrie conuenient houſes; whoſe Signiorie ſtretcheth to the South, and along the Shoare. Within his Precinct ſtands the Caſtle of the Perigrines, vpon a cape, almoſt ſurrounded with the Sea, now called Tortora, built by Raimond Earle of Toloſa for their better ſecuritie, and after fortified by the Templers. Ten miles South of this, ſtood that famous Caſarea (more anciently called the Tower of Strato, of a King of Aradus the Builder ſo named, who liued in the dayes of Alexander) in ſuch ſort re-edified by Herod, that it little declined in magnificencie from the principall Cities of Aſia; now leuell with the Floore, the Hauen loſt, and ſituation abandoned.

Chiſon, Tabor, Hermon.

Belus.

We paſſed the Torrent Chiſon, which floweth from the Mountaynes of Tabor and Hermon; and gliding by the North skirts of Carmel, diſchargeth it ſelfe into the Sea. Carmel is the South bound to the ample valley of Acre; bounded on the North by thoſe of Saron, on the Weſt it hath the Sea, and it is incloſed on the Eaſt with the Mountaines of Galile. In length about fourteene miles, in bredth about halfe as much; the neerer the Sea the more barren. In it there ariſe two riuolets of liuing, but peſtilent waters, drilling from ſeuerall mariſhes; the firſt is the Riuer of Belus, called by Plinie Pagida and Palus, and Badas by Simonides; whoſe ſand affoordeth matter for Glaſſe, becomming fuſable with the heate of the Fornace. Strabo reports the like of diuers places thereabout. And Ioſephus ſpeaking of this, declareth, that adioyning thereunto, there is a pit an hundred cubits in circuite, couered with Sand like Graſſe; and when borne away (for there-with they accuſtomed to Ballace their ſhips) it forth-with filled againe, borne thither by winds from places adiacent: And moreouer, whatſoeuer Minerall was contained therein, conuerted into Glaſſe; and Glaſſe there laid, againe into Sand. Neere to this pit ſtood the Sepulcher of Memnon, the Sonne of Tythonus.

Glaſſe-ſand.

Memnons Sepulcher.

Hauing rid ſeuen or eight miles along the skirts of the hils, we croſſed the Valley, and anon that other Riuolet a little aboue, where it falleth into the Road of Acre; where to our comfort, we eſpyed the Ship that brought vs to Alexandria, with another of London, called the Elizabeth Conſort: when entring the Towne, we were kindly entertained by our Country-men. Here ſtayed we, the reſt of our company proceeded vnto Tripoly; this being the mid-way betweene it and Ieruſalem. But our Muccerman would not reſt ſatisfied with halfe of his hire, according to our compact, whom we were glad to be rid of for twentie Dollers a man: our Oaths being bootleſſe againſt a True Beleeuer, for ſo do they tearme themſelues.

Ship of London.

Turkiſh Muſulman.

This Citie was called Ace at the firſt, a refuge for the Perſians in their Ægyptian warres: Then Ptolomais of Ptolomy King of Ægypt: Colonia Claudij, of Claudius Caſar, who heere planted a Colony: Afterward Acon, and now Acre. Seated on a leuell, in forme of a Triangular Shield: on two ſides waſht with the Sea; the third regarding the Champaine. The carkaſſe ſhewes that the body hath beene ſtrong, double immured, fortified with Bulwarkes and Towers; to each wall a ditch, lined with ſtone, and vnder thoſe diuers ſecret Poſternes. You would thinke by the ruines, that the Citie rather conſiſted wholly of diuers conioyning Caſtles, then any way mixed with priuate dwellings; which witneſſe a notable defence, and an vnequall aſſault; or that the rage of the Conquerors extended beyond Conqueſt: the huge Wals and Arches turned topſie-turuey, and lying like Rockes vpon the foundation. On the South ſide lyes the Hauen, no better then a Bay; open to the Weſt, North-weſt, and South-weſt winds, the bottome ſtony, and ill for their Cables. There are the ruines of a Palace, which yet doth acknowledge King Richard for the founder, confirmed likewiſe by the Paſſant Lion. An hundred yeares after, it remained with the Chriſtians, and was the laſt receptacle in the Holy Land, for the Knights Hoſpitalers of Saint Iohns of Ieruſalem, called thereupon Saint Iohn de Acre; to whom a goodly Temple neere the South ſide of the Citie was conſecrated, which now ouer-toppeth the reſt of the ruines. In a Vault thereof a great maſſe of Treaſure was hid by the Knights of the Order, which made knowne from time to time vnto their Succeſſors, was fetcht from hence about forty yeares ſince by the Gallies of Malta, the Inhabitants abandoning the Towne vpon their landing. In the yeare 1291. beſieged by an hundred and fiftie thouſand Mahometans, Acre receiued an vtter ſubuerſion, which the Mamalucks after in ſome ſort repaired, and loſt it at laſt with their name and Empire, vnto the Turkiſh Selimus. It is now vnder the Sanziack of Saphet, and vſurped with the reſt of that Prouince, by the Emer of Sidon. In the Towne there are not aboue two or three hundred Inhabitants, who dwell heere and there in the patcht-vp ruines; onely a new Moſque they haue, and a ſtrong ſquare Cane (built, where once was the Arſenall for Gallies) in which the Francke Merchants ſecurely diſpoſe of themſelues and their Commodities: who for the moſt part bring hither ready Monies, (Dutch Dollers being, as generally throughout Iury and Phœnicia, equiualent with Royals of eight, elſe-where leſſe by ten Aſpers) fraughting their ſhips with Cottons that grow abundantly in the Countrey adioyning. Here haue they a Cadee, the principall Officer. The Engliſh are much reſpected by the principall Moores: inſomuch, as I haue ſeene the ſtriker ſtricken by his fellow, a rare example amongſt the Mahometans, which I rather attribut to their policie then humanitie, leſt by their quitting of the place they ſhould be depriued of their profit, they being the onely men that doe maintaine that trading. Here wraſtle they in Breeches of oyled Leather, cloſe to their thighs, their bodies naked and anointed according to the ancient vſe, who rather fall by conſent, then by ſlight or violence. The Inhabitants doe nightly houſe their Goats and Sheepe for feare of Iaccals (in my opinion no other then Foxes) whereof an infinite number doe lurke in the obſcure Vaults, and reedy Mariſhes adioyning to the Brooke; the Brooke it ſelfe abounding with Torteſſes.

Acon See of it King Richard and his Nephew Earle Richards Acts, ſup. c. 4.

Reſpects of Engliſh.

Wreſtling.

Iaccals.

Foure daies we ſtayed at Acre; in which time we vainely expected the leiſure of the Merchants to haue accompanied vs to Nazareth, diſtant from hence about fifteene miles: who goe by one way and returne by another, for feare of the Arabs. Now a ſmall Village of Galily, ſeated in a little Vale betweene two hils, where are the remaines of a goodly Temple (once the Chaire of an Arch-biſhop) erected ouer the houſe of the bleſſed Virgine: whereof there is yet one roome to be ſeene, partly hewne out of the liuing Rocke; amongſt thoſe Chriſtians of great veneration. But the Romaniſts relate, that the roome wherein ſhe was borne, was borne by the Angels (at ſuch time as the Countrey was vniuerſally poſſeſſed by the Infidels) ouer Seas and ſhores to a Citie of Illyria. But when thoſe people grew niggardly in their Offerings, it was rapt from thence, and ſet in the Woods of Picenum; within the poſſeſſions of a Noble Lady, named Lauretta, frequented by infinite numbers of Pilgrimes. When many miſcarrying by the ambuſhment of Theeues, who lurking in the Woods adioyning, the bleſſed Virgine commanded Bleſſed Virgins houſe.

Lady of Lauretta.

*It is like, made by ſome Abiſſine, for they picture Chriſt blacke, like themſelues.

the Angels to remooue it vnto a certaine Mountaine belonging vnto two Brethren, where ſhee got much riches, and ſumptuous apparell, by the beneuolence of her Votaries, and her charitable miracles. By which meanes the two Brethren grew alſo rich, and withall, diſſentions about the deuiſion of their purchaſes. Whereupon it was once more tranſported by thoſe winged Porters, and ſet in the place where as now it ſtandeth, neere to the Adriaticke Sea, and not farre from Ancona, yet retaining the name of Lauretta. In which is her Image (made as they ſay, by Saint Luke) of the hue (though a Iew) of a Blackamore *. This Conclaue hath a couer of Marble, yet not touched by the ſame, included within a magnificent Temple, adorned with Armors and Trophies; and beſet with Statues and Tables, repreſenting her miraculous cures and protections: And well hath ſhe beene paid for her labour: her Territories large, her Iewels ineſtimable; her apparell much more then Princely, both in coſt and varietie; her Coffers full: of whom, though the Pope be a yearely borrower, yet are they doubly repleniſhed by the firſt, and latter Spring-tides of deuotion. Now at Nazareth, no Chriſtian is ſuffered to dwell by the Moores that inhabit it. Moſt of the old Citie ſeemeth to haue ſtood vpon the hill that adioyneth, which beares the decayes of diuers other Churches. Nazareth gaue the name of Nazaretans vnto Chriſtians, called here corruptly Noſtranes at this preſent.

Spouts of water.

Sidon.

Vpon the eight of Aprill we went aboord the Trinitie, and hoiſed Sailes for Sidon: the winds fauourable, and the Seas compoſed; but anon they began to wrangle, and wee to ſuffer. Spouts of water were ſeene to fall againſt the Promontorie of Carmel, the tempeſt increaſed with the night; and did what it could to make a night of the day that enſued. But the diſtemperature and horror is more then the danger, where Mariners be Engliſh, who are the abſoluteſt vnder heauen in their profeſſion; and are by forreiners compared vnto Fiſhes. About foure of the clocke we came before Sidon, the Ship not able to attaine to the Harborage of the Rocke, which is enuironed by the Sea, and the onely protection of that rode for ſhips of good burthen: but ſome of vs were ſo ſicke, that we deſired to be ſet a ſhoare in the Skiffe, (a long mile diſtant) which was performed, but not without perill.

Tripolis.

Alexandretta, or Scanderoone.

Phœnicia is a Prouince of Syria, interpoſing the Sea and Galily, ſtretching North and South from the Riuer of Valanus, to the Caſtle of the Peregrines, which is on the farre ſide of Mount Carmel. The chiefe Sea-bordering Cities of Phœnicia, are Tripolis, Biblis, Beritus, Sidon, Tyrus, and Ptolomais, now called Acre. Tripolis is ſo called, becauſe it was ioyntly built by Tyras, Sidon and Aradus. It is ſeated vnder Libanus, and commanded by a well-furniſhed Cittadell, manned with two hundred Ianizaries. Before it, there is an ill-neighbouring banke of Sand, which groweth daily both in greatneſſe and neereneſſe; by which they haue a Propheſie, that it ſhall in proceſſe of time be deuoured. The Towne and Territories are gouerned by a Baſſa. Two miles off, and Weſt from it, is the heauen, made by a round piece of Land adioyning to the maine by an Iſthmos; the mouth thereof regarding the North. On each ſide a Bulwarke kept by an hundred Ianizaries, and planted with Ordnance to defend the entrance. Hither of late the Grand Signior hath remoued the Scale, which was before at Alexandretta, a Towne in the furtheſt extents of the Streights, beyond the Riuer Orontes, moſt contagiouſly ſeated by reaſon of the Mariſhes and loftie bordering Mountaines (towards the North, being part of Taurus) which depriue it of the rarifying Sunne, for no ſmall part of the day; inſomuch, that not many forreiners eſcape that there linger any ſeaſon, who goe not a ſhoare before the Sunne bee high mounted, and returne againe ere too low declining: Notwithſtanding, the Merchants doe offer great ſummes of Money to haue it reſtored vnto that place, as more conuenient for their Traffick with Aleppo, (the principall Mart of that part of Aſia for Silkes, and ſundry other Commodities) from thence but three daies iourney, being eight from Tripoly: which the Turke will not as yet aſſent to, for that diuers ſhips haue beene taken out of that Rode by Pirats, there being no Forts for protection, nor no fit place to erect them on. A thing vſuall it is betweene Tripoly and Aleppo, as betweene Aleppo and Babylon, to make tame Doues the ſpeedy tranſporters of their Letters; which they wrap about their Legges like Ieſſes, trained thereunto at ſuch time as they haue young ones, by bearing them from them in open Cages. A Fowle of a notable memory. Sidon is at this day contracted within narrow limits, and onely ſhewes the foundations of her greatneſſe; lying Eaſtward of this that ſtandeth, and ouer-ſhadowed with Oliues. There is nothing left of Antiquitie, but the ſuppoſed Sepulcher of the Patriarke Zebulon, included within a little Chappell amongſt theſe ruines, and held (eſpecially by the Iewes) in great veneration. The Towne now being, is not worth our Deſcription; the Walls neither faire nor of force; the Hauen decayed, when at beſt but ſeruing for Gallies. At the end of the Peir, ſtands a paltry Blocke-houſe, furniſhed with ſutable Artillery. The Moſque, the Bannia, and Cane for Merchants, the onely buildings of note.

Zebulons Sepulcher.

Emers of Sidon.

The Inhabitants are of ſundry Nations and Religions, gouerned by a ſucceſſion of Princes, whom they call Emers: deſcended, as they ſay, from the Druſes, the remainder of thoſe French men which were brought into theſe parts by Godfrey of Bullen, who driuen into the Mountaines aboue, and defending themſelues by the aduantage of the place, could neuer be vtterly deſtroyed by the Saracens. At length they affoorded them peace, and libertie of Religion; conditionally that they wrote the white Turbant, and paid ſuch duties as the naturall ſubiect. But in tract of time they fell from the knowledge of Chriſt: nor throughly embracing the other, are indeede of neither. As for this Emer, he was neuer knowne to pray, nor euer ſeene in a Moſque. His name is Faccardine, ſmall of ſtature, but great in courage and atchieuements: about the age of forty, ſubtile as a Foxe, and not a little inclining to the Tyrant. He neuer commenceth battell, nor executeth any notable deſigne, without the conſent of his* mother. To his Towne hee hath added a kingly Segnioury, what by his ſword, and what by his Stratagems. When Morat Baſſa (now principall Vizier) came firſt to his gouernement of Damaſco, he made him his, by his free entertainment and bounty: which hath conuerted to his no ſmall aduantage, of whom he made vſe in his contention with Frecke the Emer of Balbec; by his authority ſtrangled. After that he pickt a quarrel with Ioſeph Emer of Tripoly, and diſpoſſeſt him of Barut*, with the territories belonging thereunto, together with Gazer, about twelue miles beyond it; a place by ſituation inuincible: This Ioſeph hated of his people for his exceſſiue tyranny, got to bee made Seidar of Damaſco (which is Generall of the Souldiery) and by that power intended a reuenge. But in the meane ſeaſon Faccardine ſackt Tripoly it ſelfe, and forced the Emer to flie in a Venecian ſhippe vnto Cyprus: where againe he imbarqued in a French-man, and landed at the Caſtle of the Pare-grines; and there by Achmet the Arabian (formerly mentioned) entertained, hee repayred to Damaſco, entred on his charge, conuerting his whole ſtrength vpon the Sidonian, now in the field; and ioyned with Ali Baſſa his confederate. In a plaine ſome eight miles ſhort of Damaſco, the armies met; the Damaſcens are foiled, and purſued to the gates of the City: The Conquerors lodge in the ſuburbs, who are remoued by the force of an hundred and fifty thouſand Sultanie. This battel was fought about the midſt of Nouember in the yere of our Lord 1606. Three months after a Peace is concluded amongſt them. But the ſommer following, Morat the Great Vizier hauing ouerthrowne Ali Baſſa of Aleppo, that valiant rebell (who in three maine battels withſtood his whole forces; hauing ſet vp an order of Sedgmen in oppoſition of the Ianizaries.) they ſought by manifold complaints to incenſe him againſt the Emer of Sidon, as confederate with the traytor; which they vrged with gifts, receiued and loſt: for the old Baſſa mindfull of the friendly offices done him by the Emer (corrupted alſo, as is thought, with great ſummes of money) not only not moleſteth, but declareth him a good ſubiect. Hauing till of late held good correſpondency with the City and Garriſon of Damaſco, they had made him Sanziacke of Saphet. Now, when according to the gouernement of Turkie, which once in 2 or 3 yeeres doth vſe to remoue the Gouernours of Cities and Prouinces; and that another was ſent by the Damaſcens to ſucceede him, he refuſed to reſigne it; notwithſtanding tendring to the Teſtadar or Treaſurer the reuenue of that Sanziackry; this was the firſt occaſion of their quarrell. Hee got from the improuident Peaſants the Caſtle of Elkiffe, which he hath ſtrongly fortified, and made the receptacle of Treaſure: And the Caſtle of Banies from the Shecke that ought it, by a wile (which ſtandeth on a hill by it ſelfe, and is indeede by nature inuincible.) For the Emer in peaceable manner, pitching his tents not farre from the wall, was kindely viſited and entertained by the Sheck: when deſirous to ſee it, he conducted him vp, hauing not aboue twenty or thirty in his company, but thoſe priuately armed; leauing order that the reſt ſhould aſcend by twoes and by threes, and ſo ſurpriſed it without bloud-ſhed, planting the inhabitants in other places within his Dominions, and ſtrengthning this with a Garriſon. Out of the Rock whereon it is mounted ariſeth one of the two heads of Iordan. His Signiory ſtretcheth from the Riuer of Canis (which they call Celp) to the foote of mount Carmel. In which the places of principall note, are Gazir, Barut, Sidon, Tyrus, Acre, Saffet (which was Tyberias) Diar, Camer, Elkiffe, Banias, the two heads of Iordan, the lake Semochonthis (now called Houle) and ſea of Tyberias, with the hot bath adioyning; Nazareth, Cana, and mount Tabor. Saffet is his principall City, in which there abide a number of Iewes, who affect the place, in that Iacob had his being thereabout before his going downe into Ægypt.

* She is ſuppoſed skilfull in blacke Arts.

*Olim Berytus.

The Grand Signior doth often threaten his ſubuerſion, which he puts off with a ieſt, that hee knowes he will not this yeare trouble him, whoſe diſpleaſure is not ſo much prouoked by his incroching, as by the reuealed intelligence which he holds with the Florentine; whom he ſuffers to harbour within his Hauen of Tyrus, (yet excuſing it as a place lying waſte, and not to be defended) to come aſhoare for freſh-water, buyes of him vnderhand his prizes, and furniſheth him with neceſſaries. But deſignes of a higher nature haue been treated of betweene them, as is well knowne to certaine Merchants imployed in that buſineſſe. And I am verily perſwaded, that if the occaſion were laid hold of, and freely purſued by the Chriſtians, it would terribly ſhake, if not vtterly confound the Ottoman Empire. It is ſaid for a certainty that the Turke will turne his whole forces vpon him the next Sommer: And therefore more willingly condeſcends to a Peace with the Perſian. But the Emer is not much terrified with the rumor (although he ſeekes to diuert the tempeſt by continuance of gifts, the fauour of his friends, and profeſſed integritie:) for he not a little preſumeth of inuincible forts, well ſtored for a long warre; and aduantage of the mountaines: hauing beſides forty thouſand expert ſouldiers in continuall pay; part of them Moores, and part of them Chriſtians: and if the worſt ſhould fall out, hath the ſea to friend, and

His intelligence with the Florentine.

His ſtrength.

the Cuſtome.

Iuſtice.

Iniuſtice.

Antilibanus very old.

the Florentine. And in ſuch an exigent intendeth, as is thought, to make for Chriſtendome, and there to purchaſe ſome Signorie; for the opinion is that he hath a maſſe of Treaſure, gathered by wiles and extortions, as well from the Subiect, as from the Forreiner. Hee hath coyned of late a number of counterfeit Dutch Dollers, which he thruſteth away in payments, and offers in exchange to the Merchant: ſo that no new Dutch Dollers, though neuer ſo good, will now goe currant in Sidon. He hath the fift part of the increaſe of all things. The Chriſtians and Iewes doe pay for their heads two Dollers apiece yearely, and head money he hath for all the Cattell within his Dominions. A ſeuere Iuſticer, re-edifies ruinous, and replants depopulated places; too ſtrong for his Neighbours, and able to maintayne a defenſiue warre with the Turke: but that it is to be ſuſpected that his people would fall from him in regard of his tyrannie. Now as for the Merchants, (who are for the moſt part Engliſh) they are entertayned with all courteſie and freedome; they may trauell without danger with their Purſes in their hands, paying for cuſtome by three in the hundred. Yet theſe are but Traines to allure them, and diſguiſe his voracitie; for if a Factor dye, as if the Owner, and hee his Heire, hee will ſeize on the goods belonging to his Principals, and ſeeme to doe them a fauour in admitting of a Redemption vnder the value, ſo that they doe but labour for his Harueſt, and reape for his Garners. For ſuch, and ſuch-like eatings they generally intend to forſake his Countrey. The Merchandizes appropriate to this place are Cottons, and Silkes, which here are made in the Mulbery Groues, in indifferent quantitie. Other Commodities (which are many, and not courſe) they fetch from Damaſco: two dayes iourney from hence; interpoſed with the Snow-topt Mountaynes of Antilibanus, ſo exceeding cold, that a Moore at our being here, returning from thence in the company of an Engliſh Merchant, periſhed by the way: the heate then exceſſiue great in the Valleyes on both ſides.

Damaſcus. See here Maſter Biddulph in the next Chapter.

Damaſcus is ſeated in a Plaine enuironed with Hils, and watered with the Riuer Chryſoras: deſcending with a great murmure from the Mountaynes; but after awhile hauing entred the plaine becommeth more gentle; ſeruing the Citie ſo abundantly, that few houſes are without their Fountaines, and by little Riuolets let into their Orchards: then which the habitable earth affoordeth not more delicate for excellencie of fruits, and their varieties: yet ſubiect to both the extreames of weather; rich in Trades, and celebrated for excellent Artizans. We were deſirous to haue ſeene it, but were aduiſed not aduenture, becauſe of the lawleſſe Spaheis there then reſiding in great numbers. The people about Sidon are greatly giuen to the nouriſhing of Cattel, (hauing notwithſtanding not many) inſomuch as Beefe and Veale are ſeldome here to bee had, but when by chance they doe breake their legges or otherwiſe miſcarrie. They fother them in the Winter (for they cut no graſſe) with ſtraw, and the leaues of Trees, whereof many doe flouriſh continually.

Sarepta.

Sarapanta.

Our ſhip returning to Alexandria, and carrying with her two of our fellow Pilgrimes; on the fiue and twentieth of Aprill we returned alſo towards Acre by Land in the company of diuers Engliſh Merchants: the Champaine betweene the Sea and the Mountaynes fruitfull though narrow; and croſſed with many little Riuolets. After fiue miles riding wee came to a ſmall ſolitarie Moſque not far from the Sea; erected, as they ſay, ouer the Widdowes houſe that entertayned Elias; cloſe by it are the foundations of Sarepta. It was the Seate of a Biſhop, and ſubiect vnto Tyrus. Right againſt it, and high mounted on the Mountayne, there is a handſome new Towne now called Sarapanta. Beyond on the left hand of the way are a number of Caues cut out of the Rocke, the Habitations, as I ſuppoſe, of men in the Golden Age, and before the foundation of Cities. Theſe are mentioned in the Booke of Ioſua, and called Mearah, (which is the Caues of the Sidonians, and afterward called the Caues of Tyrus, a place then inexpugnable, and maintayned by the Chriſtians, vntill in the yeare 1167. it was by the corrupted Souldiers deliuered to the Saracens.

Palætyrus.

Rare Hoſpitalitie.

Wee croſſed a little Valley deuided by the Riuer Elutherus (now called Caſmeir) which deriues his originall from Lybanus, and glideth along with a ſpeedie courſe through a ſtrangely intricate Channell: guiltie of the death of the Emperour Fredericke Barbaroſſa, who falling from his Horſe as hee purſued the Infidels, and oppreſſed with the weight of his Armour was drowned therein, and buried at Tyrus. On the other-ſide of the Valley ſtands an ancient Cane, whoſe Port doth beare the pourtrayture of a Chalice. Fiue miles beyond wee came to a Village ſeated on a little Hill in the midſt of a Plaine, the ſame by all likelihood that was formerly called Palatyrus, or old Tyrus. Forget I muſt not the cuſtome obſerued by the Inhabitants hereabout, who retayne the old Worlds Hoſpitalitie. Be the Paſſenger Chriſtian or whatſoeuer, they will houſe him, prepare him extraordinary fare, and looke to his Mule, without taking of one Aſper. But the preciſe Mahometans will neither eate nor drinke with a Chriſtian: onely miniſter to his wants; and when he hath done, breake the earthen Diſhes wherein he hath fed, as defiled. Now through this Towne there paſſes a ruinous Aquaduct, extending a great way towards the South, and through the Champaine, ſeeming often to climbe aboue his beginning, and from hence proceedeth directly Weſt vnto Tyrus, which ſtandeth about two miles and a halfe below it.

Tyrus.

Tyrus was ſaid to be built by Tyras, the ſeuenth Sonne of Iaphet: re-edified by Phœnix, made a Colony of the Sidonians, and after the Metropolis of Phœnicia. The Citie was conſecrated to Hercules, whoſe Prieſt was Sicheus. The Citizens famous for ſundry excellencies, and forreine Plantations.

But in the yeare 1289. it was ſubdued by the Ægyptian Mahometans, and from them by the Ottoman Selymus. But this once famous Tyrus, is now no other then an heape of Ruines; yet haue they a reuerent reſpect, and doe inſtruct the penſiue beholder with their exemplarie frailtie. It hath two Harbours, that on the North-ſide the faireſt, and beſt throughout all the Leuant, (which the Curſours enter at their pleaſure) the other choaked with the decayes of the Citie. The Emer of Sidon hath giuen it with the adiacent Territories, to his Brother for a poſſeſſion, comprehending ſixe miles of the Continent in length; two in breadth, and in ſome places three. A leuell naturally fertill, but now neglected: watered with pleaſant Springs; heretofore abounding with Sugar-canes, and all varietie of fruit Trees.

We paſſed by certaine Ciſternes, ſome mile and better diſtant from the Citie: which are called Salomons by the Chriſtians of this Countrey. I know not why, vnleſſe theſe were they which he mentions in the Canticles. Square they are and large; repleniſhed with liuing waters, in times paſt conueyed by the Aquaduct into the aforeſaid Orchards: but now vſeleſſe and ruined, they ſhed their waters into the Valley below, making it plaſhie in ſundry places: where the Aire doth ſuffer with the continuall croking of Frogs. Within night, wee came vnto certayne Tents that were pitched in thoſe Mariſhes, belonging to the Emers Brothers Seruants, who there paſtured their Horſes. Where by a Moletto the Maſter of his Horſe (whoſe Siſter he had marryed) we were courteouſly entertayned. The next morning after two or three houres riding, we aſcended the Mountaynes of Saron, high and woodie; which ſtretch with intermitted Vallies, vnto the Sea of Galilie, and here haue their white Cliffes waſht with the ſurges; called Capo Bianco by the Mariner: frequented (though forſaken by men) with Leopards, Bores, Iaccals, and ſuch like ſauage Inhabitants. This paſſage is both dangerous and difficult, neighboured by the precipitating Cliffe, and made by the labour of man: yet recompenſing the trouble with fragrant Sauours, Bayes, Roſemary, Marioram, Hyſope, and the like there growing in abundance. They ſay, that of late a Thiefe purſued on all ſides, and deſperate of his ſafetie, (for rarely are offences here pardoned) leapt from the top into the Sea, and ſwum vnto Tyrus, which is ſeuen miles diſtant; who for the ſtrangeneſſe of the fact was forgiuen by the Emer. A little beyond we paſſed by a ruinous Fort, called Scandarone, of Alexander the builder; heere built to defend this paſſage: much of the foundation ouer-growne with Oziers and Weeds, being nouriſhed by a Spring that falleth from thence into the Sea. A Moore not long ſince was heere aſſailed by a Leopard, that ſculkt in the aforeſaid Thicket; and iumping vpon him, ouerthrew him from his Aſſe: but the beaſt hauing wet his feet, and miſt of his hold, retyred as aſhamed without further violence: within a day or two after he drew company together to haue hunted him, but found him dead of a wound receiued of a Bore. The higher Mountaynes now comming ſhort of the Sea, doe leaue a narrow leuell betweene. Vpon the left hand on a high round Hill, wee ſaw two ſolitarie Pillars, to which ſome of vs rid, in hope to haue ſeene ſomething of Antiquitie; where we found diuers others laid along, with the halfe buried foundation of an ample building. A mile beyond we came to a Fort maintayned by a ſmall Garriſon of Moores, to prohibit that paſſage if need ſhould require, and to ſecure the Traueller from Theeues; a place heretofore vnpaſſable by reaſon of their out-rages. The Souldiers acquainted with our Merchants, freely entertayned vs, and made vs good cheere according to their manner of Diet: requited with a Preſent of a little Tobacco, by them greedily affected. They alſo remitted our Caphar, vſing to take foure Dollers apiece of the ſtranger Chriſtians. From hence aſcending the more eminent part of the Rockie and naked Mountaynes, which heere againe thruſt into the Sea, (called in times paſt, the Tyrian Ladder) by a long and ſteepe deſcent we deſcended into the Valley of Acre. Diuers little hils being here and there diſperſed, crowned with Ruines (the Couerts for Theeues) and many Villages on the skirts of the bordering Mountaynes. Ere yet night, we reentred Acre.

Salomons Ciſternes.

Saron.

Scandarone.

A Leopard.

Tobacco.

Now is our Author ſhaping his courſe for England; and we haue a further Aſian Diſcouerie to make. Thankfull to him for his paines (which haue eaſed vs of further ſearch in the many many Holy Land Pilgrimes, which I haue in diuers Languages) wee will ſeeke a new Pilgrime to be our Guide, both in Syria, and in the parts adioyning. And loe, Ieruſalem ſo pleaſeth vs, that once againe we will trauell thither with Maſter Biddulph, following him from Conſtantinople to Aleppo, and thence by Land to Ieruſalem, the Nauill and Centre of many our Pilgrimes and Pilgrimages.

CHAP. IX.

Part of a Letter of Maſter WILLIAM BIDDVLPH from Aleppo.

THe * dolefull and lamentable beginning of your laſt Letter made mee exceeding ſorrowfull; for therein you acquainted me with the death of bleſſed Queene Elizabeth, of late and famous memory; at the hearing whereof, not onely I and our Engliſh Nation mourned, but many other Chriſtians who were neuer in Chriſtendome, but borne and brought vp in Heathen Countries, wept to heare of her death, and ſaid, ſhe was the moſt famous Queene that euer they heard or read of ſince the World beganne. But the ending of your Letter comforted vs againe, and mitigated our mourning. And (as my dutie was) I appointed one day to bee kept holy, which wee ſpent in Prayer, and Preaching, and Thankſgiuing vnto God for the happie aduancement of ſo Noble, Wiſe, Learned, and Religious a King ouer vs. And in ſigne of ioy, we feaſted and triumphed in ſuch ſort, that the very Heathen people were partakers with vs of our ioy. After my departure from Conſtantinople, the firſt place wee touched at, was the two Caſtles at the Helleſpont, about two hundred and twentie miles diſtant from Conſtantinople, where the order is, for all ſhips to ſtay three dayes, to the end that if any ſlaues be run away from their Maſters, or Theeues haue ſtolne away any thing, they may thither be purſued in three dayes, before the ſhips paſſe: And then at three dayes end, the ſhip muſt be ſearched for goods, contra bando, and the Grand Signiors Paſſe ſhewed for all the Paſſengers in the ſhip; and then (their vſuall duties payed) they may ſet ſaile and away. Yet if the Maſter of the ſhip pay extraordinarily, they may more ſpeedily bee diſpatched: and many giue very liberally (when they haue a good winde) rather than they will be ſtayed many houres. From thence we came to Chios, where we ſtayed a few dayes. From Chios wee ſet ſayle with a very good wind, which brought vs amongſt the fiftie three Iles in the Arches, called Cyclades, or Sporades: And then, by a contrary wind, wee were driuen to Samos, which is an Ile before Ionia, ouer againſt Epheſus, where we anchored vntill wee had a good wind, and then ſayled by Andros, an Ile, one of the Cyclades, and had a very good wind vntill we came to Rhodos, commonly called Rhodes, which is an Ile in the Carpathian Sea, neere Caria, where we were becalmed. It is called the Carpathian Sea of Carpathus, an Ile in the middeſt betwixt Rhodes and Creet. From Rhodes we came to Cyprus, a famous and fruitfull Iland in the Sea Carpathium, betweene Cilicia and Syria, which was once conquered by Richard the Firſt, King of England. In this Ile, Venus was greatly honoured. There is ſtill a Citie therein called Paphia, built by Paphus, who dedicated it to Venus. But the chiefeſt Cities in Cyprus are Famoguſta and Nicoſia. There is great ſtore of Cotton-wooll growing in this Iland, and exceeding good Wine made here, and the beſt Dimetey, with other good Commodities. From hence a French Gentleman (who came in our ſhip from Conſtantinople,) imbarked himſelfe for Ioppa, with a purpoſe to goe to Ieruſalem. Ioppa is not two dayes ſayling from Cyprus with a good wind: and Ioppa is but thirtie miles from Ieruſalem by Land. Cyprus was vnder the gouernment of the Signiorie of Venice; but now it is inhabited by Greekes, and gouerned by Turkes.

* The former part of this Letter is omitted: the later alſo pruned in ſome things to preuent tedious repetitions, of thoſe things which you haue had in others.

Fame of Q. Elizabeth.

That is, goods forbidden.

Rhode.

Cyprus.

Ioppa.

But our ſhip from Cyprus went to Tripoly in Syria, a Citie on the mayne Land of Syria, neere vnto Mount Lybanus, which is a Mountayne of three dayes iourney in length, reaching from Tripoly neere to Damaſcus. Whileſt our ſhip ſtayed in the Roade at Tripoly, I and ſome others road vp to Mount Lybanus, to ſee the Cedar Trees there, and lodged the firſt night at the Biſhops houſe of Eden, who vſed vs very kindly. It is but a little Village, and called by the Turkes, Anchora, but moſt vſually by the Chriſtians there dwelling, it is called Eden, not the Garden of Eden, (which place is vnknowne vnto this day) but becauſe it is a pleaſant place, reſembling in ſome ſort the Garden of Eden, (as the ſimple Inhabitants thereof ſuppoſe) therefore it is called Eden. This Biſhop was borne in the ſame Pariſh, but brought vp at Rome: his name was Franciſcus Amyra, by whom I vnderſtood, that the Pope of Rome many yeeres ſince, ſent vnto the Chriſtians inhabiting Mount Lybanus, to perſwade them to embrace the Romiſh Religion, and yeeld themſelues to the Church of Rome, making large promiſes vnto them if they would ſo doe: whereof they deliberated long, but in the end yeelded, vpon condition they might haue libertie to vſe their owne Lyturgie, and Ceremonies, and Lents (for they ſtrictly obſerue foure Lents in the yeere) and other Cuſtomes. Euer ſince which time, the Pope hath and doth maintayne ſome of their Children at Rome. Theſe Chriſtians which dwell vpon Mount Lybanus, are called Maronites, they are very ſimple and ignorant people, yet ciuill, kinde, and courteous to Strangers. There are alſo many Turkes dwelling on the ſame Mountayne, and an Emeer or great Lord, called Emeer Vſeph, who gouerneth all the reſt, both Chriſtians and Turkes, beeing himſelfe a Mahometan, yet one who holdeth the gouernment of Mount Lybanus, in deſpight of the Great Turke, and hath done a long time.

Tripoly in Syria.

Lybanus.

Eden not the Garden.

From Eden we rode ten miles further vp the Mountayne, to ſee certayne Cedar Trees, where we ſaw foure and twentie tall Cedar Trees growing together, as bigge as the greateſt Oakes, with diuers rowes of branches one ouer another, ſtretching ſtraight out, as though they were kept by Art. Although we read of great ſtore of Cedars which haue growne on Mount Lybanus, yet now there are very few, for we ſaw none but theſe foure and twentie, neither heard of any other but in one place more. At theſe Cedars many Noſtranes met vs, and led vs to their Villages. From theſe Cedars wee returned toward Tripoly, another way, deſcending by the ſide of the Mount towards a Village of the Maroniticall Chriſtians, called Hatcheeth, where (as we were deſcending downe the ſide of the Mountaine) all the men, women and children, came out of their Houſes to behold vs: And when we were yet farre off riding towards them, they gaue a ioyfull ſhout altogether ioyntly, to expreſſe their ioy for our comming. And when we came neere, their women with Chaffing-diſhes of coles burnt Incenſe in our way, and their Caſſeeſes, that is, their Church-men (with blue Shaſhes about their heads) made croſſes with their fingers towards vs (as their manner is in ſigne of welcome) and bleſſed vs, giuing God thankes that he had brought Chriſtian Frankes, * of ſuch far Countries as they vnderſtood we were of, to come to viſit them.

Cedars were plentifull in Salomons time, but now very rare.

* The Weſterne Chriſtians are ſo called thorow all the Eaſt, euer ſince the Hieroſolymitan Expeditions by Godfrey Bullon.

So ſoone as we were diſmounted from our Horſes, the chiefe Sheb, with all the reſt of their ancienteſt men, came and brought vs to the chiefe houſe of the Pariſh, called the Towne-houſe or Church-houſe, and there ſpread Carpets and Table-clothes on the ground (as their manner is) and made vs all ſit downe; and euery one that was able, brought Flaskets of ſuch good cheere as they had, to welcome vs, which was many Bottles or Ingeſters of exceeding good Wine, with Oliues, Sallets, Egges, and ſuch like things, as on the ſudden they had readie, and ſet them before vs; and both by the cheerefulneſſe of their countenances, geſtures of their bodies, and preſents of ſuch preſent things as they had, expreſſed their gladneſſe for our comming; and would alſo haue prepared Hens, Kids, and other good cheere, but we would not ſuffer them. This was about eleuen or twelue of the clocke. They would haue had vs continue with them all night, and with great importunitie craued it; but we vnderſtanding that the Patriarch was but three miles off, at a Village called Sharry, we went to ſalute him, who hearing of our comming (albeit he were at a Feaſt amongſt all his Neighbours) came to meete vs, and ſaluted vs, and brought vs all in amongſt his Neighbours into a Roome foure ſquare, and round about beſet with Carpets and Table-clothes on the ground, and ſuch cheere as the ſeaſon of the yeere did affoord, ſet thereon, and made vs all ſit down, and conferred with vs of our Country, and many other matters, ſauing matters of Religion, for the poore man had no Latine, and little Learning in any other Language; only he had the Syracke, (which was his naturall Language) with the Turkiſh and Arabian Tongue. After wee had ſpent one houre with him, we left him with his Neighbours at Sharry, where we found him, for he could not conueniently come from them: for their manner is, when they feaſt, to ſit from mid-day vntill mid-night, and ſometimes all night, neuer altogether riſing from their good cheere, but now and then one by Inter-courſes, as occaſion requireth, returning againe ſpeedily. Yet hee ſent with vs three men to bring vs to his owne houſe, neere vnto a Village (foure miles diſtant from Sharry) called Boloza, but vulgarly Blouza, from whence we deſcended downe the ſide of another part of the Mountayne, and in the middle of the deſcending of this Mountayne was the Patriarkes houſe, called Kanobeen Kadiſcha Mir-iam, in the Syriacke Tongue, but in Latine, Cœnobium Sancta Maria; that is, The Monaſterie of Saint Marie. Ouer againſt the Patriarkes houſe is an high ſteepie Mountayne, from whence the water runneth downe into a deepe Valley betwixt the Patriarkes Houſe and the Hill, and in the fall, the water maketh an exceeding great noyſe, like vnto that Catadupa in Æthiopia, where the fall of Nilus maketh ſuch a noyſe, that the people are made deafe therewith that dwell neere it. This place is ſome-what like vnto it in fall, but not in effect: for this water beeing not ſo great as Nilus, maketh not the like noyſe, neither worketh the like effect. There is alſo an extraordinarie Eccho thereabout.

Sheb, ſignifieth an ancient man.

One ſide of the Patriarkes houſe is a naturall Rocke, the other of hewen ſtones and ſquared Timber: a very ſtrong Houſe, but not very large, nor ſpecious to behold. So are alſo many of their Houſes, in moſt of their Villages, built againſt a Rocke, as a Wall vnto one ſide of it, eſpecially Emeer Vſeph his Houſe, the greateſt part thereof being hewed out of the liuely Rocke, and the paſſage or deſcending vnto it ſo narrow and dangerous, that it is counted inuincible, which maketh him to hold out againſt the Turke, and to domineere in this Mountayne, will he, nill he.

That is, Lord Ioſeph.

It is a moſt intricate Mountayne with Hils and Valleyes, Woods and Riuers, and fruitfull Paſtures, Oliues, Vines, and Fig-trees, Goates, Sheepe, and other Cattle. It is alſo exceeding hauing Snow on the top all the yeere long.

At this Monaſtery of Saint Marie (which is the Patriarkes Houſe) wee lodged all night, and both on Saturday at Euening Prayer, and on Sunday at Morning Prayer, we both heard and ſaw the manner of their Seruice in the Syriacke Tongue, both read and ſung very reuerently, with Confeſſions, Prayers, Thankeſgiuings, the Pſalmes of Dauid ſung, and Chapters both out of the Old Teſtament, and the new diſtinctly read. It reioyced me greatly to ſee their Order: and I Set formes of Prayers.

[illegible] ~~orded in theſe~~ ancient Chriſtians called ~~Nazarites, the~~ Antiquitie ~~of vſing ſet formes of~~ Prayers in Churches, and alſo the neceſſitie thereof, that the people might haue ſomething to ſay Amen vnto, beeing read in their Mother Tongue, that they may learne to pray priuately, by thoſe Prayers which they daily heare read publikely. This is too much neglected in England, God grant reformation thereof.

But foure Pariſhes in all the World which ſpeake Syriack.

There is no place in all the World, but foure Pariſhes or Villages on this Mountaine, where they ſpeake the Syriacke Tongue naturally at this day. And theſe are theſe foure Villages, which I named before; at all which places wee had kind entertainment, viz. Firſt, Eden, called by the Turkes, Anchora. Secondly, Hatcheeth. Thirdly, Sharry. Fourthly, Boloza, called vulgarly Blouza. And theſe people are called Noſtranes, quaſi Nazaritans, as it were Nazarites, and none but they. But more generally they are called Maronites, but this name is common to them with others.

Mount Lybanus.

There are dwelling on one ſide of Mount Lybanus, towards the foot of the Mountayne (and in ſome other places in that Countrey) a kind of Chriſtians, called Druſies, who came into the Countrey with King Baldwine, and Godfrey of Bullen, when they conquered that Countrey, (whoſe Predeceſſors or Anceſtors are thought to haue beene Frenchmen) and afterwards when the Saracens recoured it againe, theſe men (whom they now call Druſies) fled into the Mountaynes to ſaue themſelues; and there dwelling long, in the end their Poſteritie forgat all Chriſtianitie, yet vſed ſtill Baptiſme, & retained ſtill the names of Chriſtians, whom the Turcomen call Raſties, that is, Infidels, becauſe they eate Swines fleſh, which is forbidden by the Turkes Law.

Druſies.

Turcomanny.

Theſe Turcomanny are kind, and ſimple people, dwelling alwayes in the fields, following their flockes, borne and brought vp, liuing and dying in Tents, and when their flockes and heards remooue, then all their men, women and children remoue with their houſhold-ſtuffe, and houſes too, which are but Tents made to remooue, after the manner of the ancient Iſraelites: & where they find good paſture, there they pitch their Tents; the men following their flocks of ſheepe and heards of Cattle, the women keepe their Tents, and ſpend their time in ſpinning, or carding, or knitting, or ſome houſhold huſwiferie, not ſpending their time in goſſipping and gadding abroad from place to place, and from houſe to houſe, from Ale-houſe to Wine-tauerne, as many idle Huſwiues in England doe. Yet ſometimes are theſe ſimple ſoules abuſed by Ianizaries, who in trauelling by them, take from them perforce victuals for themſelues and for their horſes, and giue them nothing but ſore ſtripes, if they but murmure againſt them. But when Chriſtian Merchants paſſe by them, they will (of their owne accord) kindly preſent them.

Ianizaries, are Souldiers.

We returned from Mount Lybanus to Tripoly, by ſuch an intricate way, that if we had not had a Guide with vs, wee ſhould haue loſt our ſelues. Neere vnto Tripoly there is a Plaine at leaſt one mile in length, full of Oliue-trees and Fig-trees. At the foot of this Mountayne, neere vnto Tripoly, there is a ſandie Mount which hath ariſen (in the memorie of ſome olde men there yet liuing) where there was none before; and it groweth ſtill bigger and bigger, and there is a Propheſie of it, that in time it ſhall ouer-whelme the Towne. Tripoly hath the Etimologie (as ſome ſay) of two Greeke words, viz. τρεις and πολις, becauſe the Citie hath bin thrice built. Firſt, on a Rockie Iland, where it was ouer-whelmed with water. Secondly, on the Marine neere vnto the Sea, where it was often ſacked by Curſares. And now thirdly, a mile from the Sea, where it is annoyed with ſand. Our ſhip being not readie to ſet ſaile at our returne from the Mount, but ſtaying partly to diſpatch their buſineſſe, and partly for a good wind; we trauelled by Land two dayes iourney, to ſee Tyrus and Sidon, hard by the Sea. And at Sidon we ſaw the Tombe of Zabulon, the Sonne of Iacob, held in great eſtimation and reuerent account at this preſent day.

A Mountayne of Sand.

Tyrus & Sidon.

Sur, or Syria.

Tyrus is now called (by the Turkes) Sur, becauſe there beginneth the Land of Syria, which they call Sur; Tyrus is deſtroyed, and no ſuch Citie now ſtanding, onely the name of the place remayneth, and the place is ſtill knowne where it ſtood. Eight miles from Tyrus towards the Eaſt, is the Citie Sarepta, of the Sidonians, where the Prophet Elias raiſed the Widdowes Sonne from death to life. We ſaw alſo Baruta, where ſometimes was a great Trade for Merchants, but from thence they remoued it to Damaſcus, and from Damaſcus to Tripoly, and of late, from Tripoly to Sidon. Ioppa is not far from theſe parts, oftentimes Barkes come from the one to the other. At our returne we went abroad, and preſently ſet ſaile for Scanderone, (as it is now called by Turkes:) otherwiſe called Alexandretta by the Chriſtians, which is the very bottome and vtmoſt border of all the Streights. The Aire is very corrupt, and infecteth the bodies, and corrupteth the bloud of ſuch as continue there many dayes, partly by reaſon of the dregs of the Sea, which are driuen thither: and partly by reaſon of two high Mountaynes which keepe away the Sunne from it a great part of the day. And it is very dangerous for ſtrangers to come on ſhoare, before the Sunne be two houres high, and haue dryed vp the vapours of the ground, or to ſtay on ſhoare after Sun-ſetting. The water alſo neere vnto the Towne are very vnholſome, comming from a Mooriſh ground; but at the Fountayne, a mile off, there is exceeding good water to drink. It is far more healthfull to ſleepe aboard then on the ſhoare. Scanderone is in Cilicia, and Cilicia is the Countrey Caramonia, (as it is now called) in the leſſer Aſia, and is diuided into two parts, viz. Torcher and Campeſtris. It hath on the Eaſt, the Hill Amanus: on the North, Taurus: on the Weſt, Pamphilia: on the South, the Cicilian Sea.

Scanderone. Bottome and border of all the Streights.

Scan-

7

Scanderone is the Port for Aleppo, where all our Merchants land their goods, and ſend them vp to Aleppo vpon Camels. The Carauans vſually make three dayes iourney betwixt Scanderone and Aleppo. Whiles our Camels were preparing, wee tooke boat and went to an ancient Towne by the Sea ſide, called at this day Byas, but of old, Tarſus, a Citie in Cilicia, where Saint Paul was borne, mentioned Act. 22. 3. which Towne is arched about (as many of their Cities are) to keepe away the heat of the Sunne, which Arches they call Bazars. At the Gardens neere Tarſus (and likewiſe at other Gardens within three miles of Scanderone) wee ſaw great ſtore of Silke-wormes, which at the firſt bee but little graines like vnto Muſtard ſeed: but by the bearing of them in womens boſomes, they doe gather an heat, whereby they come vnto life, and ſo proue wormes; they keepe them in Tents made of reeds with one loft ouer another full of them, and feed them with leaues of Mulberie trees; theſe wormes (by naturall inſtinct) doe faſt often, (as ſome report) euery third day.

Tarſus in Cilicia

Silkewormes.

Here we ſtayed certaine dayes to auoyd the infection of Scanderone. The Mountaines which obſcure Scanderone, and make it more vnhealthfull, I take to be a part of Taurus, which is a great and famous Mountaine, beginning at the Indian Sea, and riſing into the North, paſſeth by Aſia vnto Mœotis, bordering vpon many Countries, and is called by many names. Sometimes it is called Caucaſus, which is the higheſt Hill in all Aſia, which parteth India from Scythia, and is part of the Hill Taurus. Sometimes it is called Amanus, which Hill parteth Syria from Cilicia. And ſometimes it is called by other names, according vnto the Sea coaſts along which it extendeth. About Scanderone there are many rauenous beaſts, about the bigneſſe of a Foxe, commonly called there Iackalles, engendred (as they ſay) of a Fox and a Wolfe, which in the night make a great crying, and come to the graues, and if there haue beene any Corſe buried the day before, (if the graue be not well filled, with many great ſtones vpon it) many of them together, with their feet, doe ſcrape vp the earth, and pull vp the corps and eate it.

At our returne from Tharſus, Edward Roſe our Factor marine, prouided vs horſes to ride to Aleppo, and a Ianizarie, called Parauan Baſhaw with two Iimmoglans to g[redacted]ſarie victuals for our ſelues to ſpend by the way, for there are no Innes nor Victualing-houſes in that Countrey, but trauellers take victuals for themſelues, and prouender for their Horſes with them. Our Merchants and Paſſengers making haſte to be gone from this contagious and peſtiferous place Scanderone (which one very well called, The bane of Francks) left their goods with the Factor marine to be ſent after them, becauſe the Malims and Muckremen (as they call the Carriers) were not yet come downe with their Camels to carrie them vp: but we met them at the Fountaine of fiſhes neere vnto Scanderone. About eight miles from Scanderone, we came to a Towne called Bylan, where there lieth buried an Engliſh Gentleman, named Henrie Moriſon, who died there comming downe from Aleppo, in companie with his brother Maſter Phines Moriſon, who left his Armes in that Countrey with theſe Verſes vnder written.

Edward Roſe.

Malims are chiefe Carriers.

Muckremen ſet Horſes to hire.

Bylan.

Maſter Moriſons trauels are ſince printed in a large volume by themſelues, where the Reader may feaſt himſelfe with the rarities and varieties of many Kingdomes.

To thee deere Henry Moriſon | Hath left this fading memorie,
Thy Brother Phines here left alone: | For Monuments, and all muſt die.

From Bylan wee came to the Plaine of Antioch, and went ouer the Riuer Orontes by Boate, which Riuer parteth Antiochia and Syria. Antioch Plaine is very long and large, at leaſt ten miles in length. We lodged the firſt night at Antiochia in Piſidia, an ancient Towne about fiue and twentie miles from Scanderone, mentioned Act. 11. 26. where the Diſciples were firſt called Chriſtians. Here we lodged in an houſe, but on the bare ground, hauing nothing to ſleepe on, or to couer vs, but what wee brought with vs, viz. a Pillow, and a Quilt at the moſt, and that was lodging for a Lord.

Orontes.

Antiochia in Piſidia.

This Antioch hath beene, as a famous, ſo an exceeding ſtrong Towne, ſituated by the Sea, and almoſt compaſſed (at the leaſt on both ſides) with exceeding high and ſtrong Rockes. The Inhabitants at this day are Greekes, but vnder the gouernement of the Turke, but for matters of Religion, ordered and ruled by their Patriarchs, for the Greekes haue foure Patriarchs to this preſent day, viz. The Patriarch of Antioch, the Patriarch of Ieruſalem, the Patriarch of Alexandria, the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who ruleth all the reſt. Yet as the Iewes, ſo alſo the Greeks to this day are without a King, and both they, and their Patriarchs are but ſlaues to the great Turke.

And although their Patriarch of Conſtantinople be counted their chiefe Patriarch: yet I haue knowen one Mileſius (a learned man indeed) who was firſt Patriarch of Conſtantinople, preferred to the place by Maſter Edward Barton, an Engliſh Gentleman, and Lord Ambaſſadour for Queene Elizabeth of famous memorie, who for his wiſedome, good gouernement, policie, and Chriſtian carriage, hath left an immortall fame behind him in thoſe Countries, to this preſent day, and lieth buried at an Iland of the Greekes, within twelue miles of Conſtantinople, called Bartons Iland to this day. After whoſe death, this good man Mileſius was by the Greekes diſplaced from being Patriarch of Conſtantinople: (which they durſt not doe whiles Maſter Barton was liuing) becauſe, being a man of knowledge, he laboured to reforme the Greekes from many of their ſuperſtitious cuſtomes. Whereupon (preſently after the death of Maſter Barton) they ſaid, their Patriarch was an Engliſh-man, and no Greeke, and therefore manzulled him, that is,

Maſter Barton. Before him Maſter Hareborn was Ambaſſador.

Bartons Iland.

diſplaced him. Yet bearing ſome reuerence towards him for his learning, they made him Patriarch of Alexandria. And being there Patriarch, hee excommunicated the Patriarch of Antiochia, becauſe he accepted of reliefe at the Popes hand, and made him come to Alexandria, to humble himſelfe vnto him, and acknowledge his fault before he would ſuffer him to execute his Patriarchs office.

Henry Lello.

The Engliſh Ambaſſadors with the Great Turke haue beene, 1. Maſter Hareborn. 2. Maſter Barton. 3. Sir Henr. Lello. 4. Sir T. Glouer. 5. Sir Paul Pinder. 6. Sir Ioh. Aires. 7. Sir Thomas Roe, now Lieger there for his Maieſtie.

Maſter Henry Lello (a learned, wiſe, and religious Engliſh Gentleman, ſometime Student in Oxford, and afterwards at the Innes of the Court) ſucceeded Maſter Barton in his place, and in many things exceeded him, eſpecially in his religious carriage and vnſpotted life: and had not the times beene more troubleſome in his Regiment, then in the time of his Predeceſſor Maſter Barton; he would euery way haue gone beyond him. Hee firſt of all reformed his familie, and afterwards ſo ordered himſelfe in his whole carriage, that he credited our Countrey: and after ten yeeres gouernement of the Engliſh Nation there, hee returned into his Countrey with the teares of many, and with generall good report of all Nations there dwelling or ſoiourning; and is worthily by his excellent Maieſtie rewarded with Knighthood for his good ſeruice. If Mileſius had liued, this good Gentleman would haue reſtored him to Conſtantinople, as he placed many other Arch-biſhops both at Salonica, (of old called Theſſalonica) and elſewhere.

In the Mountaines betwixt Scanderone and Aleppo, there are dwelling a certaine kind of people, called at this day Coords, comming of the race of the ancient Parthians, who worſhip the Deuill, and alledge for their reaſon in ſo doing, that God is a good man, and will doe no man harme, but that the Deuill is bad, and muſt bee pleaſed, leſt hee hurt them. There was one of our Carriers a Muccreman and Malim, named Abdel Phat, who was ſaid to be of that Race and Religion. There is alſo, although not in the direct way, (yet for ſafety and pleaſantneſſe of the way, it is ſometimes taken in the way to Aleppo) an ancient Citie called Achilles, where one Aſan Baſhaw ruleth like a King (paying duties to the Turkes) ſucceſſiuely from his Predeceſſors, comming of the houſe of Sanballat, who hindred the building of the Temple of Ieruſalem, who is called to this day, Eben Sumbolac, that is, The ſonne of Sanballat: and all his kinred call one another, Ammiogli, that is, Brother Ammonite; for they account themſelues of the race of the Ammonites. This Aſhan Baſhaw is now old, and (for the moſt part) referreth all matters of gouernement to his Kinſman Vſeph Bege, that is, Lord Ioſeph.

Achilles.

Sanballat.
Nehe. 4. 1.

The ſecond night, in our trauell from Scanderone, we lodged at a place called, The Gardens, in the open fields, hauing the ground to our Bed, a ſtone to our Pillow (as Iacob in his trauell had) and the Skie to our couering. And many poore Trauellers in theſe parts (who come vnprouided) haue nothing but the aire for their ſupper, except they can meet with the fruits of Trees, or Herbs of the fields. Wee met in ſome places with Villages of Tents, where our Ianizarie Parauan Baſhaw (being partly feared and partly loued amongſt them) brought vnto vs from them, Bread and Water often times. Their Bread is made all in Cakes, after the ancient manner, as Abraham entertayned Angels with hearth Cakes. At one place we had alſo preſented to vs very good ſweet Goats milke, and alſo good ſowre milke, turned by Art, which is the moſt common diſh in thoſe hot Countries.

Cakes.

Hanadan.

Ieremie his Sepulchre.

Sambouſes are little Paſties. Muclebite, a diſh made of Egges and Herbs.

The day following, we came about noone to a Village, called Hanadan, eight miles on this ſide Aleppo, ouer againſt which Village, on the right hand, on the top of the hill, there is (as the Iewes report) the Sepulchre of the Prophet Ieremie. At this Village Hanadan there are many Pigeon houſes, whereof the poore people make much profit, bringing them to Aleppo to ſell. At this Village we dined with Muſmelons, Sambouſes, and a Mucclebite. And after dinner, we ſlept an houre or two (as the cuſtome of the Countrey is) and then rode forwards towards Aleppo, whither we came by fiue of the Clocke, and were kindly entertayned at Cane Burgol by the worſhipfull Richard Colthurſt Eſquire, Conſull for the Engliſh Nation there.

Aleppo.
In the title of Pſal. 60.

Aram Sobah, ſome thinke to haue beene that Citie which is now called Aleppo. And of this Aram Sobah I find mention made, 2. Sam. 8. 3, 4, 5. And alſo in the title of the ſixtie Pſalme, where mention is made of the ſalt Valley which is but halfe a dayes iourney from Aleppo, which is a very great Plaine, without graſſe growing on it, the very ſand whereof is good Salt naturally: after raine, being dried againe by the Sunne, they gather it. There is alſo a little Iland or Mountaine in the midſt thereof, plaine on the top, which yeeldeth the beſt Salt. Some Iewes there dwelling, doe alſo ſay, that Aleppo was the Citie Sephernaim: but I thinke it to be a better Citie, which ſome ſay, was called Apollonius: but I know no reaſon for it, except it were built by one of that name. Howſoeuer, it ſhould ſeeme this Citie Aleppo hath often changed her name, and that, if it were not Aram Sobah, yet to be built not farre from the place where Aram Sobah ſtood. But the Turkes (changing the names of all places where they come) call Aleppo at this day, Halep, which ſignifieth Milke, becauſe it yeeldeth great ſtore of Milke.

Aleppo is inhabited by Turkes, Moores, Arabians, Iewes, Greekes, Armenians, Chelſalines, Noſtranes, and people of ſundry other Nations. The Turkes come of Magog the ſonne of Iapheth.

The Moores are more ancient dwellers in Aleppo then Turkes, and more forward and zealous in Mahometiſme then Turkes: yea all the Church-men amongſt the Turkes are Moores (whom the Turkes count a baſe people in regard of themſelues, and call them Tits.) Yet their Church-men they haue in great reuerence; and not onely theirs, but they reuerence Church-men of all Nations, and call them holy Men, Saints, and men of God. I my ſelfe haue had great experience hereof, both in the place of my abode at Aleppo, and in my iourney towards Ieruſalem, and in other places. In Aleppo, as I haue walked in the ſtreetes, both Turkes and Moores, and other Nations, would very reuerently ſalute me after the manner of their Countrey: yea, their very Souldiers, as I haue walked in the Fields, with many other of our Nation, without a Ianeſarie to guard vs, though they haue beene many hundreds together, yet haue they not offered either me or any of my companie wrong, for my ſake, but haue ſaid one to another, Hadab Caſſies; that is, This is a Church-man, and therefore take heede what you doe vnto him, for he is a good man, &c. At Ieruſalem many ſtrangers of ſundry Nations vnderſtanding that I was an Engliſh Preacher, came and kiſſed my hand, and called me the Engliſh Patriarke. Yea, in all my ten yeeres Trauels, I neuer receiued, neither was offered wrong by any Nation but mine owne Countrey-men, and by them chiefly whom it chiefly concerned to protect me from wrongs: yet haue I found them moſt forward to offer me wrong, onely for doing my dutie, and following the order of our Church of England: knowing that I had none of the Reuerend Fathers of our Church to defend me. So would it be in England, if we had not the Reuerend Fathers in God the Lord Biſhops of our Church to protect vs. All other Nations, both Heathen and Chriſtian, goe before vs herein, in reuerencing and prouiding for their Church-men. The Turkes honour their Muftie (which is their chiefe Ruler in Eccleſiaſticall matters, next vnder the Grand Signior) as an Angelll: The Noſtranes, Greekes, Armenians, Chelſalines, and Chriſtians of all other Nations, performe double honour vnto them: onely in England, where there is a more learned Miniſterie (I ſpeake by experience) then in any Nation in the world, they are leaſt of all regarded: Which maketh our Aduerſaries, the Papiſts, ſay, (as I haue heard ſome of them ſpeake in my hearing, many thouſand miles from England) that if wee our ſelues were perſwaded of the truth of our Religion, wee would reuerence our Church-men as they doe, and not ſcorne them and contemne them as we doe.

Turkes reuerence Church-men of all ſorts.

They alſo account fooles, dumbe men, and mad men, Santones, that is, Saints. And whatſoeuer ſuch mad men ſay or doe, though they take any thing out of their houſe, or ſtrike them, and wound them, yet they take it in good part, and ſay, that they ſhall haue good lucke after it. And when ſuch mad men die, they Canonize them for Saints, and erect ſtately Monuments ouer their graues, as wee haue here many examples, eſpecially of one (who being mad) went alwayes naked, whoſe name was Sheb Boubac, at whoſe death they beſtowed great coſt on his funerall, and erected an houſe ouer his graue, where (to this day) there are Lampes burning night and day, and many idle fellowes (whom they call Darniſes) there maintained to looke vnto his Sepulchre, and to receiue the offerings of ſuch as come to offer to Sheb Boubac, which they take to themſelues, and there is no weeke but many come out of the Citie of Aleppo and other places, to offer. For this Sepulchre is built on an Hill, three miles from Aleppo, betweene the Kings Garden and the Fountaine of Fiſhes. If any be ſicke, or in danger, they vow that if they recouer or eſcape, they will offer ſo much money, or this or that good thing to Sheb Boubac. There is alſo ſuch another Bedlam Saint in Aleppo yet liuing, whom they call Sheb Mahammet a Santone, who goeth alwaies naked, with a Spit on his ſhoulders; and as hee goeth thorow the ſtreetes, the Shop-keepers will offer him their Rings; and if hee thruſt his Spit thorow their Rings, they take it for a fauour and ſigne of good ſucceſſe: The like account they make, if hee take any thing from their Shop-boards, or box them or any of their houſe: yea, they are yet more mad vpon this mad man then ſo, for both men and women will come vnto him, and kiſſe his hand, * or any other part, ſometimes his thighs, and aske him counſell, for they hold that mad mens ſoules are in Heauen talking with God, and that hee reuealeth ſecrets vnto them. In regard whereof, the Baſhawes themſelues oftentimes, and chiefe Captaines will come vnto him with ſome preſent, and kiſſe ſome part of his naked body, and aske him whether they ſhall goe to battell or not, and what ſucceſſe they ſhall haue in warre: And looke whatſoeuer he ſaith, they hold it for an Oracle. Not long ſince, the Turkes had a victorie againſt the Chriſtians; and at their returne, they reported that this naked Santone, Sheb Mahammet of Aleppo, was ſeene naked in the field, fighting againſt their enemies, and that by his helpe they ouer-came them, although hee were not neere them by many thouſand miles. Whereby you may ſee how the Deuill doth delude them ſtill, as hee did their Fore-fathers at the firſt by Mahomets Machiaueilian deuices.

Mad and fooliſh ſanctitie.

Sheb Boubac.

Sheb Mahammet a naked Santone.

* Cotouicus pag. 455. [illegible]n.Hieroſ. & Syr. mentioneth this naked foole, and ſaith, that each other day hee waſheth his naked body at the Fountaine of the great Can, and preſently the water is reputed holy; drunke and carried to ſicke folkes by the Moores. His Cell is like Vulcans ſhop, where he lyeth on the ground, is attended with Daruiſes, which beg almes, and gather Beaſts bones to make fire, ſometimes he, ſometimes they ſinging. Some women deſiring iſſue, kiſſe his genetall member (which is alway naked) and depart ioyfull. Hee ate Flies, Dogs eyes raw, and with his Spit vſed to purſue any Dog hee ſaw, to that purpoſe, &c. A fit glaſſe to looke vpon ſuperſtition.

Their Daruiſes alſo they haue in ſuch reputation, that oftentimes great Baſhawes, when they are in disfauour with the King, and feare either loſſe of life, or goods, or both, to auoide danger, will turne Daruiſes, and then they account themſelues priuiledged perſons from the rigour of their Law. The witneſſe of a Daruiſe or of a Church-man, will paſſe better then any mans witneſſe beſides, yea, better then Shereffes whom they account of Mahomets kindred, and they are knowne from others by their greene Shaſhes, which no man elſe may weare: for greene they account Mahomets colour, and if they ſee any Chriſtian wearing a garment of that colour, they will cut it from his backe, and beate him, and aske him how he dare preſume to weare Mahomets mets colour, and whether hee bee Kin to God or not? This I haue knowne put in practiſe vpon Chriſtians (not acquainted with the cuſtomes of the Countrey) ſince my comming: one for hauing but greene Shoee-ſtrings, had his Shooes taken away. Another wearing greene Breeches vnder his Gowne (being eſpied) had his Breeches cut off, and he reuiled and beaten.

Daruiſes.

Syntana Fiſſa.

The Turkes haue no Printing amongſt them, but all their Law and their Religion is written in the Moriſco tongue, that is, the Arabicke tongue. And he is accounted a learned man amongſt them, that can write and reade. And as for the Latine tongue, hee is a rare man amongſt them that can ſpeake it. Some few amongſt them haue the Italian tongue: and many (eſpecially in and about Conſtantinople) ſpeake the vulgar Greeke, that is, Romeica tongue. For in Conſtantinople there are as many Grecians and Hebrues as Turkes. The poore, amongſt the Moores and Turkes at Aleppo, beg oftentimes in the ſtreetes, in the name and for the ſake of Syntana Fiſſa, who was (as they ſay) a Whore of Charitie, and would proſtitute her ſelfe to any man Bacſheeſe (as they ſay in the Arabicke tongue) that is gratis freely.

Diet of the Turkes.
Pilawe.

The Diet of the Turkes is not ſumptuous, for the moſt common diſh is Pilaw, which is good ſauory meate made of Rice, and ſmall morſels of Mutton boyled therein, and ſometimes roſted Buckones, (that is, ſmall bits or morſels of fleſh.) Their more coſtly fare is Sambouſes and Muclebites. Sambouſes are made of Paſte, like a great round Paſtie, with varietie of Herbes and meates therein, not minced, but in Buckones. A Muclebite is a diſh made of Egs and Herbes. Their ſmaller Sambouſes are more common, not ſo big as a mans hand, like a ſquare Paſtie, with minced meate therein. They haue alſo varietie of Helloway, that is, ſweet meates compounded in ſuch ſort, as are not to be ſeene elſewhere. The poorer ſort feede on Herbes and Fruits of the Trees. Their moſt common drinke is Coffa, which is a blacke kinde of drinke, made of a kind of Pulſe like Peaſe, called Coaua; which being grownd in the Mill, and boiled in water, they drinke it as hot as they can ſuffer it; which they finde to agree very well with them againſt their crudities, and feeding on Herbes and raw meates. Other compounded drinkes they haue, called Sherbet, made of Water and Sugar, or Hony, with Snow therein to make it coole; for although the Countrey bee hot, yet they keepe Snow all the yeere long to coole their drinke. It is accounted a great curteſie amongſt them to giue vnto their friends when they come to viſit them, a Fin-ion or Scudella of Coffa, which is more holeſome then toothſome, for it causeth good concoction, and driueth away drowſineſſe. Some of them will alſo drinke Berſh or Opium, which maketh them forget themſelues, and talke idlely of Caſtles in the Ayre, as though they ſaw Viſions, and heard Reuelations. Their Coffa houſes are more common then Ale-houſes in England; but they vſe not ſo much to ſit in the houſes, as on Benches on both ſides the ſtreets, neere vnto a Coffa houſe, euery man with his Fin-ion full; which being ſmoaking hot, they vſe to put it to their Noſes and Eares, and then ſup it off by leaſure, being full of idle and Ale-houſe talke, whiles they are amongſt themſelues drinking of it; if there be any newes, it is talked off there. They haue alſo excellent good fountaine waters in moſt places of that Countrey, which is a common drinke amongſt them, eſpecially in Summer time, and in their trauels at all times of the yeere.

Coffa.

Coffa houſes.

Water lighter there then here.

Some of our Merchants haue weighed their water and ours in England, when they haue come home, and haue found their water lighter then ours by foure ounces in the pound; and the lighter the water is, the more pleaſant it is to drinke, and goeth downe more delectably, as if it were Milke rather then water. In great Cities where the Fountaines are either farre off, or not ſo plentifull, there are certaine poore men, which goe about the ſtreetes from morning to night, with a Beares skinne full of water, ſewed vp and faſtned about his ſhoulders like a Tinkers Budget, with a Bole of Braſſe in his hand, and offereth water freely to them that paſſe by, except they giue them any thing in curteſie, (ſome ſeldome times.) The greateſt part of them are very curteous people amongſt themſelues, ſaluting one another at their meetings, with their hand on their breſt (for they neuer vncouer their head) with theſe words: Salam Alike Sultanum: that is, Peace bee vnto you Sir. Whereunto the other replyeth, Alekem Salam: that is, Peace be to you alſo. And ſometimes thus: Elph Marhabba ianum. Or in Turkiſh, thus: Hoſh Geldanos, Sophi Geldanos: that is, Welcome my deare friend. And in the Morning, Subalkier Sultanum, that is, Good morrow Sir: and in the Euening, thus, Miſalker Sultanum, that is, Good euen Sir. And when friends and acquaintance meete, who haue not ſeene one another many dayes before, they ſalute one another in Turkiſh, thus: Neder halen? that is, how doe you? In Arabicke, thus, Iſh halac Seedi? that is, How doe you Sir? And Iſh babtac? that is, how doth thy Gate? (meaning all within his Gate) and ſo proceed by particulars, to aske how doth thy Childe, Slaue, Horſe, Cat, Dog, Aſſe, &c. and euery thing in the houſe, except his Wife; for that is held a very vnkinde queſtion, and not vſuall amongſt them, And if a man come to their houſes, and at the doore enquire of the Children for their Father, they will anſwer him: but if he enquire for the Mother, they will throw ſtones at him and reuile him.

Salutations of the Turkes.

Their women (as hath beene ſhewed before) haue little libertie to come abroade, except it be on the Eeue before their Sabbath (which is Thurſday) to weepe at the graues of the dead, or to the Bannios or hot Baths to waſh themſelues (as the vſe of the Countrey is.) And when they come abroad, they are alwayes masked; for it is accounted a ſhame for a Woman to bee ſeene bare-faced: yea, they are ſo iealous and ſuſpicious ouer them, that Fathers will not ſuffer their owne Sonnes, after they come to fourteene yeeres of age, to ſee their Mothers.

Theſe bee their common ſalutations one to another. Their more ſpeciall ſalutations to great Perſonages are theſe. When a man commeth to ſalute the great Turke, or Grand Signior himſelfe (into whoſe preſence few are admitted except Ambaſſadours and great Perſonages) they are led betweene two by the armes, for feare of a ſtab, by which meanes one of their Grand Signiors was once killed, and when they returne, they goe backwards; for it is accounted a diſgrace to turne their backe parts to a great Man. In like manner they ſalute their Baſhawes, and other great Men (but not led by the armes) but with their hands on the breſt, bowing downe their heads to kiſſe the skirt of his Garment, pronouncing theſe words, Ollah towal omrac Seedi, that is, God prolong your dayes Sir. And ſo long as they talke with a Baſhaw, they ſtand with their hands on their breſt Maiden-like, and bow low at their departure, and goe backward. They neuer vncouer their heads vnto any man, no not to the King himſelfe; yea, it is a word of reproach amongſt them, to ſay, when they miſlike a matter, I had as lieue thou ſhewedſt me thy bare heads.

Names.

They call one another diuerſly, and not alwayes by their names, but ſometimes by their fathers Calling, Trade, or Degree: as Eben Sultan, that is, The ſonne of a King: Eben Terzi, The ſonne of a Taylor. And ſometimes by their fathers qualities, as Eben Sacran, that is, The ſonne of a Drunkard. And ſometimes by their Marks, as Colac cis, that is, A man without eares: Cowſi Sepher, that is, Sepher with the thin beard. And ſometimes by their Stature, as Tow-ill, that is, A tall man: Sgire rugiall, that is, A little man. And ſometimes by their Offices, as I-aſgee, that is, A Secretarie: Nibe, that is, A Clerke, &c. And ſometimes by their humours, as Chiplac, that is, A naked man: or, One who was of a humour to weare no cloathes but breeches. But their common word of curteſie either to ſtrangers, or ſuch whoſe names they know not, or whom they purpoſe to reuerence, is Chillabee, that is, Gentleman. And there is no man amongſt them of any degree, will refuſe to anſwere to any of theſe names. But if Nature haue marked them either with goggle eyes, bunch backs, lame legs, or any other infirmitie or deformitie, as they are knowne by it, ſo they are content to bee called by it. But they haue gone on pilgrimage to their holy Citie Mecha, where their Prophet Mahomet was buried, at their returne are called Hogies, that is, Pilgrims, as Hogie Tahar, Hogie Mahammet, &c. which is counted a word of great grace and credit amongſt them. And the witneſſe of an Hogie, will bee taken before any other.

There are alſo many Arabians in Aleppo, called vulgarly, Arabs or Bedweens. They haue two Kings at this day, viz. Dandan and Aboriſha; the one their lawfull King, the other an Vſurper; and ſome follow the one, and ſome the other, and are bitter enemies one to another; yet haue I ſeldome heard of any great warres betwixt them, for they ſeldome meet. They neuer come into any walled Townes or Cities, for feare of treaſon: but liue in Tents, and are here to day, and many hundred miles off within few dayes after. They are a baſe, beggarly, and roguiſh people, wandering vp and downe, and liuing by ſpoile, which they account no ſinne, becauſe they are Mahomets countrimen, and hee allowed them libertie to liue by theft. Yet their Kings doe no great harme, but take Toll or Tribute of the Carauans as they paſſe by, which if they pay willingly, they paſſe quietly, and are not robbed, but a little exacted vpon. One of their Kings hath often times pitched his Tents neere vnto the Citie of Aleppo, and many Merchants being deſirous to ſee them and their order, tooke occaſion to preſent him with ſome ſmall Preſent or other, which he tooke very kindly, and admitted them to his Table, and gaue them a Tent to lodge in all night: on the morrow for breake-faſt one of them made him a minſed Pie, and ſet it before him hot as it came out of the Ouen: And when he ſaw it cut vp and opened, and perceiued ſmoke to come out of it, he ſhrunke backe, fearing it had beene ſome engine to deſtroy him, and that the fire would follow after the ſmoake. But when hee perceiued no fire followed the ſmoake, he was content to taſte of it, and highly commended it, as the daintieſt diſh that euer he taſted of in his life.

Theſe Arabian Kings neuer keepe any money in their purſes, but ſpend it as faſt as they finde it, and when they want, with their Sword they ſeeke a new purchaſe. Some are Souldiers, fighting faithfully on any ſide that will giue them pay. Some of this roguiſh Arabian Race follow neither of their Kings, but wander from place to place in Caues and Rocks, and liue by their Sword, not onely robbing, but killing ſuch as they can ouer-come. Others of them (of a better minde) ſojourne in Cities of Trade and Traffique, and make themſelues ſeruants to any Nation that will ſet them on worke, and well reward them. Some of them are Horſe-keepers, ſome Baſtages, that is, Porters, and ſome vnder-Cookes in Kitchins, and are very ſeruiceable. But for the moſt part their Lodgings are on ſome Dunghill or other, or odde corner of the Citie, with ſome ſilly Tent ouer their heads. Their wiues weare Rings in their Noſes, either of ſiluer or braſſe, faſtned to the middle griſtle of their Noſe, and colour their Lips blue with Indico, and goe alwayes bare-legged and bare-footed, with Plates or Rings of braſſe aboue their ankles, and bracelets of braſſe about their hands. They are people which can and doe endure great hardneſſe and miſerie, both for Diet and Lodging. Their Women are skilfull in mourning and crying by arte,

Art, and therefore they are hired to crie at the Funerals of Turks and Moores oftentimes, tearing their haire, and making all their face blue with Indico. There are here ſpoken ſo many ſeuerall Languages as there are ſeueral Nations here dwelling or ſojourning, euery Nation (amongſt themſelues) ſpeaking their owne language. And here are of moſt Nations in the World ſome, who either come with their Merchandiſe to ſell or buy commodities, or ſojourne here as ſtrangers, or elſe haue acceſſe and receſſe to this Citie as Trauellers. But of all Chriſtian languages, the Italian tongue is moſt vſed, and therewithall a man may trauell furtheſt. But of all the Orientall Tongues, theſe foure are moſt ſpoken in theſe parts, Arabicke, Turkiſh, Armenian, and Perſian, or Agimeſco. Beſides all theſe Mahometans (which I haue alreadie named) there are many Iewes in Conſtantinople, Aleppo, Damaſcus, Babylon, Grand Cairo, and euery great Citie and Place of Merchandiſe, throughout all the Turkes Dominions, who are knowne by their Hats: for they were accuſtomed to weare red Hats without brimmes at my firſt comming: But lately (the head Vizier being their enemie) they are conſtrayned to weare Hats of blue cloth, becauſe red was accounted too ſtately, and Princelike a colour for them to weare. They are of more vile account in the ſight of Turkes then Chriſtians; inſomuch that if a Iew would turne Turke, he muſt firſt turne Chriſtian before they will admit him to bee a Turke. Yea, it is a word of reproach amongſt the Turkes, and a vſuall proteſtation amongſt them, when they are falſly accuſed of any crime, to cleare themſelues they vſe to proteſt in this manner, If this bee true, then God grant I may die a Iew. And the Iewes in like caſes vſe to ſay, If this be not a falſe accuſation, then God grant I may die a Chriſtian, praying better for themſelues then they beleeue, and as all of them muſt be that ſhall bee ſaued. And the poore Chriſtians ſojourning and dwelling in theſe parts, doe hate them very vncharitably and irreligiouſly: (in that we reade Rom. 11. many Arguments prouing that they ſhall be conuerted againe) for on Good Friday in many places (eſpecially at Zante) they throw ſtones at them, inſomuch that they dare not come out of their houſes all that day, and yet are ſcarſe in ſafetie in their houſes, for they vſe to throw ſtones at their windowes and doores, and on the roofe of their houſes. On Thurſday about noone, the Iewes begin to keepe within doores, and continue there with their doores ſhut vntill Saturday about noone, for if they come forth before that time they are ſure to be ſtoned, but after noone on Eaſter Eeue if they come abroad, they may paſſe as quietly as euer they did. And ſome ignorant Chriſtians refuſe to eate of their meat or bread: their reaſon is, becauſe the Iewes refuſe to eate or drinke with Chriſtians to this day, or to eate any meate that Chriſtians kill. But it is not vnuſuall amongſt Chriſtians of better knowledge, to eate of the Iewes meat, which ordinarily they buy of them: for the Iewes to this day eate not of the hinder part of any beaſt, but onely of the former parts, and ſell the hinder quarters of their Beefe, Mutton, Kids, Goats, &c. to Chriſtians.

Iewes ſtoned on good Friday.

Superſtition.

They obſerue ſtill all their old Ceremonies and Feaſts, Sacrifices onely excepted. Yet ſome of them haue confeſſed, that their Phyſicians kill ſome Chriſtian Patient or other, whom they haue vnder their hands at that time, in ſtead of a Sacrifice. If a man die without Children, the next Brother taketh his Wife, and raiſeth vp ſeed vnto his Brother: and they ſtill marrie in their owne Kindred. Many of them are rich Merchants: ſome of them Drogomen, and ſome Brokers. Moſt of them are very craftie and deceitfull people. They haue no Beggers amongſt them, but many Theeues, and ſome who ſteale for neceſſitie, becauſe they dare not begge. All matters of controuerſie betwixt themſelues, are brought before their Cakam to decide, who is their chiefe Churchman. Moſt of the Iewes can reade Hebrew, but few of them ſpeake it, except it be in two places in Turkie, and that is at Salonica, formerly called Theſſalonica, a Citie in Macedonia, by the Gulfe Thermaicus; and at Safetta in the Holy Land, neere vnto the Sea of Galile: Which two places are as it were Vniuerſities, or Schooles of learning amongſt them.

Two Vniuerſities.

Amongſt all the ſorts of Chriſtians, there is amongſt the Maronites an ancient companie of Chriſtians, called vulgarly Noſtranes, quaſi Nazaritans, of the Sect of the Nazarites, more ciuill and harmeleſſe people then any of the reſt. Their Countrey is Mount Lybanus (as I wrote vnto you heretofore) but many of them dwell at Aleppo, whereof ſome of them are Caſſiſes, that is, Church-men; ſome of them are Cookes, and ſeruants vnto Engliſh Merchants and others; ſome Artificers: All of them liue ſomewhat poorely, but they are more honeſt and true in their conuerſation then any of the reſt, eſpecially at their firſt comming from Mount Lybanus to dwell in Aleppo; and many, during their continuance there, if they bee not corrupted by other wicked Nations there dwelling: in whom I obſerued more by experience then I heard of them, or noted in them when I was amongſt them at Mount Lybanus. And eſpecially for the manner of their marriage, and how they honour the ſame.

They buy their wiues of their Fathers (as others there dwelling, doe) but neuer ſee them vntill they come to be married, nor then neither vntill the marriage be ſolemnized betwixt them: for there is a partition in the place where they meet to be married, and the Man and his Friends ſtand on the one ſide, and the yong Woman and her Friends on the other ſide, where they may heare, but not ſee one another, vntill the Caſſies bid the yong Man put his hand thorow an hole in the wall, and take his Wife by the hand. And whiles they haue hand in hand, the Mother of the Maid commeth with ſome ſharpe inſtrument made for the purpoſe, and all to bepricketh the new married mans hand, and maketh it bleed. And if hee let her hand goe when hee feeleth his hand ſmart, they hold it for a ſigne that hee will not loue her: But if hee hold faſt (notwithſtanding the ſmart) and wring her hard by the hand vntill ſhee crie, rather then hee will once ſhrinke, then he is counted a louing man, and her friends are glad that they haue beſtowed her on him. And how they honour Marriage aboue others, I obſerued by the naming of their firſt man-child. For as amongſt vs the women, when they are married, loſe their Surnames, and are ſurnamed by the husbands ſurname, and children likewiſe; ſo amongſt them the father loſeth his name, and is called by the name of his eldeſt ſonne, in this manner. I haue knowne a Noſtrane, whoſe name was Mou-ſe, that is, Moſes, who hauing a man-child, named him Vſeph, that is, Ioſeph, and then was the father no more called Mouſe, Moſes, but Abou Vſeph, that is, The father of Ioſeph. Another whoſe name was Vſeph, named his eldeſt ſonne Pher-iolla, after which he was no more called Vſeph, but Abou Pher-iolla, The father of Pher-iolla. Another man called Iubrael, that is, Gabriel, his ſonne at the time of Baptiſme being named Mouſe, hee alwaies after was called Abou Mouſe, that is, The father of Moſes: ſuch an honour doe they account it to be the father of a man-child.

Theſe Noſtranes reuerence their Caſſiſes greatly, and kiſſe their hand whereſoeuer they meet them: yet are moſt of them altogether vnlearned, hauing onely the knowledge of the Syriac Tongue, wherein their Lyturgie is read. They keepe their Feaſts at the ſame time as wee doe; viz. Chriſtmaſſe, Eaſter, and Whitſuntide: and at Chriſtmaſſe on the Twelfth day in the morning, called Epiphanie, their young men haue a cuſtome (betimes in the morning) to leape naked into the water: I could neuer heare any reaſon of their ſo doing, but Vzanſa de preaſe, The cuſtome of their Countrey. And though it bee then very cold, yet they perſwade themſelues, and others, that then it is hotter then at any other time, and that the water then hath an extraordinarie vertue to waſh away their ſinnes. On Munday in Eaſter weeke and Whitſun weeke, theſe Noſtranes goe with their Caſſiſes to the graues of the dead, and there kneele downe, and burne incenſe, and pray at euery graue.

Lyturgie read.

The Chelfalines are Chriſtians, dwelling vpon the borders of Perſia, betweene Meſopotamia and Perſia, at a place called Chelfa. Theſe bring Silke to Aleppo to ſell. They are plaine dealing people: If a man pay them money, and (by ouer-reckoning himſelfe) giue them more then their due, though there be but one piece ouer, ſo ſoone as they perceiue it, though it bee many dayes after, they will bring it backe againe, and reſtore it, and thinke they ſhall neuer returne ſafely into their Countrey, if they ſhould not make reſtitution thereof. Theſe people perſwade themſelues, and report vnto others, that they dwell in that place which was called Eden, whereinto Adam was put to keepe it and dreſſe it.

Eden.

The Greekes in Aleppo are very poore, for they are there (for the moſt part) but Brokers or Baſtages, that is, Porters; and many of their women as light as water, maintayning their husbands, themſelues, and their families, by proſtituting their bodies to others. And their owne husbands are oftentimes their Pandars or procurers to bring them Cuſtomers. But the Greekes that liue at Conſtantinople, are many of them great Merchants, and very rich; but exceeding proud, and ſumptuous in apparell, euen the baſeſt of them, and eſpecially their women, who though they be but Coblers wiues, or poore Artificers wiues, yet they goe in Gownes of Sattin, and Taffata, yea, of Cloth of ſiluer and gold, adorned with Precious ſtones, and many Gemmes, and Iewels about their neckes and hands. They care not how they pinch their bellies, ſo that they may haue fine apparell on their backes. And at the time of their Marriage, the women condition with their husbands to find them decent apparell, and conuenient diet, and bring them before their Patriarch of Conſtantinople to confirme it; which, if it be not performed accordingly, if they complaine to their Patriarch, they are diuorced preſently, and ſhee taketh an other man to her husband, better able to maintayne her: and hee may marrie another woman if hee pleaſe.

Coblers wiues in Sattin Gownes.

He inſtanceth of one Sophia, which for breuitie is omitted.

And both at Conſtantinople, Aleppo, and other places of Turkey, where there is trafficking, and trading of Merchants, it is no rare matter for Popiſh Chriſtians of ſundry other Countries, to Cut Cabine, (as they call it) that is, to take any woman of that Countrey where they ſoiourne, (Turkiſh women onely excepted, for it is death for a Chriſtian to meddle with them) and when they haue bought them, and enrolled them in the Cadies Booke, to vſe them as wiues ſo long as they ſoiourne in that Countrey, and maintayne them gallantly, to the conſuming of their wealth, diminiſhing of their health, and endangering of their owne ſoules. And when they depart out of that Countrey, they ſhake off theſe their ſweet-hearts, and leaue them to ſhift for themſelues and their children. And this they account no ſinne, or at leaſtwiſe ſuch a ſinne as may be waſhed away, with a little holy water. And theſe are the vertues which many Chriſtians learne by ſoiourning long in Heathen Countries.

Euery Baſhaw who hath gouernement ouer others in a Citie or Countrey, tyranniſeth ouer thoſe which are vnder their regiment; and ſometimes ſtrangleth, ſometimes beheadeth, and ſometimes puts vnto terrible tortures thoſe who offend. Yea, oftentimes without offence; onely becauſe they are rich and haue faire houſes, the Baſhaw will lay to their charge, ſuch things as he himſelfe knoweth to be vntrue, and put them to death that hee may ſeize vpon his goods. There was a Sheriffe or a Green-head in Aleppo, whom they account Mahomets kindred, who offending the Baſhaw, and brauing him in termes, as though he durſt not puniſh him, hee cauſed one of his Officers to goe with him home, and when he came before his owne doore, openly in the ſtreet to breake both his legs and armes, and there let him lie, and no man durſt find fault, or giue him food; or Phyſician, or Chirurgion come to him; or wife or ſeruants take him into houſe, but there he lay all day, and ſhould ſo haue continued vntill hee had died for hunger, or Dogs eaten him, had not his friends giuen money to the Baſhaw to haue his throat cut, to rid him out of his paine. And this is a common puniſhment amongſt them. And ſometimes for ſmall offences, they will lay a man downe on his backe, and hoyſe vp his feet, and with a cudgell giue them three hundred or foure hundred blowes on the ſoles of their feet, whereby many are lamed. And ſome they ſet on a ſharpe ſtake naked, which commeth from his fundament vp to his mouth, if he find not fauour to haue his throat cut ſooner. And ſome are ganched in this manner; they are drawne vp by a rope faſtned about their armes, to the top of a Gazouke or Gibbet full of hookes, and let downwards againe, and on what part ſoeuer any hooke taketh hold, by that they hang, vntill they die for hunger. And ſome in like ſort are drawne ouer a Gibbet, and they being compaſſed about the naked waſte with a ſmall cord, the cord is drawne by two men to make them draw vp their breath, and ſtill pulled ſtraighter and ſtraighter, vntill they be ſo narrow in the waſte, that they may eaſily be cut off by the middle at one blow, and then the vpper part is let downe on a hot grid-iron, and there ſeared vp, to keepe them in ſenſe and feeling of paine ſo long as is poſſible, and the neather part is throwne to the Dogs, &c.

They, whom they call Franckes or Free-men, liue in greater ſecuritie amongſt them then their owne People, by reaſon that they are gouerned by Conſuls, of their owne Nation, and thoſe Conſuls alſo are backed by Ambaſſadours, for the ſame Nations which are alwaies Liegers at Conſtantinople: and when their Conſuls abroad are offered wrong, they write vnto the Ambaſſadours, how, and by whom they are wronged: and then the Ambaſſadour procureth from the Great Turke, commandements to the Baſhaw of Aleppo to redreſſe their wrongs, and puniſh ſuch as offend them. Otherwiſe there were no dwelling for Francks amongſt them, but they ſhould be vſed like ſlaues by euery ſlaue. And notwithſtanding, their Conſuls and Ambaſſadours to, yet they are oftentimes abuſed by Turkes, both in words and deeds. In words they reuile them, as the Ægyptians did the Iſraelites, and call them Gours, that is, Infidels; and Cupec, that is, Dog; and Canzier, that is, Hog; and by many other odious and reproachfull names. And though they ſtrike them, yet dare they not ſtrike againe, leſt they loſe their hand, or be worſe vſed. They alſo oftentimes make Auenias of them, that is, falſe accuſations; and ſuborne falſe witneſſes to confirme it to be true: and no Chriſtians word will be taken againſt a Turke, for they account vs Infidels, and call themſelues Muſſelmen, that is, True beleeuers.

This miſerie abroad will make vs loue our owne Countrie the better when we come thither. And that is the beſt leſſon which I haue learned in my trauels, Mundi contemptum, that is, The contempt of the world. And Saint Pauls leſſon, Phil. 4.11. In whatſoeuer ſtate I am, therewith to be content. Oh how happie are you in England, if you knew your owne happineſſe! But as the prodigall ſonne, vntill he was pinched with penurie abroad, neuer conſidered the plentie of his fathers houſe: So many in England know not their owne felicitie, becauſe they doe not know the miſeries of others. But if they were here in this Heathen Countrie, they would know what it is to liue in a Chriſtian Common-wealth, vnder the gouernment of a godly King, who ruleth by Law and not by luſt; where there is plentie and peace, and preaching of the Goſpel, and many other godly bleſſings, which others want. And GOD long continue his mercies to our noble King Iames, and his whole Realmes, and giue vs grace as farre to excell other Nations in thankfulneſſe as we doe in happineſſe. And thus for preſent I commend you to the moſt gracious protection of the Almightie IEHOVAH, beſeeching him, (if it be his will) to ſend vs a ioyfull meeting, both in this world, and in the world to come. Amen.

Part of another Letter of Maſter WILLIAM BIDDVLPH, from Ieruſalem.

WOrſhipfull and my ſingular good friend, I being now (by the prouidence of GOD) at Ieruſalem, Captus amore tui, raptus honore loci, for the loue I beare to you, and delight I conceiue in this famous place, where our ſweet Sauiour Chriſt vouchſafed once his bleſſed bodily preſence; I could not but remember you with ſome ſalutation from hence, hauing ſuch choice of Meſſengers (by reaſon of the great concourſe of people vnto this place at this preſent, from ſundry places of Chriſtendome) to tranſport my Letters vnto you: Nothing doubting but that as my former Letters (which I haue heretofore written vnto you both from Aleppo, and other places) concerning my former voyages, and ſuch things as (by diligent obſeruation) I noted in my trauels, were acceptable vnto you; ſo that this ſhall be much more acceptable, both in regard of the Place from whence it came, as alſo of the matter ſubiect herein contayned; beeing my Voyage from Aleppo in Syria Comagena, to Ieruſalem, vndertaken this preſent yeere 1600. not moued as Pilgrims with any ſuperſtitious deuotion to ſee Relikes, or worſhip ſuch places as they account holy; but as Trauellers and Merchants, occaſioned by Dearth and Sicknes, Peſtilence, and Famine in the Citie where we ſoiourne: which two are ſuch fellow-like companions, that the Græcians diſtinguiſh them but by one Letter, calling the Peſtilence λοιμὸς, and the Famine λιμὸς: By reaſon whereof all Trafficke was hindred, and thoſe Merchants whom they call Frankes, or Freemen, either remoued to other places; or ſuch as ſtayed in the Citie, cauſed their gates to bee ſhut vp, and came not abroad vntill Sol entred into Leo, which is vſually the twelfth or thirteenth day of Iuly, at which time the Plague ſtill ceaſeth in this place, though it bee neuer ſo great, and all that are then ſicke, amend; and ſuch as then come abroad, need not feare any danger. The Turkes, Moores, Arabians, and other Mahometans, neuer remooue for feare of any ſickneſſe, nor refuſe any mans company infected therewith; for they ſay, euery mans fortune is written in his fore-head, and that they ſhall not dye before their time; not knowing what it is to tempt God, and to refuſe ordinary meanes. But in this interim, from the beginning of this ſickneſſe (which was in March) vntill the expected and vndoubted end, when the Sunne entreth into Leo, we whoſe names are ſubſcribed (for cauſes aboue mentioned) tooke our Voyage from Aleppo towards Ieruſalem, hauing Letters of commendation, from Clariſſimo Imo the Venice Conſul, and ſundry others of the chiefe Italian Merchants, to their Padres at Ieruſalem, for our kind vſage there, with libertie of conſcience.

The Plague ceaſeth by influence of the Heauens.

Anno Dom. 1600. The ninth of March, after Dinner we ſet forth, garded with Ianizaries, and accompanied with ſundry Engliſh, Italian, and French Merchants, who in kindneſſe rode with vs ſeuen or eight miles, to bring vs on the way, and then returned to Aleppo. But moſt of our Engliſh Merchants brought vs to Cane Toman, ten miles from Aleppo, where we made merry with ſuch good cheere as we brought with vs. For there was nothing to be had for money but Goates Milke, whereof we had as much as we would. Here we purpoſed to haue ſlept all night, but hauing no other Beds but the hard ground, with Iacobs Pillow (a good hard ſtone) vnder our heads, vnaccuſtomed to ſuch Downe Beds, we could not ſleepe, but ſpent the time in honeſt mirth vntill it was paſt mid-night, and then our friends tooke their leaue of vs, and returned towards Aleppo, and we proceeded in our iourney towards Ieruſalem. The night beeing darke, and the way dangerous and theeuiſh, our Ianizarie, Byram Baſhaw, willed vs euery one to take a match lighted in our hands, and to whirle it about, that the fire might be ſeene the further, to terrifie the Theeues, leſt they ſhould ſurprize vs on the ſudden. And when wee came to ſuſpitious places (as Caues, Rockes, Barnes, or odde Cottages in the way) our Ianizarie vſed to ride before; and as Fowlers beate vpon Buſhes for Birds, ſo hee (with his Launce) would ſtrike and beate vpon ſuch places, leſt wild Arabs (which lye lurking in ſuch places) ſhould ſteale vpon vs on the ſudden. When the day appeared, our way was pleaſant and comfortable vnto vs, vntill we came to a Village called Saracoope, whither we came about noone, the tenth of March. And becauſe our Seiſenars or Sumptor Horſes (which carryed prouiſion for Man and Horſe, as the cuſtome of the Countrey is) were tyred, and we our ſelues alſo (for want of ſleepe the night paſt) wearied and hungry, wee were conſtrayned to lodge there all night on the hard ground by our Horſe heeles, in an old Cane diſtant from Cane Toman eight and twentie miles.

Cane Toman.

Saracoope.

The eleuenth of March, betimes in the morning wee departed from Saracoope, and came betimes in the after-noone to a fine Village called Marrah, where there is a very faire new Cane builded by Amrath (commonly called Morat) Chillabee, ſometimes Deſterdare, that is, Treaſurer of Aleppo, and afterwards of Damaſcus, who for the refuge of Trauellers, and their protection againſt Theeues, built a ſtately ſtrong Cane like vnto Leaden Hall in London, or rather the Exchange in London, where there are faire vpper Roomes for great men in their Trauels, and the neather Roomes are for ordinary Trauellers and their Horſes, but in hot weather the beſt make choiſe to ſleepe on the ground in low Roomes, rather then in their Chambers. The Founder hereof alſo ordayned, that all Trauellers that way ſhould haue their entertaynment there of his coſt. Hee alloweth them Bread, Pillaw, and Mutton, which our Ianizaries accepted off; but we ſcorning reliefe from the Turkes without money, ſent vnto the Village, where (beſides our owne prouiſion which wee brought with vs) wee had alſo other good things for money. Marrah is diſtant from Saracoope, foure and twentie miles.

Marrah.

Maner of their Canes.

The twelfth of March was a very raynie day, yet we trauelled all the forenoone, vntill wee came to a Village, called Laemine, which afarre off made ſhew of a very faire Village; but when we came thither, wee found it ſo ruinous, that there was not one houſe able to ſhroude vs from the extremitie of the ſhowre: the Inhabitants thereof hauing forſaken it, and fled into the Mountaynes to dwell, for feare of the Ianizaries of Damaſcus, who trauelling that way vſed to take from them, not onely victuals for themſelues, & Prouender for their Horſes without mony, but whatſoeuer things elſe they found in their houſes. Onely there was a little Church or Chappel in good preparation, wherinto (for a little mony) we obtayned leaue to enter, our ſelues with our horſes & carriage, & there we brought out our victuals, & refreſhed our ſelues, and baited our Laemine.

Wretched ſlauerie.

Miſerable Pouertie.

horſes, and reſted vntill it left rayning. After the ſhowre, while our Horſes were preparing, we walked into the fields neere vnto the Church, & ſaw many poore people gathering Mallows and three leafed graſſe, and asked them what they did with it: and they anſwered, that it was all their food; and that they boyled it, and did eate it: then wee tooke pitie on them, and gaue them bread, which they receiued very ioyfully, and bleſſed God that there was bread in the World, and ſaid, they had not ſeene any bread the ſpace of many moneths. The ſhowre ceaſing, wee rode from this Chappell and Village of Lacke money (I ſhould haue ſaid Lacmin, but might ſay, lacke men and money too) and rode forward vntill wee came vnto a Village or Towne called Tyaba, where (becauſe it was neere night) we deſired to lodge; but could not bee admitted into any houſe for any money, whereupon our chiefe Ianizarie, Byram Baſhaw went into an houſe, and offered to pull man, woman, and child out of the houſe, that wee might bring in our Horſes, and lodge there our ſelues. But when we ſaw what pittifull lamentation they made, we intreated out Ianizarie either to peſwade them for money, or to let them alone. And vnderſtanding that there was a faire Citie in our way, ten miles off, wee fiue, with our Ianizarie, beeing well horſed, rode thither, and left our carriage with the reſt of our company at Tyaba, to come to vs betimes in the morning.

Tyaba.

Aman.

This Citie is now commonly called Aman, but of olde it was called Hamath, 2. Kings 17. Here we lodged in a faire Cane, but on the cold ground, and vpon the hard ſtones, and thought our ſelues well prouided for, that wee had an houſe ouer our heads to keepe vs dry. Hamath is from Marrah, about fiue and thirtie miles. On the fourteenth of March wee trauelled from Hamath, a pleaſant way, & a ſhort dayes iourney, to a fine Towne called vulgarly Hemſe, but formerly Hus, diſtant from Hamath, but twentie miles. This is ſaid to haue beene the City where Iob dwelt, and is to this day called by the Chriſtians inhabiting in thoſe borders, Iobs Citie. And there is a fruitfull Valley neere vnto it, called the Valley of Hus, and a Caſtle not farre off, in the way to Tripoly, called Hus Caſtle to this day. But I make ſome doubt whether Iob were euer at place, for Iob is ſaid to haue dwelt amongſt the Edomites, or wicked Idumaans: and Idumaa bordered vpon Arabia Fœlix, and not neere Syria, where this Citie called Hus ſtandeth.

Hemſe.

Iobs Citie.

Hus.

On the fifteenth day of March, we went from Hus towards Damaſcus, which is foure dayes Iourney off, and all the way (vntill we came within ten miles of Damaſcus) is a Deſart, vn-inhabited, and a Theeuiſh way; onely there are erected in the way certayne Canes to lodge in. But if they bring not prouiſion with them both for man and horſe, and ſome Quilt or Pillow to ſleepe on, the hard ſtones muſt be their Bed, and the Aire their Supper: for ſome of their Canes are nothing but ſtone wals to keepe out Theeues. In Cities they haue very ſtately Canes, but not for Trauellers, but for themſelues to dwell in; for euery rich man calleth his houſe a Cane. But the Canes that ſtand in high wayes, are in Charitie erected by great men, for the protection of Trauellers; but moſt of them are very badly kept, and are worſe than Stables. Our firſt dayes Iourney from Hus was a very vncomfortable and dangerous Deſart: wee ſaw no Houſe all the way vntil we came vnto a Village called Haſſia, where we lodged in an old Caſtle diſtant from Hus two and twentie miles.

Haſsia.

Charrab.

The ſixteenth of March, from Haſſia, we rode to an ancient Chriſtian Towne called Charrab. where our prouiſion being ſpent, we made ſupply thereof, and bought Bread and Wine of the Chriſtians there dwelling. It is inhabited by Greekes and Turkes, but gouerned by Turkes only. There is but one Church in the Towne, which is dedicated to Saint Nicholas, by the Chriſtians who firſt builded it. But both Chriſtians and Turkes pray therein: the Chriſtians on the one ſide or Ile of the Church, and the Turkes on the other. But the Chriſtians are ouer-ruled by the Turkes, and conſtrained to find them Oyle to their Lampes in the Church. For the Turkes not only burne Lampes in their Churches euery night, but during the whole time of their Lent they beſet the battlements of their Steeples round about with Lampes. But when their Lent is ended, they burne Lampes in their Steeples onely once a week, and that is on Thurſday at night, which is the Eeue before their Sabbath. After wee had refreſhed our ſelues heere, halfe the day being not yet ſpent, we roade from hence to a poore Village called Nebecke, or (as they pronounce it) Nebbkeh, where we lodged in an old Cane, diſtant from Haſſia ſeuen and twentie miles. And vnderſtanding at this place, that the way that wee were to paſſe on the morrow, was full of Arabs, and that two dayes before, many men were found in the way killed by them, we feared to goe any further. Yet meeting with company contrarie to expectation, March the ſeuenteenth we went forwards, and ſaw no houſe nor company all the day long beſides our ſelues, vntill we came to a Village called Cotiſey, where wee lodged in a very ſtately new Cane, built by Synan Baſhaw; and not altogether finiſhed. This Cane doth farre exceed that at Marrab, (before mentioned) for hereunto is adioyned a faire new Church and a Bazar, that is a Market place where Trauellers may buy many good things. Heere is alſo meate for Trauellers, and Prouender for their Horſes to be had of the Founders coſt. And in the middle of this Cane, there is a faire large Fountayne of water, of hewed ſtones foure ſquare, wherein there is exceeding good water for Trauellers to drinke, and Chambers for their Lodging: but if they will haue any Beds, they muſt bring them with them, or ſleepe on the hard ground, as moſt men that trauell that way are wont to doe.

Nebecke.

Cotiſey.

Excellent Cane.

Dangerous way.

The eighteenth of March, from Cotiſey, wee had not much more then twentie miles to Damaſcus. The firſt ten miles was a Deſart, and dangerous way, and we hardly eſcaped danger; for an Arabian Horſeman ſeeing vs come, ſtood as a Spie in our way, to view our ſtrength, and marked euery one of vs very narrowly, and what weapons we had; and then rode vp an high Mountayne, as faſt as if it had beene plaine ground, to acquaint his companions what a prey hee had found for them. Whereupon our Ianizarie caſt aſide his vpper garment, being a Gamberlooke, and bad vs all make readie our Weapons, and hee himſelfe rode before vs with his Launce on his ſhoulders, expecting their comming vpon vs ſuddenly: but they hauing eſpyed (from the top of the Mountayne) fiftie Ianizaries of Damaſcus at the leaſt, with their Iimmoglans comming after vs, came not, and ſo by the prouidence of God wee eſcaped their hands. The other part of our way to Damaſcus, was a pleaſant Plaine of tenne miles in length, hauing many fruitfull Villages, fine Riuers, and pleaſant Gardens thereon. At our entrance into this Plaine or Valley, riding downe an Hill, we beheld the proſpect of Damaſcus ten miles off, whither we came about two of the clocke in the afternoone, and tooke vp our Lodging in the middle of the Citie, at a Cane called in Moriſco, Cane Nebbe, that is, The Cane of the Prophet; but by the Turkes; Cane Haramin, where we hired three Chambers for our money, and our Seruants bought our meate, and dreſſed it themſelues, as they did alſo all the reſt of the way where wee could get any thing. To this end we tooke a Cooke with vs, and other Seruants from Aleppo, to dreſſe our meate, and to looke to our Horſes. Heere we met with Frenchmen, and other Chriſtians, ſtaying for company to goe to Ieruſalem.

At Damaſcus many Iewiſh Merchants, and Greekes, and others, knew ſome of vs, and came to ſalute vs, and preſent vs with ſuch good things as they had, both Wine, and Bread, and Kiddes, and Fruit, &c. and lent vs very good Beds with ſheets and other furniture, which refreſhed well our wearied bodies.

The nineteenth and twentieth of March, wee ſtayed at Damaſcus to reſt our ſelues, and ſee the Citie.

Damaſcus.

Damaſcus is a moſt ancient Citie, and as Eſay ſpake of it in his time, The head of Aram is Damaſcus, Iſa.7.8. ſo Damaſcus is the chiefeſt Citie of Syria to this day. The ſituation thereof is moſt pleaſant, being built on a plaine ground, ſtrongly walled about, and a ſtrong Caſtle therein, with many fine Riuers running on euery ſide of it, eſpecially Abanah, and Pharpar, mentioned, 2.Kings 5. which now are diuided into many heads. The Turkes ſay, that their Prophet Mahomet was once at Damaſcus, and that when he ſaw the pleaſant ſituation of it, and beheld the ſtately proſpect of it, excelling all others that euer hee ſaw before; refuſed to enter into the Citie, leſt the pleaſantneſſe thereof ſhould rauiſh him, and moue him there to ſettle an Earthly Paradiſe, and hinder his deſire of the heauenly Paradiſe. It hath alſo many pleaſant Orchards, and Gardens round about the Citie, and ſome wayes for the ſpace of a mile, and more about the Citie there are many Orchards, and great varietie of fruits: ſome called Adams Apples, and Adams Figs, and ſundrie other ſtrange Fruits. Damaſcus is called by the Turkes, Sham, and they call it, the Garden of Turkie, becauſe there is no place in all the Turkes Dominions, eſpecially in Syria, that yeeldeth ſuch abundance of Fruit. Here we ſtayed two dayes and three nights to reſt our ſelues, and ſee the Citie. And hauing a Greeke to our Guide, he ſhewed vs firſt a ſtately Muſkia, or Turkiſh Church erected in the place where the Temple of Rymmon ſtood, mentioned, 2.Kings 5. And two other memorable matters, mentioned, Acts 9.25.viz. the place where the Diſciples let downe Paul in the night through the wall in a Basket, whereof the Chriſtians there dwelling keepe an exact memoriall; taking vpon them to demonſtrate the very place of the wall; which we not beleeuing, they confirmed it with this reaſon, that Damaſcus was * neuer ouercome; and that there haue beene Chriſtians dwelling there euer ſince the time of Paul, and therefore might keepe a memoriall of the very place: But to let the place paſſe, the thing it ſelfe we know to be true. He ſhewed vs alſo the houſe of Ananias, which is vnder the ground, whereinto we were led, downe a paire of ſtaires from the ſtreet, as it were into a Celler; and the doore being vnlocked, we entred with Candels into the place, where we ſaw two darke Chambers, where a man cannot ſee to reade in the day time without Candels, here they ſay, he liued in ſecret for feare of the Iewes. Many Chriſtians comming thither to ſee that place, with a coale write their names on the wall, and there are ſo many names there alreadie, that there is ſcarce roome for any other to ſet his name. Some of them report Damaſcus to bee built in the place where Kain killed his Brother Abel. And ſome ſay it is neere it, and offered to bring vs to the place; but we refuſed.

The pleaſant ſituation.

Store of fruits.

* Damaſcus was wonne from the Chriſtians by the Saracens

Saint George.

They take vpon them alſo at Damaſcus, to demonſtrate the place where Saint George was buried, ſo they doe likewiſe at Aleppo, but I thinke the one to bee as true as the other. There is a fine Towne neere vnto Damaſcus, about two or three miles diſtant on the ſide of an hill, called Salbia, from whence a man may behold the proſpect of the Citie of Damaſcus moſt pleaſantly, with the Gardens and pleaſant places about it.

Salbia.

Pilgrimage to Mecha.

At Damaſcus we met many thouſand Turkes, going on Pilgrimage towards Mecha in Arabia, to viſit Mahomets Sepulchre, as they vſually doe euery yeere about their Byram time; for Hogies.

An Angell-deuill.

they hold, that whoſoeuer once in his life time ſhall not goe on Pilgrimage to Mecha, to ſee the Sepulchre of their Prophet, ſhall neuer enter into Paradiſe. And therefore ſome of them goe thither often in their life time, partly for deuotion, and partly to buy Merchandiſe. For there are brought thither at that time of the yeere, great ſtore of Commodities from India, Perſia, and other places; and none may buy or ſell there but Mahometans. And it is forbidden to all Chriſtians vpon paine of death, to come neere Mecha within fiue miles: partly, leſt they ſhould marre their Markets; but chiefly, leſt they ſhould ſee their folly or rather madneſſe in worſhipping an Iron Sepulchre; after the ſight whereof, many of their old men (which thinke neuer to come thither againe) vſe to pull out both their eyes, after they haue ſeene ſo holy a ſight. And whoſoeuer (ſay they) dyeth in his Pilgrimage thither, or returning from thence, is ſure to goe to Heauen preſently. And they that haue beene there but once, are alwaies after called Hogies, that is, Pilgrims: and are called by that name in this manner. If his name before were Mahomet, he is at his returne called Hogie Mahomet. If before Muſtapha, hee is alwaies after called Hogie Muſtapha, &c. And they that haue beene often at Mecha and returne againe, are called Great Hogies. And euery yeere when the Carauan of Pilgrims returne from Mecha, hee that hath beene there oftneſt, is called, The great Hogie: and is greatly honored of them all, for hee rideth before them all in more ſtately apparell then they, with Flowers and Garlands about his Horſe, and when they come neere any great Citie, the chiefeſt men in the Citie ride forth to meet him, and bring him into the Citie with great ſolemnitie. They falſly affirme, that this their Temple at Mecha in Arabia, was built by Abraham, and they prepare themſelues with greater care to goe to worſhip there, then many Chriſtians doe when they come to the Lords Supper, for they diſburden their hearts of all hatred and malice, and reconcile themſelues one to another, &c. Otherwiſe they hold that all their labour is loſt, and that they ſhall bee neuer awhit the better for their Pilgrimage. But if they forgiue one another, and repent them for their former ſinnes, they thinke there to obtaine full remiſſion of all their ſinnes, and that at their returne they are pure and without ſpot.

Daria.

Place of Pauls conuerſion.

* Mueco furor Sauli, liber eſt conuerſio Pauli.

Saſſa.

March twentie one, we departed from the Citie of Damaſcus, and about fiue or ſix miles from the Citie, paſſed by a Village called Daria; neere vnto which, we ſaw a great multitude of men, women, and children on their knees, in the high way: and by that time they had ended their deuotion, we drew ſo neere as to ſalute them; and asking what they were, it was told vs, that they were all Chriſtians of ſundry Nations, viz. Armenians, Greekes, Chelſalines, Noſtranes, and ſundry others, who went to Ieruſalem, to viſit and worſhip the holy places there. We asked further, what they meant to fall on their knees in that place: they anſwered vs, that it was the place where * Paul was conuerted, and that it was their cuſtome when they trauelled that way, to fall on their knees, and pray vnto God to conuert them. They were in number at the leaſt foure or fiue hundred people, there was a Greeke Patriarke, and an Armenian Biſhop in their companie. Many of them knew vs, (hauing ſeene vs in Aleppo) and ſaluted vs by our names. Wee rode a while in companie together, and lodged all together that night at a Cane, called Saſſa, diſtant from Damaſcus ſix and twentie miles.

Arabia Petrea.

Ill way.

Great cold.

Conetra.

March twentie two, we rode before the reſt of the companie. Our way that we trauelled all this day, was exceeding bad, rockie, wateriſh, and barren, called Arabia Petrea, where our Horſes oftentimes ſtucke faſt in the puddles and myrie places, and ſomtimes ready to breake their owne legs, and their Riders necks, among Rocks and Stones, it was neither pleaſant going on foot, nor riding this way, for there was no path nor euen ground, but huge ſtones and Rocks ſo neere together, that our Horſes could goe but a foot-pace, and oftentimes met with ſuch Mariſhes and Quagmires, that wee were conſtrained to goe farre about before wee could find better waies to paſſe ouer. It is alſo exceeding cold in this place alwaies (in reſpect of other places in that Countrey) for there are neither Trees nor Houſes, nor high Hils to keep away the violence and force of the Windes. The Carauans that trauell vſually that way betwixt Damaſcus and Egypt, ſay, that this dayes iourney troubleth them more then all the reſt, and that they neuer paſſe by that way, but they leaue two or three of their Camels behind them, ſome misfortune or other befalling vnto them. Wee ſaw alſo in ſundry places this way, the carkaſſes of many dead Camels, which haue miſcarried amongſt the Rocks. It is alſo a very theeuiſh way, full of wilde Arabs: yet (by the prouidence of God) we came ſafely that day to Conetra, where we lodged in a good Cane, diſtant from Saſſa eight and twentie miles.

Walking wondred at.

Cut doublet.

In a Bazar (like vnto a Cloiſter) adioyning to the Cane, wee tooke pleaſure to walke vp and downe ſome few turnes, which the Turkes beholding, wondred at vs: (for it is not their cuſtome in thoſe hot Countries, to walke vp and downe as wee doe in cold Countries, but to ſit ſtill on the ground like bruite Beaſts) and one of them came vnto vs, and asked vs what wee meant to walke vp and downe in ſuch ſort, and whether wee were out of our way, or out of our wits. If your way (ſaid hee) lyeth toward the vpper end of the Cloiſter, why come you downewards? And if at the nether end, why goe you backe againe? It ſeemed no leſſe ſtrange vnto them, to ſee a Chriſtian with a cut Doublet: and they called him foole, and asked him what he meant to make holes in his Coate: for they neither cut nor pinke any of their Garments, but wearing them all plaine, ſparing for no coſt, to guard them with lace of ſiluer and gold, if they be able. And ſuch as weare long haire on their heads, the Turkes call Slouens, and account them ſauage Beaſts; for they themſelues weare no haire on their heads at all, but ſhaue them euery weeke once, and keepe them warme with a Turbant of white Shaſh, made of cotton Wooll, which they neuer vncouer in their ſalutations to any man, but bow their heads, with their hands on their breaſts. But if a man haue a faire long beard, they reuerence him, and ſay hee is a wiſe man, and an honorable perſonage. But if they haue no beards at all, they call them (if they be yong) Bardaſſes, that is, Sodomiticall Boyes. But if they be men growne, and haue no beards, they call them fooles, and men of no credit; and ſome of them refuſe to buy or ſell with ſuch, and ſay, they haue no wit, and that they will not beleeue them, &c.

Long haire.

Long beards.

The three and twentieth of March, we had a more pleaſant way; for the firſt ten miles wee rode thorow the fields, and a very pleaſant Parke. But when we came out of this Parke or Forreſt, we were ſomewhat troubled, partly by reaſon of the bad way, and partly by bad people in the way. The people did more trouble vs then the way; for there ſate amongſt the Rocks, in our way, many Turkes and Arabs, with Maces of Iron, and other weapons, who ſtayed vs, and demanded Caphar or toll money; we were glad to giue them content, that we might paſſe ſafely by them. But the Carauan of Chriſtians, who came after vs, though they were many hundreds, yet ſome of them being not able, ſome not willing to pay ſo much money as they demanded, were ſhrewdly beaten with their Iron Maces. There was a Ieſuit in their company, who eſcaped not without ſtripes, whereat (as I haue heard) he reioyced, and counted it meritorious, in that he ſuffered ſuch miſery in ſo holy a voyage. And in my hearing at Ieruſalem, one of his companions told him, that he merited much to ſuſtaine ſuch trauell and labour, and be at ſo great coſt and charges, and ſuffer ſo many ſtripes for Chriſts ſake: but I know, had it not beene more for loue of his purſe then for loue of Chriſt, he might haue eſcaped without ſtripes, yea, with theſe kind ſpeeches, Marhabbah Ianum, that is, Welcome my friend or ſweet-heart. At another place in my Trauels, I heard a Frier bragging of his good workes, and ſaying, that hee had done ſo many good workes, that if he ſhould kill three men, his good workes would make ſatisfaction, and merit remiſſion for them all. Here I may fitly take occaſion to teach thoſe that purpoſe to trauell into Turkey, how to behaue themſelues. If they bee ſet vpon by Theeues, they may defend themſelues in their trauels, if they be ſtrong enough; but if they be polling officers (as theſe were) they muſt not bee contradicted. But neither in their Cities, nor in their trauels may they ſtrike againe, though they be abuſed and beaten by any man (except they bee Theeues and Robbers) for if they doe, they ſhall either bee put to death, or haue their hand cut off. Neither if a man receiue a box on the eare at any of their hands, muſt he giue one bad word, or looke frowningly vpon him that ſmote him: for then hee will ſtrike him againe, and ſay, What, Goure? Doſt thou curſe me, and wiſh that the Deuil had me? but hee muſt kiſſe his beard, or the skirt of his Garment, and ſmile vpon him, and then he will let him paſſe.

Pleaſant Park.

Caphar-cuſtomers.

Much good do him with ſuch Merits.

Friar Merit-monger.

An admonition for Trauellers.

Baſe thraldome.

At the foot of this Mountayne there is an old Cane, where vſually Trauellers lodge: but it being not yet noone, we reſolued to trauell eighteene miles further, to the Sea of Galile. At the foot of this ſtony Hill, hard by this Cane, there runneth a pleaſant Riuer, which diuideth Syria from Galile. And ouer this Riuer there is a faire Bridge, the one end whereof is out of the Holy Land, the other in it. This Riuer is called Iordan, the head whereof commeth from Mount Lybanus, and maketh three Seas. The firſt, is the waters of Maron, which we left on our right hand, about ten miles off. The other, on the left hand, which lay in our way as wee ſhould trauell. The ſecond, is the Sea of Galile or Tiberias, or Lake of Genezereth. The third, is the Sea of Sodome, called Mare mortuum, where the Riuer Iordan endeth. The Bridge that croſſeth this Riuer Iordan at the entrance into the Holy Land, is called Iacobs Bridge; for two cauſes. Firſt, it is ſaid, that there Iacob met his brother Eſau. Secondly, that there Iacob wreſtled with an Angell.

Iacobs Bridge.

The firſt part of Canaan called Galile, beginneth at this Bridge, and to this day it is a very pleaſant and fruitfull Countrey. After wee were entred into Galile, about two miles from the Bridge, our Ianiſarie asked vs whither wee would goe vp to a Mountayne, and ſo to Saphetta neere vnto Mount Carmel, which is a place of leaning for Iewes; or keepe the lower way, and goe by the Sea of Galile, which is the pleaſanter way: and thereof we made choiſe: and tooke Saphetta in our way afterwards.

About ſeuen miles from Iacobs Bridge, our Guide brought vs to a Well, adorned with marble Pillars, and couered with ſtone, which hee ſaid to haue beene the Pit whereinto Ioſeph was put, when his Brethren ſold him to the Iſhmalites. But it ſeemed to vs incredible: firſt, becauſe that was a drie Pit, and this is full of ſweet water. Againe, Iacob dwelt at Hebron twelue miles beyond Ieruſalem, and his Sonnes kept Sheepe in Shechem. And that drie Pit whereinto they put Ioſeph was at Dothan (which we ſaw afterwards) and this Pit which they ſhewed vs with marble Pillars, was in Galile; not neere Dothan nor Shechem where Ioſephs Brethren kept their Fathers Sheepe. But by others of better iudgement, we vnderſtood that this alſo was called Ioſephs Pit, or Well, becauſe it was built by one Ioſeph, not Ioſeph the ſonne of Iacob, but ſome other. But the Ioſephs Pit.

Minium.

ignorant people which trauell that way, are apt to beleeue any thing that is told them. About ten miles from this Well, we came to a Cane, called by the Moores Minium, but by the Turkes Miſſia, hard by the Sea of Galile, where we lodged all night, hauing trauelled that day by computation ſixe and thirtie miles.

Sea of Galile.

Tiberias and Bethſaida.

Geneſareth.

Cana.

The foure and twentieth of March we rode along by the Sea of Galile, which Ioh.6.1. is called by two names, viz. the Sea of Galile or Tiberias. Galile, becauſe it is in Galile: and Tiberias, becauſe the Citie Tiberias was built by it, and Bethſaida an other ancient Citie; of both which we ſaw ſome ruinous walls. And it is ſaid in that Chapter (Ioh.6.1.) that Ieſus went ouer the Sea of Galile: and in an other place, that he went beyond the Lake. And, Luke 9. 10. it is ſaid, that he went into a ſolitarie place, neere vnto a Citie, called Bethſaida, which place of Iohn, I learned to vnderſtand better by ſeeing it, then euer I could before by reading of it. For, ſeeing that Tiberias and Bethſaida were both Cities on the ſame ſide of the Sea, and Chriſt went from Tiberias to, or neere vnto Bethſaida; I gather thereby, that our Sauiour Chriſt went not ouer the length or breadth of that Sea; but ouer ſome Arme, Boſome, or Reach thereof, viz. ſo farre as Tiberias was diſtant from Bethſaida; which is alſo confirmed in that it is ſaid elſewhere, A great multitude followed him on foot thither; which they could not haue done, if hee had gone quite ouer the Sea, to the other ſide among the Gergeſens, which is out of the Holy Land. And therefore this Sea of Galile, is alſo called the Lake of Geneſereth, becauſe the Countrey of the Gergeſens is on the other ſide the Lake, from whence the Swine ran head-long into the Sea and were choaked therein: and as that place was out of the Holy Land; ſo the people which then inhabited it, were as farre from holineſſe, when they requeſted our Sauiour Chriſt to depart out of their Coaſts. And ſuch like holy people inhabit there ſtill, viz. wild Arabs and Turks, &c. Wee ſaw alſo (neere vnto this Sea) the place where that Towne (mentioned, Ioh.2.1.) called Cana of Galile ſtood, where our Sauiour Chriſt at a marriage turned Water into Wine; in place whereof there ſtandeth now a poore Village, inhabited by Turks. This Sea of Galile is (by computation) in length eight leagues, and in breadth fiue leagues, and euery league is three miles, and then it encloſeth it ſelfe into a narrower compaſſe, carrying but the breadth of an ordinarie Riuer vntill it come to Sodome, where it endeth, which is called Mare Mortuum, that is, The dead Sea.

After we had rode about ſeuen miles by the Sea of Galile, we left it on our left hand, and aſcended vp a Mountayne on the right hand. This Mountayne was not very ſteepie, but exceeding pleaſant and fertile, for (being the Spring-time) it was ſo beſet with ſuch varietie of flowers among the greene graſſe, that they ſeemed to fleere in our faces, and to laugh and ſing (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh) as wee went, Pſal. 65. 13. This is ſaid to bee that Mountayne, mentioned Ioh. 6. 9. where our Sauiour Chriſt wrought a miracle, in feeding fiue thouſand men with fiue Barley loaues, and two Fiſhes.

Saphetta a Iewiſh Vniuerſitie.

Mourning with Tymbrels.

When we came to the top of the Mountayne, we ſaw Saphetta on the right hand, a Vniuerſitie of the Iewes, where they ſpeake Hebrew, and haue their Synagogues there. The Citie Saphetta is ſituated on a very high Hill with three tops, and ſo the Citie hath three parts; one part is inhabited by Iewes, the other two by Turks. We asked ſome Iewes, whom we knew formerly to haue beene Merchants of Aleppo, what they meant to leaue their Trade and to liue there: They anſwered, they were now old and came thither to die, that they might be neerer to Heauen. The Iewes haue here more libertie then in any part of the Holy Land. They dare not come to Ieruſalem, for feare leſt the Chriſtians there dwelling, ſtone them. Whiles we were at Saphetta, many Turkes departed from thence towards Mecha in Arabia. And the ſame morning they went, we ſaw many women playing with Timbrels, as they went along the ſtreet, and made a yelling or ſhriking noiſe as though they cryed. We asked what they meant in ſo doing? It was anſwered vs, that they mourned for the departure of their Husbands, who were gone that morning on Pilgrimage to Mecha, and they feared that they ſhould neuer ſee them againe, becauſe it was a long way and dangerous, and many died there euery yeere.

I-nel Tyger.

All the way which we trauelled this day, was very pleaſant; and all the Ground both Hils and Dales very fruitfull, according as it is deſcribed by Moſes, Deut. 8. 7, 8. and Deut. 11. 10, 11. And we came that day, about two of the clocke in the afternoone to a Village, called in the Arabick tongue I-nel Tyger, that is (by interpretation) The Merchants Eye, wherein there are two very faire Caſtles for Trauellers to lodge in from danger of wild Arabs, which abound in thoſe parts: we tooke vp our lodging in the neereſt Caſtle, which is the faireſt.

Tabor.

Mount Tabor.

After we had refreſhed our ſelues, and ſlept a while: being hard by Mount Tabor, wee deſired to aſcend to the top of it, and tooke Ally (one of our Ianiſaries) and rode towards the Mountaine. But vnderſtanding that it was very dangerous, by reaſon of wild Arabs, which lodged in Caues, and Rocks, and Buſhes, about the Mountaine, wee hired ſome of the principall Arabs to goe with vs, and guard vs from the reſt. And as wee went, wee beheld the proſpect of the Mountaine to be very pleaſant, ſomewhat ſteepie, but not very high (in reſpect of ſome other Mountaines thereabout) nor very large, but a comely round Mountaine, beſet with Trees and thicke Buſhes, which at that time of the yeere flouriſhed greene: wee rode ſo farre as wee could for ſteepineſſe, and then left ſome of our Seruants at the foot of the Mountaine to keepe our Horſes, and tooke vpon vs to clamber vp on foot, which wee ſhould neuer haue beene able to haue done, had there not beene very high Graſſe, Sprigs, and Buſhes to hold by. One of our Arabs went vp before vs, as faſt as if it had beene euen ground, but we came very ſlowly after, which he perceiuing, would looke backe, and often vſe theſe words to cheere vs, Gel, gel, gel, that is, Come, come, come; and ſometimes theſe, Iſh halac Seeadi, How doe you Maſters. Wee were almoſt all out of breath, and one of our companie cried, For the loue of God let vs returne, for I can goe no further; Oh, I ſhall die, I ſhall die. Whereupon, one of vs being neerer the top then he himſelfe ſuppoſed (to cheere the reſt) ſaid, Come cheerefully, I am on the top; which ſomewhat heartned the reſt: otherwiſe they had all gone downe againe. Being on the top, we reſted a while to take breath; and then we walked vp and downe the top of the Mount, and ſaw onely one houſe, or rather low Cottage vninhabited, hauing onely two darke roomes in it, meete for Foxes or Iaccals to lodge in, and ſaw no ſigne of any other Tauerne or Tabernacle. Onely we vnderſtood, that (many yeeres ſince) there was a Monaſterie there inhabited by Popiſh Friers, but being moleſted by the Arabs, tooke away the holineſſe with them, and left the Mountaine behind them; yet ſtill they call this Mount Tabor, in Italian, Monte Santo, that is, the Holy Mountaine: as if there were ſome inherent holineſſe in the Mountaine. And two dayes after we had beene there, came a Ieſuit and two Friers with a yong Gentleman of Paris in France, who was a Proteſtant, and ſome other companie with them, who had a deſire to aſcend to the top of this holy Mountaine, and went all together vntill they were wearie, which was at the foot of the Mountaine, and in the heate of the day: wherefore the French Gentleman ſaid, he would ſtay for them there vntill they returned, but was himſelfe already wearie, and would goe no higher; the Ieſuit and Friers reproued him, and called him foole, and told him he did not know what hee might merit by going to the top of that holy Mountaine. Merit (ſaid the Gentleman) what may I merit? Thou maieſt merit (ſaid they) fiftie yeeres pardon. The Gentleman, to breake a ieſt with them, asked them whether hee might merit fiftie yeeres pardon for the time paſt, or for the time to come: If (ſaid he) for the time paſt, I am not ſo old (for he was but twentie two yeeres of age) if for the time to come, he did not thinke hee ſhould liue ſo long. They anſwered him, if he did not liue ſo long, he might giue the yeeres which remained, to his friends. Yet could they not perſwade him to goe vp any higher. When we had ſeene enough this Mount, returned againe to the Caſtle, with good ſtomacks to our Supper, and wearied bodies, deſiring reſt. Tabor is diſtant from Galile not much aboue twentie miles.

Top of Tabor.

Conference betwixt a Ieſuite and a Proteſtant.

Merit-mongers.

The fiue and twentieth of March, being the feaſt of the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary, and (according to the computation of our Church of England) the firſt day of the yeere 1601. we trauelled ouer very pleaſant fields all the way, the fields of Baſan, not farre from the Mount Baſan, where there was exceeding good Paſture, and fat Cattell: onely wee wanted good water to drinke, and our Wine was ſpent, and the day exceeding hot. Wee ſaw in our way ſome remnants of that old Tower or Fortreſſe, mentioned 2.Kings 5.24. where Gehazi the Seruant of Eliſha, ouer-tooke Naaman, and tooke of him two Talents of ſiluer, and two change of Garments. We ſaw alſo many other places worthy obſeruation, but (for want of a good Guide) we knew not the names thereof, for the Turkes inhabiting thoſe Countries, haue giuen new names to moſt places. This was the pleaſanteſt daies iourney we had in our whole trauell. I neuer ſaw more fertill ground and pleaſant fields, and ſo much together, all the whole day, from Mount Tabor, to a Village called vulgarly Ienine, but of old En-gannim, whereof wee reade, *Ioſh.*15.34. Neere vnto this Village is the place where Iabel beheaded Siſera, mentioned *Iudg.*4.21. En-gannim is diſtant from Mount Tabor twentie two miles. It is a very pleaſant place, hauing fine Gardens, and Orchards, and Waters about it. We ſtayed here all the day (the ſix and twentieth of March) becauſe (the Turkes Romadan, which is their Lent, being ended) on this day beganne their Feaſt called Byram; and our Ianiſarie was loth to trauell on that day, being their Feaſt day, and ſo much the rather, becauſe his name alſo was Byram.

Mount Baſan.

Gehazis Tower.

En-gannim.

Turkiſh Byram.

The ſeuen and twentieth of March, riding from En-gannim, wee were endangered twice: Firſt, by certaine Theeues dwelling neere vnto En-gannim, who made vs pay Caphar, or pole money twice, once at En-gannim. And when we departed from thence, they purſued vs with Bowes and Arrowes, and other weapons: we withſtood them long in parley; at length euery man prepared his inſtruments of death ready for battell. Our Ianiſaries Kinſman, Fatolla, had his Musket ready, and being about to giue fire, was ſtayed by our Ianiſarie, who ſaw not onely theſe Arabs preſent very deſperate, with their Bowes and Arrowes ready drawne, but meſſengers alſo ſent to raiſe vp all the whole rabblement thereabout vpon vs; hee told vs, wee were beſt giue them content, or elſe we were all but dead men: wherefore, to auoide further danger, we gaue them their owne deſire, vpon condition, they would purſue vs no further nor ſuffer any of their companie to moleſt vs: the chiefeſt of them anſwered, Stopherlo, Stopherlo, that is, God forbid, God forbid, we ſhould doe you any harme, if you pay vs what we demand; which we did with all ſpeede, and rode away from them, being glad we were rid of them.

Double Knauerie.

About ten miles from them, wee rode through a Wood (a very fit place to harbour Theeues, who had killed certaine men trauelling that way the day before, and tooke away both a man and Dangerous Wood.

Sychar.

Iacobs Well.

Pleaſant water and Horſe from the Carauan which followed after; and a woman alſo riding on an Aſſe with their carriage) and (as our Guide told vs) he neuer trauelled that way but he ſaw ſome men killed: and therefore bade vs all charge our Peeces, and ſhoot off when he bade vs, though we ſaw no bodie, leſt the wilde Arabs ſhould ſet vpon vs on the ſodaine, lying in ambuſh, which wee alſo did in a place moſt dangerous, to daunt the enemies before wee ſaw each other. But before wee came vnto the moſt dangerous place, there ouertooke vs many Turkes well armed, who dwelt in Ieruſalem, and were glad of our companie thither. And ſhortly after wee had diſcharged euery man his piece, we ſaw a great companie of Arabs on an high Mountaine neere vnto our way, yet out of the reach of our ſhot, who perceiuing vs to bee too ſtrong for them, durſt not ſet vpon vs. And ſo (by the prouidence of God) wee came that night to an ancient and famous Citie, (ſituated in a fruitfull valley betwixt two Mountaines) called Sychar, a Citie in Samaria, mentioned, Iohn 4. Neere whereunto wee ſaw Iacobs Well, where our Sauiour Chriſt asked water of the woman of Samaria. Wee came thither in good time, for wee were exceeding thirſtie, and dranke thereof liberally and freely. The water thereof goeth downe very pleaſantly, like vnto Milke. From Iacobs Well we went into the Citie, and lodged in a very ancient and ſtately Cane, but very badly kept. It had beene better for vs to haue ſlept by Iacobs Well, as others did; for here we ſlept on the hard ſtones neere vnto a Chappell in the middle of the Cane, vnder two or three great Fig-trees and Mulberrie-trees, where we were ſcarce ſafe from theeues, for we had ſome things ſtollen from vs in the night, whiles wee ſlept vnder the Trees on faire broad ſtones, whereunto we aſcended by a faire ſtone paire of ſtaires, ſixe or ſeuen ſteps from the ground. Sychar is diſtant from En-gannim, ſeuen and twentie miles.

Beere.

Ieruſalem.

The nine and twentieth of March, wee departed from Samaria to Ieruſalem, and met many Souldiers in ſeuerall companies by the way, who knowing our Ianizarie, and other Turkes in our companie, let vs paſſe by them quietly, and gaue vs the ſalam aliek, that is, peace be vnto you. The firſt part of this dayes iourney was ſomewhat pleaſant; but, the neerer we came to Ieruſalem, the more barren and tedious our way was. About ten of the Clocke we came to a great Forreſt, or Wilderneſſe full of Trees and Mountaines. When wee were on the top of this Mountaine, we ſaw the maine Sea on our right hand, and ſmall Ships ſayling towards Ioppa. About three or foure of the clocke, we came to a ruinous Village called Beere, but of old (as it is reported) Beerſheba, which in former times was a great Citie: And it is ſaid to be the place where Ioſeph and Mary comming from Ieruſalem (the feaſt being ended) miſſed the Child Ieſus, and ſought him ſorrowing; and returning to Ieruſalem, found him in the Temple amidſt the Doctors, hearing them and poſing them. Our purpoſe was to lodge here all night, being all of vs wearie and hungrie, and all our prouiſion ſpent. But finding nothing here to be had for money, either for Man or Horſe; and vnderſtanding that Ieruſalem was but ten miles off, wee went on in our way ſomewhat faintly, fiue or ſixe miles, and then beholding the proſpect of the Citie, wee were ſomewhat cheered and reuiued, and ſolaced our ſelues with ſinging of Pſalmes, vntill wee came neere vnto the Citie. Many Greekes dwelling in Ieruſalem, ſeeing vs afarre off, came to meet vs, ſuppoſing their Patriarch had beene in our companie, who came two or three dayes after vs.

Ioppa gate.

Maſter Timberley hath publiſhed a booke of his Voyage.

We diſmounted from our Horſes at the Weſt gate of the Citie, called Ioppa gate, or the Caſtle gate; which is a very ſtrong gate of Iron, with thirteene Peeces of Braſſe-ordnance planted on the wall about the gate. Wee ſtayed in the porch of the gate, and might not be admitted into the Citie, vntill wee were ſearched by an Officer (as the manner is.) In the meane time there came to vs two Italian Friers, viz. Padre Angelo, and Padre Aurelio, and kiſſed our hands, and bade vs welcome, and told vs, that two other Engliſhmen were at their houſe, viz. Maſter Timberley, and Maſter Borell.

When we were ſearched without the gate by a Turkiſh Officer, and deliuered vp our weapons to the Porter to keepe for vs in the gate-houſe vntill our returne (becauſe no Chriſtian may enter into Ieruſalem with weapons) theſe two Padres led vs to their Monaſterie; at the gate whereof wee were ſearched againe by another Turkiſh Officer before wee might enter into the houſe. For the office of the former Searcher at the gate of the Citie was onely to receiue the weapons of all Chriſtians, and deliuer them ſafe to them againe at their departure. But this Searcher went further and ſearched all our carriage, which he cauſed to be opened, to ſee whether we had any Gun-powder, or any other engins there. For they are very ſuſpicious of all Chriſtians, fearing, leſt for deuotion to the place, they ſhould worke treaſon; therefore they ſuffer not Chriſtians to enter into the Citie weaponed, leſt they make inſurrection againſt them when they are many together, and conquer the Citie, as heretofore they haue done. To this end alſo is the Citie walled about with ſtrong walls, and fortified with foure ſtrong gates, and a Caſtle, (but by Sultan Solyman) and euery gate well planted with Ordnance for feare of Chriſtians. And partly for hope haue they enuironed this Citie with ſuch ſtrong walls, that Chriſtians for deuotion to the place, might come and build within the walls, and bee ſubiect to the Turke. For though their walls be large and ſtrong, yet there is great roome within the walls to build more houſes then are there, for there are fields of Corne within the walls of the Citie;

and the houſes ſtand very thin, ſcattered, and diſperſed, here one, and there two or three together; there is not one faire ſtreet in all Ieruſalem as it now is.

Entertaynment with the Friers.

After they had thus narrowly ſearched all our carriage, euen to our caſes of Bottles, we were admitted into the Monaſtery; at the entrance wherinto, met vs Maſter Timberley, and Maſter Boreel, and then Signior Franciſcus Mannerbu, the Padre Guardian of the Monaſterie, and all the reſt in order, and bade vs welcome, and led vs into a faire Parlour, and ſet good cheere before vs, and ſerued vs themſelues. After Supper we deliuered them our Letters which wee had brought from the Venice Conſull of Aleppo, and other Italian Merchants there, in our behalfe. Which when they had read, the Guardian ſaid, our cuſtome is, when ſtrangers come to vs, to call them the firſt night to Maſſe, and to Confeſſion, and to giue euery man a Candle to hold in his hand at Maſſe time; and at night to waſh their feet and to bring them to bed, and to many other ceremonies, during the whole time of their continuance there. But as for vs, they vnderſtood by Letters what we were; and told vs that we were ſo highly commended by their Patrons and Benefactors, the Venice Conſull, and Merchants of Aleppo, that if they ſhould ſhew vs halfe the fauour which was required at their hands, they ſhould themſelues lie without doores, and ſuffer vs to rule and dominiere at our pleaſures. And that therefore they would not vrge vs to any thing againſt our conſciences, but giue free libertie both of perſons and conſciences, as if wee were in England, or in our owne houſes elſewhere; and ſo much the rather, becauſe they vnderſtood our Merchants were rich, and hoped to gaine by vs. In regard whereof, although it were Lent, wherein they eate no fleſh, yet offered vs Hens, Egges, Milke: any thing that was there to be had for money, they requeſted vs to command it. And during the time of our continuance there, he commanded one Padre Aurelio to attend vpon vs, and ſee that wee wanted nothing; and another of his brethren, one Padre Angelo, to be our guide abroad, and to ſhew vs all ancient Monuments and places worth ſeeing, either in the Citie, or out of the Citie.

Theſe kind ſpeeches being vſed, they brought vs to our chambers where wee ſhould lodge all night, and prouided for euery man ſeuerally a good neat Bed with faire ſheets, and all things very wholſome and handſome, where wee ſlept ſweetly, and refreſhed our wearied bodies all that night very comfortably.

An admonition to ſuch as trauell to Ieruſalem.

But although they dealt thus kindly with vs (at the inſtance of their Benefactors) in giuing vs libertie of conſcience, yet they deale not ſo with others. For ſome I doe know who haue beene there, and made no conſcience to doe as they haue done. Wherefore, I admoniſh thoſe who haue a deſire to trauell to Ieruſalem hereafter, to take heed to themſelues, that they make not ſhipwracke of conſcience; for if they come not well commended, or well moneyed, or both, there is no being for them, except they partake with them in their idolatrous ſeruices. True it is, that the Turkes giue libertie of conſcience vnto all that come thither; but they giue not entertaynment vnto any Chriſtians in their houſes. And the Greeke Patriarchs are poore, and not able to protect ſuch as come vnto them for refuge. Theſe Padres, though they bee Papiſts, yet haue they rich Benefactors, and want nothing, and (for the moſt part) very kind and curteous to ſtrangers in all things, libertie of conſcience onely excepted, wherein they ſeeke to make others like vnto themſelues, and to ſeduce them from their Faith, and to winne them to the Church of Rome: and offer vnto them who haue money in their purſes, to make them Knights of the Sepulcher; but no good Engliſh Subiect will accept of that order of Knighthood; for at the receiuing thereof, they ſweare to bee true to the Pope, and to the King of Spaine, and to other things, which no man can doe with a good conſcience. And this kindneſſe and libertie of conſcience, which wee found amongſt them, wee imputed not ſo much to the men, as to our owne money: for it coſt vs charo, viz. one hundred Duckets for our entertaynment.

After wee had reſted one night in Ieruſalem, the firſt day wee walked about the Citie our ſelues without our guide, onely to view the Citie, wee found it exceeding hot, and hotter then it is vſually at Midſummer in England: It ſeemed ſtrange vnto mee, how it ſhould once bee ſo cold, that Peter ſhould creepe to the fire, and now (at the ſame ſeaſon) ſo hot that wee could not indure the heate of the Sunne. But after I had beene there a few dayes, the very place reſolued that doubt: for there fall great deawes, and before the Sunne haue dried it vp, it is cold, and in the night ſeaſon (about that time of the yeere) ſomewhat cold, as I felt by experience when I ſlept in the fields all night. And Peter hauing watched with Chriſt in the night, might well be cold in the morning, before the heat of the Sunne had expelled cold.

But here wee will breake off, hauing with Maſter Sandys his eyes curiouſly viewed Ieruſalems Holies in the former Chapter.

Chap.

CHAP. X.

The Iourney of EDWARD BARTON Eſquire, her Maieſties Ambaſſador with the Grand Signior, otherwiſe called the Great Turke, in Conſtantinople, SVLTAN * MAHVMET CHAN. Written by Sir THOMAS GLOVER then Secretarie to the Ambaſſador, and ſince employed in that Honourable Function by his Maieſtie, to SVLTAN ACHMET. Two Letters are alſo inſerted, written from Agria, by the ſaid Ambaſſador BARTON.

*If any think it ill that a Chriſtian Ambaſſador ſhould accompany the Turke in this warre againſt Chriſtendom: they may pleaſe to vnderſtand, that his intents were to doe ſeruice to the Chriſtians, if occaſions were offered for peace: as alſo he did in deliuerie of the Emperors Seruants here mentioned, &c

FIrſt, the Ambaſſador well mounted, and his two ſpare Horſes, with a Coach with foure Horſes; next before him his Chauſes, and an Enterpreter, with three Ianizaries: and before the Chauſes, and Ianizaries, his men, (beeing twelue in number) in Liueries rode before him, and foure Gentlemen next after him: and foure Coaches with the Chriſtian Captiues (being three and twentie in number) the Family of Signior Crotskij, the Emperour his late Ambaſſador in Conſtantinople, which hee redeemed from the Great Turke, and had licence to carrie them a long with him, and to ſend them into their owne Countrey, allowing and giuing him the foure Coaches, with two Horſes in each Coach, and a man to tend on euery Coach. Laſtly, thirtie ſixe Camels for carriage of prouiſion, and to euery ſixe Camels, two men to attend on them, to lade and vnlade as occaſion ſerued (which in Turkiſh, are called Deuedzilers) of them there were twelue in all wayting on the Camels: More the Chauſes man and another Turke, called Mahomet, who was recommended to the Ambaſſadour to be his Lackey, to runne by his Horſe vntill wee came to Agria.

Now on Friday being the ſecond day of Iuly, 1596. the ſaid Ambaſſador parted his houſe (which is in the Vines of Pera,) and tooke his Iourney, hauing to accompany him that firſt day, Maſter Iohn Sanderſon Merchant (who was by him left an Agent or Logotenent vntil his returne) Ionas Aldrich Merchant, and Iohn Field a Phyſician: who brought him that day vnto a place, called Aquadulce, and there pitched their Tents, remayning there that night, and the next day enſuing. On Sunday morning at Sunne riſing, we departed from Aquadulce, and came to Ponte Piccolo, about mid-day, which is ſome fifteene miles diſtant from Aquadulce, and there wee pitched our Tents. On Munday, before the breake of the day, parted thence about ten of the clocke in the morning, and arriued at Ponte Grande, which is about twelue miles diſtant; where hauing pitched our Pauillions the Ambaſſadour ſent his Chaus, and the Drogue-men, with the Grand Signior, his Commiſſion to the Cady of the ſaid Towne, for his allowance of prouiſion, who ſent him fiue Sheepe, two hundred Loaues of Bread, fiue Meatres of Wine, one loade of Hay, with twentie Kylowes of Barley.

Or Selimbria.

On Tueſday, before day, we parted Ponte Grande, and by Sun-riſing wee came to a ſmall Village, called Combergaſi, where the Ambaſſador his people broke their faſt, and after an houres ſtay parted thence, and came to a Towne, called Celebria, about eleuen a clocke, which is ſome ten miles diſtant from our laſt Lodging. There alſo the Ambaſſadour ſent his Commiſſion to the Cady of the ſaid Towne, who ſent him three Sheepe, two hundred Loaues of Bread, ten Meaters of Wine, one loade of Hay, and twentie Kyllowes of Barley, wee pitched our Tents a quarter of a mile diſtant from the Towne; and an houre within the night, the Moone being vp, parted thence.

Bulgaria.

The twentieth, wee were to paſſe through a great Wood, betwixt two Mountaynes that day, and in the night to keepe watch. Theſe men are Bulghars, beeing appointed by the Grand Signior, to guard all Trauellers (I meane of the Campe) that come that way, for which ſeruice the ſaid Bulgharians pay no Tribute to the Turke. Then wee came to a Village, called Seruia, which is at the entrance betweene thoſe two Mountaynes, and no other paſſage but one that goeth to Wallachia, all the Countrey elſe within theſe Mountaynes, beeing as it were enuironed with mightie ſteepe, woodie hils, as though they were wals of ſtrong Cities; this was the paſſage that Iulius Caſar paſſing out of Seruia, loſt ſo many thouſand men before he could gaine it; for this paſſage is as though it were hewen or cut out betwixt theſe two Mountaynes. At the mouth or rather the entrance on the North-ſide, it is fortified with a mightie great wall from Mountayne to Mountayne, and a ſtrong Caſtle in the midſt, with a great Gate to paſſe thorow, there is yet to be ſeene part of the wals, or rather fragments: the wals adioyning to the Gate are maruellous looſe, and ſhake, readie to fall: ſome two houres before night, we came to the foot of the Mountayne, and there pitched our Tents a mile from a Towne, called Erchpnia; being from Tartarb ſardgi eight and twentie miles, this day and nights trauell was all betwixt theſe two Mountaynes.

The fiue and twentieth, we came to the mouth or entrance of a ſtrong paſſage beeing tenne miles long betwixt two Mountaynes, the way winding in and out, as it were, hewen, or cut out of the Mountaynes, on both ſides verie loftie: this place is of a wonderfull ſtrength for reſiſting of the Enemies: Now little after mid-day, we came to pitch our Tents towards the end of the ſaid paſſage, by a faire Riuer ſide.

The ſixe and twentieth, paſſing along the Riuer ſide, on the high way, wee found two men moſt miſerably put to death, hauing each of them a ſtake thruſt in at his Fundament, through his bodie, and ſo out by his necke; the ſtake being ſet vp right on end: the cauſe was for killing of a Ianizarie, they being Chriſtians. The Grand Signior paſſing by, cauſed them ſo to ſuffer.

The eight and twentieth, we came to a Towne, called Neeſa, and a little before our comming to the ſame, we ſaw two men ſtaked as afore-ſaid, who were Tranſiluanians, came purpoſely to ſpie and view the Campe: alſo at this Townes end, there were of Chriſtians heads flead, and ſtopt full of Hay hanged on poſts by ſtrings, to the number of three hundred which foure moneths before were ſlaine by Turkes, vnder Mahomet Baſſa, at Boſna: From the entrance of the ſtraight paſſage to this place are ten miles, and from Soſpa to this place all high Mountaynes, rockie and troubleſome to trauell: theſe Mountaynes part Seruia and Sclauonia, this Citie is ſituated in a verie delectable Valley, hauing towards the Weſt-ſide a faire Plaine, that ſtretcheth it ſelfe towards Albania and Macedonia, here we reſted all that day and night. Neeſa.

The third of Auguſt, wee came to ſpread our Tents cloſe by the mayne Campe, halfe a mile diſtant from Belgrado, which is a maruellous great Plaine adioyning to the Citie, and about the midſt of the Campe, the Grand Signior his Pauillion is alwayes placed; and now hard by his Pauillion by force of hands was raiſed a ſmall Hill, vpon which was growne a Haw-thorne, cut artificially ſpreading, which made a maruellous good ſhadow: euery Euening the Great Turke would aſcend into it to view his Campe, and to be ſeene of his people, being a cuſtome amongſt the Turkes, his Souldiers in the Wars to ſee their King, once in foure and twentie houres.

Hondivs his Map of Hungarie.

HUNGARIA
Mill Germanica
Septentrio
Meridies
Occidens
Oriens
Moraviæ pars
Austriæ Pars
Russiæ pars
Transilvaniæ Pars
Danubius fl.
Danubius flu
Vienna
Presburg
Gran
Buda
Pest
Zolnok
Campus
Calmanus
Colacza
Marons Campus
Belgrad
Griechisch Weissenburg
Temeswar
Bosna
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47
48
49

Abraham Baſſa Chiefe Vizier.

The ſeuenth, the Ambaſſador went to the chiefe Vizier, Abraham Baſſa, about the Captiues he had in his charge, and inconference with him preſently, the ſaid ſlaues were ſent for, and beeing brought before the Baſſa, in the preſence of the Ambaſſador and other Viziers, and great perſonages, their deliuerance being pronounced, to be ſent by the Ambaſſador into their Countrey, it was granted by them all; whereupon the ſaid ſlaues kiſſing the Baſſa his feet, as the manner of the Turkes is for ſuch a grace; and the Ambaſſador alſo giuing them thankes, tooke his leaue and ſo departed, carrying his Captiues along with him to his Pauillion.

Chriſtians deliuered.

The thirteenth, about Qumdi, the Ambaſſador with his company departed from Belgrado, riding by the South-weſt end of the Caſtle, came to the Riuer Laua, neere where it entreth into the Danubium, to paſſe the bridge purpoſely made for the Grand Signior, his Armie to paſſe the ſame, which bridge is artificially builded vpon fortie fiue great Boats made for that purpoſe like Lighters, but much broader, deeper and flat bottomed, the length of the ſame bridge is ſome one hundred paces, the breadth betwixt the Rayles fortie foot: for ſpace of eight dayes the Armie was going ouer, in ſuch ſort; as a man could not paſſe for the continuall preſſe of the people.

Bridge of Boates.
Armie eight dayes in paſſing.

Next morning, the Grand Signior parted thence, and ſome two houres after, the Ambaſſador followed: now the ordinarie riding of the Great Turke, was in this manner (not ſpeaking of the whole Armie, which went before and followed him, but only of thoſe that attended on his owne perſon) before him rides one thouſand of the braueſt and beſt armed Horſemen, euery one with his Lance. Next them ſome three hundred Chauſes; then one hundred Foot-men next before him, with Bowes & Arrowes; then followes his Youths, all for the moſt part at mans ſtate (called Ichoglans) about ſome three hundred clothed in Gownes of Brocado, of Gold and Siluer, all of one faſhion, and a Cap on their heads, made in manner of a French-hood, of courſe red cloath: in the midſt amongſt them, are fortie or fiftie men riding on Camels, Horſes and Mules, who play on Drummes, Fifes, and many other ſorts of Inſtruments, continually all the way along: after theſe follow ſome fortie Coaches; then his ordinary Seruants, as Stable-men, Kitcheners and ſuch like: this day trauelling till about eleuen of the clock, we came and ſpread our Tents, as neere the Grand Signiors Pauillion as we could, and cloſe by the Danubium: whence we came, to this place, is about ſome nine miles.

Slanconie.

The next morning, the Grand Signior departed from Slanconie, and about ten of the clocke came to ſpread his Pauillion vnder the ſide of an hill, cloſe on the other ſide of the Danubium, ſome ſeuen miles from the Towne aforeſaid; all alongſt this Hill full of Vineyards, where the Souldiers gathering and ſpilling Grapes, were complayned of; whereupon, ſixe of them beeing taken, were hanged on Trees in the Vineyards, and after, a ſtrict commandement giuen not to take any thing perforce from any man, vpon paine of death: here the Ambaſſador was ſent for to the Baſſa, and readie to depart, the Baſſa willed the Ambaſſador, that the next morning, as the Grand Signior ſhould paſſe along on his way, hee ſhould bee ready to ſalute him, for hee ſaid, that he asked for him, and maruelled hee could not ſee him. Vpon this, taking his leaue, departed; and ſo went to the Great Hodgia his Tent, and after awhile to his owne Tents. The next morning, perceiuing the Great Turkes departure, the Ambaſſador with his men about him, all on Horſe-backe ſalute his Highneſſe according to their manner, bowing, at ſeuerall times, and the Grand Signior beholding the Ambaſſador with his retinue, alſo did bow himſelfe vnto them very kindly, and ſo paſt on his way, for that the Grand Signior, vpon the newes aforeſaid, was deſirous to ſee the Ambaſſadour, which was cauſe that the Baſſa willed the Ambaſſadour to doe as aforeſaid.

The fiue and twentieth, the Grand Signior parted this place (in the morning early) the rather to haſten towards Hatuan, not that hee himſelfe in perſon would goe, but being neere the way to Agria, whereto he went to lay his ſiedge, might vpon any occaſion ſend more ſuccour; the Ambaſſador alſo followed him with his retinue, finding (as before) all plaine Champion grounds, full of Graſſe, and Hay; The Grand Signior willing to ſee his whole Armie, gaue order that they ſhould all troope together that day, that hee might haue full view of them, which was done accordingly, and a ſight almoſt vncredible, ouerſpreading a Plaine, further then any man could diſcerne. The Ambaſſador, to haue a full view of them, mounted a ſmall Hill, about the midſt of that Plaine, ſomewhat higher then the reſt; from whence beholding them with great wonder, round about ſo farre as could not be diſcerned, the Plaine was ouer-ſpread (as aforeſaid) with people and carriages. And about Quindi, we came to ſpread our Pauilions neere vnto a ruinated Towne; for that there was no body dwelling in the ſame, we did not demand the name, being from the place wee came, ſome twelue miles: All along this way wee ſaw many reliques of Caſtles and Townes, which by theſe warres, afore-time, and now, haue beene, and are deſtroyed and pulled downe.

Huge Armie.

Quindi, is their Veſpers or Euen-ſong, about three or foure in the afternoone, at which time they call to Prayers from their ſteeples.

The twelfth of September, the Grand Signior remoued neere Agria, within full ſight thereof, and there hath laid his ſiege, commanding a Turret of wood to bee made very high, to the end hee might view the whole Campe, to ſee all what paſt at his pleaſure. All the way from Belgrado, hetherto newes were bruited, that Maximillian was vnder Vatia, where hee kept long Councell, yet hitherto (though he had full power of the Emperor) makes no ſhow nor ſigne to meete the great Turke, or ſuccour Agria. The ſame night the Ianiſaries built and entred their Trenches, placing good ſtore of Artillarie therein; hauing Abraham Baſſa the Viſere, and Aſſan Baſſa the Beglerbie of Grecia, to their guard, and began to beate the Eaſt part of the Caſtle; alſo Gi.far Baſſa and Mahomet Baſſa, the North part, the Baſſa of Natolia and Caramania, the Weſt part. The thirteenth, the Hungarians ſet their Suburbs on fire, which were very well fenced with a high Wall, yet diſtructing their forces, fearing that the Turkes once entring the ſame, ſhould make a Fortreſſe of offence, fired the ſame, and fled vnto the Caſtle: Now the Turkes perceiuing them to be gone vp into the Caſtle, ſcaled the out wals of this Towne, and tooke ſuch pilledges as the fire had left there: The chiefeſt of the Inhabitants of this Citie, fled into the Countries thereabouts, before the Grand Signior his approaching to the ſaid ſiege, and the reſt retyred themſelues into the Caſtle, as aforeſaid, with as much goods as they could. The foureteenth, the Turkes entred, and burned and ſpoyled the reſt of the Suburbs, with a great Church, but were ſoone repelled, and the Church, with the reſt, for that time was well defended. The ſame day Cigalla was appointed out Skire, with a troope of light Horſe-men, to ſee that no ſuccour ſhould come to the Caſtle.

The twentieth, Turkes giuing fire to a Mine, it proued contrarie to their mindes, the force comming forth, and not into the Caſtle: After which, the defendants perceiuing it tooke courage, and aſſaulted the Trenches of the venturers, whom they found vnprouided of defence; ſlew many, and taking ſome of them and their Banners, retired into the Caſtle with their prey, and there ſet the Banners vpon the wals, to terrifie the Turkes. The two and twentieth at night, the Turkes filled the Caſtle Ditches with Wood and Hay, but becauſe they were not ready, or deuiſed to couer the ſame with earth, as it ought to be; the defendants ſeeing it, preſently with Wild-fire conſumed it; ſo for that time fruſtrated their deſire, yet continuing their batterie, made foure ſeuerall places of the Caſtle wals aſſaultable. The three and twentieth, by night had they prouided ſufficient wood, and other matter to fill the Ditches; in the meane time, the Beglerbie of Ianik being ſent hither to the ſiege, without order from the Grand Signior or the chiefeſt Baſſa, and word being brought, the Emperour was ſtrong in thoſe parts, if pardon had not beene gotten for him, he had loſt his head; yet preſently was ſent backe againe from whence he came, vpon his owne proper coſt and charges, and that was his penaltie for the offence.

The foure and twentieth, the Turks giuing fire to a Mine, had made a great breach, and thereupon gaue a generall aſſault, which indured moſt fearefully on both ſides, for the ſpace of an houre; yet at laſt the Turkes were beaten backe. After a little reſt made, began a new aſſault, which continued two houres; in the which, the Turkes got the better, gayning the wals and the Artillery on the ſame, which preſently they turned vpon the Caſtle. The twentie fiue, the Turks gaue an aſſault vpon the inner part of the Caſtle, but repulſed with a great ſlaughter. The twentie ſixe, the Turks attempting to vndermine the Caſtle, and preſently thereupon, to giue a generall aſſault: but the Chriſtians hauing by ſome meanes knowledge thereof, to hinder the Turkes they ſhould not giue fire thereunto, and to haue more time themſelues to countermine theirs, went and caſt great quantitie of vnbeaten corne on that ſide the wall, ſo that the Turks could not wel ſtand to come nigh to dig or bring powder, ſo for that day the aſſault was deferred. The eight & twentieth, in the morning, firſt fired a Mine which caſt vp the Caſtle wall, the breadth of two Carts, and preſently vpon the ſame, gaue a new aſſault; but becauſe the Ianiſaries was not backed, the aſſault tooke no effect, but about two houres after, refreſhing themſelues, and gathering more ſtrength, about mid-day began the aſſault afreſh, which indured till night; but becauſe of the great raine that at the inſtant fell, they preuailed not, though on both ſides many ſlaine, and the Caſtle put in great ieopardie. On Wedneſday the nine and twentieth, and Thurſday the thirtieth, ſtill skirmiſhing for all it rained.

The firſt of October, as before ſaid, continually skirmiſhing, it chanced that an Engliſh-man a Trumpeter, fled out of the Caſtle, and being taken by the Turkes, was brought to the Grand Signior, and being examined, aduiſed him of the weake eſtate thereof: according to whoſe report, in the morning being Saturday the ſecond of October, it was rendred vpon condition they might depart with Bag and Baggage: which was granted. The third, being licenced to depart according to the Grand Signior his promiſe, vnder the charge of the Beglerbie of Natolia. At their departure forth of the Caſtle, they were ſpoyled of their goods carried with them, and moſt of them ſlaine by the Spahies, Ianiſaries of Hatuan, and other Turks, not without ſuſpition of the Grand Signior his knowledge, becauſe he vſed no ſeuere puniſhment for the breaking of his commandement, and his owne promiſe. There were in number about one thouſand Souldiers, and as many more men, women, and children Inhabitants, which were ſaued and kept to remaine Subiects there: the chiefe Captaines were kept and promiſed their libertie. The chiefe was Honvger, Signior Paulo: The Coronell Gulielmo Trozka, Iohannes Iacobus; Comes Atarne Bohemo, Iohannes Kinskye de Tetan; and Count Rugero Italiano.

A Letter written by Maſter Edward Barton Ambaſſador, to Maſter Sanderſon; inſcribed Al Molto Mag. Sig. Gio. Sanderſon, &c.

These two letters written by the Ambaſſador his owne hands, I haue for his ſake and theirs inſerted, giuen me by Maſter Sanderſon.

Louing friend, I haue written twice vnto you, as well from Bellograd as alſo Solnok, of what in my voyage hitherto had paſſed, but my Letters were intercepted and torne, brought vnto my hands againe, and being of no great importance, I will no more reply them, but aduiſe you of the Grand Signior, and our arriuall at Agria, which happened the twelfth of September, and the ſelfe ſame night he made his trenches and batteries in ſix ſeuerall places; the Vice-Roy in one place, the Beglerbie of Grecia in another, the Beglerbie of Natolia in the third, the Ianiſaries in the fourth, Ieſſer Baſſa Eunuch in the fifth, Mahemed Baſſa Gera in the ſixt; Cigal Ogli was Captaine ouer the light Horſemen, to ſcoure the coaſts on all ſides, that no ſuccour ſhould come, and to learne aduice of the Emperours proceedings and deſignes.

The thirteenth, the Inhabitants ſet all their Suburbs on fire, which might be little leſſe then Gallata, which though they were well defenced with a ſtrong wall, yet the defendants being few in number, and diſtruſting to their owne ſtrength, left the defence of them, and retired themſelues within the Caſtle. The ſixteenth, the Ianiſaries offered a generall skirmiſh, euen vnder the Gate of the Caſtle, where on both ſides many were ſlaine, but the Hungars keeping themſelues cloſe within the wals, and the Ianeſaries tyred, ſoone retired. The ſeuenteenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth, they intended to vndermine the Caſtle, and the twentieth, put fire thereto, but not ſucceeding to their mindes (though they valiantly attempted to enter the breach) they gaue courage to the defendants to make iſſue to mutuall damage. The foure and twentieth, the aſſailants hauing made another breach, valiantly entred the ſame, but not being ſeconded with freſh forces, were repelled, yet two houres after, in the ſame day, taking on them better courage, and more valiantly ſeconded, gaue a new aſſault, when by chance, a woman in the Caſtle ſetting, by chance, fire on a Barrell of Powder, and the Souldiers of the Caſtle thinking it was a Mine fired in the Caſtle, for feare thereof retiring themſelues, gaue the Turkes courage to enter a ſmall but ſtrong Baſtion, builded for defence of a weake part of the Caſtle, which they valiantly euen to the laſt defended; and euer after, with myning and counter-myning, continuall aſſaults and skirmiſhes on both parts fighting, to the extreame loſſe of the defendants. The firſt of October, an Engliſh Trumpetter eſcaped out and fled to the Vice-Roy, requiring life and libertie, and declaring the weakeneſſe of the Caſtle, was brought before the Grand Signior, to whom likewiſe he made like relation; according to whoſe reports, the next day being Saturday the ſecond of October, the Caſtle was rendered, with compact that all the Souldiers ſhould ſafely retire whither beſt they liſt, and the Inhabitants to remaine continuall Inhabitants, and owners of their former poſſeſſions; the latter of which promiſes was obſerued, but the firſt was broken, becauſe the Inhabitants of Hatuan, a Caſtle belonging to the Grand Signior, two dayes iourney thence, together with the Tartars, aſſaulted the ſaid Souldiers a mile from Agria in their departure, and cut them all in pieces, becauſe Maximillian with the Emperours forces, hauing a moneth ſince taken Hatuan, did moſt cruelly, without compaſſion, put all the Inhabitants to the ſword. Hence the Grand Signior doth within fiue daies determine to goe towards Buda vncertaine vpon what deſigne. From Solnok I ſent my Drogueman to Buda with the Emperours Ambaſſador his familie, and in Buda I releaſed fiue other, with all which companie, conſiſting of ſeuen and twentie, I receiued Letters from my Drogueman, and the Gentleman in Buda releaſed; that they departed from Peſt the thirteenth of December toward the Emperours Court, God ſend mee a good anſwer ſpeedily. And I pray you ſend this aduice for England; Commending me to Iu. Field, and Doctor Sette Cotte, and Maſter Peter Gallant, with Sign. Ant. Peron, and the French Secretarie: this ſift of October, 1596.

Sette Cotte had beene Iew, Chriſtian, Turke, of all, and therefore no Religion: now a rich Turke. Gallant a rich Merchant, Peron a rich Grecian.

Your aſſured, E. BARTON.

Part of another Letter written likewiſe by the ſaid Ambaſſadour from Agria, to Maſter Sandy the Engliſh Conſull at Aleppo.

I Thinke that at your reſidence with me, you remember how that the Grand Signior had made me grant of the libertie of all the Emperours Ambaſſadors his family, which now he hath performed, and I haue ſent them by my Drogueman vnto the Emperour, euen twentie eight perſons of which number diuers were Gentlemen of account, ſo that I hope my ſeruice therein ſhall be gracefull to his highneſſe, and acceptable to his Maieſtie, and of delight to you and the reſt my good friends, whom I could not leaue vnaduiſed thereof, as alike of the Manſulling of the Baſſa, and ſucceſſe of Abraham Baſſa, late high Treaſurer, now Baſſa of that place, to whom, as to my very good friends, I will earneſtly commend you, and the reſt of my Countriemen and friends, &c.

The Poliſh Ambaſſadour departed from Agria, hauing with him three Ianiſaries, and two Girles, which the Ianiſaries tooke at Agria the ſame day, the Ambaſſadour hauing occaſion to goe to the Baſſa, at his returne his Chauſes carried him through the Citie of Agria, which was burned and ſpoyled to the ground, and lying a mile beyond the Towne, vpon a great Plaine, the poore Chriſtians that were licenced to depart out of the Caſtle, lay all ſlaine there ſcattered. Returning back, we ſaw vnder the Caſtle wals of Chriſtians that were ſlaine at the ſiege a great number heaped vp together cloſe to the wall., about two fathome high, all naked frying in the Sunne, beſides in diuers other places many more. Comming along to our Pauillion, wee ſaw with certaine Ianiſaries fiue women and children, the one of fiue yeeres, and the other ſucking the mothers breſt; thoſe women and children the Ianiſaries made purchaſe of, at rendring vp of the Citie, and the Caſtle of Agria. The Girle of fiue yeeres of age, the Ambaſſadour bought for ten Chekines; Here the Grand Signior ſtayed till the Caſtle was againe repaired.

The tenth, came newes that Chriſtians were within three daies iourney of the Campe, wherevpon Gieffer Baſſa, and the Beglerbie of Grecia, were ſent to view the Chriſtians Campe; who more ventrous then wiſe, entring the clawes of the Chriſtians, were wholly diſcomfited, & moſt of their retinue ſlaine, and purſued to the Turks campe; for which cauſe they were both depoſed. Yet Aſſan Baſſa was preferred to the Beglerbie of Grecia, which fiue daies before was taken from him. Now Cigalla was made General together with Aſſan Baſſa, and appointed to go on the Chriſtians: but Agria wals being already repaired, the Grand Signior reſolued himſelfe to go in perſon, and departed from Agria on the fourteenth, trauelling all that day, till about Quindie, then came to ſpread his Tents or Pauilions. Next morning proceeding on his iourney, about ten of the clocke hee came in ſight of the Chriſtians, and within halfe an houre after, began to skirmiſh with them, they being intrenched neere to their Campe, by two old Churches or Chappels vpon a great Plaine, neere to a long puddle or Mare ground, of ſome foure miles long, all alongſt a ſmall banke or hill, in breadth ſome ſeuen or eight Rods; and beyond this, vpon this hill or banke aforeſaid, had the Chriſtians incamped themſelues. About mid-day, at the aproaching of the Grand Signior, they skirmiſhed freſhly, and ſome Turkes intrenched themſelues neere vnto one of theſe Churches aforeſaid, theſe continuing all day skirmiſhing, as aforeſaid, where both ſides ſhewed great valour, but ſmall bloud ſhed, in reſpect of ſuch infinite forces as were there, eſpecially of Turkes. The Ianiſaries in particular, brauely entred the Chriſtians Trenches, but not being ſeconded, were moſt of them put to the Sword; and the Chriſtians perceiuing no ſeconds, valiantly marched forwards, and gained the Turkes Trenches, put them to flight with ſome ſlaughter. Now the night approaching, and raine withall, the Grand Signior retired with his Pauilions, ſome mile off: the Ambaſſadour alſo with his companie, ſeeking to plant themſelues for that night, not finding his carriages, was conſtrained to reſt in the open field without any Tent, or ought elſe ouer his head, and neither meat nor drinke. The Ambaſſador was faine to ſend two of his Ianiſaries to ſeeke for ſomewhat for him and his Companie, as alſo for their Horſes; at length they brought ſome twelue Okes of Bisket, whereof ſome part wee eate, and the reſt gaue our Horſes: alſo Beniamin Buſhop hauing formerly vnder Agria bought a Dutchman, Slaue to the Turks, who riding all day with vs, and being ill at eaſe, the ſame night he dyed with his Horſe in his hand.

The ſixteenth, when after a troubleſome night, approached the day, that bloudy day, that dreadfull day to the Turkes, but moſt vnfortunate to the Chriſtians: In the morning newes being brought, that the Chriſtians had forſaken the Turkes Trenches, and retired to their owne; the Turkiſh Horſe-men that ſeeing, aſſaulted them valiantly, and though they found good incounter, yet repulſed the Chriſtians. Now againe, when the Chriſtians had ſet their forces in good order, they brought their maine campe forth, and ſoone repelled the Turks, where the poore Ianiſaries, being Foot-men, were all put to the Sword, ſome two thouſand perſons, the Chriſtians ſeeing the Turkes flie, followed in braue Martiall manner: The Foot-men Harquebuſes, before them the light Artillerie, and after them the Horſe-men in warlike manner, whoſe approaching ſo terrified the Turkes, that without reſpect of their Emperour, and their liuings depending on him, they fled in moſt ſhamefull wiſe, ſo that the Chriſtians without reſiſtance, approached euen nigh the Pauilions of the Grand Signior. At which time I leaue to the world, to conſider what fright the Grand Signior was in, ſeeing all his Armie flie; yet incouraged by ſome about him of his chiefe Officers, cauſed his Banners Imperiall, to march forwards vpon the Chriſtians; and he with his Bow and Arrowes ſhot thrice, and as ſome ſay, ſlue three Chriſtians. Now the Tartars, for feare of the Harquebuſes, gathered themſelues about the Grand Signior his Pauillion, and houering a little off, and Haſſan Baſſa who had the charge of the reward (leſt the Chriſtians Horſe ſhould aſſault the Grand Signior on the backe ſide) approaching with all the Grecian light horſemen, who taking the right ſide of the Chriſtians, were al ready on the face encountred with thoſe who inuironed the Grand Signior, and on the other ſide, by the Tartars, were on the ſudden ſo frighted, that the Horſe-men forſaking the Artillerie and guard of the Foot-men, fled without order, and being purſued, many of them were ſlaine; but the poore footmen ſoone incompaſſed by the troopes of Turkes Horſe-men, were all moſt cruelly without blow offering or ſhew of reſiſtance, put to the Sword; many of the Horſe-men by benefit of the night, eſcaped to the Mountaynes of Agria.

Turkes flee.

The ſeuenteenth in the morning, there came to the Ambaſſadors Pauillion, two great Chauſes from the Baſſa, who willed him to goe with them to view the place where the Chriſtians had encamped themſelues: which he did, taking foure Ianizaries, his owne two Chauſes, two Spaheis, and his owne men. Now miſſing one of his Ianizaries, his fellow not hauing ſeene him all that day, riding along at the entrance of the Chriſtians Campe, found the ſaid Ianizarie ſlaine, whom the Ambaſſador ſhewed the Chauſes, & ſo paſt along; the foreſaid Chauſes ſhewed the Ambaſſadour what place they had choſen for their Armie; which, if they had kept themſelues within that compaſſe, and let the Turkes aſſault them ſtill as they began, and they but to defend themſelues, in ſmall time would haue wearied the Turkes, and done them great damage; and little hurt to themſelues: for onely but at two muddy watery places (by the foreſaid old Chappels) could the Turkes come neere them to doe any great harme: for hardly could a Horſe paſſe, for being layed in, ſo that no poſſibilitie was for the Chriſtians to haue any great repulſe. But paſſing thoſe places, aſſaulting and skirmiſhing with the Turkes was their ouerthrow. Thus theſe Chauſes led the Ambaſſador from the one end to the other, which is about two miles long, and a very great Plaine, and Woods at the end thereof. There was all their Ordnance left behind them, and much Armour which the Chriſtians that fled caſt away, to goe with more ſpeed when the Turkes purſued them ſo neere. When they came to the end thereof, ſome which fled, being ouertaken, lay ſlayne, both Horſe-men and Foot-men. There was left great ſtore of Wheat, Meale, Bread, Butter, Cheeſe, Bacon, Sauſages, Beefe, and other prouiſion. Now, the Ambaſſador returned to his Pauillion, bringing theſe two Chauſes with him to dinner; which done, they tooke their leaue and departed. After this conqueſt, the Grand Signior reſted in his Pauillions there three dayes.

The nineteenth, the Grand Signior rayſed his whole Armie, bending his courſe homewards, arriuing at Conſtantinople on Sunday, being the twelfth of Decemb. 1596. at which time he was receiued with great pompe, and before his entrance, the Ambaſſadour, being placed by the chiefe Vizere, that when the Grand Signior came, hee went and ſaluted him, as the manner amongſt them is, and kiſſed his hand; which done, he returned to his Horſe. The Agent aforeſaid, with a freſh Horſe, and a troope of more then twelue met; hauing met him foure miles off from Conſtantinople, and about midday came to his owne houſe in the Vines of Pera, God be thanked, and his holy and bleſſed Name, for this, and our preſeruation in ſo dangerous a Voyage, and for all other his infinite goodneſſe towards vs, be praiſed for euermore. Amen.

The Ambaſſador reported to Maſter Iohn Sanderſon, that the Hodiee or Schoole-maſter of the Great Turke, encouraged him in this extremitie to get vpon his Horſe, wrapping himſelfe in Mahomets Flag, and to take theſe three * Arrowes, and ſhoot them toward the Chriſtians Campe, vſing theſe words following, Biſmilla Rohmane Roheim; which hee did. Cigallogli encouraged the Turkes to turne vpon the Chriſtians then buſied in pillaging, and put them to flight. After which ſeruice Cigallogli (before Manſul'd or put out of his place of High Admirall) came to the Turke, who embraced and kiſſed him, ſaying, he deſerued not onely his place againe, but the Kingdome.

* This holy Flag, and theſe Arrowes ſeeme to be reliques, and of holy eſteeme as thoſe three words alſo.

The Reader may informe himſelfe more fully of this Battel, and the Chriſtians ſpoile through greedineſſe of ſpoile, in Knolles, or other Writers of the Turkiſh Sorie. This our Author hath alſo written his Voyage, from thence ſent by the Ambaſſador into Poland, alſo from Conſtantinople to Tripolis in Syria, 1601. from Conſtantinople to Aleppo, 1602. into England, 1603. and againe from Conſtantinople to England, 1604. But I feare my Reader will bee wearie of Turkie: from whence yet yee may not, ſhall not depart, till yee haue beene made ſpectators of a Tragicall Comedie, and a Comicall Tragedie (Comicall, I hope to vs, if the ſinnes of Chriſtendome preuent not, to the Turkes a Tragedie) the moſt diſmall that euer yet befell the Ottomans. In the firſt, the ſame man is both Author and Actor; in the next, you haue a Choragus, to whom wee owe much for this, for former his learned and honourable ſeruices, both full of Raritie and Varietie, the parents of Wonder and Delight.

CHAP. XI.

The Trauels and Aduentures of Captaine IOHN SMITH in diuers parts of the world, begun about the yeere 1596.

§. I.

His Trauels thorow France, Italie, and on the Sea coaſts of Europe, Africa, and Aſia: His entertaynment and exploits in the Emperours warres againſt the Turke: his ſubtile Stratagems, valorous Combats, Applauſe, Aduancement, Honour.

IN his youth, when France and Netherlands had taught him to ride a Horſe, and vſe his Armes; with ſuch rudiments of Warre as his tender yeeres in this Martiall Schoole could attayne vnto; he was deſirous to ſee the World, and trie his fortune againſt the Turke. Opportunitie caſting him into the companie of foure French Gallants well attended, fayning to him they were deuoted that way; ouerperſwaded him in the Low Countries, to goe with them into France: with ſuch ill weather as winter affoordeth, in the darke night they arriued in the broad ſhallow inlet of S. Valereys in Piccardie. A worſe winter, and darker night accompanied him, namely his French Gallants; which, liking well his apparell, and thinking him better furniſhed with money then themſelues, plotted with the Maſter of the ſhip, who conueyed them and his Trunks aſhoare; and left him aboord till the Boat could returne, which was not till next day towards euening. The reaſon he alleaged was, the Sea was ſo high he could come no ſooner: And that his pretended French Lord was gone to Amiens, where they would ſtay his comming. Which treacherous villanie, when diuers other Souldiers Paſſengers had vnderſtood, they had like to haue ſlaine the Maſter: and had they knowne how, would haue runne away with the ſhip.

A French cheater pretending himſelfe to be the Lord Deprean and his company, coozen him of his Clothes, Trunkes, and Money.

One of the Souldiers, called Currianuer, compaſſionating his iniurie, aſſured him this great Lord Deprean, was onely the ſonne of a poore Lawyer of Mortaine in Bas Brittagine, and his attendants Curſel, La Nelie, and Monſerat, three younger Brothers, as arrant cheaters as himſelfe; and if he would accompanie him, he would bring him to their friends, and in the interim ſupplie his wants. Thus trauelling by Diep, Codobeck, Honfleu, Pount Rodemer in Normandie, they came to Caen in Bas Normande. Where both the Noble Currianuer, and many of his friends kindly welcommed him, and brought them to Mortaine, where hee found their friends, as hee had promiſed him, but to ſmall purpoſe. Yet the bruit occaſioned the Ladie Columber, the Baron Larſhan, the Lord Shaſge, and diuers other honourable perſons to ſupplie his wants, and to giue him kind entertainment with them, to recreate himſelfe as long as he would. But ſuch pleaſures little ſuted with his poore eſtate: and his reſtleſſe ſpirit could neuer find content to receiue ſuch noble fauours as he could neither deſerue, nor requite. Whereupon, wandring from Port to Port, to find ſome Man of Warre, he ſpent that he had, and in a Forreſt, neere dead with griefe, a rich Farmer found him by a faire fountaine vnder a tree. This kind Peſant relieued him againe to his content, to follow his intent. Not long after, as he paſſed through a great Groue of trees betwixt Pounterſon and Dinan in Brittaigne, it was his chance to meet Curſell, more miſerable then himſelfe. Without any word they both drew, and in a ſhort time Curſell fell to the ground: where, from an old ruinated Towne the Inhabitants ſeeing them, were ſatisfied, when they heard Curſell confeſſe what formerly had paſſed; and that in the diuiding what they had ſtolne from him, they fell by the eares among themſelues: but for his part hee excuſed himſelfe to be innocent, as well of the one as of the other. In regard of his hurt, Smith was glad to bee ſo rid, directing his courſe to an honourable Lord, the Earle of Ployer: who (during the Warres in France) with his two brethren had beene brought vp in England; by whom he was better refurniſhed then euer. When they had ſhewed him Saint Malo, Mount Saint Michael, Lambal, Saint Brieux, Lanion, and their owne faire Caſtle of Tunkadeck Guigan, and diuers other places in Brittaigne, and their Cornwall; taking his leaue he tooke his way to Renes, the Brettons chiefe Citie; and ſo to Nantes, Poytiers, Rochell, and Bordeaux. The rumour of the ſtrength of Bayon in Biskay cauſed him to ſee it: And from thence tooke his way from Leskar in Bearn, and Pow in the Kingdome of Nauarre to Tolouſe, Vizers, and Carcaſſon in Gaſcoigne; Narbonne, Montpellier, Nyſmes, and Poundegale, in Langedock, and through the Countrey of Auinion by Arles, to Merſelles in Prouence.

Currianuer, a kind Frenchman.

Diep.
Caudebecq.
Honfleu.
Caen.

Hee meets Curſell, & wounds him in fight. Theeues fall out without ſatisfaction to the true man.

Earle of Ployer.

Saint Malo, Saint Michael, Lamballe, Saint Brieux, Lanion, places of note in Brittaigne.

Renes.
Nantes.
Rochell.
Bordeaux.
Baione.
Leſcar in Bearn.
Carcaſſon.
Narbonne.
Nyſmes.
Marceille in Prouence.

Hondivs his Map of France.

OCEANVS BRITANNICVS
OCEANVS AQVITANICVS
OCCIDENS
HISPANIAE PARS
NAVARRA
GERMANI
ITALI
London
Dover
Plimmouth
Lisard point
Antwerpen
Coln
Paris
Orleans
La Rochelle
Bordeaux
Pampelona
Pyrenei montes
Mil. communia Galliae

Toulon.

An inhumane Act of Popiſh charitie.

Entertayned by a Brittaigne Captayne.

Lampedoſa.
Alexandria.

Scanderone.
Cyprus.
Rhodes.
Archipelagus.
Cephalonia.

A deſperate Sea-fight.

There embarking himſelfe for Italie, the ſhip was inforced to Toulon; and putting againe to Sea, ill weather ſo grew vpon them, they anchored cloſe aboord the ſhoare, vnder the little Ile of Saint Marie againſt Nice in Sauoy. Here the inhumane Prouincials with a rabble of Pilgrims of diuers Nations going to Rome, hourely curſed him not onely for a Hugonot, but ſaid, his Nation were all Pirats; rayling on his dread Soueraigne Queene Elizabeth, and that they neuer ſhould haue faire weather ſo long as he was aboord them. There diſputations grew to that paſſion, that they threw him ouerboord; yet GOD brought him into that little Ile, where were no Inhabitants. The next morning hee eſpied two ſhips more ride by them, put in by the ſtorme; which fetched him aboord, well refreſhed him, and ſo kindly vſed him, that hee was well contented to trie the reſt of his fortunes with them. After he had related vnto them this former diſcourſe: what for pitie and for loue of the Honourable Earle of Ployer, this Noble Britton his neighbour, Captaine La Roſhe of Saint Malo, regarded and entertayned him. With the next faire wind they ſayled along by the coaſt of Corſica, and Sardinia, and croſſing the Gulfe of Tunis, paſſed by Cape Bona, to the Ile of Lampadoſa; leauing the coaſt of Barbarie till they came at Cape Roſato, and ſo along by the African ſhoare for Alexndria in Egypt. There hauing deliuered their fraught, they went to Scanderone; and after keeping their courſe by Cyprus, and the coaſt of Aſia; ſayling by Rhodes, the Archipelagus, Candia, and the coaſt of Græcia, and the Ile Cephalonia; they lay to and againe a few dayes, betwixt the Ile of Corfu, and the Cape of Otranto in the Kingdome of Naples, in the entrance of the Adriaticke Sea, till they mette with an Argoſie of Venice, which it ſeemes, the Captaine deſired to ſpeake with: whoſe vntoward anſwer was ſuch as ſlue them a man. Whereupon preſently the Britton gaue them his broad ſide, then his ſtearne, and his other broad ſide alſo; and continued his chaſe Peeces till hee gaue ſo many broad ſides one after another, that the Argoſies Sayles and tackling were ſo torne that ſhee ſtood to her defence, and made ſhot for ſhot. Twice in one houre and halfe the Brittons boorded her, yet they cleered them ſelues. But clapping her aboord againe, the Argoſies fired him, with much danger to them both, but was preſently quenched. This rather augmented the Brettons rage, then abated his courage; and hauing re-accommodated himſelfe againe, he ſhot her ſo betweene wind and water, that ſhee was ready to ſinke: then they yeelded. The Brettons loſt fifteene men, ſhee twentie, beſides diuers hurt: the reſt went to worke on all hands; ſome to ſtop the leakes, others to guard the priſoners, which were chayned; the reſt to rifle her. The Silkes, Veluets, Cloth of gold, and Tiſſue; Peaſters, Chickines, and Sultanies, they vnloaded in foure and twentie houres in wonderfull ſtore: whereof hauing ſufficient, and tyred with toyle, they caſt her off with all her companie, with as much good Merchandize as would haue fraughted ſuch another Britton.

Argoſie taken and rifled by a ſhip of Brittaine.

To repaire his defects he ſtood for the coaſt of Calabria; but hearing there were ſixe or ſeuen Galleys at Meſina, he departed thence for Malta: but the winde comming faire, hee kept his courſe along the coaſt of the Kingdome of Sicilia, by Sardinia and Corſica, till hee came to the Road of Antibo in Piemont, where he ſet Smith on ſhoare, with fiue hundred Chickenes, and a little Box which he had, worth neere as much more. Here he embarqued himſelfe for Legorne, being glad to haue ſuch an oportunitie and meanes to better his experience, by the view of Italie: and hauing paſſed Tuſcanie, Veterbo and many other Cities, as Rome, and Saint Peters Patrimonie, he went downe the Riuer Tyber, to Ciuita Vecha: where hee embarqued himſelfe to ſatisfie his eye with the faire Citie of Naples, and her Kingdomes Nobilitie, returning by Capua, Rome, and Siena, he paſſed by that admired Citie of Florence, the Cities and Countries of Bolonia, Ferrara, Mantua, Padua, and Venice: whoſe Gulfe he paſſed from Malamaco, and the Adriaticke Sea for Ragouza, ſpending ſometime to ſee the barren broken Coaſt of Albania and Dalmatia, to Capo de Iſtria, trauelling the Mayne of poore Sclauonia, by Tubliano, till hee came to Gratz in Stiria, the Seat of Ferdinando an Arch-duke of Auſtria, (now Emperour of Almaine) where hee met an Engliſh and an Iriſh Ieſuite: who acquainted him with many braue Gentlemen of good qualitie: eſpecially with the Lord Eberſbaught, to whom hee gaue experiments of ſuch concluſions, as he proiected to vndertake: hee preferred him to Baron Kizell, Generall of the Artillery: and he to a worthy Colonell, the Earle of Meldritch, with whom going to Vienna in Auſtria, hee made him Captaine of two hundred and fiftie Souldiers, vnder whoſe Regiments how he ſpent his time, this inſuing Diſcourſe will declare, as it is written in a Booke intituled, The Warres of Tranſiluania, Wallachi, and Moldauia, written by Franciſco Ferneza a Learned Italian, Secretarie to Sigiſmundus Bathor the Prince.

Smith ſet on ſhoare at Antibo, in Piemont. Legorne, or Liuorno.

Rome. Sienna. Florence, &c.

Sclauonia. Gratz in Stiria. Vienna.

HONDIVS his Map of Tranſiluania.

Septen.
40
47
48
49
50
46
Carpathus mons
Crapak mons
Russiae Pars
Zukou
Colonia
Guordziece
Snatin
Tartros
Rodna
Durbestrik
Bistricia
Sed Marcos
Nösner land
Zatmar bania
Zaxat
Berckes
Bottom
S. Gerrgen
Burglar Dees
Dobacen
Com.
Neumarck
Weinland
Medwisch
Claussenburg Colosuar.h
Gela
Thorysk
Landuor dem
Ludis walt
Hermenstad Cibinium
Weissenburg Alba Iulia
S. Michel
Schatznayburg
Bergstad
Altemberg
Rotberg
Michelsberg
Rotthurn
Schaid
S. Kyrul
Bhanisska
Marous vel Merisch flu.
Hatzag Vallis
Varhel
Roffy
Eisernthor mons
Valkapu h.
Transalpina
Hausasleewlde h.
Greif
Sed Chyck
Czick
Sed Kysdi
Sed Reps
Alt land
Agnetlin
Schenck
Kleynschenck
Rotbach
Mergenburg
Burtzeland
Corona Brassouia
Newstatt
Tartsch
Scharken
Fock
Geyssaw
Sed Kysdi
Sed Orbay
Sic
Honsper
7 dorffen sessa
Bachono
Niemecz
Sereth
Newmarck
Prelz
Har
Totros
Arg isch
Altasu
Walachiae Pars
TRANS: SYLVANIA
Miliaria Germanica comunia

Extracts of Captaine Smiths Tranſyluanian Acts, out of Fr. Fer. his Storie.

Olimpach relieued.

Speech by Torches.

A good ſtratagem.

Another ſtratagem.

Smith made Captaine of 250. Souldiers.

A*Fter the loſſe of* Caniza, the Turkes with twentie thouſand beſieged the ſtrong Towne of Olimpach, ſo ſtraitly, as they were cut off from all intelligence and hope of ſuccour, till Iohn Smith an Engliſh Gentleman, acquainted Baron Kizell, Generall of the Arch-Dukes Artillerie, that he had taught the Generall his worthy Friend, ſuch a Rule, that hee would vndertake to make him know any thing he intended, and haue his Anſwere; would they bring him but to ſome place, where he might make the flame of a Torch ſeene to the Towne. Kizell inflamed with this ſtrange inuention; Smith made it ſo plaine, that forth-with he gaue him Guides, who in the darke night brought him to a Mountaine, where he ſhewed three Torches equi-diſtant from each other, which plainly appearing to the Towne, the Gouernour preſently apprehended: and anſwered againe with three other fires in like manner, each thus knowing the others being and intent. Smith, though diſtant ſeuen miles, ſignified to him theſe words. On Thurſday at night I will charge on the Eaſt, at the Alarme ſally you: Eberſpaught anſwered he would. And thus it was done, Firſt, he writ his Meſſage, as briefe you ſee, as could be; then diuided the Alphabet in two parts thus: A B C D E F G H I K L with one Light, the other Letters following with two, M N O P Q R S T V W X Y Z. The firſt part from A to L is ſignified by ſhewing and hiding one Linke ſo oft as there is Letters from A to that Letter, you meane; the other part from M to Z, is mentioned by two Lights in like manner; the end of a word is ſignified by ſhewing of three Lights, euer ſtaying your Light at that Letter, you meane, till the other may write it in a Paper, and anſwere by his ſignall, which is one Light. It is done, beginning to account the Letters, by the Lights euery time from A or M: by this meanes, alſo the other returned his Anſwere, thereby each vnderſtanding other. The Guides all this time, hauing well viewed the Campe, returned to Kizell, who doubting of his power, being but twentie thouſand, was animated by the Guides which related that the Turkes were ſo diuided by the Riuer in two parts, that they could not eaſily ſecond each other. To which Smith added this concluſion, that two or three thouſand pieces of Match, faſtened to diuers ſmall Lines of two hundred fathome in length, beeing armed with Powder, might all bee fired and ſtretched at one inſtant, before the Alarme, vpon the Plaine of Eyſnaburge, ſupported betweene two ſtaues, at each Lines end: in that manner, would ſeeme as if they were ſo many Musketiers: which was ſo put in practice, as being diſcouered by the Turkes, they prepared to encounter theſe falſe fires, thinking there had bin ſome great Armie; whilſt Kizell with his Forces entred the Turkes quarter. They now ranne vp and downe as men amazed, and it was not long ere Eberſpaught was pell mell with them in their Trenches: in which diſtracted confuſion, a third part of the Turkes that beſieged that ſide towards Konbrucke were ſlaine, many of the reſt drowned, and fled: the other part of the Armie was ſo buſied to reſiſt the falſe fires, that Kizell before the morning had put in two thouſand good Souldiers into the Towne, and with ſmall loſſe was retyred: the Garriſon was alſo well relieued with that which they found in the Turkes Quarter: Which cauſed the Turkes to rayſe their Siege, and returne to Caniza, and Kizell with much honour was receiued at Kerment: and occaſioned the Author a good reward and preferment, to bee Captaine of two hundred and fiftie Souldiers, vnder the conduct of Colonell Meldrich.

Three Armies.

A generall Rumour of a generall Peace, now ſpread it ſelfe all ouer the face of thoſe tormented Countries: but the Turke intended no ſuch matter, but leuied Souldiers from all parts he could, and the Emperour alſo by the aſſiſtance of the Chriſtian Princes, prouided three Armies: the one led by the Arch-duke Matthias, the Emperours Brother, and his Lieftenant Duke Mercurie to defend low Hungarie; the ſecond by Ferdinando the Arch-duke of Stiria and the Duke of Mantua his Leiftenant to regaine Caniza: the third by Don Gonſago Gouernour of high Hungarie to ioyne with Baſta, to make an abſolute Conqueſt of Tranſiluania.

The ſiege of Alba Regalis.

Fierie Dragons.

Duke Mercurie with an Armie of thirtie thouſand (whereof neere ten thouſand were French) beſieged Stolewiſenburg, otherwiſe called Alba Regalis, a place ſo ſtrong by art and nature that it was thought impregnable. There hapened many a bloudie ſally, ſtrange ſtratagems and valiant Exploits on bothſides by ſeuerall Nations; but in briefe, Earle Meldritch by the information of three or foure Chriſtians eſcaped out of the Towne. Captaine Smith tooke occaſion vpon the great Aſſemblies, thronging together at euery Alarme, to put in practice the fierie Dragons, which hee had demonſtrated him and the Earle Von Sults at Comora, which he thus performed. After hee had prepared fortie or fiftie Earthen round bellied Pots prepared, with mixtures, Powder and Bullets, as experiences had taught him, (though with exceeding danger) he ſo fitly placed them in ſlings, graduated ſo neere as they could to theſe Aſſemblies, and other places of aduantage, that at mid-night vpon the Alarme, it was a fearefull ſight to ſee the ſhort flaming courſe of their flight in the Ayre: but preſently after the fall, the lamentable noyſe of the miſerable ſlaughtered Turkes was moſt terrible; beſides, they fired that ſtrong Suburbe, at the Port of Buda, in two or three places, which ſo troubled the Turkes to quench, that had there beene any meanes to haue aſſaulted them, they could hardly haue reſiſted the fire and their Enemies.

This Citie being taken by the incredible Aduentures of the Duke, the Earle Roſeworme with the other Colonell and Captaines, which had beene in poſſeſſion of the Turkes, more then fiftie yeares: the Turke ſent preſently Aſan Baſſa with theeſcore thouſand, if it were poſſible to re-gaine it: the Duke vnderſtanding this, with twentie thouſand met him: where fiue or ſixe thouſand were ſlaine, with the Baſſa of Buda, and foure or fiue Zanzackes.

A Batrell, and the Baſſa of Buda ſlaine.

Duke Mercurie diuiding his Armie, ſent the Earle Meldrich (of whoſe Company was Captaine Smith in this encounter) to aſſiſt the Lord Baſta, Generall for the Emperor Rodulph, againſt Sigiſmundus Bathur, the Prince of Tranſiluania: who was beyond all mens beliefe, newly returned from Polonia: and eſtabliſhed in his Eſtate; the Earle neither finding pay, nor ſuch regard as he expected, perſwaded his Troupes rather to ſerue the Prince againſt the Turkes, then Baſta againſt the Prince. The Souldiers worne out with theſe payleſſe Trauels, vpon hope to make Bootie of what they could get from the Turke, were eaſily perſwaded to follow him whereſoeuer: eſpecially to helpe to re-gaine or ranſacke his Fathers Country then poſſeſſed by the Turkes, which (they hard) notwithſtanding thoſe Warres, were rich and vnſpoyled. The Prince glad of ſo a braue a Commander, and ſo many expert and ancient Souldiers, made him Campe-maſter of his Armie, gaue him all neceſſaries elſe hee could, and what freedome they deſired to ranſacke the Turkes.

The Earle hauing made many incurſions into the Land of Zarkain, amongſt the rockie Mountaines, where the people were ſome Turkes, ſome Tartars, ſome Iewes, but moſt Banditos, Renegadoes, and ſuch like, which ſometimes he forced into the Plaines of Regall: where is a Citie, not only of men and Fortifications, ſtrong of it ſelfe; but ſo enuironed with Mountaines, and the paſſage ſo difficult, that in all thoſe warres, no attempt had beene made vpon it to any purpoſe. Hauing ſatisfied himſelfe with the ſituation and thoſe paſſages, amongſt which he had many a ſharpe encounter: at laſt, with eight thouſand he pitched his Campe before it. The Inhabitants ſcorning ſo ſmall a number, ſallied in ſuch abundance, that about one hundred and fiftie were ſlaine on both ſides, and the Turkes chaſed ſo neere the Ports, that the Towers ſmall ſhot and Ordnance cauſed the Earle to retyre.

Regal beſieged.

The next day Zachell Moyzes, Lieutenant Generall to the Prince, came with foure thouſand Foote and Horſe, and foure and twentie Peeces of Ordnance, but in regard of the ſituation of the place, they did more feare then hurt them: till they had ſpent neere a moneth in raiſing their Mounts and Batteries; which ſlow proceeding the Turkes daily derided, and as fearing leaſt they ſhould depart ere they aſſaulted the Citie, ſent this challenge to any Captaine in their Armie: That to delight the Ladies who did long to ſee ſome Courtlike paſtime, the Lord Turbaſhaw did defie any Captaine that had the command of a Companie, which durſt cumbat with him for his head. The matter being diſcuſſed, was accepted. But ſo many queſtions grew for the vndertaking, that it was denided by lots, and the lot fell vpon Captaine Smith, before ſpoken of. Truce being taken for that time, the Rampiers all beſet with faire Dames, and men in Armes, the Chriſtians in Batalia; Turbaſhaw, with a voice of Hoboyes entred the field, well mounted and armed: on his ſhoulders were fixed two paire of great wings, richly garniſhed with gold, ſiluer, and precious ſtones, a Ianiſarie before him, bearing his Launce; on each ſide, another leading his Horſe; where long he ſtayed not before Smith with a noiſe of Trumpets (onely a Page bearing his Lance) paſſing by him, with a curteous ſalute, tooke his ground with ſuch good ſucceſſe, that at the ſound of the charge he paſſed the Turke thorow the ſight of his beauer, face, head, and all, that hee fell dead to the ground; where alighting, vnbracing his Helmet, he tooke off his head, leauing the Turkes his body, and ſo returned without any hurt at all. The head he preſented to the Lord Moyzes the Generall, who kindly accepted it, and with ioy to the whole Armie, he was generally welcome.

Three ſingle combats.

The firſt onely with Lances.

Manner of Turbaſhas entrance.

C. Smith enters.

Turbaſha ſlaine

The death of this Captaine, ſo ſwelled in the heart of one Grualgo his vowed friend, as rather inraged with madneſſe then choller, he directed a particular Challenge to the Conquerour, to regaine his friends head, or loſe his owne, with his Horſe and Armour for aduantage: which, according to his deſire, was the next day vndertaken, as before. Vpon the ſound of the Trumpets their Launces flew in pieces, vpon a cleere paſſage, but that the Turke was neere vnhorſed: their Piſtols were the next, which marked Smith vpon the Placket; but the next ſhot, the Turke was ſo wounded in the left arme, that not able to rule his Horſe, and defend himſelfe, he was throwne to the ground, and ſo bruiſed with the fall, that he loſt his head, as his friend before him, with his Horſe and Armour; but his bodie and his rich apparell, was ſent backe to the Towne.

The ſecond combat twixt Smith and Grualgo with Piſtols.

Grualdo ſlaine.

Euery day the Turkes made ſome ſallies, but few skirmiſhes would they indure to any purpoſe, our workes and approaches being not yet aduanced to that height, and effect as neceſſitie required. To delude time, Smith with many incontradictable perſwading reaſons, obtained leaue, that the Ladies might know he was not ſo much enamored with their Seruants heads, but if any Turke of their ranke would come to the place of Combat to redeeme them, hee ſhould haue his alſo vpon the like conditions, if they could winne it. The Challenge preſently was accepted by Bony Molgro. The next day both the Champions entring the field, as before, each diſcharging their Piſtols, hauing no Launces, but ſuch martiall weapons as the Defendant had appointed, no hurt was done. Their Battle-axes were the next, whoſe piercing bils made ſometimes the one, ſometimes the other, to haue ſcarce ſence to keepe their Saddles: eſpecially the Chriſtian receiued ſuch a wound, that he loſt his Battle-axe, and failed not much to haue fallen after it: whereat the ſuppoſing conquering Turke had a great ſhout from the Rampiers. The Turke proſecuted his aduantage to the vttermoſt of his power: yet the other, what by the readineſſe of his Horſe, and his iudgement and dexteritie in ſuch a buſineſſe beyond all mens expectation, by Gods aſſiſtance, not onely auoyded the Turkes violent blowes, but hauing drawne his Faulchion, pierced the Turke ſo vnder the Third combat with Battle Axes.

C. Smith endangered. Drawes his Faulchion, and kills Bonny Molgro.

Cullets through backe and body, that although he alighted from his Horſe, hee ſtood not long ere hee loſt his head, as the reſt had done.

His honorable returne.

This good ſucceſſe gaue ſuch incouragement to the Armie, that with a guard of ſixe thouſand, three ſpare Horſes, before each, a Turkes head vpon Launces, hee was conducted to the Generals Pauilions with his preſents. Moyſes receiued both him and them with as much reſpect as the occaſion deſerued, imbracing him in his armes, gaue him a faire Horſe richly furniſhed, a Cymiter and Belt worth three hundred Ducats, and Meldrich made him Sergeant Maior of his Regiment. The Towne with an incredible trouble and danger was aſſaulted, and at laſt taken perforce, where the Earle remembring his Fathers death, cauſed all he could find beare Armes to be put to the Sword, and their heads to bee ſet vpon ſtakes, round about the walls, in the ſame manner as they had ſerued the Chriſtians when they tooke it. Then he ſacked Varatzo, Solmos, and Kuprouka, whereto had retired the remnant of this Den of Theeues, leauing fiue thouſand dead (though he loſt neere as many, yet) with all the ſpoyle and two thouſand priſoners (moſt women and children) he returned to Eſenberge, not farre from the Princes Pallace, where hee incamped. The Prince comming to view the Armie, preſented with the Priſoners, and ſixe and thirtie Enſignes (after his accuſtomed manner, hauing giuen thankes to God) he was acquainted what ſeruice Smith had done at Olimpach, Stolewiſenberge, and Regall; for which, with great honor and ſolemnitie, he gaue him three Turkes heads in a Shield for Armes, with an oath euer to weare them in his Colours, his picture in gold, and three hundred Duckats yeerely for a penſion.

Made Sergeant Maior.
Regall taken.

Varatzo, Solmos, Cuprouka.

Prince of Tranſiluania honoreth Captaine Smith.

During all this time, Baſta and the Prince being capitulating of a peace, the Emperour had raiſed new forces for Baſta to inuade Tranſiluania; which cauſed the Prince to condeſcend to the Articles propounded him: which when Moyſes vnderſtood, then in field with the whole Armie (that hated the Germans as well as Turkes) he gaue battell to Baſta. Betwixt them in ſixe or ſeuen houres, more then ſixe or ſeuen thouſand on both ſides were ſlaine. Moyſes thus ouerthrowne fled to the Turkes, and his ſcattered Troopes, ſome one way, ſome another. The Prince excuſed himſelfe of this vnexpected accident, made compoſition for his diſperſed Troopes, yeelded himſelfe to Baſta; and all his Countrey and Subiects to the Emperours obedience.

Bloudie battell of Chriſtians.

Baſta thus poſſeſſed of Tranſiluania, drew all the Chriſtians of thoſe old Regiments of Sigiſmundus, of whoſe greatneſſe and true affections, he was moſt ſuſpitious, vnder the conduct of Rodoll Voyuad of Walachia, forced out by Ieremy, put in by the Turke. In this Armie of thirtie thouſand, Captaine Smith was one, who (vnder his noble Colonell holding the ſame places he had before) had many ſeuerall imployments in euery dangerous incounter, which would be too voluminous particularly to relate, before they could draw Prince Ieremy to battaile, where (as it is recorded) two thouſand on both ſides, lay dead in the fields; but Ieremy fled, and Rodol had the victorie, and thereby againe his Soueraigntie.

Smiths imployments vnder the Vayuod of Walachy.
Bloudie battell twixt the two Vayuods.
Thirtie thouſand Tartars.

Meldrich not long after with thirteene thouſand, was ſent againſt the ſtragling eſcaped Troopes of Ieremy, which ioyning with ſome Tartars, forraged the frontiers towards Moldauia; but when they heard it was the Crimme Tartar and his two ſonnes, with thirtie thouſand, and that Ieremy which had eſcaped, lay with fifteene thouſand in Ambuſcado for him, about Langanow, hee retired towards Rotenton, a ſtrong Gariſon for Rodoll: But they were ſo inuironed with theſe helliſh numbers, that they could make no great haſte for skirmiſhing with their Scoutes and Forragers: Yet by getting through a wood in a thick Fog, meeting two thouſand loaden with pillage, and two or three hundred Horſe and Cattell, the moſt of them were ſlaine or taken priſoners, who told Meldrich where Ieremy lay, expecting the Crimme Tartar. Meldrich intending to make by him his paſſage by force, was aduiſed of a pretie ſtratagem by Captaine Smith, which preſently ſo accommodated two or three hundred Trunkes, with wild-fire vpon the heads of Launces, charging the enemie in the night, gaue fire to the Trunkes, which blaſted forth ſuch flames and ſparkles, amazing not onely the Horſe but alſo the Foot, that by the meanes of this flaming incounter, their owne Horſes turned tailes with ſuch furie, as by their violence ouerthrew Ieremy and his Armie, without any loſſe at all to Meldrich. But of this victorie they not long triumphed; for, being within three leagues of Rotenton, in the Valley of Vereſt Horne; the Tartar with fortie thouſand had ſo beſet him, that they were forced to fight with this matchleſſe number, where neere thirtie thouſand were ſlaine. The Earle, with ſome fifteene hundred eſcaped, but the reſt were all ſlaine or taken priſoners: as the Hiſtorie at large will plainly ſhew, the times, place, chiefe Commanders, with the manner and order of their battels, and fights, to which I referre you.

A memorable ſtratagem at the battell of Rottenton.

§. II.

Diuers valiant Engliſh-men in this battell. Captaine SMITH taken, ſold, ſent into Turkie, and ouer the Black Sea to Tartaria. His admirable eſcape and other trauels in diuers parts of Chriſtendome.

IN this diſmall battell, Nederſpol, Veltus, Zarnaua, Mauazo, Bauell, and many other Earles, Barons, Colonels, Captaines, braue Gentlemen and Souldiers were ſlaine. Giue me leaue to remember the names, and honor the memories of our owne Country-men in thoſe exploits, which as reſolutely as the beſt, in the defence of Chriſt and his Goſpell ended their daies, Batchelor, Hardwicke, Thomas Milemay, Robert Mullynax, Thomas Biſhop, Roger Compton, George Dauyſon, Nicholas Williams, and one Iohn the Scot. Theſe all did what men could doe, and when they could doe no more, left there their martyred bodies, in teſtimonie of their Martiall minds, onely Enſigne Carlton, and Sergeant Robinſon eſcaped. But Smith amongſt the ſlaughtered dead bodies, with toyle and wounds lay groning, till being found by the Pillagers that he was able to liue, and perceiuing by his Armour and habit, that his ranſome might be better to them then his death, they led him Priſoner with diuers other. Well they vſed him till his wounds were cured, and at Axopolis they were all brought into the Market place and ſtripped, that the Merchants might ſee their limbs and wounds, (who had Seruants vpon purpoſe to try their ſtrengths) and there ſold like beaſts. Smith fell to the ſhare of Baſha Bogall, who ſent him forth-with to Andrinopolis, and ſo for Conſtantinople to his faire Miſtris for a Slaue. By twentie and twentie chained by the necke, they marched in Fyle to this great Citie, where they were deliuered to their ſeuerall Maſters, and he to his young Charatza Tragabigzanda.

Engliſhmen ſlaine.

Enſigne Carlton and Sergeant Robinſon eſcape.

Captaine Smith taken.

Captaine Smith ſold.

This Noble Gentlewoman tooke ſometimes occaſion to ſhew him to ſome friends, or rather to ſpeake with him, and becauſe ſhe could ſpeake Italian, would faine her ſelfe ſicke when ſhee ſhould goe to the Banias, or weepe ouer the graues, to know how Bogall tooke him Priſoner, and if he were, as Bogall writ to her, a Bohemian Lord conquered by his hand, with many more which he had with him, whom hee would preſent her ere long, whoſe ranſomes ſhould adorne her with the glory of his Conqueſts. But when ſhee heard him proteſt he knew no ſuch matter, nor had euer ſeene Bogall till hee bought him at Axopolis, and that hee was an Engliſh-man, onely by his aduentures made a Captaine in thoſe Countries: to try the truth, ſhee found meanes to find out many which could ſpeak Engliſh, French, Dutch, and Italian; to whom he relating the moſt part of thoſe former paſſages, (which they honeſtly reported to her) ſhee tooke as it ſeemed, much compaſſion on him. But hauing no vſe for him, leaſt her mother ſhould ſell him, ſhe ſent him to her Brother the Tymor Baſhaw of Nalbrits, in the Country of Cambrya in Tartaria.

But let vs remember his paſſing notes in the ſpeculatiue courſe from Conſtantinople, by Sander, Pelus, Pannaſamuſa, Laſtilla, to Varna, an ancient Citie vpon the blacke Sea, where hauing little more libertie then his eies iudgement, he might ſee the Townes with their ſhort Towers, in a moſt excellent plaine, pleaſant, and fertile Countrey, full of Villages, and diſperſed faire buildings, as well in Sagonia as Romania. But from Varna, nothing but the blacke Sea, till he came to the two Capes of Taur and Pergillo, which are two muddy Promontories, at the entrance of the Straight Niger, which hath a very deepe Channell, and as he coniectured, ten leagues long, and three broad. At the entrance of the Diſabachi Sea, are a great many of high blacke Rocks on each ſide the Channell to ones thinking, which they ſaid were onely Trees, Weedes, and Muds, throwne from the in-land Countries by the inundations, and by the violence of the Currant caſt there by the Eddy: of which as they ſayled, they ſaw many without ſight of Land, ſeeming like high Rockes on low Ilands, which are onely great flats of Oſie Quagmires, where infinite heapes of Trees doe ſticke; and by their waight, time, and multitudes, though the boughes rot, the bodies they ſay, haue made many of thoſe Oſie Flats firme Land in many places: Thus ſayling this Diſſabachi Sea, till hee came betwixt Suſack and Curaske, onely two viſible Townes appeared at the entrance of the Riuer Bruago. In ſixe or ſeuen daies ſayle, hee ſaw foure or fiue, ſeeming ſtrong Caſtles of ſtone, with flat tops and Battlements about them; but ariuing at Cambria, he was according to their cuſtome, well vſed. The Caſtle was of a large circomference, ten or twelue foote thicke in the foundation. Some ſixe foote from it a Palizado, and then a ditch round about, fortie foot broad, full of water: on the one ſide of it a Towne all of low flat houſes, but no great matter as it ſeemed; yet it keeps all that Country in admirable awe and ſubiection. Three daies he reſted there, then it was two daies iourney to Nalbrits, the Timors habitation, a place not of much leſſe ſtrength then Cambria, where ſometimes reſideth this Tymor Nalbrits, Brother to the Ladie Tragabigzando. To her vnkind Brother this kind Ladie writ ſo much for his good vſage, that hee halfe ſuſpected as much as ſhe intended. For ſhee told him, he ſhould there but ſoiourne to learne the language: and what it was to be a Turke, till time made her Maſter of her ſelfe. But the Tymor her Brother diuerted, and peruerted all this to the worſt of crueltie: for within an houre after his arriuall, hee cauſed his Drugman to ſtrip him naked, and ſhaue his head and beard as bare as his hand, a great Ring of Iron with a long ſtalke bowing like a Sickle about his neck, and a coate made of Vlgrayes haire, much like Haire-cloath, guarded about with a piece of an vndreſſed skinne. There were many other Chriſtian Slaues, but more then two hundred Forſados, and he being the laſt, was Slaue of Slaues to them all. Among thoſe ſlauiſh fortunes, there was no great choiſe, for the beſt was ſo bad, a Dog could hardly haue liued to indure: and yet for all their paines and labour, no more regarded then a Beaſt. The Tymor and his friends fed vpon Pillow, which is boyled Rice and Garnancis, with little bits of Mutton or Buckones, which is roſt pieces of Horſe, Vlgry, or any Beaſt. Samboſes and Muſelbits are great dainties, and yet but round pies full of all ſorts of fleſh chopped, with How he was ſent into Tartaria.

Varna.

A deſcription of the Diſabachi or blacke Sea.

Cambria.

Shauing of Slaues, and hard vſage.

varietie

Millet.

Their Attire.

Houſes.

No houſes but moueable Tents.

varietie of Hearbs. Their beſt drinke is Coffa, made of a Graine, called Coaua, boyled with water and Sherberke, which is onely Hony and Water. Mares Milke, or the Milke of any Beaſt, they hold reſtoratiue; but all the Comminaltie drinke pure Water. Their Bread is made of this Coaua, which is a kind of blacke Wheate, and Cuſcus a ſmall white Seed like Millet in Biskany. Our common victuall, was the Intrals and Offall of Horſes and Vlgryes; of this cut in ſmall pieces, they will fill a great Cauldron; which being boyled, and with Cuſcus put in great bowles in the manner of Chafing-diſhes, they ſit about it on the ground; after they haue raked it through as oft as they pleaſe with their fowle fiſts, the remainder was for the Chriſtian Slaues. Some of this broth they would temper with Cuſcus, like Butter for Fritters, and putting the fire off from the hearth, powre there a bowle full, then couer it with coales till it be baked, which ſtued with the remainder of the broath, and ſmall pieces of fleſh, was an extraordinary daintie. The better ſort are attired like Turkes, but the plaine Tartar weareth halfe a blacke Sheepes skinne ouer his backe, two of the legges tyed about his necke, the other two about his middle; with another ouer his belly, and his legges tyed in like manner behind him: then two skinnes more made like a paire of Baſes, ſerue him for Breeches, with a little Cap cloſe to his skull of courſe blacke Felt, and they vſe exceeding much of this Felt for Carpets, for Bedding, for Coates, and Idols. Their houſes are much worſe then your Iriſh: but the In-land Countrey hath none but Carts and Tents, which they euer remoue from Countrey to Countrey, as they ſee occaſion, driuing with them infinite troups of blacke Sheepe, Cattle, and Vlgryes, eating vp all before them as they goe.

The Tartars of Nagi.

For the Tartars of Nags, they haue neither Towne nor Houſe, Corne nor Drinke, but Fleſh and Milke; and liue all in Hordias, three or foure thouſand of them in a company, all liuing in great Carts, fifteene or ſixteene foot broad, which is couered ouer with ſmall Rods, wratled together in the forme of a Birds-neſt turned vpwards, and with the Aſhes of bones, tempered with Oyle, and a Clay they haue, & Camels haire, they loome them ſo wel, that no weather wil pierce them, and yet they are very light. Each Hordia hath a Murſe, which they obey as King. Their gods are infinite, but the Crimme Tartar and the Tauricks, obey Murtiſſalla Mahomets chiefe Prophet. One thouſand or two thouſand of thoſe glittering white Carts drawne with Camels, Deere, Bulls, and Vlgryes, they bring round in a Ring, where they pitch their Campe, and the Murſe with his chiefe Alliances are placed in the midſt: They doe much hurt when they get any Strogs, which are great Boats, vſed vpon the Edle a Riuer we call Volga, to them that dwell in the Countrey of Poroulog, and would doe much more, ~~were it not~~ for the Muſconits Gariſons that there inhabite.

How Smith eſcaped his captiuitie.

All the hope he had euer to be deliuered from this thraldome, was onely the loue of Tragabigzanda, who ſurely was ignorant of his bad vſage; for although he had oft debated the matter with ſome Chriſtians, which had beene there long Slaues, they could not find how to make any eſcape, by any reaſon or poſſibilitie. But God beyond Mans expectation or imagination, helpeth his Seruants when they leaſt thinke of helpe, as it hapned to him. In this miſerable eſtate, he became a Thraſher at a Grange in a great field, more then a league from the Tymors houſe. The Baſſa as he oft vſed to viſite his grounds, viſited him, and tooke occaſion ſo to beate, ſpurne and reuile him, that Smith forgetting all reaſon, beate out his braines with his bat: and ſeeing his eſtate could not be worſe then it was, he cloathed himſelfe in his cloathes, hid his body vnder the Straw, filled his Knapſacke with Corne, ſhut the doores, mounted his Horſe, and ranne into the Deſart at all aduenture: Two or three daies thus fearefully wandring he knew not whither, and well it was hee met not any to aske the way. Thus being euen as one taking leaue of this miſerable world, God did direct him to their great way or Cuſtragan, as they call it, which doth croſſe thoſe large Territories, and is generally knowne among them by theſe markes.

In euery croſſing of this great way, is planted a Poſte, and in it ſo many bolts with broad ends, as there are waies, and euery bolt hath the figure painted ouer it, that demonſtrateth to what part that way leadeth, as that which pointeth towards the Crimmes Countrey, is marked with a halfe Moone: if towards the China, the picture of the Sunne; if towards the Georgians and Perſia, a blacke man full of white ſpots; if towards Muſcouy, the ſigne of a Croſſe; if towards the habitation of any other Prince, the figure whereby his Standard is knowne. To his dying ſpirits thus God added ſome comfort in this melancholy iourney, wherein if hee had met any of that vild generation, they had made him their Slaue, or ſent him backe againe to his Maſter. Sixteene daies he trauelled in this feare and torment after that croſſe, till hee arriued at Axopolis, vpon the Riuer Don, a Garriſon of the Muſcouits. The Gouernor after due examination of thoſe hard euents, tooke off his Irons, and ſo kindly vſed him, that he thought himſelfe newly riſen from death.

Axopolis.

The deſcription of Cambria, and his paſſage to Ruſsia.

Bruapo.

Don, or Tanais.

The moſt he could learne of theſe wild Countries was this, that the Countrey of Cambria is two dayes Iourney from the head of the great Riuer Bruapo, which ſpringeth from many places of the Mountaynes of Inagachi, that ioyne themſelues together in the Poole Kerkas, which they account for the head, and falleth into the Sea Diſſabach: which receiueth alſo the Riuer Don, and all the Riuers that fall from the great Countrey of the Circaſſi, the Caitaches, the Tauricaci, ricaces, Pricopes, Cumania, Coſſunka, and the Crymme, through which Sea hee ſayled, and vp the Riuer Bruapo to Nalbrits, and thence through the Deſerts of Circaſſi to Exopolis, as is related, where he ſtayed with the Gouernour, till the Conuoy went to Coragnaw, then with his Certificate how he found him, and had examined him, with his friendly Letters he ſent him by Zumalacke to Coragnaw, whoſe Gouernor in like manner ſo kindly vſed him, that by this means, he went with the ſafe conduct to Letch & Donka, in Cologosk, and thence to Birniske, & Newgrade, in Seberya, by Kezachica vpon the Riuer Niger, in the Confines of Littuania. From whence with as much kindneſſe he was conueyed in like manner by Coroskie, Duberosko, Duzihell, Drohobus, and Oſtroge in Volonia. Shaſlaw and Laxco in Podolia, Halsco and Collonia in Polonia, and ſo to Hermonſtat in Tranſiluania. In all his life he ſeldome met with more reſpect, mirth, content and entertaynment, and not any Gouernour where he came, but gaue him ſomewhat as a Preſent beſides his charges, ſeeing themſelues ſubiect to the like calamitie. And becauſe our Authour hath ſo thorowly trauelled Europe, I haue here preſented Hondius his Map of Europe.

A faire ſhunſhine after a ſtorme.

HONDIVS his Map of Europe.

GRONELANDIÆ PARS
Mare congelatum
NOVA ZEMLA
TARTARIÆ PARS
OBDORA
PERMIA
ASIAE PARS
Frisland
Island
HYPERBOREUS OCEANUS
DEUCALEDONIUS OCEANUS
ATLANTICUS OCEANUS
Podolia
Polonia
Pontus Euxinus
NATOLIA ol: ASIA MIN
EUROPA
BARBARIÆ PARS
MEDITERRA
Candia ol Creta
Cyprus
Miliaria Germanica
20
30
40
50
60
70

Through thoſe poore continually forraged Countries there is no paſſage, but with the Carauans or Conuoyes; for they are Countries rather to bee pittied then enuyed, and it is a wonder any ſhould make Warres for them. The Villages are here and there a few Houſes of ſtreight Firre-trees, laid heads and points aboue one another made faſt by notches at the ends, more then a mans height, and with broad ſplit boards pinned together with woodden pinnes thatched for couerture: in ten Villages you ſhall ſcarce find ten Iron Nayles, except it bee in ſome extraordinarie mans Houſe. For their Townes, Exopolis, Lech, and Donka haue Rampiers made of that woodden walled-faſhion, double, and betwixt them Earth and Stones, but ſo latched with croſſe Timber, they are very ſtrong againſt any thing but fire, and about them a deepe Ditch, and a Pallizado of young Firre-trees, but moſt of the reſt haue only a great Ditch caſt about them

His Obſeruations in his Iourney to Tranſiluania, and through the midſt of Europe.

them

All Lords, or Slaues.

them, and the Ditches Earth is all their Rampier, and the toppe on it round, well enuironed with Palizadoes; Some haue ſome few ſmall Peeces of ſmall Ordnance and Slings, Curriours and Muskets; but their generalleſt Weapons are the Ruſſe Bow and Arrowes. In their wayes you ſhall find pauements ouer Bogges, only of young Firre-trees laid croſſe ouer one another for two or three houres Iourney, or as the paſſage requires, and yet in two dayes trauell, you ſhall ſcarce ſee ſixe Habitations. Notwithſtanding, to ſee how their Lords, Gouernours, and Captaines are ciuilized, well attyred and accoultred with Iewels, Sables, Horſes, and after their manner with curious Furniture, it is wonderfull; but they are all Lords or Slaues, which makes them ſo ſubiect to euery Inuaſion.

Sigiſmunds Teſtimoniall.

In Tranſiluania he found ſo many good friends, that but to ſee and reioyce himſelfe after all thoſe Encounters to ſee his Natiue Countrey, he would euer hardly haue left them, though the Miracle of Vertue, their Prince was abſent. Being thus glutted with content, and neere drowned with ioy; he paſſed high Hungaria, By-fylecke, Tocka, Caſſouia, and Vnaderawa, by Vlmitch in Morauia, to Prague in Bohemia: at laſt he found the moſt generous Prince Sigiſmundus with his Colonell at Lipſwicke in Miſenland, who gaue him his paſſe, intimating the ſeruice hee had done, and the honours he had receiued with fifteene hundred Duckets of Gold to repaire his loſſes. With this he ſpent ſometime, to viſit the faire Cities and Countries of Dreſden in Saxonie, Mandabourge, and Brunſwicke Caſtle in Heſſen, Wittenberge, Vlme and Minikin in Bauaria, Auſburge and her Vniuerſitie, Hanna, Franckford, Mets, the Palatinate, Wormes, Spire, and Strawſburge. Paſſing the Cardinalſhip to Nancey in Loraine, and the Kingdome of France, by Paris to Orleance, he went downe the Riuer of Leyer, to Angers, and imbarked himſelfe at Nants in Britania for Bilbow in Biskanie, to ſee Burgos, Valiodolid, Squeriall, Madrill, Toledo, Cordua, Cuede Ryall, Siuill, Cherges, Cales, and Saint Lucars in Spaine.

His returne for England.

Then vnderſtanding that the Warres of Mully Shaſh and Mully Sedan, the two Brothers in Barbarie of Fez and Moroco (to which hee was animated by ſome friends) were concluded in peace, he imbarked himſelfe for England with one thouſand Duckets in his Purſe, which after with a great deale more hee employed, in ſearching more dangers in the Weſt Indies, and the vnknowne parts of vnciuilized America, where how he diſcouered and inhabited Virginia, how hee was taken Priſoner by Powhatan, their Emperor 1607. and deliuered, how hee tooke the King of Paſpahegh, Priſoner in ſingle Combate, and the King of Pamavuke Priſoner in the middeſt of his Armie, and brought thirtie of their pettie Kings, and all their people in ſubiection to the Engliſh: How ſince hee hath ſearched, and cauſed a new England, and was taken Priſoner by French Pirats, and eſcaped: You ſhall after heare in fitter place.

CHAP. XII.

The death of SVLTAN OSMAN, and the ſetting vp of MVSTAFA his Vncle, according to the Relation preſented to His Maieſtie.

Pretence of viſiting Mecha.

THe Grand Signior Sultan Oſman diſcontented ſince his diſgrace in Poland, as ſoone as he came to Conſtantinople, pretended a Iourney vpon the Emir de Saida, who was reported to be in Rebellion, hauing taken Armes to other ends. But being diuerted from this purpoſe by the great inſtance of the Viziers, and that it would not ſo well ſerue his ſecret Deſignes, becauſe hee muſt then keepe an Armie on foote; hee gaue out that hee would viſite Mecha, the Tombe of his falſe Prophet.

To make this Voyage the more ſecure, in appearance, hee ſeemed content to accept of any Treatie with the Polacks, euen to conditions both of diſaduantage and diſhonour; for his eſtates in Hungarie, he re-enforced the Frontiers with diuers troupes, and though hee were much troubled at the league betweene the Emperour of Germanie and Bethlem Gabor, yet he diſſembled it ſo, as that he would not diſpleaſe the Tranſiluanian, but rather offered new ſuccours, and forbearance of his Tribute. From the Incurſions of the Coſſacks, hee hoped to aſſure himſelfe, by the treatie of the Poles, and in occaſion of breach, he had the Tartars readie to requite them (it being both their trades to liue vpon ſpoile and robberie) and for more ſecuritie hee appointed twentie Gallies to keepe the Blacke Sea. The common people and Viziers that loued reſt, and knew not the Deſigne, were much troubled and diſcontent at this Iourney, who made many Remonſtrances to him of the inconuenience and danger to leaue the ſeat of his Empire to the truſt of a Deputie, in a time when Bethlem Gabor was newly reconciled to the Germane Emperour, and therefore not to be truſted; and the Polacks newly reconciled to him, and therefore to bee miſtruſted. Diuers other reaſons were made to him, many Petitions deliuered from the Church-men, Lawyers, and from all Eſtates. But melancholike Reuenge had wholly poſſeſſed him, ſo that by no meanes he could be perſwaded to deſiſt. The Souldierie paſſed ſo farre, as to threatten publikely, and to proteſt, they would not follow, but rather ſet vp another King in his abſence that ſhould ſtay among them. In concluſion, carried by his owne fate to deſtruction: the ſeuenth of May, hauing firſt commanded away all his Gallies to the Leuant, and thereby diſpoſed away many of his Souldiers, he began to paſſe ouer his Tents and Pauilions to Aſia ſide, with great quantities of Treaſure: The Ianizaries and Spahees, who had alſo ſecret Intelligence vpon the King, his owne words and actions betraying ſome further Deſigne then a Pilgrimage (for he made preparations to carrie away all his Iewels and Treaſure, euen defacing his Palace, and taking from Churches, and his Wardrobes, whatſoeuer could be conuerted to Bullion) ſuddenly met at the Hippodrome in the Citie vpon a word giuen; and from thence ranne to the Seraglio in tumult, but without Armes, and there according to their barbarous mutinies cryed out for the King (hauing firſt taken order to ſtop the paſſage of any thing vpon the water) who appearing to them, asked what this inolencie meant, and what they pretended. They then by the mouth of a multitude (for they had no head but that of the Monſter) demanded firſt that hee ſhould not proceed in his purpoſe to goe to Mecha, nor into Aſia, but that he muſt abide in the Citie. Secondly, they would haue deliuered to their furie the Great Vizier De-lauir Baſſa, the Hoia, or Confeſſor of the King, the Caſhariaga Gouernour of the women, the Teſterdar, or Treaſurer, the Cadde Leskar, or Chiefe Iuſtice, and ſome others, as Enemies to the State, and conſenting to this Voyage, which they pretended would be the ruine of the Empire. The firſt, after a little diſpute, the King granted vnto them; promiſing to giue ouer his Iourney, but they not content, exacted it in writing. To the ſecond, he replyed, that it was diſhonour to him to haue his Seruants ſo vſed without order of Iuſtice: but perſwaded them to haue patience to ſtay vntill Saturday, the next Diuan, or publike Councell, where they ſhould all appeare, and if they were found culpable, they ſhould receiue puniſhment; not meaning to performe any of this, but to get time and allay their peſent furie. Theſe fellowes not content with this moderate anſwere, vndertooke to know that they were guiltie, and therefore that they needed no other witneſſe, tryals, nor Iudge, but themſelues, and with extreme clamour, called to haue them deliuered. But the King refuſing to giue them any other ſatisfaction, and they vnprepared for force, returned into the Citie, which now was all in feare, euery houſe and ſhop ſhut vp, expecting a generall ſacke. But they followed the way of their owne hatred, and firſt went vnto the houſe of the Hoia, which they brake and pillaged: but not finding him, they proceeded to the Great Viziers, who made ſome defence, and (they being vnarmed) beate him off; and ſo they ſeparated being now Euening, but yet kept a Guard in ſome parts of the Towne.

1622.

Ianizaries mutinie.

This night the King made an attempt to ſend ouer to Aſia ſide, but was preuented; and to fortifie and defend his Seraglio, which is walled ſtrongly about, and hath alway in it of houſehold Seruants about three thouſand, but it ſeemes no man would arme in his cauſe. For the next morning, the Mutiners aſſembled againe, and taking their Armes, went firſt to the Mufti, or Arch-prieſt among them, and forced him and diuers others to accompany them to the Court, where they anew demanded theſe men, but with more inſtance and furie. In the meane time the Hoia, Caddee Leskar, and Teſterdar fled, and were yet neuer heard off. The Vizier retyred to the King, and perſwaded him earneſtly to goe ouer in perſon in his owne Boates (which from his Garden he might eaſily doe) to Aſia, and there to take Horſe, and he would ſecure him from all perill; but the King would not mooue, bidding him ſtay confident and aſſured that hee would puniſh theſe Rebels.

The wiſe old man ſeeing this conſtancie or obſtinacie, deſired leaue to ſhift for himſefe, which he either tooke or obtayned, and ſo got away to the Hermitage of a Saint renowmed amongſt them, who (like himſelfe) betrayed him to a Captaine of the Ianizaries; yet did him the fauour as not to deliuer him to the multitude, but carried him backe to the Kings Houſe. At this time it was diſputed in the Seraglio, about the deliuerie of theſe Officers, the Emperour refuſing, the Rebels clamouring and threatning; inſomuch, as he began to feare they would breake in, and in their rage doe worſe then was yet pretended. Whereupon, whether by the Kings order, or by his owne conſent (willing to bee the Peace-offering) the Vizier went out to them, and with a good aſſuredneſſe demanded what they ſought of him, and wherein he had offended: But they anſwered him with their Swords, and ſuddenly cut him in pieces.

Saint Knaue.

The Emperour ſeeing their furie ſo out-ragious, had now more cauſe to doubt, and retyred himſelfe then too late, when hee had loſt his braue Counſellor; would haue fled into Aſia, and could not, but conueyed himſelfe into a priuate place, prepared by his Buſtengi Baſſa, or chiefe Gardiner. The Rebels continue without in their madneſſe, asking for the King, and for more Sacrifices. But the Seruants proteſting they knew not where he was, they ſaid, they muſt haue a King, and if he would not appeare, they would make another; and hauing awhile attended, they reſolued to enter the Palace (but firſt tooke a generall Oath not to ſacke the Imperiall Throne, which they called their houſe and their honour) and there ſeeking for the King, not able to find him, they extorted by confeſſion the Caſlariaga, and ſlue him, and then they demanded for Muſtafa, Vncle to Oſman, by him formerly depoſed, a man eſteemed rather holy (that is franticke) then wiſe, and indeed fitter for a Cell, then a Scepter. The King the firſt day of this tumult had put Muſtafa into a Vault with two Negro women, without bread or drinke, in which eſtate theſe new Electors found him almoſt naked, and halfe pined. At firſt ſight, hee thought they had beene the Meſſengers of death: but that feare paſſed ouer, he begged of them a Cup of water. Whom they tooke, and inſtantly proclaimed their Emperour, which hee was loth to accept, vti pudebat aucti nominis; How vnſtable are the Eſtates of the greateſt Princes! Quem dies videt veniens iacentem, hunc vidit dies fugiens regnantem; He that was now in the Iawes of death, naked, ſtarued, and dying for thirſt, is become the Emperour, and may drinke Gold, or the bloud of men..

Grand Signior flight.

Muſtafa made King.

They as yet not knowing what was become of Oſman, and loth to truſt Muſtapha in the Palace, carried him in triumph to the old Seraglio, and there left him, departing to the ſacke of the Viziers houſe, and ſo in the Euening to their Rendeuous, where they kept both good guard, and good order in the Citie, from fires and other Inſolencies. Sultan Oſman amazed with theſe newes, ſo ſoone as they had left the Court, came out and called to Councell in the night, Huzein Baſſa, late Vizier in the Poliſh Warre, and the Aga of the Ianizaries, both faithfull to him, and demanded their aduice; firſt, hauing ſent to the old Seraglio, to practiſe the women there, to ſtrangle Muſtafa; but ſome taking his part, a new vprore beganne in the houſe betweene that Sexe: and the Souldiers that kept watch, taking the Alarum, entred in, and reſcued him, and from thence remooued him to the Chambers of the Ianizaries, where they guarded him for that night, in an ill Lodging. All this while Oſman conſults what courſe to take. Theſe two his friends, and ſome others, tell him, that the caſe was deſperate, and could not bee cured but by a deſperate remedie. And they agreed that the Aga ſhould goe and perſwade with the Mofti, and that the King in the morning ſhould ſuddenly preſent himſelfe to the Souldiers at their owne doore, and make experience, what his Preſence, his ſubmiſſion, and his beneuolence promiſed could worke, to moue them to Loyaltie, or compaſſion; which counſell early in the morning they put in practice. The King accompanied with the Mofti, (who neuer conſented to his depoſing, though he fauoured the Souldiers againſt the Vizier) with Huzein Baſſa, and about twelue Horſe-men, went directly to the Ianizaries Colledge where Muſtafa was kept, and there in teares made them an Oration, offering great recompence, repenting of his errour; and finally, inuoked them by the merits of his Father and all his Anceſtors to haue ſome pitie vpon their true Maſter. The multitude (tam prona in miſericordiam, quam immodica ſæuitia fuerat) now knew not what to doe; a ſilent murmure ranne among them, and they were halfe conuerted: But the Aga of the Ianizaries, thinking to merit of the King, and beginning to plead vnſeaſonably for him, with ſome harſh words of vpbraidure, Vt natura Maris omni flatu venti turbida, anew moued their furie, ſo that they cryed out Treaſon, and fell vpon him and Huzein Baſſa, and cut them into pieces, euery man taking a part of their fleſh to ſatisfie their reuenge. The Mofti would ſpeake, but is withdrawne by ſome, for reſpect to his place, and with difficultieis conueyed away. Now the poore Oſman ſees his friends ſlaine, and knowes not which way to conuert himſelfe, but binding vp his eyes with a Napkin, expects death as the laſt of their furie; But they carrie him firſt before Muſtafa, and accuſe him as the diſturber of the Peace of the Empire, and demand ſentence againſt him, more vulgi ſuum quiſque flagitium alijs obiectantes. The forſaken Prince pleades for life, and the new King knowes not how to condemne, but nods and agrees to all that is propounded. At laſt, they conſult with themſelues, and put him vpon an Horſe (an inſolent Spahee changing Turbants with him) and ſent him away Priſoner to the ſeuen Towers vnder good guard, and then returned to their new Maſter, and placed him in the Seraglio and Imperiall Throne, where he hath need to haue good Broths and nouriſhment to reſtore his decayed bodie.

New mutinie.

Muſtafa enthronized.

The Souldiers thinke all is done, and (onely ſacking the houſes of Huzein Baſſa, and ſome others their conceiued Enemies) returne in quiet to their ſeuerall Lodgings, and haue no further malice. But the new Vizier Daout Baſſa, made by Muſtafa, knew well, if Oſman liued, that this ſtorme might paſſe ouer, and hee would as eaſily and by the ſame meanes returne to his Eſtate, as hee fell from it, Vulgus vt mos eſt, cuiuſq; noui motus cupidum. Therefore hee conſulted with ſome few intereſſed in Muſtafaes preferment, and thereby obnoxious to Oſman, to ſearch how many of the Royall bloud were left aliue, and reſolued if there remayned two, to make an end of Oſman. Two of his Brothers were found, the one about twelue, the other about ſeuen yeares of age: and thereupon the Vizier went himſelfe to the Priſon with a packe of Hangmen, and gaue order to ſtrangle the vnfortunate Prince: who now hauing had no reſt in two nights, and thinking himſelfe ſecure for a ſeaſon, was newly falne aſleepe: but awaked by the comming of theſe Meſſengers, asked what newes, ſaying, hee did not like their ſudden intruſion. They at firſt ſtood amazed, and the King made ſhew to defend himſelfe; but a ſtrong Knaue ſtrooke him on the head with a Battle-axe, and the reſt leaping vpon him, ſtrangled him with much adoe. Thus one of the greateſt Monarkes in the World is firſt affronted by mutined troupes, his owne ſlaues, almoſt vnarmed, and few in number, no man taking vp a Oſmans brethren.

Oſman ſlaine.

Sword to defend him: and they who began this madneſſe, not meaning to hurt him, by the increaſe of their owne furie, which hath no bounds, depoſe him againſt their owne purpoſe, and at laſt expoſe his life againſt their will, to the counſels of other men, whom they equally hate. And now they mourne for their dead King, as freſhly as they raged vnreaſonably, knowing they haue ſtayned their honour, being the firſt of their Emperours they euer betrayed, and that they haue ſet vp another that in all likelihood they muſt change for diſabilitie: Nonnunquam tulit documenta ſors maiora, quam fragili loco ſtarent ſuperbi.

This is the laſt act of the fite of Sultan Oſman: but his intents and great deſignes, which drew vpon him this fatall blow, I ſuppoſe will not bee vnworthy the communication, the Practices, Reaſons, Secrets, and Counſels of all Actions being the Soule of Hiſtorie, and res geſta but the bare carkaſſe: and I am perſwaded, as many Ages haue not produced ſo ſtrange an Example of the incertaintie of humane greatneſſe; ſo in the diſpoſition thereof, and in the wayes leading thereunto, there is ſeene euidently the wonderfull prouidence of God, in confounding of the counſels of the worldly wiſe, who had laid a foundation of new greatneſſe, whereby he aſpired the vniuerſall Monarchie, ambitious of the honour of Traian, in whoſe time the decayed Empire was ſaid, Primum mouere lacertos, & ſenectutem Imperij, quaſi reddita iuuentute reuiuiſcere. And laſtly, the world may ſee vpon how weake foundations this Monarchie was at firſt builded, but it is now ſhaken and corrupted; how their Kings are ſubiect to the rage of a few Slaues, how Anarchie hath prepared it an eaſie prey to any able hand, that would attempt it. From the Inuaſion of Poland, all theſe changes took their beginning. Sultan Oſman aduanced to the Throne in his youth, full of heate and bloud, being of a great and haughtie ſpirit, very couragious, ſtrong of bodie, and a mortall hater of Chriſtians, enuious of the glory of his Anceſtors, and ambitious to rayſe his name aboue any of theirs, had proiected in himſelfe the Conqueſt of the Remaynes of the bordering Europe. But to ſo great deſignes he had one vice that reſiſted all hope of proſperitie, which was extreme Auarice, and he fell into the latter times and decrepit age, Vbi vires luxu corrumpebantur, contra veterem diſciplinam & inſtituta maiorum, apud quos virtute quam pecunia res militaris melius ſtetit. His firſt enterprize was that of Poland, mooued by the Incurſions of the Coſſacks, which yet he vndertooke of his owne head, without the counſell of any his Viziers (who in a Monarchie growne to the height by eaſe and wealth, and perhaps, longa dominatione inertes, are euer corrupt and lazie) and againſt the liking of all the Souldiers, who now contrarie to their Inſtitution being marryed, and Fathers of a Family, entred into Trades, receiuing nothing in Warre more then in Peace, prater pericula & labores, are not eaſily drawne from their owne Chimneies. This action he thought ſo eaſie, as he had diſpoſed of his Conqueſt, and deuided the liue Lions skinne. But being met vpon the Borders with a poore Armie in compariſon, he was firſt arreſted at Chotyn a little Fortreſſe, which he was faine to leaue behind him vntaken. And then ſeeking to aduance into the plaine Countrey, by forcing the Trenches of the Chancellor of Poland, oppoſed againſt him, he could neuer procure his Ianizaries to fight, though engaging his perſon once or twice beyond the regard of his qualitie, and his owne Troupes readie to mutinie againſt him, or to forſake him, he was at laſt enforced to rayſe ſhamefully his Campe, and to accept of any Treatie to ſaue his outward honour. In this attempt he loſt aboue one hundred thouſand Horſes for want of Fodder, and foureſcore thouſand men for want of fighting: for they would rather dye, running, or pillaging, or eating, then in the face of the Enemie. For this diſgrace he conceiued ſo inward and rooted an indignation againſt the Ianizaries, and ſo iuſtly, that he often lamented himſelfe, and complayned hee was no King, that was ſubiect to his owne ſlaues, vpon whom he ſpent great Treaſures, and yet they would neither fight in Warre, nor obey in Peace, without exacting new bounties and Priuiledges. Delauir Baſſa a man of great wit and courage, lately called from the Eaſterne parts, where hee had long gouerned with honour, who came in, though late, yet in a very braue and Warlike Equipage, aboue all other his Captaines, was ſuddenly made Great Vizier, the former Huzein Baſſa being in the ſame diſgrace, common with the Souldier, though not in the ſame fault. This man was neuer bred at Court, but had liued many yeares in Action, and ſo had neither Faction nor Dependance heere, but ſtood vpon himſelfe and his owne merit: And beeing now vnlooked for, and aduanced to this high dignitie, he wrought vpon the Kings diſcontent, and nouriſhed it: and in concluſion, brake with him, that it was true, he was no Emperour, nor could be ſafely aliue, while the Ianizaries had the power which they lately vſurped. Informing him, that they were corrupted from their ancient Inſtitution, and were lazie Cowards, giuen ouer to Eaſe and Luſt, Et animo per libidines corrupto, nihil honeſtum inerat. But if his Maieſtie would pull vp his ſpirits, and follow his aduice, hee would prouide him a new Souldioury about Damaſcus, and from the Coords, of men euer bred in the Frontier, Hardneſſe, and Warre, of great Courage and Experience, and that of them hee ſhould erect a new Militia, that ſhould wholy depend of him, entertayning onely fortie thouſand in pay, which ſhould alway be his Guard, and that in the diſtribution of euery Prouince, he ſhould conſtitute that the Beghler-begh in his Gouernment ſhould trayne ſome of the Inhabitants, who in all occaſions of making a great Armie, ſhould be in readineſſe, and hereby hee ſhould ſpare infinite Treaſures ſpent

Oſmans ambition.

His auarice & vnſeaſonable attempts againſt Poland.

Ianizaries peruerſe.

Delauir Baſſa.

The Coords.

vpon theſe Drones that eate vp his Eſtate; And with men of new ſpirits and hopes, hee ſhould be enabled to doe greater matters, then any of his Anceſtors: but withall he deſired the King to communicate this counſell to no man, nor to truſt his life vpon anothers ſecrecie. Delauir Baſſa neuer reuealing himſelfe to any but the King, who extremely pleaſed with this aduice, that flattered his owne humour, conſented, and remitted all to the Viziers direction, who was a true Souldier, and a very wiſe man, able by his credit in Aſia, to performe all hee had vndertaken: for he was exceedingly beloued in thoſe parts, very rich, and had kept Damaſcus, whereof he was Gauernour, for himſelfe in the laſt Rebellion. Vpon this concluſion betweene them, it was firſt agreed, that the King ſhould pretend to goe in perſon againſt the Emir de Zaida, who was moued to take Armes really to aſſiſt in the deſigne: but they vſed it, to colour the departure of the Emperor; which when it was well weighed, it was found, that then the Army of the Ianizaries muſt be kept together, which could not agree with their ends. Hereupon the iourney of Mecha was diuulged, that the King might, vnder the ſhadow of an holy pilgrimage, goe out with a ſmal trayne, and diſperſe thoſe who were ſuſpected to him. And for this preparation was made, but ſomwhat too groſly by melting of all the Plate, Saddles, furniture of houſe, Lamps of Churches, and whatſoeuer could more eaſily be conueyed away in metal, with all the Iewels and treaſurie. This gaue the firſt ſuſpicion, which was confirmed by diuers vnaduiſed words let fall from the King, of diſdayne againſt the cowardize of the Ianizaries, and that he would ſhortly find himſelfe ſoldiers that ſhould whip them; & laſtly, diſmiſſing all his houſhold, except ſome few elect, the diſcontented obſerued and betrayed him. Delauir Baſſa kept his owne ſecret, and in the meane time prepared by his friends in Aſia 10000. about Damaſcus, 10000. from the Coords, beſides thoſe in readineſſe of the Emir de Zaida, and all vpon pretence of defending the borders of Perſia, who hauing intelligence of ſome change in thoſe parts; And gaue order that all theſe ſhould meet the King at Damaſcus, where he would preſently cut off his Guard, and ſtay there, vntill he had regulated his new Armie, and diſcipline, and then to returne triumphant to Conſtantinople, and vtterly root out the order of Ianizaries, Spaheis, and Timariots, and to exauctorate all their Captaines and Officers to ſettle a new gouernment, and to change the name of the Citie. And theſe things ſucceeding, he then reſolued with his new Souldiers to attempt the recouerie of his honour in Chriſtendome: in the meane time to hold a diſſembled frienſhip there in all parts. Certainely, this was a braue and well-grounded deſigne, and of great conſequence for renewing of this decayed Empire, languiſhing vnder the inſolencies of lazie ſlaues, if God had not deſtroyed it: It being very true, that the Turkiſh Emperour ſtands at the deuotion of his owne troops for peace or warre, life or death, and is in effect nothing but the Steward or Treaſurer of his Ianizaries. If this proiect had taken effect, what euents it might haue produced by a Ciuill Warre, is not eaſie to iudge. For doubtleſſe, the Souldiourie here would haue ſet vp another King, and maintayned him as well as they could, and this European part had beene in danger to haue beene torne away by the diuiſion. Beſides, Delauir Baſſa hauing the King and the Treaſurie in his poſſeſſion, and his owne credit ſo great, and his inclination, velle imperare, once diſcouered, it may well be thought that he had ſome ends of his owne to ſhare a part of this mightie eſtate: If on the other ſide, the Vizier had proued true and faithfull, the reformation and new erection of the Diſcipline of Warre, and the encreaſe of Treaſure conſequent to the diſmiſſion of the old Militia, would haue beene fearefull to all Chriſtendome: But, Vbi eſt ſapiens? Vbi diſquiſitor ſeculi huius? Nonne infatuauit Deus ſapientiam mundi huius? Perdam ſapientiam ſapientum, & vanam reddam intelligentiam intelligentium. It is a great queſtion whether is the wiſer wiſh, that theſe Counſels had ſucceeded or not: for either diuiſion and ſubuerſion, or a new proſperitie and enlargement of their Dominion had neceſſarily followed.

Vnaduiſed threats.

Lazie Slaues.

Obſeruations.

Some obſeruations vpon this occaſion, will not be very impertinent to thoſe that deſire to know as well the diſpoſition and vſe, as the things themſelues. Firſt, in the purpoſe of the Souldier, not at all to violate or hurt the King, much leſſe to depoſe and murther him; but onely to take away thoſe about him, whom they thought aſſiſtants in this proiect: yet the furie once on foot, they proceeded by miſſenſible ſteps, to the vttermoſt of outrage, againſt many innocents in that buſineſſe, though otherwiſe obnoxious, and againſt the Throne and life of their owne Emperour, vbi furor ingruat innocentes ac noxios iuxta cadere. Secondly, in the degrees, that yet the King had not falne thus low, if firſt hee had not loſt that awe and reuerence which alway attendeth vpon Maieſtie, by vnſeemely offices, done by him in the ſtreets and Tauernes, apprehending many Souldiers for pettie faults, like a Conſtable, making his perſon common, cheape, and deſpiſed among them which were wont onely to be ſeene and feared, as ſomewhat ſupra humanitatem. And this he did alſo in hatred and diſdayne of thoſe that had in the Warre forſaken him. And now in this laſt act, if his owne obſtinacie had not plunged him into deſtruction, but that he had ſoftned them by a ſeaſonable yeelding to time, he had preuayled onely by time. Thirdly, in the order, That theſe Mutiners hauing no head, or direction, kept that reglement, that they tooke oath in their furie, in hot bloud, in the Kings yard, not to diſhonour, ſpoyle, nor ſacke the Imperiall Throne, neither committed nor ſuffered any inſolence nor violence in the Citie to the Neutrals, but rather proclaymed peace and iuſtice. Fourthly, in the conſequents, that at the third dayes end, all was at quiet, and all men in their trade, as if no ſuch thing had hapned; Onely the Ianizaries ſuffered no Diuan nor Councell,

vntill

Oſmans dream.

vntill they had receiued a Donatiue, as Guerdon of their iniquitie, in which alſo the infinite waſte of Treaſure is worthie of conſideration, which muſt of neceſſitie be exceedingly exhauſted by three changes in foure yeeres, and by the late Warres in Perſia and Poland*: For euery* Ianizarie in the Citie, abſent or preſent, whoſe roll is about fortie thouſand, receiue fiue and twentie Chequins gold, beſides Spaheis, Iamoglans, and other orders at euery alteration, which amounts in all neere to two millions. And now theſe fellowes all liuing, that haue taſted the ſweet of proſperous mutinies, haud ignari ſumma ſcelera incipi cum periculo, peragi cum præmio, they haue taken ſuch a head as cannot ſafely be ſuffered on, nor ſecurely be taken off. Fiftly, of certaine preſages that fore-ran, it being related to mee from the mouth of a Gadee, inward with the King a moneth before the tumult: That Oſman dreamed in the night, that he thought to ride a Camell, and being mounted, he could not force him to goe by faire meanes nor ſtripes, and that then he deſcending in a rage, the bodie of the beaſt vaniſhed, and left the head in the Kings hand. Who next day troubled at this fancy, ſent to a learned Man, familiar with him, for the interpretation. Hee excuſed himſelfe as vnfit to giue opinion in a matter of that conſequence, but perſwaded Oſman to ſend to the Mufti. Hee alſo craued pardon, but withall ſaid, there was none ſo fit to interprete it, as Muſtafa the Kings Vncle, and now Emperour, who is eſteemed a holy man, that hath Viſions, and Angel-like ſpeculations, in playne termes, betweene a mad man and a foole. The King repayres to Muſtata, who briefly tells him, The Camell ſignifies his Empire: his riding, abuſe in gouernement: his deſcenſion, his diſpoſition: the vaniſhing of the bodie, the reuolt of his Subiects: the head remayning in his hand, onely a bare Title; and that hee ſhould ſhortly die within few moneths, and loſe his Kingdome, but the emptie name of Emperour ſhould accompanie him to his Graue.

Conference betwixt the Emperors Ambaſſador and the Vizier.

A ſecond of leſſe conſequence in the Vizier Delauir Baſſa, from whom the Lord Ambaſſador hauing receiued particular friendſhip about ſixe dayes before this vprore, he went to viſit, and hauing no other buſineſſe but to perſwade him to ſtay the King from this intended Pilgrimage, the Ambaſſador gaue him many reaſons in the preſent eſtate of their owne affaires, eſpecially the Treaty of Poland yet depending. To which the Baſſa replyed very grauely. Then the Ambaſſador vrging the feare of ſome tumult, collected from the licentious ſpeeches rumoured in the Towne, and he was bold to deale plainely, ſincerely, and friendly, That if any ſuch thing ſhould happen, the fault would bee imputed to the Baſſa, as being of authoritie to perſwade the King, whom his qualitie and youth would excuſe, but all the furie would be diſcharged vpon the greateſt Miniſter; deſiring him to conſider the euent, at leaſt, to take his affection in the beſt part. The old Renard ſtayed a while from replie: at laſt, ſmiling to himſelfe at the Ambaſſadour, who perſwaded him againſt that which was his owne counſell, he gaue him a finall anſwere, that there was no remedie, he durſt not hazard himſelfe to oppoſe the Kings reſolution: but aſſured him, hee would ſo order the matter, as this iourney ſhould not proceed ſo farre as was expected. The Ambaſſador concluded for himſelfe, deſiring then that he would leaue him a particular recommendation to the Chimacham or Deputie as his friend. To which hee ſodainly replied, Trouble not your ſelfe, nor feare; I will neuer remoue ſo farre, but that I will leaue one of my legs in this Citie to ſerue you: which the poore man fulfilled; for being murthered in few dayes after, one of his legs whole and entire, was hanged in the Hippodrome, the moſt publike place of the Citie. Laſtly, in things yet to come, and ſo probably to be ſuſpected, That the Souldiours in Aſia, who haue now loſt their hopes, will not ſit downe by this affront, but rather will attempt ſome reuenge, for the death of that King who was their Martyr; or that ſome great Baſſaes farre remoued from Court, will apprehend this occaſion, not to obey an Vſurper, ſet vp by treaſon; And vpon this colour ground their owne ambitions, or that all euery where will fall into combuſtion and inteſtine Warre; For I dare not hope, that God will open the eyes of Chriſtian Princes to ſee the littleneſſe of their owne vnciuill quarrels, while this mightie Monarchie inuiteth them to concord, and to diuide it as a proſtituted ſpoyle.

The continuation of the Storie, preſented to the Kings Maieſtie from the ſame perſon.

The Capiaga.

On Saturday euening, the firſt of Iune following, the Capiaga or Maior Domo of the Seraglio, hauing receiued a ſecret order to remoue the brethren of Oſman from their lodgings, and in the night to ſtrangle them: as he was performing his command, ayded with a few of his Carnifices to carrie away the Princes, they cried out: the Pages running to the noiſe, and encouraged by the Caſliaraga, who had ſome ſuſpicion, without further examination kill the Capiaga, now almoſt euery order hauing riſen againſt their owne head. That night they ſent ſecretly to the Ianizaries and Spaheis, to informe them what they had done, and in the morning early hanged his bodie in the Hippodrome for a publike ſpectacle. The Souldiers returned in furie to Court, in fauour of the Pages, and demanded inſtice againſt thoſe that had conſented to this wicked order; which had made an end of all the Ottoman race, onely this Muſtafa being left aliue, who is ſo holy a Saint, that he will not people the world with ſinners, nor indure any women about him. The innocent King proteſts he knowes nothing of this purpoſe: and if his command were procured, it was gotten by ſubreption, and he is eaſily beleeued. But his mother another Liuia, and the new Vizier, Daout Baſſa, who had her daughter to wife, were vehemently ſuſpected. It was a day of Diuan or Councell: But theſe Souldiers would ſuffer none, vntill they had an account of this Treaſon. The Vizier denies all; the mother is a woman, and hidden in the houſe: yet it is very likely, they both were guilty to vphold and ſecure their owne authoritie. It being rumoured, that the Vizier determined to place ſubdititiouſly, in the roome of the elder Prince, his owne Sonne, and very like him, and ſo to gouerne Muſtafa for a time, and by his remoue, to eſtabliſh himſelfe and his Race for euer. But now ſomewhat muſt be done to appeaſe the people; Therefore Daout Baſſa is degraded from his Office, and one Huzein Baſſa newly arriued from the Gouernment of Cairo, aduanced to his place, with promiſe of further examination. Since, the furie once ouer, there hath beene no great ſearch nor diſcouery made. I thinke the Sultans Chequines haue quieted the matter. This new Vizier, a man here without friends, yet very rich, of a ſtubborne and obſtinate nature, reported iuſt in his wayes, but peremptorie and inflexible; Audax, ferox, & prout animum intendit prauus aut induſtrius eadem vi: one from whom all men may expect much good, or much ill; Begins his gouernment roughly, vndertakes to puniſh inſolencies early, and profeſſeth a reformation, or to bee a Sacrifice. A man fit for theſe times that are deſperate: For the worſt will be, that hee muſt at laſt endure their furie. In the meane time he procures a little awe, and hath reſtored the face of Iuſtice: yet I am perſwaded it cannot laſt long, the Ghoſt of Oſman will not bee at reſt, vntill there are ſome Parentalia made vnto him. The nature of this Vizier is vnſupportable; But if he preuaile, and once ſettle, he will anew change the King, and lay an Obligation vpon the Brethren of Oſman; For he will neuer thinke himſelfe ſecure vnder a man gouerned by an inſolent woman, Dominandi auida: And what aſſurance can he haue in that Prince, Cui non iudicium, non odium eſt niſi indita & iuſſa? And though I cannot fore-ſee the particulars, and where the Sore will breake out, yet I am ſure the whole body is ſicke; and Princes of Chriſtendome ſhall haue breath three yeares, before they ſhall haue cauſe to feare this State, whoſe preſent King is Mentis inops, and the next in expectation, a Child, vnfit for action, and all the great men and Souldiers decayed, mutined and corrupted.

Daout Baſſa degraded.

New Vizier ſeuere.

And now tyred with this Tragicall ſight and contemplation, we will commend you to other Pilgrims, who ſhall guide you thorow the Deſarts, to the tops of the holy Mountains, Oreb and Sinai, and after thoſe Holies, recreate your eyes with an admirable Spectacle of the Mamalukes, fine feates of Actiuitie, that profit and pleaſure may conclude this Booke.

CHAP. XIII.

Mount Sinai, Oreb, and the adioyning parts of Arabia, deſcribed out of the foure Iournals of BREIDENBACH, BAVMGARTEN, BELLONIVS, and CHRISTOPHER FVRER of Haimendorf.

* Chriſtop. Furer. Alexandrian Patriarch of the Greekes.

Sues.

Darius Dike.
Red Sea.

*This Red king was Edom, or Eſau, whoſe Land that Sea waſheth (and from which Sal. ſet forth his Ophyrian Voyage) He is moſt likely Author of that name of Red Sea.
Camels.
Corall.
Toro.

THE nine and twentieth of October, 1565. we* ioyned our ſelues to the Carauan, hauing before obtained Letters commendatorie from the Patriarch of the Greekes, which dwelleth at Cairo to the Friers of Mount Sinai. They tell of this Patriarch, that he for proofe of his Religion in contention with a Iew, before the Baſſa fiue and thirtie yeares before, drunke a draught of poyſon without harme, which the Iew doing, dyed. At this time, he was one hundred and three yeares old. I had with me three Pilgrims. Nouember the third, we departed from Cairo, and on the fift, came to the ſhoare of the Red Sea, two miles from which in times paſt Sues flouriſhed. The next day, we ſaw at the right hand of the Red Sea, that ditch which lyeth betwixt it and Nilus, which Darius, and after Ptolomæus made thirtie foote deepe, one hundred foote broad, ſeuen and thirtie miles in length, and there ceaſed, finding the Red Sea higher three cubits, then the Land of Ægypt. The Region is deſart, and not inhabited, wherein they vſe Camels dung for want of Wood. The Water of the Red Sea, is of the colour that other Seas are of. But the Land adioyning, is Red and Mountainous, whence it is called the Red Sea, or from the Sunbeames reflected on that Sea from thoſe Mountaines. Curtius ſaith, from a King called *Erythrus, (which ſignifieth Red.) Here firſt we ſaw the place where the Iſraelites had paſſed thorow that Sea on dry Land. After that, we ſaw Mara, where Moſes by caſting in a piece of wood, made the water ſweete, which ſtill ſo continueth, ſauing that from the neighbour Sea, it is ſomewhat brackiſh: and here our Camels dranke, which in fiue daies they here firſt did, which is the more to be admired for their great burthens, ſome bearing ſixe hundred pounds; others, foure hundred or fiue hundred pounds weight. Here waſhing in the Red Sea, I hurt my foot on a ſharp Corall, whereof here is great ſtore, both Red and White. On the ſeauenth of Nouember, after midnight, was an Eclipſe of the Sunne, and our Ethiopian Companions continued (as long as it continued) beating Baſons. The next day, we went fortie Italian miles: and the day after forſooke the Red Sea, declining on the left hand towards the Mountaines. The tenth, we left the Carauan, which went the right-hand way toward Thoro. Wee went towards the left hand, and in a Valley ſaw that Tree which is called Spina Chriſti, or Gum Arabike, whereof they ſay Chriſts Crowne of Thornes was made. The eleuenth, we ſaw the tops of Mount Sinai, and admired the height thereof. The twelfth, we ſaw a Viper or Aſpe, whitiſh and skaly on the belly, on the backe white and ſpotted, with two little hornes on the fore-head. The thirteenth, we came to the Monaſterie of Saint Katharine in a narrow Valley, at the foot of Mount Sinai, built of ſquare ſtones, founded (as they ſay) by the Emperour Iuſtinian, ſtrong, high, and compaſſed with pleaſant Gardens. The length of it, is one hundred twentie fiue paces. In it we ſaw the Sepulchre of Saint Katharine; after that wee ſaw a Chappell built on that place, where they ſay was the Buſh in which firſt God appeared to Moſes. It hath fifteene Temples, twenty fiue Chappels, and diuers little Cels, in which Greeke Calogeri doe keepe. In the adioyning Valley is a Hill of maruellous aſpect, as if it were all burnt and couered with Aſhes, where (they ſay) Moſes kept Iethros ſheepe. Neere the Monaſtery, before Mount Sinai, is the place in Mount Horeb, in which God commanded Moſes to goe into Egypt to deliuer the Iſraelites.

S. Katharines.

The foureteenth of Nouember, by a wayleſſe and broken way, (which the Monkes by ſteps or ſtaires, ſuch as they are, haue indeuoured to make better) wee aſcended Mount Sinai. And when we had paſſed the two gates, which in old times were ſhut, we came to three Temples or Chappels; one of Saint Barbara, the ſecond of Saint Marina, the third of Elias the Prophet. Round about are ſome houſes, whilome the Monkes dwellings. In Elias his Temple, behind the Altar, is a Caue, in which (they ſay) the Prophet lay hid, when hee fled from Ieſabel. On the left hand, beneath the top of the Mountaine, is the place where Moſes deſired to ſee God. On the top of Mount Sinai, towards the Eaſt is a little Temple; and on the left hand a Chappell. Heere entred, our Monke-guide ſaid prayers in Greeke, and we ſung the Decalogue, Lords Prayer and Creed in German Rithmes. And this is the place where God gaue to Moſes the Tables of the Law, written with the finger of God. There is a Chappell in which the Mahumetans doe their deuotions. Eight paces thence is a Caue, in which Moſes after his ſecond fortie daies Faſt, receiued the Tables of the Law. After theſe ſights, wee deſcended the Hill, where comming to a certaine Ciſterne, we refreſhed our ſelues with meat. And going a little lower, we ſaw a broken and hollow Rocke on the left hand, wherein Iohn the Ægyptian Hermite liued with great auſteritie, and writ the Booke, called Scala Paradiſi. It cannot bee entred but creeping: within on the right hand, is a ſtone as it were a bed, and another againſt it like a ſeat; aboue, a hole whereby light deſcendeth, ſufficient to reade by. Deſcending hence on the left hand, in a certaine Valley is the Temple of Saint Iohn Baptiſt, with a Garden, Vineyard, and little houſe. Againſt it is another Temple of Saint Anne; and on the left hand, on the top of the Rocke, is a Caue couered with ſtone, in which two Brethren of a King comming to ſee the place, ſetled their abode till death.

Mount Sinai. Bellonius calleth this Mount Horeb. So Baumgarten, and indeed all theſe hils are part of Sinai, which yet κατ᾽ἐξοχὴν is giuen to the higheſt top, which ſome for deuotion to that Saint, now call Saint Katharines Mount.

Rocke of Iohn the Hermite.

Βασιλβρονε.

After this we aſcended another Hill, whence beſides many Regions the Red Sea may be ſeene. In the Valley thereof is Pantaleons Temple, & an Hermitage. Hence with great labour we deſcended into a Valley, by a broken and dangerous way, ouer againſt Saint Katharines Mount, wherein is the Monaſterie of fortie Fathers and diuers houſes, ſometimes the habitations of Hermits. There is a Church of Saint Onophrius, and a pleaſant Garden, with various and excellent fruits. Hauing lien all night in this Monaſterie, the next morning, with farre greater labour and danger then before, we climbed the high and inacceſsible hill of Saint Katharine: on the top whereof is a ſharpe Rocke, whereon toward the Eaſt is built a low Chappell, fifteene foote long, and ten broad, in the midſt whereof is a Monument, in which ſometime the body of Saint Katharine was kept. Heere our Monke ſaid his prayers, and we ſung Veni Sancti Spiritus in our vulgar tongue. This Mountaine of Saint Katharine is farre higher then the other two, Horeb and Sinai, which both ſeeme hillocks, not hils to this. In the top we looked to the Red Sea, and Thora. Deſcending neere the Nets of Horeb, we ſaw the Rocke which being ſtricken with Moſes his Rod, powred forth water like a Fountaine. In the former part are yet ſeene twelue rifts or clefts, and as many behind, but leſſe perſpicuous: but the former part doth ſtill ſo liuely repreſent the tokens of the miracle, as if water had but lately guſhed thence. That former part is twelue cubits, the whole thickneſſe fiftie two foot. On the left hand of the Valley, is the Temple of the Holy Apoſtle, with a notable Garden, and againſt it another of Saint George, with a flouriſhing Garden. Betwixt this Temple and the Monaſtery of Saint Katharines, is a round Caue cut into the Rocke, fiue and thirtie foote large, in which they ſay Aaron made the golden Calfe. The laſt night we abode in Saint Katharines Monaſterie: and the ſixteenth of Nouember departing, paſſed by Raphidim, the eleuenth Manſion of the Iſraelites, and thence by diuers places of their two yeares Peregrination, where the Tabernacle and Arke were made.

Sinai.

Monaſtery of Saint Katharine higher then Sinai and Horeb: by Sinai vnderſtand ſome other riſing of that hill, beſides the higheſt of all: for all is Sinai, as the following Authors ſhew: and this of S. Katharine the higheſt top of them all.

The eighteenth we came to Thora, which Citie is on the ſhoare of the Red Sea of no luſtre; the Hauen ſmall, in which ſhips laden with Spices out of Arabia, Abaſſia, and India, reſort. In this Citie wee ſaw a Mermaids skinne taken there many yeares before, which in the lower part ends Fiſh-faſhion: of the vpper part, onely the Nauill and Breaſts remaine, the armes and head being loſt. The Inhabitants are moſt Chriſtians, liue like the Greekes, and performe their Holies in the Arabicke tongue. No Iew may enter this Citie, nor goe to Mount Sinai, the Chriſtians hauing priuiledge (as we were told) to kill them. I ſaw there one Iew which farmed the Cuſtomes of the Chriſtians. The twentieth of Nouember, hauing the wonted teſtimonie of

Tore

Mermaid.

the chiefe of the Monaſterie, and giuen him certaine Duckets of Gold, we departed from Thora, and in our departure to Cairo, not farre thence ſaw the twelue Fountaines, and ſeuentie Palme-trees where the Iſraelites encamped: But the trees are now much more. The foure and twentieth we found the Carauan new arriued where we had left them. The nine and twentieth, wee paſſed the Valley againſt Pihahiroth, betwixt Magdalo and the Sea againſt Baalſephon. The thirtieth, we came ſafe to Cairo. At this time was no froſt there, nor wet as with vs, but all freſh and flouriſhing, the Corne and Fruits ripe, as with vs in Summer. The Graſſe groweth not as with vs, but is ſowne by hand, &c.

Exod. 14.

Egyptian ſeaſons.

For the better vnderſtanding of theſe Relations, and for addition of things heere omitted, I haue thought good to giue you Bellonius, which almoſt twentie yeares before had made the ſame Voyage, and Breidenbachius, then Chamberlaine, and after Deane of Mentz, which Anno 1483. had trauelled out of the Holy Land to Sinai, and thence to Ægypt; and laſtly, Martin Baumgarten, a German Knight, whoſe peregrination hapned Anno 1507. I haue alſo here added for further Illuſtration, the Map of the Iſraelites peregrination in the Deſart, here after mentioned. 10

HONDIVS his Map of the Iſraelites peregrination in the Deſart.

PEREGRINATIO ISRAELITARŪ IN DESERTO
MARIS MEDITERRANEI PARS. Hebræis MARE MAGNUM
Aegyptiū mare
Pelusium
Gerrum
Sirbonis palus
Solitudo Paran
Astracina
Antedon
Gazeorum portus
Rhmocotura
Tanis
ÆGYPTI SCHEN PARS
Pithon
On Rahmeſes
Succoth
DESERTUM SCHUR
Etham desertum
1 Etham
2
3
4 Marah
5 Elim
6 Jam Suph
7 Sin
8 Daphcah
9 Aluſch
10 Rephidim
11 Sinai Mons
12 Sepulchra concupiſcē tiæ quæ Inceſſo
13 Chaſeroth
14 Rithmah
15 Rimmō Perete
16 Libna
17 Riſſa
18 Kehelatha
19 Sepher mons
20 Harada
21 Makeheloth
22 Tachath
23 Tarah
24 Mitcha
25
26 Moſeroth
27 Benejaacon
28 Gilgad mons
29 Iotbatha
30 Habrona
31 Herzion Gaber
32 Sin vel Cades deſerti
33 Chor Mons
34 Tzalmona
35 Punon
36 Oboth
37 Jeabarim
38 Dibon Gad
39 Halmon deblathaim
40 Habarim mons
41 Campeſtria Moabitarū
Pugna cum Amalechitis
Arabici Sinus pars quod et Mare Rubrum & Iam Suph id est Mare Algoſum dicitur
Ioppe
TERRÆ CANANÆÆ PARS
Accaron
Azotus
Aſcalon
Gaza
Berſabe
Fons viventis
Cadeſch Barneba
Chaſmona
Hierosolyma
Hebron
Iericho
Gilgal
Aſphaltites lacus quod Salsum et Mare Mortuum
Moabitarum Regio
Montes Sehir
IDUMAEA quæ et EDOM
Midianitæ
Ephraim
Manaſſe
Biniamin
Gad
Gerſonitæ
Cahathitæ
Simeon
Dan
Merarite
Aſcher
Ruben
Aron
Moſes
Nephtalim
Sabulon
Iuda
Iſachar
Mill. Germanica. Duytsche mylen
5 10 15
Horæ Itineris. Uren gaens
5 10 15 20
65 66 67 68 69 70
32 31 30 29

Bellonius in company of the Lord of Fumet, attended with twentie Ianizaries for his Guard, 60 went from Cairo 1547*. Their prouiſions were water of Nilus, a Camels load of Bisket, and many Muttons killed, and the fleſh ſhred (the bones being taken out) into ſmall gobbits, and boyled with Onions and Suet till all the liquor was conſumed, then ſeaſoned with Salt and Spices, and put vp in Veſſels: which continued ſo freſh, that fifteene daies after being heated with Onions, they ſeemed as freſh as if they had beene firſt dreſſed. It was in September when the Bellonius.

* So it ſeemeth by his Preface.

Prouiſion for food in the Deſart.

the nights were very cold, and the day exceeding hot, for which cauſe they trauelled much by night, and in three iourneys came to the Well of Suez, in a Caſtle a mile and halfe from the Towne, the water of which is brackiſh. They haue there a huge Ciſterne for rayne-water, which ſeldome happeneth, but then with great vehemence, ſo that once or twice a yeere it is filled. The Well is deep, and the water is drawne by a wheele turned with Oxen; vpon the wheele are two ropes with many Pitchers faſtned, which emptie themſelues into a Ciſterne vnderneath; a thing vſuall in Egyptian Gardens. By the way as we trauelled grew Ambroſia, Sena, Roſe of Ierico, Colocynthis, Acacia *, a peculiar kind of Geniſta, and many other vnknowne plants. Beyond Suez we entred a wide Plaine all greene with Sena, growing of it ſelfe. Wee found Vipers, and Cameleons differing from the Egyptian, white and red: Capars as high as dwarfe Fig-trees, the Capars as big as Egges and the ſeed biting like Pepper; the leaues continue greene perpetually, the Wooll is finer then Silke, and whiter then Cotton. The firſt Village which after Suez we encountred in our way toward Sinai was called Pharagou, not hauing aboue three or foure houſes builded, the people dwelling vnder Palm-trees, (for it ſeldome raineth) or vnder Rockes in Caues. Here were Pomgranats, Oliues, Figs, Peares, and other Trees profitable by fruit and ſhade, The Cattell and Fowles are there much leſſe then in Egypt.

Deep Well of Suez.

* Spina Chriſti, or Gummi Arab.

Capars.

Pharagou.

Tree-caue-dwellers.

The aſcent of the Mountaine is by hand-made ſteps for Camels; for Horſes can very hardly paſſe: which when we had aſcended, we had two miles to paſſe betwixt round hills, here and there diſperſed, of differing quantitie, before wee came at the Monaſterie of Saint Katharine; and although we began to aſcend the Hill at breake of day, it was after-noone before wee came thither. The Monkes are Chriſtian Maronites, which obſerue the Greeke Rites, of diuers Nations, Syrians, Greekes, and Arabians. Pilgrims haue no place of entertaynment but the Monaſterie, which is ſituate at the foot of Mount Horeb, watered by a Spring thence flowing, cleere, ſweet, coole, and excellent. It is walled with high walls againſt enemies, and hath alſo a Moſqued for Arabs and Turkes. In the vallies are pleaſant Gardens, where Vines, Pulſe, Herbs, and fruitfull Trees grow, eſpecially Almonds. Mount Sinai when the Sunne riſeth, ouer-ſhadoweth Horeb, which is from it a mile and halfe; and on the top of Sinai yee may view ouer Horeb the Region beyond full of Rockes and Hills, vnto the Eaſterne Plaine where Ieruſalem ſtandeth: to the Weſt, nothing but Arabia Deſerta; and North-weſt, the Region waſhed by the Mediterranean Sea (but not the Sea it ſelfe) fiue dayes iourney thence. Southward are eaſily diſcerned both the ſhoares of the Red Sea extended like an Engliſh Bow, and the Æthiopian Deſarts and Mountaines, where ſtands the Monaſterie of Saint Macarius, and Saint Antonie. When wee came to the top wee found it hard ſtone of Iron colour, yet not without plants: for Abſinthium ſeriphium, which beareth the Worme-ſeed, Panax aſclepium, Conyza, and Eupatorium Arabum groweth about the Mountaine. In height it expells Oeta and Ida, but ſeemes lower then Olympus. The Plaine on the top is not much greater then that of the greateſt Pyramis, that is, foure paces, but a little lower much larger, and is aſcended with great difficultie. It is not ſo cold as the Alpes, nor ſo hot as the low Plaines of Europe. We lay all night in S. Katharines Monaſterie, and the next day were ſhewed the penſile receptacle of S. Katharines bones, hanging in the Church, which is adorned with goodly Pictures and Relicks. The Rock which Moſes ſtrucke with his Rod is a ſolid ſtone, right vp, of colour and qualitie like Thebaick Stone, of which Obelisks and Pompey's Pillar in Alexandria were made, then which no Stone more reſiſts Iron.

Sinai.

Monkes or Caloieri.

Height of Sinai.

Plants.

* The Author doubted of the truth.

But the Legend of Saint Katharine is better knowne by Deane Breidenbach, a man ſeeming more deuout then Bellonius, who with the Earle of Solms, and Philip de Bichen a German Knight, firſt viſited Ieruſalem, and the holy places of Palaſtina; and thence paſſed together to Sinai, aboue ſixtie yeeres before. Their iourney was by Gazera, where they ſaw a huge Fig-tree which bare figs ſeuen times in the yeere. Thence wee departed (ſayth he) on the ninth of September. On the eleuenth, wee paſſed a ſandy Plaine, ſo large that we could ſee no end, but the Sea on the Weſt. At laſt, wee came into Cawath or Cades, where wee had raine, which there is ſeldome. Now were wee come into a true Deſart, vtterly without all ſigne of habitation. We ſaw ſmokes ſometimes, but they aroſe of ſands moued with the wind. On the twelfth, we came to Gayon: on the thirteenth to the Brook Wadalar, where was ſtore of Coloquintida. On the fourteenth, to Magare and Gebelbelel, where we ſaw nor man, nor beaſt, nor bird, but Oſtriches. The fifteenth, into a very cold Deſart, the earth white like Chalke, and the ſand like burnt Lime, called Mynſchene. The ſixteenth, wee could ſee no end toward the Eaſt, and it is ſaid to reach without habitation two moneths iourney, yea as ſome thinke, to the torrid Zone which continueth to the terreſtriall Paradiſe: that day we came to Alberok. The ſeuenteenth to Meſmar, to the foot of the Hill Caleb which ſeemeth made by hand. The eighteenth, we trauelled the Salt Land, where the deaw, hills, vallies, ſtones, and ſand, are like Salt. The nineteenth, we came to mountaynous places, and ſaw Mount Sinai and Horeb on the left hand, and the Red Sea on the right, foure dayes iourney diſtant. The way was rockie and præcipitious. The twentieth, the Spina Chriſti with their ſent refreſhed vs, but the Mountaines were rockie and barren, of colour betwixt blacke and red, and the ſtones in the Sun ſhine ſeemed as if anoynted with Oyle. There we ſaw a great beaſt bigger then a Camell, and our Breidenbachs Iourney. Anno 1483.

Gaza.

Dreames of a burning Zone, and earthly Paradiſe.

Note.

Qui amant ipſi ſibi ſomnia fingunt.

Guide ſaid it was an Vnicorne: and there we ſaw a Shepheard with his flocke, which ſeemed to vs a maruellous ſight. At euen, wee ſtayed at a place called Scholie. This comfort wee had from our Ladie and S. Katharine, that after mid-night we ſaw a Star brighter then the reſt, to ariſe from the South, which we called S. Katharines Star, and directed vs before day ſtanding ouer Mount Sinai. On the one and twentieth, we ſaw Mount Sinai, higher then the other Mountayns, and came to Abalharoch, a Plain euery way enuironed with hils, where Moſes kept Iethroes ſheep. The two and twentieth, wee came to another Plaine of the Red Sand, and the Hils were red, reaching to the Roots of Sinai. Wee had a very bad way, and entred the Monaſterie of Saint Katharine, at the Root of Mount Sinai.

Miracle of our Ladie, or rather a Monkes Tale.

Indulgences.

The ſpecialties of Horeb.

The foure and twentieth of September, taking victuals with vs for two dayes, wee aſcended Horeb, and there ſaw the Fountayne, which when the Monkes were once leauing the place for Todes, Serpents and noyſome Creatures moleſting them, they were by the bleſſed Virgin commanded to ſtay, and doubting whether it might be an illuſion, as they were praying, this Fountayne ſprang vp amongſt them, and ſtill continueth: and here is our Ladies Chappell. We paſſed higher to an Arch of ſtone, which they ſay, no Iew can paſſe. Then comming to the toppe of that Hill wee came to the Plaine whence Horeb riſeth without coniunction of any other Hill, where are three Chappels within one wall, of Marina, Elizeus and Elias: in each of which is ſeuen yeares Indulgence, and as many Lents. On the top of Horeb is a little faire Chappell ſhut with an Iron doore, where the Decalogue in two Tables was giuen; wee put off our ſhooes to enter, and proſtrating our ſelues, kiſſed the place where Moſes receiued the Law. Fifteene paces off is the Caue where he faſted fortie dayes. Ouer it a Moſchee, where the Moores daily reſort in honour of Moſes. There is a great Ciſterne, called Moſes Well. This Mountayne riſeth round, and is not coherent to other Mountaynes, and from the Monaſterie to the top thereof are about ſeuen thouſand ſteps aſcending, beſides thoſe which are gone on plaine ground. In the former Chappell is plenarie Remiſſion of all ſinnes.

S. Katharines Legend. See hereof in J. di Caſtro ſup. pag. 1141.

The top of Sinai, now called S. Katharines Mountayne.

Monaſtery impoſſible to bee found. Friers, Lyers, this is true.

Plenary pardons.

Hauing refreſhed our ſelues with food we deſcended towards the Weſt, a dangerous way, and came to the Monaſtery of fortie Saints, and after a little reſt aſcended Sinai by a harder way, by Breaches, Rockes, Ouer-hanging Stones, Precipices, Steepes and exceeding heate of the Sun; refreſhed in the way by two Springs. After much ſweat wee came to the toppe on the fiue and twentieth of September, euen to the holy place where the Angels had brought from Alexandria, the bodie of the glorious Virgin and Martyr Katharine, in which place it lay three hundred yeares guarded by Angels, till it was reuealed to a certaine Abbot, that it ſhould be thence tranſlated to the Monaſterie where now it is. We with much ioy kiſſed the place, and meaſured our bodies in the place, which is a ſtonie Plaine, ſtill hauing the Impreſſion of a humane bodie, not made by Arte, but formed by the touch of that ſacred bodie. The Red Sea ſeemed but three leagues diſtant, being two dayes Iourney. We might thence ſee the Deſerts of Thebaida, where Anthonie and the old Heremites liued, and diuers barren Ilands in the Red Sea, and the Deſerts of Elim and Sin. Alſo a place in which they ſaid was a Monaſtery, the Bels whereof might be heard at all Canonicall houres, but the houſe no man could find. In the deſcent we came to Saint Katharines Well, and cut twigs of that kind (they ſaid) whereof Moſes burning-not-burned-Buſh was, good for the falling ſickneſſe: After much labour wee came to the Monaſterie of fortie Saints which the Pagans had martyred, and now there are but two Monkes of Saint Katharines which keepe there. The Edifices are of Mudde and Reeds, except the Church and the Wall encompaſſing. In their Garden is a Chappell in the Caue where Onophrius liued an Anchorite. Here we did eate, and then compaſſed Oreb, to returne to Saint Katharines Monaſterie. Wee found at the foot of the Mount, the Rocke of Oreb, where Moſes ſmote twice and water flowed. On the ſixteenth of September, we confeſſed our ſelues, and prepared to ſee the Relikes of Saint Katharine, and the Tombe being opened, kiſſed the ſame, and rubbed our Iewels. The Tombe was in the right ſide of the Quire, and therein the head, two hands and ſome other members, the reſt diſperſed thorow the World. Neare to it is the Chappell where the burning Buſh grew. In both theſe places is plenary pardon, as alſo many Chappels thereabouts haue great Indulgence. In the twelue Pillars of the Church are many Relikes, and their Pictures hanging by. There is alſo a Moskee.

Manna.

The Monkes of Saint Katharines, are of Saint Baſils Order: they vſe Brazen Rings in ſtead of Bels: they are Proprietaries, buy, ſell, worke with their hands, contentions continually, abſtinent in dyet, vſe rough Garments: in their Garden is the place where the Golden Calfe was made, the Stone againſt which Moſes brake the Tables, the Water of Curſing which Moſes made the people drinke, and we ſaw a Calfe of Stone ſtanding on the toppe of a Hill therein, which they ſaid (and what can bee ſaid which ſome Fooles will not beleeue?) that if any went vp, hee could not find it, whereupon ſome ſay, that the Deuill carryed the Molten Calfe thither. In this Valley and the others adioyning to Sinai, is found Manna only in Auguſt and September, which the Monkes gather and ſell to Strangers. It fals toward day like Dew or Froſt on the graſſe and leaues, and beeing gathered runnes together like Pitch, and at the heate of the Sunne or Fire is melted, taſteth like Honey, and cleaues to the Teeth. The Abbot of that Monaſterie is conſtrained ned to giue food to one hundred Arabs daily. All Nations may be receiued into their Order, but Iacobites and Armenians; but beeing receiued muſt obſerue the Greeke Rites. The ſeuen and twentieth of September wee departed. The firſt of October, wee came to the common way which leades from Gazeia to Cairo, and by another way to Thor, where the Indian ſhips arriue without Iron-workes, becauſe they paſſe by Mountaynes and Rockes of Load-ſtone which would attract them. Wee came to the place in the Red Sea, where the Iſraelites paſſed on dry Land. Next day going along by the ſhoare, we came to the imperfect workes, whereby the Red Sea ſhould haue beene conueyed to Nilus.

Tale of Load ſtones.

Martinus à Baumgarten, the fift of October, 1507. departed from Cairo, and came on the tenth to the Ditch, and the other paſſage. There are ſeene ſtill to this day; * as Oroſius alſo teſtifieth the foot-prints of Chariots and Horſemen on the ſhoare, which howſoeuer by any confuſed, ſoone recouer the like forme. On the ſeuenteenth, we came to Saint Katharines. Thence in the night by Moone light, we aſcended Horeb by almoſt ſeuen thouſand ſtaires of ſtone, beſides the greater part naturall. Neere to the Church where Moſes receiued the Tables (the Mountayne and others adioyning ſtill ſhine like to molten Copper) is a Moſchee of Saracens ouer the place where he faſted fortie dayes in a Caue, which Caue the Saracens ſtill vſe to get Prophets, and account the iſſue there generated, holy. Deſcending from Horeb, by the Weſt we came to a Valley twixt it and Sinai, in which was the Monaſtery of the forty Saints, where hauing fed we aſcended Sinai with great danger, with wounded hands, ſliding feete by the looſeneſſe of the ſtones, creeping knees, breathleſſe breſts; the Monkes our Guides ſcarſly able to diſcerne the true Mountayne amongſt ſo many Hill-tops, * of like ſemblance. The way beeing marked out by certaine ſtones ſet by Pilgrimes, brought vs at laſt to the top, where a freſh Spring refreſhed vs. Thence returned to the Monaſterie of the fortie Monkes, and compaſſing Horeb we came to the Rocke in the Root of Horeb, which Moſes ſmote twice: a ſquare ſtone, with one ſharpe point faſt to the earth, with twelue marks according to the number of the twelue Tribes. A little off is the place where Dathan and Abiron were ſwallowed: by night we got to S. Katharines, ſo wearie, that the next day we could ſcarſly ſtand on our feet. In our returne, we were often ſet on by Arabs, which liue in ſubiection to no man, wearied with the Camels hard pace, and more with Famine (which made vs ſometime halfe aſleepe, and dreaming of victuals, reaching to receiue them, fall off our beaſts) we got at laſt to Cairo. There wee ſaw a Ziraph, ſpeckled white and higher then any beaſt I had euer ſeene, the necke ſo long, that it exceeds a mans armes twice ſtretched out, the head of a Cubit, the breſt high, the backe low, eyes pleaſing, eating any thing which was giuen it. We ſaw alſo an Indian Oxe of a ſhorter bodie and greater head then ours, with great blunt knottie Hornes. The Mamalukes are of ſuch autheritie, that they doe what they liſt to any Saracen, turne him out of his houſe, and dwell in it as long as they pleaſe. No Saracen may ride or beare Armes in the Citie, but are ſlaues to theſe ſlaues, giue way, riſe, kiſſe their knees and feet, (their hands as a great great bountie.) Their mad Men and Penitents are eſteemed Saints, and may goe into any houſe and eate, drinke, yea, lye with the woman freely, and that Iſſue forgotten is eſteemed holy: they are honoured whiles they liue, and when they are dead haue Monuments and Temples, and to touch or bury them is a matter of eſteeme. One wee ſaw ſitting as naked as hee was borne on the Sands, and heard him commended for that he medled not carnally with Women or Boyes, but Female Aſſes or Mules.

* No late Writer hath mentioned this, and I doubt out of Oroſius, it hath growne into the Authors Text.

Prophane holies.

Sacra ſacerrima.

* This ſheweth the reaſon of Furrers, affirming Saint Katharints to bee a higher hill then Sinai, which is but the higheſt top of Sinai, whereof are many tops.

Camelopardalis.

Mamalukes tyrannie.

Egyptian ſlauerie.

Beaſtly Saint.

Of the Mamalukes hee reporteth, that Tongobardinus the Soldan entertayned him in his Palace, ſhewed him his houſe of women, whereof thirtie fiue were there preſent, dallying and talking, exceeding fragrant. The next day ſhewed him a great ſight, where almoſt ſixtie thouſand Mamalukes were aſſembled, ſtanding with great reuerence and ſilence all in white and like habit. The Soldan alſo with a large blacke beard horned or mitred Diademe in a Summer open Roome and white Raiment: not farre from him his Pope (whom they call Calipha) Socienus ſate, a browne man, and beneath him the Turkiſh Embaſſador. Beneath the Caſtle was a large Plaine prepared before to that purpoſe, in the middeſt whereof were three heapes of Sand, fiftie paces diſtant, and in each a Speare erected with a marke to ſhoote at, and the like ouer againſt them, with ſpace betweene for ſixe Horſes to runne abreſt. Heere did the yonger Mamalukes gallantly adorned, vpon their Horſes running a full careere, yeeld ſtrange experiments of their skill, not one miſſing the marke, firſt, with caſting Darts, and after with their Arrowes, as they ran: and laſtly, trying their ſtaues. Others after this, in the like Race of their running Horſes, ſhot with like dexteritie diuers Arrowes backwards and forward. Others in the midſt of their Race alighted three times, and (their Horſes ſtill running) mounted againe, and hit the Marke neuertheleſſe. Others did hit the ſame, ſtanding on their Horſes thus ſwiftly running. Others three times vnbent their Bowes, and thrice againe bent them whiles their Horſes ran, and miſſed not the Marke: neither did others, which amidſt their Race, lighted downe on either ſide, and againe mounted themſelues: no, nor they which in their ſwifteſt courſe leaped and turned themſelues backwards on their Horſes, and then (their Horſes ſtill running) turned themſelues forwards. There were, which whiles their Horſe ranne, vngirt their Saddles thrice, at each time ſhooting, and then againe girding their Saddles, and neuer miſſing the Marke. Some ſitting in their Tongobardinus his Wiues.

Socienus the Calipha.

Mamalukes actiuitie.

their Saddles, leaped backwards out of them, and turning ouer their heads, ſetled themſelues againe in their Saddles and ſhot, as the former, three times. Others laid themſelues backwards on their running Horſes, and taking their tayles, put them into their mouthes, and yet forgot not their ayme in ſhooting. Some after euery ſhot drew out their Swords, and flouriſhed them about their heads, and againe ſheathed them. Others ſitting betwixt three Swords on the right ſide, and as many on the left, thinly clothed, that without great care euery motion would make way for death, yet before and behind them touched the Marke. One ſtood vpon two Horſes running very ſwiftly, his feet looſe, and ſhot alſo at once three Arrowes before, and againe three behind him. Another ſitting on a Horſe neither bridled nor ſadled, as hee came at euery Marke aroſe and ſtood vpon his feete, and on both hands hitting the Marke, ſate downe againe three times. A third ſitting on the bare Horſe, when hee came to the Marke lay vpon his backe and lifted vp his legges, and yet miſſed not his ſhoot. After all this they ranne with like ſwiftneſſe (for all theſe things, which, where is the Vaulter that can doe on his Imaginarie Horſe ſtanding ſtill? theſe did running) and with their ſtaues carryed away thoſe Markes, as triumphing ouer their innocent Enemie. One of them was killed with a fall, and two ſore wounded in theſe their Feats of Actiuitie. They had an old graue man which was their Teacher. If I haue long detayned thee in this Spectacle, remember that the Race of Mamalukes ſhould not bee forgotten, the rather, becauſe their name is now razed out of the World; and this may ſeeme an Epitaph on their Sepulchre, after whom none perhaps are left able to doe the like, nor in all Franciſcus Modius his Triumphall Pandects to be paralelled.

The end of the eighth Booke.

PEREGRINATIONS, AND DISCOVERIES BY LAND OF ASSYRIA, ARMENIA, PERSIA, INDIA, ARABIA, AND OTHER IN-LAND COVNTRIES OF ASIA, BY Engliſhmen and Others; Moderne and Ancient.

THE NINTH BOOKE.

CHAP. I.

A brieſe Compendium of the Hiſtorie of Sir ANTHONY SHERLEYS Trauels into Perſia: And employed thence Ambaſſadour to the Chriſtian Princes; * penned by himſelfe, and recommended to his Brother Sir ROBERT SHERLEY, ſince that ſent on like Ambaſſage by the King of Perſia.

* This Summarie is alſo in his owne words, but many things which pertayne rather to his minde then bodies trauels, in diſcourſes of cauſes, &c. are left out not for want of worth, but of roome: this worke looking another way. The ſtudious may reade the Author himſelfe, the Hiſtorie we haue extracted

§. I.

The Cauſes of his going to Perſia, and ſtrange Accidents in the way.

IN my firſt yeares, my friends beſtowed on me thoſe Learnings which were fit for a Gentlemans ornament, without directing them to an Occupation, and when they were fit for agible things, they beſtowed them and me on my Princes Seruice, in which I ran many courſes, of diuers Fortunes, according to the condition of the Warres, in which, as I was moſt exerciſed, ſo was I moſt ſubiect to accidents: With what opinion I carryed my ſelfe (ſince the cauſes of good or ill muſt be in my ſelfe, and that a thing without my ſelfe) I leaue it to them to ſpeake; my places yet in authoritie, in thoſe occaſions were euer of the beſt; in which, if I committed errour it was contrarie to my will, and a weakneſſe in my iudgement; which, notwithſtanding, I euer induſtriated my ſelfe to make perfect, correcting my owne ouer-ſights by the moſt vertuous Examples I could make choice of: Amongſt which, as there was not a Subiect of more worthineſſe and vertue, for ſuch Examples to grow from, then the euer-liuing in honour and condigne eſtimation, the Earle of Eſſex: as my reuerence and regard to his rare Qualities was exceeding; ſo I deſired (as much as my humilitie might anſwere, with ſuch an eminencie) to make him the patterne of my ciuill life, and from him to draw a worthy modell of all my actions. And as my true loue to him, did transforme mee from my many imperfections, to be, as it were, an imitator of his vertues; ſo his affection was ſuch to mee, that hee was not onely contented, I ſhould doe ſo; but in the true Nobleneſſe of his minde gaue mee liberally

Earle of Eſſex.

Likelihood of wars betwixt the Pope and Cæſare, for the Dutchy of Ferrara.

the beſt Treaſure of his mind in counſelling me ; his fortune to helpe me forward, and his verie care to beare me vp in all thoſe courſes, which might giue honour to my ſelfe, and inworthy the name of his friend : in ſo much, that after many actions, into which (peraduenture) he prouoked my owne ſlackneſſe. The Duke of Ferrara dying, and leauing Don Cæſare d'Eſte Inheritor of that Principalitie, who by his birth could indeed challenge nothing iuſtly being a Baſtard ; notwithſtanding, in the worlds opinion, hee was moſt likely to haue beene eſtabliſhed in that ſucceſſion, through the long continuance of the gouernment in that name. The Earle holding opinion, that the Dukes greateſt neceſſitie at the firſt muſt be of incouragement, and Captaines ſent me preſently (though the leaſt amongſt many) accompanied with diuers Souldiers of approued valour, and procured the Count Maurice, Generall of the States Army, to write him Letters of as much comfort, as could be giuen from ſo braue a Prince, and ſo famous an Eſtate: and though my iourney was vnder-taken in the dead of Winter, and I left no paines vntaken to accelerate it; yet before I could arriue in Italy, I found the Duke giuen ouer to quieter reſolutions, and Ferrara yeelded to the Pope; himſelfe ſatisfying himſelfe with Modena & Rhegium, of which he now beareth the Title. Which when I had aduertiſed the Earle of, as he who neuer had his own thoughts limited, within any bounds of honorable and iuſt ambition. So he alſo deſired, that thoſe whom he had choſen into a neereneſſe of affection, ſhould alſo anſwere both his owne conceit of them, and ſatisfie the world in his election of them : wherefore, not willing I ſhould returne, and turne ſuch a voyce as was raiſed of my going to nothing ; as vnwilling that I ſhould by a vaine expence of Time, Money and Hope, be made a ſcorne to his, and (through him) to my enemies : He propoſed vnto me (after a ſmall relation, which I made vnto him from Venice) the Voyage of Perſia. Hauing with theſe Aduertiſements receiued ſtrength to my owne mind, large meanes, and Letters of fauour and credit to the Company of Merchants at Aleppo.

HONDIVS his Map of Candie.

I. Corfu pars Græciæ
Corfu
Cefalonæ pars
ZANTE
MILO
NICSIA
SCARPANTO
SEPTE 53 NTRIO
51
52
54
55
MARE DE CANDIA
OCCIDENS
ORIENS
Falconera
Standia
Retimo
C. Spada
Cecerigo
Territorium Caneæ
Retimi territorium
Terri toriu.
Candia
Sittia terri torium
Laberinto
Gaidronisi
MARIS MEDITERRANEI PARS
CANDIA
Milliaria Italica
10
20
30
MERI 53 DIES

I imbarked my ſelfe at Venice for Aleppo, in a Venetian ſhip, called the Morizell, the foure and twentieth of May, 1599. Fiue and twentie daies the ſhip was ſayling betweene Malmocko the Port of Venice, and Zant; in which ſpace one of the worſt in the Ship, a Paſſenger to Cyprus, vſed moſt ſcandalous ſpeeches of her Maieſtie, which being brought vnto me, not onely moued with the dutifull zeale which a Subiect oweth to his Prince; but euen with that reſpect which euery Gentleman oweth to a Lady, I commanded one of my people to giue him a fit reward for ſo vile an abuſe: which was no ſooner done, but the Ship was all in an vprore. And though the cauſe of the act was iuſt, and ſo vnderſtood by diuers principall Merchants, which went to Zant; and that the puniſhment was nothing proportionable to the ſceleratneſſe of the fact; yet through the inſtigation of one Hugo de Potſo, a Portugall Factor, which was going to Ormus, (though they ſhewed all to be ſatisfied, becauſe they durſt doe no other, yet) when we were to haue departed in the Ship from Zant, they would no more receiue vs, ſo that we were forced to hire a Carramoſall to carrie vs to Candy, where we receiued moſt honorable entertainment, (the comming of Strangers thither being a thing ſo vnuſuall, that the Duke deſired to ſhew the Magnificence of the great Signiorie to vs that came firſt, and peraduenture ſhould bee the laſt for a long time.

Duke of Candy vnder the ſtate of Venice.

From thence in the ſame Carramoſall we departed to Cyprus and Paphos, where wee found nothing to anſwere the famous Relations giuen by ancient Hiſtories of the excellency of that Iland, but the name onely, (the borbarouſneſſe of the Turke, and Time, hauing defaced all the Monuments of Antiquitie) no ſhew of ſplendor, no habitation of men in a faſhion, nor poſſeſſors of the ground in a Principalitie; but rather Slaues to cruell Maſters, or Priſoners ſhut vp in diuers priſons: ſo grieuous is the burthen of that miſerable people, and ſo deformed is the ſtate of that Noble Realme. Notwithſtanding, the Redemption of that place and people were moſt facile (being but foure thouſand Turkes in the whole Iland.)

Cyprus.

From Paphos we went to the Salines in a little hired Barke, where we found the Morizell, in which wee came to Zant. The Portugall and his Complices preſently went on ſhoare to the Subbaſſa of the place, (for ſo is called the Gouernor there) and told him diuers Pirats who had loſt their ſhips, were come into the Harbour in a ſmall Boat, amongſt whom were ſome Boyes and Youths, worth much Money; beſides, I know not what Iewels and Treaſure we had amongſt vs, with the which he would giue him a good preuent alſo, if he would ſend ſome of his Souldiers and take vs. At this Oration of his, were preſent certaine Armenian Paſſengers, who had knowne vs in the ſhip, which moued with the enormitie of ſo vile an act (that Chriſtians ſhould ſell and betray Chriſtians to Turkes, and that vpon no cauſe of offence, which they were witneſſes of, we ſhould be perſecuted with ſuch a kind of inhumane crueltie) with all ſpeed poſſible hired a Boat themſelues for Alexandretta, came with it vnto vs, prouided in it victuals for vs, and the Maſters themſelues to loſe no time; and beſeeching vs, with teares in their eyes, to flie from thence with all ſpeed poſſible, relating vnto vs the ſcelerat Treaſon conſpired againſt vs, and our imminent perill. Wherefore we inſtantly changed into that Boat, and perceiuing a Frigat a farre off, rowing towards vs for haſte, left moſt of our things behind vs, and yet could not make ſo much ſpeed, but that the Ianizaries which were in the Frigat, and chaſed vs, beſtowed ſome ſhot vpon vs, and had peraduenture ouertaken vs, if the night had not ended their chaſing vs, and our dangers.

A ſtrange deliuerance.
Wickedneſſe of a Portugall.

This Boat in which we were, was an ordinary Paſſenger betweene Cyprus and Alexandretta, a ſmall way off, onely a night and a halfe ſayling, and halfe a daies ſayling: So that by reaſon the Maſter was vnlike to miſtake his way, much leſſe ſo iuſt contrary as hee did, towards two houres in the night, we met another paſſage-Boate, put off from Famaguſta, holding the courſe which we intended. The night was faire, with the ſhining of the Moone and Star-light; yet, by reaſon of the difference in ſayling, wee firſt loſt ſight of that Boate, then by our different courſe, the Maſter of ours, in ſtead of Alexandretta, going for Tripoly, which certainely was a great worke of God to preſerue vs. The other Boat, at breake of the day, being taken at the entrance of the Port of Alexandretta, by certaine Turkiſh Pirats, who put all to the ſword that were in it, and hearing of vs, we had rowed ſo farre into the Riuer Orontes, before they could recouer vs, that they durſt no further proſecute that prey. There we found a goodly Countrey, repleat euen naturally with all the bleſſings the earth can giue to man, for the moſt part vncultiuated here and there (as it were) ſprinkled with miſerable Inhabitors, which in their faſhion ſhewed the neceſſitie they had to liue, rather then any pleaſure in their liuing.

Another deliuerance.

From thence we ſent our Interpreter to Antiochia, to prouide vs Horſes to bring vs thither, which he returned within two daies after, and with them wee proceeded thither, full of great care how we ſhould eſcape from thence. The Turke hauing giuen certaine ſcales to trade in, out of which, as it was vnlawfull for any to conuerſe; ſo it muſt needs be an vneuitable peril for ſo great a company, when the ſame great Prouidence, which at firſt defended vs from the former hazards, gaue vs the good hap to meete with two Ianizaries, Hungariſh-runnagates, who vnderſtanding that we were Chriſtians, compelled againſt our diſpoſitions into that place, our intention to be a viſitation of Ieruſalem, and withall, our feare of ſome great preiudice by our being arriued out of the diſtinguiſhed places for all Chriſtians; hauing told vs firſt, that they themſelues had beene Chriſtians, and though they had, for reaſons beſt knowne to themſelues, altered that condition; yet they wiſhed well to thoſe which ſtill were ſo, and eſpecially, to all of thoſe parts: and afterwards cheerefully comforting vs, inuited vs to lodge in their houſe, ſecuring vs, by a number of proteſtations, from al dangers; which as they courteouſly offered, ſo (if I may giue ſo faire a terme, to ſuch a people) they honorably performed: For being by the Cady of Antiochia required to preſent vs vnto him, they did not onely deny vs, as bound vnto it by the lawes of hoſpitalitie, in reſpect of their promiſe, as they themſelues ſaid; but called fiftie other Ianizaries of Damaſco, their friends to defend vs, if the Cady ſhould haue offered violence.

Thoſe Ianizaries of Damaſco, amongſt other Garriſons, were appointed as thoſe of Cairo againſt the inuaſions of the Arabs, who are through all thoſe Prouinces, a people diſperſed, liuing in Tents, without a cercaine place of abode, remouing their habitations according to the ſeaſons, and their owne Commodities: part of which, who are remooued on that ſide of Euphrates, which is of Meſopotamia, now called Diarbech, are peaceable to the Turke, and not much infeſtious to Trauellers. Their King being a Saniacke of the Turkes, and by that Title holding Ana and Der, two Townes vpon the Riuer, which pay him his ſtipend. The other, vpon the other ſide towards Ægypt, through all Arabia Petra, and Deſerta, and ſpreading as farre as the limits of Arabia Felix; being in multitudes, and not poſſible bee brought to a quiet and well-formed manner of liuing, are dangerous to Strangers, and continuall ſpoylers of thoſe parts of the Turkes Dominions, which euery way border vpon them: for the ſafetie of which (as I ſaid) thoſe two Garriſons of Cairo and Damaſco were inſtituted; the firſt, of twelue thouſand, the other of fifteene hundred Ianizaries. Thoſe Ianizaries (which were appointed for the ſafetie of the Prouinces, and had their firſt priuiledges, not onely for a reward to their vertues; but to binde them by ſuch rewards, to anſwere the Princes confidence in them) now obey no authoritie which calleth them to other Warres: but by combining themſelues in a ſtrength together, tyrannize the Countries commitied to their charges: in ſuch a ſort, that they are not onely Princes (as it were) ouer the people, but doe alſo terrifie the greater Miniſters, (a great weakneſſe in the very Baſis of ſo huge an eſtate) want of neceſſary prouiſion for the warres in all thoſe parts; not ſpeaking of thoſe for peace, ſithence the ruine of the Prouinces, for the moſt part, and the miſery of thoſe poore flocke of people, which doe liue in the parts inhabited, are onely the meanes to giue him peace. Yet the negligence of the Princes Chriſtian, will not make vſe of theſe extreame defects of his to amplifie their Dominions, to eternize their Honours; and (that which is the greateſt) to glorifie God, which hath made them Princes, onely to execute his iudgements. I will leaue them, and ſpeake of my Ianizaries rare diſpoſition vnto me, who did not onely performe their promiſe in defending me in Antiochia, but deliuered me ſafely from them into our Engliſh Conſuls hands in Aleppo: from whom, and from all the Merchants there abiding, I receiued ſuch an entertainment, with ſo carefull, ſo kind, and ſo honourable a reſpect, as I muſt needs ſay, they were the onely Gentlemen, or the moſt benigne Gentlemen that euer I met withall. For my company being ſo great, that it was no light burthen vnto them; beſides, gaue an occaſion to the Turkes condition of getting to make quarrels for that end: ſo that they were not onely at expence by defraying me and mine, but at more by preſeruing vs from oppreſſion amongſt them. I had not beene fully one moneth expecting a commoditie of paſſage by Carauan into Perſia: but that the Morizell arriued, who preſently had the aduice of my being at Aleppo: And though that Hugo de Potſo threatned as much as an ill mind, and great purſe could make him hope to preuaile againſt me by; and queſtionleſſe had raiſed ſome great trouble againſt me, if he had come ſafe to Aleppo. Yet euer the firſt prouidence which ſaued me before, determined ſo well alſo for me then, that foure miles from Aleppo he dyed: by which meanes I was preſerued from perill, and thoſe honeſt Merchants (my friends) from great trouble.

Inſolence of Ianizaries in thoſe times of Mahomet, Father to the Muſtapha.

Engliſh Conſull at Aleppo. Merchants bounty.

A happy deliuerance from danger.

After ſixe weekes ſtaying in Aleppo (a weariſome time to my ſelfe, being drawne from thence continually by the inſtigation of my deſire, which longed for the accompliſhment of the end, that I propoſed to my ſelfe, and as chargeable a time for my friends, which would needs make me a burthenſome gueſt vnto them) the Tafterdall, which is the Treaſurer, and the great Cady, which is (as it were) the Lord Chiefe Iuſtice of Babylon, arriued at Aleppo, from thence to goe by the Riuer of Euphrates to the place of their Regiment. With thoſe, as diuers others went, ſo did I alſo, for the more ſecuritie of my Voyage (their company being euer defended, beſides with the reſpect of their perſons, with a good company of Ianizaries) to Birr, which is the place of imbarkment. Diuers of our Merchants brought me, and left me not vntill I was boated. Thirtie daies we were going vpon the Riuer to Babylon, reſting euery night by the ſhoare ſide: In all which way we found few Townes; onely Racha, Ana, Derrit, and otherwiſe as little habitation, except heere and there a ſmall Village: and one of better reputation, which is the landing place, thirtie miles from Babylon, called Phalugium. To tell wonders of things I ſaw, ſtrange to vs, that are borne in theſe parts, is for a Traueller of another profeſſion then I am, who had my end to ſee, and make vſe of the beſt things; not to feed my ſelfe and the world with ſuch trifles, as either by their ſtrangeneſſe might haue a ſuſpition of vntruth: or by their lightneſſe adde to the reſt of my imperfections, the vanitie or ſmalneſſe of my iudgement. But becauſe I was deſirous to certifie my ſelfe truly of the eſtate of the Turke, in thoſe parts through which I paſſed, vnderſtanding where we lodged one night, that the Campe of Aboriſci, King of thoſe Arabs, which inhabite the Deſart of Meſſopotamia, was a mile off; I hazarded my ſelfe in that curioſitie to goe into it, and ſaw a poore King with tenne or twelue thouſand beggerly Subiects, liuing in Tents of blacke Haire-cloath: yet ſo well gouerned, that though our cloathes were much better then theirs, & their want might haue made them apt enough to haue borrowed them of vs; we paſſed notwithſtanding through them all in ſuch peace, as we could not haue done, being Strangers, amongſt ciuiller bred people. That day, as it hapned, was the day of Iuſtice amongſt them, which was pretty and warlike. Certaine chiefe Officers of the Kings, mounting on horſe-backe, armed after their manner, with their Staues, Targets, Bowes and Arrowes; and ſo giuing iudgement of all Caſes, which the people brought before them. The King gaue vs good words, without any kind of barbarous wondring, or other diſtaſtfull faſhion. But when we returned to our Boat, we found the Maſter of his houſe, Maſter of our Boat, with a ſort of his Arabs: and in concluſion, we were forced to ſend his Maſter three Veſtes of cloath of Gold, for beholding his perſon. This is that King of the Arabs, which I ſaid before, was a Saniacke of the Turkes; and for that place held of the Turke, Ana and Dirr, two Townes vpon the Riuer.

Aboriſci King of the Arabs viſited.

Manner of Iuſtice.

As ſoone as we came to Babylon, hauing put the ſtocke which I had all into Iewels and Merchandize, to carry the faſhion of a Merchant; at the Dogana, which is the Cuſtome-houſe, all (whatſoeuer) was ſtayed for the Baſſa: and (as I perceiued) not ſo much for any great vſe which he meant to ſpeake of thoſe things; as for the ſuſpition which hee had of me, and mine extraordinary company bearing much cauſe thereof with it; and becauſe I gaue out I had more goods comming with the Caranan by Land, to binde me not to ſtart from thence. In the meane time, by very neceſſitie, hauing left me nothing in the world; what extreame affliction I was in, by that meanes, for the preſent: and in what iuſt cauſe of feare for the future, euery man may eaſily iudge. I had my Brother with me, a young Gentleman, whoſe affection to me, had onely led him to that diſaſter, and the working of his owne vertue: deſiring in the beginning of his beſt yeares, to inable himſelfe to thoſe things, which his good mind raiſed his thoughts vnto. I had alſo fiue and twentie other Gentlemen, for the moſt part: the reſt, ſuch as had ſerued me long, onely carried with their loues to mee, into the courſe of my fortune. I had no meanes to giue them ſuſtenance to liue, and leſſe hope to vnwrap them from the horrible ſnare, into which I had brought them, being farre from all friends, and further from counſell, not vnderſtanding the language of the people, into whoſe hands I was falne, much leſſe their proceedings: onely thus much I knew, they were Turkes, inhumane in their natures, and addicted to get by all meanes iuſt and vniuſt.

Sir Robert Sherley, ſince Embaſſador from the King of Perſia to His Maieſtie.

A hard diſtreſſe.

But I will leaue my ſelfe a little in that great ſtraight, and ſpeake of Babylon; not to the intent to tell ſtories, either of the huge ruines of the firſt Towne, or the ſplendor of this ſecond: but becauſe nothing doth impreſſe any thing in mans nature more, then example, to ſhew the truth of Gods Word, whoſe vengeance, threatned by his Prophets, are truely ſucceeded in all thoſe parts. Niniue (that which God himſelfe calleth, That great Citie) hath not one ſtone ſtanding, which may giue memorie of the being of a Towne: one Engliſh mile from it, is a place called Moſul, a ſmall thing; rather to bee a witneſſe of the others mightineſſe, and Gods iudgement, then of any faſhion of Magnificencie in it ſelfe. All the ground on which Babylon was ſpred, is left now deſolate, nothing ſtanding in that Peninſula, betweene the Euphrates and the Tigris, but onely part, and that a ſmall part of the great Tower. The Towne, which is now called Bagdat, and is on the other ſide of Tigris, towards Perſia (onely a ſmall Suburbe in the Peninſula) but remoued from any ſtirpe of the firſt; to which men paſſe ordinarily by a Bridge of Boats, which euery night is diſſolued, for feare either of the Arabs, or ſome ſtorme vpon the Riuer, which might carrie away the Boats, when there were no helpe readie. The buildings are after the Moriſco faſhion, low, without ſtories; and the Caſtle, where the Baſſa is reſident, is a great vaſt place, without beautie or ſtrength, either by Art, or Nature; the people ſomewhat more abſtinent from offending Chriſtians, then in other parts, through the neceſſitie of the Trade of Ormus: vpon which ſtandeth both the particular and publike wealth of the State. Victuals are moſt abundant, and excellent good of all ſorts, and very cheape; which was a mightie bleſſing for mee, which had nothing but a generall Wardrobe of clothes, not in our Coffers, but vpon our backes; which we were forced to make money of by piece-meale, according to the falling of the Lot, and our neceſſitie; and with that liued: and if feeding-well had beene all, which we had cauſe to care for, we alſo liued well.

The ruines of Babylon.

Niniue.

Bagdat.

A hard diſtreſſe.

But after one moneth was paſt, and time faſtned euery mans eyes more firmely vpon vs: One day a Florentine Merchant (whom I had onely knowne in the way betweene Aleppo and Babylon, by a riding acquaintance) came vnto mee, and after a little other diſcourſe, told mee, that there was a great muttering amongſt diuers great men there, what I was, and what my deſignes might bee; that he found me to be dangerouſly ſpied after: and wiſhed mee to haue regard, (if

A ſtrange prouidence.

A Carauan of Perſian Pilgrimes.

A ſtrange and extraordinary kindneſſe of a Florentine Merchant, called Victorio Specero.

Santon Pilgrimage

Courdines.

not to my ſelfe) yet to ſo many, which he did imagine were impawned in that misfortune by my meanes. And though it were true, that hee came vpon the motion of an honeſt, pious, and charitable heart; yet I was ſo fearefull of an Italian Merchant, that I did rather imagine him to be the ſpie, then lightly to haue beene an inſtrument of his preuention. Therefore agreeing with him in the complement onely, I anſwered determinately in the reſt; that I knew no iuſt cauſe of perill, therefore I feared none; and if there were any curious eyes vpon me, becauſe of the number of my companie, the Carauan comming, they ſhould ſee good vſe made of them all: and vntill that time I would haue patience with their looking and ſpeaking. Him I thanked for his kindneſſe, and offered my ſelfe largely vnto him, as though I had leaſt ſuſpected him; though in truth I did moſt: and moſt vniuſtly. For, two dayes after he returned to me againe, and as a man moued in his very ſoule with anguiſh, told me, that within ten dayes the Carauan of Aleppo would arriue; in the meane time, beſeeched me not to couer my ſelfe longer from him, who did ſo truely wiſh me well, not ſo much for my perſon (which he could know little) but becauſe his conceit was, that I would not haue hazarded my ſelfe in ſuch a iourney, but for ſome great end, which he did beleeue well of; and beſides, in charitie to a Chriſtian, and ſo many Chriſtians with me: ſaying, that there was a Carauan of Perſian Pilgrims, arriued two dayes ſince from Mecca without the Towne, who were forced to take that way (though the longeſt) by reaſon of the Plague, which raigned very exceedingly in thoſe places, by which they ſhould haue paſſed. Hee was not ignorant of my wants, for which hee alſo had prouided; and taking me by the hand, beſeeched me againe to beleeue him, and to goe preſently with him to the Carauan: which I did, not being able to anſwere, through admiration of ſo generous a part in him, and an amazement, with a thouſand diuers thoughts ſpred vpon mee. When I came there, hee brought me to a Vttorin, of whom hee had alreadie hired Horſes, Camels, and Mules for mee; and I found a Tent pitched by his ſeruants: and then opening his Gowne, hee deliuered mee a bag of Chequins, with theſe very words: The God of Heauen bleſſe you, and your whole companie, and your enterpriſe, which I will no further deſire to know, then in my hope, which perſwadeth me that it is good; My ſelfe am going to China, whence if I returne, I ſhall little need the repayment of this courteſie, which I haue done you with a moſt free heart; if I die by the way, I ſhall leſſe need it: but if it pleaſe God ſo to direct both our ſafeties with good prouidence, that we may meet againe, I aſſure my ſelfe, that you will remember mee to be your friend; which is enough, for all that I can ſay to a man of your ſort. And almoſt, without giuing me leaſure to yeeld him condigne thankes (if any thankes could bee condigne) for ſo great and ſo noble a benefit, he departed from mee. And as I heard afterward from him by Letters from Ormus, he receiued much trouble after my departure, through his honourable deſire to perfect the kindneſſe which he had begun. For, imagining that by the continuall ſpies, which claue to my houſe, that my flight could not be ſecret: hee had no ſooner left mee in the Carauan, but that he changed his lodging to mine, ſaying that I had done the like to his; and went to the Cady, telling him that I was ſicke, deſiring his Phyſician to viſite mee, knowing well enough that the Cady had none, but onely to giue colour to my not appearing in the Towne. The Cady anſwered, he was ſorrie for my ſickneſſe, and would ſend to the Baſſa for his Phyſician, which Signior Victorio Specera (for ſo was this honourable Florentine called) would by no meanes; hoping, as hee ſaid, that my ſickneſſe would not bee ſo great, as would require the trouble of his Highneſſe. By this meanes fiue dayes paſſed before I was miſſed; and when I was once diſcouered to be gone, fiftie Ianizaries were ſent after mee, to bring mee backe againe: the Carauan hauing diuided it ſelfe by the way, whereof one part went a viſitation of a Santon in the Deſarts of Samarone; and the other paſſed the right way for Perſia by the Mountaines, gouerned by a Prince of the Courdines, called Cobatbeague. The Ianizaries hearing of them to be paſt, and thinking that all had beene ſo, they returned: and that noble-minded Florentine was forced to pay fiue hundred Crownes, to make his peace with the Baſſa.

My frailtie gaue mee a continuall terrour, during thoſe thirtie dayes, in which wee wandred with that companie of blinde Pilgrims through the Deſarts; not knowing what God had wrought for my ſecuritie, and thoſe which were with mee, by that good man, Signior Victorio. At the end of which wee arriued in the King of Perſia's Dominions, hauing firſt paſſed a great tract of good and ill Countries, the Deſart places of which being onely ſand, gaue no meanes for Inhabitants to liue: the fruitfuller parts were vſed by certaine people, called Courdines, liuing in Tents, knowing no other fruit of the earth, but what belonged to the ſuſtenance of their Cattell, vpon the Milke, Butter, and Fleſh, of which they liue, ruled by certaine particular Princes of their owne, which giue partly an obedience to the Turke, and part to the Perſian, as they are neereſt the Confines of the one or the other. Yet in that ſimplicitie of liuing (not being without that contagion of all Mankind, of all Prouinces, and of all States, ambition of getting ſuperioritie, and larger Dominion) ſome Warres daily grow in amongſt them, euen to the extirpation of a whole Nation: as we found freſhly, when we paſſed by one of thoſe Princes, called Hiderbeague, all whoſe people were deuoured by the ſword, or carried away captiue by Cobatbeague; and himſelfe remayned onely with ſome twentie ſoules, in certaine poore Holes in a Rocke.

The preciſe ſumme, which I receiued of the Florentine, I ſet not downe, to preuent the ſcandales of diuers, who meaſuring euery mans mind by the ſtraightneſſe of theirs, will beleeue no act, which doth not ſymbolize with themſelues: but ſo much it was, that being thirtie dayes vpon the way to the Confines; then fifteene from the Confines to Caſbine, where wee attended one moneth the Kings arriuall; it was not onely ſufficient to giue vs aboundant meanes for that time, but to clothe vs all in rich apparell, fit to preſent our ſelues before the preſence of any Prince, and to ſend extraordinarily in gifts, by which wee inſinuated farre into the fauour of thoſe, which had the authoritie of that Prouince, during our abode, and expectation of the Kings comming: in which time we were well vſed, more by the opinion, which they had, that the King would take ſatisfaction by vs, then by their owne humours; being an ill people in themſelues: and onely good by the example of their King, and their exceeding obedience vnto him. The Gouernour viſited mee once; Marganabeague, Maſter of the Kings houſe, (whom I had won vnto me by Preſents) came oftentimes to ſee mee: beſides (as it ſeemed) being more inwardly acquainted with the Kings inclination, fitted himſelfe more to that, then others did, which knew it leſſe.

---

§. II.

Of ABAS King of Perſia, his Perſon, Vertues, Perils, Eſcapes, Aduancement, Gouernment, and Conqueſts.

AND now that I am in Perſia, and ſpeake of the Kings abſence; ſince hee is both one of the mightieſt Princes that are, and one of the excellenteſt, for the true vertues of a Prince, that is, or hath beene; and hauing come to this greatneſſe, though by right; yet through the circumſtances of the time, and the occaſions, which then were, ſolely his owne worthineſſe, and vertue, made way to his right: beſides, the faſhion of his gouernment differing ſo much from that which wee call barbarouſneſſe, that it may iuſtly ſerue for as great an Idea for a Principalitie, as Platoes Commonwealth did for a Gouernment, of that ſort. I hold it not amiſſe, to ſpeake amply firſt of his Perſon, the nature of his People, the diſtribution of his Gouernment, the adminiſtration of his Iuſtice, the condition of the bordering Princes, and the cauſes of thoſe Warres, in which hee was then occupied; that by the true expreſſion of thoſe, this diſcourſe may paſſe with a more liuely, and a more ſenſible feeling.

His Perſon then is ſuch, as well-vnderſtanding Nature would fit for the end propoſed for his being, excellently well ſhaped, of a moſt well proportioned ſtature, ſtrong, and actiue; his colour ſomewhat inclined to a man-like blackneſſe, is alſo more blacke by the Sunnes burning: his furniture of his mind infinitely royall, wiſe, valiant, liberall, temperate, mercifull, and an exceeding louer of Iuſtice, embracing royally others vertues, as farre from pride and vanitie, as from all vnprincely ſignes, or acts; knowing his power iuſtly what it is; and the like acknowledgement will alſo haue from others, without any gentilitious adoration; but with thoſe reſpects, which are fit for the maieſtie of a Prince; which foundeth it ſelfe vpon the power of his State, generall loue, and awfull terrour. His fortunes determining to make proofe of his vertue, draue him (in his firſt yeeres) into many dangerous extremities; which hee ouercomming by his vertue, hath made great vſe of, both in the excellent encreaſe of his particular vnderſtanding, and generall tranquillitie, ſtrength of his Countrey, and propagation of his Empire. For the Lawes, and Cuſtomes, or both, of that Kingdome, being ſuch, that though the King haue a large encreaſe of Iſſue, the firſt-borne onely ruleth; and to auoide all kind of cauſe of ciuill diſſention, the reſt are not inhumanely murthered, according to the vſe of the Turkiſh gouernment, but made blind with burning Baſons: and haue otherwiſe all ſort of contentment and regard fit for Princes children. Xa-Tamas King of Perſia dying without Iſſue, Xa-Codabent, his brother was called blind to the Kingdome; who had Iſſue, Sultan Hamzire Mirza the eldeſt, who ſucceeded him, and this preſent King called Abas.

The eldeſt Sonne of the King remayned at the Court of his Father, adminiſtring all that, which his Fathers defect of light vnabled him to doe. Abas the ſecond Sonne, twelue yeares of age vnder the gouernment of Tutors, held the Prouince of Yaſde; and (as Courts are full of Rumours, and ſuſpition neuer wanteth in Princes, eſpecially which haue ſuch imperfections, as they are compelled to take knowledge of) the vertues of Abas, by which hee bound to him the hearts of his Prouincials, ſpred themſelues further, and ſo to the Court; where they were increaſed to ſuch a condition, as altered the Father, and Brothers reioycing in them, to an opinion that his winning of the affections of the people, proceeded not from any other worthineſſe, but artifice; which had the intent of it ſtretching to the Crowne: which tooke ſuch hold in the Fathers minde, worne with age and griefe, and ſore with his late miſfortunes, that hee reſolued ſecretly his death: The newes of which being brought to Abas, ſpeedily by the meanes of ſecret friends; not onely to himſelfe, but to his Gouernours (which as they were the greateſt of the the ſtate, ſo they were not vnfriended in the Court) being ſo farre from any ſuch deſigne, that he had no ſort of prouiſion at hand to defend himſelfe; hee fled to the King of Coruſan, a Countrey of the Tartars, limiting vpon the Eaſt of Perſia, euer infeſtuous to that State, not more in their owne diſpoſition (being a people giuen to ſpoyle, vnquiet, and which cannot liue in reſt) then through their dependance vpon the Turke, whoſe Religion they profeſſe (which the Perſians do not, but much altered) and whoſe Penſionaries they were, by which they were bound in all ſeaſons, when the Turke was tyed to the Chriſtians wars, to diuert the Perſian from looking to the commoditie of ſuch a time; beſides, on occaſions, the Turke vſed to tranſport great forces of them ouer the Caſpian Sea into Siruana; and from thence paſſed them into Hungarie; eyther the longer way by Land, or the ſhorter by Sea, ouer Negropont. To this King Abas was exceeding welcome, and cheriſhed, and honoured like his owne Sonne. Shortly after the flight, the Father dyed, and Sultan Hamzire Mirza, his Sonne, ſucceeded him, who renewed the Truce with the Turke, through the neceſſitie which hee had to vſe the moſt, which his ſtrength and power could yeeld him, to ſuppreſſe a great Rebellion of the Turcomans: whom, at the laſt, he ſo brake with diuers Battels, and all other ſort of afflictions, that they deliuered him vp their Princes, and then themſelues. Their Princes he beheaded, and of them, ſlue twentie thouſand of the ableſt for the warres, aſſuring his peace with them by their extremeſt ruine; and as he was, by all reports, a moſt braue, and warlike Prince, hauing pacified his owne State, and deſirous to recouer, not onely what was freſhly loſt; but all which was formerly taken from the Sophies Kingdome, by the power of the Ottomans; vnited all his thoughts, and all his Councels to that one great end; which all finiſhed with his life, ending it ſelfe by Treaſon of his Princes (not without perſwaſion of the Turke) when hee had fit yeares, minde, and courage; and meanes ioyned with occaſion, to haue made himſelfe the greateſt Prince of many Ages: all which though they made his death miſerable, yet the manner was more miſerable, beeing vilely ſlaine by his Barber retyring halfe drunke from a Banquet, to which hee was prouoked by the Conſpirators, which preſently parted the State betweene them; euery man making himſelfe abſolute Prince of thoſe Prouinces, which they had in gouernment; and parting the Royall Treaſure amongſt them for their reciprocall mayntenance, diſpoſed themſelues vnitely to reſiſt the comming in of Abas; whom notwithſtanding they did not much feare, hauing promiſe of the Turke, that hee ſhould be detayned in Coraſſan where he was refuged: and knowing that he had neither Men nor Money, nor yeares to giue him any incouragement to attempt againſt them, who had ſoone confirmed themſelues, both with giuing good ſatiſfaction to the people, and with liberalitie to the Souldioury; and their entrance into the State being without oppoſition, and ſo, without offence, made the foundation both more ſure and more facile.

Abas his flight to the King of Coraſan.

The King murthered.

Abas in the meane time, whoſe iuſt Title made him King, aſſured himſelfe that both the murder of his Brother, and this parting of the State, had the Turkes counſell concurring with thoſe Princes Impietie: and not doubting but the King of Coraſſan was alſo perſwaded to detayne him reſolued notwithſtanding by his neceſſitie, began to deale boldly with him for his aſſiſtance againſt his Rebels, the King of Coraſſan, though pre-occupyed by the Turke, yet deſirous to bee his Friend afarre off, and alſo doubting the ſucceſſe of Abas, neither hauing yeares, nor experience, nor Friends; In fine, being deſtitute of all reaſonable hope, not to mooue the Turkes diſpleaſure vpon ſuch a diſaduantagious condition, was notwithſtanding contented to ſee whether ſome thing might be mooued by ſuch a helpe as ſhould not appeare to be giuen by him, but rather voluntarie followers of Abas his fortune: he gaue him three thouſand Horſe onely to put him in poſſeſſion of that State, which by his vertue, and fortune, is growne now ſo great, that it hath deuoured all the States of the Tartars, extended it ſelfe ſo farre as Cabull to the Eaſt; the Arabian gulfe downe to Balſaracke on the South; within three dayes Iourney of Babylon on the Weſt; and to Tauris on the North; embracing the whole Circumference of the Caſpian Sea vnto Aſtracan, which is the vttermoſt of the Moſcouites Dominion, and Seruane of the Turkes, which lyeth vpon that Sea: an Empire ſo great, ſo populous, and ſo abundant; that as it may compare with moſt of the greateſt that euer were, ſo is it terrible to the Turkes which is the greateſt that now is; though I doe thinke verily, That in Aſia the Perſian hath as great an extent of Territories, as the Turke, and better inhabited, better gouerned, and in better obedience and affection, I am ſure he hath. With this ſmall troupe, the King of Perſia, guided by his infinite Royall courage, entred Perſia. But as thoſe which are wicked, are euer ſo well inſtructed in the Art of their poſeſſion, that they neuer want Inſtruments in themſelues to deuiſe, and in others to act thoſe counſels which muſt euer be waking, to maintayne what they haue gotten by their ſcelerateneſſe. So their Spyes haſtened, with ſuch diligence, to giue thoſe Rebels notice, of their Kings being on foot, that the next of them to him, had time to arme great forces, and encountred him in a Prouince, called Siſtane: and though his inuincible ſpirit, without any ſparke of feare, made him aduenture to fight vpon ſo vnequall termes, as was three thouſand againſt twentie thouſand: he found by his experience, that Maieſtie and right, is nothing without power to beare them vp: and that no exquiſite vigour of the minde, can reſiſt the violence of ſiniſter fortune, nor oppreſſion of many hands. Yet did Fortune ſo much care (for ſo great vertue) that ſhe gaue him way to eſcape to the Mountaynes,

The Perſian Greatneſſe.

Siſtane.

all the reſt of the ſmall troupe beeing cut in pieces. This victory aſſured the Rebels (as they thought) from all further danger; the King of Perſia, whoſe owne minde euer comforted him, with a ſtedfaſt aſſurance of his greatneſſe, to which hee is now growne, hauing recouered the Mountaynes, liued amongſt the Heardeſ-men for three monethes vnknowne, changing continually from place to place, without any certaine abode, accompanied onely with ten or twelue followers, which were of his firſt Gouernours, and other young Gentlemen brought vp with him from his child-hood. But being now no longer able to temporize with his great deſire, reſoluing to proue the laſt, and the vttermoſt of his fortune, and remembring how much loue and affection thoſe of Yaſd had ſhewed towards him in the time of his gouerning them, and how much he had truly deſerued of them, determined to ſhew himſelfe in that Prouince; and prooue what effect the Maieſtie of his perſon, the iuſtice of his cauſe, and former obligation would worke in them: which, though it were a foundation prooued euer falſe, almoſt by all experiences, The peoples affections euer raiſing mens hopes, and ruining their perſons: Yet it prooued otherwiſe with this King; who was no ſooner certainly knowne in thoſe parts, but numbers of people came flocking to him, armed and appointed for the warres: in ſuch ſort, that before any prouiſion could be made againſt him (this being an accident ſo farre remoued from all ſort of ſuſpition) he had a power together, too ſtrong to bee eaſily ſuppreſſed; which was no ſooner heard by Ferrat Can, a great Prince, and diſcontented with the alteration of the gouernment (to whoſe ſhare none of that partition had falne, his fortune being ſuch, that at the time of the other Kings death, he had none of the Prouinces to adminiſter, and they were parted onely betweene them, which held them) hee I ſay, with his Brother, and a company of ſome ten thouſand, came and ioyned themſelues to the forces of the King. Neither were the men ſo welcome, as that Ferrat Can (being a wiſe Prince, and a great Souldier) grew a partie, and ſuch as the King alſo ſtood in need of: Neither did the King loſe any ſort of opportunitie, but hearing of the Aſſembly which certaine of the Princes were making in the neereſt Prouinces vnto him, with all ſpeed fell vpon them, and ouerthrowing them followed them as farre as Caſbin.

Ferrat Can.

In the meane time, thoſe of Shyras, Aſphaan, Caſſan aſſiſted by the Kings of Gheylan, and Mazandran, gather mightie forces; the Turkes armed at Tauris, and the Prince of Hamadan, hauing called in a ſtrength of the Courdines, to his aſſiſtance, was marching alſo towards Caſbin: So that the King was likely to bee ſo incloſed with all theſe Armies, that his firſt victory would rather haue proued a ſnare to his intrapment; then important, as he hoped, to the ſumme of his affaires: Whence he reſolued to helpe, with Art, that which hee was much too weake to accompliſh by ſtrength. Wherefore he leaueth Ferrat Can in Caſbin with ſome fiue thouſand men, accompanied with Zulpher his Brother; and himſelfe, with the reſt of his power marched towards the Can of Hamadane. Ferrat Can, according to the deliberation taken betweene the King and him, ſhewed himſelfe altered from the Kings part, writeth to the Rebels, which were all, in a groſſe, aduanced as farre as the mid-way betweene Caſſan and Caſbin, and offereth not onely to ioyne that ſtrength which he had with them, but to mutinie the Kings Armie, which was lodged in the Mountaynes towards Hamadane, in a ſhew to keepe thoſe ſtraights, to giue impeachment to the paſſage of that other Army; but indeed to protract time onely, and to expect the euent of his other counſels. The other Cans rebelled eaſily, and deſirouſly imbraced Ferrat Cans propoſition, haſted the Army towards Caſbin, which they entred without difficultie, both by the nature of the place, which is not of any ſtrength, and conueyance of Ferrat. There were many dayes ſpent in Counſell, and at laſt it was concluded, ſince the ſuppreſſion of the King was certaine, being abandoned by him which was his onely Captaine and Counſellour; by ſo great a part of his ſtrength; and vpon the confidence which Ferrat gaue them to mutine the reſt; that it would prooue too dangerous to call in thoſe forces of the Turkes, which were in readineſſe for their ſuccour. Not knowing whether they ſhould ſo eaſily free themſelues of them againe, if they were once entred: They feared the Turkes purpoſes, and as much feared to know them; therefore to auoid the danger of being compelled to experience them, they determined to write to the Baſſa of Tauris, that the warre was ſo certaine to bee finiſhed by themſelues, that they would reſerue fauour till a more vrgent opportunitie: and with that deliberation a principall man was diſpatched with a Preſent for the Baſſa. Of this, the King had preſent aduice, by a confident Meſſenger, and alſo that few nights after, the principals of the Army were to meete together at Ferrats houſe, inuited to a great Banquet; which being vnderſtood by him, electing fiue thouſand of his beſt men, and beſt horſing, with great and cloſe Iourneyes, hee came to Caſbin; where hauing ſecretly diſpoſed his people in the Mountayne, couered with the quarter of Ferrats Troupe, he expected the ſigne which was to be giuen him. The Prince (as it was appointed) failed not of comming, nor he of his ſigne to the King, nor the King to accompliſh his reſolution. For Ferrat hauing protracted the Banquet the moſt part of the night, when the whole companie was heauie with Wine and ſleepe, the King was receiued into the houſe with three hundred men, where without any vproare, hee ſlue all thoſe which were inuited, to the number of threeſcore and ten; the Seruants and Pages being ſo ſuddenly taken hold of, and with ſuch dexteritie, that without any mouing of other Rumours, the ſame faſhion of Feaſt of Singing and of Dancing, con-continued all the night; and in that ſpace all the reſt of thoſe people, which the King had with him, were appointed, in the breaking of the day, to make the greateſt ſhew, and the greateſt noyſe that they could vnder the foote, of the Mountayne, as though all the Army had beene there, marching to the Towne. When the Alarme beganne to bee hot in the Towne, and euery man fell to his Armes, and repaired to Ferrats Lodging, where they ſuppoſed their Princes to haue beene; the King hauing diſpoſed his three hundred men which were ſhut fitly in the houſe, and Zulpher hauing his fiue thouſand all in a troope, in the great place, the threeſcore and ten Cans heads were ſhewed, all laced vpon a ſtring, and hung out of a Tarras; vpon which the King preſently ſhewed himſelfe, accompanied with Ferrat Can; whereas the Maieſtie of the King, the terrour of the ſight repreſented before them, the feare of the Armie, which they ſaw (as they thought) at hand, Zulpher and Ferrat Cans power amongſt them, which they perceiued turned againſt them; their being deſtitute of Commanders, and the guiltineſſe of their owne conſciences, for their rebellion, ſtrooke them into ſo dead an amazement, that they ſtood readie, rather to receiue all miſchiefe, then that they had either courage, or minds, or counſell to auoide it.

Slie ſtratagem.

But vpon offer of pardon, they cryed out, Let the King liue, let the King liue; we are all King Abas his ſlaues, and will not ſuffer to liue any of his Enemies: and there was more trouble to defend the poore people of Caſbin from ſacking by them (their Towne euer hauing beene a well diſpoſed Harbour for the Rebels) then to turne their hearts and armes to the Kings part. Beſides, the ſuccours which the Gheylan and Mazandran had ſent the Rebels, were with great difficultie ſaued, and returned to their Countries by the King of Perſia, with commandement to tell their Maſters, that as the poore men were not culpable, which obeyed their Princes authoritie, by whom they were ſent againſt him, and for that innocencie, hee had giuen them their liues; ſo that he would not be long from ſeeking his reuenge vpon their Maſters, which had more iuſtly deſerued it, by his neuer prouoking them to any offence. And when hee came with his Armie thither, he would proue, by thoſe mens acknowledgement vnto him, whether they could diſcerne by the benefits they had already receiued of him in the gift of their liues, which they had forfeited vnto him, by bearing Armes with Rebels againſt him, what better hopes they might conceiue of him, if they would diſpoſe themſelues to deſerue good of him. In this meane time, the fame of this great ſucceſſe, flew to both the Armies about the Mountaynes of Hamadan: which, as it comforted the Kings with exceeding ioyfulneſſe; ſo it entred into the others with ſuch a terrour, that they preſently vaniſhed, euery man retyring to his beſt knowne ſafe-guard, that part of the Warre ending with the blaſt onely of the fortune of the other, with little expence of time, labour and bloud: which beeing vnderſtood by the King, hee raiſed Oliuer-Dibeague to the title of a Can, and ſent him, with thoſe forces which he had to Hamadan, to ſettle the Countrey in a good forme of gouernment, and to eaſe it from the oppreſſion of the other diſperſed Troupes. Zulpher he alſo called Can, and ſent him to Ardouile, which frontireth vpon Tauris, with an Army conſiſting of foure and twentie thouſand men, in ſhew to quiet the Countrey, but indeed, to preuent any mouing of the Turkes. And becauſe hee knew, that as his State ſtood then weake, rayſed (as it were) freſhly from a deadly ſickneſſe, it was not fit for him (at that time) to bind himſelfe to wraſtle with ſuch an Enemie, by taking knowledge of his ill diſpoſition towards him; he diſpatched Embaſſadours to Conſtantinople, to Tauris, and to the Baſſa of Babylon, to congratulate with them, as with his friends, for the felicitie of his fortune; and to ſtrengthen himſelfe, by Alliance, alſo the more firmely, againſt the proceeding of any thing which the Turk might deſigne againſt him, either then or in future time; he required the Daughter of Simon Can, one of the Princes of the Georgians, to wife, which was, with as readie an affection performed, as demanded.

Whiles that Lady was comming from her Father, the King vnderſtanding that the Cans Son of Hiſphaan held yet ſtrong the Caſtle, and whether he gaue it out to amaze his Armie, which now began to looke for ſatisfaction, for the great trauels and dangers which they had paſſed, or whether he had heard ſo indeed; true it is, that he gaue out, that the moſt part of the Treaſure of the former Kings of Perſia, was by the conſent of the Rebels, for ſecuritie, kept together in that Caſtle: to receiue the which, and to chaſtiſe that Rebell, the King marched thither with a part onely of his Armie, leauing the reſt at Caſbin, which was Frontier to Gheylan againſt which his purpoſe carryed him. Without much trouble hee expugned the Fort at Hiſphaan, beeing a large Circumference onely of Mud-wals, ſomewhat thicke, with Towers, and certaine ill Battlements, and ſuppreſſed that Rebell; but Treaſure he found none, for the indignation whereof, he made the World beleeue, diſmantled the Caſtle. His owne neceſſitie to content the Army, and his Armies neceſſitie to aske contentment, drew him ſuddenly backe from thence to Caſbin, where hee had not ſtayed many dayes (for daily ſatisfaction with hope hauing no reall meanes) but that the Queene arriued, honourably accompanied with two thouſand Horſe, and Byraicke Myrza her Brother. The Marriage was ſoone diſpatched, thoſe Countries vſing few Ceremonies in ſuch caſes: and God bleſſed them both ſo happily, that within the tearme of leſſe then one yeare, ſhe brought him a gallant yong Prince who is now liuing, called Sophir Mirza.

The King vnwilling to oppreſſe his Countrey, and deſiring to reuenge himſelfe vpon the Kings of Gheylan, and Mazamdran, to enlarge his Empire, and to content his Souldiers; hauing a flouriſhing Armie, both in men, and the reputation of his preſent victory; reſolued all vnder one, to increaſe his State, honour himſelfe, eaſe his Countrey, and ſatisfie his Souldiers with the Enemies ſpoyles. Gheylan is a Countrey cut off from Perſia, with great Mountaynes hard to paſſe, full of Woods (which Perſia wanteth, being here and there onely ſprinkled with Hils, and very penurious of fuell, onely their Gardens giue them Wood to burne, and thoſe Hils, which are ſome Faggots of Piſtachios, of which they are well repleniſhed) betweene thoſe Hils there are certaine breaches, rather then Valleyes; which in the Spring, when the Snow diſſolueth, and the great abundance of Raine falleth, are full of Torrents; the Caſpian Sea includeth this Countrey on the Eaſt: betweene which and the Hils, is a continuing Valley, ſo abounding in Silke, in Rice, and in Corne, and ſo infinitely peopled, that Nature ſeemeth to contend with the peoples induſtry; the one in ſowing of men, the other in cultiuating the Land; in which you ſhall ſee no piece of ground which is not fitted to one vſe or other: their Hils alſo (which are Rockes towards Caſbin) are ſo fruitfull of Herbage, ſhadowed by the Trees, as they ſhew, turned towards the Sea, that they are euer full of Cattell, which yeeldeth Commoditie to the Countrey, by furniſhing diuers other parts. In this then lay the difficultie moſt of the Kings Enterprize, how to enter the Countrey.

Gheilan and Mazandran.

Populous and fertile.

Yet before the King would enter into this Action, hee called vnto him to Caſbin, all Gouernours, and all Adminiſtratours of Iuſtice, whoſoeuer had occupyed thoſe Functions, during the vſurped Rule of the Cans, through all his Prouinces; with the Kinſmen, Friends and Children of the ſaid Cans: beſides, that all men of power, as Mirzaes, Cans, Sultans, and Beagues, which are principall Titles of Dukes, Princes, and Lords, ſhould repayre thither, without excuſe of Age, Sickneſſe, or any other pretence whatſoeuer: which beeing done, hee appointed new Gouernours and Officers of all ſorts; hee cleered all his Prouinces for three yeares, for paying any Tribute-Cuſtome, or any other ordinary or extraordinary Exaction whatſoeuer. His Chiefe Vizier he made one Haldenbeague a Wiſe man, excellently ſeene in all Affaires, of great Experience; but ſuch a one as was onely his Creature, without Friends or Power: him hee commanded to paſſe through all his Prouinces, accompanied with the Xa-Hammadaga, who is, as it were, Knight Marſhall, to cleere them from Vagabonds, Robbers, and ſeditious Perſons. Ologonlie, which had followed him in all his Aduerſitie (a man of great Worthineſſe) hee made Bearer of his Great Seale, which is an Office there, liker the Lord Priuie Seale, then Chancellour. (The place of the Vizier comprehending in it, the Office of Chancellour, and High Treaſurer) him hee alſo aduanced to the dignitie of a Can. Baſtana, an Ancient approoued man, both for Fidelitie and other Worthineſſe, hee made principall Aga of his Houſe; which is as great Chamberlaine. Curchibaſſchie Captaine of his Guard, which is a General-ſhip of twelue thouſand ſhot, who attend at the Port by turnes, two hundred and fiftie euery quarter, except when the King goeth to the Warres, that they are all bound to be preſent. Ferrat Can he made his Generall.

The meanes by which King Abas ſetled the quiet of Perſia.

Thus hauing wiſely and prouidently placed through all his Eſtates, thoſe who muſt be moſt aſſured to him, their Fortunes depending onely vpon him, hauing no more ſtrength, nor authoritie in themſelues, then they receiued from him: and hauing all the great ones in his Armie with him, or ſuch of them as could not bee able to follow him, eyther by their few, or many yeares, or ſickneſſe, ſo ſecurely left at Caſbin, that they could not by themſelues, or any other, moue any Innouation. And moreouer, hauing diſpatched all thoſe, and keeping their perſons with him which had any Obligation to the former Cans, ſecured by that meanes (as much as the counſell of any man could ſecure himſelfe) from perill at home: hauing called Oliuer di Can from Hamadan, and appointed him a Succeſſor for that Gouernment with ten thouſand new men, he ſet himſelfe forward to his Enterprize, with his old Troupes, and great part of his rebelled Army, with no greater courage and counſell then Fortune: for thoſe men which were remitted by him to Gheylan, and Mazandran, (as thoſe which had bin ſome-what exerciſed in the wars) hauing, with ſome more, adioyned vnto them the guard of the Streights, from which the mayne Armie of the Kings was ſome foure leagues remoued (remembring the benefit of the King, better then their faith to their Princes) at the very ſight of the firſt Troupes, retyred themſelues from the places left to their confidence in charge; which aduantage beeing followed by Ferrat, with the Alarme giuen, fell ſo iuſtly vpon that Army, that what with the vnexpected terrour of the Streights abandoning, and their being ſurprized in diſorder, the Army was facily broken, with the death of two of the Kings, and an infinite ſlaughter of people, which had beene much greater if the Woods had not couered them from the furie of their Enemies. The greateſt of thoſe Kings hauing eſcaped with much difficultie (accompanied euer with the terrour of the perill from which hee had eſcaped) neuer ended his flight, vntill hee came into Seruane; and from thence went to Conſtantinople, to deſire ſuccour from the Turke, where hee yet liueth. The other which remayned, beeing but one, without any great difficultie or alteration of Fortune, was ſuppreſſed.

The Countrey beeing firſt ſpoyled, and ranſomed at a great rate, which they might well beare, by reaſon of their great Riches, which they had gathered together through a long peace, and the Kings Armie excellently well ſatisfied; hee diſpatched inſtantly Embaſſadors to the Turke, the Georgians, and his old Friend, the King of Coraſſan, to giue them an account of this new victorie: not doubting, but as it would bee exceeding pleaſant to ſome; ſo it would be as bitter to others: and leauing Ferrat Can to gouerne the Countrey, and Oliuer Dibeague, as his aſſiſtant, but to be commanded by him, hee returned himſelfe full of glorie, and great victorie into Perſia, diſpoſing himſelfe to reduce his State to that excellent forme of gouernment which now it hath.

Firſt then, after his arriuall in Caſbin, hauing heard by his Vizier, and the Relation of Xa-Hammadaga, who had not onely ſpoyled the Subiects in their ſubſtances; but alſo of all Orders, and iuſt forme of gouernment, which it now hath; and giuen them, by that meanes, more matter of diſ-vnion, then vnion; inſomuch, that they were full of Theeues, of Vagabonds, of Factions, and ſuch like Inſolencies: hee iudged it fit, to reduce it to the more peaceable and obedient, to giue it in thoſe caſes, a good condition of gouernment: Wherevpon, hee preſently diſpatched that Xa-Hammadaga, a terrible, and reſolute perſon, with full power and authoritie, for the Reformation of thoſe Diſorders; who in ſhort time, though with more terrible Examples, reduced all the Prouinces to a vnite Tranquilitie, with mightie reputation.

Whileſt hee was buſied in that Adminiſtration; the King, to ſhew that it was neceſſitie, that counſelled to giue him that exceſſiue authoritie, and to preſerue 'it from beeing odious to himſelfe, appointed in the chiefe Citie of euerie Prouince, a Gouernour elected of thoſe of moſt valour: to him he ioyned two Iudges of Criminall and Ciuill Cauſes, a Treaſurer, two Secretaries, with an excellent Preſident, and two Aduocates generall, for the cauſes both particular and generall of the whole Prouince; Beſides the particular Aduocate of euery Citie, which ſhould bee reſident in that Metropolis. Theſe determined all Cauſes within themſelues of thoſe Prouinces in which they had the Adminiſtration; and becauſe they ſhould neither bee burthenſome to the Prouinces, nor corrupted in paritializing; the King paid them their ſtipend, enioyning them vpon paine of life to take no other ſort of reward. And becauſe ſuch things, and Cauſes might fall out, as by reaſon of the importance of them, or appellations of the parties might bee brought before himſelfe, becauſe hee would euer know what hee did, and bee continually informed, not onely of the generall State of the Prouinces, but of their particular Adminiſtration; he ordayned Poſts once euery Weeke from all parts, to bring all ſort of Relations to the Court; for which cauſe alſo he willed that one of the two generall Aduocates ſhould euer bee Reſident there, who receiuing thoſe Relations preſenteth them to the Vizier, and hee to the King. The Vizier, ſitteth euery morning in counſell about the generall State of all the Kings Prouinces, accompanied with the Kings Councell, Aduocates Reſident, and the Secretaries of State; there are all Matters heard, and the Opinions of the Councell written by the Secretaries of State; then after Dinner, the Councell, or ſuch a part of them as the King will admit, preſent thoſe Papers, of which the King pricketh thoſe hee will haue proceed; the reſt are cancelled; which being done: the Councell retyre them againe to the Viziers, and then determine of the particular buſineſſe of the Kings Houſe. The King himſelfe euery Wedneſday, ſitteth in the Councell publikely, accompanied with all thoſe of his Councell, and the foreſaid Aduocates: thither come a floud of all ſorts of people, rich and poore, and of all Nations without diſtinction, and ſpeake freely to the King in their owne Caſes, and deliuer euery one his owne ſeuerall Bill, which the King receiueth; pricketh ſome, and reiecteth other, to bee better informed of. The Secretaries of State preſently record in the Kings Booke thoſe which hee hath pricked, with all other Acts, then by him enacted; the which Booke is carryed by a Gentleman of the Chamber, into his Chamber, where it euer remayneth: and woe be to his Vizier, if after the King hath pricked, Bill, or Supplication, it be againe brought the ſecond time.

The people.

When hee goeth abroad to take the Ayre, or to paſſe the time in any exerciſe, the pooreſt creature in the World may giue him his Supplication: which hee receiueth, readeth, and cauſeth to bee regiſtred; and one requeſt, or complaint, is not ordinarily brought him twice: and though theſe bee great wayes, wiſe wayes, and iuſt wayes, to tye vnto him the hearts of any people; yet the nature of thoſe is ſo vile in themſelues, that they are no more, nor longer good, then they are by a ſtrong and wiſely tempered hand made ſo: The Countrey not beeing inhabited by thoſe nobly diſpoſed Perſians, of which there are but a few, and thoſe few are as they euer were: But being mightily waſted by the Inundation of Tamberlaine, and Iſmael afterward making himſelfe the head of a Faction, againſt the Ottomans, and by that reaſon, forced to re-people his Countrey to giue himſelfe ſtrength of men againſt ſo potent an Aduerſary, calling in Tartars, Turcomans, Courdines, and of all ſcumme of Nations; which though they now liue in a better Countrey, yet haue not changed their bad natures: though as I ſaid, ſo carefull and true Princely a regard of the King for the eſtabliſhment of good and iuſt Orders, for the gouernment of this Countrey, in equitie, generall ſecuritie, and tranquilitie; had beene of ſufficient abilitie to haue bound the hearts of people vnto him : Yet knowing what his were, and to leaue no meanes vnacted which might both aſſure them more, and himſelfe with them; becauſe he knew, that their owne diſpoſitions, which were euill, would neuer rightly iudge of the Cauſe of many rigorous Examples that had paſſed : which by that fault in them, had ingendred him hatred amongſt them; to purge their mindes from that ſickneſſe, and gaine them the more confidently, hee determined to ſhew, that if there were any cruell Act brought forth, it did not grow from himſelfe, but from neceſſitie, wherefore he diſplaced, by little, finding particular occaſions daily againſt ſome or other, all the whole Tymarri of his Eſtate; as though from them had growne all ſuch Diſorders, as had corrupted the whole gouernment, ſending new ones, and a great part of them Gheyluners to their Poſſeſſions, with more limited authoritie, and more fauourable to the people; the old ones part he caſhiered, part he diſtributed in Gheylan and Mazandran, which hee had new conquered, ſo that by that Arte, the people beganne to reſt exceeding well ſatisfied, and himſelfe the more ſecured; thoſe which ſucceeded them beeing bound to his Fortune; and thoſe which were remooued alſo, beeing diſpoſed in the new conquered Prouinces, which they were bound to maintayne in ſecuritie, for their owne Fortunes, which depended onely vpon their preſeruing them for the King.

Colonies.

When all theſe things were done, and the King beganne to thinke himſelfe throughly eſtabliſhed, for a long time, both from intrinſicke and extrinſicke dangers. The Turkes forces being ſo occupyed in the Warres of Hungarie, that hee had no leiſure to looke to his increaſing the Tartars of Corraſan his Friends, by the old Hoſpitality which he had receiued from their King: and if not his Friends, yet cold Enemies, ſuch as would be long reſoluing, before they would attempt any thing to his preiudice. There fell out a new occaſion to trouble both the peace of his minde and Countrey, if it had not beene preuented with great dexteritie, celeritie, and fortune. For Ferrat Can, not regarding his benefits downe to the King, knowing too well his owne worthineſſe, and attributing vnto that, the ſucceſſes of all the Kings Fortunes, and for ſo great cauſes, not being able to limit his mind within any compaſſe of ſatisfaction, not reſting contented with the place of Generall, nor gouernment of Gheylan, nor with the honour to be called the Kings Father, but deſpiſing that Haldenbeague ſhould be Vizier, and not himſelfe all, which had giuen the King all; began to take counſell to innouate, and alter the things with the Baſſa of Sernan, and Tauris. So dangerous are too great benefits from a Subiect to a Prince, both for themſelues and the Prince, when they haue their minds only capable of merit, and nothing of dutie.

Theſe practiſes of his were moſt dangerous, for which hee did more aſſure himſelfe, to haue laid a ſtrong foundation for the diſcontentment of thoſe Timari, which the King had ſent into his gouernment, and ſo had they beene, queſtionleſſe, if Oliuer di-Can, through his true zeale to his Maſters ſeruice; and, perhaps, a little enuy at the others greatneſſe, had not made him ſo watchfully diligent, that hauing gathered his intentions by very momentall circumſtances, hee gaue the King from time to time notice of them, which at the firſt were negligently receiued, and rather taken as matter of emulation, then truth. But when thoſe very ſame aduertiſements euer continued, and Oliuer di-Can, was not at all terrified from ſending of them; neither by the Kings neglecting them, nor rebuke, and that Mahomet Shefia was alſo ſecretly arriued in the Court, with more particular and certaine aduice, that the Baſſa of Seruan had ſent a great ſumme of money to Ferrat, which was receiued on a certayne day, and in a certaine place. The King hereupon preſently ſent Xa-Tamaſcoolibeague, his chiefe Fauourite, to will Ferrat Can, for very important affaires, for the determining of which his preſence was requiſite, to repaire to the Court; which he excuſed, through his indiſpoſition, which he ſaid to be ſuch, that he could not poſſibly trauell: ſo that perſiſting in that deniall, when Xa-Tamas Coolibeague perceiued that he would not be perſwaded, he returned with all expedition to the King; who aſſuring himſelfe the more by the deniall, of the former related accuſations, inſtantly commanded his guard of twelue thouſand Courtchies to be in a readineſſe; with which, and a thouſand of the Xa-Hammagaes he vſed ſuch celeritie, that he preuented the newes of his comming, and was ſooner arriued at Ferrats houſe then he had almoſt opinion that his Meſſenger had beene returned; yet, although amazed with his owne guiltineſſe, and the Kings ſudden comming, he made ſhift to make great ſhew of the indiſpoſition which he had ſo long counterfeited.

The King, as ſoone as he came vnto him, ſaid; That he had taken a great iourney to viſite him in his ſickneſſe, and to bring him the Cure thereof; and hauing commanded all out of the Chamber, but themſelues onely alone (as the King himſelfe told me) he vſed ſuch like ſpeeches vnto him: Father, I doe acknowledge, that firſt from God, then from you, theſe Fortunes which now I haue, haue receiued their being. And I know, that as a man, I may both erre in my merit to God, and in my well deſeruing of your ſeruice. But my intention (I can aſſure you) is moſt perfect in both: the time of my eſtabliſhment in my eſtate, hath beene ſo ſmall, that I could ſcarce vſe it ſufficiently to performe my generall dutie towards my people, ouer whom (by Gods permiſſion) I am appointed: much leſſe to prouide for euery particular ſatisfaction, as I mind and will doe; which you principally, as a Father to me, both in your yeares, and my election ſhould haue borne withall. But ſince ſome ill ſpirit hath had power to miſleade your wiſedome ſo farre, as to make you forget your great vertue; you ſhall once receiue wholeſome counſell from me, as I haue done often from you, &c. Ferrat neither excuſed nor confeſſed, but indifferently anſwered the King, as ſory to haue giuen cauſe of offence, and infinitely reioycing (as he ſeemed) that the King had ſo royally pacified himſelfe with him: and not daring to refuſe to goe with the King, deſiring him to vſe ſome few daies in the viſiting of the Country: in which time he hoped that God, and the comfort of his preſence, would raiſe him from his infirmitie. The King hauing ſtaid ſome eight or ten daies in the Countrey, was ſooner haſtned thence then he thought, by the newes of the Queenes death, who was deceaſed by a ſudden and violent ſickneſſe after his departure: ſo that with great ſpeed taking Ferrat with him, and leauing Lieutenant in the Countrey, for Ferrat, Mahomet Sheſia, he returned to Hiſphaan, where after ſome dayes ſpent in ſorrow, (for his great loſſe) he ſent to Alexander, the other Can of the Georgians, to demand his Daughter, by that meanes to binde againe that league, which might haue beene diſſolued by the death of the other Queen: In that Embaſſage went Xa-Tamas Coolibeague, who returned with the Lady within few moneths.

The Kings gracious ſpeech to Ferrat.

In the meane time, the Brother to that King of Coraſan, who had ſo royally and carefully brought vp the King of Perſia, when he fled from the wrath of his Father, rebelled againſt his Brother, ſlue him, and all his Children, but onely one; whoſe Tutors fled with him into the Mountaines, and ſo eſcaped the preſent danger, and perſecution of that Tyrant. Diuers other alſo, as they had beene in eſtimation or fauour with the old King, fearing for that the violence of the preſent authoritie, and others onely diſcontented with the alteration, and the wicked meanes of it, fled into Perſia, by whom the King hauing largely and perfectly vnderſtood the ſtate of things, hauing ſo faire a way both to ſhew an infinite royall point of gratitude, to that one poore poſteritie of the murdered King, for great obligations to the Father; and withall, to aſſure himſelfe in future times and occaſions, from that certaine enemy, which had euer hung like a dangerous Cloud ouer his State, vſually breaking into terrible Tempeſts, as it was, or ſhould be carried againſt him by the breath of the Turke: though he knew thoſe Tartars ſo obſtinate enemies to his Gouernment and Religion, that if they had the moſt odious reaſons of diſvnion amongſt themſelues, yet that they would combine againſt him, without repoſing himſelfe vpon any hope to bee holpen by thoſe partialities, which the refuged vnto him ſeemed to promiſe: but confident onely in the Iuſtice of the Cauſe which he intended, in his owne force, vertue, wiſedome and fortune; he reſolued to gather his Armie, and to goe for thoſe parts, to which he was, beſides his owne diſpoſition mightily inſtigated by Ferrat Can, whoſe feare and ambition being without meanes of end, gaue him aſſurance by place of Generall which he held, to haue ſome faire opportunitie giuen him to end them, with the Kings ruine, and without his owne danger.

Ferrats treaſon.

Thirtie thouſand men the King tooke with him for that warre, twelue thouſand Harquebuſiers which bare long pieces, halfe a foote longer then our Muskets, ſleightly made: the Bullet of the height of Caliuer, which they vſe well and certainely: and eighteene thouſand Horſe, which may ſeeme a ſmall troope in theſe places, where the warres are carried with innumerable multitudes. But the King of Perſiaes iudgement agreeth with that of the beſt experienced Captaines, that multitudes are confuſers of Orders, and deuourers of Time, and of thoſe meanes which nouriſh the Warres; and are good for no other vſe, but to make a warre ſoone breake off, and to conſume the world. This Army being choſen out from all his Forces, of elected good men, hee carried into Coraſan with wonderfull expedition, and had taken it vtterly vnprouided, if Ferrat Cans aduertiſement had not preuented his celeritie, who had not onely giuen notice to them, but to the Baſſa of Tauris of the Kings purpoſe, and his owne reſolution, promiſing them a certaine victorie, and the deliuery of the Kings owne perſon. A daies iourney the King paſſed peaceably into the Countrey, without the ſight onely of an enemy: himſelfe with fiue thouſand of the beſt men, accompanied with diuers of the principalleſt, was a kind of Vaunt-guard to the reſt, which followed with Ferrat Can, Zulphir Can, and Oliuer di Can, which marched ſoftly. The King by that meanes was farre aduanced; and being almoſt aſſured in himſelfe, that through the celeritie of his comming, he ſhould find yet no enemy ſufficiently able to reſiſt him, and more confidently by the perſwaſion of Ferrat Can: ſome ſixe hundred Horſe vnder the leading of Vſeph-Aga (which were ſent to diſcouer before the Kings troope) fell vpon fiftie thouſand of the enemy; vpon which ſight he would faine haue retired: but being ſo farre ingaged that hee could not, and vnable to reſiſt ſo great a force, with the loſſe of almoſt all his company, hee was beaten backe to the Kings Groſſe: who by the duſt riſing a farre off, and the great noyſe following, imagining what it was indeed, with a great and ready courage prouided himſelfe ready to fight, and diſpatched Meſſenger vpon Meſſenger, to command Ferrat Can to aduance vnto him. To the firſt Ferrat anſwered, that it was but a troope of ſome few Raſcals, and deſired the King to march on, and not trouble himſelfe nor his Army, and to diuers the like. At the laſt, when young Haſſan-Can came from the King, and told him the Kings danger, and that certainely the whole Force of the enemy had charged him; hee began to ſhew feare, and to call a Councell of the Commanders, then to know what they were beſt to reſolue of for the ſauing of the Army; ſince the King had ſo raſhly loſt himſelfe. Which when Oliuer di-Can heard, vpbraiding him of Treaſon, called vpon all thoſe which loued the King to follow him; and putting Spurs to his Horſe, being followed by Courtchibaſſa, and moſt of the Kings Guard, and many other, with all poſſible haſte ſpeeded to the King, who by this time was forced to ſuſtaine and retire as well as he could, without diſorder or ſhew of feare. But when this Troope of Oliuer di-Can was ſeene, his men receiued new courage; and the enemy which dependeth more vpon Ferrats treaſon, then their owne valour, beganne to be exceeding amazed, doubting that it had beene the whole Army, and that Ferrat had exchanged his Treaſon from his Maſter to them: Wherefore ſlacking their firſt fury, and rather ſtanding at a gaze then fighting, the King commanded Vſeph-Aga to charge them throughly afreſh, and not to giue them time to take new courage: which he did with ſo good fortune, that lighting vpon the Vſurper of Corazan and his Sonne, he ſlue them both with his owne hands; from which grew the firſt maine flight of the enemy, and the beginning of the victorie for the King. The chaſe was deſperatly followed, ſo that in that battell and the chaſe, were ſlaine thirtie thouſand men, with the Vſurper King and his Sonne; and diuers of the principall of the Countrey taken. That night the King pitched his Tents in the place of the battell, and being informed by Oliuer di-Can and the whole Army, which cryed out with open mouth of Ferrats Treaſon, tempered the outward ſhew of his indignation with a compaſſionate feeling of mans errors and frailtie; excuſed the conſtraint and neceſſitie, of the Iuſtice which he was forced to doe: proteſting, that though for his States and owne preſeruation, he was at laſt compelled to giue his Iuſtice place, aboue the power of his loue and Obligation: yet what the Father had rent from himſelfe by the violence of his owne miſdeeds, his Sonne ſhould find ripened for him, who ſhould be heire of what his Father had well merited by his former ſeruices, as he hoped he would be of his vertue; praying God, that his Fathers vices onely might dye with himſelfe. Which when he had ſaid, he gaue Oliuer di-Can the Generalſhip of his Army, and appointed him to doe execution vpon Ferrat, who being reſolued of that iudgement which his double offence had brought vpon him, attended ready in his Tent without feare to dye, or deſire to liue, and there receiued that puniſhment, which was vnworthy of his excellent parts, if he had made that true vſe of them which he ſhould.

The Vſurper ſlaine.

Zulpher Can his Brother fled to the Port of the Kings Tent, and there proſtrated himſelfe on the ground, and obtained pardon. Next day, the King marched farther into the Countrey, and ſo daily aduanced on without obſtacle, the Keyes of all their Townes meeting him by the way; and at the laſt, an Embaſſage from the whole State, with a generall ſubmiſſion: which when he had receiued, hauing ſpent ſome time in the ſetling of ſuch a Gouernment as was ſecureſt for himſelfe, and hauing receiued the young Prince, Sonne to the firſt King, and diuers others of the principall of the Countrey hauing left order with Xa-Endibeague, whom hee left there with the beſt part of his Army, which he increaſed afterwards to thirtie thouſand men, to extirpate all thoſe which were likelieſt, either through their Obligation to the Vſurper, or through their owne particular intereſt, to make innouation, hee returned with that young Prince, and thoſe Priſoners into Perſia.

§. III.

The Kings triumphant entry into Casbin, entertainment of the Authour and his Company. Other remarkable obſeruations of the Kings Iuſtice, Bountie, treatie of Warre, and Muſtaphas Embaſſage.

THE moſt part of this time I was at Caſbin, courteouſly vſed by Marganobeague, the Maſter of the Kings houſe, any not amiſſe by any. When the King was come within ſixe miles of Caſbin, hee ſtayed there ſome three daies, to the intent to make his entry with ſuch an eſtimation of his victorie, as was fit for ſo great and happy a ſucceſſe of Fortune: and in truth, I thinke that hee did it moſt to declare the greatneſſe of it to vs that were Strangers, by ſuch a ſtrange demonſtration. The night before hee entred, there were thirtie thouſand men ſent out of the Towne on foote with Horſe-mens ſtaues, vpon which were faſtned Vizards of ſo many heads: All thoſe in the morning, when we were commanded to meete him, (the Gouernour hauing prouided vs Horſes) wee found marching in battell array towards the Towne; and before the two heads of the King and his Sonne, foure Officers of Armes, ſuch as they vſe, bearing in their hands great Axes of ſhining Steele, with long helues; after thoſe Battalions, followed the Xa-Hammadagaes Horſe-men; after thoſe, a number of Gentlemen of the Kings Court; after thoſe, one hundred Spare-horſes, with as many of the Kings Pages; after thoſe the Priſoners, accompanied with Baſtan-Aga, then a great ranke of his chiefe Princes: amongſt whom were all the Embaſſadors, which vſed to be reſident in his Court; then followed the young Prince of Corazan, accompanied with Xa-Tamas-Coolibeague, the the Kings principall Fauorite, and then the King himſelfe alone; and after him, ſome fiue hundred Courtiers of his Guard. Marganobeague was with vs, and making vs large paſſage through all thoſe Troops.

The Kings Triumphant entry into Caſbin after his victory.

Sir Anthony Sherleis firſt ſalutation, and ſpeech to the King.

When we came to the King wee alighted, and kiſſed his Stirrop: my ſpeech was ſhort vnto him, the time being fit for no other: That the fame of his Royall vertues had brought me from a far Countrey, to be a preſent ſpectator of them, as I had beene a wonderer at the report of them a farre off: if there were any thing of worth in me, I preſented it with my ſelfe to his Maieſties ſeruice. Of what I was, I ſubmitted the conſideration to his Maieſties iudgement, which he ſhould make vpon the length, the danger, and the expence of my Voyage onely to ſee him, of whom I had receiued ſuch magnificent and glorious Relations.

The Kings anſwere.

The Kings anſwere vnto me was infinite affable: That his Countrey whilſt I ſhould ſtay there, ſhould be freely commanded by me, as a Gentleman, that I had done him infinite honour, to make ſuch a iourney for his ſake, onely bid me beware that I were not deceiued by rumours, which had peraduenture, made him other then I ſhould finde him: It was true, that God had giuen him both power and mind to anſwere to the largeſt reports which might be made good of him; which if he erred in the vſe of, hee would aske counſell of me, who muſt needs haue much vertue in my ſelfe that could moue me to vndergoe ſo much, and ſo many perils to know that of another. And that he ſpake ſmiling, willing me to get on horſe-backe: which when I had done, he called Haldenbeague, his Viſeire, and Oliuer di-Can his Generall, and commanded them to take my Brother and me betwixt them, and my company was diſpoſed by Marganobeague, amongſt the reſt of the Kings Gentlemen of his Court: and in that order, the King entred Caſbin, and paſſing to the great place, he alighted with the chiefeſt of his Princes and Officers, whom he cauſed to bring vs with them, and went into a kind of banquetting houſe, in which there were ſtaires to aſcend by into a Tarras, where the King ſate downe, and the greateſt of thoſe Princes, and wee among them. This Tarras looked vpon the place, where after we had beene a little, and beheld ſome of the Court exerciſing themſelues at Giuoco-di-canna, that great troope was ſuddenly vaniſhed, ſo without all ſort of rumour, that it bred infinite wonder in me, conſidering how much tumult we made in theſe parts, in the diſpoſing of a farre leſſe company. Whilſt wee ſate there, the King called me againe vnto him, and when I had confirmed in more words, the very ſame I had before ſaid vnto him: Then ſaid hee, You muſt haue the proofe of time to ſhew you, either the errors or the truth of theſe rumours, ſince you can make no iudgement of what you haue yet ſeene, which is but the perſon of a man, and this enemineence which God hath giuen me, for any thing you know, may be more through my fortune then my vertue. But ſince your paines and trauell hath had no other aſpect but to know me, we muſt haue a more intrinſicke acquaintance to perfect that knowledge; and how you will indure the faſhions of my Countrey, you can iudge beſt you ſelfe which are Maſter of your owne humor: This I will aſſure your of, you ſhall want no reſpect from my people, nor honour from my ſelfe; and therewith bid mee fare-well for that preſent, committing me and my company to Baſtan-Aga, to be conducted to my lodging.

Sir Anthony Sherleis preſent to the King of Perſia.

Next morning I ſent the King a Preſent, of ſixe paire of Pendants of exceeding faire Emeralds, and maruellous artificially cut; and two other Iewels of Topaſſes, excellent well cut alſo; one Cup of three pieces ſet together with gold inameled; the other a Salt, and a very faire Ewer of Cryſtall, couered with a kind of cut-worke of ſiluer and gilt, the ſhape of a Dragon; (all which, I had of that Noble Florentine) which his Maieſtie accepted very graciouſly, and that night I was with my brother inuited by him to a Banquet, where there was onely Byraicke Myrza, and Sultan Alye, with Xa-Tamas-Coolibeague, his chiefe Minion; there hee had diuers diſcourſes with mee, not of our apparell, building, beautie of our women, or ſuch vanities; but of our proceeding in our Warres, of our vſuall Armes, of the commoditie and diſcommoditie of Fortreſſes, of the vſe of Artillerie, and of the orders of our gouernment: in which, though my vnskilfulneſſe were ſuch, that I knew my errours were greater then my iudgement, yet I had that felicitie of a good time, that I gaue him good ſatisfaction, as it ſeemed. For in my diſcourſe, hauing mentioned the hauing of certaine Models of Fortification in ſome Bookes at my Lodging, which were onely left mee in the ſpoyle which was made of mee at Babylon: Next day after dinner he came thither with all the principalleſt of the Court, where he ſpent, at leaſt, three houres in peruſing them, and not vnproperly ſpeaking of the reaſons of thoſe things himſelfe. Next night he ſent for me againe, into a place which they call Bazar, like our Burſe; the ſhops and the roofe of which were ſo full of lights, that it ſeemed all of a fire. There was a little Scaffold made where hee ſate, and as euery man preſented him with diuers ſorts of fruits, ſo hee parted them ſome to one, ſome to another, and there hee continued ſome foure houres; in which time he tooke mee aſide, with my Interpreter, and asked me very ſadly, Whether I would content my ſelfe to ſtay with him; not for euer, for that were too a great wrong to my friends, who ſhould loſe me from their comfort, being diuided ſo farre from them; for my owne fortune he would not ſpeake of, but onely thus much; ſince I had told him I was a Subiect to a Prince, he knew, that then my fortune alſo muſt depend vpon the will and fauour of that Prince; and he aſſured himſelfe, that he was as able, and more deſirous to doe mee good then any: therefore if I would reſolue to giue him that little ſatisfaction; he ſhould perſwade himſelfe the more confidently, that the cauſe of my comming was ſuch as I told him, the loue of his perſon and nothing elſe. I anſwered him, I could ſay no more to his Maieſtie then I had alreadie done; that a report onely of his excellent vertues had brought me thither, that a better experience had bound me ſo faſt to him and them, that as he was Maſter of my mind, ſo he ſhould be of my perſon and time, which were both ſubiect to his command. For thoſe things of fortune, they were the leaſt things that I regarded, as His Maieſtie well ſaw by my great expence thither, onely to ſatisfie my ſight: but as I knew my ſelfe infinitely honoured by His Maieſtie, vouchſafing to ſerue himſelfe of me; ſo that was to mee aboue all other fortunes and ſatisfactions. His Maieſtie ſeemed wonderfully well content with my anſwere, and that night began to ſhew mee extraordinarie publicke fauour, and ſo continued all the time of his being in Caſbin, daily encreaſing by ſome or other great demonſtration.

Models of fortification.

The Bazar.

Sixe weekes he ſtayed there, giuing his accuſtomed audience to the people: In which time I ſaw the notableſt example of true vnpartiall royall Iuſtice, that I thinke any Prince in the world could produce: The Gouernour of Caſbin was appointed to that adminiſtration, in the maine ſeruice of the Kings State when the Rebels were firſt ſuppreſſed; a man exceedingly and particularly fauoured of the King: he taking the aduantage of the time, which being troubled, gaue him liuely colour, to make great profit vpon the people, and confident in the Kings fauour, abuſed both the one and the other by extreme extortions; his iudgement was, That all his goods, and lands, ſhould be ſold, for the ſatisfaction of thoſe men whom he had ſpoyled: and if any thing wanted, ſince the King, by giuing him that authoritie, was partly the cauſe of thoſe exceſſes, hee condemned himſelfe to pay the reſidue out of his Treaſurie. That if any thing aduanced, it ſhould be giuen to his Children, with a grieuous Edict, that no ſuccour ſhould bee miniſtred vnto himſelfe. For that, ſince death was a concluder of his offence, ſhame, and the memorie of it, hee ſhould not die; but goe, during his life, with a great yoke, like a Hogs-yoke, about his necke, haue his noſe and eares cut off, and haue no charitable reliefe from any, but what he gayned with his hands: that he might feele in himſelfe the miſerie which poore men haue to get, and what a ſinne it is to rent from them by violent extortion, the birth of their ſweat and labour.

A memorable puniſhment of extortion.

The King of Perſiaes iudgement vpon an Extortioner.

This Iudgement ſtrooke a mightie amazement into all the Great men preſent, and gaue an infinite ioy and comfort to the people. The Turkes Embaſſador, which was there, after he had ſtood ſilent a great while, as a man halfe diſtracted, ſware publikely, that he ſaw before his eyes, his Maſters ruine: being impoſſible that ſuch fortune and vertue, as the King was accompanied with, could receiue any obſtacle. That night he made Marganobeague Gouernour of Caſbin, being well admoniſhed by that great example of his dutie. Conſtantino, a braue young Gentleman, being a Chriſtian of Georgia, he called Mirza, and gaue him the gouernement of Hiſphaan; and me alſo he called Mirza; telling me, that he would prouide condignely for mee. And becauſe he had an vrgent occaſion to goe poſt to Caſſan, I ſhould receiue his pleaſure by Marganobeague; who brought me, the next morning, a thouſand Tomanas, which is ſixteene thouſand Duckets of our money: fortie Horſes all furniſhed; two with exceeding rich Saddles, plated with Gold, and ſet with Rubies and Turkeſſes, the reſt either plated with Siluer, or Veluet embroidered, and gilt; ſixteene Mules; twelue Camels laden with Tents, and all furniture, both for my Houſe and Voyage; telling me withall, that this was but a ſmall demonſtration of the Kings fauour, by which I might (notwithſtanding) conceiue what better hopes I might gather: and that it was his Maieſties pleaſure I ſhould follow him to Caſſan: in the houſe where I was, I ſhould leaue a keeper, being his Maieſties pleaſure to beſtow it on mee: and that there were ten Courtchies which ſhould attend mee the next morning, to ſerue mee in my Iourney.

Sir Anthonie made a Mirza.

The rich Preſent ſent him by the King.

All this while I moued nothing to the King of that which was the mayne purpoſe of my comming: I tooke time to deeme by the proceeding of other deliberations, of the way which I ſhould take; and to make my ſelfe learned in the purpoſe of his actions, by his nature, and inclination; beſides, not onely to get, firſt a kind of poſſeſſion in his owne affection, but of all his Great men; eſpecially of thoſe whom I did imagine would be beſt and ſtrongeſt aſſiſters of my purpoſe: the King knowing how potent a vniter of mens minds the ſelfe-ſame Religion is for tranquillitie of an Eſtate: and the like diſ-vniter ſeuerall Religions are for the diſturbance of the peace of an Eſtate, hee is exceeding curious and vigilant to ſuppreſſe, through all his Dominions, that Religion of Mahomet, which followeth the interpretation of Vſſen and Omar, and to make his people cleaue to that of Aly: not (as I Iudge) through any conſcience which carrieth him more to the one then the other; but firſt to extirpate intrinſicke factions, then to ſecure himſelfe the more firmely againſt the Turke, who being head of that part which followeth Omar and Vſſen, ſhould haue too powerfull away into his Countrey, if his peoples hearts were inclined vnto him by the force of Religion. Therefore he doth not onely ſtriue to roote it out, but to defile it, and make it odious; hauing in vſe, once a yeere, with great ſolemnitie, to burne publickly, as maine Heretiques, the Images of Vſſen and Omar: then doth hee cauſe his Great men publikely (in ſcorne of their inſtitution) to goe with a Flagon of Wine, carried by a Footman, and at euery Village, or where they ſee any aſſemblie of people, to drinke; which himſelfe alſo vſeth, not for the loue of the Wine, but to ſcandalize ſo much more the contrarie Religion;

Kings care of Religion for Policie.

ligion: that by ſuch a kind of profaning of it, they may weare the reſpect of it out of the peoples hearts: which when it fayleth with reuerence in Religion, the Pillars thereof are vtterly broken. Yet there are of the very greateſt, exceeding preciſe Turkes, if they durſt doe other for their owne fortunes ſake, then couer, with all artifice, that infection.

Ten dayes I was betweene Caſbin and Caſſan, where arriued, I receiued more gracious demonſtrations from the King, then I could hope for, or wiſh: being farre beyond my preſent merit, and my Iudgement how to deſerue it at all. Foure dayes his Maieſtie ſtayed there, after my comming; in which time there paſſed many Triumphs at Ginoco-di-canna in the day, and good Fireworkes in the night: at which I was euer preſent with himſelfe, with no leſſe reſpect, then if I had beene his brother, as he alſo called me, and continued that name afterward all the time of my being in Perſia. The ſecond day of his Iourney, from thence, towards Hiſphaan, hee called me vnto him, my brother and my Interpreter; and (after ſome few diſcourſes) hee began to tell vs the whole hiſtorie of thoſe his fortunes which I haue diſcourſed: and ioyned that hee vnderſtood, the Turke had ſent him a faire ſword (hee did beleeue) to cut off his head withall, if Ferrat Cans treaſon had well ſucceeded: for after the Meſſenger arriued at Tauris, vnderſtanding how God his great prouidence, had not onely mightily preſerued, but giuen him that famous victorie ouer his enemies, hee had ſent for new order to Conſtantinople, which came to no other end, but to call him backe againe. But the beſt was, the more the Prince hated him, the more his Subiects loued him, hauing receiued newes at Caſſan, of ten thouſand ſoules of Courdines which had abandoned their poſſeſſions vnder the Turke, and required ſome waſte land of him to inhabit in; which he had giuen them.

And though this diſcourſe opened ſomewhat largely the Kings heart vnto mee, I durſt bee no bolder, at that time, then to ſay, It was euer, almoſt impoſſible to preſerue a quiet amitie betweene two ſo great Potentates, as himſelfe, and the Turke, &c. at Hiſphaan, ſaid the King, We ſhall haue leaſure enough both to deliberate and reſolue of ſome good things; and with that called ſome other, who entertayned him with diſcourſes of Hunting, and Hawking, in which he is much delighted, and vſeth them with great magnificence: neuer going to any of theſe ſports, but that he carrieth forth aboue fiue hundred Dogs, and as many Hawkes, nothing riſing before him but it is game. For Flies, he hath Sparrowes; for Birds, Hobbies and Marlins; for the greateſt ſort, ſome Hawke or other; and for Roe-deare Eagles; he hath particular Agaes for his Hawkes and Dogs, and other Officers to them a great number.

The particulars of his generall anſwer, yee may ſee in his owne booke: as alſo the Kings anſwer.

The King of Perſia his hawking and hunting.

The next day, I ſingled out Oliuer Di-Can, with whom, (after a few complements) I communicated the Kings diſcourſe with me, of his firſt troubles, and latter fortunes; extolling His Maieſtie as it was fit; and beſides, giuing the greateſt honour to himſelfe, without flatterie, that I could deuiſe; then I told him of my anſwere to the King, and on purpoſe I ſaid, I feared, that it might turne to my harme, being newly planted in the Kings fauour, ſubiect to the enuie of the Court, and wanting a tongue to ſpeake for my ſelfe: and that to intermeddle in ſo great and perillous matters, it could not chuſe but awake ſome couered malice, to take occaſion to worke me ſome damage. But my confidence was ſuch, firſt in the Heroicke mind of the King himſelfe, then in the generous diſpoſition of his Excellencie, that I ſhould be protected from perill for this fault, as I would preſerue my ſelfe with more cautell hereafter. Hee anſwered mee, that the Kings affection vnto me was ſuch, that no man durſt lift vp a thought againſt mee: which the Court knew well. For himſelfe, as he knew not the conditions of our Courts, ſo I might miſtake thoſe of theirs: if enuie bare ſo great a ſway with vs, we had lighter Princes, and men of more preſumption. In this Court there was not a Gentleman but the King: the reſt were ſhadowes which moued with his bodie. But in this which I had ſaid to the King, if I had intended it, to moue him to warre in ſo fit a time againſt the Turke, I had done well: and aſſured me, that both hee, and Xa-Tamas-Coolibeague, would with all their powers concurre with me to bring it to an eſſentiall deliberation; though, ſaid hee, there bee three Dogs, Haldenbeague, Baſtan-Aga, and Courtchy Baſſa, that will mainly oppoſe themſelues againſt it: yet in the conſcience of my dutie, which I owe to his Maieſtie, I aſſure my ſelfe, that there is no ſecure way, either for the preſeruation of his perſon, or eſtate, but that. Therefore, ſince you haue begunne in ſo happie an houre to breake the Ice of ſo great and ſo good an enterpriſe, follow it without feare, ſince God will proſper your good intention in it, and wee will ſecond you, with all the ſtrength and induſtrie which wee haue. This was all which I deſired, to bee aſſured of ſome friend; eſpecially ſuch a one, as might haue both opinion and credit of wiſedome and fauour with the King.

Kings entrance into Hiſphaan.

The Kings entrance into Hiſphaan was there of the ſame faſhion that it was at Caſſan; differing onely in this, that for ſome two Engliſh miles, the wayes were couered all with Veluet, Sattin, and cloth of Gold, where his Horſe ſhould paſſe. After he had beene ſetled there fourteene dayes, remembring what Oliuer Di-Can had ſaid vnto mee, I determined to loſe no more time. Therefore taking the opportunitie of the Kings being alone with mee, and my brother in a Garden, with my Interpreter onely and Xa-Tamas-Coolibeague, I ſpake vnto him to this effect: That my affection, growne onely vpon the fame of his Maieſtie, had guided me from a farre Countrey into his preſence; by which I found his Royall vertues, ſo farre exceeding the relation which I had heard, that as I did admire them, ſo I had a kind of forceable mouing in my nature to deſire condigne fortunes to accompanie them: Beſides, my particular obligation to his Maieſtie was ſo great, that I was bound, not onely to ſay what I thought fit for his ſeruice, but to doe as much as my life might accompliſh for the ſame. There could no deliberation be grounded vpon a greater foundation of equitie, then that which had his end onely directed to the recouery of that, which was by force and violence vſurped from his State: nor nothing more honourable for a Prince then to bee able without hazard, not onely to reuenge priuate and publike wrongs, but to recouer their members againe to his ſeate, by his wiſedome and vertue, which haue beene ſeparate either by the defect or fortune of his Predeceſſors; All this, both publike and priuate profit, followed ſo great an increaſe of State, (increaſing in all points the force of his State) and his poore Subiects, which were throwne out of their poſſeſsions, either through their true deuotion to his Maieſtie, which could giue them no peace vnder another gouernment, or through the extreame tyranny of the Turke, ſhould be recouered againe to their owne, with his infinite glorie and vtility. The facilitie ſhewed it ſelfe diuers waies, principally in his owne fortune, wiſedome, and vertue; againſt which, there was no likely reſiſtance, eſpecially when there was no equall obſtacle, then the reputation of his late victories ioyned with the other, would finde or make a way through all difficulties; then his Militia which was freſh and vncorrupted, then the incapacitie of the Turke, his corruptions of gouernment, want of obedience, ſundry rebellions, and diſtractions from any poſsibilitie, of being able to make any potent reſiſtance againſt his Maieſties proceedings, by his warres in Hungarie, which his Maieſtie might aſſure the continuance of, if it pleaſed him to inuite the Princes Chriſtian to his amitie, which he ſhould offer vpon that condition: by which alſo, he ſhould receiue one other worthy benefite fit for ſuch excellent parts, as hee moſt richly aboundant in, not to conclude the true knowledge of them in that one corner of the world: but with making theſe great Princes knowne vnto himſelfe, he ſhould make his owne worthineſſe likewiſe knowne vnto them. Neither (as I ſaid at the firſt to his Maieſtie) though theſe were great points to moue ſo great a ſpirit, intending to glory and great things, as his was, that they were ſo important as other were. For theſe might either be deferred, or not at all acted, being bound vnto them by no greater neceſſitie then his owne will, counſelled by good reaſon. But his caſe was ſuch, that hee muſt reſolue; both for the ſecuritie of his eſtate and perſon, to make or endure a warre.

Sir Anthonie Sherleys perſwaſiue to the Perſian, to make warre againſt the Turke.

As I was proceeding, Haldenbeague the Vizeire, Baſtan-Aga, and Oliuer di-Can came in: the King preſently called them, and told them what I was propounding vnto him; vpon which the Vizier ſwelling againſt me, anſwered inſtantly. Your Maieſtie may now perceiue that true, which ſome of your Seruants haue beene bold to tell you, at the firſt comming of theſe Chriſtians, and many times ſince, that they were ſent to diſquiet your Maieſties tranquilitie of your State, and to embarke you in dangerous enterprizes for other interreſſes, &c.

The Vizeirs diſſwaſiue oppoſition, is long, and here omitted.

Oliuer di-Can anſwered, that there was difference betweene a propoſition, which was onely mooued to be counſailed of, and a perſwaſion. That hee thought I counſailed nothing, (much leſſe perſwaded) but onely propounded that to the King, which if it were not then fit to be executed, for reaſons that I knew not in the preſent condition of the Kings affaires; yet I deſerued not ſo bitter a cenſure, ſince Princes ought to heare all, and elect the beſt, &c. The King then commanded Baſtan-Aga to ſpeake freely alſo what he thought, who after a reuerence vnto him, hauing repeated the Arguments paſt, commended them all (as it is his faſhion apparantly to offend no body: but what he doth in that qualitie is ſecretly) and then as though hee meant no ſuch matter, diuiding what he would ſpeake into two points, the warre, and my perſon, he proceeded, &c. When he had ended, I beſeeched his Maieſtie to vouchſafe to heare me once more, which he ſaid was needleſſe, and the day farre ſpent; therefore ſince euery man had already ſpoken their opinion, he would alſo ſay ſomewhat of his owne, and referre the farther deliberation of things vntill another time. The propoſition which Mirza Antonio (ſaith he) made vnto me, is queſtionleſſe in it ſelfe ſuch an one, as I muſt not onely thanke him for propounding it, by which it hath receiued life, but I muſt alſo prouide for the execution of it, that the life which it hath may bee vſed to good purpoſe. (His long anſweres to their reaſons are omitted) For the Tartars which I haue as ſubiected, if I were Oliuer di-Chan, Haldenbeague, or Baſtan-Aga, I could thinke of few better meanes to aſſure my ſelfe of their rebellions, then thoſe which they haue propounded: except one addition of ſuffering them to enioy their ancient Order, Lawes, and their particular courſe of Iuſtice. But as I am borne with a mind of another conſtitution, I can ſecure them better by giuing them to their owne naturall Prince, and him to them. For to whoſe Father I was ſo much bound, that through the royaltie of his diſpoſition, I hold my life, and had the beginning of what I am, I can doe little for the Sonne, and no gratefull act at all for the memory of the Father, if I cannot giue him a Kingdome which is the leaſt part of what I am. To conclude as good deliberations in their many points, muſt be grounded vpon the example of the paſt, the experience of the preſent, and the iudgement of the future: and the Turke hath beene euer heauy to my State in long paſſed, and late paſſed times, and is now by ſome accidents partly proceeding from himſelfe, partly from others (in all likelihood) eaſie to be perpetually aſſured: which point of time that giueth ſo good an occaſion if it be let paſſe, may giue him power (for a mind he can nor will neuer want) to be vntollerable againe hereafter; or if not vntolerable, at the leaſt dangerous. We haue two great powers of our minds, the one a wiſe power of vnderſtanding, by which we penetrate into the knowledge of things; the other a ſtrong power of reſoluing, by which we execute things well vnderſtood: and now that we haue iudged of all, we muſt reſolue of ſomewhat; and of that which is probablieſt beſt. Therefore

The Perſian Generall his anſwere to the Vizeirs diſſwaſiue, is for like cauſe omitted.

The Kings cenſure and concluſion of the conſultation.

The Kings concluſion of the conſultation.

our neceſſitie, our honour, and our iuſtice calling vs againſt the Turke*, and ſince with all theſe concurreth ſo good an opportunitie: he muſt be the maine end of which wee will determine: and becauſe to prepare vs to that end amongſt many other circumſtances, the ſending to the Princes Chriſtian hath beene intimated as one of the moſt neceſſarie: wee ſhall doe well in the generall good vſe which wee muſt make of this interpoſition of time, to doe alſo that. For though it bee true, that their intereſſes will euer make ſuch a propoſition acceptable: yet where there is a proffer of ſuch a condition, as beareth with it a kind of Obligation, as it is of more honourable faſhion for vs, ſo it addeth grace and reputation and more ſtrength to it, or any ſuch like purpoſe. For neither will I relie ſo much vpon my owne power, or fortune, or the preſent benefit which I meane to beſtow vpon theſe of* Coraſan*, that I will forget I haue offended them, and to arme my ſelfe with all the beſt aduice I can, againſt the ſiniſter working of any fortune. Neither will I ſo much preiudicate the opinion, which I deſire the world (without vaine oſtentation) ſhould hold me, and my Miniſters, as that my enterpriſes ſhould not haue a way giuen them by the wiſeſt and beſt weighed counſell, and perfect concurrence made betweene my fortune well iudging of my counſell, and all proper occaſions. As for* Mirza Antonio (for ſo hee euer called mee) what hee is to me you all muſt know, and my eſtimation of him: which I aſſure my ſelfe to be grounded vpon a good and true iudgement, ſince he hath beene the firſt and onely propounder of the manifeſt point of all other, which doth or may concerne me moſt. So for that matter of ſending, in which there is more diuerſitie of opinions about the forme of circumſtance, then eſſentiall matter of ſubſtance, I will remit it to his fidelitie and true affection to me, to diſpoſe as he ſhall in thoſe two great workes in a noble minde, find meeteſt for my honour, and conuenient, and certaineſt for the effecting. Yet this muſt I tell you and him, which hath not yet been thought of, that a great Prince, as I am, muſt receiue a deniall for an iniurie: and I had rather not know them at all, then with knowing them to be alſo offended by them, though (this I ſay alſo) that he cannot be iudged to haue authoritie to command their wills, therefore muſt be blameleſſe in all, except in the lightneſſe of his imagination, vpon which ſlender occaſion hee ought not, for the credite of his owne iudgement, to haue formed a Counſell. Before I could frame one word of replie, he roſe, and hauing talked a little while alone with Xa-Thamas Colibeague, he called my Interpreter, and held him ſome quarter of an houre in a very earneſt ſpeech: which was, to command him (as he afterwards told mee) not to let mee know what his Vizier had ſaid againſt mee, but charged him to animate mee to loue his People, and alſo to confirme (in all hee could) my affection and well-hearted intention to his owne ſeruice. And wee parted with a mutuall ſhew of great ſatisfaction. Many dayes after, when I would begin to enter into a new diſcourſe of thoſe deliberations, he would preſently turne himſelfe to ſpeake of other matters. In this faſhion more then one moneth paſſed, in which I had no comfort of my deſire, but onely that which Xa-Thamas Colibeague and Oliuer Di-Chan gaue me, and the Kings exceeding fauour which rather encreaſed then decreaſed towards me.

In this time (as though all the ſtrength of that ill ſpirit, who euer rayſeth the vttermoſt of his skill and power to preuent all good purpoſes had conſpired to ouerthrow the well proceeding of this good buſineſſe.) There came newes to the Court, that Mahomet-Aga Generall of the Ianizaries of Bagdat was entred into the Kings Gofines, as Ambaſſadour from the Turke, with a rich Preſent, and maruellous honourable traine: And that thoſe of Ormus had ſtayed by force ſixteene ſlaues which were ſent by the Great Mogore to the King; with nine other which Oliuer Di-Chan had bought in thoſe parts, and the Merchants for their more ſecuritie had ſent them with thoſe of the kings. This raiſed the courages of thoſe which oppoſed themſelues to the mayne buſineſſe, alienated mightily the hearts of Oliuer-Chan, & Xa-Thamas Colibeague from all, and exaſperated the King himſelfe ſo much againſt them, that his ordinarie ſpeech was no other, but that he would ſhortly learne to haue a reſpect vnto him, which did ſo exceedingly fill my very ſoule with perplexitie and anxietie, that I fell into a very dangerous ſickneſſe, in which the King neuer fayled daily to viſite mee himſelfe; and finding that the recordation of thoſe things did aggrauate both the griefe of my mind, and vnquiet of my bodie, he forbad that any in my preſence ſhould ſpeake more of it, but onely comfort me with all ſort of diſcourſe of recreation, with ſo royall and ſo gracious a regard, that hee ſhewed apparantly enough, that few accidents could diſpoſe his mind from any reaſonable contentment which hee might giue mee. In the meane time Mahomet-Aga arriued at the Court, whom the King ſent his Vizier and Courtchibaſſa to meet, accompanied with a thouſand Horſe of the principall of the Court, and of the Citie. Theſe (no queſtion) gaue him large inſtructions, and as large hopes; which if he had guided alſo rightly, he might haue done his Maſter great ſeruice, and himſelfe infinit honour: but through his owne too haſtie greedineſſe, aſſurance, and deſire, he preuented himſelfe whileſt he ſtriued firſt beyond that which was indifferently good, then beyond that which was better, and at the laſt beyond all reaſonable (and I thinke his owne) hopes. For firſt being proudly confident vpon the greatneſſe of his Maſter; then vpon the difficultie of the King of Perſians preſent eſtate, to be moued to offend ſo potent a Neighbour; then vpon ſo great and ſtrong a faction in the Court; beſides, hauing heard by them that the Kings minde was altered from thoſe of Ormus, and that Oliuer-Chan alſo was then likewiſe alienated from his firſt cenſure through the particular wrong done vnto himſelfe. Hee left the right way of mouing by degrees ſo great a buſineſſe to carrie it euen without agitation or danger: And as though with knowing the circumſtances he had attayned the end, he ouerthrew his Maſters intention, his owne honour, and almoſt loſt his life, if the Kings infinite clemencie had not either deſpiſed or pittied his errour.

Sir Anthonies ſickneſſe.

The proud meſſage deliuered by the Turkes Ambaſſadour to the King of Perſia.

The day of his audience was honoured with all the Princes of the Kings Court, and my ſelfe being too weake through my long ſickneſſe, the King commanded that my brother ſhould bee preſent alſo; where after a magnificent oration of his Maſters potencie in all conditions of force, he told the King, That he was ſent to admoniſh him to remayne conſtant in the truce with his Maſter; to require reſtitution of thoſe Courdines which without licence had abandoned their poſſeſſions in his Maſters Prouinces, and contrarie to the termes of amitie were entertayned by him. That his Maſter alſo demanded the reſtitution of Coraſſan to the former gouernment, in the alteration of which, though he knew his Greatneſſe and Maieſtie violated, yet he could yeeld ſo much from what hee ought to doe to the King of Perſias yeeres and heat of valour; that he would content himſelfe with that ſatisfaction. Then he aduiſed him to force his nature, and couer this vaine glimmering of fortune with iudgement and good counſell; which euer would aduiſe him to maintayne and preſerue his eſtate, rather with warie then violent counſels. This his Maſter demanded of him to obliterate (by the facile granting of it) all greater iniuries; wiſhed his Maieſtie to conſider well of the Demand, the condition of the Demander and his owne: Denials euer to ſuch Potentates being receiued for mayne offences; that it was euer a wiſe determination to yeeld to the authoritie of Time, and neceſſitie, and to auoide by that good iudgement, vrgent perils, and ſiniſter conditions: nothing being a more ſecure repaire, then to ſtrike ſayle againſt inſupportable tempeſts, it many times hapning, that the too great valour of men vſed with too great confidence is bitterly perſecuted, and ſometimes oppreſſed with an vnhappie courſe of fortune: againſt the current of which, when once through errour it breaketh forth, no humane force or wit can make any reſiſtance. And becauſe all men for the moſt part are blind in diſcerning the iudgement of good or ill counſels, from their end, celebrating them when they proſper with a falſe argument from the ſucceſſe: His Maieſtie ſhould giue a great example of true wiſedome, not to be ſo much ouerborne with the preſent delight, or future hopes, extracted from thoſe firſt proſperous ſucceſſes, as not to bee able to lift vp his eyes to ſee the clouds which hee had raiſed by ſome of them: which if they were not preuented, would breake forth into extreame Tempeſts. To conclude, he ſaid that his Maieſtie muſt bee ſo farre from thinking to weaken his Maſter by cunning and by artifice, and ſo to keepe his Armes farre from him; that hee muſt reſolue ſuch courſes to be ſeruile: and to execute apparantly and preſently onely, Princely, and like himſelfe; ſo that eyther hee muſt prooue himſelfe a Friend, or declare himſelfe an Enemy. The firſt would merit any priuate grace, which ſhould be no ſooner deſerued then attayned; the other would giue glorie and honour to the Victor, euer deare and honeſt to the winner, precipitious and ſhamefull to the loſer. And not ſpeaking of the inuincibleneſſe of his Maſter, God himſelfe would iudge the firſt vniuſt Infringer of an Amitie ſworne to his great Name.

The King of Perſias his Anſwere to the Turkes Ambaſſadour.

The King without any thing mouing from his accuſtomed grauitie, tempering the Iuſtice of his indignation with the true magnanimitie of his minde, anſwered him to this effect. That as the greatneſſe of riches and Treaſure were often pernicious to Princes; ſo were abundance of men, and largeneſſe of Dominions, to ſuch as were too weake to gouerne them: therefore that extolling the Magnificencie of his Maſter (which might breed wonder and terrour in thoſe who were not capable of greatneſſe, was no moouer of him to decline from any part of that which belonged to his owne greatneſſe. He had receiued the Courdines (oppreſſed by the tyrannie of cruell Miniſters) into his protection; and as their comming to him proceeded of their owne will, ſo their returne from him ſhould bee voluntarie, and not through his conſtraint. Coraſſan he had iuſtly taken from an Vſurper, and would reſtore the lawfull Prince, who ſhould receiue the benefit from his munificence: and not from any point of the Turkes inſtance. But wherefore ſhould hee bee bound to giue a ſtricter account of his actions to the Turke, then became equall Princes to aske the one of the other; as though the Lawes of ruling had but one Moderator, before whoſe Tribunall they ſhould be all preſented? Tauris belonged to his Predeceſſors; ſo did Sieruan, ſo did Dierbech; and what Iuſtice had his King to detayne them? If none other but by the potencie of his Armes; the ſame point of Iuſtice he had alſo to preſerue what hee had alreadie gotten: and to vindicate alſo thoſe vniuſtly detayned from him. If hee will breake the Truce made betweene my Father and him, and continued by my Brother and mee, vpon ſo manifeſt vniuſt Cauſes; as the Warre was neuer proſperouſly prouoked againſt our State by his Predeceſſors nor himſelfe, but through ſome ſtrange accident, errour, or our diſunion: ſo beleeue that it will now breake forth to his owne deſtruction. Yet I doe not denie but that I had rather, both to preſerue what I haue, and to recouer what my Anceſtors haue loſt, by equitie then bloud; and by force of Reaſon, rather then of Armes: which if I cannot, I will certainly amend by vertue what I haue erred in by cunctation. My power and glory is yet ſoundly whole, and more increaſed through the merit of Modeſtie, which was neuer yet deſpiſed by the greateſt which haue beene among men: and is eſteemed by God himſelfe. Wreſting of Acts could not deceiue Oaths; which as they were made to God; ſo the iudgement of their breaking or abuſing would euer be in God, and his memory, care and power. For Mahomet-Aga himſelfe; though hee had forfeited the Priuiledges of an Ambaſſadour, by executing vnder that Title a contrarie Office; if I ſhould (ſaid hee) preſently and condignely puniſh you, both the memory of your preſent Fortune (into which pride and folly hath throwne you) and my glorie would be darkned; and the puniſhment would bee followed with a ſudden forgetfulneſſe; but if I free you (as I will) from your puniſhment, though I cannot from the fault, I ſhall be an eternall memory to the World of Clemencie, and leaue you a great precept either of more iudgement, or leſſe employment: vntill you can make your ſelfe fitter for ſuch a one as this, to which you haue beene vnworthily elected.

§. IIII.

The Kings condeſcending to Sir ANTHONIES Motion, employing and furniſhing him in Ambaſſage to Chriſtian Princes. Two Friers.

The next morning the King came vnto me, and after ſome other Diſcourſes, hee told me he had well conſidered of my Propoſition, which though otherwiſe hee had no great inclination vnto, both, becauſe of the great ſeparation by diſtance, and difficult meanes of correſpondencie, which could bee made betweene the Princes Chriſtian and himſelfe, beſides the ſmall neceſſitie he had of them (God hauing giuen him ſo ample, ſo rich, and ſo warlike a Dominion) and if he had, their owne diſ-vnion amongſt themſelues gaue him ſmall hope of any great good effect in what he ſhould propound vnto them: Beſides the derogation from his owne greatneſſe to a demander of their Amitie, whoſe Predeceſſors had ſought it of his by diuers meanes, and vpon great conditions. Yet to ſhew me how deare an eſtimation hee held of me, hee was contented not to ſee what belonged to himſelfe, but onely to regard my ſatisfaction: which he willed me to determine of, and aſſured me of the effecting of it whatſoeuer it was.

Sir Anthony Sherley confirmeth the King in his purpoſe of ſending to the Princes of Chriſtendome.

And after I had giuen his Maieſtie thankes which were conuenient for ſo high a fauour, I told him that I had propounded nothing but that which the future experience, and preſent reaſon of things would proue not onely infinitely auaileable, but alſo neceſſary for his honour, profit and ſecuritie: to which counſell I was readie and deſirous to adde my owne perill, which could by no other meanes bring an anſwerable benefit to the greatneſſe of it ſelfe, but onely in the true eſtimation which I made of the merit of his Maieſties vertue, and my infinite affection to his ſeruice. The neceſſitie of his State, I knew either counſelled him to prouide for a Warre; or to make a Warre: Priuate cogitations hauing their progreſſe of ſuch a condition, that they may take (as themſelues will) either more or leſſe of fortune; but thoſe which had raiſed their thoughts to the ſublimitie of Dominion are no more in their owne power: hauing no meane to ſtep vpon betweene the higheſt of all, and precipitation. For his Maieſtie to ſleepe longer, called vpon by ſo mayne Reaſons which did euidently demonſtrate vnto him the ineuitable danger (if not ruine) of his State, and contrariwiſe, the certaine addition which his Maieſtie might make to his Glorie and State, would ſeeme to thoſe that did not rightly vnderſtand the excellencie of his Maieſties heart, ſuch a weakneſſe in him, as is incident to thoſe which haue not power to temper felicitie, from glutting themſelues with the abundant fruits of preſent proſperitie; though they haue a patient forced vigour to withſtand aduerſitie. That the Turke was to be vanquiſhed, his owne Rebels had ſhewed, which haue ouercome with ſmall forces his great power in ſundry Encounters. If his Militia hath had heretofore more vigour and valour, it is now changed through pleaſure, eaſe, and ſurfeitings by (their Princes Example) with great corruptions; which a more vertuous Prince may reduce to their ſoundneſſe: his Maieſties wiſdome ſhould worke immediately vpon the preſent generall defect and errour. Neither ſhould hee make a proportionable concurrence betweene his facts and wiſedome, if hee did loſe time in doubtfull deliberations, in ſuch a caſe which did euidently ſhew him that if he might ſecurely continue in peace, yet that peace was more pernicious vnto him then Warre: leeſing ſo many faire occaſions of propagating his Empire, and making his Eſtate eternally inuincible, & too dangerous to be attempted againe by the Turke: when there ſhould be ſo equall a ballance of potencie, as would bee betweene them, but by the recouerie of his owne, if his deſire and fortune, and vertue diſpoſed no more vnto him then that which was iuſtly his owne, and was vniuſtly detayned from him. For thoſe Rebellions of the Turkes they were likely rather to increaſe then diminiſh: ſuch manner of people euermore eaſily conſenting in vnitie in Warre, then in peace to be commanded, or yeeld obedience: And the greateſt powers which are, haue beene, or may be, which vnited beare all before them, the violence of their ſtrength, once diuided either by time, by patience, or by diuerſitie of Fortune (which cannot be at all times, and in all places alike) may be and are ſubuerted. The Warre it ſelfe will open and diſcloſe many hidden and ſwelling wounds, which are now onely couered by ignorance, and others detracting of their determination. And though it be true that the Princes Chriſtian bee farre deuided; and ſome of them incumbred with particular Deſignes amongſt themſelues, through the paſſions of their priuate intereſts; yet the Emperour (who is the greateſt in Title, and by his Alliance of the moſt power) is already ingaged againſt the Turke: which Warre hee wil more or leſſe proſecute according as he ſhal haue more or leſſe hopes. And what greater (almoſt aſſurance of proſperous ſucceſſe) can he haue then the coniunction with your Maieſtie, whoſe power and vertues he ſhall know? And the mouing of both your ends being the ſame, can loſe no propertie in their working, by the large ſeparation or diſtinction of places. The Pope alſo (who carryeth a Supreme Authoritie among Princes, to mooue them to thoſe things which ſhall beſt preſerue, or augment the limits of his Church) animated by your Maieſties great name and offer; will aſſuredly vſe the vttermoſt of the ſtrength, of his authoritie and induſtrie, to reconcile all particular enmities, and to combine all hearts to that Generall Warre, in which euery particular is truly much intereſſed; if they conſider their conſcience to their profeſſion, and the danger wherewith they all haue beene threatned, by that great Enemies potencie: diuers Princes hauing alreadie by it ſuffered the vttermoſt of ruine.

Neither ſhall your Maieſty deſpaire, but that all may bee perſwaded to ſo honourable and pious an action, being a propertie in mans nature to follow, that which hath beene contrarie to their diſpoſition to begin: And if they all ſhould not; yet the Emperour, Pope, and King of Spaine, abſolutely will imbrace the Amitie, honour the name of your Maieſtie, and vnite themſelues in any termes of Princely Alliance: and your Maieſtie ſhall haue an eternall glory amongſt all; for inuiting them all to ſo Noble, Generous, and Royall an Action: and at the leaſt, draw great Intercourſe of Merchants of all thoſe parts; which will giue an entrance to a kind of ſociableneſſe, and that will proceed to a common reſpect, And ſo to a mutuall friendſhip which will giue the communication and knowledge of many things hidden (both in the knowledge, vſe and profit of them) for want of ſuch an Intercourſe. Your Maieſtie alſo wiſely deſireth to take away all reputation from the Turkiſh Religion, through your Dominions, both by ſcandalizing it publikly, and puniſhing it in particular perſons: Sithence, Hereſie in all Religion cauſeth Diuiſion, and the corrupted part becommeth a pernicious Enemy to the Prince who ſupporteth the contrarie; From it ariſe as from a mayne turbulent Spring, Treaſons, Conſpiracies, ſecret Conuenticles, and Seditions.

Beſides, the greateſt and largeſt way, which the Turke hath into your Dominions, is the faction of his Sect; as Iſmael your Predeceſſor had, of that which your Maieſtie profeſſeth, to deuide your State from him: Hee is an abſolute and Tyrannous Enemy to the Chriſtians; Your Maieſties Religion, hath a charitable opinion of them: and if drinking of Wine, burning of their Prophets Images, and ſuch leſſe apparances be in your Maieſties opinion effectuall things to eſtrange the people hearts from that Religion, by a contrary vſe, with thoſe Opprobries, to the other; a greater meanes your Maieſtie may worke by: in giuing libertie of Chriſtian Religion, ſo much abhorred of their part and ſecuritie of Trade, goods and perſon to Chriſtians, by which you ſhall bind their Princes; expreſſe the charitie of your Law, ſerue your ſelfe in diuers things of them which haue beene hidden vnto you, both for your vtilitie, ſtrength and pleaſure: and more inure your people to deſpiſe the other Religion, by ſo contrary, ſo apparant and ſo great effect. Neither can they euer be dangerous to your Maieſty, their increaſe being alwayes to be limited by your will. This alſo will giue your Maieſtie great fame, ſince by their meanes you ſhall recouer auaileable Inſtruments both to preſerue and augment your Eſtate by: as Founders of Ordnance, Makers of all ſorts of Armes, and Munition. So that though it may ſeeme a ſtrange Act in your Maieſtie to bee contented to inlarge Chriſtians, ſo new and ſo great a fauour, yet ſince all great Examples euer haue in them ſome thing of an extraordinarie qualitie, thoſe are to bee made vſe of that repaire by publike profit, thoſe particular diſguſts which priuate men may receiue of them: I know that it is for the moſt part a fallacious ambition which imbraceth greedily new and dangerous things, but to determine and execute fit and conuenient things, is the proper effect of wiſdome and courage. Your Maieſtie knoweth your preſent Eſtate, remembreth the courſes of times paſt; and the excellencie of your iudgement weigheth, that which may ſucceed hereafter. No man receiueth harme but from himſelfe; nor your Maieſtie can ſuffer none but from that which your ſelfe will determine of your ſelfe: you are inuited to no act depending vpon fortune, but ſuch a one as ſhall haue his foundation, vpon Counſell, Reaſon and Iudgement. My ſatisfaction ſhall be aboue all other greateſt if your Maieſtie reſolue of that which wil be moſt ſecure, honourable and commodious for your Perſon, State, and particular Subiects.

The King of Perſiaes reſolution to employ Sir A Sherley as his Ambaſſadour.

Well ſaid the King, you would then haue mee to write to as many of the Chriſtian Princes as are greateſt amongſt them, who if they will apply themſelues to our purpoſe may draw all other leſſer vnto it, by the example of their authoritie; or at the leaſt (if they will not conſent in that point) will command their Merchants to repaire to our Dominions: ſo that wee and they may haue ſome good friendly vſe the one of the other. The Letters you ſhall appoint to be written to as many, and to whom you will, with priuiledge for Merchants, and the ſecure profeſſion of their Religion and peaceable poſſeſſion of their goods, and perſons, in as ample ſort as your ſelfe will deuiſe; and not onely for them but for all Chriſtians whatſoeuer, which for curioſitie to ſee, or loue to mee, will take paines to come hither; or for any purpoſe ſoeuer: beeing impoſſible their purpoſe can at any time be ill towards vs, which wiſh them in all things ſo wel. And becauſe you haue bin the Mouer and Perſwader of this buſineſſe, you alſo ſhall be the Actor of it, aſſuring my ſelfe that my Honour cannot be more ſecurely repoſed in any mans hands, then your owne: both in that I iudge of your owne diſpoſition; and more, in that which I know of your Obligation to me; beſides, There is none ſo proper an Executor of any Enterprize, as hee which is the firſt deuiſer of it: I humbly thanked his Maieſtie for his confidence; and excuſed my inabilitie to performe ſo great a charge; Many men being more fitter to propound then to execute: That requiring a particular valour and experience, which I had not. Notwithſtanding, ſince I would not giue his Maieſtie cauſe to ſuſpect, that I had intimated ſuch a thing vnto him; as eyther was ſo dangerous to carrie, or impoſſible to effect, that I durſt not for thoſe cauſes vndertake it: I would onely beſeech of his Maieſtie one of his Princes, eyther to be my Superiour or Equall in the Ambaſſage, or ſuch a one as might be abſolutely my Inferiour, for a Teſtimonie, onely of my aſſured comming from his Maieſtie. All which hee promiſed: commended my Reaſon and Prouidence in that point; and offering alſo Preſents of great value, and worth to accompany his Letters, which ſhould bee goodly Carpets, Swords and Daggers couered with Gold, and Iewels, Plumes according to their Countrey faſhion, and other things worthy to bee eſteemed, both for the price and rareneſſe. Then he told me I muſt recouer my ſelfe, ſtrengthen my minde and come abroad, that he might feaſt me before my departure.

Sir Anthonie Sherley his acceptance of the employment.

The Perſian magnificence in their ſolemne Feaſts.

For thirtie dayes continually, the King made that Feaſt in a great Garden of more then two miles compaſſe, vnder Tents pitched by certaine ſmall courſes of running water, like diuers Riuers, where euery man that would come, was placed according to his degree, eyther vnder one or other Tent, prouided for abundantly with Meate, Fruit, and Wine, drinking as they would, ſome largely, ſome moderately without compulſion. A Royaltie and Splendor which I haue not ſeene, nor ſhall ſee againe but by the ſame King: euer to bee prayſed for the conſtant Antiquite, if not for the reaſon of the expence. The ioy of the Feaſt was much augmented by two great Fortunes, which gaue themſelues at that time to the King; which were theſe: The Tartars of Buckehawrd (which haue euer beene of greateſt reputation amongſt all thoſe of the Orient, both for their valour in Armes and Wealth) moued vnto it through their owne diuiſions; the Captaines of which being of validitie and proper induſtry, to enflame the Ciuill diſſentions, and vnfit to temper their alternate good ſucceſſes, by the fame of the King of Perſiaes Iuſtice in Gouernment, and the felicitie which followed all his Enterprizes, were brought to conſent vnitely in one to ſend, and deliuer themſelues and their Countrey vnder his ſubiection. And the Great Mogor King of Labor mooued by the like fame, ſent a great Ambaſſador to deſire a Marriage betweene his eldeſt Sonnes Daughter, and Cephir Micza eldeſt Sonne to the King of Perſia, with a mightie Preſent, and as mightie offers both of readie money, and to pay thirtie thouſand men in any Warre, which the King of Perſia ſhould vndertake for ſeuen yeares.

Two great fortunes which befell the King during his Feaſt.

Firſt, The ſubmiſſion of the Tartars to his Crowne.

Secondly, The rich Preſent with the Alliance of the great Mogor offered to the Perſian.

The comming of two Friers to inſinuate with Sir Anthonie Sherley.

In this time came vnto me a Portugall Frier, named Alphonſo Cordero, of the Order of the Franciſcans Secular, and an other Armenian Frier of Ieruſalem, with a Meſſage from an other Frier of better eſtimation, called Nichola Di-Meto: the effect of which was this, that hee had beene Inquiſitor generall of the Indies, and his time being finiſhed, as alſo, hauing receiued commandement from the Pope and King of Spaine to returne, and for ſome other important cauſes to the Chriſtianitie of theſe parts, not beeing willing to attend the tedious Voyage of the Portugall Fleet by Sea, choſe rather the hazard to goe ouer Land.

But when hee came, though this inſinuation of his were like a good meane; and ſhewed to proceed from the beſt condition of ſpirits; Yet he did much degenerate from the name of a Chriſtian, much more of a Religious man, of a true Subiect to his Prince, and of a Pious wiſher to thoſe things which tended to the generall good of the whole Common-wealth of Chriſtendome.

For I vſed him with all thoſe duties and reuerences which I could poſſibly deuiſe, or any ambitious heart could deſire: which gaue (as it fell out) but a freer paſſage to the iniquitie of his ſoule; to my great griefe, preiudice of the eſtimation in thoſe parts of Religious men; and to the moſt infinite affliction of the other Franciſcan, that can bee expreſſed; hee beeing certainly a good man, and as farre as his vnderſtanding guided him, zealous to perſwade others to bee ſo, helping to expreſſe by a ſincere and holy Example of life what he wanted in Diſcourſe. But vbi Dei numen prætenditur ſceleribus, ſubit animum timor, ne fraudibus humanis vindicandis, diuini iuris aliquid immixtum violemus. For which reaſon I will ſay only this: that to free my ſelfe from the vnexpected croſſes which daily roſe againſt my buſineſſe, I preſſed the King as hotly (as ciuilly I could) for my diſpatch: which hee granted mee at the thirtie dayes end: hauing appointed Aſſan Chan a gallant young Prince to goe with mee: when it was concluded that Aſſan Chan ſhould goe, and his prouiſions were all ready, my Commiſſion and Patent (for the principall points of my buſineſſe) ſealed; the King marryed him to an Aunt of his, much againſt his Princes will and more to my griefe; none other of the great Ones hauing a ſpirit to apprehend only ſuch a Voyage, much leſſe a heart to performe it.

Sir Anthonies Enterprize hindred by his owne inſtrument.

So that beeing inſtantly ſued to by Cuchin-Allibi a Courtchie of ſixe Thomans Stipend by the Yeare, and in diſgrace alſo, for ſome ill part that hee had played, I (preſſed thereunto by the Vizier and Baſtan Aga) ſpake vnto the King that hee might goe with mee, in the forme onely of a Teſtimonie, though honoured with ſome good words in the Letters, for the better reputation of the Buſineſſe: which the King was exceeding backward in conſenting vnto, deſiring mee eyther to goe alone, or better accompanied.

At the laſt, I was vrged to take that fellow, and the King content to let him goe: But would beſtow on him no more then fiftie Tomans for the whole expence: which hee called alſo caſt away. Him I left to bring the appointed Preſent after mee; and the Letters to the particular Princes; which were then readie at my departure not ſealed, and the Preſent not throughly prouided: my ſelfe deſiring to free my ſelfe from the Court, where euery occaſion was receiued by thoſe, which were contrary to the Enterprize, to hinder it.

The cauſes for which the King of Perſia detained Sir Robert Sherley.

After I had taken my leaue of the King, the morning before my departure he came to find me againe at my Houſe: and after a little other ſpeech he ſaid vnto mee, That my abſence from him would exceedingly grieue him, his affection to me being true, and his hopes of me many. If hee had bin furniſhed of any fit to haue vndergone the management of this Affaire, hee would neuer haue enioyned me to ſo much trauaile, and ſo many perils, but that I knew his Court to bee ignorant of the Language and properties of our parts, and ſince he was prouoked by mee to ſend thither, hee knew that I would bee contented with my labour to keepe him and his, from all ſorts of ſcorne. That my Brother was young, and therefore the more to be tendered, and not euery day to be expoſed to new labours; his loue to vs both made him carefull in that point, but more particularly his infinite deſire of my returne; which he thought would be more aſſured by ſo deare a pawne: And by daily Relation which I ſhould receiue of his Royall vſage, I ſhould alſo be daily inuited to returne howſoeuer. If I met with ſuch Fortunes as would bee worthy to make me ſtay from him; or ſuch accidents as had power to hinder me by their neceſſitie; the company of my Brother ſhould giue him great ſatisfaction in my abſence. And if the worſt ſhould happen vnto me, he did deſire euer to haue a Subiect ſo neere vnto me, vpon whom he might make a declaration vnto the World, both of what qualitie his owne minde was; and of what condition his true and Royall affection towards me was.

Sir Robert Sherleys Anſwere to the King of Perſia.

Before I could anſwere this infinite fauourable and gracious ſpeech of his: my Brother, whoſe minde, apprehending that his ſtaying with the King, might bee of wonderfull effect, to keepe his minde conſtant in the reſolution which he had taken: and gheſſing at many occaſions which might happen in my abſence, anſwered the King preſently thus. That our two ſoules were ſo vnitely conioyned, that our wils were diuided in nothing, our affections to his Maieſty, and our deſires to ſerue him were the ſame, and ſuch as they could not bee ſeparated from his Commandements. But becauſe hee did deſire to haue one of vs, which was himſelfe, to remaine with him, he would doe it, &c.

Theſe words of his were graciouſly and tenderly receiued of the King, and after ſome teares on all parts, the King and himſelfe hauing brought mee ſome ſixe miles, wee all parted, they for the Court, my ſelfe for my Iourney, hauing firſt left with my Brother, my heart certainly, not onely for the coniunction which Nature had made betweene vs, but alſo for thoſe worthy ſparkes, which I found in him likely to bee brought to great perfection by his Vertue, which cannot leaue working in any, which will giue them way, much more in him, who will make way for them.

CHAP. II.

Sir ANTHONIE SHERLEY his Voyage ouer the Caſpian Sea and thorow Ruſſia: taken out of W. PARRY his Diſcourſe of the whole Voyage of Sir ANTHONIE, in which he accompanied him; publiſhed 1601.

VPon the Caſpian Sea (which wee were to croſſe) wee were two monethes before we landed: which time we endured with much paine, and no leſſe feare, hauing (beſides the naturall roughneſſe of the Sea) very much foule and ſtormy weather: by reaſon whereof we had beene like to haue ſuffered ſhipwracke, which twice ſtrooke on ground, ſo that we were conſtrayned to diſburden the ſame of a great part of our ſubſtance. Howbeit in the end God ſo bleſſed vs, that in two moneths wee came to our wiſhed Harbour. Where beeing arriued, the Gouernour hauing Intelligence of our Landing, ſent a Captaine with a Guard to receiue vs, and to conduct vs to the Caſtle of Haſter-caune, * where was landed but the day before, an Ambaſſadour that the King of Perſia had ſent a moneth before, onely to make our paſſage through the Emperour of Ruſſia his Countrey. From which Caſtle to Muſco Towne, we were by Riuer and by Land, ten weekes paſſing. All which time Sir Anthonie and his Company, with the other Ambaſſadours and their

* Aſtracan.

Attendants, were all at the charge of the Ruſſian Emperour (for ſo is the cuſtome of that Countrey, to all Trauellers of that nature, as long as they are paſſing through his Dominions) who eats ſuch meate as is brought before them gratis, hauing withall, a Guard ſet ouer them, ſo that they are little better then Priſoners, as long as they are within the limits of his Territories.

Valga.

Caſſan.

From Haſter-caune wee paſt by Boate along the mightie Riuer of Volgo, vntill wee came to a Towne named Negſon, which was ſeuen weekes paſſage. In which time, we ſaw nothing worthy the noting, but three or foure woodden Caſtles or Block-houſes to guard that Riuer, which Riuer doth bring maruellous great Commodities to the Emperour, and to the whole Countrey. Diuers Tartars paſſing from place to place about that Riuer, liuing in little Houſes made vpon Wheeles, and are carryed too and fro, hauing abundance of Cattell, liue ſo in ſubiection to the Emperour, paying him Tribute, &c. One onely faire Citie wee ſaw all that while called Caſſane, wherein we were: from whence we paſſed to Negſon aforeſaid, where by the way fell out a Iarre betweene Sir Anthonie and the other Ambaſſadour, becauſe Sir Anthonie preſumed to reprehend him for diuers miſdemeanors which he committed, to the diſhonour of his King and Countrey: Inſomuch, that had we not had guard in our Company, one of vs had killed another. Leauing here a while, I will turne againe to the Frier, * who was by this time growne into mortall hatred with his fellow Frier, of whom before I ſpake, whoſe name was Alfonſo, a Frier of the Order of Saint Francis. Which Frier had acquainted Sir Anthonie, that Frier Nicolao had ſpent his life moſt lewdly in the Indies, the particularities whereof he at large related. Moreouer, hee told him, that by reaſon of his licentious life, the King of Spaine had ſent for him, becauſe hee did much more hurt then good in thoſe parts, but neuer would come vntill now that he was going thither-ward. He alſo told Sir Anthonie, that that Preſent which he deliuered the King of Perſia in his owne name, was ſent by a Friend of the Kings from Ormus, by another, who had withall, a Letter to the King. Which Bearer, (being of his Acquaintance) hee inueigled and inticed by the gift of fiftie Crownes, and faire words, to deliuer him the Preſent, together with the Letter to carry to the King, who finally preuailed with him. And when he came to Perſia, hee ſuppreſſed the Letter, but deliuered the Preſent in his owne name, as before is declared.

* He hath told in the former part of his ſtory, of the Friers Whoredomes, Adulteries, Sodomies, &c. to lothſome to blot our paper.

Vpon diſcouery of which villanies, Sir Anthonie tooke him Priſoner, and carryed him along with him, as one depriued of former libertie. And being come to Negſon, we ſtayed there neere hand a moneth. Towards the end whereof the Emperour ſent a great man of his Court thither, for to accompany and conduct vs to Muſco, who gaue the preheminence to the Perſian Ambaſſador, in that he was Ambaſſadour to the Emperour from the Perſian, and Sir Anthonie but a Paſſenger through his Countrey, as he eſteemed him, and ſo did vſe him at his pleaſure, to Sir Anthonies ſmall contentment, vntil we came to Muſco, where we were entertayned in the beſt ſort they could, with a crue of Aquauita-bellyed Fellowes, clad in Coates of Cloth of Gold: which ſhew being ended, for the firſt encounter, thoſe Coates were put vp againe into the Treaſurie or Wardrobe, and we ſhut vp in Priſon for ten dayes, yea all acceſſe of others to vs, or we to them was thereby vtterly barred. In which time wee ſent to entreate, that either our Engliſh Merchants might bee permitted to come to vs, or that wee might goe or ſend to them for neceſſaries, becauſe we were not fitted with Clothes (as we thought) conuenient for the Emperors preſence. Whereupon the Lord Chancellor ſent for the Merchants, enquiring of them what Sir Anthonie was, and whether they durſt giue him any credit. To whom they replyed, that hee was nobly deſcended, and allyed euen to the beſt men of England: yea, and that they would giue him credit for as much as they were worth. Hereupon they had libertie to ſend vs ſuch neceſſaries as we ſent for, but no libertie to come to vs, much leſſe we to them. The tenth day we were ſent for to come before the Emperour after their order, which was, to lay downe in a note, how euery man ſhould be marſhalled in comming (being all on Horſebacke) wherein the Perſian Ambaſſadour was appointed by the Emperour to haue the firſt and chiefe place, the next, that Perſian that was ſent but to accompany Sir Anthonie, and the laſt of the three ſhould be Sir Anthonie himſelfe. Which when Sir Anthonie perceiued, he vtterly refuſed to goe in that Order, becauſe that he, to whoſe truſt and charge the whole buſineſſe had beene committed, and by whom the ſame was ſolely procured: by which Perſia likewiſe ſhould be infinitely benefited (ſpecially hee being a Chriſtian, and they Pagans) ſhould bee put hindermoſt in the march, that was the foremoſt in the matter.

Sir. Anthonies refuſall to goe.

By the meanes of which refuſall, he purchaſed the Emperors diſpleaſure: and to manifeſt the ſame, firſt, he took the Frier from Sir Antonie, and gaue him his libertie to go whither he thought good. Next, he daily ſent his great Dukes to examine Sir Anthonie vpon diuers friuolous particularities, to proue, if they thereby might grope out ſome matter of aduantage againſt him. Thus daily he was extremely vexed and moleſted by the Emperour, the Perſian Embaſſadour, withall ſetting on the Frier vnder-hand, to deuiſe all the villanie hee could againſt him, as to ſay, he knew Sir Anthonie to be but a man of meane parentage, and alſo, that he was come but as a Spie through the Countrey for purpoſes tending to his owne good, and not of Perſia and Chriſtendome, as he pretended. Whereupon they tooke all the Kings Letters from him, and opened them, to know the purport thereof.

Frier a Lyer.

So

Soone after, Sir Anthonie and the Frier were brought before the Commiſſioners to be further examined: where Sir Anthonie (being inflamed with Choler, by reaſon of his exceeding ill vſage, notwithſtanding the goodneſſe of the cauſe of his comming) demanded whether the Emperour did euer purpoſe to ſend any Embaſſadours to any other Countries; Proteſting, that if euer he met with them in any parts of the world, beſides their owne, he would indeuour to let them know he was not halfe ſo well intreated in Ruſſia, as the cauſe of his comming of right deſerued, and the Emperour, by the lawes Diuine and Ciuill ought to haue performed, and the rather, becauſe he was a Chriſtian, ſuch as he pretends himſelfe to bee, and came (as became a Chriſtian) for the generall good of all Chriſtendome, the Perſian being ſtirred vp thereunto by his onely meanes. Whereupon the Frier in termes thwarted Sir Anthonie, whoſe bloud already boyled, with the exceſſe of his cholers heat, which as then abounded. And being by that graceleſſe and vngratefull Frier further prouoked, he (not able, though inſtantly hee ſhould haue died for it) to ſuppreſſe his heat, gaue the fat Frier ſuch a ſound box on the face (his double cauſe of choler redoubling his might, deſire of reuenge withall augmenting the ſame) that downe falls the Frier, as if he had beene ſtrucke with a Thunder-bolt. Which being done, (with that courage and high reſolution which well appeared in his lookes, words, and deeds) they forthwith gaue ouer examination, becauſe they had too farre examined Sir Anthonies patience, which well they with feare (as I thinke) ſaw, and the Frier (almoſt paſt feare) did farre better feele. Whereupon they went inſtantly to the Emperour, and informed him of all that had hapned, and how Sir Anthonie was reſolued. For which (as by the euent it appeared) he was vſed the better. For from thence forwerd we had libertie to goe to the Engliſhmen, of whom wee were very honourably entertayned, and royally feaſted. Howbeit wee were conſtrayned to remayne there ſixe moneths, expecting euery day (for all this) ſome miſchiefe to be done vnto vs, or to be ſent into ſome part of his Countrey to bee kept, where wee ſhould not haue heard from our friends in haſte, which we feared worſe then death. Yet, in the end, wee were eſtſoones ſent for before the Priuie Councell, where Sir Anthonie had his charge to bee gone, which was no ſmall ioy to vs all.

S. A. ſtriketh the Frier.

Offering of a Bell and an Image to a Friery.

But the day before we left Muſcouia, it was my fortune to ſee the King, and his Queene, in ceremonious and triumphant manner paſſing out of the Citie, with a great Image, and a huge Bell, to offer to a certaine Friery ſome thirtie miles off, which was performed in this ſort. Firſt, all the morning diuers troops of Horſe paſſed out of the Citie, to ſtand readie to receiue him at his comming out of the gate. About midday the King ſetting forwards, his Guard formoſt, all on horſe-backe, to the number of fiue hundred, all clad in ſtammell Coats, riding in ranke, three and three, with Bowes and Arrowes, and Swords girt to them, as alſo Hatchets vnder the one thigh. After the Guard, were led by twentie men, twentie goodly Horſes, with very rich and curious Saddles, and ten more for his Sonne and Heire apparant, being a child of twelue yeeres of age. After which was led in like ſort, twentie beautifull white Horſes, for the Queenes Chariots, hauing onely vpon them a fine ſheet, and on their heads a crimſon veluet Bridle. After them came a great number of Friers in their rich Coapes, ſinging, carrying many Pictures, and Lights. After them followed the greateſt part of the Merchants of the Citie. Next them was led the Kings Horſe, for that day, together with his ſonnes: the Kings Saddle and furniture moſt richly beſet with Stones of great price and beautie. Then followed the Patriarch, with all the Arch-biſhops, Biſhops, and great Prelates ſinging in their Coapes, very rich and glorious, hauing huge Images borne before them, being very richly inlayed with precious Gemmes of diuers colours, and Lights about them. Then followed the King himſelfe, who had in his left hand his Sonne aboue mentioned, and in his right hand his Cap. Next him came the Queene, ſupported on either ſide by two old Ladies, her face euen thickely plaiſtered with painting, as were the other Ladies (according to the cuſtome of the Countrey) her bodie very groſſe, her eyes hollow and farre into her head, attended with ſome threeſcore very faire women (if painting (which they hold a matter religious) deceiued not the iudgement of mine eye.) All whoſe apparell was very rich, beſet with Pearle curiouſly wrought, hauing white Hats on their heads, with great round Bands laden with Pearle. Wee neuer ſaw Hats worne by any woman in the Countrey, but by them onely. Next vnto them were drawne three huge Chariots; the firſt, with ten faire white Horſes, two and two; the ſecond, with eight; and the third, with ſixe in like order: which Chariots were all very rich and gorgeous within and without. After which all the Noblemen paſſed in Coaches. Then was carried, in a great Chiſt, the forenamed Image, guarded by a Great man and State of the Countrey, with ſome fiue hundred vnder his command, for the guard aud conuoy of that Image. And laſt of all came that huge Bell, being of twentie tunne weight, drawne by three thouſand and fiue hundred men (not being poſſible to be drawne by Oxen or Horſes) in manner following. They faſtned ſixe exceding long hawſers, or mightie great Cable-ropes in ſixe lengths to the frame whereon the Bell was placed. In this ranke of ropes were placed thoſe three thouſand fiue hundred men, with little cords ouer their ſhoulders, faſtned to the great hawſers, drawing after the manner of our Weſterne Barge-men here in England.

Proceſſion.

Painting.

Image.

Huge Bell drawne by 3500. men.

The poiſe of the Bell was ſo great, that paſſing along the ſtreets of Muſco (being paued with great ſquare pieces of Timber ſet cloſe one by another) the wood of the frame or carriage whereon the Bell was drawne, ſet the timber of the ſtreets on fire, through both the woods chafing together, ſo that ſome were faine to follow hard after, to throw on water, as the timber began to ſmoke. And thus was this Bell and the Image conueyed to the Friery, as hath afore beene ſaid.

The next day following wee tooke our iourney (that is to ſay, in mid May) towards Saint Nicolas, to take ſhipping, which was ſome ſixe weekes paſſage by land and riuer. During all which time, we ſaw nothing in a manner, but Woods and water. But being come to the Sea ſide, being the place where we were to take ſhip, we ſtayed there one moneth for prouiſion for our iourney. In which time we were diuers times inuited aboord Engliſh ſhips, where wee were royally banquetted at the Agents charges and the Merchants. To the ſolemnization of which Banquets wee had three hundred great ſhot. And as wee ſtayed there, one Maſter Megricke a Merchant came from Muſco, and brought the Friers two Letters with him, reporting that the Lord Chancellour, in ſatisfaction of the wrong and ill vſage hee extended to Sir Anthonie, ſent after the Frier to the borders, who tooke both his Letters and all his ſubſtance that he had deceitfully and lewdly gotten in many yeeres before in the Indiaes from him, leauing him not ſo much as his Friers Weede: and whether hee cauſed his throat to bee cut, it was vncertaine, but not vnlike.

Frier puniſhed

Stode.

From hence we tooke ſhip for Stode, being ſixe weekes vpon the Sea ere wee could recouer it. In which time wee were continually toſſed and tumbled with contrarie Winds: and once had beene like to haue beene vtterly caſt away, ſo that wee all were ouerwhelmed in deſpaire, as we were at point to be in the Sea, but that (by Gods protection and direction) we (paſt all expectation) fell vpon the Flie. Where, (hauing diuers Letters of Sir Anthonies to his friends in England) I parted from him (he holding his courſe toward the Emperour of Germanie:) from thence I came to the Teſſell, then to the Firme: ſo to the Hage: from the Hage to Vliſſing: and finally, from thence to Douer, where I landed in the midſt of the moneth of September, in the three and fortieth yeere of the Queenes Maieſties Raigne, and in the yeere of our Lord God 1601.

Chap. III.

Two Voyages of Maſter Iohn Newberie, One, into the Holy Land; The other to Balſara, Ormus, Perſia, and backe thorow Turkie.

I Iohn Newberie Citizen and Merchant of London, deſirous to ſee the World, the eighth of March, 1578. according to the computation of the Church of England, began a Voyage from the Citie of London to Tripolie in Syria, and thence to Ioppe and Hieruſalem, and the Countrey round about adioyning, which I performed in paſſing through France to Marceils, where I embarqued my ſelfe, and paſſing through the Leuant or Mediterrane Sea, arriued in Tripolie the thirteenth day of May; and within few dayes after at Ioppe, and thence at Hieruſalem, and the chiefe places thereabout: And ſpending a moneth in viſiting the Monuments of thoſe Countries, I returned to Ioppe the tenth of Iune, 1579. And the fifteenth of the ſaid moneth arriued againe in Tripolie; from whence ſhortly after I viſited Mount Libanus, and returning ſpeedily to the ſaid Port of Tripolie, I embarqued my ſelfe in a ſhip of Marceils, the firſt of Iulie, and the three and twentieth of the ſaid moneth, I put in at Candia; and the ſeuenth day of September, arriued ſafely in Marceils, and paſſing through France by Lions, Paris, Roan, and Diepe. The tenth of Nouember of the aforeſaid yeere 1579. by Gods helpe arriued ſafely in London.

I the ſaid Iohn Newbery * being incouraged by the proſperous ſucceſſe of my former Voyage to Tripoly, Hieruſalem, and Mount Lybanus, vndertooke a farre more long and dangerous voyage, by the Straights of Gibraltar, the Mediterranean Sea, the aforeſaid Tripoly, and downe the Riuer of Euphrates, as farre as the Citie of Ormus in the Gulfe of Perſia, and from thence through the Countrey of Lar, and the moſt Eaſterne parts of Perſia, to Media, Armenia, Georgia, Carmania, Natolia, and ſo to Conſtantinople, and from thence by the Blacke Sea, called in old time Pontus Euxinus, into the Mouth of the Riuer Danubius by ſhipping, and ſo a great way vp the ſaid Riuer, paſſing by the parts of Bugdania and Valachia, at length landing, I came to Caminetz, the firſt Frontier Towne of Poland; and paſſing through that Kingdome, arriued in Pruſſia, and came to Elbing, and Dantzk, and Quinsborow, where imbarquing my ſelfe, I paſſed through the Sound of Denmark, and arriued at Hull in England, and ſo ouer land trauelled to London, whither I came the laſt day of Auguſt, 1582. making my voyage in the ſpace of two yeeres, lacking nineteene dayes. This voyage at large I performed in this manner.

* This Voyage (as the former) for Time, is before that of Sir Anthonie Sherley; but that in honour of the Perſon and employment hath and deſerueth precedence.

The nineteenth day of September, 1580. accompanied with Maſter William Barret an Engliſh Merchant. I departed from London in a good ſhip, called the White Hinde, and the fifteenth of Nouember came to Sonthie in Candie. The one and twentieth we arriued at the Citie of Candia. The ſixt day of December wee ſet ſayle with our ſhip from Fraſchia on our voyage: and the eight at night, we had like to haue runne vpon the Ile of the Rhodes, ſetting our courſe Eaſt from the Ile of Scarpanto. The eighteenth day we had ſight of Cyprus.

The Citie of Candia.

The Ile of Scarpanto.

The firſt day of Ianuarie we arriued in Tripoli. And the third and fourth dayes, our ſhip called the White Hinde, diſcharged all her goods. The French-men brought fortie Barrels of Tinne on Shoare in their Boat. The fifth day of Ianuarie at night, there was ſuch a ſtorme, that in the Roade of Tripoli there were two ſhips caſt away, and the French-mans Boat.

They arriue at Tripoli in Syria, the firſt of Ianuarie.

The fourteenth of Ianuarie, 1580. after the account of the Church of England, Maſter William Barret and I departed from Tripoli, and lodged the ſame day at an houſe called a Cane; and the next day after, we paſſed by a Caſtle to the Sea-ward, called Draa. The ſixteenth day, we paſſed by a ſtrong Caſtle, called Ewſen. The ſeuenteenth, wee lay at Mowaa. The eighteenth day in the morning about nine of the clocke, wee came to Metteni: and within halfe an houre after, Maſter William Barret rode with our Ianizarie to Aman, which is within three leagues of Metteni. The nineteenth day in the morning, wee came to Sibi a Caſal: and the ſame day about noone I came to Aman; and ſtayed there ſome ſixe dayes. The fiue and twentieth, wee came from Aman, and the ſame night ſlept at a Village, called Det. The ſix and twentieth, at Marra. The ſeuen and twentieth from thence, and the ſame day we came to Ledeghe, where great ſtore of Soape is made: that night we lay at a Village, called Sarraket, neere to Syrmin: and the eight and twentieth day came to the Citie of Aleppo. The Caſtle ſtandeth to the Southward off the Towne. The one and thirtieth of Ianuarie, wee had a great banquet made vs in the houſe of the French Conſul. The one and twentieth of Februarie about nine of the clocke in the morning, was ſeene in Aleppo an extraordinarie Starre or Comet, which aſcended from the North, and deſcended toward to North-weſt.

Draa.
Ewſen.
Mowaa.
Metteni.
Sibi.
Aman.
Det.
Marra.
Sarraket.
Aleppo.

The nineteenth of March in the morning, I departed from Aleppo with an hyred ſeruant of mine, called Iacomo de Franciſco, to proceed on mine intended voyage to Ormuz, lying in the Mouth of the Perſian Gulfe. And about two of the clocke in the afternoone I paſſed by Boab, where is an high Tower vpon an Hill: and the ſame night I came to a Village, called Halſe. And the twentieth day we departed from thence, and the ſame day came to Bir. The Towne of Bir ſtandeth vpon the Eaſt ſide of the Riuer Frat or Euphrates: and the water commeth directly from the North, and deſcendeth to the South. Here is great ſtore of Linnen cloth made, and great ſtore of Waxe: here is alſo great ſtore of Corne and Fiſh, and Cordouan skins, and Hony. At Bir the Merchants doe pay for euery ſumme or packe of all commodities, one Sehid or Madin, for Toll. After we had hyred vs a Barke and furniture for our voyage, wee ſet forward; and the ſix and twentieth day, wee paſſed by a Village to the Eaſt of the Riuer, called Raick; and the ſame day in the euening by a Mountaine to the Weſt of the Water, where is one houſe with one Tower on the top of it. And there the Arabians offered to ſhoote at vs. The next day in the morning, we paſſed by a Caſtle, called Balleſſe, which is ruinated, and ſtandeth on the Weſt ſide of the Riuer. And about noone the ſame day by a Towne, called Gabbar, which ſtandeth vpon a Mountaine to the Eaſt of the Riuer. The eight and twentieth day, we paſſed by an old Towne where is a Caſtle all ruinated, and lyeth cloſe vpon the Water to the Eaſtward, which is called Racca: and it ſtandeth North North-eaſt of the Water. The thirtieth day in the morning, we paſſed by a Towne and a Caſtle all ruinate, which lyeth to the Weſt of the Water, and is called Balladac; which in times paſt was the Chriſtians. The ſame night wee came to a Towne, called Dier, which lyeth alſo to the Weſt of the Riuer, and is inuironed with the Water round about. Here the Patron of our Barke ſold his Hony, for nine Aſpers the Rotila: and one Rotila of Bir maketh two Rotilas there.

This Maſter William Barret, was the firſt Engliſh Conſul in Aleppo, as appeareth by Maſter Eldreds Relation.

Boab.
Halſe.
Bir.
Raick.
Balleſſe.
Gabbar.
Racca.
Balladac.
Dier.

The firſt day of April, 1581. from Dier, and the ſame night we lay neere vnto a Caſtle, called Rab, which lyeth to the Weſt of the Water. The ſecond day in the morning, wee paſſed by Aſhar, a ſmall Towne, which lyeth to the Weſt of the Water. The third day in the morning, we paſſed by Subercan, which lyeth to the Eaſt of the Water, and is all ruinate, and in times paſt was the Chriſtians. The fourth day we paſſed by a Village, called Manalle, to the Weſt of the Riuer. And the ſame night to Anna, which lyeth vpon both ſides of the Water, but to the Weſt is the greateſt part: But the Eaſt ſide reacheth farther then the other, as may bee perceiued by the Date Trees and Houſes. This Towne of Anna is very long, and there is about the middle of it a Caſtle, which is inuironed with Water, as alſo diuers Ilands to the number of fourteene or fifteene, which lye all to the Northward of the Caſtle, except two or three. Here are great ſtore of Dates, Oranges, Pomgranats, Figs, Limons, Corne, and Muttons. The eight day we departed from thence, and went but very little way, by reaſon of very great winde and ſtormie weather: which began the fifth, and continued vntill the eleuenth day: and the winde was moſt commonly at North-eaſt. The tenth day, wee came to Addetta, and the ſame night to Gebbar, which lyeth to the Eaſt of the Water; and there we were at a wedding. The eleuenth day we Aprill, 1581.

Rab.
Aſhar.
Subercan.
Manalle.
Anna.
Addetta.
Gebbar.

Heit.
Pitch boyling out of the ground continually.
Ambar.
Feluge.
Searching for money.
Bagdet.
* Babylon.
Maſter William Hareborne, and Maſter William Barret.
Bourac.
Menil.
Amor.
Sekia.
Kendege.
Gurna ſtandeth on the Point, where the Riuers of Furro and Bagdet doe meet.

departed from Gebbar, and the ſame day came to Heit, where is a Caſtle to the Weſt of the Riuer: and a little from the Caſtle to the South-weſt, is a place, where Pitch boyleth out of the Ground continually; ſo that all the ſandie ground toward the Riuers ſide is ouer-flowed therewith. Diuers Camels haue fallen into theſe Springs, but none of them could be ſaued. All the way betweene Anna and Heit are continually on both ſides the Riuer Houſes, and Date Trees, with Corne and diuers Fruits. The twelfth day wee departed from Heit. The thirteenth day we came to Ambar, which is a village, and lyeth on the Eaſt ſide of the Riuer. The fourteenth we went from thence, and the ſame morning arriued at Feluge; where the goods are landed that come from Bir. There I was ſearched for money, and the Searcher found all that I had; but in conſideration that he ſhould keepe it ſecret, I gaue him two Sehids, and to him that writeth vp the goods two Sehids more; which they receiued, and yet wrote vnto Bagdet, that I had foure bags of money. So that about three or foure miles from Bagdet met with vs an Officer to accompanie vs to the Towne, becauſe they would be ſure of the money. Notwithſtanding, by the meanes of one Muſtafa a Turke, I gaue this Officer three and thirtie Madins, wherewithall he was content, and kept it ſecret. So, ſhortly after we came to the Market place, where I was ſearched, but no money could bee found. There wee remayned about two houres, and then went into a Can. The next day in the morning wee went ouer the Water, and were no ſooner out of the Boat, but we were ſearched, but nothing found. From thence we went into the Hammam, and ſo returned to our lodging. The fourteenth day about eight of the clocke at night, we went from Feluge by land, in the companie of an hundred Aſſes. The fifteenth day about one of the clocke in the afternoone, wee came to Bagdet. The ſixteenth day of April, I did ſee Barley that was ripe and cut downe, neere to Bagdet. Old * Bagdet ſtandeth to the North of Bagdet, about twentie or fiue and twentie miles. The ſeuenteenth day, we paſſed through Bagdet. One Caſtle ſtandeth to the South-eaſt of the Towne, vpon the South ſide of the Water, and another to the North-weſt of the Water vpon the North ſide, where the Baſſa doth keepe his Court, whoſe name is Haſſan Baſſa. The twentieth day, there was a Chriſtian which came into the Can to call vs forth: but becauſe wee did not vnderſtand him, wee remayned ſtill in the Magaſin. So, preſently came foure for to ſearch vs, and they found our money. The two and twentieth day, I wrote Letters to Maſter William Hareborne, and Maſter William Barret, by a Merchant of Aleppo, and directed my Letters to Maſter Iohn Blanch, Conſul of the French Merchants in Aleppo. The foure and twentieth day in the euening, I went from Bagdet. The ſix and twentieth day at night, we paſſed by a Towne, called Bourac, which lyeth to the Weſt of the Water, and is all ruinated. And a little below that ſtandeth a Tower in the middle of the Riuer. The ſeuen and twentieth, we paſſed by a Towne, called Menil, which lyeth to the Eaſt of the Water: and there is but one Tower ſtanding. The ſame day, by a place called Amor, which lyeth cloſe vpon the Water to the Eaſtward, and is a ſmall Caſal. The thirtieth day in the morning, wee paſſed by a Towne, called Sekia, which lyeth to the Eaſt of the Water: and the ſame day by a very long Village, named Kendege, to the Eaſt of the Water, and it is all ruinated. Alſo the ſame day in the euening, we came to Gurna, which is a Caſtle, and ſtandeth vpon the Point where the Riuer of Furro and the Riuer of Bagdet doe meet. And vpon the South ſide of Furro, right ouer againſt this Caſtle is another Caſtle, about the greatneſſe of this. And about three miles farther in the Riuer, toward Balſara, to the South of the Water, is another.

May 1581.
Balſara.
Cuſtome.

The firſt day of May, 1581. I arriued in Balſara. At the Waters ſide at Balſara, the merchandiſe that enter within the Can, pay vpon euery Summe or Camels burden three Madins and three quarters; ſixteene Veſſennes of Balſara make one Kintall of Aleppo. The carriage of euery ſumme of goods from Bagdet to Balſara, coſteth by water ſixe Shehides. And for the carriage from Balſara to Bagdet, vpon euery Veſſene two Madins. And the carriage of one hundred Veſſenes from Balſara to Ormuz, coſteth twentie Larins, and from Ormuz to Balſara twentie Larins. The Cuſtome in Balſara is vpon euery fourteene Shehides one. And for Glaſſe, and ſuch like commodities, accordingly. Clothes, Kerſies, and all kinde of Silkes, pay vpon euery twentie one. And vpon euery ten Veſſenes or ten Rotilas, there are three to bee allowed for Tarr or Waſte: and vpon all Spicerie accordingly. The Towne of Balſara ſtandeth to the Eaſt South-eaſt of the Riuer: and without the Towne are diuers Baſars or Market places, and their Houſes are made of Canes or great Reedes. And their Corne lyeth all on heapes without the Towne vpon the ground couered with Mats, and is ſold by the weight. There are about Balſara foure Gates; and a little from the North Gate lye ten peeces of Ordnance great and ſmall, beſides two Baſiliſcoes, that lye vnder the wall at the entring of the Gate. Their building is of Brick, which is made of a certaine kind of ſtuffe, that may be cut with a knife. There is without the Towne a very high Pole ſet vp, which is of three pieces; and vpon the top of it a Cup of Tinne or Lead; and there they runne with their Horſes, and ſhoote at the Cup; and he that hitteth the Cup gayneth a Shaffe. At Balſara the Water doth ebbe and flow, as it doth in England, and in no other places adioyning vpon the Ocean Sea. The Turke won Balſara about the yeere 1550. The Veſſene of Maces is worth in Balſara thirteene Duckats, and Nut-megs fiue or ſixe Duckats: Soape is worth fifteene Shehids the Veſſene, and Almonds foure and twentie Shehids the Veſſene: Galles are worth ten Larins the Veſſene.

The thirteenth day of May, 1581. I embarked my ſelfe at Balſara: and the ſixteenth wee valed downe about three flight ſhot. Halfe a dayes iourney from the Towne, to the Eaſt of the Riuer lye eight or ten Bulwarks, and beyond them all is a Caſtle vpon the Point of a Land. The two and twentieth day in the afternoone, wee came to an Anchor, becauſe it was too much winde. The three and twentieth in the morning, we ſayled vntill ten of the clocke, and then came to an Archor, becauſe they were afraid to put to Sea toward night. The Mariners are all beaſts. The foure and twentieth day in the morning, we put to Sea with a faire winde: and the ſame day by noone, we were at the Sea. And all that morning, wee kept our courſe South, and when wee were at the Sea, South or South South-eaſt. The fiue and twentieth day in the morning, we had ſight of a Mountaine of Aggemy, a day ſhort of Aboſha: and then we kept our courſe Eaſt South-eaſt. And the ſame day, we arriued at an Iland, called Carreghe, which belongeth to the Countrey of Haggemy, and left it to the South of vs. The ſixe and twentieth day, we landed in the Iland of Carege: and there is great ſtore of Onions, and Wells of freſh water; and in the middle of the Iland is a Caſal. The Iland is about two miles broad and two miles long. And to the North-weſt of it lyeth a ſmall Iland very low in the water. The ſeuen and twentieth day in the morning, wee ſet ſayle from Careghe; and the ſame day paſſed by the low Land of Perſia, which lyeth vnder the high Mountaines. And in diuers places are certaine Gulfs like Riuers. The ſame day in the euening, wee were at Abouſher, which is a Caſtle. And from thence wee kept our courſe South South-eaſt to goe cleere of the Land: it is very high Land. The nine and twentieth day in the morning, the Boat went on ſhoare for water; and I went alſo on ſhoare with the Boat: and the water which we tooke did ſtinke, and was full of mud and vermine. And in this order is all their water in the Countrey of Caſſel-Baſh. The laſt day of May, we paſſed by a very high Cliffe, and vpon it is a Rocke like vnto a Barne, which lyeth Eaſt and Weſt, and to the Weſt end of it lyeth a round Rocke, which is like an Hay-cocke, about two yards high. And this Cliffe is within three dayes ſayling of Ormuz. And there the ſhips put off from the Land that goe for the Ile of Baharem: and there we kept our courſe North-eaſt. The Weſt end of this Cliffe is white like Chalke or Snow. This day, one of our Mariners being ſick, another of his fellowes came with an hot Iron and burnt him in the ſole of the foote. Another they would haue left in an Iland becauſe he was ſicke, who anſwered, That hee truſted they did not take him for a Hen.

They enter into the Perſian Gulfe.

The Ile of Carreghe, or Carge.

Abouſher a Caſtle.

A very high Cliffe.

The Ile of Baharem, where the excellent pearles are gotten.

The ſecond day of Iune came a Boat aboard of vs, which came from Ormuz, and was bound for the Ile of Baharem. The ſame day, wee paſſed by a Mountaine which is like a Caſtle, and vpon the top of it is a Rocke like vnto a little watch houſe. The fourth day of Iune we tooke in freſh water. The ſeuenth day, we departed from the place where wee tooke in water; and the ſame day we arriued at an Iland, called Shie, which is vnder the Portugals: and vpon the Weſt end of it are two companies of Date Trees, and two round Knobs like two Hay-cocks, and it is a plaine Iland. The aforeſaid ſeuenth day at night, wee came to an Anchor at Shie: and to the South of it lyeth a ſmall Iland, where they fiſh for Pearles. The eight day wee went on ſhoare there. The ninth day, we departed from Shiche, and the ſame day we landed at Necchel, which is about foure leagues diſtant. I paid for carrying of my things on ſhoare at Necchel two Larins, and for landing of them fiue Larins. The women here weare long Mantles, which they draw after them like a traine: and farther in the Countrey they weare their Garments with three ſlits, one before, and one on either ſide; and their ſleeues are like the ſleeues of Morris-dancers. And they haue round about their eares pack-threed ſewed. Alſo they weare great Rings in their Noſes; and about their Legs, Armes, and Necks, Iron hoopes.

Iune.

Shie or Seche, an Iland vnder the Portugals.

A ſmall Iland to the South of Shie or Seche.

Necchel. They land here.

The eleuenth day, we departed from Necchel. The twelfth day in the morning, we came to a great Caſal, called Melgor, where lyeth a Captaine called Shiagh: and here we remayned three dayes, and were in great danger of being taken ſlaues, but God kept vs. This Caſal lyeth betweene the Mountaines. The fourteenth day in the euening, wee left this wicked place, where I paid ten Larins for my part. The women here may throw their Dugs ouer their ſhoulders. The eighteenth day, we came to a Caſal, called Geſſer, and the ſame day from thence. The nineteenth day, wee lodged at Bender. The twentieth, wee departed from Bender, and the ſame euening came at an Iland, called Left. And right ouer againſt Bender, lyeth an Iland, called Baſſedor; and theſe two Ilands are vnder the Portugals. And Geſſer and Bender, which are on the mayne Land, are vnder Abrehem Can, and ſometimes were vnder the King of Ormuz. The one and twentieth day, I went on Land on the Ile of Left: And here the women weare Iron hoopes, and a number of other things about their Necks, Legs, and Armes. The two and twentieth day of Iune, 1581. I arriued at Ormuz, and preſently was carried before the Captaine, whoſe name was Don Gonſaluo. The ſame day I hyred an houſe for ſixe Larins. The Caſtle of Ormuz ſtandeth to the North of the Towne, and ſome thing to the Eaſtward. Diuers both men and women here vſe to ſlit the lower part of their eares more then two inches, which hangeth downe to their chin. There were in my companie from Necchel to Ormuz one Turke, and one Moore of Labor, and one Moore of Fez in Barbarie, and fiue Perſians, and twelue Moores of Aleppo, Aman, and other places, and one Noſtrane, a Chriſtian, and my man, who was a Greeke: and all Melgor, a great Caſal.

Geſſer, a Caſal.

Bender.

Left, an Iland.

Baſſedor, an Iland.

He came to Ormuz the two and twentieth of Iune, 1581.

theſe

Improbus extremos currit Mercator ad Indos.

theſe at Melgor ſware vpon a Booke that I was a Chriſtian of Aleppo, and had wife and children, and an houſe there.

The cauſe of the exceſſiue heat in Ormus.

Long-clawed Swine.

A Caſtle called, The great Maſtango.

Iulie.

Michael Stropene.

It is a great miracle to ſee the Mountaines of Ormus, all of Salt, and as hard as a Flint ſtone: and this Salt is very good for diuers diſeaſes. All the Iland is ſalt, and the very ground where the Towne doth ſtand is ſalt: which is the cauſe of the exceſſiue heat that is there. From eight of the clocke in the morning vntill the Sunne goe downe, it is not poſſible for any bodie, that is not vſed to the Countrey, to paſſe either with ſhooes or bare-foot, where the Sunne doth lie, it is ſo extreme hot. The Swine in Ormus haue clawes of a quarter of an ell long, and ſome longer. The Portugals doe hold a Caſtle ouer againſt Ormus, in the Countrey of the King of Lar, where they keepe ten or twelue Souldiers: the name of which Caſtle is called, The great Maſtango. The ſeuenth day of Iulie, my man Iacomo, which was a Greeke, went from mee to one Michael Stropene a Venetian, being, as I ſuſpect, entiſed thereunto by him, to vnderſtand my ſecret purpoſes: and in very deed, in my laſt Voyage into theſe parts, in the yeere 1583. this Michael Stropene betrayed me and my companie to the Gouernour of Ormus.

Of his and Fitches impriſonment at Goa, ſee Linſchoten.

He departeth from Ormus, the firſt of Auguſt, 1581.

Bender gomrow.

Cowrſtan a Caſal.

Ourmangel.

Lar.

After I had ſpent ſixe weekes in this Citie, and informed my ſelfe the beſt I could, of the Trade and Cuſtomes of the place, I departed from Ormus the firſt day of Auguſt at night, and left Signior Victorio, a friend of mine, with his goods behind. The ſecond of Auguſt about midnight, I arriued at Bender gomrow, where the Portugals keepe a Caſtle with ſeuen or eight Souldiers, within it. And this Bender gomrow, which is on the mayne land, was ſometimes the Kings of Lar, and after that Abreham Cans, and ſo it came to the King of Ormus. The fift day at night we departed from Bender gomrow: and the eighth day we lodged at a Caſal, called Cowrſtan. The tenth day at Ourmangel: there is a Spring of freſh water, which runneth through the middle of it. The fourteenth day in the morning we came to the Citie of Lar. Two Mauns of Ormus, make three Mauns of Lar: two hundred ſeuentie and two Mauns of Ormus merchandiſe, which are eight hundred and ſixteene Lerra of Bountaki, coſt the carriage from Bender gomrow to Lar, twentie Larins and an halfe. And one Aſnillo will carrie one hundred Maun of Lar, which are two hundred Lerra of Bountaki. The fifteenth day, I hired one Mouſa a Iew, for ſixe moneths to be my ſeruant, for thirtie Larins the moneth. At Bender gomrow all goods that goe for Perſia pay vnto the Portugals vpon euery ſumme or load one Sadan.

Debaccow a Caſal.

Berre a Caſal.

Olous.

Gouen.

The foure and twentieth day of Auguſt, 1581. about noone I departed from Lar. And at Lar euery ſumme of merchandiſe payeth at the paſſing out of the gate one Tanger, which is twelue Pull. And the fiue and twentieth day wee paſſed downe a very high Mountaine; and the ſame day paſſed by a Caſal, called Dehaccow. And this fiue and twentieth day at night lodged at a Caſal, called Berre. And to the South of the Towne is an old Caſtle vpon an high Mountaine. The ſixe and twentieth day we came to a place, where I bought three Hendomies for one Tanger, and they are as ſweet as Sugar. The ſeuen and twentieth day we lodged at Olous. The nine and twentieth, we departed from Olous: and neere vnto it is a very great Caſal, called Gouen, which hath Angour and Corma plentie. And this night we payed at our Baite vpon euery ſumme fiue Pull: And at Gouen endeth the Countrey of Lar. The laſt day of Auguſt, I paſſed ouer the greateſt Mountaine that euer I ſaw, and left it to the Southward of vs.

September.

Gaarrom.

Demonder.

Mecocal.

Cawger.

Cheſimon.

Cowel a Caſal.

Shiras.

Sargon.

The firſt of September in the morning, wee came to a Citie, called Gaarrom: and the ſame day, to a Caſal, called Demonder, where ſtandeth an high Columne alone. About Gaarrom is great ſtore of Rice and Cotton wooll growing. And here the Sheepe haue Lambs twice euery yeere. The ſecond day of September, we came to Mecocal, where we had ſtinking water: and the ſame day payed a dutie of two Tanger vpon euery Bar. The third day we came to Cawger, and the ſame day at night we payed a Beſt vpon euery Bar. The fourth day we came to a faire Can, called Cheſimon moddafar: and the ſame day wee had raine. The fifth day wee came to Cowel, which is a Caſal neere to Shiras: this night we payed a dutie vpon our goods. The ſixth day in the morning, we came to the Citie of Shiras. Betweene Lar and Shiras is great ſtore of Wolues, Partridges, and Pheaſants. There are in Shiras fiue high Towers, and the higheſt is in the middle of the Towne. To the North of the Towne is a Gate of very faire coloured ſtone, which is a little beyond the Horſe-mart: and without this Gate are all the Sheepe and Goats ſold, that ſerue for the Towne. The higheſt and furtheſt Tower in Shiras is neere to the Can that I lay in, and is builded with yellow, greene, white, and purple ſtone. The women ride here vpon Horſes like men. It is a Towne that hath great ſtore of victuals and fruits. Iron, Lead, Caſder, Cochonillio, Braſill, Linnen cloth, Foutas, and all wares that come out of India, are very well ſold here. Braſill is worth ſixe Mamodies the Maun, and Cochonillio one hundred and fiftie Mamodies. Certaine ſmall Laton that commeth from Sindi are ſold in Shiras for twelue Shehides the piece. In this Towne is made great ſtore of Mauward and Gebib, which are carried for India. The Maun of Cloues is worth in Shiras fiftie Shehides, Nutmegs thirtie, Pepper ſeuen and twentie. From Lar to Shiras we went the moſt part North-weſt and to the North, we ſtayed in this Towne from the ſixth day till the two and twentieth. The two and twentieth of September, we departed from Shiras, and the ſame day came to Sargon, a Towne vnder a Mountaine in a pleaſant Valley. The three and twentieth in the morning, wee paſſed vnder a great Mountaine, and neere vnto the Eaſt of it is a ſmall Riuer: and the ſame day in the forenoone, we came to a Village, called Auglamor: and neere vnto that is another, called Augalm. The foure and twentieth in the morning, wee paſſed ouer a narrow Bridge, and the water runneth to the South: and the ſame day we lodged at a Village called Moyſſe; where we payed vpon euery ſumme of goods, one Gasbi. And while wee lay here there paſſed through the Towne a number of Sheepe, Goats, and Camels, with poore people, and their houſhold-ſtuffe. The fiue and twentieth day from Moyſſe, and the ſame day came to a Village, called Seſmon Dermal. The ſixe and twentieth in the morning, wee paſſed ouer a very high Mountaine, vpon the top whereof are two Springs of very good water, and the ſame day we came to Augow: and to the North-eaſt of the Village is a ſtony Bridge, and very good water paſſeth vnder it: And here we found a man hurt with Theeues. The ſeuen and twentieth we went from Augow, and the ſame day we reſted at Hauſapaus, which ſtandeth vnder a Mountaine, and hath to the Weſt of it vpon a little Hill, a ſmall round white Caſtle: And here is Bread, Cheeſe, Hens, Raiſins, and Milke. The eight and twentieth day we went from Hauſapaus, and the ſame day we reſted at Cuskeſar, where is nothing but a round houſe vpon a Hill: but there is a new Can a building. The nine and twentieth day we went from Cuskeſar, and the ſame day reſted at Gerdoun. And this day we ſaw many Theeues vpon the Mountaines. The thirtieth day we departed from Gerdoun, and the ſame day came to Yeſtacas, which ſtandeth vpon a Rocke in a deepe Valley: and here wee found Bread, Ennap, and Battegh. Here I payed twice as much Toll as in any other paid.

Auglamor.
Augalm.
Moyſſe.
Seſmon Dermal.
Augow.
Hauſapaus.
Cuskeſar.
Gerdoun.
Yeſtacas.

The firſt day of October we departed from Yeſtacas: and the ſecond day in the morning wee came to Boial, which is a Village of great ſtore of fruit. And here wee met with the Baſſa of Shiras, which had in his companie about a thouſand Camels, beſides Horſes, and Aſnillios. And here are many Villages and Houſes together. The ſecond of October at night wee left Boial, and the third day lodged at Moydar. The fourth day we departed from Moydar, and the ſame day I came to the Citie of Hiſpahan, where the King of Perſia ſometimes keepeth his Court. At the entring in of the gate of Hiſpahan, groweth on either ſide of the gate a Cheſt-nut tree, one to the Eaſt, and another to the Weſt, then we paſſed ouer many waters: and at the entring into the principall Towne is a Caſtle to the South-weſt of the gate. And here they haue in their Hamam a certaine Ointment to anoint their bodies withall, which is called Dowa, which taketh away all the haire of a mans bodie. To the Eaſt of Hiſpahan is a very long and great Valley, where are many Villages and Houſes. The carriage of one hundred Mauns of Merchandiſe from Shiras to Hiſpahan, coſteth ſeuentie Shehides, and from Hiſpahan to Caſſan ſixtie Shehides. Hiſpahan is a Citie that vſeth great ſtore of Anil, maketh the greateſt ſtore of Muskaille, and hath the beſt Cotton that euer I ſaw. The Maun of Cotton wooll is worth here twelue Shehides; and the Maun of Rice, ſeuen Beſte; the Maun of Dracken, two Beſte; and the Maun of Ennap, two Beſte; the Maun of Non, three Beſte; and Laghem, foure Beſte. The Cattal of Sugar is worth here foure hundred Tomaun, and Anil fortie Mamodies the Maun. The Maun of Hiſpahan is one and an halfe of Shiras. Alſo at the entring in and going out of the gates of Hiſpahan, euery Hemmel payeth one Gasbi. The ſeuenth day of October, I came out of the Can at Hiſpahan.

October.
Boial.
Moydar.
Hiſpahan, now the chiefe Citie of Perſia.

The ninth day of the ſaid moneth I departed from Hiſpahan, and the ſame day lodged at Sen. The tenth day from Sen, and the ſame day at Sheſers Can: and alſo this day at night, at a great Village called Calenda, which hath great plentie of all ſorts of fruits. The eleuenth day from thence, and the ſame day at Shen, alſo a Towne of great ſtore of fruit. And this day in the morning, we deſcended downe a very high Mountaine. At Calenda euery ſumme of goods payeth one Gasbi. The twelfth day we went from Shen, and the ſame day we came to Garratcoy, and the ſame day departed from thence, and in the afternoone reached vnto the Citie of Caſſan. And preſently vpon the comming of any Caffell to Caſſan, there is one that doth take a note of all the goods, what it is, and how much of euery ſort: which note he deliuereth to the Vizier, which is the name of the Gouernour of Caſſan, which is greater then a Baſha. To the South-weſt or Weſt of this Towne, is all Mountaynous, and to the North of it are diuers Villages and Valleys; and to the South-eaſt is a low Mountaine, and white, as if it were by the Sea ſide. The fourteenth day at the comming of the Caffell to Caſſan, they brought newes that ſeuen ſhips of the Portugals were arriued in Ormus from Goa. The Carauan Baſha had for guarding of the Caffel from Lar to Caſſan, twentie Tomaun, which were in number fiue hundred Camels. The ſumme of an Aſſe, which is two Mauns of Lar, coſteth the carriage from Lar to Caſſan, ſixtie Mamodies. The ſeuenteenth day of October, went a Caffel from Caſſan to Caſbin. From Yeſd, which is ten daies iourney to the South from Caſſan, commeth great ſtore of Cotton-wooll, and cloath made of Cotton; and the Maun of Cotton-wooll is worth in Caſſan, eight Mamodies, Crems is worth ſixe Tomaun the Maun. The vſe is in this Citie, when they burie their dead, that three carrie the Corps to the graue, two before and one behind. Wood is ſold in Caſſan for one Beſte the Maun. He that writeth vp the goods that come to Caſſan, taketh vpon euery Tomaun that is ſold in the Towne, one Mamodie: and the like order is in Tauris. There was a Caffel of one Sen.

Sheſers Can.
Calenda.
Shen.
Garratcoy.
Caſſan.
Yeſd.

hundred and fiftie Camels comming from Ormus to Caſſan, all carried away by two hundred Theeues; therefore men muſt goe ſtrong in thoſe theeuiſh parts. The Batman of Caſſan maketh two and an halfe of Aleppo. Pepper is worth the Maun in this Citie, fortie Shehides, Meckhickan and Beſpeſſa ſeuentie Mamodies, Drachen one hundred Shehides, and Angarra ſixe Mamodies the piece. And eightie make fiftie Mauns of Tauris, which is foure hundred and fiftie Lerras of Venice. Gingebel fortie Shehides: Silke eightie Shehides. And ſixe Mauns of Silke make one Maun of all other things.

Nouember.
Senſen.
Caſmoua.
Caum, a great Citie.
Gaſſarawau.
Sowwa.
Daung.
Sang.
Arraſſan.
A good note.
Kirra.
Paſſen.
Auſſar.
Deſſa.
Sultanas.
Caueſſeras of the Shangh.
Froſt, cold winds, & ſnow, from the eleuenth the foureteenth of Nouember.
Sangas.
Necpaw.
Sarcham.
Meyannau.
Turkeman.
Haggegaw.
Auaſpeng.
Teuris or Tauris

The fourth day of Nouember we departed from Caſſan, and the ſame day lodged at a Caſal, called Senſen: the Can is old, and ſtandeth to the Eaſtward of the Village. And this Caſal ſtandeth vpon a round rotten hill like a Caſtle: and to the Weſt of it, is a rew of ſmall Trees, and two great Trees in the rew. And neere to Senſen is a Village, called Bedra, which hath a ſmall Caſtle. The fifth day from Senſen, and the ſame day we reſted at Caſmoua; which is a ſmall Village in a great Plaine, and hath an old Caſtle ſtanding to the South of the Towne. And here we paid vpon Barr one Gasbeke. The ſixt day from Caſmoua, and the ſame day at Coum, which is a very great Citie. And to the Eaſt South-eaſt of the Towne, are diuers greene Towers, whereof three ſtand together, beſides ſixe others very high. And to the North of the Towne is a bridge of ſtone. The ſeuenth day we departed from Coum, and the ſame day we came at Gaſſarawau, which is a new Can to the Eaſtward of the high-way. And here wee paid vpon euery ſumme of goods on Gasbeke. The eight day we departed from Gaſſarawau, and the ſame day we came to a Citie, called Sowwa: and we lay all night in a great field, incloſed with a wall round about. The ninth day, we went from Sowwa, and the ſame day wee came to Daung, which ſtandeth to the Weſt of the high-way. And here we paid vpon euery Barr one Gasbeke. The tenth day we departed from Daung, and the ſame morning paſſed by another Mangel, called Sang: and the ſame day we came to Arraſſan, which is a Village that hath diuers houſes built like Hay-cocks. And heere a Theefe would know of me of what place I was. And at Arraſſan we paid vpon euery ſumme of goods one Gasbeke. It is alwaies very good for a man that will trauaile, to apparell himſelfe according to the order of euery Country, wherein he ſhall trauaile. The eleuenth day we departed from Arraſſan, and the ſame day we came to Kirra, which ſtandeth vpon a little round hill. The twelfth day from Kirra, and the ſame day at Paſſen, where is great ſtore of Wall-nut-trees and Wine: and heere two draughts coſt me one Mamodie. The thirteenth from Paſſen, and the ſame morning paſſed by a Village, called Auſſar; and to the South of way are two old Towers. Alſo the ſame day we came to Deſſa, which is nothing but a Can: And heere comming ſomewhat late in the euening, wee could get neither Bread nor Water. The foureteenth we departed from Deſſa, and the ſame morning paſſed by a towne, called Sultanas; which we left to the South-weſt of the way. Alſo the ſame day we came to Caueſſeras of the Shangh, which is a Can, and new built, and the Water is farre from the Can. The eleuenth day of Nouember it began with froſt, and very cold and great winds; and the foureteenth day in the euening, being at the Kings houſe, it began to ſnow. The ſixteenth day, we departed from Caueſſeras of the Shangh, and the ſame day we came to a Towne, called Sangas. The ſeuenteenth day we went from Sangas, and the ſame day we came at a Can, called Necpaw. The eighteenth day we departed from Necpaw, and the ſame day we came to Sarcham, where we found a Sultan, and therefore lay without the Can. The nineteenth wee departed from Sarcham, and the day we came to a Towne, called Meyannau, where is great plentie of victuals. And here the Batman of Bread is ſold for ſixe Gasbekes, and ſeuen Gasbekes is one Beſte. And this morning we met at the entring into the Mountaines twentie Theeues, and preſently after paſſed ouer a bridge, and then ouer a very high Mountaine, where the high-way is paued with ſtone. And neere vnto this Meyannan is a very long bridge of Bricke: and heere their Bricke is much like vnto ours; and heere are Muſicians like vnto ours. The twentieth wee departed from Meyannau, and the ſame day we came to a Village, called Turkeman: and at Meyannau wee met with the reſt of our Caſſel. The one and twentieth wee went from Turkeman, and the ſame morning paſſed by two Cans, the one called David Derhauer, and the other Abás. Alſo the ſame day, we came to a Village called Haggegaw, whither we came late in the night. The two and twentieth day we departed from Haggegaw, and the ſame day we came to a Village, called Auaſpeng, where are many ſmall trees. The three and twentieth wee departed from Auaſpeng, and the ſame day we came to the great Citie of Teuris or Tauris.

Armenians, and their Church Rites.

Neere vnto Teuris is much Medow ground. This weeke all the Armenians keepe faſt. They follow the orders of the Greekes: for euery Wedneſday and Friday they faſt, and euery Saturday eate fleſh, except it be Eaſter Eeue. The ſixe and twentieth day of Nouember, I was at their Church in Teuris: where firſt they ſung Pſalmes, and then went to Maſſe: And the Prieſt went round about the Altar three times. The firſt time he cenſored, the ſecond time hee carried the Booke about, and the third time the Chalice. At the beginning of Maſſe, euery man doth kiſſe one another; and after Maſſe kiſſe the Booke, and take holy Bread: and the poore haue pottage and bread giuen them. An hundred Mauns of Merchandize of Teuris coſt the carriage from Caſſan to Teuris by Menel, one hundred and twentie Shehides. I paid for my ſelfe and eightie two

Mauns of Merchandize, eightie ſeuen Mamodies, and I was accounted for fiue and thirtie Batmans. The Batman of Teuris maketh nine Lerra of Venice, Darchen is worth the Maun in Teuris, fiftie Shehides, full full eight and twentie, gold and ſiluer of Bountaki thirtie Ducats the Lerra, euery dram one Beſt, Silke one hundred Shehides. The ſeuen and twentieth of Nouember, I paide in Teuris for my tribute twelue Shehides and two Beſtes. Alſo I paide for ſafe conduct betweene Caſſan and Teuris, ten Shehides. In Teuris I vnderſtood, that a yeere before my comming thither, there was one Thomas here with diuers Engliſh-men, who ſold Cremes for one Tomaun and an halfe, and Kerſies for one hundred Shehides the piece. In Teuris is a kind of ſilke Sattin, called Atlas, of nine or ten Gaſſe long euery piece, and it is ſold for three Merchel and an halfe the piece, and the beſt for foure Croyſh, which are good wares for Arſingam, and Arſerom in Armenia. In Teuris I ſold one and twentie Mauns of Mechic, at three Mamodies the Maun, which amount to ſixe hundred ninetie three Mamodies. The Batman of Wan or Van is two and an halfe of Teuris. Neere vnto Teuris to the Northward, is a very high Mountaine, where Snow doth lie continually. The firſt day of December, 1581. in the Euening, wee departed from the Citie of Teuris, and the ſame night lodged at a Village called Souffion, and here is Wine that is very ſtrong, but not pleaſant. The third day from Souffion, and the ſame day at a Towne called Merent, where are two high old Towers, and two blunt, ſtanding neere together. And herevpon newes of the paſſing by the Towne of a Baſſa, there went out fiue hundred Horſe-men. The fourth day from Merent, and the ſame day at Iolfa: and there is a Bridge of wood vpon Boates, there was a ſtone Bridge, but it is broken. And Aras is the name of the Riuer which runneth before the Towne, and the Towne ſtandeth vnder a Mountayne. There are in this Towne three thouſand Houſes, and they haue ſeuen Churches, and the richeſt pay euery houſe twentie Merchel a yeere, and the reſt according to their abilitie. The fifth day from Iolfa, and the ſame day we lodged at a good Towne called Naxnan, which hath great plentie of victuals, and eſpecially Angour, and alſo hath Silke. And in the middle way betweene Iolfa and this Citie, is a very high round Rocke, much like vnto a Caſtle. The ſeuenth day from Naxnan, and the ſame day at a Village called Potta. And about ten miles to the North-weſt of this Village, is Noahs Arke vpon a Mountayne, which is ſomewhat high, and hath alwayes Snow lying vpon it, and no man may goe vp it: But they ſay that Saint Iokemo went vp to the top, and in the Armenian tongue it is called Aſſe Maſis. And at the foot of this Mountayne, is a Church of the Armenians. The eighth day from Potta, and the ſame day we came to a Village called Cambellelea. This eighth day I was vnder the Arke, and there are two high Mountaynes together, which I left to the Weſt, and they are about three miles aſunder, but the higheſt and that to the Northward of the Weſt, is that whereupon the Arke did reſt. The ninth day from Cambellelea, and the ſame day at Errewan; here euery Hemel of Silke payeth fiue Chekins. At the time of the laſt warres in Perſia, there were many Chriſtians taken ſlaues in Errewan, and other places. And thoſe of Arſingam ranſomed ſeuen thouſand. Fourteene Batman of Teuris are twelue of Errewan. In Errewan are very many Chriſtians, and yet there is a Church ſtanding of the Chriſtians. To the Northward of this Towne, about a mile, is a ſtone Bridge, and vnder it, paſſeth a Riuer called Sanguina, which commeth out of the Riuer Aras, or Araxis: and about foure dayes from Errewan or Reinan, it meeteth with the Riuer of Aras or Araſh againe. The twelfth day wee departed from Errewan, and lodged the ſame day at a Caſal of Chriſtians, called Echimaſſen, and here are fiue old Churches, and one of them is ouerthrowne, becauſe a brother and a ſiſter married themſelues together in the ſaid Church. The thirteenth day from Echimaſſen, and the ſame morning we paſſed by certaine old Towers, where in times paſt, was a Citie called Sowmarin. And in Echimaſſen wee paide two and twentie Shehides for a bribe. And here are many Lyons, for within ſixe moneths they haue carried away out of this Caſal ſeuen and thirtie perſons; and the day before we came thither, was a child carried away out of his mothers armes. Betweene Naxnan and Errewan is a place where they dig Salt out of the ground. The ſaid thirteene day at night we lay by the Riuers ſide, where hath beene in times paſt a Caſal. The fourteenth day at a Caſtle called Dagſwan, and without the Towne is an old Church of the Chriſtians. At this place euery ſumme of goods that commeth out of Perſia, payeth two Aſpers, and if it goeth not to Arſerom, then it payeth fiue pro cento. A Hen is worth here eight Auctſhas. The fifteenth day from Dagſwan, and the ſame day at a Caſal called Seraffa, and here wee lay in a great houſe, and neere to the Caſal paſſed ouer a Bridge. The ſixteenth day from Seraffa, and the ſame day at a Caſal called Cappannac, and neere vnto Seraffa is a Church of Saint Chriſtopher. The ſeuenteenth day from Cappannac, and the ſame day at a Caſal called Comatſeur. The eighteenth day from Comatſeur, and the ſame day at a Caſal called Shew banc cupres: and neere vnto this Caſal is a ſtone Bridge, which a Sheepheard did build. And here all our Merchandizes were ſearched, and written vp by one that came from Dagſwan, and another of this Caſal that did write all things. The ninteenth day from Shew banc cupres, and the ſame morning paſſed by a Towne called Haſſen gallawth, where is a very ſtrong caſtle, with three wals. And here the houſes are built of Fir trees like vnto the houſes in the Alpes. Alſo the ſame day at a Caſal called Bollomaſh. The twentie one day from Bollomaſh, & the ſame day at Arſerom. And he that ſetteth prices vpon all commodities

This ſeemed to be Maſter Thomas Hudſon mentioned in the ſixth voyage to Perſia, in Maſter Hac. voyages.

Hee departed from Teuris or Tauris.

Souffion.

Merent.

Iolfa.

The Riuer Aras or Araxis.

Or Naſsinan.

Potta.

Noahs Arke.

Cambellelea.

Or Reinan.

Sanguin a Riuer.

Echimaſſen.

Sowmarin.

Salt growing in the ground.

Dagſwan.

Seraffa.

Cappannac.

Comatſeur.

Shew banc cupres.

Haſſen gallawth

Bollomaſh.

hath vpon euery hundreth that is ſold two Anil, is worth heere twentie Chekins the Batman.

Pretton.
Shennar.
Womens attire

Arzerum is a plentifull Towne for all kind of victuals, and hath three gates. In Arzerum one Batman of Mel or Deps, is worth two Auctſhas. And in this Towne one robbed three ſhops, and the next morning was hanged. After eight daies abode in this place, the nine and twentieth of December I departed from Arzerum, and the ſame day lodged at a great Caſall, named Pretton. The thirtieth day from Pretton, and the ſame day at a Caſall, named Shennar. From Dagſwan to Arzerum, the women goe in Gaskins like men: and vpon their heads they weare a high round trunke hanged with pieces of Siluer Money; and about that and their chin, they haue a large white cloath, which is all ſet round about with Buttons of Siluer: & alſo vpon their heads, they weare a piece of red Silke, which hangeth downe behind them, two or three yards vpon the ground with a fringe: and about their neckes they weare a Coller of Siluer, and thereunto are faſtned fiue or ſixe pieces of Siluer made very broad, and to ſome more. They are the moſt part blacke, and haue full faces, ſmall feet, great legs, great hands and armes, and their lips not ſmall.

Ianuary.
Gotter.
Gebeſſe.
Backerreg.
Bettarreg.
Arſingam.
The Riuer of Ponnats falleth into Euphrates.
Serperron.
Ardanſegh.
Shewbaning.
Andre.
Yeoltedder.
Longo.
Praſſa.
Tocat, Tocato.
Ackelcon.
Burghcarre.
Dadow.

The firſt day of Ianuary, we departed from Shennar, and the ſame morning paſſed by a Caſall, called Gotter. Alſo the ſame day wee came to a Crauanſall, called Gebeſſe, and the next morning paſſed by another of the ſame name. The ſecond day from Gebeſſe, and the ſame day at a great Caſal, called Backerreg, where is great plentie of Wine: and here the Batman is ſold for ſixe Parra. The third of Ianuary from Backerreg, and the ſame day at a Caſall, called Bettarreg, which is neere vnto Arſingam. Alſo the ſame day I went vnto Arſingam, which is within foure daies iourney of Trebeſonda. The weight and meaſure of Arſingam, do both agree with Arzerum: and here Merchel is worth fiftie foure Auctſhas. The cariage of a Mule from Arzerum to Arſingam, coſteth twelue Shehides; and from thence to Tockat three Duckats. To the Eaſt-ward of Arſingam, is a very ſtrong Caſtle, and to the South of the Towne a ſtone bridge, which paſſeth ouer the Riuer of Ponnats. And in this Valley are three hundred and ſixty Caſals of Chriſtians. The thirteenth day of Ianuary we departed from Arſingam, and the ſame day lodged at a Crauanſerras, named Serperron. The fourteenth day being Sunday, from Serperron: and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Ardanſegh: and this day wee paſſed ouer the Mountaines of Chardalor, with the greateſt ſnow, froſt and wind, that euer I was in, and were in danger to haue remained in the Mountaines all night. The 16. from Ardanſegh, the ſame day at a Caſal, called Shewbaning, which hath a ſmall Church ſtanding vpon a ſmall round Rock. The 17. from Shewbaning, the ſame day at a great Caſal, called Andre; which is out of the way, and ſtandeth vnder an hill, in a very pleaſant Valley. The eighteenth day from Andre, and the ſame day at Yeoltedder, a Caſal by the Riuers ſide: and this day wee paſſed by a very great Caſtle to the North of the water, vpon a very high Mountaine. The nineteenth from Yeoltedder, and the ſame day paſſed ouer a very high Mountaine: alſo the ſame day we lodged at a Caſal, called Longo; and here we met with the Carauan of Tocat: and at the foot of this Mountaine, we met with another Riuer. The twentieth day from Longo, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Praſſa. The one and twentieth day from Praſſa, and the ſame day being Sunday wee came to Tocat, and by the way are two Caſals, the one called Namnous, and the other Manec: and Namnous is a very great Caſal, and hath many Chriſtians. And here they goe to plough with Oxen, one three yards from another. Neere to Tocat to the North-Eaſt of the towne, runneth the Riuer of Ponnats, and ouer it is made a great ſtone bridge: and to the North of the towne vpon a high Rock, is a very ſtrong Caſtle, and to the South of the town is a very high Mountaine, that is ſufficient to beate both the Towne and the Caſtle: and here all their houſes that are new built, are made like the building of Lions: and their Ploughs here haue no Coultors, but very long Shares. Tin is worth the Batman in Tocato, three hundred Auctſhas, Pambas, ſixtie two Auctſhas; and fiue and twentie graines of Silke, eighty Aſpers. The twentie foure and twentie fiue daies, arriued the Carauan with the Waftſhe: three Batmans of Tocat make ten Rotils of Aleppo. The Iewes wiues in Tocat were vpon their heads very high tires, much like vnto Miters. There is to the Caſtle of Tocat but one gate, and that is to the North; and all that part of the Towne are Chriſtians. The twenty nine, we departed from Tocat, and the ſame day paſſed ouer a ſtone bridge, where is a great Caſal: alſo the ſame day we came to another Caſal, called Ackelcon. The thirtieth day from Ackelcon, and the ſame day we paſſed by a little Caſal, called Burghcarre. Alſo the ſame day at a Village, called Tackia. The laſt day of January, from Tackia, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Dadow. And neere to this Dadow to the North-eaſt, is a Towne, called Amaſia: and from thence is carried much Ennebet, and Yeuſſen to other places.

February.
Searradella.
Chagannadel.
Garom.

The firſt day of Februarie we departed from Dadow, and the ſame day came to a Caſal, called Searradella, which is parted into two parts. The ſecond day of Februarie, from Searradella, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Chagannadel, and ouer it vpon a Mountaine is a great ſtone. The third day, from Chagannadel, and the ſame day at a Towne, called Garom: and to the South-eaſt of the Towne is a Caſtle. And here, and in Tocat, and in Arſingam, euery Hemmel of goods payeth two Auctſhas: and here are in the Towne, three Towers. And here the women goe with their viſages couered, and a white cloath about their middles, and another about their heads and ſhoulders, and their long pendant of frindge Silke hangeth downe behind them: and here the Batman of Pambacke is ſold for ſixtie two Auctſhas. The fourth day from Garom, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Lout: and here is great plenty of Ennap; and this day wee paſſed ouer a very high Mountaine. And in Lout the Women weare a very high attire vpon their heads like an hat, and down before them to their eies, hangeth a broad cloath much like vnto a French-hood. The fifth day from Lout, and the ſame day we came to a Caſal, called Mourt Larſarraie. And this day about fiue of the clocke in the afternoone, was an Earth-quake. Alſo this day the Armenians began their faſt for Saint George. This day we paſſed ouer a great Riuer, called Caſalmach, which runneth into the Blacke Sea, or Pontus Exinus. The ſixth day from Mourt-Larſarrai, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Allagour, which ſtandeth vpon an hill: and heere we found many Theeues neere vnto the Riuers ſide vnder the ground. The ſeuenth day from Allagour, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Ennebea. And this day the Carauan was greatly afraid of Theeues. And for theſe three daies all the way is no wood: but neere vnto the Waters ſide, is Hay and wilde-geeſe plentie: and this day we left the great Riuer Caſalmach. The eighth day from Ennebea, and the ſame day at a great Caſal, called Sarracuſt: and heere was a Bride carried about the Towne on horſe-backe, and diuers Women like Maskers. The tenth day from Sarracuſt, and the ſame day at a little Caſal, called Saddar. The eleuenth day from Saddar, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Erandrerra: and it ſtandeth neere vnto a pleaſant Valley; and to the South of this place halfe a day is a Citie, called Angria, where moſt of the Grograms and Chamblets are made. The twelfth day from Erandrerra, and the ſame day at a Towne, called Aaſh, which ſtandeth in a Valley, and hath but one Maddenna: and from this Towne wee deſcended downe a very great Mountaine. The thirteenth day from Aaſh, and the ſame day at a Caſal, named Ahemet Shalla, whither we came late in the night. And from Aaſh commeth a Riuer, which runneth to the Weſt. The foureteenth day, from Ahemet Shalla, and the ſame day at a Village, called Garacham, which ſtandeth among the Mountaines: and the Crauanſeras ſtandeth alone. The 15. day from Garacham, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Gaye. And this day we paſſed ouer the Mountaine Chambelle: and vpon this Mountaine we met with a Carauan going for Tocat, which carried great ſtore of Backam. The ſixteenth day from Gaye, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Carralla: and this day we loſt our way. The ſeuenteenth day from Carralla, and the ſame day at at a Caſal, cald Sowdegan: and here is a very great Crauanſerras; and in this Country the women waſh with their feet: and this day we paſſed by a Riuer that runneth to the Eaſt. The eighteenth day from Sowdegan, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Couſcherderrom. And at Couſcherderrom is a very faire Crouanſerras new built: and for the building thereof, a Merchant of Agam gaue a Hemmel of Silke. The twentieth day from Couſcherderrom, and the ſame day we paſſed through a Towne called Bouſeiuc: alſo the ſame day at a Towne, called Baſarich. And this day we were cold and wet with Snow. The one and twentieth day from Baſarich, and the ſame day we paſſed downe a very great Mountaine: alſo the ſame day we lodged at a Caſal, called Korſhonnou. The two and twentieth day from Korſhonnou, and the ſame day at a Caſal, called Actſau. The three and twentieth day from Actſau, and the ſame day we came to Borſa. The foure and twentieth day, three Theeues were executed in Borſa, which had robbed ſeuen or eight yeres between Borſa and Stambol. In Borſa all Strangers pay for cuſtome of their Merchandize three per cento. The Kintall of Borſa is fortie Hockies: and the Kintall of Cremes, is here worth eight thouſand Anctſhas. The ſixe and twentieth day, I went to the Hammam, that is a mile without Borſa to the Weſt-ward; and the ſame day paſſed through foure woodden gates. And the Spout of this water commeth in from the South. There are in all foure of theſe Hammams.

Lout.

Mourt Larſarrai.

Caſalmach, a great Riuer running into the Black Sea.

Allagour.

Ennebea.

Sarracuſt.

Saddar.

Erandrerra.

Aaſh.

Garacham.

Gaye.

Carralla.

Sowdegan.

Couſcherderrom.

Baſarich.

Korſhonnou.

Actſau.

Borſa.

The firſt day of March at night, vntill twelue of the clocke, was to the Weſt of the Towne, a great light like fire. The fifth day of March in the euening, wee departed from Borſa: and this day paſſed ouer a ſmall Riuer, where is a ſtone bridge. Alſo this day wee lodged at a Caſal of Chriſtians, called Peage. The ſixth day from Peage, and the ſame day paſſed by a Gulfe of the Sea, where is a Towne, called Gamlech, and alſo paſſed by a Lake of freſh water, which is called Bouchi. Alſo this day we paſſed by two Crauanſerras: and by the way is great ſtore of Bay-trees growing: Alſo this day we came to Samallech, which is the Skel. The eight day from Samallech, and the ſame day we landed at the Tower, where they make light for the Ships that paſſe in and out of the Blacke Sea: and the ſame night wee came to Skell. The ninth day of March in the morning, we departed from Skell, and the ſame day came to Galata and Conſtantinople, by the Turkes corruptly called Stambol. The tenth day, we arriued in Stambol, the Carauan of Neſt: And the eleuenth day it was all burned, with one hundred and twentie Cargas more, and eightie thouſand crownes in Pepper; beſides great ſtore of other Merchandize. And the order is to hang him, that was the firſt cauſe of the fire. The fourteenth day, was a paſſage Boate with ſixtie or ſeuentie perſons loſt going ouer to Samallech; ſome Chriſtians, ſome Iewes, and ſome Turkes. The Mufti in Conſtantinople, is counted like the Pope of Rome: and he was the cauſe that all Chriſtians and Iewes were forced to leaue off their turbants. Torra is a great Citie in Natolia, three daies from the Sea: from whence come Grograms, Gaules, Silkes, and Cotton Wooll.

Peage.

Gamlech.

Bourchi.

Samallech.

The Tower where they make light for the ſhips.

Skell.

Conſtantinople, corruptly called Stambol.

The fourth day of Aprill, 1582. we tooke our Voyage from Galata neere Conſtantinople, and the ſame day lay at a Caſall, called Tarrapea: and from Galata hither came one Anthonie a Merchant of Sio, in company with me. And the ſame day I came from Conſtantinople, the Grand Aprill, 1582. He departeth from Conſtantinople.

Tarrapea.

He taketh ſhip to goe by the Blacke Sea, vp the Riuer Danubius.

Siſſopoli.

Signiors Sonne went out of the Towne with three or foure thouſand Horſes. Alſo the Grand Signior had another young Sonne borne of two monethes old. The ſixth day of Aprill, 1582. wee departed from the Gulfe neere vnto Tarrapea, being imbarked in a Barke laden with Wines of Candie, which was to goe vp the Riuer of Danubius. The ſeuenth day in the morning, the wind came vp to the Eaſt North-eaſt with very ſtormie weather: and the ſame day wee returned to a Towne called Siſſopoli, which is a good Harbour. And heere are many Wind-mils, and great ſtore of Wine. And to the Eaſt of the Harbour are three Ilands: and heere they are all Greekes. Alſo the Turke doth make here many Gallies. And in this foule weather ſome of our company wept, and others cryed out: & our foreſaile ſplit with the great wind; and we were in greater danger; becauſe they could not of a long time get down their main ſaile. This great tempeſt that we had in the Blacke Sea, began vpon Saturday morning about one of the clocke, being the ſeuenth day of Aprill, as I ſaid before, and continued vntill Tueſday in the morning beeing the tenth day, with very great Snow and Cold, as if it had bin at Chriſtmas. The twelfth day we ſet ſaile from Siſſopoli, and the ſame night came to an anchor vnder a Cape of Land, where is a Caſal called Emonna.

Emonna. Varna. Caliacca.

The thirteenth day from Emonna, and this night we paſſed by a great Citie called Varna, which lyeth within a very great Gulfe, which is a very good Harbor. The fourteenth day in the morning we paſſed by a Caſtle called Caliacca, which ſtandeth vpon the Cape of a Land, and hath to the Eaſtward two ſmall Pillars, and neere vnto them a great ſtone much like a man. The fifteenth day in the morning, wee returned to the Caſtle of Caliacca: and the ſeuenteenth day toward night, ſet ſaile from this Caſtle. The nineteenth day in the morning, we entred into a mouth of the Riuer Danubius, called Licoſtoma. And at the entring in of the Riuer to the Southward is a Beacon: and the depth is on the North-ſide, but there is neuer aboue eight foot water. And the Countrey on the South-ſide of the Riuer is called Dobis: and the North-ſide is called Bugdania.

Bugdania.

The mouth of Saint George.

Dolcha.

The two and twentieth day about noone, we entred into the Riuer, where commeth the mouth of Saint George; and that mouth runneth to the Eaſt South-eaſt. And Licoſtomo, which we came forth off runneth to the Weſt, and then preſently againe to the North. Alſo this day we arriued at a Caſal, called Dolcha, which lyeth on the South-ſide of the Riuer. And here lye out from the Towne certaine ſmall Rocks into the water: And here our ſhip and the Merchant paid a ceraine ſmall dutie of two or three Crownes. And here Fiſh, Hens, and Egges are plenty.

The Riuer of Kelle.

A ſmall Iland.

Saxe.

The three and twentieth day we departed from Dolcha the ſame day about noone, we paſſed by the Riuer of Kelle, which is very broad, and runneth to the North-eaſt. Alſo this day wee paſſed by a ſmall Iland, which lyeth very neere Saxe. The foure and twentieth day about noone, wee came to a Towne called Saxe, which lyeth vpon the South-ſide of the Riuer. And ouer againſt this Towne is an Iland: and here the Riuer is very broad. And here we were to haue paid a Cuſtome, but paid nothing vntill our comming to Tomourra.

Tomourra, is alſo called Ren, by the Vallachians.

Apparell.

The foure and twentieth day in the afternoone from Saxe: and the fiue and twentieth day we arriued at Tomourra. And this Tomourra lyeth vpon the North-ſide of the Riuer, and is in Bugdania. In Tomourra the children go much after the order of India, with ſmall Rings of Wiar through their eares. And the women goe with great knobs of ſiluer hanging vpon the vpper part of their eares; and with a great Roll of Linen Cloth about their heads, much like a Turkes Turbant, and vpon that a ſmall cloth: and the vpper bodies of their garments are ſet round about with great knobs of ſiluer like buttons. And the yong Maids weare their haire pleyted, and thereupon diuers pieces of ſiluer hanging: and vpon the Crowne of the head a round broad Brooch of ſiluer ſet with ſtones; and their ſleeues great and ſhort; and about their armes two great hoopes of ſiluer, and at their Girdles fiue or ſix paire of Kniues: and about their neckes they weare nothing. The common ſort goe for the moſt part bare-footed. The fiue and twentieth day, we came to Tomourra, a Bark from Conſtantinople, which came from thence in eight dayes. The ſhip that I came in from Conſtantinople, was twentie ſeuen foot broad of my feet: and the poope more then thirtie foot high from the water, and could ſtow in hold but two Buts of heighth one vpon another, except it were in the middle. In this Town of Tomourra are ſold twentie Egges for an Aſper, and a good Hen for two Aſpers, and Beefe, Bacon Bread, Wine, Beere, and Mede plentie, and very good freſh fiſh more then of any thing elſe. Here are ſold for one Aſper two Pikes, either of them better then three ſpans long, & three Carpes either of them a ſpan & an halfe long. Alſo here is great ſtore of Sturgeons & Herings in this Riuer.

The order of making Cauiare.

They make Cauiare of three ſorts of fiſh.

The order of their making of Cauiare of their Sturgeons, is this. The Cauiare or Roe muſt be taken whole out of the Fiſh; and then ſlaſh it a little with a Knife, and ſo ſalt it wel, for three dayes and three nights, and put it in a Barrell or Fat, and make an hole vnderneath, that the water or Salt that commeth from the Cauiare may void forth: and after theſe three dayes are paſt, take it and waſh it very well with freſh water, vntill the Salt bee cleane gone from it: and after this put it in Barrels for the ſpace of other three dayes, & one muſt tread it downe with his clean feet: alſo you muſt make an hole vnder the Barrell for the water to void away; and then lay ſome great ſtones vpon it to preſſe it, and to make it hard: and after theſe three dayes bee paſt, take out the bottome and ſet in a new; and ſo it may be carried through out the World. And the names of the three fiſhes, of the Roes whereof they make it, are theſe: Sturgeon, and Mourrounna, and Merſlenne. And the beſt times of the yeare to make it in, are Iune and Iuly. In this Towne of Tomourra are certaine Merchants of Sio, that are Lords of the ſame; and in times paſt it hath beene a faire Towne: But the Tartars haue two or three times ſpoyled it, and once they carried away fiftie perſons out of it, and the Countries neere adioyning. And about the yeare of our Lord 1530. the Turke ſubdued this Countrey and a great part of Hungarie, and all, as they ſay, by the Treaſon of the Prince of Tranſiluania.

The firſt day of May, 1582. wee landed our goods: And Signior Iocamo Alberti paid for fraught of euery Butte of his Wine ſixtie Aſpers from Conſtantinople to this place. This day in the Euening, we departed by Land from Tomourra, which is called Ren, in the Language of Wallachia. The fourth day of May, wee paſſed by a Caſal, where the Maſter of the Caſall would haue taken away our fore-mans Horſe: and the ſame day in the afternoone we paſſed ouer a long Bridge, and preſently after a ſmall Riuer called Prut.

May.
They land their goods.
They take their iourney again by land.
Tomourra is called Ren by the Wallachians.
The Riuer of Prut.

The ſixth day we departed from Falchen. The eighth day in the morning, we came to a little Towne calld Hus, which ſtandeth vnder the Woods ſide. The ſame day at night wee paſſed againe ouer the Riuer of Prut; and the next morning came to a Caſall, called Padwellia: and here one of our Muckeres Horſes were againe taken. The tenth day we came to a Caſall called Sutſourre, where we paſſed againe ouer the Prut. The eleuenth day in the morning, wee came to Yas, and here the Toll-maſter is a Greeke, and is called Nicolla Neuerredde. To the South of Yas is the Caſtle with a paire of Gallowes before it, and round about it is a wall of great trees of wood: and to the South-weſt of the Towne is a great Lake: and vpon the farther ſide of the Lake is a great Monaſterie. The women here goe in Turkiſh Gownes, and great Turbants, with two or three great boſſes ſet with ſtones on either ſide of their Turbants, and their Gownes downe before with the like, and in their eares great boſſes with a Chaine of ſmall Pearle made faſt to both their eares. And the Maides goe with an Attyre vpon their heads like vnto a Mitre, and vpon that their haire bound a croſſe: and ſome of the Children goe ſewed through their Eares with pack-thred like the Indian faſhion. The cuſtome of a Cloth in Yas is one Ducke of Gold, and of a Kerſie a Doller, and of euery Carpet that coſteth one hundred Aſpers, twelue Aſpers; and of euery Oxe and Cow foure and twentie Aſpers, except they belong to the Merchants of Poland, and then they pay but twentie Aſpers. And euery Butte of Wine payeth fiue Dollers and tenne Aſpers: And euery Butte of Muskadell, payeth in Conſtantinople ſixe Chechins, and in Eluona foure. The ſixteenth day in the afternoone, wee departed from Yas: And the ſeuenteenth day we lodged at Steffennes. The eighteenth day wee paſſed ouer the Riuer of Prut, which is three leagues from Chotym, and the ſame day at a Caſall called Leues, which ſtandeth in a Vale and hath a Lake of water ſtanding in the middle of it. The nineteenth day in the morning at Chotym, and to the North of the Towne is the Caſtle which lyeth neere to the Riuer of Nyeſter, and this Riuer parteth Bugdania and Polonia. The twentieth day about noone, we departed from Chotym, and the ſame day beeing Sunday, wee came to the ſtrong Frontier Towne of Poland, called Camienitz, which ſtandeth in a Valley: and the Caſtle ſtandeth to the Weſt of the Towne.

Hus.
Padwellia:
Sutſourre.
Yas.

This is like the Weſt Indian fortification.

Apparell.

Steffennes.
Leues.
Chotym.

In this Towne all Merchants Strangers pay cuſtome for their goods two and an halfe per cento. The women in Camienitz goe with their Coates cloſe bodied, and the neather bodies gathered like a Frocke: and vpon their heads a fine Cloth like a Call; and vpon that a long piece of white Lawne, that hangeth downe to the ground, and vpon that a blacke Veluet Hat. Their Girdles are ſet with great ſtuds of Siluer and Gold: and they are very faire women, but not very commendable for their Chaſtitie, for moſt of them will be drunke. They vſe in the morning to drinke much burnt Wine, and afterward Mede. And there are very few houſes in the Towne, but they ſell Beere and Mede; and the Borrow-maſters ſell Wine. And if a Gentlewoman goe abroad, all her men goe before her, and the Gentlemen ride before, and their men behind. The womens Garments are very long: and in the Villages by the way, the Maides goe with their haire hanging downe behind them, and a Garland vpon their heads: and they vſe to dance much like the Moores. The young Maides of Camienitz weare their haire pleyted, and bound vp about their heads, and with a blacke band of Veluet. The three and twentieth day we tooke our Iourney from Camienitz, &c.

Camienitz the frontier towne of Poland vpon the Turke.
Apparell.

His Iourney thorow Poland to Dantrik, and comming to Hull by Sea, is omitted.

CHAP. IIII.

Obſeruations of Maſter IOHN CARTWRIGHT in his Voyage from Aleppo to Hiſpaan, and backe againe: publiſhed by himſelfe, and here contracted.

§. I.

Of Euphrates, Orpha, Caraemit, the Curdi, Armenians, Bithlis, Van, and Arraret.

* A Carauan is a great many of Camels laden, not much vnlike our Carriers here in England.

Tedith a Village of note.

The Valley of Salt.

2.Sam.8.13.

HAuing reſted in Aleppo two monethes and better, Maſter Iohn Mildenall and my ſelfe tooke our leaue of the Conſull and Merchants, with a full intent and purpoſe to trauell vnto the great Citie Labor, in the Great Mogors Countrey in the Eaſt Indies: lodging all that night on a thinne Turkiſh Carpet in Woods-caine, where the * Carauan was aſſembled, to the end that wee might bee with the foremoſt: for delay in ſuch trauell doth produce great and ineuitable danger. From Aleppo wee ſpent three dayes Iourney vnto the bankes of Euphrates, paſſing by many Villages not worth the naming, and fertile Plaines, abounding with all ſort of prouiſion neceſſary for mans life. One of thoſe Villages is a Village of note vnto this day, called by the Countrey people Tedith, where the Iewes keepe a Monument in remembrance of the great Synagogue, holden there in the yeare from the Creation 3498. Neere vnto this Towne is the Valley of Salt memorable for that great ouerthrow which Dauid gaue the Aramits, when hee ſlue of them in one battell eighteene thouſand men. Here alſo Campſon Gaurus the Great Sultan of Egypt fought that deadly and mortall Battell with Selymus the firſt, the Great Turke; where hee loſt his life being trodden, without regard, to death, both by his owne Souldiers and purſuing Enemies.

Euphrates.

Time and manner of going downe the Riuer.

Being arriued on the bankes of Euphrates, we found it as broad as the Thames at Lambith; but in ſome places it is narrower, in ſome broader, running with a very ſwift ſtreame and current, almoſt as faſt as the Riuer of Trent. At this place doth this Riuer beginne to take his name, being heere all gathered into one Channell, whereas before it commeth downe from the Lake Chieldor-Giol in Armenia, in manifold armes and branches, and therefore is called by the Countrey people, by a name which ſignifieth a thouſand heads. Here it is that Merchants vſe to paſſe downe by Barke vnto Babylon, thereby to auoid and ſhunne the great charge and wearifomneſſe of trauell through the Deſart of Arabia. Which paſſage they make ſometimes in fifteene dayes, ſometimes in twentie dayes, and ſometimes in thirtie dayes, anſwerable to the riſing and falling of the Riuer: and the beſt time to paſſe thither is either in Aprill or October, when the Riuer doth ſwell with abundance of Raine. The Boates are flat-bottomed, becauſe the Riuer is ſhallow in many places; ſo that when they trauell in the Moneths of Iuly, Auguſt, and September, they find the Riuer at ſo low an ebbe, that they are faine to carry with them a ſpare Boat or two, to lighten their owne, if they ſhould chance to fall on the ſhoales. Euery night after Sun-ſet, they faſten theſe Boates to a ſtake, the Merchants lying aboord, and the Mariners vpon the ſhoare, as neere as they can vnto the ſame. In this paſſage downe the Riuer, you ſhall meet with diuers troupes of Arabians, who will barter their prouiſion of Dyet (for they care not for money) as Hennes, Kids, Lambe, Butter, and ſowre Milke, for Glaſſes, Combes, Corall, Amber, Kniues, Bread and Pomegranates, Pils, wherewith they vſe to tanne their Goats ſkinnes, in which they Churne with all. All of them, as well Women, Children, and Men are very good Swimmers, who oftentimes will ſwimme to the Barke ſide with Veſſels full of Milke vpon their heads. Theſe people are very theeuiſh, and therefore in your paſſage downe good watch muſt bee kept. But to returne where we left, wee were conſtrained by the deepneſſe of the Riuer to ferrie ouer our whole Carauan, which conſiſted of a thouſand perſons, beſides Camels, Horſes, Mules, and Aſſes, by reaſon of which multitude we ſpent a whole day in tranſporting ouer the ſaid Carauan. The gaines of which tranſportation yeelded the Ferriman a Shaughee, which is fiue pence Engliſh vpon a Beaſt.

Bir.

Meſopotamia.

Orpha.

* See ſup.c.2.

Being ouer the aforeſaid Riuer, wee arriued at Bir and entred into the famous Prouince of Meſopotamia; The Turkes doe call it Diarbech. This Prouince of it ſelfe is moſt fruitfull, but by the Turkiſh Warres much ruinated and waſted: neuertheleſſe, there are ſome Cities of great importance. About two dayes iourney from Bir, wee came to Orpha, a Citie of great account and eſtimation, which many ſuppoſe to haue beene the famous Citie Edeſſa. As yet there remayned certaine Monuments of Baldwin * in Latine letters. The aire of this Citie is very healthfull, the Countrey fruitfull, onely wood excepted, and therefore in ſtead thereof, they burne the dung of Camels and other beaſts, dried in the Sunne. This Citie is built foure-ſquare; the Weſt part ſtanding on the ſide of a rockie Mountaine, and the Eaſt part trendeth into a ſpacious Valley, repleniſhed with Vineyards, Orchards, and Gardens: the walls are very ſtrong, furniſhed with great ſtore of Artillerie, and contayne in circuit three Engliſh miles: and for the gallantneſſe of the ſite, it was once reckoned the Metropoliticall ſeat of Meſopotamia, howſoeuer it is now tranſlated to Caramida or Caraemit. There is in this Citie a Fountaine full of fiſhes, ſo vſed to hand, that they will receiue any ſubſtance that ſhall bee offered vnto them: both Iewes, Armenians, and Turkes reported vnto vs, that this Fountaine was Iacobs Well; and that here hee ſerued his Vncle Laban twice ſeuen yeeres, for faire and beautifull Rachel. The gates of this Citie were much battered, a little before our comming, by Eliazgee the Scriuano, and the Rebels his followers; hee drew the Citizens to a compoſition of fiftie thouſand Chekins, and ſo departed. Memorable alſo is this Citie, then called Carras, for the great battell which was fought before it betweene the Romans and the Parthians, when Marcus Craſſus was Generall on the one ſide, and Surena on the other ſide.

Gen.29.13.27.

The Scriuano at the walls of Orpha. 1603.

Let the Geographer vſe his owne libertie: I giue you the Author.

At this Citie hauing paid our Cuſtome, which is a Doller on a ſumme of goods, our Carauan was licenced to depart: and at our ordinary houre, which was three of the clocke in the afternoone, we ſet forward towards the ancient Citie Amida, now called Caramida or Caraemit, fiue dayes iourney from Orpha, trauelling ſometimes ouer rough and craggie Mountaines, and ſometimes through moſt delightfull Playnes and Valleys: amongſt which there is one of note, enuironed about with a Pale of Mountaines, in ſuch wiſe that there is but one entrie and paſſage: where * Aladeules is ſaid to haue had his Paradiſe.

Caraemit.

At the end of fiue dayes trauell, wee arriued at Caraemit, which is to ſay, The blacke Citie, either for the ſtone wherewith it is built, being like vnto Iet in colour, or for the fertilitie of the ſoyle round about it, which is of a dusky colour. This Citie is ſeated vpon a maruellous high Rocke, and containeth in circuit very neere ſixe miles; and though it be ſufficiently fortified by nature, yet is it enuironed with a double wall: the outmoſt is ſomewhat decayed, but the inmoſt is well repaired, being fenced with great ſtore of Artillerie. It is gouerned by a Baſſa, who commandeth ouer twelue Sanzacks, and thirtie thouſand Tymariots: and is now become the Metropoliticall Citie of Meſopotamia. There were muſtred from this Citie, when Amurat the third inuaded Perſia, in the yeere 1578. twelue thouſand Souldiers, the Captaine being well checked by Generall Muſtapha for bringing ſo few. The Souldiers of this Citie for the moſt part are Archers, not of any courage, but very effeminate, and accuſtomed to the vſe of the Scimatarre. During our abode at this place (which was fourteene dayes) we lodged in a very faire Caine built of free-ſtone; for which lodging we payed to the Maſter of the Caine fiue Shaughes a piece: all which time nothing fell out worthie obſeruation, but the cruell execution of a petie malefactor, who hauing but pilfered away certaine ſmall wares, was mounted on a Camell, with his armes ſpread abroad, hauing two ſockets-holes bored in his ſhoulders blades, into which were ſet two flaring torches, dropping continually on his skin to his greater torment, and in the end, hauing carried him in this pitifull manner through the principall ſtreets of the Citie, they brought him to the place of execution, and there ganched him on a great Iron hooke, ſuffering him ſo to hang till he died. Paſſing through the South-gate of this Citie, wee payed to the Porter of the gate a Shaughee vpon a beaſt, deſcending from the Citie into a moſt fertile and fruitfull Plaine, where are many Gardens and Orchards, and places of great refreſhment.

* See hereof in M Polo long before. that time of Senex de Monte, which this Aladeules imitated, if the report be true.

A moſt cruell execution.

Through this Plaine runneth the great Riuer Euphrates, with a very ſwift current; and is as broad here ſometimes of the yeere as the Thames at London Bridge, but now was much dried vp, by reaſon of the heate in Summer, making thereby many Ilands and demi-Ilands, where the Citizens of Caraemit during the Summer ſeaſon doe vſe to pitch their Tents, to enioy the freſhment of the Aire and Riuer: but in the Winter it ſwelleth ſo aboundantly ouer the ſaid Ilands and bankes, that neither man nor beaſt is able to paſſe ouer: to auoide which inconuenience, there is, a mile diſtant from the Citie, a ſtone-bridge of twentie arches, made ouer the ſaid Riuer. This euening we pitched two miles from the Citie, and ſtayed all that night of purpoſe for ſome Merchants that were behind. Here wee exchanged our Camels, and in ſtead of them tooke Mules, a creature farre more fit to trauell ouer craggie Rockes and Mountaines then Camels: for now we were within a few dayes iourney, to paſſe ouer the high Mountaines of Armenia, called in Scripture the Mountaines of Ararat: which trauell with Camels is not onely laborious, but very dangerous, if the ground ſhould proue moiſt or ſlabby; for then being laden with great burdens, they cannot goe onwards, neither are they able to paſſe with their huge burdens, through the ſtreight paſſages which are in thoſe Mountaines.

Euphrates.

Two dayes iourney from Caraemit, we reſted at the foot of a great rockie Mountaine, being one of the Heads out of which Tygris floweth, and runneth downe with a ſwift current to Balſara, and ſo diſchargeth it ſelfe in the Perſian Gulfe. Strangely doth it iſſue out of three Rockes admirably hanging, that a man as he paſſeth vnder them, would imagine them to bee readie to fall on his head. And for the ſtrangeneſſe of the ſite, the Turkes haue builded three Bridges in the midſt of thoſe Rockes, to paſſe from one vnto another, thereby to behold Natures wiſedome

One of the Heads out of which Tygris floweth.

Three Bridges.

in framing them ſo wonderfull. Wee went to view the ſame, but through the huge ouer-falls, which came farre off within thoſe Mountaines, and the ſteepneſſe of the ſame, together with the hideous noiſe, and whiſtling murmuring, wee found not ſo great contentment aboue, as wee did beneath.

Gall trees.

Euphrates.

The next day we ſpent ouer many high Mountaines, on the top whereof grew great quantitie of Gall-trees, which are ſomewhat like our Oakes, but leſſer and more crooked: on the beſt tree in this place a man ſhall not gather a pound of Galls: at euening we pitched againe on the bankes of Euphrates; and in the morning paſſed the ſaid Riuer, but not by Barge as before, which was likely to haue bred no ſmall annoyance to our whole Carauan; for through the ſwiftneſſe of the ſtreame, and deepneſſe of the Channell, many Beaſts with their ladings had beene carried away and drowned, if there had not beene in time a ſhallow Foord diſcouered, which had in ſuch ſort raiſed the depth of the Channell, making as it were a ſhelfe for our Commodious paſſage: by helpe whereof there was not ſo much as one man or beaſt that periſhed.

The deſcription of the Curdies, a moſt theeuiſh people.

The Curdies worſhippers of the Deuill.

Manuſcute.

Indulgence.

Euphrates.

We were no ſooner ouer, but forth-with we were encountred with a certaine troope of people, called the Curdies, which ſome thinke to be a remnant of the ancient Parthians. This rude people are of a goodly ſtature, and well proportioned, and doe neuer goe abroad without their Armes, as Bowes and Arrowes, Scimatarre and Buckler, yea and at ſuch time, when a man for age is ready to goe downe to his graue. They doe adore and worſhip the Deuill, to the end hee may not hurt them or their Cattell, and very cruell are they to all ſorts of Chriſtians; in which regard, the Countrey which they inhabite, is at this day termed Terra Diaboli, the Land of the Diuell. They participate much of the nature of the Arabians, and are as infamous in their Latrocinies and robberies, as the Arabians themſelues. They liue vnder the commandement of the great Turke, but with much freedome and libertie. This theeuiſh company did ſundry times arreſt our Carauan, affirming that their Prince had ſent for a Dollar on a ſumme of goods, without the payment whereof (being fiue ſeuerall times demanded) wee ſhould not paſſe through their Countrey. One Village of note is there in this Countrey, wholly inhabited by the Curdies, being fiue daies iourney from Caraemit, and three daies iourney from Bitcliſh, called by the Countrey people Manuſcute. This Towne is ſeated in a moſt fertile and fruitfull Valley, betweene two Mountaines, abounding with Paſture and Cattell: and about a mile from it, is an Hoſpitall dedicated to Saint Iohn the Baptiſt, which is much viſited as well by Turkes as Chriſtians, who ſuperſtitiouſly affirme, that whoſoeuer will beſtow either a Sheepe, Kid, or ſome piece of Money to releeue the poore of that place, ſhall not onely proſper in his iourney, but obtaine forgiueneſſe of all his ſinnes. To the Gouernour of this Village, wee paied for our cuſtome a Shaughee on a ſumme of goods, and ſo were diſmiſſed. The next day following, we paſſed ouer many craggy and ſteepe Mountaines, and at the laſt reſted our ſelues and wearied beaſts on the banke of Euphrates, being the out-moſt bounds on this ſide of Meſopotamia, and ſo entred the day following on the Borders of Armenia the great, which is by ſome diſtinctly diuided into three parts; the North part whereof being but little, is called Georgia: the middle part Turcomania: and the third part by the proper name of Armenia.

It is now called Turcomania, and was the firſt ſeate of the Turkes, after their firſt comming out of Scythia, who left their naturall ſeates, and by the Caſpian Ports paſſing through the Georgian Countrey, then called Iberia, neere vnto the Caſpian Sea; firſt ceaſed vpon this part of Armenia, and that with ſo ſtrong an hand, that it is by their poſteritie yet holden at this day, and of them called Turcomania.

Armenian manners.

Women Archers.

At our firſt entrance into this Countrey, we trauelled through a goodly, large, and ſpacious Plaine, compaſſed about with a rew of high Mountaines, where were many Villages, wholly inhabited by Armenians; a people very induſtrious in all kind of labour: their Women very skilful and actiue in ſhooting, &managing any ſort of weapon, like the fierce Amazones in antick time; and the women at this day, which inhabit the Mountaine Xatach in Perſia. Their families are very great; for, both Sons, Nephewes, and Neeces, doe dwell vnder one roofe, hauing all their ſubſtance in common: and when the Father dyeth, the eldeſt Sonne doth gouerne the reſt, all ſubmitting themſelues vnder his Regiment. But when the eldeſt Sonne dyeth, the gouernment doth not paſſe to his Sonnes, but to the eldeſt Brother. And if it chance to fall out, that all the Brethren doe dye, then the gouernment doth belong to the eldeſt Sonne of the eldeſt Brother, and ſo from one to another. In their dyet and cloathing, they are all fed and clad alike, liuing in all peace and tranquilitie, grounded on true loue and honeſt ſimplicitie.

The Armenians are a populous Nation.

The Armenians gouerned by two Patriarchs

To diſcourſe how populous this Nation is at this day, is needleſſe, ſince they inhabit both in Armenia the greater, and Armenia the leſſe; as alſo in Cilicia, Bithynia, Syria, Meſopotamia and Perſia. Beſides the principall Cities of the Turkiſh Empire, be much appopulated with them, as Bruſia, Angori, Trabiſonda, Alexandria, Grand-Caire, Conſtantinople, Caffa, Aleppo, Orpha, Cara-emit, Van, and Iulpha: for that they are very laborious in tranſporting Merchandize from one Citie to another, by which meanes, through the cuſtomes which are paid in euery Citie, the Coffers of the Grand Signior are wonderfully inriched. This people haue two Patriarchs, to whom they giue the name of Vniuerſall: the one keepeth his ſeate in the Citie of Sis in Caramania, mania, not farre from Tharſus: the other in the Monaſtery of Ecmeazin, neere vnto the Citie Eruan in this Countrey. Vnder theſe two Patriarchs are eighteene Monaſteries, full fraight with Friers of their Religion; and foure and twentie Biſhopricks. The maintenance allowed in times paſt vnto each of theſe two Patriarchs, was a Maidin on an houſe; each Patriarch hauing vnder him twentie thouſand houſholds: but now that large beneuolence the great Turke hath ſeaſed into his owne hands; and therefore now they are conſtrained to liue on the Almes of the people, going continually in Viſitation from one Citie to another, carrying their Wiues and whole family with them.

The people of this Nation haue amongſt them the Chriſtian * Faith, but at this day it is ſpotted with many abſurdities. They hold with the Church of Rome in the vſe of the Croſſe, affirming it to be meritorious, if they make the ſame with two fingers, as the Papiſts vſe; but idle and vaine if with one finger, as the Iacobites. They adorne their Churches in euery place with the ſigne of the Croſſe, but for other Images they haue none, being profeſſed enemies againſt the vſe of them. In keeping ancient Reliques they are very ſuperſtitious, and much deuoted to the bleſſed Virgin Mary, to whom they direct their prayers. They imitate the Dioſcorians in eating Whit-meats on Saturday, which to doe on Wedneſday and Friday were a deadly ſin: neuertheleſſe, they will not refraine from the eating of fleſh on euery Friday, betweene the Feaſt of the Paſſouer & the Aſcention. They abſtain fiue Sabboths in the yeare from eating fleſh, in a remembrance of that time which the Gentiles did ſacrifice their Children vnto Idols. They celebrate the Annunciation of the Virgin Marie on the ſixt of Aprill, the Natiuitie of our bleſſed Sauior on the ſixt of Ianuary, the Purification the fourth of February, and the Transfiguration the 14. of Auguſt. The miniſtration of their Liturgie or Seruice, is performed in their natiue language, that all may vnderſtand: but in their Seruice of the Maſſe for the dead, they are moſt idolatrous, vſing at the ſolemnizing thereof, to ſacrifice a Lambe, which they firſt lead round about the Church, and after they had killed it and roſted it, they ſpread it on a faire white Linnen cloath, the Prieſt giuing to each of the Congregation a part and portion thereof. They are (vnleſſe ſome few families) ſo farre from yeelding obedience vnto the Sea of Rome, that they aſſume all Antiquitie vnto themſelues, as hauing retained the Chriſtian Faith from the time of the Apoſtles. Many Ieſuites and Prieſts haue beene ſent from Rome, to bring this oppreſſed Nation vnder her gouernment, but they haue little preuailed; for neither will they yeeld obedience, nor be brought by any perſwaſion to forſake their ancient and inueterate errours, to become more erronious with her.

* The Religion of the Armenians is ſpotted with many abſurdities.

Croſſings and Croſſes.

Lamb-ſacrifice

Hauing well refreſhed our ſelues amongſt theſe Villages, wee proceeded in our ordinary trauell, but ere we had paſſed two miles, certaine troopes of Curdies incountred our Carauan, with a purpoſe and intent to haue robbed the ſame, but finding themſelues too weak to contend with ſo great company, they departed vntill the next day following, when againe they met with vs in a very narrow paſſage betweene two Mountaines, where they made a ſtay of our whole Carauan, exacting a Shaughee on euery perſon, which to purchaſe our peace we willingly paied; and ſo arriued that euening at Bithlis an ancient Citie, but a Citie of much crueltie and oppreſſion, where little Iuſtice and right is to be found to releeue diſtreſſed paſſengers.

This Citie ſtandeth in a pleaſant Valley, by which runneth a little Riuer, falling out of the Mountaines Anti-Tauris, it was once a Towne in the Confines of the Perſian Kingdome, bordering vpon Meſopotamia, and had a Caſtle kept with a Garriſon of Perſian Souldiers, before ſuch time as Solyman the Magnificent did conquer theſe Countries, which was in the yeare 1535. In which yeare there was a memorable battell fought betweene the two great Baſſaes of Caire and Syria, conducted by Vlemas the Perſian Traitor; and Delymenthes a right Nobleman of Perſia. The two Baſſaes and Vlemas were commanded by Solyman (in his returne from the ſpoile of Tauris) to follow him with eighteene thouſand good Souldiers in the rereward of his Army, to receiue and repreſſe the ſudden aſſaults of the Perſians, if need ſhould require. But Delymenthes with fiue thouſand Perſian Souldiers purſued the Turkes, and ouertooke them in the aforeſaid Valley; and being furthered in this venterous deſignement, both by the darkneſſe of the night, and the abundance of raine which fell at the ſame inſtant, as if it had beene wiſhed for, on a ſudden got within the Turkes Campe: where the Perſian Souldiers, as Wolues amongſt Sheepe, did ſuch ſpeedy execution amongſt the ſleepy Turkes, that the two great Baſſaes and Vlemas had much adoe to get to horſe, and ſaue themſelues by flight. Few of all that great Army eſcaped the ſword of the Perſians. There was three great Sanzacks ſlaine, one taken, and the other fled, eight hundred Ianizaries ſeeing themſelues forſaken of their Captaines, laid downe their Harquebuſſes, and other Weapons, and yeelded themſelues vpon Delymenthes his word. In memoriall thereof they ſtill keepe that day (which was the thirteenth of October) as one of their ſolemne Holy-daies. In Bithlis we ſtayed two daies; and at our departure paied vnto the Gouernor of the ſaid Citie, a Dollar on a ſumme of goods, and ſo ſet forwards towards the great Citie Van, three daies iourney farther. In which trauell we had a very weariſome and painefull iourney, ouer high Mountaines and craggy Rockes, the way being exceeding narrow, that a beaſt could hardly paſſe with his burthen, without much heauing and tumultuous ſhouldering. The Bithlis.

The great battell fought betweene two great Baſſaes & Delymenthes, a valiant Noble man of Perſia.

which

Hand made paſſage.

Arctamar lake.

The Ecmenick Ilands.

which narrow paſſages the Turkes told vs, was by the commandement of Amurat the third, the Great Turke, cut through by the maine induſtrie of labourers, for his Armie to paſſe, like that incredible worke, which Haniball with Vinegar wrought vpon the Alpes. In this place our trauell was very dangerous, by reaſon of a brackiſh Lake or little Sea, called, The Lake Arctamar, which was vnder the Rocke, ouer which wee paſſed, and wee enforced to ride ſhoaling on the ſide of the ſaid Rocke, that had not our Mules beene ſure of footing, both they and we had periſhed, with an inſupportable downe-fall in that Sea. Two miles from this ſhoare in the aforeſaid Lake are two Ilands, called, The Ecmenicke Ilands, inhabited onely by Armenians, and ſome Georgians, which two Ilands doe bring forth and yeeld ſuch ſtore of Cattell, and plentie of Rice, Wheat, and Barley, the Garners and Store-houſes for all the Countrey round about.

The Lake Arctamar called in ancient time Martiana.

Being arriued at Van, our Carauan reſted in the Suburbs of the ſaid Citie, not daring to preſume to enter the Citie, by reaſon that the Baſſa was gone to fetch in a rebel, that was riſen vp in thoſe parts; in whoſe abſence the Citie, vnder the ſub-Baſſa, was no better gouerned then it ſhould bee. On the Weſt ſide of this Citie lieth a pleaſant and delightfull Plaine, wherein the Ianizaries twice a weeke doe exerciſe themſelues after their manner in the feats of Warre. On the North ſide runneth the Lake Arctamar, called in antique time the Moore or Mariſh, Martiana, or Margiana, or Mantiana. Out of this Lake is caught yeerely an innumerable quantitie of Fiſh like our Herring, which being dried in the Sunne, they diſperſe and ſell them ouer all the Countrey thereabout.

The deſcription of Van.

Solyman after ten dayes ſiege tooke the Citie Van.

This Citie is double walled with hard quarrie ſtone, and is the ſtrongeſt Towne in all theſe parts, being fortified with great ſtore of braſſe Ordnance, and a ſtrong Caſtle mounted on an high Rocke, to command and defend the Citie. It was once vnder the gouernement of the Perſian, but Solyman the Magnificent in the yeere 1549. with a puiſſant Armie did beſiege the ſame, which after ten dayes ſiege was yeelded vnto him by the Perſian Gouernour, vpon condition, that the Perſian Souldiers there in Garriſon, might with life and libertie depart with their weapons, as Souldiers: which was by Solyman granted, and ſo the Citie was ſurrendred vp into his hands from the Perſian King, who neuer ſince could get the ſame into his poſſeſſions. It is gouerned now by a Baſſa, who hath vnder him twelue thouſand Timariots.

Gnuſher.

Ararat.

The Riuer Araxis ſpringeth out of the Hill Taurus.

Naſſiuan.

Reiuan.

The Riuer Cirus.

The Riuer Canac.

At this Citie we ſtayed fiue dayes, paying a Doller on a Summe of goods, and paſſed from thence to a Turkiſh Village, called Gnuſher, the houſes ſtanding in two ſeuerall places, the one rew fit for the Winter, and the other for the Summer ſeaſon. Here wee began the aſcent of the high Mountaines of Ararat, and about noone-tide we beheld Bruz; the very creſt of the Periardi Mountaines, now called Cheilder Monte, the hills of Periardo. Theſe Mountaines ſo called, are very famous by the riſing of many notable great Riuers, which doe ſo fructiferate the Countrey thereabouts, that the barbarous people call it Leprus (which is to ſay, Fruitfull) viz. Firſt, the Riuer Araxis, which running out of a certaine Mariſh, with many armes doth wonderfully enrich that Champaine and drie Countrey. This Riuer ſpringeth out of the hill Taurus in this part, where Periardo is ſituate, on the ſide of the Hill Abo, and ſo runneth by Eaſt euen to the confines of Seruan, and windeth it ſelfe towards the Weſt, and by North, where it is ioyned with the Riuer Cirus, and then paſſeth to Artaxata, now called Naſſiuan, a Citie of the Armenians, right againſt Reiuan another Citie, and ſo watereth Armenia, and courſing along the Plaine of Araxis, diſchargeth it ſelfe into the Caſpian Sea, on the one ſide by South leauing Armenia, and on the other ſide by North leauing the Countrey Seruania; whoſe chiefe Citie is Eris. The Riuer Cirus likewiſe ſpringeth out of Taurus, and ſo deſcending into the Champaines and Plaines of Georgia, charging it ſelfe, and being greatly encreaſed with other Riuers, it is ioyned with Araxis, and ſo maketh his iſſue alſo into the Caſpian Sea. This Riuer the Inhabitants of the Countrey at this day call by the name of Ser, in their owne Language, but the Turkes call it Chiur. Out of theſe Mountaines alſo ſpringeth the Riuer Canac, which maketh (as it were almoſt) an Iland, a little on this ſide the Citie Eris, and afterwards vnite it ſelfe in the Channell with Araxis, and ſo runneth into the Caſpian Sea.

The Mountaine Anti-Taurus.

The Mountaine Gordæus.

Two other Mountaines are of great note in this place; the one is Anti-Taurus, now called Mons Niger, The blacke Mountaine, which runneth vp into Media; and the other Gordæus, the tops of which Mountaines are couered continually with white and hoary Snowes. The Mountaine Gordæus is enuironed with many other petie Mountaines, called the Gordæan Mountaines; on the tops whereof (as wee paſſed) wee found many ruines and huge foundations, of which no reaſon can be rendred.

Gordiæus Mons, whereon Noahs Arke reſted.

The Turkes call the Mountaine Gordiæus Augri-daugh, the Armenians Meſſis-Saur: it is ſo high, that it ouer-tops all the Mountaines thereabout. There iſſueth out of the foot of this Hill a thouſand little Springs, whereof ſome doe feed the Riuer Tygris, and ſome other Riuers, and it hath about it three hundred Villages inhabited by Armenians and Georgians; as alſo an ancient Monaſtery dedicated to Saint Gregorie, very large and ſpacious, able to receiue Shaugh Tamas the great King of Perſia, and moſt of his Armie, who for the auſtere and ſtrict life that he ſaw in thoſe Religious men, made him to ſpare it, and to change his determination, hauing a full purpoſe before to haue deſtroyed it. About this Monaſterie groweth great plentie of Graine, the Graine being twice as big as ours, as alſo Roſes and Rheubarb, which becauſe they haue not the skill to drie it, that Simple is of no eſteeme or value. On the top of this Mountaine did the Arke of Noah reſt, as both Iewes, Turkes and Armenians affirmed. Some Friers of Saint Gregories Monaſterie told vs, that euen at this day ſome part of the Arke is yet to be ſeene on the top of this Mountaine, if any could aſcend thither; but the way (as they ſay) is kept by Angels, ſo that whoſoeuer ſhall preſume to goe vp (as once a Brother of that Monaſterie did) ſhall be brought downe in the night ſeaſon, from the place which hee had gayned by his trauaile in the day time before.

Rheubarb.

Monkiſh tale.

---

§. II.

Of Araxis, Chiulfal, Sumachia, Derbent, Sechieres, Aras, Tauris, Soltania, Caſbin, Argouil, and Gilan.

FRom the foot of this Mountaine, we ſpent a dayes iourney further towards Chiulfall, which day wee trauelled through very many narrow Lanes in thoſe Mountaines, and very deepe Valleys, wherein the Riuer Araxis with moſt outragious turnings and windings, and his many ruſhing down-falls amongſt the Rockes, doth euen bedeafe a mans eares, and with his moſt violent roaming in and out, doth drowne and ouerwhelm, whoſoeuer by miſerable chance falleth downe head-long from the top of thoſe narrow paſſages, which are vpon the Mountaines. And vpon the creſts of the ſaid Mountaines, on the ſide of the ſaid narrow paſſages, there grow moſt hideous Woods and antique Forreſts, full of Beeches: Trees like Poplers carrying Maſt fit for Hogs, and Pine-trees; where the horrour of darkneſſe, and ſilence which is oftentimes interrupted, onely by the whiſtling winds, or by the crie of ſome wild beaſts, doe make the poore paſſengers moſt terribly afraid.

The Riuer Araxis.

At length our Carauan ferried ouer the foreſaid Riuer, and ſo we arriued at Chiulfal, a Towne ſituated on the frontiers betweene the Armenians and the Atropatians, and yet within Armenia, inhabited by Chriſtians, partly Armenians, partly Georgians: a People rather giuen to the trafficke of Silkes, and other ſorts of wares, whereby it waxeth rich and full of money, then inſtructed in weapons and matters of warre. This Towne conſiſteth of two thouſand houſes, and ten thouſand ſoules, being built at the foot of a great rockie Mountayne in ſo barren a ſoyle, that they are conſtrained to fetch moſt of their prouiſion, onely Wine excepted, from the Citie Naſſiuan, halfe a dayes iourney off, which ſome thinke to be Artaxata, in the confines of Media, and Armenia. The building of Chiulfal are very faire, all of hard quarrie ſtone: and the Inhabitants very courteous and affable, great drinkers of Wine, but no brawlers in that drunken humour, and when they are moſt in drinke, they powre out their prayers, eſpecially to the Virgin Mary, as the abſolute commander of her Sonne Ieſus Chriſt, and to other Saints as Interceſſors. It is ſubiect and tributarie to the Scepter of Perſia, and contrariwiſe, both by nature and affection great enemies to the Turke. This Towne was much indangered in the warres betwixt Amurat the great Turke, and Mahomet Codibanda the Perſian King, ready to bee ſwallowed vp of both. One while the Baſſa of Reiuan, on the great Turkes behalfe, made an inrode vpon them with a thouſand and fiue hundred Harquebuſiers, whom they were faine to pacifie with a very bountifull preſent, excuſing themſelues, that if they had beene backward in bringing vnto him their voluntarie tributes, it was done for feare, leſt they ſhould haue fallen into the diſpleaſure of Mahomet Codibanda their King: who no doubt, if he ſhould haue vnderſtood any ſuch matter, would haue beene ready to deſtroy their Countrey, and depriue them of their libertie and liues. The Baſſa was no ſooner departed with this anſwer and their preſent, but forthwith Aliculi-Cham was ſent by the Perſian King with three thouſand Souldiers, and with this direction, that if the Countrie were ſubdued by the Turkes, he ſhould fight againſt it: and if it had voluntarily yeelded it ſelfe vnto them, he ſhould not onely recouer it, but alſo burne it, and bring away all the chiefe men of the Countrey for priſoners and ſlaues. To auoide which danger, theſe poore Chiulfalini were glad to preſent the Perſian Prince with great and more liberall gifts, then they did their enemie Baſſa. Thus theſe miſerable people, in the midſt of Armes and Squadrons of the enemie, were conſtrained, what with preſents, and what with lies, notably to preſerue their liberties, and their liues in ſafetie.

The deſcription of Chiulfal.

The Chiulfalines great drinkers of Wine, but no quarrellers in drinke.

Cup-deuotion.

Chiulfal much indangered in the laſt warres betweene the Turke and the Perſian.

Within a dayes iourney and a halfe of this Towne, is the Chalderan Plaines; memorable for the battell fought there, on the ſeuenth day of Auguſt, in the yeere 1514. betweene the two great Emperours Iſmael King of Perſia, and Selymus the firſt, Emperour of the Turkes. In which battell, Selymus loſt aboue thirtie thouſand men. At Chiulfal we ſtayed eight dayes, and paſſed againe the Riuer Araxis, leauing the noble Kingdome of Armenia, called now Turcomania, becauſe of the Turcomanes a people that came out of Scythia (as before wee noted) who liue as Sheepheards in their Tents, but the natiue people giue themſelues to husbandry, and other ma-

The mortall battell fought betweene Selymus the firſt, Emperour of the Turkes and Hiſmael the Sophie of Perſia.

nuall ſciences, as working of Carpets and fine Chamlets, we were no ſooner ouer, but wee entred into Media; which by ſome is diuided into Media Atropatia, and Media the Great.

Atropatia exceeding fruitfull.

Sumachia.

A moſt barbarous ſpectacle in Sumachia.

The whole Countrey is very fruitfull, and watred with the Riuer Araxis, and Cyrus, and other Riuers that are famous, euen in antique Writers. Diuers Cities are there in this Kingdome, but my purpoſe is to ſpeake onely of thoſe which we ſaw in theſe parts. viz. Sumachia, Derbent, Sechi, Eres, and Aras. Sumachia is the Metropoliticall City of Siruan; and lyeth betweene Derbent and Eres; where the Kings of Siruan vſed to keepe their great and ſumptuous Courts, chiefly inhabited by Armenians and Georgians. In this City our Engliſh Merchants did trafficke much, and had an houſe giuen them by Obdowlocan, in the yeere 1566. (as reuerend Maſter Hackluit doth relate) who then raigned there vnder the Perſian King. In this Citie wee ſaw the ruines of a moſt cruell and barbarous ſpectacle, that is to ſay, a Turret erected with free ſtone and Flints, in the midſt of which Flints, were placed the heads of all the Nobilitie and Gentrie of that Countrey: which fell out on this occaſion. This Countrey of Siruan, in time paſt was of great renowne, hauing many Cities, Townes, and Caſtles in it; the Kings thereof being of great power, able to wage warre with the Kings of Perſia, but through their diuerſitie in Religion, the Perſian made a conqueſt of them, razing downe to the ground their Cities, Townes, and Caſtles, that they ſhould not rebell, and alſo putting to death their Nobilitie and Gentrie, and for the greater terrour of the people, placed their heads in the foreſaid Turret.

The Perſian Prince puniſheth the Inhabitants of Sumachia, with diuers kinds of tortures and deaths.

About a mile diſtant from this Towne, is the ruines of an old Caſtle, once eſteemed to be one of the ſtrongeſt Caſtles in the world, and was beſieged by Alexander the Great, a long time before hee could winne it. And a little further off, was a Nunnery moſt ſumptuouſly builded, wherein was buried (as they told vs) the body of Ameleke Canna, the Kings Daughter, who ſlew her ſelfe with a Knife, for that her Father would haue forced her (ſhee profeſſing chaſtitie) to haue married with a Prince of Tartary: vpon which occaſion the Virgins of this Countrey doe reſort thither once a yeere to lament her death. This Citie is diſtant from the Caſpian Sea, with Camels ſeuen dayes iourney, and from Derbent ſixe dayes iourney; it was in the yeere 1578. yeelded vp vnto Muſtaffa, the Generall of the Turkiſh Armie, without reſiſtance, who preſently did ſurprize the Citie, intreating all the Inhabitants in friendly manner, without doing or ſuffering any outrage to bee done vpon them; but for this their Infidelitie in voluntarie yeelding themſelues to follow the Religion of the Turkes, when as they were not induced thereunto by any neceſſitie; Emirhamze eldeſt Sonne to Mahomet Codibanda King of Perſia, comming with his Armie into Seruan, did with great crueltie puniſh the miſerable and infortunate Commons of this Citie, making their houſes euen with the ground, deſtroying both the old and new walls thereof, and bringing the whole land to nought, that ſometimes was ſo deſired, a receit of the Turkes.

Derbent builded by Alexander the Great. Caucaſiæ Portæ. The great Wall which Alexander built betweene Derbent and Teflis.

Sixe dayes iourney from this Citie, lyeth Derbent; This Citie hath ſundrie names giuen vnto it by Writers: Sometimes it is called Derbent, becauſe it is in figure narrow and long: and ſometimes Demir-Capi, becauſe there were the Iron Gates, that were ſometimes the entrance into Scythia: and ſometimes Aleſſandria; becauſe it was firſt erected by Alexander the Great, when he warred againſt the Medes and Perſians; at which time alſo he made a Wall of a wonderfull height and thickneſſe, which extended it ſelfe from this Citie, to a Citie in Armenia, called Teflis, belonging to the Georgians. And though it bee now razed and decayed, yet the foundation remaineth: and it was made to this purpoſe, that the Inhabitants of that Countrey, newly conquered by Alexander, ſhould not lightly flie, nor their enemies eaſily inuade them. This Citie is ſeated vpon an high Hill, and builded all of Free-ſtone much after our buildings, being very high and thicke: neuertheleſſe, it neuer grew great nor famous, and euen in theſe dayes, there is no reckoning made of it: and the reaſon is, becauſe of the ſituation, ſeruing for paſſage onely out of Tartaria into Perſia, and out of Perſia into Tartaria, receiuing thoſe that trauell too and fro, not as Merchants and men of Commerce, but as paſſengers and trauellers; and to ſpeake in a word, it is ſeated in a very neceſſary place, as the caſe ſtandeth, by reaſon that it is Ports of the Caſpian Sea, but not profitable vnto it ſelfe: much like as it is in the paſſages of the Alpes, where though the French-men, Switzers, Dutch-men, and Italians, continually doe paſſe by them; yet was there neuer found a meane Citie, much leſſe any Citie of ſtate and importance.

Sechi.

Eres made Mamodaan Silkes.

About foure dayes iourney from Sumachia, is Sechi, which alſo at the ſame time as Sumachia offered themſelues to Muſtapha, as vaſſals and ſubiects to the Turkes, who all were gladly entertained of him, and ſome of the chiefe of them apparelled in ſilke and gold, and honored with great magnificence, and in the end had all protection promiſed vnto them. Here alſo ſtandeth the Citie Eres, moſt fruitfully watered with the Riuer Araxis and Cyrus, and hath yeelded in times paſt great ſtore of thoſe fine white Silkes, commonly termed by the Merchants Mamodaan Silkes, whereof at this day, there is not to be found, no, not a very ſmall quantitie, by reaſon of the monſtrous ruines and ouerthrowes, that hath happened in theſe Countries, partly by the Armies of the great Turke, and partly by the Armie of the Perſians, which ſtill had ſucceeded one another in their cruell incurſions, and bloudie inuaſions. For after the people of Sechi and Eres had yeelded themſelues voluntarily without any reſiſtance vnto Muſtapha great Amurats Generall; Emirhamze the Perſian Prince, came vpon them with his Armie, as vpon rebels, to inflict deſerued puniſhment. In effecting of which his purpoſe, hee ſpared neither ſexe, nor age, nor any condition, but though the perſons were vnequall, yet was the puniſhment equall to all, carrying away with him the two hundred peeces of Artillerie, that were left in the Fort by Muſtapha, and preſently ſent them to Casbin to his father.

